and great grandchildren, by the mother's ſide, of the moſt noble and renowned
John Powlett, Marquis of Wincheſter.
Elizabeth, widow of Nathan Wrighte, eſq.
hath erected this monument."

Robert Wrighte, eſq. the lord-keeper's third ſon, ſettled at Bombay, where he was twice married [1].

Ezekiel Wrighte, eſq. the fourth ſon, had a ſon George, who died ſ. p.; and a daughter Anne, who was three times married. Her firſt huſband's name was Mead; the ſecond Fullerton; the third Savile.

William Wrighte [2], eſq. the fifth ſon, was recorder of Leiceſter from 1729 till 1762, when he reſigned the office on account of the ill ſtate of his health. He married Suſanna, daughter and coheireſs of Thomas Levinge, eſq. of Shepey, in the county of Leiceſter; by whom he had three daughters; 1. Suſanna, married to John-Gilbert Cooper [3], eſq. of Thurgarton in Nottinghamſhire, an author of conſiderable celebrity, who died in April 1769; 2. Anne, married to Selwood Hewett, eſq. by whom ſhe had two ſons; 3. Catharine, married to Joſeph Fraine, eſq. a captain in the Royal Navy, both now living at Bath; 4. Dorothy, died at Hampſtead, unmarried, 1779.

Mrs. Wrighte died at Bath; and was buried in Walcote church in that city; where a ſmall marble tablet on the South wall is thus inſcribed:

"Near this place lie the remains of SUSANNA WRIGHTE, daughter and coheireſs of RICHARD LEVINGE, eſq.
and wife of WILLIAM WRIGHTE, eſq.
ſon of ſir NATHAN WRIGHTE, knight, late late lord keeper of the great ſeal of England.
She died March 14, 1765, aged 69."

Mr. Wrighte alſo died at Bath ſoon after his wife.

Thomas, the ſixth and youngeſt ſon, was admitted a commoner of Brazen-Noſe, Feb. 3. 1708, æt. 16; and, dying in 1710, was buried in the cloiſters of that college, with this inſcription:

"H. S. E.
THOMAS WRIGHTE, magnæ ſpei juvenis, filius natu ſextus honoratiſſimi
d^ni^ d^ni^ NATHAN WRIGHTE, equitis aurati, nuper magni ſigilli cuſtodis.
Obiit Julii 8, anno D^ni^ 1710, ætatis 18."

Elizabeth and Dorothy, two of ſir Nathan's daughters, died young. A ſecond Dorothy was married to Harry Grey the third earl of Stamford; and died Auguſt 22, 1738, leaving iſſue two ſons and five daughters.

A ſecond Elizabeth was married to ſir Samuel-Vanacker Sambrooke, bart. who died at his houſe in Chancery-lane, Dec. 27, 1714, and was buried at Edmonton Jan. 4, 1715. His widow ſurvived till December 1775, when ſhe died in Hanover-ſquare, at the great age of 94. By this lady ſir Samuel had one ſon, ſir Jeremy Sambrooke, who repreſented the town of Bedford in parliament from 1727 till his death, which happened at Buſh Hill, Edmonton, July 5, 1740; and, dying unmarried, was ſucceeded in title, and an eſtate of £1000. a year [4], by his uncle ſir Jeremy Sambrooke, of Gubbins, Herts (ſecond ſon of ſir Jeremy Sambrooke, knight [5]); on whoſe death, Oct. 3, 1754, the title became extinct.

Sir Samuel-Vanacker Sambrooke had three daughters:

1. Elizabeth, married to Charles-Wake Jones, eſq. of Waltham Abbey (ſecond ſon to ſir Baldwyn Wake, of Blyſworth, co. Northampton, knt.); who dying March 22, 1739-40, ſ. p. ſhe was re-married in 1742 to ſir Humphrey Monnoux, of Wootton, co. Bedford, bart. who died Dec. 3, 1757, æt. 55. Lady Monnoux died Sept. 4, 1770, ſ. p.

2. Judith, who died unmarried Feb. 18, 1769.

3. Suſanna, married June 2, 1740, to John Crawley, eſq. of Stockwood, in the pariſh of Luton, co. Bedford, M. P. for Marlborough 1737 and 1741, who died in 1768; and his relict Feb. 6, 1799, æt. 91. They had two ſons and two daughters; 1. John Crawley, eſq. now of Stockwood, who, June 22, 1772, married Eliza, daughter of James Hawley, M. D. of Ruſſel-ſtreet, Bloomſbury, and ſiſter to the preſent ſir Henry Hawley, bart. of Leyborne Grange near Maidſtone; but has no iſſue; 2. Samuel Crawley, eſq. of Keyſoe, co. Bedford; who married, May 3, 1788, Eliza, daughter and heireſs of Samuel Rankin, eſq. of Ragnall-hall, co. Notts, by Iſabella his wife; and has one ſon and one daughter. 3. Suſanna, married April 12, 1798, to the Rev. John Keet, rector of Hatfield, firſt couſin to the preſent marquis of Saliſbury. 4. Sarah, married March 18, 1784, to Thomas Halſey, eſq. of Great Gaddeſden Place, Herts, and M. P. for that county; by whom ſhe had one ſon, born April 21, 1788, and died Dec. 30 following; and one daughter, born May 23, 1785. Mr. Halſey died in 1788; his relict ſtill ſurvives.

In the chancel of Dennington church, Suffolk:

"Here lyeth the bodies of Robert Wrighte, with Jane his beloved wife; by whom he had many children, eight whereof ſurvived.
He ſpent his youngeſt days in the ſtudy of Divinity in ſundry Univerſities at home and in foraigne countries; and died, in the 74th yeare of his age,
and 34th of his miniſtry in this place, April 1624."

Againſt the North wall, over the veſtry-door:

"M. S.
Anna, Roberti Wright hujus eccesiæ paſtoris, & Janæ uxoris, natu prima;
virgo terrara terre relinquens,
nuptias, cum ſponſo Chriſto in cœlis celebratura,
28 Oct. 1621, hic propè jacet ſepulta.
This virgin's love to heaven made her aſpire,
Loathing the droſſe of ſinfull world's deſire."

On a monument in the South aile of Charlton Horethorne Church, co. Somerſet, is this inſcription:

"Near this place lyeth the body of John Wrighte, eſq.
ſecond ſon of ſir Nathan Wrighte, of Cranham Hall, in the county of Eſſex, bart.
who departed this life March 27, 1726, aged 36.
As a laſting teſtimony of his affection to this pariſh,
he gave to the vicar, for the time being and for ever, the yearly ſum of 40*s.* for a Sermon, to be preached in this church the 27th of March annually;
to the clerk 20*s.* for tolling the great bell,
and attendance on that occaſion;
and to ſuch poor people as have no relief five pounds, to be equally diſtributed among them [6]."

---

[1] A deſcendant of the firſt marriage was Nathan Wrighte, eſq. who, on his father's ſecond marriage (about the year 1711), was ſent over to this kingdom, when only four years old; and died in 1793, at the age of 86.

[2] A ſpeech of Mr. Recorder Wrighte on an election-buſineſs is ſomewhere printed; but I am not able to refer to it.

[3] On a braſs plate in St. Mary's church, Leiceſter (ſee vol. I. p. 315.) was placed an elegant Latin epitaph for Henry-Gilbert Cooper, an infant ſon, who was born July 25, 1749, and died the next day.

[4] Other eſtates, of about £2000. a year, paſſed to his ſiſters.

[5] Nicholas Vanacker, eſq. of London, was created a baronet in 1700, with remainder (on failure of male iſſue from himſelf and his brother John) to the heirs male of ſir Jeremy Sambrooke, of London, knt. Sir Nicholas Vanacker dying in 1703, and ſir John Vanacker in 1710; ſir Samuel-Vanacker Sambrooke ſucceeded to the title of baronet. Sir Jeremy Sambrooke, who was a merchant of London, had been knighted on board the earl of Berkeley's ſhip, 31 Jan. 1681-2, and died in 1705. A ſiſter of his was married to Humphrey Edwin, of London, merchant; who alſo was knighted, at Whitehall, March 8, 1687; and was lord-mayor in 1698.

[6] Collinſon, vol. II. p. 358. This Mr. Wrighte was poſſeſſed of the manor of Charlton Horethorne; which, upon his death, was ſold to the celebrated Peter Walters; and paſſed, with the reſt of his property in the county of Dorſet and Somerſet, to the preſent earl of Uxbridge.

John Wrighte[1], of Kelvedon, in the county of Eſſex.

John Wrighte, of Wright's Bridge, in the county of Eſſex, and of Gray's Inn, third ſon, died 1644.

. . . . firſt wife. = 1. John Wrighte, of Wright's Bridge. = ... ſecond wife.

2. Robert Wrighte, B.D. 34 years rector of Dennington, co. Suffolk; died in April 1624, æt. 74. = Jane, dau. of John Butler, of Theby, Eſſex, and ſiſter of ſir Oliver Butler, of Sharnbrook, co. Bedford; buried by her huſband in the chancel at Dennington.

1. John Wrighte, of Wright's Bridge, in Hornchurch, clerk of the parliaments. = . . .

2. Nathan, of Lond. merch.[2]

Henry Wrighte, of Lond. merchant. = . . .

John Wrighte, living 1634. = . . .

Sir Henry Wrighte, of Dagenham, Eſſex, created a baronet by the Protector's patent March 25, 1658, and again by king Cha. II, June 12, 1660[3]. (Title extinct.)

1. John. 2. Lawrence.

1. Euſeby Wrighte, a barriſter of Lincoln's Inn, and double reader there, had 3 wives, who all died ſ. p.

2. Nathan[4] Wrighte, of London, merchant, and alderman, died March 11, 1657, aged 66. = Anne Fleming, of Warley Place.

3. Sir Benjamin Wrighte, of Denington, knight, merchant of London[5]; died in Spain, leaving one daughter.

4. Ezekiel[6] Wrighte, B. D. rector of Thurcaſton; died 1668, æt. 65. = Dorothy, ſecond daughter of John Onebye, coheir to her brother ſir John Onebye; died Sept. 26, 1691, æt. 65.

Benjamin Wrighte, eſq. of Cranham-hall, co. Eſſex, created a baronet Feb. 5, 1660; living 1664. = Jane, dau. of Will. Williams, of London, merchant.

1. Suſan[7]. 2. Alice. 3. Mary[8]. 4 Frances. 5. Jane.

Anne Meyrick, firſt wife. = Sir Nathan Wrighte, bart. born 1661; died Oct. 16, 1727[9]. = Elizabeth Brage, 2d wife. = Elizabeth Bowater, 3d wife. = Abigail, dau. of Samuel Twyſt, eſq. of Culworth, co. Northamp. 4th wife.

Benjamin.

Sir Nathan[10] Wrighte, bart. married Margaret, dau. of ſir Fran. Lawley, bart. d. 1737.

John, died ſ. p. 1726, æt. 36.

Benjamin, ob. vitâ patris.

Sir Samuel Wrighte, bart. the only ſurviving heir; died unmarried.

Elizabeth[11], heir to her brother; marr. Sept. 15, 1774, to the late general Oglethorpe; who died July 1, 1785.

Nathan[12], died 1736. Two daughters[13].

1. Robert, born April 15, 1652; died Jan. 3, 1658.

3. Ezekiel, a ſtudent of the Inner Temple, died Mar. 25, 1729, æt. 65.

2. Sir Nathan Wrighte, knt. of Barwell, born Feb. 10, 1653; barriſter at law; recorder of Leiceſter 1680; knighted at Kenſington in 1696 7, being then ſerjeant at law[14]; lord-keeper 1700—1705; died 1721. = Elizabeth, 2d dau. of Geo. Aſhby, eſq. of Quenby, marr. 1676; died July 21, 1705.

Rev. . . . Giffard. = 4. Dorothy, died Dec. 5, 1745, æt. 86. = John Twells, eſq. of Wiſbech, in the Iſle of Ely, died Sept. 6, 1721, æt. 62.

Several children[15].

1. George Wrighte, born at Barwell Mar. 25, 1677; purchaſed Gayhurſt and Stoke Goldington, co. Bucks; died, clerk of the crown, March 9, 1724-5. = Mary, dau. and heireſs of Tho. Bedford, eſq. of Doctors Commons, regiſter of the Admiralty, with a fortune of more than £12,000.

2. Nathan, born Jan. 1, 1678; died Aug. 15, 1721. = Anne, dau. and ſole heireſs of lord Francis Powlett, of Englefield, Berks.

3. Robert, born Sept. 5, 1680; was twice married, and left a ſon Nathan.
4. Ezekiel (ſee p. 218).
5. William, recorder of Leiceſter 1729—1762 (ſee p. 218).
6. Thomas.
7. Elizabeth, b. 1681; died 1682.
8. Dorothy, d. young.

9. Dorothy, (fortune 12,000*l.*) died Aug. 22, 1738. = Harry Grey, third earl of Stamford, died in Oct. 1739. (See under Bradgate.)

10. Elizabeth, married ſir Samuel Vanacker Sambrooke; died 1775, æt. 94.

Sir Jeremy Sambrooke, died 1740, ſ. p. Elizabeth, married, 1. Charles-Wake Jones, eſq.; 2. ſir Hum. Monnoux.

Judith, d. 1769.

Suſannah, mar. John Crawley, eſq.

1. John, b. Sept. 7, 1743. 2. Samuel. 3. Suſanna. 4. Sarah.

1. Powlett Wrighte, died of the ſmall-pox Jan. 6, 1741. = Aug. 16, 1737, Mary, dau. of Rich. Tyſſen, of Hackney, eſq. re-married July 18, 1745, to Richard Benyon, eſq. of Guidea Hall, Eſſex.

2. Anne, died unmarr. Oct. 3, 1770, æt. 55.
3. Frances, d. unmarried Nov. 7, 1751, æt. 51.

Elizabeth Dowle, of Chicklade, Wilts, firſt wife. = 4. Nathan Wrighte, eſq. ſucceeded to the eſtate at Englefield on the death of his nephew Powlett; d. ſ.p. June 7, 1789, aged 73. = Elizabeth Frewen, widow of the Rev. John Frewen, rector of Tortworth, co. Glouceſter, ſecond wife; living 1800.

Powlett Wrighte, eſq. died ſ. p. July 22, 1779, æt. 38.

1. Nathan, d. 1703, an infant.

2. George Wrighte, of Gayhurſt, eſq. M.P. for Leiceſter from 1727 till his death in 1766. = Barbara Clarges, dau. of ſir Tho. Clarges, baronet, married 1733; died 1799.

3. Mary. = Richard Dalton, jun. eſq. 1724.

4. Elizabeth, d. 1780, æt. 75. = Nathan Wrighte, eſq. ſon of Robert, 3d ſon of the lord-keeper, died in 1793, æt. 86.

5. Thomas. 6. Dorothy. 7. Margaret. 8. Anne.

George Wrighte, of Gayhurſt, eſq. living 1800. = Anne Jekyll, born 1750; died Dec. 5, 1798.

Barbara, living at Hampton-court 1800.

1. William, attained 21, died ſ. p.

2. A ſon, died ſoon after his birth.

Elizabeth. = John Wyndham, eſq. of Cromer, otherwiſe Shipton, co. Norfolk.

George Wrighte, eſq. only ſon, d. 1793. Anne Wrighte, only daughter, living 1800.

---

[1] Morant, vol. I. p. 185. [2] Vide C. 24. fol. 16. b. [3] Morant, vol. I. p. 62.

[4] Who purchaſed the manor of Cranham, in the county of Eſſex; Morant, vol. I. p. 105. Of his bounty to his native town, ſee Loder's Framlingham, p. 441; where, by miſtake, he is called fourth ſon.

Morant Eſſex I. 105

[5] He was created a baronet Feb. 7, 1645; but the patent was afterwards ſuperſeded. [6] Of whom ſee p. 216.

[7] Married, firſt, to Charles Potts, afterwards to Francis Drake, eſqrs. She died July 15, 1664, aged 34. There is an epitaph for her in Cranham church, and another for her father. [8] Wife of Robert Burdet, eſq. ſecond ſon of ſir Thomas Burdet, bart. Benjamin Burdet, merchant, their ſon, died in 1710, and was buried at Beckenham in Kent. Lyſons, vol. IV. p. 296. See p. 352.

[9] He gave two alms-houſes in St. Mary lane at Cranham. His relict Abigail was re-married to Herbert Tryſt, eſq. who in her right enjoyed the eſtate at Cranham till her death, Dec. 7, 1741. [10] He died of a conſumption, at Bath, in April 1737; leaving two daughters coheireſſes. The title deſcended to Samuel his half-brother by the fourth wife.

[11] To her magnanimity and prudence, on an occaſion of much difficulty, it was owing that the evening of their lives was tranquil and pleaſant, after a ſtormy noon. See an account of her, and of her munificent legacies, Gent. Mag. vol. LVII. p. 1025.

[12] On a flat ſtone in the nave of Norwood chapel, Middleſex, is this epitaph: "Here lies the body of Nathan Wright, eſq. only ſon of ſir Nathan Wright, baronet, of this pariſh; who departed this life the 29th of March, 1736, aged 24 years."

[13] One of them married, Sept. 12, 1743, to Thomas Lewis, eſq. M. P. for Radnor.

[14] On ſir Nathan Wrighte's appointment to the office of lord-keeper, he removed from Figtree-court in the Temple to the lord Powis's houſe in Lincoln's Inn Fields. [15] One of theſe, Mrs. Mary Giffard, died at Leiceſter, Dec. 18, 1799, in her 90th year; after having for more than 60 years enjoyed an annuity from the truſtees for building Weſtminſter Bridge.

Pedigree of SACHEVERELL, of Radcliffe upon Sore.

John Sacheverell, of Morley, ſlain in Boſworth field. = Joan, dau. and heir of Henry Stathum.

1. Sir Henry Sacheverell, of Morley, (ſee p. 394.)
2. John Sacheverell, of Radcliffe on Sore. = . . .
Cecily, dau. and heir of John Durance, eſq. of Iſham, co. Northampton, firſt wife; died 27 June, 1538. = 3. Ralph Sacheverell, who poſſeſſed Radcliffe by the will of his uncle ſir Richard [1]; died Aug. 14, 1339 [2]. = Anne, ſecond wife.

1. Henry Sacheverell, of Radcliffe, born 1500; died 29 June, 1558 [3]. = Lucia, dau. and heir of John Pole, of Hertington, co. Derby, eſq. died Feb. 10, 1554.
2. Ralph Sacheverell, of Rereſby (ſee p. 395.)
. . . . . = Francis Keble.
. . . . = ... Samon.

1. Henry Sacheverell, died 1590. = Jane [4], widow of German Ireton, died Feb. 27, 1576 [5].
2. John.
1. Mary, wife of Hugh Armſtrong, eſq. died 1562; her huſb. 1572 [6].
3. Barbara, wife of John Roſel, of Radcliffe on Trent.
3. . . . married . . . . Frances.

. . . . dau. of . . . . . Gertling, keeper of Wood-ſtreet Compter, firſt wife. = Henry Sacheverell, of Radcliffe, æt. 37, 1608. = ... Boughton, of Lawford; afterwards wife of ſir Thomas Grantham.
Helen, married to Henry Kendal, of Smetheſby.
Mary, married to . . . Smith.
Jane. = Thomas Hutchinſon, eſq. of Owthorpe, co. Nott.

Eleanor, dau. and heir, married firſt to Roger Columbell, of Derley; ſecondly, to William Haſard.
Sir Thomas Hutchinſon, knt. = Margaret, dau. and heir of ſir John Byron.

Col. John Hutchinſon. = Lucie, dau. of ſir Alan Apſley, knt.

Pedigree of SACHEVERELL, of Sadington and Kibworth [7].

Henry Sacheverell [8], gent. ſon of ſir Henry Sacheverell of Morley, had property at Sadington and Kibworth in 1550. = Dorothy, dau. of William Danvers, of Culworth, and Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Richard Fienes lord Say and Sele.

Mary, dau. of alderman Rob. Herrick, firſt wife; married 1590, living 1616. = 1. Thomas Sacheverell [9], of the town of Leiceſter, confrater of Wigſton's Hoſpital 1599; was buried Dec. 1, 1626. = Elizabeth, dau. of Geo. Noble, of Rereſby, 2d wife; marr. in or before 1619; buried July 28, d. 1640.
2. John.
3. Ambroſe Sacheverell, of Tadmarton, co. Oxon; died 1645, æt. 82. = Cecilia, dau. and heir of Eraſmus Williams, of Tingwick, co. Bucks.
1. Margaret, = Henry Stringer, of London, eſq. ſervant to q. Elizabeth and k. James; deſcended out of Glouceſter.
2. Roſe, = John Meſey.
3. Mirable, = John Ayliff, of Hampſhire.

1. Mary, bapt. July 6, 1600; died young.
2. Elizabeth, bapt. July 6, 1606; died young.
3. Joſeph Sacheverell, gent. bapt. Feb. 28, 1610; died March 1, 1636. =
4. Suſanna, only ſurviving daughter, baptized April 20, 1612. = John Danvers, of Shakerſton, gent. younger ſon of Francis Danvers, of Swithland, and Elizabeth his wife, dau. of John Skeffington, of Fiſherwick, eſq. died 1674.
1. Eraſmus [10], a ſcholar at Winton 1634; afterwards fellow of New College.
2. Thomas Sacheverell [11], of Balſcott, co. Oxon, marr. Hannah, dau. of William Loggins, of Swacliffe, Oxon; by whom he had three ſons; 1. William, born 1653; 2. Ambroſe; 3. Henry.
3. James Sacheverell, a ſcholar at Winton, and fellow of New College; married, and had a ſon Thomas.
1. Dorothy, = William Beveridge, of Kibworth, and had two ſons: 1. John; 2. William Count Beveridge, a colonel to king William III.
2. Margaret, = William Oldys [12], D. D. vicar of Adderbury, Oxon.
3. Sarah, = Richard Edwards, of Winſlow.
4. Cecilia, = Robert Loggin, of Wincote, co. Glouceſter.

Elizabeth, only daughter, died unmarried.

1. Suſanna, eldeſt dau. and coheireſs. = John Hacket, eſq. of Abkettleby. [See their deſcendants under South Croxton, p. 238.]
2. Mary, coheireſs. = Walter Pigot, of Chetwynd in Shropſhire.
Philip Hacket, of Abkettleby, eſq. elder brother of John, firſt huſband, died about 1672. = 3. Dorothy, coheireſs, died June 30, 1719, æt. 63. [No iſſue.] = Lancelot Addiſon, D. D. dean of Lichfield, ſecond huſband, d. 1703, æt. 71.

Mary, only dau. married to Maximilian Stephens, of Weſtminſter, gent.

---

[1] See hereafter, under Wimeſwould, p. 508.

[2] See his epitaph in Thoroton, p. 12.

[3] Inq. 1 Eliz. n. 27. pars 2. See their epitaphs in Thoroton, p. 12.

[4] De Janâ Sacheverell, viduâ, occaſionatâ ad oſtendendum quo titulo tenet grangiam vocatam Mulbridge Grange, in com. Derbiæ." Paſch. Rec. 10 Eliz. Rot. 8.

[5] Inq. 19 Eliz.—William Ireton, her ſon and heir, was then aged 28.—"De Brevi directi Eſcaetori, de liberando ſeiſinam grangiæ vocatæ Moldride Grange, in comitatu Derbiæ, Willielmo Ireton, hæredi Janæ Sacheverell." Hil. Rec. 20 Eliz. Rot. 23.

[6] See their epitaph in Thoroton, p. 34.

[7] From Pedigrees of Founders Kin, in the Heralds College, marked 2 D. 14. 175. 2 L. 43.

[8] The Regiſters of Sadington having been obligingly ſearched for me on this occaſion by the Rev. Jeremiah Goodman; the following entries of the children of Henry Sacheverell are all that occur: Peter, bapt. April 1, 1551, buried Sept. 7, 1558; William, bapt. Aug. 25, 1561; Elizabeth, bapt. Dec. 2, 1653; Mirable, bapt. June 3, 1565." The Regiſter from 1604 to 1628 is loſt.

[9] The births and deaths of this branch of the family have been kindly communicated by the Rev. Joſeph Gregory, vicar of St. Martin's, Leiceſter, from his Pariſh Regiſters.—The confrater mentions his "brother Stringer, that dwelleth in Abergany-houſe [now Stationers Hall], a little above Ludgate," vol. I. p. 342; and "ſiſter Stringer," vol. II. p. 128.—Henry Stringer had two ſons; Robert, who died ſ. p.; and Dr. Henry Stringer, fellow of New College 1634, and warden 1648; and two daughters, coheirs; 1. Lettice, firſt married to Thomas Williams, of London, gent; ſecondly, to William Halſey. 2. Abigail, married in 1669.—See ſeveral of the Confrater's letters in vol. I. pp. 343. 345; vol. II. pp. 628. 630. Alderman Robert Herrick left him his "beſt grogrine gown," vol. II. p. 607.

[10] He occurs, in the Kibworth Regiſter, as a witneſs to the induction of William Hunt, B. D. March 12, 1640.

[11] He died April 6, 1675, æt. 46. See his epitaph in Le Neve, vol. II. p. 165.

[12] Dr. William Oldys had eleven children; 1. John, bred to the law in Lincoln's Inn, died young; 2. Ambroſe, died 1710; 3. William, D. C. L. an eminent civilian (and father to William Oldys, eſq. Norroy king at Arms, who died April 15, 1761); 4. Richard; 5. Thomas (who had a grant of the archdeaconry of Lincoln). There were ſix other children; one only of whom (Cecilia Goad) ſurvived to place the following epitaph for her parents in Adderbury church:

"P. M. S.
Gul. Oldys, S. T. P.
hujus eccleſiæ vicarii,
qui, flagrante bello pluſquam civili, læſæ et religionis & majeſtatis cauſæ fidelis et ſtrenuus Aſſertor; perduellium militibus prope hanc villam, anno Salut. 1645, æt. 55, vulneratus occubuit:
Uxorem duxit Margaretam
Ambr. Sacheverell, cler. filiam, ex quâ genuit undecim liberos;
quorum primogenitus Johannes,
poſtquam Academiâ Oxon. philoſophiæ, et Hoſpitio Lincolnienſi legum municipalium ſtudio, fœcundas Naturæ dotes feliciter ornavit,
brevem finivit ætatem.
Mater tamen remfamiliarem, et liberorum educationem,
ſedulò et proſperè curans,
hanc vitam, uſque ad nonageſimum primum annum alacritate piâ provectam, 26 die April. A. D. 1705.
Pro meliori commutavit.
Cecilia Goad, vidua, liberorum nunc ſola ſuperſtes, Pietatis in parentes et amoris in fratrem memor, hoc monumentum poni curavit."

COSSINGTON,

COSSINGTON,

in antient writings called Coſentone, Coſington, Coſyntone, Cuſſington, Keſſington, and Keſtyngton, is a large and pleaſant village, ſeated at the confluence of the rivers Wreke and Soar, ſix miles diſtant from Leiceſter, and ſix from Loughborough. It is bounded by Sileby, Rothley, Wanlip, Radcliff, Segrave, and Syſton; by the Soar on the Weſt, and the Wreke on the Eaſt; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote.

Six ploughlands in Coſintone were held, at the general ſurvey, by Hugh Lupus earl of Cheſter, as an appendage to his manor of Barrow[1].

In the time of king Richard I. (about 1190) Robert de Somervile was ſeiſed of divers lands here, held of the honour of Huntingdon by the fourth part of a knight's fee, which were afterwards given, in the reign of king John, by Maud de Somervile (who is ſometimes in old deeds ſtyled Domina de Coſington), in frank-marriage with Margery her daughter, to Jeffrey Greſeley, of Drakelow, co. Derby[2].

In the Teſta de Nevill, Coſſington is deſcribed as conſiſting of two ploughlands; and on the aid granted to king Henry III. in 1235, towards marrying his ſiſter with the emperor of the Romans, Roger de Somervile paid one mark for a fee which he held in Coſſington; one moiety under the earl of Ferrers, the other under the ſeneſchal de Mohaut. Nicholas de Cardel alſo paid one mark, for a fee which he held there under the ſame owners[3].

William earl of Ferrers held half a knight's fee at Coſſington, which was held by Roger de Somervile, the ſeneſchal de Montealto, and William de Merſham[4].

In 1254, John de Verdun obtained a grant of free-warren for all his lands in Keſtyngton[5].

In 1261, Hugh le Deſpencer, ſlain at the battle of Eveſham taking part with Simon Montfort, died ſeiſed of this village, which was then accounted a member of the manor of Loughborough, and with that was, by the king's favour, allowed to his widow as part of her maintenance[6].

In the Itinerary of 1280, Coſſington, Walton, Segave, and Sileby, anſwered collectively as one vill.

Roger Mom'vyle of Coſſington witneſſes a deed in 1298[7].

This lordſhip came afterwards to Hugh le Deſpencer earl of Wincheſter; and, on his attainder, was granted, by king Edward III, 1327, to Henry lord Beaumont; in whoſe poſterity it long continued.

July 30, 1336, king Edward III. granted divers lands at Coſſington, as alſo the advowſon of the church there (late parcel of the poſſeſſions of Hugh le Diſpenſer earl of Winton) to Henry lord Beaumont and Alice his wife[8]; and in 1340, Henry de Beaumont earl of Boghan, at his death, held the hamlet of Coſſington, as a member of Loughborough; alſo the advowſon of the church of Coſſington, value £10.[9]

A confirmation-grant to the abbot and convent of Gerendon notices a gift of Zezilia relict of Nicholas Draneſeud, "de uno meſſuagio, cum domibus in eodem conſtructis, in Coſyntone[10]."

The Segrave Chartulary notices a conveyance of a virgate of land, with its appurtenances, at Coſſington, held by Robert Dunughti, with a toft and croft, &c. & cum ipſo Roberto & uxore ſuâ, & pueris eorum, & omni exitu ſuo, from Robert ſon of Roger de Segrave, to Gilbert de Segrave and his heirs, to be held under William ſon of Ralph de Meyſham and his heirs; a deed of Ralph ſon of Richard de Meſſam, and another of William ſon of Ralph de Meyſham, concerning the ſame land and homage; and a demiſe of the ſame land by Nicholas de Segrave to Richard de Coſinton, for the term of his life. Alſo, a grant from Hugh the ſon of Thomas de Segrave, of the homage and ſervice of Roger the ſon of Peter for two virgates of land, and of William Penkeney for two other virgates, held of the ſame Hugh, under the capital lords of the lands of Botyler by foreign ſervice, and for which the ſaid Roger and Peter had been accuſtomed to perform their proportionable ſhare. Alſo, a grant of the prior and convent of Coventry to Hugh de Chaucombe and his heirs, of the tenement which Maria held of them in Coſſington, to be held of the prior and convent for ever, ſaving the ſum due from that land to their church. The Chartulary farther obſerves, "Alienatur pro redditu qui remanet, ut docet extenta[11]."

The property of the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter in this pariſh is thus deſcribed in their Regiſter:

"Habemus in Coſyngton, ex dono Rogeri de Wanton, militis, iiii bovatas terre, cum nativis eas tenentibus, & catallis & ſequelis eorum, cum toftis & croftis, & aliis pertinentibus.

Habemus ibi, ex dono Willĩ Farmcote, filii Rogeri & Hawiſe, unam virgatam terre.

Mem', quod predictus Rogerus Wanton, miles, recuperavit advocationem eccleſie de Byllyng contra abbatem Leyc', per finem levatam in curiâ dñi regis apud Nott', &c. ut patet in finali concordiâ inter abbatem Leyc' & dictum Rogerum, in quâ concordiâ abbas Leyc' recognovit predictam advocationem eſſe jus illius Rogeri, &c.; pro quâ recognitione, &c. idem Rogerus dedit & conceſſit predicto abbati iiii predictas bovatas.

Rogerus Hortop tenet i meſſ', i croftum & ii virgatas terre; & redd' xxiii s̃. iiii d̃. & ſectam curie ad viſum noſtrum de Thurmaſton.

Habemus ibidem weyf & ſtreyf, &c. & hariotas, ut apparet in Geryn. Require terrarium de terris dominicalibus in terrario fratris W. Charyte[12]."

In the terrier referred to under Barkby, p. 45, Coſſington fills four pages.

In 1345, Philip de Somervile died ſeiſed of the moiety of one knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Coſſington, held (as an appurtenance of the manor of Whichenore, co. Stafford) of the duke of Lancaſter; which whole manor was held by itſelf of the ſaid duke by knight's ſervice, as of the honour of Tutbury[13].

In 1346, Loveta de Somervile (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 10*s.* for a quarter of one knight's fee in Coſſington, and Simon Jermaine 10*s.* for another quarter, both parcel of the honour of Huntingdon[14].

Lands at Coſſington were given in 1392 to the priory of Ulveſcroft[15].

In 1413, Henry de Beaumont, knt. died ſeiſed of the advowſon of the church of Coſſington, value 10 marks[16].

In 1414, John German, of Coſſington, died ſeiſed of ſix meſſuages, two cottages, ſeven virgates and a half of land, and of 2*s.* 4½*d.* rent, with the appurtenances, in Coſſington, held of the king, as of the honour of Huntingdon, by knight's ſervice; and John German was his ſon and heir[17].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Coſſington was rated at £1. 11*s.*; and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 3*s.*

In 1432, John duke of Norfolk died ſeiſed of one knight's fee in Coſſington, parcel of the manor of Sileby, which Hugh Willoughby, knt. and John German held[18].

---

[1] "In Coſintone 6 carucatæ terræ." Domeſday, fol. 237. a. b.

[2] MS. Chetwynd.

[3] Vol. I. p. l. from the Teſta de Nevill.

[4] P. lii.

[5] Cart. 42 Hen. III. m. 2.

[6] Pat. 49 Hen. III. m. 5.

[7] See before, p. 55.

[8] Pat. 10 Edw. III. pars 2. m. 2.

[9] Eſch. 14 Edw. III. N° 24. Leic.

[10] Dugdale, Mon. Angl. vol. I. p. 770; ex Cart. 14 Edw. III. n. 17. per Inſpeximus.

[11] Appendix to vol. II. p. 113.

[12] Charyte's Rentale, fol. l.

[13] Eſch. 29 Edw. III. N° 46. Leic.

[14] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[15] Inq. 15 Ric. II. de terris in Sitheſton, Coſynton, & Charnewode; & Pat. 16 Ric. II. p. 1. m. 12. & 34. pro meſſ. & terr.

[16] Inq. 1 Hen. V. N° 45. Leic.

[17] Eſch. 2 Hen. V. N° 9. Leic.

[18] Eſch. 11 Hen. VI. N° 43. Leic.

In 1448, Hugh Willoughby died ſeiſed of the manor of Coſſington, held of the king, as of the honour of Leiceſter, by the ſervice of a quarter of one knight's fee; and Richard Willoughby was his next heir [1].

The priory of Ulveſcroft had a meſſuage and divers lands in this place, which they leaſed to John Baker in 1462, for a term of 79 years; the crown's receiver, 1530, declaring that year to be the laſt of the term [2].

In 1463, it was found that William Beaumont viſcount Beaumont, attainted of high treaſon, was ſeiſed of the advowſon of the church of Coſſington [3].

Oct. 26, 1464, king Edward IV. granted the advowſon of the church of Coſſington, late parcel of the poſſeſſions of William lord viſcount Beaumont, to William Haſtings, his chamberlain [4]; and on the 9th of Auguſt, 1467, re-granted the ſame advowſon to the ſaid William Haſtings, to hold of the king and his heirs by homage only, in lieu of all ſervice [5].

In 1483, William lord Haſtings died ſeiſed of the advowſon of the church of Coſſington, which was held of the king [6].

In 1514, Elizabeth counteſs of Oxford held the advowſon of Coſſington in dower.

In the Harleian MS. 5138, Coſſington is noticed as belonging to the honour of Tutbury.

In 1564, there were 30 families in Coſſington.

In 1574, Thomas Willoughby and Matthew Babington, eſq. held lands in Coſſington, formerly belonging to Robert Somervile, by half a knight's fee [7].

In 1604, it was found that Thomas Pepper died ſeiſed of one meſſuage and five bovates of land and paſture in Coſſington, purchaſed of Francis Willoughby, deceaſed, and held of the king, as of the honour of Leiceſter, by knight's ſervice, that he died Dec. 20, 1603; and that Matthew Pepper, his ſon and heir, was then aged five years and upwards [8].

The freeholders here in 1630 were, John Webſter, William Wild, John Marſhall, and Robert Reeve.

Ralph Whalley, of Norton, died 1 Jan. 1638, ſeiſed of the manor of Coſſington, worth 40*s.* held of the king as of the dutchy of Lancaſter, by fealty only [9].

In 1655, there was collected here, for the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of £2. 12*s.* 3*d.*

Auguſt 10, 1663, articles were agreed on for the incloſure of the common fields of Coſſington [10].

Sept. 5, 1666, the referees met, and made certain orders in reference. There was ſet out for the glebe a plot of ground in the Middle Field, 36 acres, 2 roods, and 19 poles; Henton's Cloſe and part of the Home Cloſe, 1 acre, 1 rood, and 20 poles; a plot adjoining to Henton's Cloſe, 1 acre, 1 rood, and 4 poles; a plot in the Oulds, 10 acres. In all, 49 acres, 1 rood, and 3 poles. And it was ordered, that the parſon of Coſſington and his ſucceſſors ſhould have 2*s.* an acre per annum for every acre in the field and lordſhip of Coſſington (except the glebe-land plots, and plots ſet for the poor, and the old incloſure) to be paid June 24; and for the old incloſure the parſon ſhould receive tithe in kind of corn, grain, and hay only, as formerly, which, with the rate of the ſaid 2*s.* per acre, were in lieu of all tithes ariſing in Coſſington (except the churching of women, mortuaries, communicants, and marriages).

There was alſo ſet out 30 acres, 1 rood, 30 poles, for relief of ſuch as ſtood in need; and if there was no poor, the profits of it, or ſurplus of relief of the poor, to be to defray other charges of the town, as the major part of the freeholders ſhould think beſt [11].

The following certificate was next year given concerning the value of the rectory.

"Whereas ſir Edward Lake, baronett, doctour of laws, and commiſſary of the archdeaconry of Leiceſter, and Clement Bretton, D. D. and archdeacon of the ſaid archdeaconry of Leiceſter, by a certayne commiſſion bearing date one and twentyth day of February laſt paſt, have authorized and appoynted us, whoſe names are hereunto ſubſcribed, amongſt others, to inquire of the yearely proffitts and value of the tyths, gleab-land, and other proffitts, belonging to the rectory of Coſſington, in the county of Leiceſter, and as well to certifie the ſame; as alſoe that proviſion is now had and made for the rector of Coſſington aforeſaid, and his ſucceſſors for the future, upon the late incloſure of the common feilds of Coſſington aforeſaid, for and in lieu and ſatisfaction of the ſaid tyths, gleabe-land, and proffitts. In purſuance of which ſaid commiſſion, wee, having made inquiry of and concerning all the ſaid premiſſes, doe humbly certifie unto the ſaid ſir Edward Lake, baronett, and Dr. Clement Bretton, that wee doe finde, and it is made to appeare unto us, that, before the ſaid incloſure, the tyths of corne and graine belonging to the ſaid rectory were, communibus annis, worth eighty-five pounds per annum, the tyth-hay worth £20. per annum, the ſmall tyths thirteene pounds thirteene ſhillings foure pence per annum, the gleabe-land, conteyneing two yard-lands, fourteene pounds per annum, and three cloſes ten pounds per annum; in all, amounting unto one hundred forty and two pounds thirteene ſhillings and foure pence per annum; and alſoe that now, upon the ſaid incloſure, it is ordered and agreed, and appoynted, that the ſaid parſon and his ſucceſſors ſhall have, receive, and enjoy, two ſhillings per acre yearely, for the number or quantity of 1278 acres in the feild of Coſſington aforeſaid, for and in lieu of tyths, which will amount unto the ſumme of 127*l.* 16*s.* beſides the tyths of the old incloſure there, which will amount unto 50*s.* per annum; and alſoe that there are the number or quantity of nine and forty of land and ground ſett forth and allotted for the gleabe-land, valued at the rate or value of five and twenty pounds per annum; and the ſaid three cloſes, of the value of ten pounds per annum, ſtill injoyed and to be injoyed by the parſon and his ſucceſſors there; in all amounting unto the ſumme of 165*l.* 6*s.* per annum: ſoe that it doth appeare, that the ſaid rectory is bettered and improved the ſumme of 22*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.* per annum. In witnes whereof, wee have hereunto ſett our hands, the eighteenth day of Aprill, in the 19th year of the raigne of our ſoveraigne lord king Charles the Second, &c. 1667.

Robert Lewes, vic. de Scraptoft.
Edward Smith, rect. de Rotherby.

Vera copia, examinat' per Tho. Staveley."

After this, all the parties were deſirous to have the incloſure confirmed by decree in chancery; and, for that end, a bill was exhibited, and anſwers put in; and the cauſe came to hearing, and the incloſure decreed to continue. The decree follows, by which the ſcope of the bill will appear. The anſwers were a full confeſſion of the matters in the bill [12].

"Carolus Secundus, Dei gratiâ, Anglie, Scotie, Francie, & Hibernie rex, fidei defenſor, &c. Mattheo Babington, armigero, Willielmo Whalley, armigero, Thome Babington, generoſo, Henrico Hulſe, generoſo, Willielmo Oſwyn, Johanni Oſwyn, Willielmo Fiſher, Suſanne Marſhall, vidue & relicte Johannis Marſhall, defuncti, Anne Fiſher, vidue & relicte Johannis Fiſher, defuncti, Mountjoy Fiſher, Elizabethe Benet, vidue & relicte Johannis Benet, defuncti, Willielmo Staveley, clerico, rectori parochialis eccleſie de Coſington, aliàs Cuſſington, in com' Leic', Tobie Marſhall, Johanni Chamberlaine, Willielmo Bate, Anne Maſon, aliàs Caſtledine, Jonathan Martin, Elizabethe Scampton, vidue, & Agneti Brewing, & omnibus & ſingulis aliis perſone & perſonis quibuſcunque, aliquod ſtatum, jus, titulum, ſive intereſſe, habere, clamandam vel demandandam de, in, vel ſuper maneriis, terris, tenementis, hereditamentis, & ceteris premiſſis, inferiùs memoratis, ac omnibus aliis perſone ſive perſonis quorum intereſt aut intereſſe poterit, & veſtrûm & eorum cuilibet, ſalutem. Cùm quoddam finale judicium ſive decretum coram nobis in curiâ cancellarie noſtre nuper factum & redditum extitit in hec verba: 'Whereas heretofore, that is to ſay, on the fourteenth day of June, in the yeare of our Lord one thouſand ſix hundred ſixty-eight, Mathew Babington, eſq. William Whalley, eſq. Thomas Babington, gent. Henry Hulſe, gent. William Oſwyn, John Oſwyn, William Fiſher, and Suſanna Marſhall, widdow and relict of John Marſhall, deceaſed, complainants, did exhibit their bill of complaint into this high and honourable court of chancery, againſt Anne Fiſher, widdow and relict of John Fiſher, deceaſed, Mountjoy Fiſher, Elizabeth Benet, widdow and relict of John Benet, deceaſed, William Staveley, clarke, rector of the pariſh church of Coſington, aliàs Cuſſington, co. Leiceſter, Tobias Marſhall, John Chamberlaine, William Bate, Anne Maſon, aliàs Caſtledine, Jonathan Martin, Elizabeth Scampton, widdow, and Agnes Brewing, defendants; thereby ſetting forth, that the complainants, Mathew Babington and William Whalley, being reſpectively ſeiſed in fee of the mannors in Coſington, aliàs Cuſſington, aforeſaid, and of divers lands in the common and open feilds there; and the defendant William Staveley, being rector of the church of Coſington, and, in right of his church, being ſeiſed of two yard-lands, gleab-land, and of all tithes and church-dutyes ariſeing within the ſame pariſh; and the complainants Thomas Babington, Henry Hulſe, William Oſwin, William Fiſher, and John Oſwin, and alſo John Fiſher, Thomas Pepper, John Marſhall, and John Benet, all four ſince deceaſed; and alſo the defendants John Chamberlaine, William Bate, Elizabeth Scampton, Jonathan Martin, Anne Maſon, and Agnes Brewing, being reſpectively ſeiſed and poſſeſſed of divers meſſuages and cottages, whereto there perteined right of common at certaine times in the yeare, and of divers quantityes of land, meadow, and paſture ground, lying diſperſedly in the commonable and open feild of Coſington; and, conſidering that their lands lay diſperſed and confuſed in the open feilds, ſo that they could not make that profitt thereof as if the ſame were incloſed, and every one enjoyed his parte in ſeveralty (which would prevent many inconveniences), certaine articles of agreement, bearing date decimo Auguſti, quintodecimo regis nunc, were made and concluded between them, whereby it was agreed that the ſaid open and commonable feilds, meadow-ground, cow-paſture, lot-graſſe, parteing-graſſe, The Oulds, Old Cloſe, Bull-peice, Conſtable-peice, and the common and commonable ground in Coſington aforeſaid, ſhould be incloſed, fenced, and taken into ſeveralty, ſoe as every of the ſaid partyes, theire heires and aſſigns, might holde and enjoy their ſeveral and reſpective proporcions of the ſaid feilds and grounds in ſeveralty; and that, for the more juſt, equall, and regular proceeding therein, the freeholders, or the greater number of them, ſhould, in convenient time after, nominate and appoint five indifferent perſons commiſſioners or referrees for the purpoſes in the ſaid articles after expreſſed and declared; that is to ſay, that the ſaid five commiſſioners, or referrees, or any fower or three of them, ſhould, within one yeare after theire being elected, ſet out, allot, and appoint, ſuch partes, plotts, and proportions, of and in the feilds of Coſington, as each of the partyes, theire heires and aſſigns, ſhould hold and enjoy in ſeveralty, and how, and in what manner, and by whom, the ſame ſhould be incloſed and fenced, haveing due reſpect to the quantity, quality, and conveniences of every man's land; and, for the better doeing thereof, ſhould appoint one or more ſurveyors for the admeaſureing the lands, that the ſaid partyes, theire heires and aſſignes, according to their reſpective proporcions of land, ſhould beare theire proporcions of ſurveying and admeaſureing the feilds, and ſhould alſoe make ſuch good and ſufficient conveyances and aſſurances in the law, each to other, of ſuch reſpective allotments as they ſhould be adviſed by councell to be nominated and appointed by the ſaid commiſſioners or referrees, or any four or three of them; and the ſaid conveyances to be at the coſts and charges of each party, according to theire proporcions and charge which each man's aſſurance ſhould require and amount unto; and that, in order thereunto, all the partyes ſhould, after notice, produce all theire deeds and evedences to ſuch councell, to be peruſed; and, if it ſhould appeare that any of the ſaid partyes ſhould be ſeaſed of any eſtate in tayle with any remainders over, ſo that recoveryes might be neceſſary for the barring of ſuch remainders, that each party that ſhould be ſo ſeaſed ſhould, at his own coſts and charges, ſuffer ſuch recovery or recoveryes, in ſuch forme as the councell ſhould direct and appoint, of ſuch theire lands ſoe intayled, to barr ſuch remainders, and ſettle eſtates thereof in fee ſimple, and ſhould execute ſuch revocations and other matters as councell ſhould direct, to the end that each man's plott and proporcion might be ſetled unto him and them ſeverally, and his and theire heires and aſſignes, according to the entent of the articles; and that, in caſe any defect of title, or any charge or incumbrances upon, or iſſueing out of, any lands appeared, that then ſuch aſſurance and ſecurity ſhould be made and provided, by the direction of the ſaid councell, that the owners of ſuch lands, and theire new plotts to be allotted in lew thereof, ſhould onely beare and be charged with ſuch charges and incumbrances, and each other's new plotts and proporcions of land ſhould be freed and diſcharged, or otherwiſe ſaved harmeleſs, from all ſuch charges and incumbrances; and that the referrees, or any fower or three of them, ſhould make ſuch allotment to the freehold cottagers, who had right of common, as they ſhould thinke fitt, in lew of theire commons; and alſo ſhould make ſuch meinteynance and proviſion for the poore of Coſington, and to be had and enjoyed by them for ſoe long time and in ſuch manner, as the referrees, or any fower or three of them, ſhould ſet downe and appoint; and ſhould alſoe equally and indifferently rate all the tithes whatſoever ariſeing in Coſington (except oblacions, obvencions, mortuaries, and Eaſter-booke), and appoint full allowance and ſatisfaction to the parſon and his ſucceſſors for and in lieu thereof, to be rated and proporcioned by the acre, and to be yearly paid by the freeholders and landholders reſpectively, according to theire reſpective proporcions and numbers of acres; and that ſuch ſecurity and aſſurance ſhould be had for the due and yearely payment thereof, as the ſaid councell ſhould direct and adviſe; and that, by the ſaid articles, it was further agreed, that, if any party had any woods, trees, hedges, or buſhes, growing on any theire ancient lands which ſhould be allotted to any other, that the owners ſhould have liberty at any time to cutt and carry the ſame away, unleſs ſuch party, in whoſe plott the ſame ſhould happen to be, ſhould deſire the continuance thereof, or any part thereof, as a fence, and ſhould give ſuch recompence and ſatisfaction for the ſame as the referrees, or any fower or three of them, ſhould appoint; and that, if any differences ſhould ariſe any wayes relateing to the premiſſes, the ſame ſhould be determined by the referrees, or any fower or three of them; and ſuch theire orders and determinacions to be finall and concluſive to all partys; and that, for ſetling and confirmeing the incloſure, and the ſetling and aſſureing the poſſeſſions and eſtates of all partyes to theire reſpective plotts, the ſame ſhould, with all convenient ſpeede after the allotment, be ſetled and confirmed by decree or otherwiſe, as the ſaid councell ſhould direct and appoint; and all partyes to have theire reſpective plotts and allottments with all convenient ſpeed ſetled, aſſured, and conveyed, to them, theire heires and aſſignes reſpectively, or as they ſhould appoint, by feoffment, decree, or otherwiſe, as to the ſaid councell ſhould ſeem meet and neceſſary; and that all partyes ſhould procure theire wives and truſtees, reſpectively, claymeing any intereſt, to joyne in the aſſurance, as the caſe ſhould require, with the direction of the councell; and that, in purſuance of the articles, the freeholders, or the greater number of them, did, on or about the twentieth of February, one thouſand ſix hundred ſixty-five, nominate and chooſe Robert Barnard, Thomas Noble, John Baker, William Bruerne, and John Hurſt, to be commiſſioners and referrees for the purpoſes in the articles expreſſed; who ſhortly after appointed, Vincent Wing, gent. to be ſurveyor; who, haveing ſurveyed and admeaſured each man's land accordingly, and delivered the ſurvey to the referrees, they thereupon did veiw the feilds, and, upon due conſideracion had of the quantity, quality, and conveniences of every man's land, did appoint and direct the ſurveyor to plott and admeaſure out to each party ſuch plotts as each was to have in leiw of theire ancient lands; which the ſurveyor did doe accordingly, and delivered the ſame to the referrees in a booke fairely written and atteſted under his hand; and that thereupon four of the referrees, to wit, Robert Barnard, William Bruerne, Thomas Noble, and John Baker, did, by writeing under theire hands and ſeales, bearing date the fifth of September, one thouſand ſix hundred ſixty-ſix, ſet downe and declare theire orders and appointments concerning the premiſſes; and thereby did order, allott, and appoint, that every of the ſaid partyes, and all ſuch perſons as were owners of land and ground in the feild of Coſington, according to theire reſpective eſtates and intereſts, and theire reſpective heires and aſſignes, in lieu and full ſatisfaction of theire ancient lands and common in the open and commonable feilds of Coſington, ſhould have, hold, and enjoy, ſuch ſeverall plotts and proporcions of land, as the ſame were particularly expreſſed and ſet forth in a booke thereto annexed under the hand of the ſaid Vincent Wing, the ſurveyor, wherein the ſeverall and reſpective plotts for every of the partyes were expreſſed and butted and bounded in manner following:

---

[1] Eſch. 27 Hen. VI. ex Libro de Lovel.
[2] Bailiffs Accompts in the Augmentation Office.
[3] Eſch. 3 Edw. IV. N° 30. Leic.
[4] Pat. 4 Edw. IV. Pars 2. m. 18.
[5] Pat. 7 Edw. IV. Pars 1.
[6] Eſch. 1 Ric. III. N° 23. Leic.
[7] Lib. Feod. militum caſtri & honoris de Tutbury, in com' Stafford, Derby, Nottingham, Leic', & Warwick, in cur' ducat' Lan', certificat' ſub ſigillo ducatûs, &c. dat' 25 Jan. 16 Eliz.
[8] Inq. at Melton, Oct. 4, 2 Jac. I.
[9] Inq. at Melton, 21 Jan. 14 Car. Cole, vol. VII. (411) p. 121.
[10] Palmer's MS Caſes, pp. 272. 274.
[11] Ibid. pp. 275. 281.
[12] Ibid. p. 282.

"Coſington, September the fifth, one thouſand ſix hundred ſixty-ſix, for the complainant Mathew Babington one plot of land in Brookefeild, and part of the Middle feild, extending from the towne to the Oulds, lying between Sileby feild on the North, and the plott of John Fiſher, John Chamberlaine, the gleab, Ratliffe meare, and part of the Oulds on the South, conteyning three hundred ſeaventy-one acres, three roodes, and thirty perches; Lamble, or the Round Hill plott, lying between the land of maſter Whalley, John Fiſher, and John Oſwin, on the Weſt, and Ratliffe feild on the Eaſt, the gleab-land North, conteyning fifty-eight acres, one roode, and twenty perches; one plott of land in Great Riefeild, lying betweene the land of maſter Whalley on the Eaſt and South, and the land of widdow Maſon and Houſicke-way on the North, Sharpes-nooke and Sheepdoles Weſt, forty-nine acres, one roode, and twenty-nine perches; eight lands in Little Riefeild, abutting on Houſicke-way South, the Poore's Plott Weſt, and part of the Eight Hades, the land of William Bate Eaſt, and the Poore's Plott Weſt, the ſame North, two acres, two roods; the four leyes and the ſix leyes, three acres and fifteen perches; Sharpe's Nooke, and the Sheepe-doles, lying between the river on the South and Weſt, widdow Maſon and the Mill-leyes and Gaultwey North, twenty-five acres, one perch; Gaultwey, the Mill-leyes, and Broadſike, adjoyneing to the former, the river Soare, Weſt, the old incloſure Eaſt, conteyning forty-ſix acres, one roode, and fourteen perches; Mickle-meadow, and Thackwacks, lying between Sileby-meadow on the North, and Oſwin's bridge on the South, abutting on the Soare Weſt, and the gleab meadow and the home-cloſes Eaſt, ſeaventy acres, two perches; one plott of land lying in the Oulds between Sileby feild on the North and Ratliffe feild on the South, abutting on the land of Mr. Whalley and Mr. Babington Weſt, conteyning one hundred ſixty acres, three roodes, and nine perches; the whole quantity of the complaynant Mathew Babington's land being ſeaven hundred eighty-ſeaven acres and eighteen perches: Alſoe for the complaynant William Whalley his home-plott lying between the land of maſter Babington Weſt, Tobias Marſhall on the Eaſt, abutting on Houſicke-way and the homeſtead North, and on the meadow South, conteyning fourty-four acres and five perches; one plott of land lying between Houſicke-way on the South, and the land of William Fiſher and John Fiſher on the North, abutting on the land of Mr. Babington Eaſt, the upper end thereof abutting on the Wreake South, widow Maſon Weſt, and conteyning ſixty-eight acres, two roodes, and ten perches; one plott of meadow, the river called the Wreake South, Tobias Marſhall, maſter Whalley, and maſter Babington, North, abutting on the meadow of Tobias Marſhall Eaſt, and the meadow of maſter Babington Weſt, conteyning one and thirty acres, one roode, and thirty perches; one plott in the Oulds, lying betwixt the land of maſter Babington on the Eaſt and the gleab land on the Weſt, abutting on Ratliffe feild South, conteyning twenty acres, the whole quantity of the complainant William Whalley's land, one hundred ſixty-three acres, two roodes, and ten perches: Alſoe for John Fiſher a plott of land in the Middle feild, lying between the land of maſter Babington and John Chamberlaine on the North, and the land of William Fiſher and maſter Whalley on the South, abutting on the town Weſt, and the lands of maſter Babington Eaſt, conteyning forty-nine acres, two roodes, and fowerteen perches; one cloſe at the towne's end, late maſter Babington's, called The Leyes Cloſe, conteyning five acres and two roodes; one peice of meadow abutting on the butt-peice Weſt, Agnes Brewing North, and maſter Babington South, conteyning fower acres and ſix perches, the whole quantity of John Fiſher's land, being fifty-nine acres, one roode, and thirty-ſix perches: Alſoe for the complainant William Fiſher one plott of land in the Middle feild, lying between the land of maſter Whally South, and John Fiſher North, abutting on the towneſhippe Weſt, and John Fiſher Eaſt, conteyning fourteen acres, three roodes, and thirty-nine perches: Alſoe for the complainant William Oſwin one plott of paſture in the Seggs, lyeing between The Willowes Cloſe of Tobias Marſhall South, and the land of Henry Hulſe North and Weſt, William Oſwyn's home-cloſe Eaſt, conteyning two acres; one plott on Lamble-leyes, the Poore's plott, South, Jonathan Martin and the Croſſe-cloſes Weſt, Henry Hulſe Eaſt, conteyning eight acres; one plott of land in Syſon mill-feild, lying between the lands of Tobias Marſhall Weſt and Henry Hulſe Eaſt, abutting on Houſicke-way North, William Oſwin's meadow South, conteyning thirty-three acres, two roodes, and eight perches; one peice of meadow adjoyning to his feild-plott North, and abutting on Thurnwater-cloſe and the river South, Henry Hulſe Eaſt, and Tobias Marſhall's meadow Weſt, conteyning five acres, three roodes, and one and thirty perches; one plott in the Oulds, lying between the lands of Tobias Marſhall on the Weſt and Henry Hulſe on the Eaſt, abutting on Ratliffe-feild South, and the land of maſter Babington North, conteyning ten acres, the whole quantity of the complainant William Oſwin's land, being fifty-nine acres, one rood, and thirty-nine perches: Alſoe for the complainant Henry Hulſe one plott of land in the Seggs and Lamble-leyes, adjoyning to his homeſtead Eaſt, William Oſwin and the Poore's plott South, the gleab land North, William Oſwyn Weſt, conteyning eleaven acres, two roodes, and thirteen perches; one plott of land in Syſton mill-feild, lying between the lands of maſter Staveley Eaſt and William Oſwyn Weſt, abutting on Houſicke-way North, his owne meadow and the mill South, conteyning fifty-one acres, one plott of meadow adjoing to his former plott North, the river and a cloſe of Mr. Babington South, William Oſwin Weſt, containing nine acres, one roode, ſeaven perches; one plott in the Oulds, lying between the land of William Oſwyn on the Weſt and the gleab land on the Eaſt, abutting on the land of maſter Babington North and on Ratliffe feild South, conteyning fifteen acres, the whole quantity of the complainant Henry Hulſe's land, being eighty-ſix acres, three roodes, and twenty perches: Alſoe for Tobias Marſhall a plott of land in Syſton mill-feild, lying between the land of maſter Whalley on the Weſt and William Oſwin on the Eaſt, abutting on Houſicke-way North and Tobias Marſhall's meadow South, conteyning thirty-three acres, one roode, and ſeaventeen perches; one peice of meadow adjoyning South, lying between the meadow of William Oſwin Eaſt and maſter Whalley Weſt, abutting on the river South, conteyning four acres, three roodes, and twenty perches, the Willowes cloſe and two leys adjoyning, two acres, two roodes, three perches; one plott in the Oulds, lying between the lands of maſter Babington on the Weſt and William Oſwin on the Eaſt, ſhooteing on Ratliffe feild South and the land of maſter Babington North, conteyning ſeaven acres, two roodes, the whole quantity of Tobias Marſhall's land being forty-eight acres, one roode: And that alſoe it was to be remembred, that Tobias Marſhall was to have two leyes of William Oſwyn's, and maſter Babington to have Oſſep's cloſe of Marſhall; alſoe for William Bate a plott of land next Cunnery cloſe, and part of the eight hades abutting on Houſicke-way, conteyning ſix acres; alſo for John Chamberlaine one plott of land on Wateriſh Wong, lying between the lands of maſter Babington on the North, and the lands of maſter Babington and John Oſwyn on the South, abutting on the lands of John Fiſher on the Weſt, and on the gleab land Eaſt, conteyning twenty-fower acres, five perches, Thurnwater cloſe and Thurnwater nooke adjoyning Weſt, William Oſwin North, the river South, conteyning two acres, three roodes, twelve perches, the whole quantity of John Chamberlaine's land, being twenty-ſix acres, three roodes and ſeaventeen perches: Alſoe for the defendant William Staveley, clarke, a plott of land in Syſton mill-feild, lying between the lands of widdow Maſon Eaſt and Henry Hulſe Weſt, abutting on the river South, and the lands of maſter Whalley North, conteyning fifteen acres and twenty-nine perches, the ſame being his freehold plott: Alſoe for widdow Maſon a plott of land in Syſton mill-feild, the land of maſter Staveley on the Weſt, Houſicke-way Eaſt, abutting on the river South, and the land of maſter Whalley North, conteyning thirteen acres, two roods, and thirty-ſix perches; one plott of meadow and leyes lying between the land of maſter Babington on the Eaſt, South, and Weſt, ... cloſe North, conteyning ſix acres, the whole quantity of widdow Maſon's land being nineteen acres, two roodes, and thirty-ſix perches: Alſoe for the complainant John Oſwin a plott of land in Pencroft, lying between the land of maſter Babington Eaſt, Weſt, and South, the Common way North, conteyning eight acres and nine perches; a cloſe of William Oſwin's adjoyning to his homeſtead, being one roode, nine perches, the whole quantity of John Oſwyn's land being eight acres, one roode, and nine perches: Alſoe for Jonathan Martin a plott in Broadſick, maſter Babington North and Weſt, William Oſwyn South, conteyning three acres, two roodes, and ſeaventeen perches: Alſoe for Agnes Brewing a plott of meadow called The Bull-peice, and another adjoyning and abutting on Swine's bridge Eaſt, the meadow of John Fiſher South and maſter Babington North, conteyning three acres and fower perches; a ſeverall cloſe of maſter Babington adjoyning to her homeſtead, being three roodes, three perches; the South cloſe, late maſter Whalleye's, being one roode, thirty-eight perches, the whole quantity of Agnes Brewing's land being fower acres, one roode, and five perches: Alſoe for the gleab, one plott of land in the Middle feild, lying between the Common way South, and the land of maſter Babington North, the land of John Chamberlaine Weſt, and maſter Babington Eaſt, conteyning thirty-ſix acres, two roodes, and nineteen perches; Henton's cloſe, and part of the home-cloſe, being one acre, one roode, and twenty perches; a plott in Thackbracks, adjoyning to Henton's cloſe Eaſt, Henry Hulſe's land South, and maſter Babington Weſt and the North, being one acre, one roode, and fower perches; gleab, one plott in the Oulds, maſter Whalley Eaſt, maſter Hulſe Weſt, Ratliffe feild South, maſter Babington North, conteyning tenn acres; the whole quantity of the gleabland being forty-nine acres, one roode, and thirty perches; Alſo the Poore's plott, lying between the land of maſter Babington and widow Maſon South, Henry Hulſe and William Oſwin North, and abutting on the land of maſter Babington Eaſt, conteyning thirty acres, one roode, and thirty perches: Alſo John Benet was to have, in lieu of his plott of two acres, Gouge's houſe and homeſtead, and the Sheepcote cloſe belonging to Beeby's farme, in exchange for his houſe and his ſaid plott; but maſter Babington was to have timber-trees, and liberty to cut the hedges, leaveing them ſtake-high, without ſatisfaction, as by the ſaid booke ſubſcribed by the ſaid Vincent Wing, to which the complainants referred themſelves, might appeare. And the complainants, by theire ſaid bill, further ſhew, that the fower referrees beforenamed did further order and appoint, that the parſon of Coſington and his ſucceſſors there ſhould have, receive, and enjoy, yearly for ever, two ſhillings an acre, to be paid yearly, for every acre of land and ground in the feilds and lordſhipps of Coſington (except the gleabland plotts, the plotts ſet forth for the poore, and the old incloſure), to be paid yearely for ever on the fower and twentieth day of June and the four and twentieth of December, the firſt payment to begin on the four and twentieth of June the next; and that for the old incloſures the parſon and his ſucceſſors ſhould take and receive tithes in kinde of corne, graine, and hay onely, as formerly, as the ſame ſhould fall and renew; which, together with the ſaid rate of two ſhillings per acre, was to be in lieu and full ſatisfaction of all tithes ariſeing in Coſington (except the churching of women, mortuaries, communicants, and marriages); and that every of the partyes, to whom plotts were ſet out in the feilds of Coſington, ſhould begin, if they thought good, to ſever theire plotts at any time after the nine and twentieth of September then next comeing; and that all the ſaid partyes ſhould enter upon theire reſpective plotts at or upon the one and twentieth of December, and then ſhould take and withdraw theire reſpective beaſts and cattell off all other the ſaid plotts; and that each party ſhould fence a ſide and an end of his ſeverall and reſpective plotts and ſoe proportionably throughout the feilds; and that where any hedges or trees, willowes or ſallowes, gorſe-buſhes or thornes, ſet or happened to be in any of the plotts, the owners ſhould have liberty, till the five and twentieth of March then next, to cut and carry the ſame away, leaving the hedges ſo cut ſtake-high, in caſe the partyes who were to enjoy the reſpective plotts ſhould not, before the firſt day of the ſame month of March, pay three ſhillings an acre for the ſaid fences to the owners of the ſame, and ſo proporcionably every acre, to be accounted at twenty-eight yards in length; and that William Oſwin ſhould have a cloſe of maſter Babington's, conteyning two acres, one roode, and eleaven perches, adjoyning to William Oſwin's houſe, and William Oſwin to allow, as ſatisfaction for the ſame, the value and worth of ſix and thirty perches of the ſaid cloſe to the ſaid maſter Babington; and that the common highwayes, common iſſues, water-courſes, lands, and bridges, in the feild and lordſhipp of Coſington, ſhould be at all times repayred, ſcoured, and mainteyned in common, and at a generall charge, as formerly had been accuſtomed there, according to the value and proporcion of each man's lands and eſtates there; and that all the old incloſures, which were agreed or allotted to be enjoyed by other perſons, ſhould be held and enjoyed by the then preſent owners till the five and twentieth of March then next, and then and from thenceforth to be held and enjoyed by ſuch perſon reſpectively, to whom the ſame were allotted for the future; and that all perſons who had any plott or plotts ſet forth and allotted ſhould pay and diſcharge the ſeverall ſummes of money rated and aſſeſſed upon them reſpectively, according to a levy made in that behalfe, for defraying ſome part of the charges of the incloſure, before they ſhould enter upon theire reſpective plotts; or that, if any of the partyes refuſe ſo to do, then any others might and ſhould put and keepe theire cattell in the plott or plotts of the perſons ſo neglecting, untill they ſhould paye theire ſeverall proporcions of the ſaid levy; and that there ſhould be a paſſage, or a way, for foote, horſes, and a coach-way, out of the parſonage homeſtead, into the Poore's plott, to the common highway there, and ſoe from the highway to the parſonage homeſtead, over the plotts of Henry Hulſe and William Oſwyn in the Seggs: And that the ſaid commiſſioners or referrees did nominate and appoint Thomas Staveley, eſq. to be councell for conveyances and aſſurances in reference to the incloſure, according to the articles: And that, whereas there was a plott, conteyning thirty acres, one roode, and thirty perches, ſett out for the poore, the ſaid referrees did further appoint, that all ſuch poore people as were, or ſhould be, inhabitants of Coſington, and ſhould ſtand in need of maintenance or reliefe, ſhould from time to time be mainteyned and releeved out of and by the ſaid plott, or out of and by the rents, iſſues, and profitts of the ſame, by the diſcrecion and by the appointment of the grater number of the freeholders; or that, if there ſhould be no ſuch poore, or that the profitts ſhould amount to more than ſhould be needfull for the releife of the poore, then the profitts of the ſaid plott, or the overplus, ſhould be imployed for defraying the other public towne uſes and charges of Coſington aforeſaid, according to the diſcrecion and appointment of the major part of the freeholders there; and that, whereas there was an allowance for an ancient cottage common, lately belonging to widdow Scampton, ſett forth in the plotts of maſter Whalley, of the quantity of five acres, the ſaid five acres ſhould be ſet forth and allowed out of the plott of maſter Babington in Leypoole-leyes adjoyning to the plott of maſter Whalley, and that, in lieu of the ſame, there were to be five acres taken out of the plott of maſter Whalley in the great Rie-feild adjoyning to the plott of maſter Babington, and laid to the ſaid plott of maſter Babington in the ſaid great Rie-feild: And, whereas it appeared, by the ſaid booke ſubſcribed by Vincent Wing, that there was ſett forth for Agnes Brewing a plott of meadow and a ſeverall cloſe conteyning three acres, three roodes, and ſeaven perches; but her full quantity ſhould be four acres, one roode, and fifteen perches; it was thereby ordered by conſent, and agreed, that Agnes Brewing ſhould have a little cloſe in the towne called The South Cloſe, late maſter Whalley's, conteyning two roodes, or thereabouts, to make up her quantity; and that the complainant William Whalley ſhould have, in ſatisfaction thereof, ſoe much ground as the little cloſe conteyned ſet forth out of the meadow of the complainant William Whalley; but Agnes Brewing not to have the trees in the little cloſe, but ſhee to have the benefit of the meadow dureing the terme which ſhee then had in the South cloſe; and that all ancient neceſſary footewayes ſhould be uſed and enjoyed as formerly. And the ſaid complainants, by their ſaid bill, further ſhewed, the ſaid fower commiſſioners, or referrees, did afterwards, on or about the thirteenth of December, one thouſand ſix hundred ſixty-ſix aforeſaid, meet at Coſington, for theire further proceeding in the ſaid matters referred touching the ſaid incloſure, and did then make a memorandum in writeing, under theire hands and ſeales, to this effect (viz.); that five acres more, admeaſured and ſet forth out of the plott of the complainant Mathew Babington in the Leypoole-leyes for the cottage commons of widdow Scampton; and that five acres more, admeaſured and ſet forth out of the plott of the complainant William Whalley in the Rie-feild, and added to the plott of the complainant Mathew Babington, in exchange of the aforeſaid five acres, in purſuance of one of the aforemencioned orders; and widdow Scampton to have a way through the complainant Matthew Babington's plott in the Rie-feild: And it was then ordered, by conſent, that John Fiſher ſhould have a little plott of ground, late the complainant Mathew Babington's, adjoyning to John Fiſher's homeſtead, conteyning one roode and twenty-ſix perches; and the complainant Mathew Babington ſhould have, in lieu or ſatisfaction thereof, one roode, twenty-ſix perches, as the ſame was admeaſured and ſett forth, out of the plott of John Fiſher on Gaultry-leyes, adjoyning there to the plott of the complainant Mathew Babington; but John Fiſher not to have the trees growing there; and that John Martin ſhould have a way unto his plott out of the Poore's plott, and over the plott of the complainant Mathew Babington, beyond the Croſs-cloſe. And the complainants, by theire ſaid bill, further ſhewed, that, after the ſaid articles, and before the ſaid allottment made, the ſaid Thomas Pepper dyed, haveing before his death, for valueable conſideracion, ſold and conveyed all his lands and tenements in Coſington to the complainant Matthew Babington and his heirs; and that, after the articles and allottment, the ſaid John Fiſher died, and that his eſtate and intereſt came to the defendants Anne and Mountjoy Fiſher; and that the ſaid John Benet alſoe dyed, and that his eſtate and intereſt came to the defendant Elizabeth Benet; and that, after the articles, John Marſhall alſo died, and his eſtate and intereſt came to the complainant Suſanna Marſhall and the defendant Tobias Marſhall, for whom plotts were ſet out and allotted; and that, in purſuance of the ſaid allottments and agreements, all the partyes entred upon, and fenced and ditched, theire reſpective plotts, and had ever ſince quietly held and enjoyed the ſame, whereby each one's eſtate was much improved; and that, by the rate and proviſion made in lieu of tithes, and the plotts laid out for the gleab, the parſonage was much improved, and of better value than it was before the incloſure; but that the defendants, combineing together to avoid the articles, agreements, and incloſures, refuſed to make conveyances and aſſurances according to the articles, and threatned to wave their new plotts, and enter on theire old lands: For reliefe wherein, and to have conveyances made and executed according to the articles, and that the premiſſes might be eſtabliſhed and ſetled by decree of this court, the ſaid complainants humbly prayed the aid and aſſiſtance of this honourable Court; and that, for that purpoſe, proceſs of ſubpena might be awarded againſt the ſaid defendants, to appeare in this Court, and anſwer the premiſſes; which being granted, and the defendants therewithall ſerved, they appeared accordingly; and, by theire anſwers, did confeſſe the ſeiſin and poſſeſſion of the reſpective partyes, the articles, and the nominacion of the referrees, and theire orders and appointments, and the ſurveys, as the ſame are ſet forth by the bill; and likewiſe confeſſed theire entry into, and acceptance and injoyment of, theire new plotts. And the defendant Staveley ſet forth, that he was content to accept of the two ſhillings an acre (except as is before excepted) in lieu of tithes, if the ſame and the arrears ſince the incloſure might be paid duely; and confeſſed, that the parſonage would be much bettered by the incloſure, in caſe he and his ſucceſſors might enjoy the rate and the new plotts. And the other defendants ſaid, they were willing to pay the two ſhillings per acre rate tithe for the land in theire reſpective plotts. And all the defendants denyed any combinacion to avoid the articles or incloſure; but ſaid, they had accepted theire plotts, and did conſent and agree to the articles and incloſure, and were content the ſame ſhould be confirmed by decree of this Courte, and to make conveyances and ſettlements, according to the articles concerning the incloſure, to be much advantageous both to them and the parſon and his ſucceſſors, as by the ſaid bill and anſwer, remayneing upon record in this honourable Courte, more at large doth appeare. And the cauſe ſoe ſtanding on bill and anſwer, this preſent tenth day of February, one thouſand ſix hundred ſixty-eight, was by this Courte appointed for the hearing thereof. And now, upon the hearing and debateing of the matter in queſtion between the ſaid parties accordingly, this preſent day, in the preſence of councell learned on both ſides, the ſubſtance of the complainants' bill and the defendants' anſwer appeared to be as herein before is recited and ſet forth. This Courte thereupon, and upon debate of the matter, and hearing what would be alledged on either ſides, doth thinke fitt, and accordingly it is, this preſent terme of St. Hillary, that is to ſay, on Wedneſday the ſaid tenth day of February, in the one and twentieth yeare of the raigne of our moſt gracious ſoveraigne lord Charles the Second, by the grace of God, of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, king, defender of the faith, &c. by the right honourable ſir Orlando Bridgeman, knight and baronet, lorde keeper of the great ſeale of England, and by the authority of this high and honourable Court of Chancery, ordered, adjudged, and decreed, that the ſaid articles and agreements, and the ſaid allottments, orders, and appointments, made by the ſaid referrees, do ſtand ratified and confirmed by this preſent decree, and be obſerved, performed, fulfilled, and kept, by all the ſaid partyes complainants, theire heires, executors, adminiſtrators, ſucceſſors, and aſſignes reſpectively, and all claymeing under them, according to the tenor and true entent and meaning thereof; and that, accordingly, all the ſaid partyes complainants and defendants, theire heires, ſucceſſors, and aſſigns reſpectively, and all claymeing under them, ſhall and may att all times hereafter, according to theire ſeverall intereſts, quietly and peacebly have, hold, and enjoy, the ſeverall plotts and parcells of ground to them reſpectively allotted and aſſigned, as aforeſaid, againſt each other, and againſt all other perſon or perſons claymeing from, by, or under them, or any of them; and ſhall alſoe make, ſettle, and execute, mutuall conveyances and aſſurances, each to other, of the reſpective plotts and parcells of ground to them reſpectively allotted and appointed as aforeſaid; and ſhall procure theire ſeverall wives and truſtees reſpectively to joyne therein, if occaſion ſhall be, according to the intent of the ſaid articles, by fines, feoffments, releaſes, or otherwiſe, as the ſaid maſter Thomas Staveley, ſoe nominated and appointed of councell for that purpoſe as aforeſaid, ſhall direct and appoint; and that, for that purpoſe, each party ſhall, upon notice thereof from the ſaid maſter Staveley, produce and ſhew forth to him all theire deedes and evedences conteyned in the premiſſes, to the end he may have the peruſall thereof; and that all the ſaid partyes, complainants and defendants, ſhall beare, pay, and diſcharge, theire proporcionable parts and ſhares of the charges of ſurveying and admeaſureing the ſaid common and open feilds, and of makeing, paſſing, and executeing, the aſſurances and other matters relateing to the incloſure, according to the direction and intention of the articles, and of the orders and appointments ſoe made by the ſaid referrees as aforeſaid; and that the ſaid new plotts and parcells of ground, ſoe allotted to each reſpective party as aforeſaid, ſhall remaine ſubject and lyable, in the hands of the preſent poſſeſſors or owners to whom the ſame are allotted as aforeſaid, to the ſame rents, charges, or incumbrances, as were iſſueing and payable out of the ancient lands of ſuch perſon or perſons, or wherewith the ſame were any way charged or incumbred at the time of the ſaid incloſure; and that each reſpective party, who ſhall hold and enjoy ſuch new plott or plotts ſoe allotted and aſſigned to him in lieu of his ſaid charges or incumbred ancient lands, or otherwiſe, have and keep harmeles and indempnified the ſeverall and reſpective owners or poſſeſſors thereof, to whom the ſame are allotted and appointed, their heires and aſſignes, and his and theire lands, tenements, goods, and chattells, of, for, from, and concerning the ſame, according to the true intent and meaning of the ſaid articles; and that the ſaid plott and parcell of ground, ſoe aſſigned for the reliefe and maintenance of the poore aforeſaid, and the rents, iſſues, and profitts thereof, ſhall for ever hereafter goe and be applyed from time to time to ſuch uſes, intents, and purpoſes, as by the orders or appointments of the ſaid referrees are directed and appointed; and that, for the better ſetling and aſſureing the ſame to thoſe ends and purpoſes, the ſaid complainants and defendants reſpectively ſhall make, ſeal, and execute, ſuch conveyances and aſſureances thereof to ſuch perſon and perſons as the ſaid maſter Thomas Staveley ſhall direct and thinke fitt; and that all and every the partyes complainants and defendants, theire heires and aſſignes, and all claymeing under them, ſhall, according to theire reſpective proporcions and number of acres of and in the ſaid new-incloſed lands, for ever hereafter, yearly and on every yeare, ſatisfie and pay unto the defendant William Staveley and his ſucceſſors, parſons or rectors of the church of Coſington aforeſaid, the annuall or yearly rate of two ſhillings per acre, for every acre they ſhall reſpectively hold and enjoy of or in the ſaid lordſhipp of Coſington, other than the ſaid old incloſures, and the ſaid plott or plotts of ground allotted and ſet out for the parſon and his ſucceſſors, for and in lieu of his gleab land belonging to the ſaid rectorie, and other than the plotts or parcels of ground allotted and aſſigned for the reliefe of the poore, and other publick uſes, as aforeſaid; the ſaid annuall or yearly rate to be paid at or in the dyneing-hall of the parſonage-houſe of Coſington, on the fower and twentieth day of June and four and twentieth day of December yearly, by equall porcions; and ſhall alſoe render, yeild, and pay, to the ſaid parſon and his ſucceſſors, the tithes in kinde of corne, graine, and hay, onely ariſeing and happening within the old incloſures of and in Coſington aforeſaid, from time to time, as the ſame ſhall become due and payable; which, together with the ſaid annuall or yearly rate of two ſhillings the acre to be payd in manner as aforeſaid, is to be, and ſhall from time to time be, accepted and received by the ſaid William Staveley and his ſucceſſors, parſons and rectors of the church of Coſington as aforeſaid, for, in lieu and full ſatisfaction of, all and all manner of tithes, and other church dues and dutyes (except the churching of women, communicants, mortuaries, and marriages), ariſeing, due, or payable, out of, for, or in reſpect of, the premiſſes, or other matters tithable within the lordſhippe of Coſington aforeſaid, or the tithable places thereof; and that the ſaid complainants and defendants, theire heires and aſſignes reſpectively, paying the ſaid tithes in kinde of corne, graine, and hay, ariſeing within the ſaid old incloſures, and the ſaid annuall or yearly rates of two ſhillings per acre for every acre of the ſaid new-incloſed ground, other than the gleab plott, and the poor's plott, in manner as aforeſaid, they and the poſſeſſors of the ſaid poore's plott ſhall and may for ever hereafter hold and enjoy all and ſingular theire reſpective lands, tenements, and hereditaments, in Coſington as aforeſaid, and the plott ſet out for the poore and other public uſes, as aforeſaid, freed and diſcharged of and from all and all manner of tithes, and other rates for tithes, and other church dues and dutyes, due and payable to the parſon of Coſington, or his ſucceſſors, for the time being, out of, for, or in reſpect of, the premiſſes, or other matters tithable ariſeing in Coſington aforeſaid (except churching of women, communicants, mortuaries, and marriages), which are to be paid as anciently the ſame have been accuſtomed: And, for the better ſecurity of the ſaid annuall or yearly rate of two ſhillings per acre, to be payd to the parſon and his ſucceſſors in manner as aforeſaid, it is further ordered and decreed, that the ſaid complainants and defendants reſpectively ſhall give ſuch further ſecurity, and make ſuch aſſurances for ſecurity, for the payment of the ſaid annuall or yearly rate of two ſhillings per acre to the ſaid William Staveley the parſon, and his ſucceſſors, in manner as aforeſaid, as the ſaid Thomas Staveley ſhall direct and thinke fitt, according to the true entent and meaning of the ſaid articles: Vobis igitur prefatis Mattheo Babington, Willielmo Whalley, Thome Babington, Henrico Hulſe, Willielmo Oſwyn, Johanni Oſwyn, Willielmo Fiſher, Suſanne Marſhall, Anne Fiſher, Mountjoy Fiſher, Elizabethe Benet, Willielmo Staveley, Tobie Marſhall, Johanni Chamberlaine, Willielmo Bate, Anne Maſon aliàs Caſtledine, Jonathane Martin, Elizabethe Scampton, & Agneti Brewing, necnon omnibus aliis perſone ſive perſonis quibuſcunque quorum intereſt, aut intereſſe poſſit, & veſtrûm & eorum cuilibet, firmitèr injungendo precipimus, quòd omnia & ſingula in judicio ſive decreto predicto contenta vel ſpecificata, quatenùs vos ſeu veſtrûm aliquem in aliquo tangit vel concernit, faciatis, perimpleatis, & exequamini, & quilibet veſtrûm faciat, perimpleat, & exequatur cum effectu, juxta veram intentionem judicii ſive decreti predicti; & hoc ſub periculo incumbendo nullatenùs omittatis quoviſmodo. Teſte meipſo, apud Weſtm', viceſimo-ſexto die Junii, anno regni noſtri viceſimo-primo.

GRIMSTON WILKINSON [1]."

---

[1] Palmer's MS Caſes, p. 343.

This village at preſent contains about 40 dwellings; the principal land-owner, Thomas Babington, eſq. of Rothley Temple.

The rectory is a good building; the front modern; the back front antient, but pictureſquely beautiful; ſee a view of it in Plate XXXIV.

Extracts from the Regiſter, which begins 1544:

"Margaret, daughter of Thomas Babington chriſtened 26 April, 1548.

Zacharye Babington, the ſon of Thomas Babington, chriſtened the 14th of July, 1549.

Jane Babington, daughter of Thomas Babington, gent. chriſtened the 10th of December, 1550.

Ellenor Babington, wife of Mr. Thomas Babington, buried the 7th of June, 1578; Hughe Boothe rector.

Faithe Babington, wife of Mr. Matthew Babington, buried the 1ſt of June, 1589.

Mr. Hugh Booth, parſon of Coſſington, buried the laſt day of December, 1602.

Katharine, the daughter of Adrian Babington, chriſtened the 21ſt March, anno 1613.

Adrian Babington, buried Auguſt, 10, 1625.

Francis Herrick and Mary Fellows were married Nov. 23, 1640.

Ch. ſon of Ch. Staveley, buried Sept. 30, 1643.

1649, May 7, Ann, dau. of John Herrick, baptized.

Francis Herrick died in 1650, aged 55.

1656, Thomas Staveley and Mrs. Mary Onebye were publiſhed ſeveral weeks by the public regiſter of Coſſington; and were married the 31ſt of December by Juſtice Pratt.

Nathanael Cradock, buried Dec. 20, 1706.

William, ſon of Nath. Cradock, bur. Dec. 20, 1716.

Mary, the daughter of Shukburgh Aſhby and Mary his wife, baptized Oct. 5, 1725.

George, the ſon of Mr. Shukburgh Aſhby and Mary his wife, baptized June 10, 1738.

John Ratcliffe, of the Paper-mill, was buried April 24, 1743.

Baptiſms, 1544—1548, 19; 1786—1790, 19.
Burials, ———— 11; ———— 18.

The principal benefactors to this pariſh are, Babington Staveley, who died in 1686, and gave £100. to the poor; William Staveley, who, by will, ſettled 40*s.* a year to buy bread and beef; and Agnes Brewin 5*s.* a year, "to buy Bibles, or procure learning."

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	59	10	9
Expended in county rates, &c.	4	7	10
———— on the poor, —	54	19	9
Rent of workhouſe[1] and habitations,	3	16	0
Expended in litigations, —	0	15	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	114	8	7
———————— 1784, —	114	1	8
———————— 1785, —	121	19	6
Medium of theſe three years,	116	16	7
———— of county expences,	7	11	8
———— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	0	15	0
———— of nett annual expences,	108	9	11
———— of attending on magiſtrates,	0	3	10
———— of entertainments at meetings,	0	14	4
———— of law expences, —	0	9	2
———— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	4	2

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 44.

The CHURCH (ſee Plate XXXV.)

dedicated to All Saints, conſiſts of an embattled tower (in which are four bells); a large South porch; a chancel, nave, and South aile ſeparated by three arches, over which are four handſome clereſtory windows.

In the chancel are three ſtone ſeats and a piſcina; fig. 34, 35.

The font is antient and round; but has nothing on it remarkable.

Burton notices theſe arms at Coſſington; Plate XXXV. fig. 1—10.

1. Azure, floretty, a lion rampant Or debruiſed, with a bend gobony Or and Gules. Beauchamp.

2. Quarterly, Argent and Gules, the ſecond and third quarters fretty Or, over all a bend Sable. Deſpenſer.

3. Gules, three lions paſſant, guardant in pale Or. England.

4. Gules, three lions paſſant, guardant in pale Or, a label of France. Earl of Lancaſter.

5. Sable, a lion rampant Argent, crowned Or. Segrave.

6. Gules, a feſs company Argent and Sable, between ſix croſſlets Or. Boteler.

7. Or, an eagle diſplayed Sable. Leofric and Morton.

8. Argent, a ſaltire between four croſſlets fitché Azure.

9. Quarterly, 1. and 4, Or, two lions paſſant in pale Azure, Somery; 2. and 3, Argent, a croſs patée Azure. Dudley.

10. Gules, ſeven maſcles voided and conjoined Or, 3, 2, and 1, within a border engrailed Argent. Ferrers.

Several painted tiles ſtill remain on the floor of the chancel, of which 23 different ſpecimens are given in Plate XXXV. fig. 11—33; among which are the five following coats of arms:

Quarterly, 1. and 4, two lions paſſant in pale; England before king Stephen's reign; 2. and 3, ſemé of fleurs de lis; France antient; fig. 18.

.... a feſs between ſeven croſſlets ... Beauchamp; fig. 19.

..... a lion rampant ......; for Leon probably, there being three caſtles round the ſhield; fig. 20.

An eagle diſplayed, with wings downwards; fig. 14.

.... on a bend ſiniſter, three dolphins embowed; fig. 29.

In the Matriculus of 1220[2], Coſſington is deſcribed to be under the patronage of Hugh Deſpenſer; and William Deſpenſer was then the rector. The church paid 10*s.* to the abbot of St. Severin in Normandy as an annual penſion.

In 1344, the procurations were 7*s.* 6¾*d.*; the rectory was taxed at 19 marks; paid 2*s.* for Peter-pence; and the then patron was the heir of the lord Henry de Beaumont.

In 1534-5, the procurations and ſynodals were 13*s.* 4¾*d.*; an annual payment of £1. was made to the lord Beaumont; and the value of the rectory £16.

In 1650, the rectory was returned worth £100; and the incumbent as "an arbiter of the civil law, a chancellor, no preacher, and non-reſident."

The preſent value in the king's books is £17. 7*s.* 8*d.*

The epiſcopal procurations are, 3*s.* 4*d.*; the archidiaconal, 11*s.* 0¾*d.*

RECTORS.

William Deſpenſer, 1220.
Thomas de Preſtewald[3], 1238.
Richard le Hoſtagre, 1287.
William de Swepſton, 1392.
Matthew Knightley, D.D. 1534; died in 1561.
Hugh Booth, rector, 1578; buried Dec. 31, 1602.
Zachary Babington[5]; died about 1614, aged 70.
Adrian Babington; buried Aug. 10, 1625.

PATRONS.

Hugh Deſpenſer.
Hugh ſon of Hugh Deſpenſer[4].

---

[1] The workhouſe in 1776 was capable of containing 16 perſons.

[2] See the Introductory Volume, p. lx.

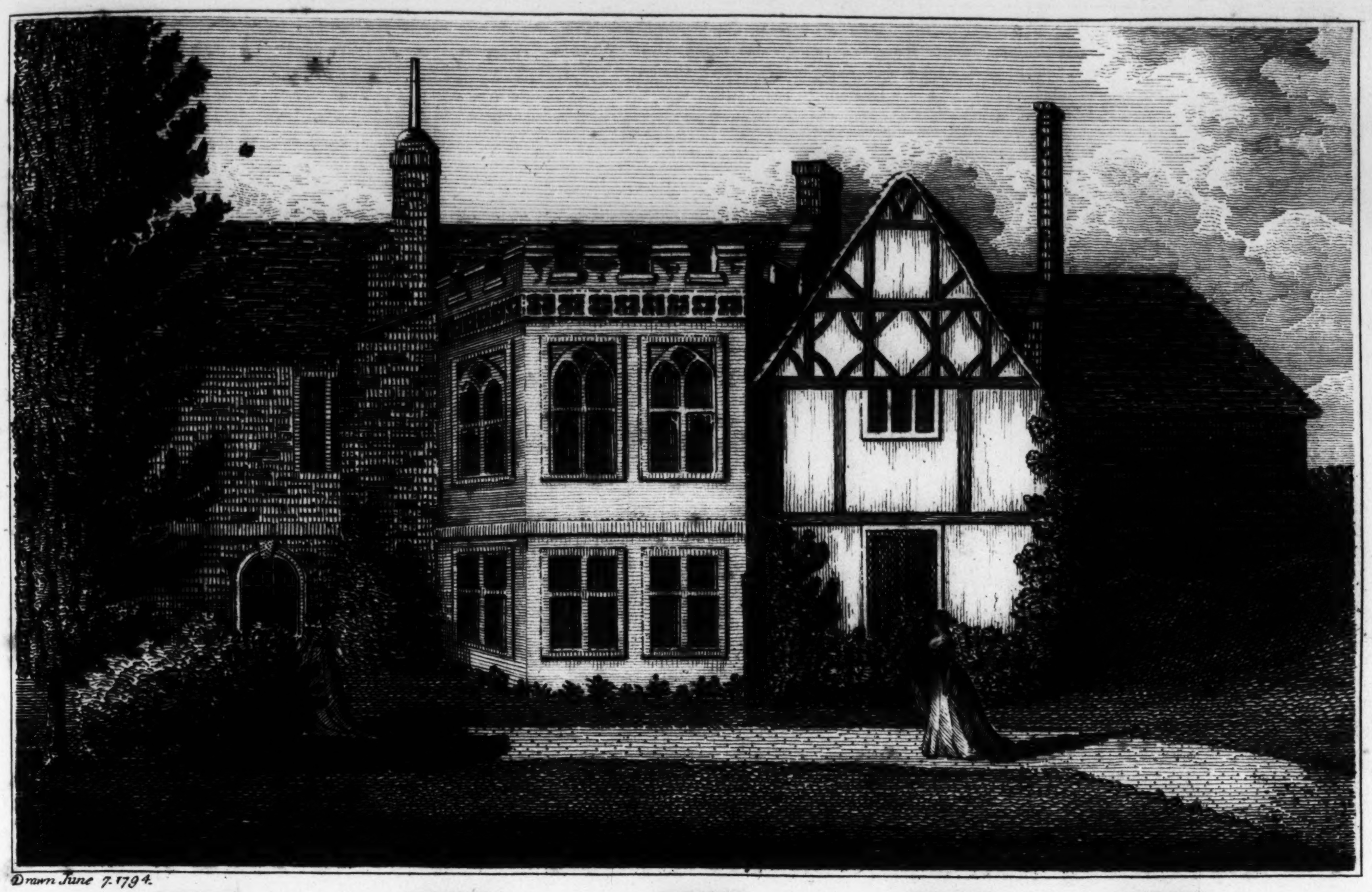
[3] "Injunctum eſt eidem, quod omnes cimelias dominicales ſciat infra annum ſub penâ privationis beneficii." Reg. Groſſeteſte, ann. 4.

[4] Who had obtained the advowſon, by a ſuit in "curiâ domini regis," againſt Hugh earl of Arundel and others.

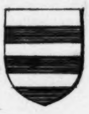
[5] Prebendary of Pipa Parva in the church of Lichfield, and chancellor of that dioceſe, in 1581; prebendary of Curborough 1583; and inſtalled præcentor of Lichfield July 10, 1589. He held alſo the rectory of Sedbury, co. Derby. Willis, vol. I. p. 406; compared with Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. I. p. 300. vol. II. p. 24.

COSSINGTON RECTORY.

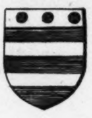
Vol. III. Pl. XXXIV. p. 228.



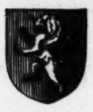
Drawn June 7. 1794.



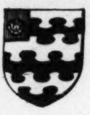
13



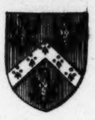
14



15



17



18

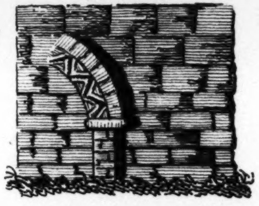


Fig. 1. p. 59.

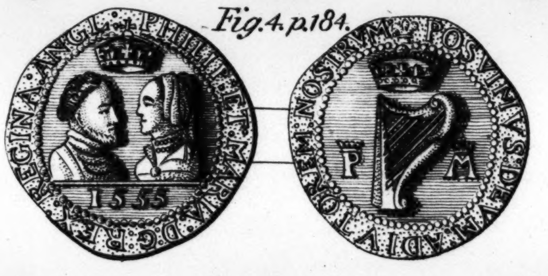

Fig. 4. p. 184.

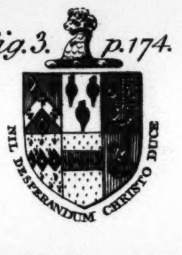

Fig. 3. p. 174.
NIL DESPERANDUM CHRISTO DUCE

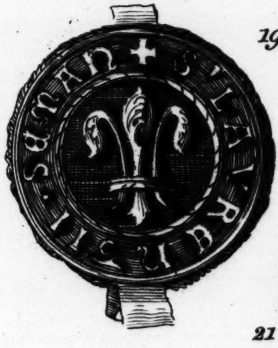

Fig. 2. p. 173

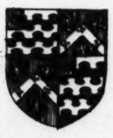

19

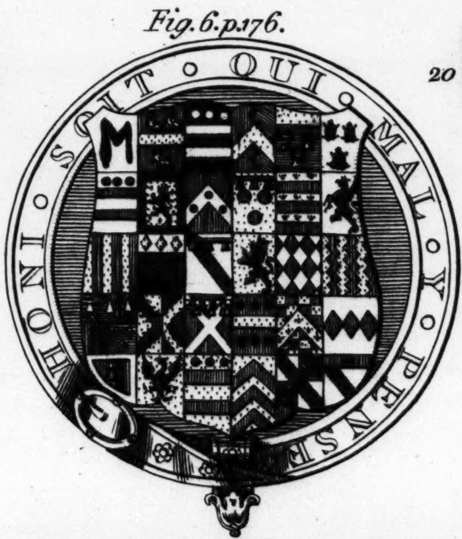

Fig. 6. p. 176.
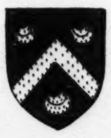
HONI SOIT QUI MAL Y PENSE
M



20

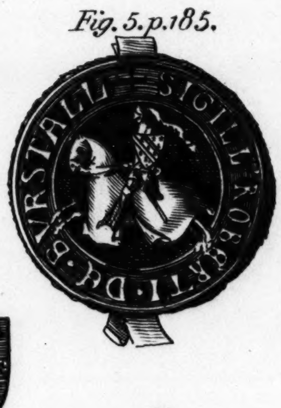


Fig. 5. p. 185.
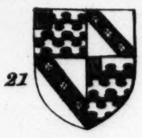
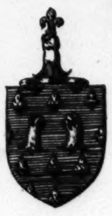
SIGILL' ROBERTI DE BVRSTALL



21



23

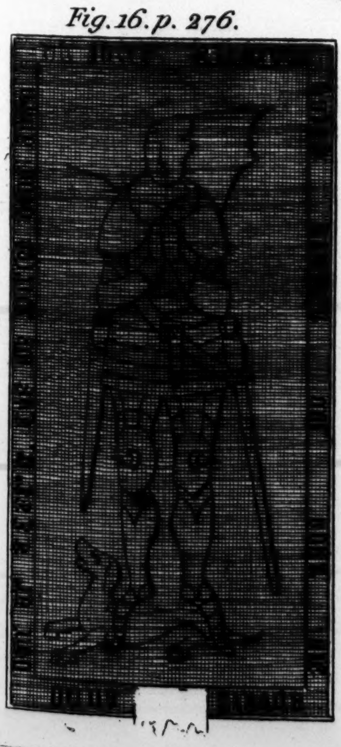


Fig. 16. p. 276.

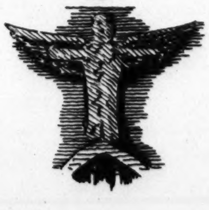
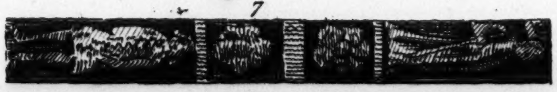
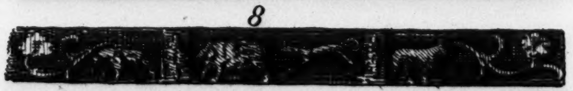


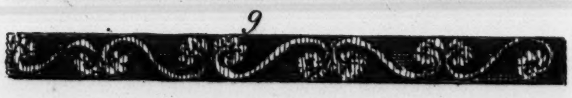
10



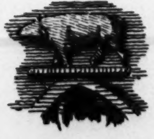
7



8



9



11

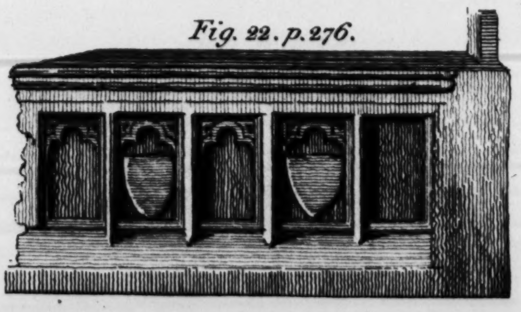


Fig. 22. p. 276.

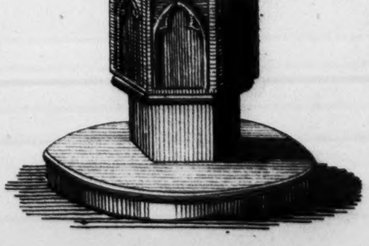
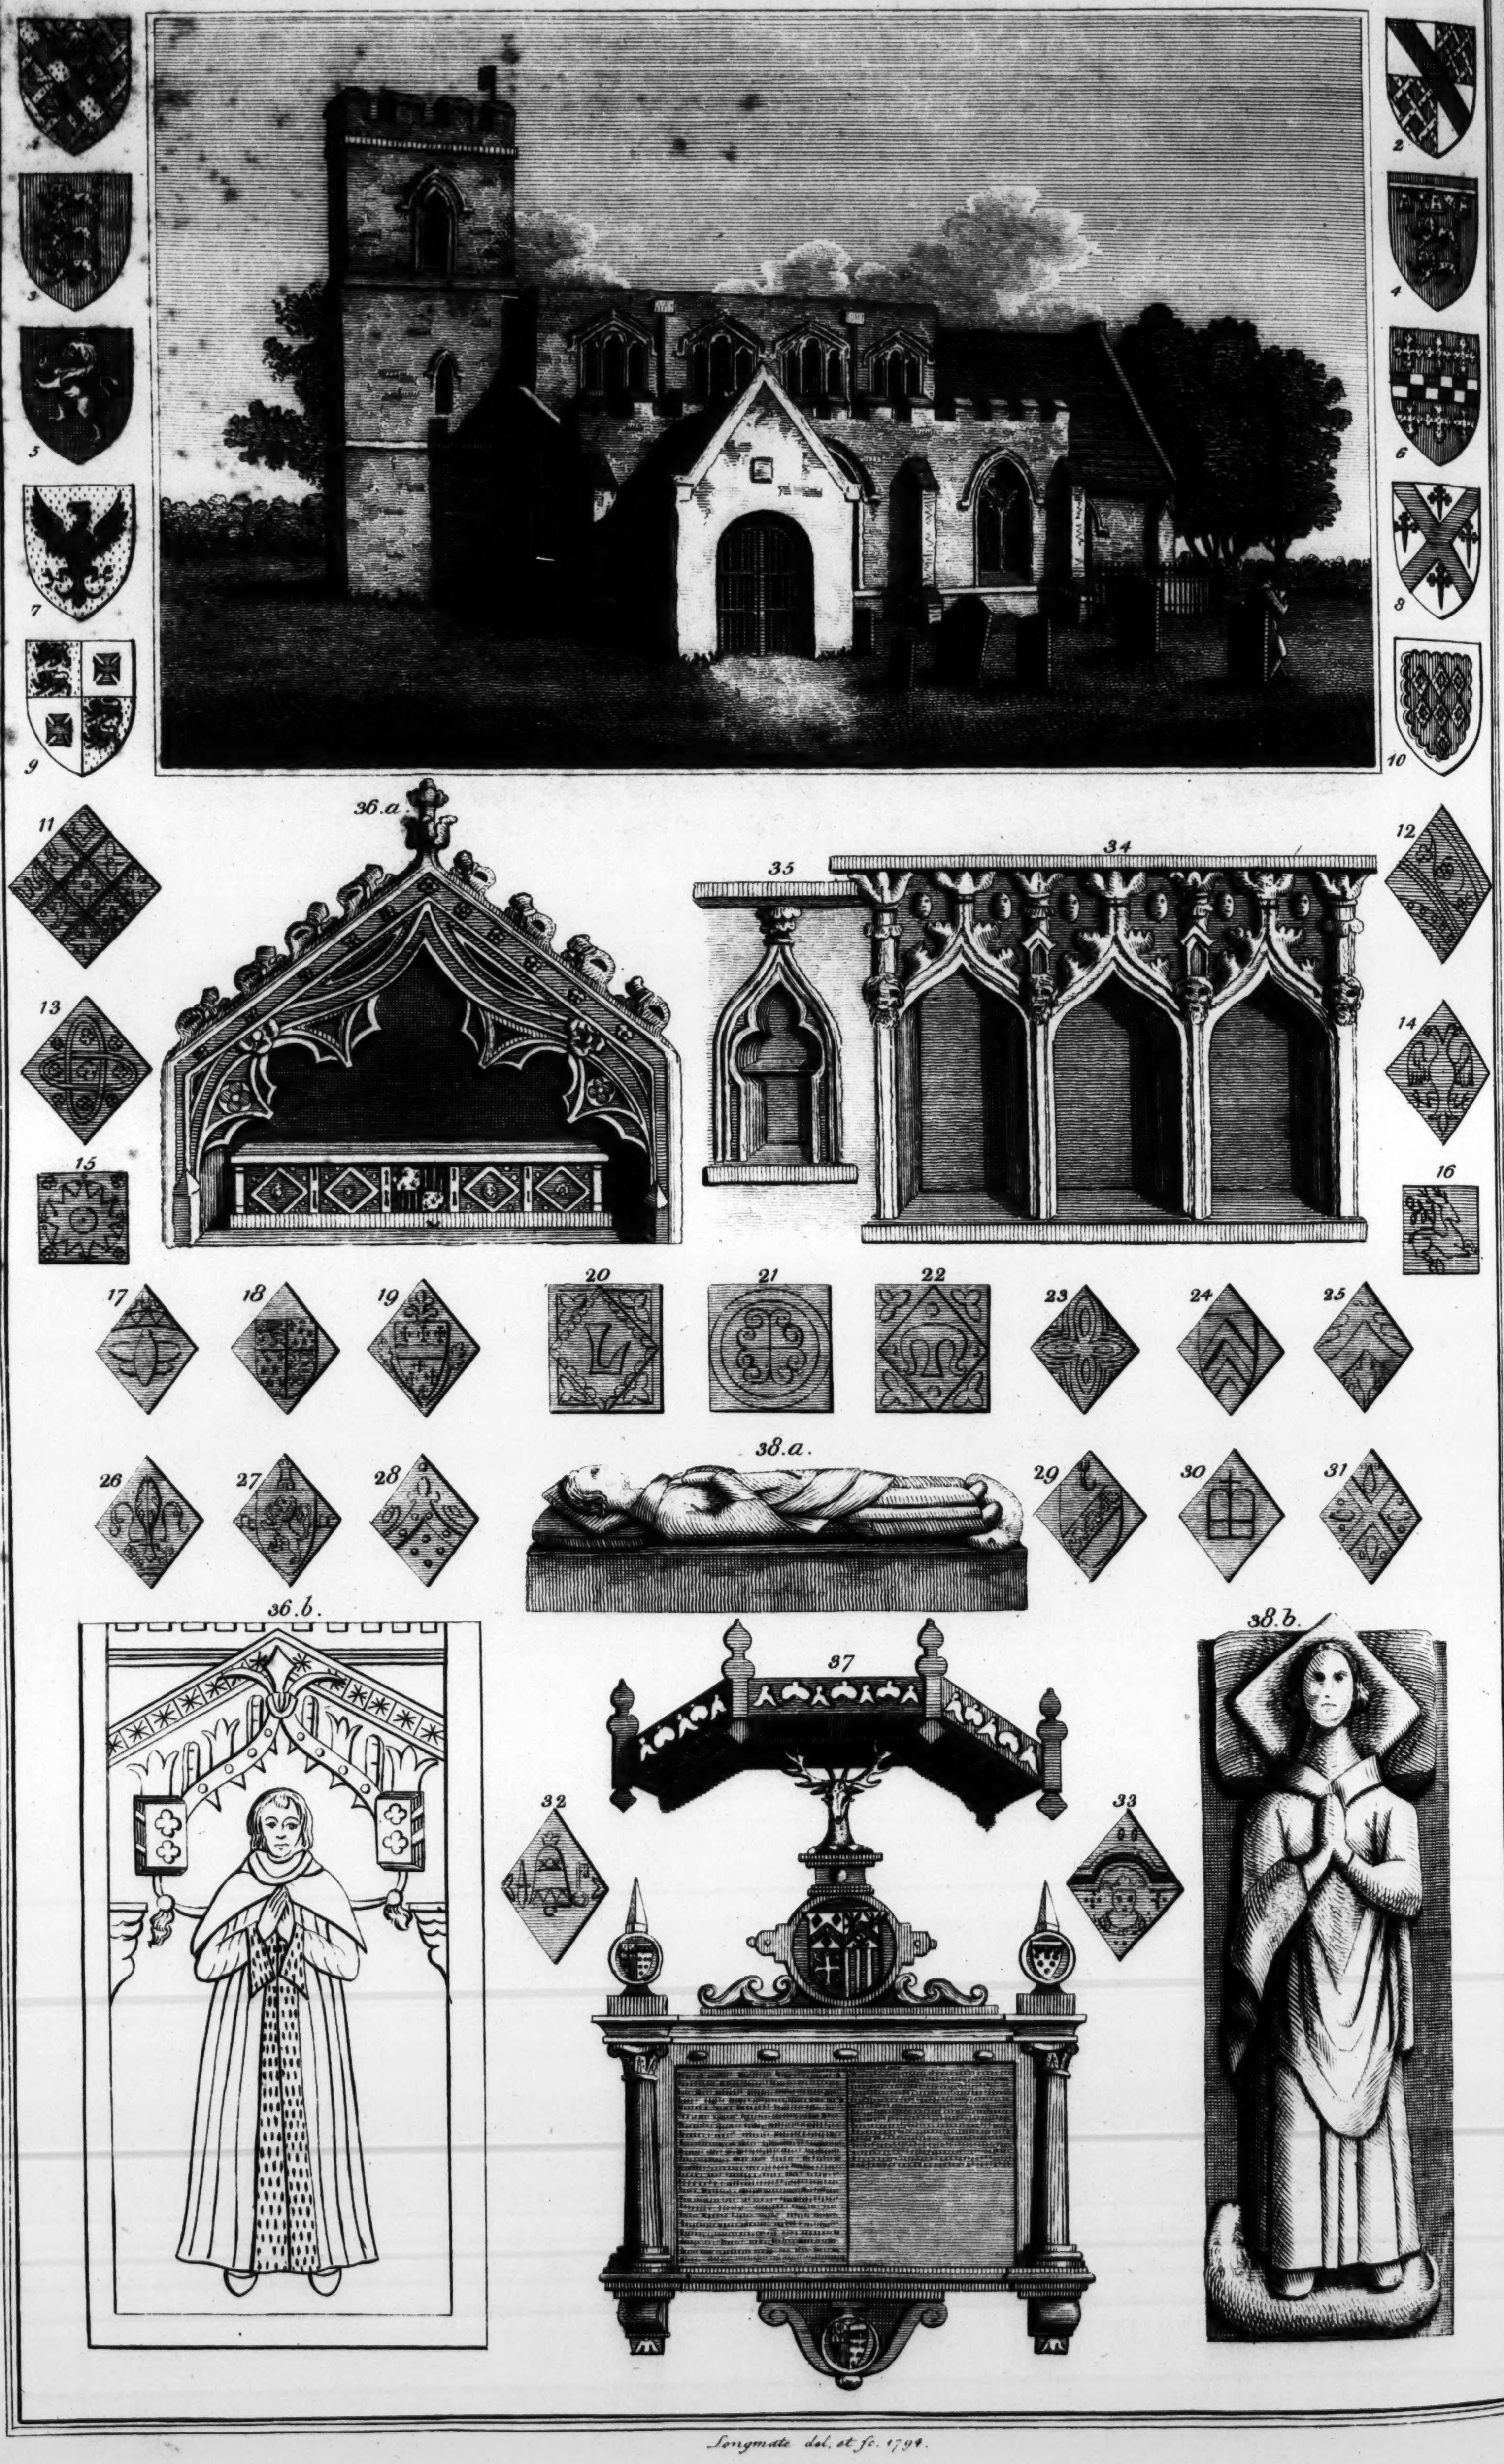


12

Longmate del. et sc.

COSSINGTON, S.W.



2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19 20 21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28
29
30
31
32
33
34
35
36.a 36.b
37
38.a 38.b

Longmate del. et sc. 1794.

William Staveley [1], 1625; died Auguſt 14, 1652.
William Staveley, 1652; died Feb. 13, 1703-4.	Matthew Babington, &c.
Samuel Daniel, Aug. 21, 1704;	Thomas Babington, eſq.
William Babington, LL. B. Dec. 27, 1710; died Dec. 5, 1758, aged 72.
William Babington [2], Dec. 19, 1758; died 1783.	Thomas Babington, eſq.
Henry Woodcock [3], LL. B. 1783.
Thomas Giſborne [4], M. A. 1784; reſigned 1787.
William Babington [5], June 3, 1787; the preſent rector, 1799.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

Under an arch, in the North wall of the chancel, near the altar-rails, fig. 36:

Arms in front: Quarterly, Ermine, and Paly of ſix, Argent and Azure, Knightley.

"Here lyethe Mathewe Knyghtley, doctoure in divinitye [6], and ſometyme parſon of Coſington, who departed thys worlde the 9th day of July, the yere of oure Lorde MDLXI."

A little elevated from the floor, in the North-eaſt corner of the chancel, is the effigies ſhewn in fig. 38. a. b; but without any inſcription:

On a monumental tablet of marble againſt the ſame wall, fig. 37:

Arms: Quarterly, Argent, on a chevron Azure between three lozenges Sable, three ſtags' heads caboſhed Or, Staveley; 2. Argent, a chevron Gules between three eagles diſplayed Sable; 3. Azure, a croſs moline between four martlets Argent, Pleſſington; 4. Paly of ſix, Argent and Azure, Strelley. Creſt, a ſtag's head. Motto, PATIOR UT POTIAR.—On one ſide of this coat, the ſame four quarterings; impaling, Argent, ten torteauxes, 4, 3, 2, and 1, over all a label Azure, Babington. On the other ſide, Babington ſingle.

"MEMORIÆ SACRUM.

HERE LYETH THE BODIE OF WILLIAM STAVELEY, MINISTER OF GOD'S WORD, AND RECTOR OF COSSINGTON. HEE TOOKE TO WIFE ANNE, THE SECOND DAUGHTER OF THOMAS BABINGTON, OF TEMPLE RODELY, ESQ.; BY WHOM HEE HAD ISSUE FIVE SONS, VIZ. THOMAS, WILLIAM, GEORGE, ARTHUR, AND BABINGTON; AND SEVEN DAUGHTERS, VIZ. KATHARINE, ANNE, MARGERY, ELIZABETH, MARTHA, MARY, AND MARGARET; OF WHICH MARGERY DIED YOUNG: THE OTHER II ALL WEPT HERE AT THE FUNERALL OF THEIR DEAR FATHER. HE LIVED 6 AND 20 YEARS HERE, A FAITHFULL LABOURER IN GOD'S VINEYARD; WHO, AFTER HE HAD FOUGHT A GOOD FIGHT, FINISHED HIS COURSE, AND KEPT THE FAITH. HE DEPARTED THIS LIFE IN PEACE, GIVEING UP HIS SOULE TO GOD, HIS BODY TO THE EARTH, HIS LOVE TO HIS FRENDS, HIS BLESSING TO HIS CHILDREN, AND HIS CHARITY TO ALL; AND ENTERED INTO THAT JOY, WHICH HIS LORD AND MASTER HATH PREPARED FOR SUCH GOOD AND FAITHFULL SERVANTS. HE DYED THE 14TH OF AUGUST, IN THE YEAR OF OURE LORD 1652, HIS AGE 55; BEING SON TO THOMAS STAVELEY, OF WEST LANGTON [7], IN THIS COUNTY, ESQ.

THUS DEATH'S COLD BLAST EXTINGUISHT QUITE
THIS BURNING AND THIS SHINING LIGHT: THAT VOICE, WHICH GOSPELL SOUNDS ONCE GAVE,
IS SHUTT UP IN THIS SILENT GRAVE; THAT LIFE, WHICH SOE BEFORE MEN SHIN'D, IS TO THIS NARROW TOMBE CONFIN'D:
YET IN HIS DUST HERE SCATTERED LYE
SUCH SEEDS OF IMMORTALITYE, THAT, WHEN THE LAST GREAT FLAME SHALL GIVE THEM HEAT, HE THEN AGAINE SHALL LIVE."

At bottom, the ſame four coats quarterly as above; impaling Babington.

On flat ſtones in the chancel:

1. "WILLIAM STAVELEY,
Quam ſpecioſi ſunt pedes evangelizantium pacem!
1652."

2. "ANNE KEATE, THE DAUGHTER OF
WILLIAM AND ANNE STAVELEY,
DYED AUG. 3, 1659, aged 24 years."

3. "HERE LYETH MARGARET, THE DAUGHTER OF WILLIAM AND ANNE STAVELEY Y^{t}
DYED SEPT. 23, IN THE YEAR OF OUR LORD 1669,
AND OF HER AGE 22."

4. "HERE LIETH THE BODY OF
KATHARINE ROSS, WIDOW, DAUGHTER OF
WILLIAM AND ANNE STAVELEY. SHE DYED
JUNE THE 3, ANNO MDCXCI, AGED 61."

5. "Hìc jacet Gulielmus Staveley, hujus eccleſiæ ſecundus ejuſdem nominis & familiæ rector, glorioſam expectans reſurrectionem.
Vixit ſobriè, juſtè, piè, hoſpitalitèr;
omnem virtutem coluit, præſertìm Charitatem;
à curâ, ſolicitudine, negotio liber,
ſic vitam traduxit placidam; placidèque moriens,
in Chriſto ſuavitèr obdormivit.
Cœlebs obiit Feb. 18vo, anno ætatis 76to, rectoriæ 52do, Domini 1703°."

6. "The reverend William Babington, ſecond ſon of Thomas Babington, eſq.
of Rothley Temple, and rector of this pariſh, died December 5th, 1758, aged 72."

7. "Mrs. Catharine and Mrs. Anne Babington, daughters of the Rev. William and Mrs. Elizabeth Babington, died,

Catharine,	aged 29,	March 19,	1762."
Anne,	aged 41,	April 13,

8. "Mrs. Elizabeth Babington, wife of the late
rev. William Babington, rector of this pariſh, died Nov. 4, 1763, aged 68."

---

[1] He was of Baliol college, Oxford; and contributed the third window in the Library of that Society, as appears by the following verſe ſtill remaining in the ſecond light there, Me fordas vitream Staveley Willielme feneſtram. He read the Articles, as rector of Coſſington, Nov. 20, 1625; and is ſtyled above, "an arbiter of the civil law, and a chancellor." Q. of what place?

[2] Died, by a fall from his horſe, May 14, 1783, aged 61. He was vicar alſo of Rothley.

[3] He had a diſpenſation, in November 1783, to hold this rectory with Rothley.

[4] Son of John Giſborne, of Derby, eſq. He married, in 1783, the only ſiſter of Thomas Babington, eſq. of Rothley Temple; and now reſides at Yaxley Lodge in Staffordſhire, ſituated in a recluſe valley, well ſuited to the placid and ſtudious mind of its preſent ingenious owner, who has enlarged and greatly improved the houſe, making it his principal reſidence, in preference to the ſuperb manſion erected by his father in Derby. As a writer in moral philoſophy, divinity, and poetry, &c. Mr. Giſborne is ſufficiently known by his various works. St. John's College, Cambridge, had the honour of part of the education of this learned Divine, who is truly an ornament to his profeſſion; for, his literary merits are but a ſmaller part of the nobler character he bears, being an illuſtrious pattern of philanthropy and charity to the preſent age. See Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. I. p. 67. Mr. Giſborne has publiſhed 1. "The Principles of Moral Philoſophy inveſtigated, and briefly applied to the Conſtitution of Civil Society; together with Remarks on the Principle aſſumed by Mr. Paley, as the Baſis of all moral Concluſions, and on other Poſitions of the ſame author, 8vo, 1789." 2. The ſame work was reprinted, with additions, in 1790. 3. The third edition, 1795, has, printed at the end, "Remarks on the late Deciſion of the Houſe reſpecting the Abolition of the Slave Trade." 4. "Remarks on the Slave Trade, 1792," 8vo. 5. "Viſitation Sermon at Walſall, May 30, 1794," 4to. 6. "An Enquiry into the Duties of Men in the higher and middle Claſſes of Society in Great Britain, reſulting from their reſpective Stations, Profeſſions, and Employments, 1794," 4to. 7. Reprinted in 2 vols. 8vo. 1795, 2d edit. 8. The ſame, 2 vols. 8vo. corrected, 1795, 3d edit. 9. "Walks in a Foreſt, or, Poems deſcriptive of Scenery and Incidents characteriſtic of a Foreſt at different Seaſons of the Year, 1794," 4to; twice reprinted, with additions, in ſmall 8vo. 10. "The Duties of the Female Sex, 1797," 8vo.

[5] He married, in November 1784, Miſs Noble, daughter to the Rev. Mr. Noble, of Froleſworth.

[6] Matthew Knightley was rector in 1534, as appeareth by the roll of that year, ſo that he died an aged man. Burton, MS.

[7] Where ſee an account of the Staveley family, in vol. II. p. 677. See alſo hereafter, p. 230.

9. " Here lieth the rev. William Babington, rector of this church, and vicar of Rothley,
who died May the 14th, 1783, aged 61."

10 " Here lieth the body of Elizabeth-Lydia Babington, daughter of the rev. William Babington and Elizabeth-Newbold Babington his wife.
She was born on the 7th of January, 1789, and died on the 18th of March in the ſame year."

11. " Here lie the remains of Jane-Giſborn Babington, daughter of the Rev. William Babington and Elizabeth-Newbold Babington his wife.
She was born on the firſt of December, 1793;
and died the 13th of April, 1794."

On flat ſtones in the nave:

1. " Here lieth the body of Elizabeth Marſhall, who departed this life July the 9th, 1732, aged 76 years and 10 months."

2. " Here lieth inter'd the body of Robert Fiſher, gent.
He married Mary, the daughter of
Mr. Chriſtopher Tebbutt;
by whom he had iſſue two ſons and two daughters.
He departed this life the 16th day of Auguſt,
in the year of our Lord 1756, aged 30 years."

In the South aile, now almoſt wholly defaced:

" HERE LYETH INTERRED THE BODY OF MATHEW BABINGTON, ESQ. SON OF THOMAS BABINGTON, OF RODELEY, ESQUIER, DECESED. THIS MATTHEW HAD FOUR WIVES; VIZ. ELIZABETH, DAUGHTER OF ...... LEIGH, OF EGGINTON IN THE COUNTY OF DERBY, ESQUIRE; FAITH, THE DAUGHTER OF ...... STAPLETON, OF REMPSTON, IN THE COUNTY OF NOTTINGHAM, ESQUIRE; PRISCILLA, THE DAUGHTER OF RICHARD CRESWELL, ...; MARGARET, DAUGHTER OF ERASMUS .... HE DIED THE ..... DAY OF FEBRUARY, ANNO DOMINI 1615; BEING THEN OF THE AGE OF 71 YEARS."

In the church-yard:

William Hulſe died April 21, 1776, aged 81.
Tobias Marſhall, gent. died Aug. 8, 1719, aged 72.
Henry Marſhall, gent. died May 23, 1751, aged 58.
Will. Marſhall, gent. died Aug. 16, 1762, aged 22.
Mary Gilbert died Dec. 7, 1779, aged 72.
John Goude, ſenior, died April 21, 1770, aged 82.
Elen Goude died Sept. 9, 1747, aged 55.
Mary Dickins, died May 28, 1771, aged 71.

" Here lieth the body of Mary, the eldeſt daughter of William Oſwin, gent. by Mary his wife; who departed this life April 4, 1686, aged 15.

Alſo Thomas Oſwin, their eldeſt ſon, who died Feb. 25, 1707, aged 33.

Here alſo lieth the body of William Oſwin, gent. who departed this life Nov. 27, 1714, aged 72 years. Alſo Mary his wife, daughter of Mr. Thomas Monk, citizen of London. She departed this life April 16, 1686, aged 36 years.

Here alſo lieth the body of William Oſwin, of London, gent. who departed this life Nov. 12, 1739, aged 63 years.

Alſo of Mrs. Catharine Oſwin, who departed this life Aug. 8, 1743, aged 57.

And alſo the body of Mrs. Anne Wilſon, who departed this life Aug. 30, 1743, aged 63 years.
John Fiſher the elder died Feb. 22, 1756, aged 77.
Samuel Wilkinſon died Dec. 31, 1788, aged 80."

At Oakham, co. Rutland, on a graveſtone in the North croſs of the church:

" JACET IN HOC TVMVLO MARIA BOOTH,
VIDVA REVERENDISSIMI HVGONIS BOOTH,
DE CVSSINGTON, IN COMITATV LECESTRIÆ, PASTOR.
OBIIT AN'O DO'I 1640, ÆTATIS 93."

In anſwer to ſome enquiries made in 1772 by the Rev. Samuel Carte, he received the following letter from Mrs. Mary Brudenell; to which he refers in his account of Thomas Staveley, eſq. (ſee vol. II. p. 677):

" Sir, my father having been ſo long dead before Mr. Allſop married my daughter, that he can ſay but little of him; he communicated your letter to me. I don't know I can give ſo particular an account as you deſire; but will as near as I can. The place of my father's birth, we always reckoned, was at Eaſt Langton, in the pariſh of Church Langton, which was then the ſeat of his anceſtors, and is now enjoyed by Sir Gilbert Pickering: it came by his lady, who is deſcended from the Staveleys. My grandfather was ſecond ſon of Thomas Staveley, eſq. of the abovenamed place, and rector of Coſſington. His eldeſt ſon was my father, who was firſt of Emanuel College in Cambridge[1], next a ſtudent in the Inner Temple. After he was called to the bar, he practiſed the law, and lived moſt part of his time at Belgrave; but died in Leiceſter at the age of 57, and lies buried in St. Mary's church. My mother was the youngeſt daughter of John Oneby, eſq. of Hinckley, who was ſteward to your Corporation. After his deceaſe, my father ſucceeded him, and continued in that place till he died. He had by my mother three ſons and four daughters. He was early in commiſſion for a juſtice of the peace, and one of the quorum; and he continued as long as he lived: tho' there were many changes, he was never removed; not that he turned with the times. When the Whig party ran high in king Charles the Second's days, he was always ſteady in his loyalty; but, by his prudence, and the ſweetneſs and mildneſs of his nature, he promoted no ſide; and underſtanding the law, we gueſs, was the reaſon they kept him in ſo long. I've often heard him ſay, moſt of the ſeſſions-buſineſs lay upon him, whileſt others took their pleaſure, and much lamented their loſs when he was dead. He publiſhed nothing that I know of in his life but "The Romiſh Horſeleech," which has not his name to it: in the Univerſity, it was taken for Judge Hale's work. My younger brother publiſhed the "Hiſtory of Churches" ſince his death, and a ſmall thing relating to the affairs of France and Scotland. The "Antiquities of Leiceſter," you know, was left in MS. 'Tis probable there are more; but where I can't tell, except in my unhappy brother's hands, viz. Captain Staveley of Medbourn. 'Twill, I fear, not be counted proper for ſo near a relation to ſpeak of his virtues; but your ſaying his life is intended to be wrote, and ſcarce any of his intimate friends or contemporaries in being, I hope I may be allowed to do juſtice to the memory of the beſt of parents; and I think I can, without partiality, ſay he was a man given to no vice; one of great integrity, ſtrictly juſt, and who abhorred all manner of fraud or bribery in his practice of the law; and of uncommon meekneſs and patience in the higheſt provocations and bodily pains (he being afflicted with ſeveral fits of the gout); was ſeldom ever in a paſſion; beloved of moſt that knew him; he had a diſcerning and penetrating judgement, both in ſtate and private affaiers. I'm confident, if any of them were living that was throwly acquainted with him, they would not only confirm, but add to what I've ſaid. He was uncle and guardian to our late famous Lawyer, the Lord Keeper Wrighte, and had the care of his education; which truſt he diſcharged with honour and credit. Sir, I leave it to your diſcretion to aquaint that worthy Antiquary you ſpeak of with what you pleaſe, and to leave out what you think impertinent and not to the purpoſe. The deſiring an exact and full account has made me inſert the more. Notwithſtanding writing is exceeding troubleſome to my weak eyes, I've been contented to ſtrain them on this occaſion. If there is any farther information that I can give, you may command it from, ſir, your very humble ſervant, Harborow, Apr. 17, 1722. M. BRUDENELL[2]."

In the Britiſh Muſeum is the following brief pedigree[3]:

Elizabetha aliquando Iſabella Sabcote vocata, vidua, nuper uxor
Johannis Frances, ob. 1 Martii, 9 Hen. VII.

Johanna uxor Willielmi Nevill, una filiarum & coheredum Iſabellæ, æt. 48 ann.

Alicia uxor Willielmi Staveley, altera filiarum & coheredum Iſabellæ, æt. 44 ann. nuper uxor Johannis Worſley.

Johanna uxor Tho. Sabcote, tertia coher. æt. 34 ann.

16 R. II. Perſona Omnium Sanctorum de Coſſington 40 marc'; 10 acre terre, 2 prati, 1 meſſ' & 1 car' terre ibid'.[4]

---

[1] " Mr. Staveley was admitted a penſioner of Emanuel College in 1644." R. FARMER, MS.

[2] Carte's MSS. in the Bodleian Library, UUUU. N° 163.

[3] Harl. MSS. 1374. fol. 369.

[4] Carte, MS.

SOUTH CROXTON,

antiently called Croxton, Croſon, Crockeſtone, and Crowſton juxta Baggrave, a conſiderable village, about ſeven miles to the North-eaſt of Leiceſter, is bounded by Twyford, Aſhby Folvile, Bareſby, Queniborow, Bagrave; and a ſmall part of Beby; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote.

Crocheſtone, containing four ploughlands, was held, in the reign of king Edward the Confeſſor, by Godric, and was then of the annual value of five ſhillings. At the general ſurvey, it was the property of Walter de Conſtantiis biſhop of Lincoln, under whom it was held by Roger. In the demeſne one plough was employed; and four villans, with two bordars, had another plough. There were ſix acres of meadow, and a mill of twelvepence value[1]. It is alſo ſtated in the ſurvey, that Roger held of William five ploughlands in Croptone [Croxtone], and Walter two ploughlands and a half in Queneberie [Queniborow]; which, in the reign of the Confeſſor, had been valued at fifteen ſhillings, but at the ſurvey was worth thirty ſhillings. In the demeſne they had three ploughs and four bondmen; and ſeven villans, with four bordars, who had one plough. There were twenty-five acres of meadow[2]. In the ſame manor one foreigner held land ſufficient for one plough: it was worth five ſhillings[3].

The name of "the foreigner," though not recorded in Domeſday-book, is preſerved both in the Regiſter of Croxton abbey, and in that of the priory of Old Malton in Yorkſhire. To both theſe houſes Aldulfus de Braci, filius Bwerne, nepos Oſberti Martel, was a liberal benefactor. He gave to God and St. Mary, & canonicis de ordine & capitulo de Sempringham, ſome large poſſeſſions in Normandy; and in England the church of Crokeſtune, with all its appurtenances; the tithe of all his revenues [reddituum] in Ettuna; and one moiety of his fee in Crokeſtune, tam intra quàm extra villam, which Roger de Muſtun had held, free from all ſervices except thoſe to the king and the capital lords of the fee, which were to be paid through the hands of himſelf or his heirs. One bovate, however, in this moiety, which belonged to the monks of Crokeſtune juxta Belṽ, otherwiſe called the monks of St. John de Valle Dei, and held by Ralph Pannell, was to pay the cuſtomary foreign ſervice due from the eighth part of a knight's fee. "Et ſciend', quòd ego adduxi de Angliâ ad hanc manſionem & prioratum primum priorem. Et accepi à Gilberto primo magiſtro ordinis de Sempringham, quòd nullus poterit prior conſtitui in hoc prioratu in diebus meis, vel in diebus heredis mei, proximi, niſi per electionem conventûs de iſto prioratu." Theſe donations, by the unanimous approval of the whole order of the monks of Sempringham, were transferred to the priory of Old Malton, which had been founded about 1150.

In 1184, Thomas de Hoco, for the conſideration of five marks paid by the monks of Malton, releaſed all right to three carucates and a half of land at South Croxton "Deo & Sancte Marie, & canonicis de ordine de Sempringham," by a deed dated on the Wedneſday before the feaſt of St. Dunſtan, 30 Hen. II, in the preſence of Hubert dean of York, Laurence archdeacon of Bedford, and Robert archdeacon of Canterbury[4] (Dorobernienſis). The grant was alſo confirmed by Thomas ſon of Peter de Lincoln[5].

Aldulfus de Bracy, by a new charter, confirmed to the prior and canons of Malton three carucates and a half at South Croxton, with the moiety of the church, which, as his grant expreſſes, they had held almoſt from the foundation of their priory. It appears alſo that, after this property had been in their own occupation for more than 60 years, and, from the remoteneſs proving of little value, it was demiſed, at an annual rent of ſeven marks, to the brethren of Burton Lazars.

In 1204, "Agnes de Divâ attachiata fuit adeſſe coram juſticiariis, oſtenſura quare ſine warranto ingreſſa eſt in tres bovatas terre in Suð Croxton, occaſione eſcambii quod habere deberet ab ipſo abbate, &c.[6]"

By a finalis concordia at Leiceſter, on the Wedneſday after the feaſt of St. Margaret, 4 John, between William de Folevill petent and Cyprian prior of Malton querent, the right to 26 acres was conveyed to the canons; and, by another agreement two days after, William renounced all claim to a moiety of the advowſon.

By an agreement between Henry de Hoco and prior Cyprian, on the nones of the feaſt of St. Mary Magdalen, 4 John, the right to three carucates and a half at South Croxton was conveyed to the canons, for the conſideration of 20 ſhillings ſterling.

By a finalis concordia on the octaves of St. Martin 14 John, between Margaret de Howes petent and Hugo de Charneles querent, the right to 28 bovates of land in South Croxton, and to a moiety of the advowſon, was renounced to the canons of Malton.

Margeret de Howes, for the conſideration of ten marks, releaſed her right to three carucates and a half in South Croxton, with the appurtenances, which the brethren of St. Lazarus at Burton held under the ſaid canons, and the right to a moiety of the church, which was annexed to the ſame lands; and Hugo de Charneles, for a ſimilar conſideration of ten marks, made the ſame releaſe.

King Henry III gave this manor to his chief juſtice Hubert de Burgh, who in 1227 was created earl of Kent[7].

One hide in Crocheſtone belonged to the prior and convent of St. Mary at Huntingdon[8].

In 1236, "Juratores dicunt quod Sitheſton, cum 8 virgatis terræ in Croxton, fuit terra Rob'ti Tibanvile, Normanni, tempore Johannis regis; & comes Winton illum tenuit; & quod predictus Joh̃es rex dedit eam matri ſue; & valet per annum 24 libras[9]."

In 1238, "Willielmus Baſſet perſona de Eſſeby, & 28 alii, implacitabantur per Willielmum Burnell, pro depaſtione cum averiis ſuis ſeparalis paſture ſue apud South Croxton, in quodam loco vocato Le Eſpinee: ipſi dicunt, quòd eſt communia paſture ipſorum, &c. niſi &c.[10]"

After holding the lands at South Croxton for a ſhort period, the maſter and brethren of Burton Lazars again demiſed them to John de Leke at the ſame rent; and, after continuing in the hands of ſeveral others of that family, the leaſe was ſold to Peter of Adlokeſton, who left it to his widow, Alice de Nevill; from whom it paſſed to her ſon Thomas, and from him to his kinſman Robert de Nevill; who gave it to the nuns of St. Michael at Stamford. Theſe nuns, reſerving the rent due to the canons of Malton, again demiſed the land to Geoffrey Blund of Leiceſter; from whom they deſcended to his daughter; who became a nun at Stamford, but not till ſhe had ſold her right in this property at South Croxton to Hugh de Ringedun; who continued to pay the annual rent to the nuns of Stamford, and they to the priory of Malton.

---

[1] "Rogerus tenet de Epiſcopo 4 carucatas terræ in Crocheſtone. In dominico eſt 1 caruca; & 4 villani, cum 2 bordariis, habent 1 carucam. Ibi molinum de 12 denariis, & 6 acræ prati. Valuit 5 ſolidos; modò 20 ſolidos. Godric tenuit." Domeſday, fol. 231. a. 1.

[2] "Rogerus tenet de Willielmo 5 carucatas terræ in Croptone; & Walterus 2 carucatas terræ & dimidiam in Queneberie; & in dominico habent 3 carucas, & 4 ſervos, & 7 villanos, cum 4 bordariis, habentes 1 carucam. Ibi 24 acræ prati. Valuit 15 ſolidos; modò 30 ſolidos." Ibid. fol. 233. b. 2.

[3] "In eâdem villâ tenet unus francigenus terram unius carucæ. Valuit 5 ſolidos." Ibid.

[4] In the Liſt of Archdeacons of Canterbury, given by Batteley in Cantuar. Sacra, p. 150, 151, Robert is mentioned with doubt. But in Le Neve, Faſt. vol. II. p. 11, after Herbert in 1176 Robert is entered; and from an interlineation by Dr. Denne, it is to be inferred that he ſuppoſed this Robert to have been afterwards biſhop of Sarum; and on turning to the prelates of that ſee, p. 251, it appears that Biſhop Herbert Poore is by Godwin called Robert. There ſeems to have been an inattention to the names of Herbert and Robert. S. D.

[5] Malton Regiſter. [6] Placita de an. 4 regis Johannis, in receptu Scaccarii, Rot. 6. in dorſo. [7] Gaſcoigne, MS note.

[8] Dugdale, Mon. Ang. vol. II. p. 26. [9] Plac. 30 Hen. III. in Receptu Scaccarii, Rot. 30.

[10] Mich. Placit. 17 Edw. I. in eodem Receptu, Rot. 27.

"Radulfus de Bracy, ſecundus, ut dicitur, in generatione ſuâ poſt Angliam à Normannis expugnatam & obtentam, in principio fundationis domûs Malton, dedit ordini de Sempringham, & ſpecialitèr poſtmodùm per communem ordinis aſſenſum ipſi domui Malton, tres carucatas terre & dimidiam in Suth Croxton, cum medietate eccleſie ejuſdem ville, quam canonici Malton ferè ab initio domûs ſue in uſus proprios tenuerunt & tenent. Terram verò predictam, ut dicitur, in dominio per lx^{ta} annos & plures per canonicos & fratres, necnon & ſervientes intiſſimi ſuccedentes tenuerunt. Tandemque, nimis remota, minùs proficiebat; conceſſerunt ipſam terram ad feodifirmam fratribus Sancti Lazari de Burtonâ juxta Melton, pro ſeptem marcis annuis; qui, cùm ipſam terram aliquandiu tenuiſſent in dominio, tradiderunt illam ad feodifirmam Johanni de Leke, reddendo dictis fratribus firmam ſeptem marcarum quam canonicis Malton debuerunt. Defuncto Johanne, ſucceſſit ei frater ejus Ricardus de Leke, minor natu; ſuſpenſo multo tempore antè Alano de Leke, primogenitu fratrum ipſorum, qui illuſtriſſime & jocunde recordationis dño regi Ricardo in caſtro de Nottingham fuerat adverſatus; cujus filius fuit iſte Sampſon de Leke, qui cauſam etiam aggreſſus. Ricardus frater predicti Johannis, eidem immediatè ſuccedens, & ſtetiſſet in poſſeſſione; & firmam predictam fratribus memoratis ſolviſſet, & ipſi canonicis. Vendidit terram illam, ſalvâ firmâ ſeptem marcarum Petro de Adlokeſton. Ipſi Petro ſucceſſit Alicia de Nevill uxor ejus, dictam firmam reddendo. Eidem Alicie ſucceſſit magiſter Thomas filius ejus, dictam firmam ſolvendo. Magiſtro Thome ſucceſſit magiſter Robertus de Nevile conſanguineus ejus, dictam firmam ſolvendo; qui tandem dedit terram illam monialibus de Stanford, ipſam firmam canonicis reddendo. Ipſe autem Robertus procuravit gratiâ fratres Sancti Lazari quod canonicis chartam fundationis, quam ab illis receperant, reſtituerant; unde moniales canonicis Malton poſtea in medietate reſponderunt, & reſpondent, ſecundùm quod in ſcripto inter illos confecto continetur. Moniales poſtmodùm, ſalvâ firmâ canonicorum, commiſerunt terram illam Galfrido Blundo de Leyceſtriâ; cui filia ejus ſucceſſit, firmam illam ſolvendo. Illa, antequàm monialis efficeretur, ubi adhuc ſuperſtes exſtitit, vendidit jus ſuum domino Hugoni de Ringedun modò tenenti, qui firmam predictam reddit monialibus, & moniales canonicis prefatis.—Hec perſonarum ſucceſſio, & forma ſolutionis[1]."

South Croxton is noticed in the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about 1240; in which year Peter de Lincoln held lands here of the fee of Belvoir[2]; and, in the Itinerary of 1280, South Croxton, Loſeby, and Newbold, anſwered collectively as one vill.

Sampſon de Leke, in 1247, releaſed his right in the above-mentioned lands in South Croxton to the prior and convent of Malton; who confirmed the leaſe to the nuns of Stamford.

Hugh le Deſpencer, ſlain at the battle of Eveſham in 1265, held at that time a portion of land in South Croxton, worth 4*l.* 17*s.* 4*d.* a year; from which John de Arden received a rent of 5*s.* at Michaelmas[3].

At the feaſt of the Nativity, 1279, there was due from the nuns of Stamford to the priory of Malton, on account of rent, 11*l.* 13*s.* 8*d.*; of which the ſum of 10*l.* and 9 marks was paid within that year.

The prior and convent of Malton poſſeſſed in South Croxton a bovate and a half of glebe, formerly the property of Ralph Palmer; and afterwards, he dying without children, in the poſſeſſion of his two ſiſters; all which were included in one toft, and paid 3*s.* 6*d.* a year to the priory of Chaucombe. To this was annexed another toft of glebe, "quod perdidit Wills Bawdewyn per defaltum."

A diſpute which had ariſen between the prior and convent of Malton and the prior and convent of Chaucombe, concerning a moiety of the tithes ariſing from the ſheaves of 14 virgates of land lying within the boundaries of the church of South Croxton, was determined, in favour of the canons of Malton, by the prior of St. Katharine extra Lincoln and the Magiſter Scholarum Lincolnie; whoſe award is dated "in cathedrali eccleſiâ Lincolnie, die Lune prox' ante feſtum Sc̃i Cuthberti ẽpi, anno Dom' mcc-octogeſimo."

This deed, which is entered in the Malton Regiſter, is followed by another of renunciation from the priory of Chaucombe; and by a third, demiſing the other moiety of the abovementioned tithes to the priory of Malton, on an annual payment of 10*s.* "ñro certo nuncio apud eccleſiam de South Croxton.

In 1284, the lands of the priory of Malton at South Croxton became the ſubject of contention at the aſſizes for the county of Leiceſter[4], between the prior and convent of that houſe and the nuns of Stamford.

In 1297, Richard de Aſhby was lord of this manor[5]; and in 1304 it was found that Richard de Aſhby, deceaſed, and Alice his wife, held one meſſuage, with the moiety of a certain ſpiney, 180 acres of arable, and 50*s.* rent, of four freeholders in South Croxton, of Thomas ſon of Thomas de Lincoln, by knight's ſervice, and paying therefore to the prioreſs of St. Michael without Staunford 100s. of dry rent [de ſicco redditu] for all ſervice; that they held one other meſſuage and 60 acres of arable in the ſame place, of the aforeſaid Thomas de Lincoln, by knight's ſervice; one toft and 48 acres of land there of John Tack, by the ſervice of a pound of pepper; and the other moiety of the above-mentioned ſpiney there of Ingelrain de Denton, by the ſervice of one grain of pepper for all ſervice[6].

A bond occurs from John, ſon of Richard de Aſcheby, to the prior of Malton, for 36 marks and 10 ſhillings, dated 14 Edw. II. 1320[7].

In 1343, William de Ros of Hamlak died ſeiſed of one knight's fee, and a ſixteenth part of another knight's fee (which Thomas de Lincoln held), in Barkby, Croxton, and Howes[8].

In 1346, Richard de Aſhby was lord of this village[9]; and in the ſame year, John de Segrave (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 20*s.* for half a knight's fee in Dalby Chaucombe and South Croxton, parcel of the fees of Cheſter and Huntingdon; and John de Aſhbie 4*s.* for a tenth part of one knight's fee in South Croxton, parcel of the fee of Ros, and of the honour of Winton[10].

"Dalby & Croxton. Manerium ibidem tenetur de Ep̃o per unum feodum militis[11]."

The property of the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter in South Croxton is thus deſcribed in their Regiſter:

"Habemus ibi, ex dono Petri de Lincoln', homagium & ſervicium Galfridi Potteſmouth, tam in viſũ franc' quàm in omnibus aliis ſecularibus exactionibus & demandis, &c. cum omnibus libertatibus, aiſiamentis, & liberis conſuetudinibus, &c.; & reddit ix s̃. vii ď. ob̃. videlicet, unius virgate terre quam dictus Galfridus tenet de ipſo in territorio de Suthe Croxton, & unius tofti & crofti & trium ſelionum, &c. ut in cartâ primâ de Thorp juxta Barkby.

Habemus ibi, ex dono Petri de Lincoln', unam bovatam terre bundis limitat', cum toſto & crofto, & cum omnibus libertatibus & commoditatibus, &c.

Habemus ibi, ex dono ejuſdem Petri, iiii bovatas terre, cum iii toftis & iii croftis, &c. ut in cartâ ii^{a}.

Habemus ibidem, ex dono ejuſdem Petri, unam virgatam terre, unum toftum & unum croftum bundis limitat'; & illud toftum & croftum jacent extra villam, & vocantur Schortecroft uſque Baggrave, & continent unam acram & dim', &c. ut in cartâ iii^{a}.

Habemus ibidem, ex dono ejuſdem Petri de Linc', unam virgatam terre, cum toſto & croſto, illam, ſcilicet, virgatam quam Rogerus de Barkby tenuit de ipſo, &c. ut in carta iiii^{a}.

---

[1] Cotton MSS. Claudius D. XI. fol. 215.

[2] See before, p. 53.

[3] See Appendix to vol. II. p. 136.

[4] Placita in com. Leic. 12 Edw. I. Aſſiſ. Rot. 1, 3, & 4, de meſſuagiis, terris, ac ſervitiis, in South Croxton.

[5] Burton, p. 80.

[6] Eſch. 33 Edw. I. N° 49. Leic.

[7] Malton Regiſter.

[8] Eſch. 17 Edw. III. N° 60. Leic.

[9] MS Chetwynd.

[10] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III,

[11] Segrave Chartulary.

Habemus ibidem, ex dono ejuſdem Petri, quoddam pratum quod vocatur Twelfrodiſbrod, ut in cartâ v^{a}.

Habemus, ex dono ejuſdem Petri, unam placeam prati que vocatur Heldakyr, &c. ut in cartâ vi^{a}.

Habemus ibi, ex dono ejuſdem Petri, tres ſelliones terre jacentes inter terram đni Hugonis de Ringiſdon & terram Ade Fabri, &c. ut in cartâ vii^{a}.

Habemus ibi, ex dono ejuſdem Petri, homagium & ſervicium Rog̃i fil' Rađi de Coſington, tam in viſu franciplegii quàm in omnibus aliis ſectis, &c. & annuum redditum viiis̃. ſcil', de unâ virgatâ terre & de uno tofto & crofto, que ſe extendunt à viâ uſque ad Milneſted in longitudine, & jacent inter terram Rađi de Ringeſdon uſque carucatam & terram Roberti Capellani uſque villam, &c. ut in cartâ viii^{a}.

Habemus cartam Petri de Lincoln', factam Rogero filio Rađi de Coſington, de unâ virgatâ terre in Croxton, pro homagio & ſervicio ſuo, cum tofto & crofto, reddend' ſibi & heredibus ſuis annuatim octo ſolidos, &c. ut in cartâ ix^{a}.

Habemus ibi, ex dono Rog̃i filii Rađi de Coſington, unam virgatam terre, cum tofto & crofto, &c. illam, ſcil', virgatam quam Radulphus filius Rađi quondam tenuit, &c. ut in cartâ x^{a}.

Habemus ibi, ex dono Rog̃i filii Rađi de Coſington, dimidiam virgatam terre, unà cum medietate tofti & crofti, & cum pertinentiis ſuis, ſcil', medietatem illius virgate terre quam Rađus fil' Rađi quondam tenuit; & medietatem tofti & crofti que jacent inter terram Rađi de Ringedon, & toftum Roberti Capellani in parte Orientali, &c. ut in cartâ xi^{a}.

Mem', quòd dedimus, conceſſimus, & per cartam noſtram confirmavimus, Roberto Capellano, filio Gilberti de Sowthe-croxton, pro homagio & ſervicio ſuo, unam virgatam terre, cum tofto & crofto, & edificiis ſuis, &c. reddendo nobis annuatim xiiđ. &c. ut in cartâ inter feoffamenta.

Habemus ibi, ex dono Walteri de Barkby, filii fratris Thome de Linc', xvi ſeliones, cum pertin' ſuis, que jacent ſuper Grimdiſbutts, & v ſeliones qui jacent ſuper Foxwelles, & unum forerum ad caput de Foxwelleſyke, & dim' rodam terre que jacet ſuper Foxwell, & dim' rodam terre ſuper Swetebuſke, &c.

Habemus ibi, ex dono Joh̄is fil' Joh̄is Scot de Suth-croxton, unum par albarum cirotecarum, quod recipere conſuevit de Waltero filio fratris Thome de Linc', &c. ut in cartâ xv^{a}.

Habemus confirmationem & quietam clamationem Petri de Lincoln', Rađi le Pann' de Suth-croxton, Radulphi fil' Rađi le Pann', & Thome Bolt de Suth-croxton, de omnibus que habemus ex dono & feoffamento Walteri de Barkby in Suth-Croxton, ut patet in cartâ xvi^{a}, xvii^{a}, xviii^{a}, & xxi^{a}.

Habemus ibi, ex dono Matilde de Suthfolk, unam virgatam terre, unum toftum, & unum croftum, ſic limitata; videlicet, toftum & croftum extra villam de Suth-croxton, quod vocatur Sertecroft uſque Baggrave, que continent unam acram terre & dim', &c. ut in cartâ xxiii^{a}. Et habemus confirmationem Petri de Linc' de predictis tofto & crofto, &c. ut in cartâ iii^{a}.

Habemus ibi, ex dono Ricardi clerici, fratris Joh̄is vicarii, tres ſeliones terre qui jacent inter terram Nich̄i filii Alani ex unâ parte, & Grimdibuttes ex alterâ parte, &c. ut in cartâ xxiiii^{a}.

Habemus ibi, ex conceſſione & quietâ clamatione Wiłłi Cnotte, totum jus ſuum & clameum quod habuit vel habere potuit in illâ virgatâ terre quam Galfridus Potteſmuth quondam tenuit de ipſo in Croxton, & in illâ virgatâ terre quam Rogerus de Coſington quondam de ipſo tenuit in eâdem, cum homagio & relevio, &c. ut in cartâ xxv^{a}.

Mem', quòd recuperavimus vi virgatas terre & dim', & tres acras prati, cum pertin' ſuis, in Suth-croxton, versùs Robertum Ros & Iſabellam uxorem ſuam, unde habemus finem levatam in curiâ đni regis apud Linc', in craſtino Animarum, anno regni regis Henrici filii regis Johannis lvi^{o}, &c. ut in finali concordiâ.

Mem', quòd ſolvimus ad ſcutagium ex antiquo, pro vi virgatis terre & dim', vi acris & dim' & iii acris prati, in Suth-croxton, ſcil', pro quâlibet virgatâ terre xvđ. ſicut pateat ſcrutanti evidentias noſtras.

Tenentes ad voluntatem.

Wiłłus Brawnſton tenet i meſſ', i croftum, & i virgatam terre; & reddit xis̃.

Thomas Sylby tenet i meſſ', i croftum, & unam virgatam terre; & reddit xis̃.

Joh̄es Plummer tenet i meſſ', i croftum, & dimidiam virgatam terre; & reddit vis̃.

Summa virgatarum ii & dim'; ſumma redditûs xxviiis̃. Require terrarium de predictis virgatis in terrario W. Charite.

Liberi tenentes.

Joh̄es Palmer tenet i croftum ex oppoſito tenement' abbatis Leyc', & jacet juxta venellam vocat' Plumer-lane; & unam virgatam terre quondam Roberti Randolf; & reddit xs̃. ob̃· q̃. homagium & relevium, & ſectam ad viſum noſtrum.

Idem Joh̄es tenet unam bovatam terre quondam Matilde Cum', ſicut patet in le Pyn; et reddit viđ. ſicut patet per cartam predicti Johannis, quam vidi & legi.

Joh̄es Margetſon tenet i meſſ'; redd' iiiiđ. vel xiiiđ. homagium, & ſectam curie.

Iſti ſubſcripti tenent parcellas unius virgate terre, quondam W. Margetſon, pertinent' ad predictum meſſ'; que meſſ' & virgat' terre reddunt annuatim abbati Leyc' xiiiđ. & continet xxiiii acras.

Robertus Frethby tenet ......; redd' iiđ.

Robertus Batman tenet ....; redd' iiiđ.

Radulphus tenet Pyke de Barſby; redd' iđ. ob̃.

Wiłłs in the lane tenet ....; redd' ob̃.

Thomas Boroth tenet ....; redd' iđ.

Ita preſentati ſunt in curiâ đni abbatis, tent' apud Thurmaſton anno regni regis H. VI^{ti} ii^{o}, ſicut patet in Rotulo Curiali ejuſdem anni.

Thomas Darby redd' iiđ.

Summa liberi redditûs xis̃. ob̃. q̃.

Summa totalis xxxixs̃. ob̃. q̃.; quondam iiilī. xviis̃.

Omnes tenentes ñri de Croxton debent venire ad viſum franciplegii ñri apud Thurmaſton; & habemus ibi weyfe & ſtreyfe, &c. [1]."

In the terrier referred to under Barkby, p. 45, South Croxton fills two pages.

The abbot and convent of Croxton in this county had alſo ſome conſiderable property in this lordſhip; together with a moiety of the church here, the gift of Roger de Hotoft [2].

"Habemus in South Croxton, de dono Aldulfi de Braci, iiii bovatas terre in perpetuam eleemoſinam, cum pratis & paſturis & aliis pertinentiis, ſicut aliqua eleemoſina liberiùs dari poterit.

Item habemus, de dono Rogeri de Hotot, iiii bovatas terre, cum iiii toftis, in eâdem villâ, cum pertinentiis & ceteris appendenciis, aiſiamentis, & libertatibus ſuis; & liberum introïtum & exitum: & paſturam ducentarum ovium & xx animalium, ita ut boves caruce noſtre habeant communem paſturam infra hayam ſuam, cum bobus ſuis, liberè, quietè, ſalvo forinſeco.

Item Willielmus, filius ejuſdem Rogeri, dictam donationem nobis confirmavit, ſalvis forinſecis ſerviciis, ut ſupra.

Item Margeria de Hotot dedit nobis totam terram ſuam de feodo Belvarie, tam liberè & plenariè ſicut Ingeloſus vir ejus & ipſa eam tenuerunt, reddendo eidem Margerie & heredibus ſuis, pro feudâ firmâ, iii marcas argenti & dimidiam pro omni ſervicio, ſalvo forinſeco.

Item habemus, de dono Hugonis de Charnels, aſſenſu & voluntate matris ſue Margerie, totam terram ſuam de South Croxton, de feodo Belverie, cum pertinentiis ſuis, tam liberè & plenariè ſicut Ingeloſus pater ſuus & ipſe eandem terram unquam liberiùs & plenariùs tenuerunt; tenendam nobis, de ſe & heredibus ſuis, ad feudam firmam in perpetuum, reddendo eiſdem annuatim iii marcas argenti, viz. ad Mich' i marcam, ad Purificat' dimidiam marcam, & ad Bapt' xxs̃. pro omni ſervicio, ſalvo forinſeco; warentizans, &c.

Item Willielmus de Aubeny conceſſit & confirmavit nobis totam terram de South Croxton, ſalvo forinſeco ſervicio.

Item habemus in eâdem villâ, de dono Petri filii

---

[1] Charyte's Rentale, fol. xlix. a.—l. b.

[2] See hereafter, p. 236.

Thome de Lincoln', II culturas terre arabilis, in liberam, puram, & perpetuam eleemoſinam, ſcilicet, unam que vocatur Cotewong, & aliam que vocatur Wayngatewong, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis. Item habemus, de dono Ricardi Clerici, per Willielmum Hirming, dimidiam acram prati in eâdem villâ in puram eleemoſinam.

Item habemus, de dono Willielmi Neucemyn, per eundem W. Hirmyng, unam rodam terre arabilis, & unam rodam prati, in eâdem villâ, in puram eleemoſinam.

Item habemus, de dono Walteri filii Milonis Ruſſel, per eundem W. Hyrming, VI rodas terre & prati & dimidiam, in liberam, puram, & perpetuam eleemoſinam. Item, de dono Radulphi le Palmer, dimidiam rodam prati in puram eleemoſinam.

Item, de dono ejuſdem R, dimidiam acram prati in puram eleemoſinam.

Item, de dono Henrici Peck, unam rodam prati in puram eleemoſinam.

Item, de dono Roberti Haliday, quandam partem terre, habentem XXXV pedes in longitudine, & XXXIII in latitudine, in puram eleemoſinam.

Item, de dono Radulphi de Maundevile de Barneſby, II acras terre, & dimidiam I ferthing minus, & unam rodam prati, in puram eleemoſinam.

Item dominus Petrus de Lincolniâ, miles, dedit nobis, conceſſit, & quietum-clamavit, totum fautidium ovium bidentium noſtrarum paſcentium & cubantium in terris de South Croxton omni tempore, cum toto compoſto, tam in yeme quàm in eſtate, quod ipſe & pater ſuus aliquando habuerunt de nobis, in eâdem villâ.

Item Margeria, que fuit uxor Rogeri de Loueſby, remiſit nobis, pro ſe & heredibus ſuis, totum jus & clameum quod habuit in VI rodis terre & prati, quas habemus de dono Walteri filii Milonis; warentizans, &c.

Item Willielmus Duck & Mariota uxor ejus confirmaverunt nobis predictas II acras & dimidiam, & unam rodam prati, quas habemus de dono Radulphi Maundevile predicti de Barniſby; & warentizabunt contra dominos feodi iſtius in perpetuum [1]."

The temporalities of the abbey of Croxton in this lordſhip at the diſſolution were valued at 13*s.* 8*d.* a year.

Jan. 20, 1352-3, William de Ros of Hamelak died ſeiſed of half a quarter of one knight's fee in South Croxton, held of the king in capite, which the heirs of Thomas de Jargunvyll held [2].

In 1363, Margery widow of William de Ros of Hamelake held at her death one knight's fee, half a quarter and the ſixteenth part of one knight's fee, in Barkby, Croxton, Hungarton, Quenby, and Howes, which Thomas de Lincoln held [3].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, South Croxton was rated at 1*l.* 6*s.*; and, in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 3*s.* 4*d.*

In 1452, Anthony Malory (of the family of Malory of Walton) was lord of this manor; and in 1512, ... Mallory died ſeiſed of the manor of South Croſon, with its appurtenances in Walton [4].

Henry Malory died ſeiſed of it in 1553; leaving Anne, Eleanor, Elizabeth, Margaret, and Katharine, his daughters and coheirs [5].

In 1564, there were 32 families in South Croxton.

Lands at South Croxton and Bareſby, formerly parcel of the preceptory of Rothley, were leaſed to Robert Gaſcoigne, by queen Elizabeth, in 1575, at the rent of £2. [6]

Jan. 23, 1583, it was found that Francis Cave, eſq. died ſeiſed of one piece or parcel of paſture in the fields of Croxton, held of the queen, as of the honour of Huntingdon [7].

Parcelle nuper prioratûs de Malton, in com' Ebor'.

"Firma unius tenementi in South-croxton, & unius virgate terre eidem pertinentis, in tenurâ Roberti Rawſon, als Darby, per ann', ſolv' ad feſt' Sc̃i Martini & Pentecoſtes equalitèr LIIIs̃. IIIId̃."

Tenure in fee ſimple.

The land in South-croxton, per annum LIIIſ. IIIId. was ſurrendered to the kinge's ma^{tie} June 19, 1611 [8].

The freeholders here in 1630 were, William Goddard, gent. Thomas Allen, gent. Robert Pauley, head conſtable, William Palmer, Matthew Plummer, William Steevenſon, and Chriſtopher Matt.

In 1642, Mr. Valentine Allen owned the lordſhip [9].

William Allen, Robert Pawley, and Thomas Goddard, gentlemen, were ſeiſed of lands here in 1653.

In 1655, was collected in South Croxton, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, 1*l.* 8*s.*

Thomas Goddard, gent. by his laſt will, dated May 12, 1678, gave to Thomas Baker, citizen and girdler of London, his heirs and aſſigns, a capital meſſuage and ſeven yard-lands in South Croxton, to take poſſeſſion immediately after the death of the teſtator's wife Anne Goddard; twelve months after which event about 600*l.* to be paid out of the ſame in various legacies. Sept. 18, 1683, Mr. Baker agreed to ſell to Robert Burley, of Scraptoft, eſq. for 1200*l.* and a farther conſideration of 20 broad pieces to be given to Anne Baker his wife [10]. But Mr. Goddard's will was judged not to be valid, 15 Jan. 1683-4, by William Leech (a counſellor who was conſulted) becauſe there were but two witneſſes at the publiſhing of it [11].

South Croxton is one of the ſix pariſhes [12] in this county to which Richard Wollaſton [13], eſq. of Wormley, in the county of Hertford, in 1688, bequeathed a full moiety [14] of two farm-houſes and lands in Eſſex, for cloathing the poor; and to which Mr. Francis Holbech, in 1737, added £288. 5*s.* for apprenticing annually two children [15].

Within this pariſh (about half a mile from Bagrave) is a lodge-houſe, with 5 or 600 acres of paſture land, now called Streethill [16], owned by a Mr. Pick, who ſome time ſince reſided here. This ſeems to be the place deſcribed in Charyte's Rentale as the toft and croft extra villam, called Schortecroft uſque Bagrave [17].

In 1722, 11 freeholders polled from this pariſh; and in 1775, we find 20 names.

The village contains about 100 dwellings.

---

[1] Peck's MSS. 4935; from a MS. in 4to, at Belvoir, fol. 16. b.

[2] Eſch. 26 Edw. III. N° 53. Leic.

[3] Eſch. 37 Edw. III. N° 62. Leic.

[4] Eſch. 4 Hen. VIII.

[5] Inq. 1 Mariæ, n. 203.

[6] Leaſes in the Augmentation Office.

[7] Eſch. 26 Eliz.

[8] MS. Rawlinſon, in Bibl. Bodl. p. 112. a.

[9] MS. Chetwynd.

[10] Palmer's MS Caſes, p. 478.

[11] Mr. Carte, from Leiceſter Town Book, p. 478.

[12] To Loſeby and Newton, each tenth part; and to Billeſdon, Twyford, Bareſby, and South Croxton, each a fifth part.

[13] "A diſtant relation of the family of Wollaſtons at Loſeby Hall, which he was accuſtomed to viſit annually. At theſe ſeveral times he paid an attention to the pariſhes mentioned, and their neceſſities; and, when he died, bequeathed farm-houſes and divers lands in Eſſex, appointing truſtees in the vicinage, for the better and ſafe management of his charity, under a decree in Chancery. For want of care and re-appointment of ſuch truſtees, the benefaction ſuffered many and great abuſes, and was reduced to a mere trifle; when the Rev. Philip Hacket, the preſent rector of South Croxton, one of the pariſhes, convened them all to meet at Leiceſter. He drew up a writing, which the ſeveral claimants unanimouſly and heartily ſigned, to bear an equal proportion of the expence, be what it would; for the whole was near vaniſhing, and likely to be totally loſt. Mr. Hacket exerted every nerve belonging to him, ſearched the Chancery Rolls and courts of Doctors Commons; and, by rigorous efforts in examining every perſon concerned, gained £15. for each diſtrict, which before was reduced to leſs than £6. This has been conſtantly and invariably paid, without any deductions, ſince about the year 1786. The whole expence attending this improvement of the income coſt the ſeveral pariſhes no more than £1. 5*s.* each. Mr. Hacket, had it not been for the mean ſpiritedneſs of one or two of his brethren, would have gained a greater augmentation, by a complete dividend of the whole, without any ſtoppages or deduction. This is a moſt noble benefaction; and it is with the utmoſt pleaſure I relate it. Plaudo mihi, as being inſtrumental in cloathing ſuch a numerous poor with comfortable and creditable garments, belonging to the ſeveral towns that were ſo diſtinguiſhed, both in his life-time and at the death of the late noble and worthy Richard Wollaſton of immortal memory." P. H.

[14] The other moiety was given, three fifths to the pariſh of Whitchurch, co. Southampton; and two fifths to Wormley.

[15] See the Benefactions in vol. I. p. 44.

[16] There is a good farm of this name in Loſeby lordſhip; probably both ſo called from their being near the Roman-road.

[17] See before, p. 232.

The SOUTH CROXTON, N.E.

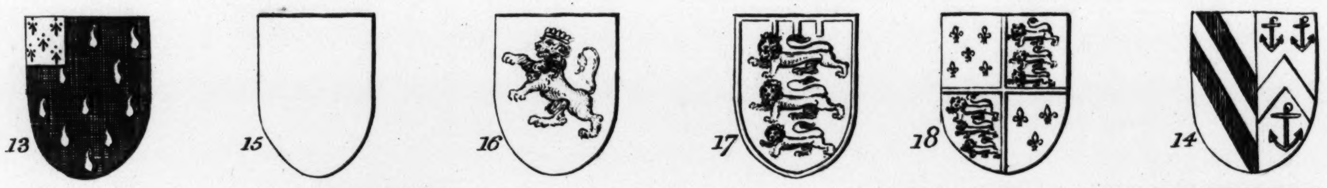
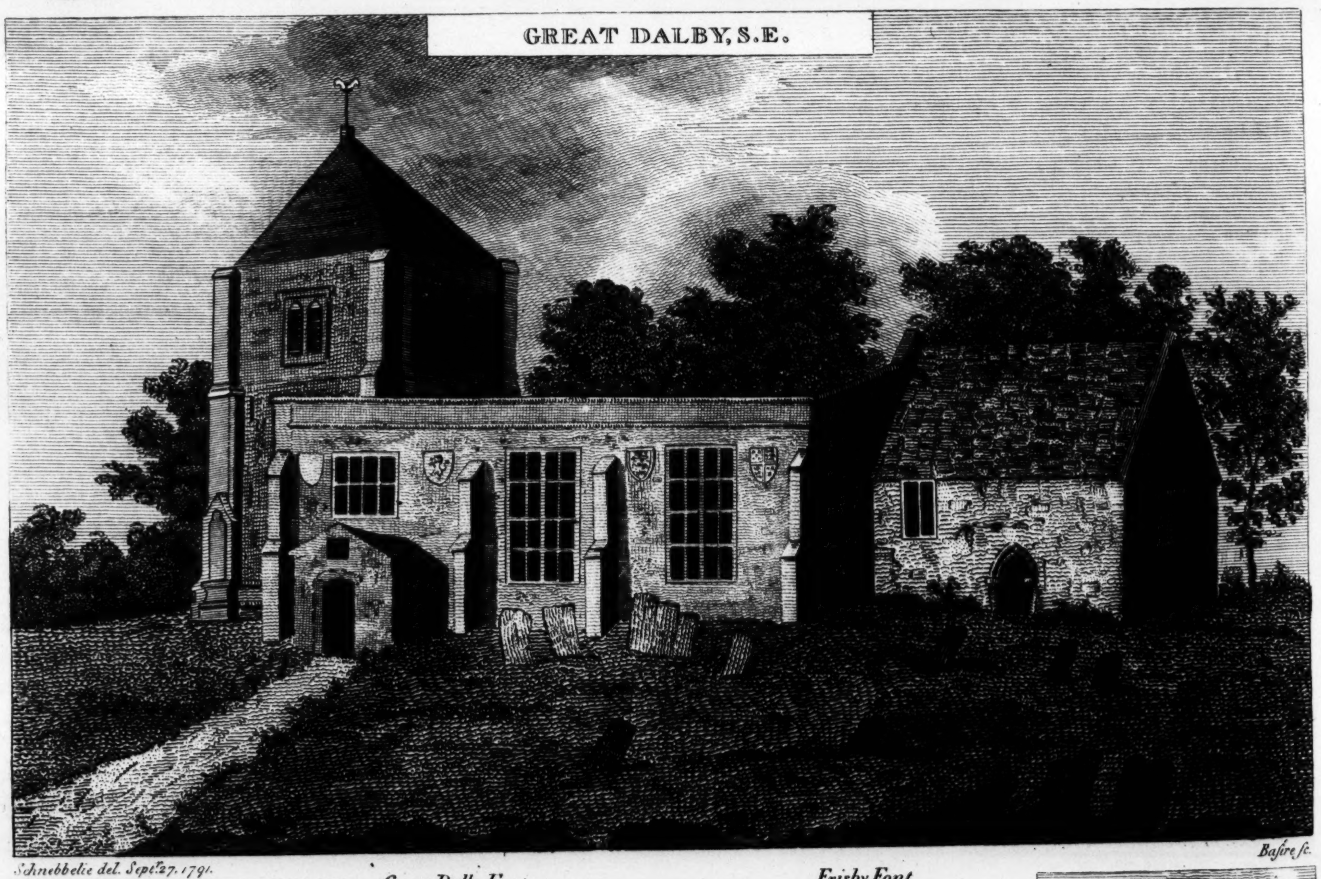
Malcolm del. et sc. 1792.



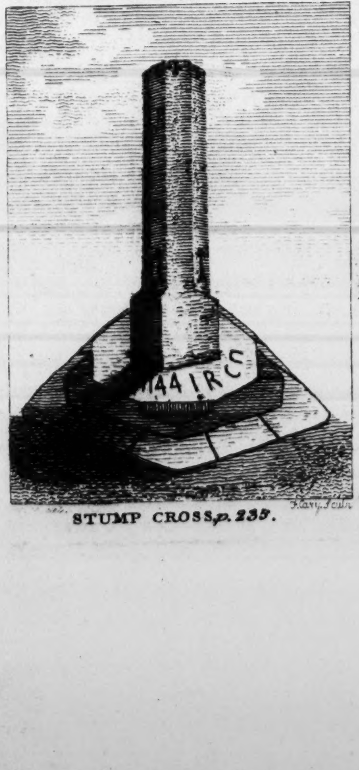
13
15
16
17
18
14

GREAT DALBY, S.E.



Schnebbelie del. Sept. 27. 1791.

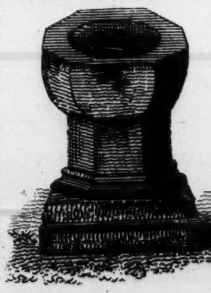
Basire sc.

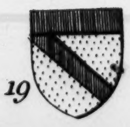


Flavy. sculp.

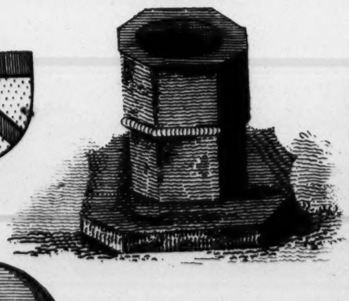
STUMP CROSS, p. 235.

Great-Dalby Font.





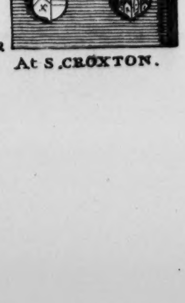
Frisby Font.



+ SIGILL' HVGONIS DE CHAVCVMB

Fig. B. p. 240.

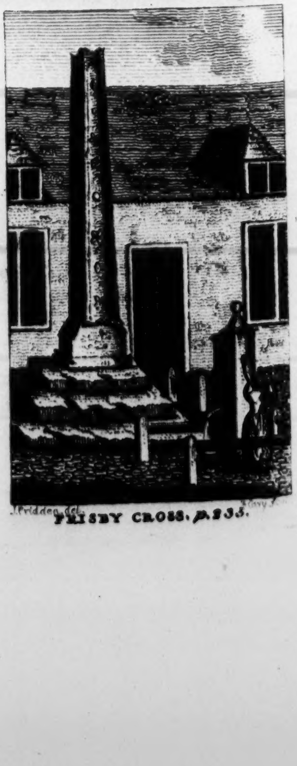
Fig. A.



p. 237.

At S. CROXTON.

Fig. C. p. 276.



J. Pridden del.

FRISBY CROSS, p. 235.

The Nether Lordſhip of South Cronton, whereof the late ſir Charles Sedley was the owner, was incloſed, without any act of parliament, in 1757; the proprietors only three; Nathanael-Palmer Johnſon, eſq. William Pochin, eſq. and the Rev. William Middleton. It conſiſts of 611 acres, excluſive of the roads.

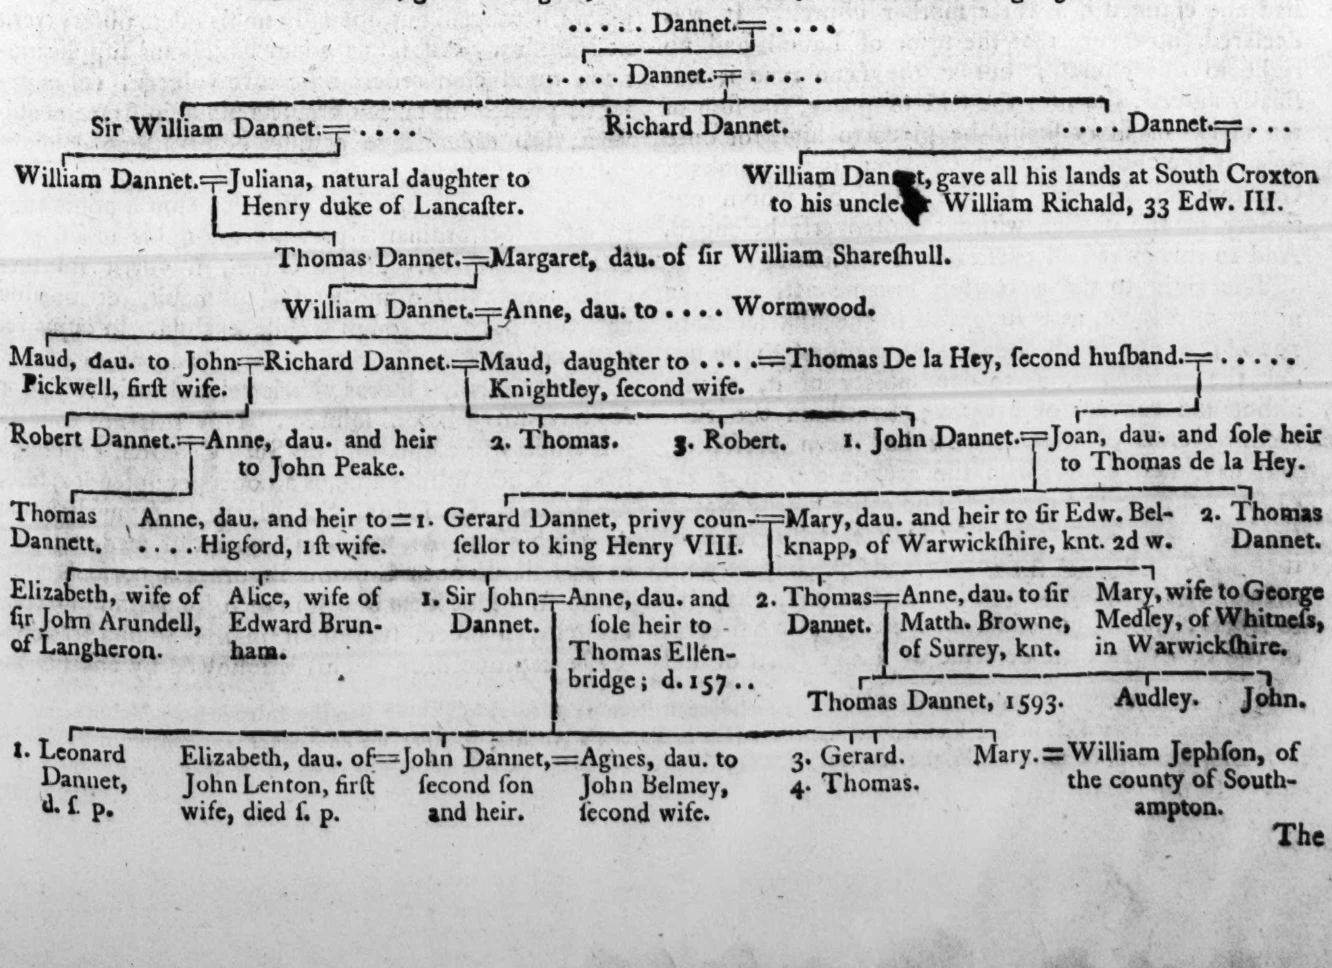
The Upper Lordſhip, containing about 111 acres, was incloſed by act of parliament in 1794; at which time, it appears, there were certain open fields, within one common boundary fence, in the lordſhips of Bareſby and South Croxton, containing about 82 yard-lands; and two open meadows, called Barrow-cliff Meadow and Sowbrooke Meadow, with ſeveral other pieces of open meadow, common, &c.; and certain homeſteads and antient incloſures, within the ſaid lordſhips, containing about 60 acres, excluſive of certain antient incloſures in a part of South Croxton called The Nether End: That John duke of Rutland was patron of the rectory of South Croxton; and John Brown, gent. patron of the vicarage of Aſhby Folvile, of which Bareſby is a member: And that, ſome parts of thoſe lordſhips being within the manor and ſoke of Rothley, Thomas Babington, eſq. as lord of that manor and ſoke, was entitled to divers rights and privileges in ſuch lands as were ſubject to that peculiar eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction; as was alſo Matthew Babington, as vicar of Rothley, and commiſſary of the ſoke. The Rev. Philip Hacket, as rector of South Croxton, was entitled to certain parcels of glebe land, containing about one yard-land; a homeſtead within the ring of the town of South Croxton; various tithes and rights of common; and Eaſter-offerings, mortuaries, and ſurplice-fees. He was alſo entitled, together with the Rev. John Kerchevall, in equal undivided moieties, to the tithes of certain other parts of the ſaid common field, and of all the homeſteads within the town, except that belonging to the rector, and ſuch as were within The Nether End. The Rev. Thomas Beaumont Burnaby, as vicar of Aſhby Folvile, was entitled to certain parcels of glebe land, containing about one yard-land, and alſo to right of common, and to vicarial tithes from ſuch parts of the common fields, and from all the homeſteads and old incloſures, and alſo to Eaſter-offerings, &c. within the lordſhip of Bareſby; and John Johnſon, eſq. was entitled to all the great tithes within that lordſhip. There were alſo certain antient incloſures in The Nether End, belonging to William Pochin, eſq. Nathanael Palmer Johnſon, eſq. and Charles Boſworth, eſq.; one moiety of the vicarial tithes of which, and one undivided third part of the tithes of corn and grain, were the property of Mr. Hacket as rector; the remainder belonged to Mr. Pochin, in ſuch part of the lordſhip as was his property; and to Jane Ayre, widow, in ſuch parts as were the property of Mr. Johnſon and Mr. Boſworth. And the ſaid John-Henry duke of Rutland, John Kerchevall, William Pochin, Jane Ayre, Nathanael-Palmer Johnſon, and Charles Boſworth, together with John-Peach Hungerford, eſq. the Rev. Andrew Burnaby, D.D. Anne Ayre, widow, the Rev. Edward Bromhead, William Gilſon, the Rev. Abraham Jobſon, as vicar of Wimeſwold, and others, were proprietors of the remainder of the ſaid fields. A due proportion was directed to be allotted to the lords of the manors of Bareſby and South Croxton, and to the lord of the ſoke of Rothley, for their reſpective intereſts; and four acres to the ſurveyors of the highways, for the purpoſe of digging for materials; provided that no ſtone, gravel, ſand, or other materials, be taken in any of the lands or grounds, or brooks, in the lordſhip of Bagrave, within three quarters of a mile of the manſion-houſe of Dr. Burnaby. A full compenſation to be allotted to Mr. Hacket for his glebe; and a farther allotment to him, and the ſeveral other proprietors, in proportion to their intereſts. Reſervation was made of Mrs. Jane Ayre's right to tithes in The Nether End; and of the vicar of Rothley's rights, and the impropriator of Gaddeſby's; it being matter of doubt whether the compoſition in lieu of tithes paid to the impropriator of Gaddeſby and to the vicar of Rothley reſpectively, for other incloſed lands in Gaddeſby (as a member of Rothley) adjoining the open meadow called Barrowcliff, did not include compenſations for the impropriate and vicarial tithes ariſing from part of that meadow. Particular proviſion was alſo made for aſcertaining the boundaries of Bareſby and South Croxton; and for the ſaving of all manerial rights, and thoſe of the ſoke of Rothley.

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor, within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	72	17	6
Expended in county-rates, &c.	4	8	0
——— on the poor, —	68	9	6
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	7	2	0
Expended in litigations, —	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	86	16	7
——— 1784, —	74	17	9
——— 1785, —	88	6	3
Medium of theſe three years,	83	6	10
——— of county expences, —	6	12	5
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	0	0	0
——— of nett annual expences,	76	14	5
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	0	7	4
——— of entertainments at meetings,	0	2	2
——— of law expences, —	0	19	0
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	1	2

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 44; where Henry Mowbray, of Chriſt Church, London, occurs as a benefactor.

Pedigree of DANNET, of SOUTH CROXTON. (From the Viſitation of 1619.)

Arms: Sable, gutté de Argent, a canton Ermine; Plate XXXVI. fig. 13.



.... Dannet.=....
.... Dannet.=....
Sir William Dannet.=....
Richard Dannet.
.... Dannet.=...
William Dannet.=Juliana, natural daughter to Henry duke of Lancaſter.
William Dannet, gave all his lands at South Croxton to his uncle William Richald, 33 Edw. III.
Thomas Dannet.=Margaret, dau. of ſir William Shareſhull.
William Dannet.=Anne, dau. to .... Wormwood.
Maud, dau. to John Pickwell, firſt wife.=Richard Dannet.=Maud, daughter to .... Knightley, ſecond wife.=Thomas De la Hey, ſecond huſband.=.....
Robert Dannet.=Anne, dau. and heir to John Peake.
2. Thomas.
3. Robert.
1. John Dannet.=Joan, dau. and ſole heir to Thomas de la Hey.
Thomas Dannett.
Anne, dau. and heir to .... Higford, 1ſt wife.=1. Gerard Dannet, privy counſellor to king Henry VIII.=Mary, dau. and heir to ſir Edw. Belknapp, of Warwickſhire, knt. 2d w.
2. Thomas Dannet.
Elizabeth, wife of ſir John Arundell, of Langheron.
Alice, wife of Edward Brunham.
1. Sir John Dannet.=Anne, dau. and ſole heir to Thomas Ellenbridge; d. 157..
2. Thomas Dannet.=Anne, dau. to ſir Matth. Browne, of Surrey, knt.
Mary, wife to George Medley, of Whitneſs, in Warwickſhire.
Thomas Dannet, 1593.
Audley.
John.
1. Leonard Dannet, d. ſ. p.
Elizabeth, dau. of John Lenton, firſt wife, died ſ. p.=John Dannet, ſecond ſon and heir.=Agnes, dau. to John Belmey, ſecond wife.
3. Gerard.
4. Thomas.
Mary.=William Jephſon, of the county of Southampton.

The two following inſcriptions are copied from plates of copper, preſerved at Barkby Hall by the late William Pochin, eſq. The ſize, 1 feet 6½ inches by 10 inches.

"SVBIACET HVIC TVMVLO IOHANNES DANET, FRATER VNICVS THOME DANET, DE DANET'S-HALL, ARMIGERI.
OBIIT PRIMO DIE MAII, A° DNI 1645°, ÆTATIS SVÆ 24, JOHN DANET,
HODIE NATE.
EPICEDIVM ANAGRAM'ATIS
IN PERSONAE NOMENCLATVRAM.
NASCITVR HIC MORIENS, ILLESVS MORTE SECVNDA, MORIBVS ILLE SENEX, ET GENEROSVS EQVES;
OBTECTOQVE HODIE COLLVXIT SOL ORIENTIS, EXIT VT E VITA MORTE, REVIXIT ITA."

" SVBIACET HVIC TVMVLO FRANCIS DANET, VXOR
THOME DANET, DE DANET'S HALL, ARMIGERI.
OBIIT TERTIO DIE JVNII, ANNO D'NI 1645°, STATIM POST PARTVRAM, ÆTATIS SVÆ 27°,
FRANCIS DANET,
FAS NE ARA TÆDIS.
EPICEDIVM ANAGRAM'ATIS.
PRO PVLLO PELICANA NEFASVE PIACVLA DICAM,
ARA FOCIS APTA, AN TAEDA PARATA VIRO,
ARA LVCENS TEDA SEXTA CVM PROLE BEATA, HOSTIA GRATA DEO HEC, ILLA RELICTA VIRO [1]."

The CHURCH (ſee Plate XXXVI.)

dedicated to St. John the Baptiſt, conſiſts of an embattled tower (in which are four bells, pretty tunable ſongſters, caſt by the ſame hand as caſt St. Margaret's antient ſix, the celebrated Mr. Watts, as appears by his ſignature); a ſpire; chancel, nave, and North aile.

Burton deſcribes theſe arms here, fig. 1—9.

1. Gules, ten bezants and a canton Ermine, Zouch of Aſhby de la Zouch.
2. Azure, ſemé of fleurs de lis, a lion rampant Or, over all a ribbon compony Argent and Gules, Beaumont.
3. Argent, a chevron Gules, Teyes.
4. Paly of ſix, Or and Azure, a canton Ermine, Shirley.
5. Or, a lion rampant queué fourché Gules, Malory.
6. Gules, two bars Or, in chief three bezants, Wake.
7. Party per feſs, Argent and Or, a croſs moline Gules, Folvile.
8. Gules, a chevron between three cinquefoils Or, Chambers; impaling, Argent, two bars, and, on a canton Azure, a martlet Or, Lathbury.
9. Chambers; impaling, Argent, a chevron Gules between three horſeſhoes Sable, Pochin.

The font is old, but not very remarkable.

Againſt the North wall of the chancel:
" Philip Hacket, rector, 1775."

The moiety of the church of South Croxton which was within the fee of Belvoir, with its appurtenances, was given to the abbot and convent of Croxton in this county, in pure alms, by Roger de Hotoft; who veſted the right of the advowſon in the ſaid abbey, and gave them four bovates of land, " in preſentiâ Baldrici [2] tunc archidiaconi Leiceſtriæ, & capituli." The other moiety was the property of the prior and convent of Malton in Yorkſhire.

In 1216, 12 kal. June, a diſpute concerning the church of South Croxton was referred by Pope Innocent III. to the abbots of Kirkeſtede, Rereſby, and Newhous. The prior and convent of Laund had claimed this church as a chapelry to their church of Aſhby Folvile; and the abbot and convent of Croxton had alſo claimed it as their mother church. It was declared, however, that the prior of Laund had no right to this church; but at the ſame time it was finally agreed, that, for the ſake of peace, the ſum of ten marks of ſilver ſhould be given to him, for once only, in the church of South Croxton, by the monks of Croxton and Malton, to the latter of whom one moiety of the church without controverſy belonged. And to this award all parties were conſenting.

The right to the advowſon became afterwards a matter of diſpute, as is ſuggeſted in the Matriculus of 1220 [3]; where South Croxton is deſcribed to be under the patronage, as to one moiety of it, of the abbot and convent of Croxton; by whom the then rector Thomas of Northampton had been preſented, and inſtituted by William the archdeacon on a vacancy of the ſee of Lincoln. The other moiety was in the patronage of the prior of Malton, who had held it to his own uſe for 30 years; and the chapter were then of opinion (capitulus dicit) that this was a chapelry to Aſhby. The abbot of Eveſham received two ſheaves of the tithes from the demeſne of Henry Foliot of old time; which the prior of Chaucombe held for 3*s.*

The difference concerning the right of preſentation was adjuſted, in conſequence of a mandate from the Pope, by a definitive ſentence paſſed before S. abbot of Rievalx and A. abbot of Welbeck; by whoſe order Peter, then dean of Asfordby, inducted a canon of the order of Sempringham into the moiety which was in the fee of Belvoir, and a Premonſtratenſian canon of Croxton (de Valle Sc̄i Joh̄is) into the other moiety. This was followed by a regular atteſtation of Maſter B. official of the dean and archdeacon of Leiceſter, dated in capitulo apud Thurſtington, die Nativitatis Sc̄i Joh̄is Baptiſte, MCCXXIII; and by another of S. Raſſet, de Rereſby, decanus; teſte capitulo de Goſcote. After which, an agreement was made by the monks of Croxton and Malton, that each houſe ſhould in future poſſeſs a moiety of the church, and of all the oblations, &c. and bear a moiety of all charges. And this agreement was confirmed by an eſpecial privilege from Pope Innocent IV. [4]

The monks of Malton, as a reward to John their chaplain for ten years of tried and faithful ſervice, gave him the care of their moiety of the church of South Croxton, together with a tenement, or grange, which had been built at their expence; with a reverſion of the ſame to John his pupil.

" Omnibus has literas viſuris vel audituris, W. prior & conventus Malton' ſalutem in Domino. Ex approbatâ fidelitate, & in multis multipliciter expertâ, dominum Johannem de Suth Croxton, capellanum noſtrum, gm̄datum [5] habentes, ipſius merita decrevimus reſpicienda. Quocirca curam medietatis eccleſie ville predicte, que noſtre eſt proprietatis, cum quadam tofti ipſius eccleſie particulâ, quam noſtris impendiis edificavit, ſue duximus fidei committendam; reddendo inde nobis apud Willegeby quinque marcas annuatim, ſcilicet, duas marcas & dimidiam ad feſtum Sancti Martini, et duas marcas & dimidiam ad Dominicam Aſcenſionem, ſub pena xx ſolidorum cohc̄one, de Bridelington, de Kyrkeham, & de Novo Burgo prioribus, totiens reddendorum, abſque omni agnitione et citatoriâ vexatione, quotiens firma predicta ad aliquod terminum ultra diem octavum fuerit detenta. Hanc autem grangiam illi conceſſimus quamdiu nobis fidem obſervaverit ut hactenus. Ad ipſius etiam addidimus ſupplicationem, quod cùm cedere huic cure voluerit, vel impotentiâ prepeditus curam predictam adminiſtrare nequiverit, ſub eâdem lege et fidei obſervatione dominus Johannes ſacerdos, dicti Johannis alumpnus, idem auctoritate noſtrâ ſubintret officium, cum a nobis fuerit ipſius loci ordinariis preſentatus, nobis modò predicto reſponſurus. Atque tamen, ſi fuerit ibi ſucceſſio, onera dicte medietatis ſuſtinebit, et nomine noſtro reſpondebit, omni fraude excluſâ. In cujus rei teſtimonium, &c.

" Omnibus has literas viſuris vel audituris, W. prior & conventus Malton' ſalutem. Noveritis nos conceſſiſſe dilecto n̄ro d̄no Joh̄i de Suth Croxton, capellano n̄ro, x & octo ſolidos annuos a nobis percipiendos, ſcil', medietatem ad feſtum Sc̄i Martini, & medietatem ad Dominicam Aſcenſionem, quamdiu medietati n̄re in eccleſiâ de Suth Croxton in propriâ perſonâ miniſtraverit. Hoc idem d̄no Joh̄i dicti Joh̄is alumpno concedimus, ſi eidem ſucceſſerit in illâ adminiſtratione. Teſte capitulo n̄ro." This is followed by another inſtrument, by which the ſaid John the chaplain is conſtituted their agent for tranſacting at South Croxton all buſineſs relating to the temporalities of the priory[1].

---

[1] 1 Tim. ii. 15.
[2] Baldricus de Sigillo was archdeacon from 1158 to 1189.
[3] See the Introductory Volume, p. lix.
[4] Appendix to vol. I. p. 82; and ſee the appropriation in Tanner's Notitia, p. 240; ſee alſo under Old Malton in Yorkſhire.
[5] This ſeems to be the word in the original; ſed Q?

In 1344, the procurations were 7*s.* 6½*d.*; the rectory was taxed at 16 marks, and paid 2*s.* for Peter-pence. The abbot of Croxton had one moiety, the prior of Malton[2] the other, in proprios uſus. In 1534-5, the procurations and ſynodals were 8*s.* 2*d.*; the prior of Malton's penſion was 2*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*; the prior of Chaucombe's 10*s.*; and the value of the rectory £11.

"Maii 11°, 1649. By virtue of an order of parliament, of the ſecond of May, 1646, it is ordered that the yearly ſum of 36*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* be allowed and paid out of the profits of the impropriate rectory of South Croxton, in the county of Leiceſter, ſequeſtered from ſir Charles Smith, Papiſt and delinquent, to and for increaſe of the maintenance of Robert Bridges, miniſter of the pariſh church of South Croxton aforeſaid, his preſent maintenance being but thirty pounds a year; and the ſequeſtrators of the premiſſes are required to pay the ſame accordingly at ſuch times and ſeaſons of the year as the ſaid profits ſhall grow due and payable."

In 1650, the rectory was returned worth £20.; and the incumbent as "ſufficient."

In the king's books it is entered as a diſcharged living, worth 8*l.* 13*s.* 4*d*; clear yearly value 37*l.* 0*s.* 9½*d.*

The epiſcopal procurations are, 2*s.*; the archidiaconal, 8*s.* 2*d.*

The parſonage-houſe has lately been almoſt new-built at the ſole expence of the preſent incumbent; and the ſilver ſeal deſcribed below was lately found in the garden of this houſe[3].

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
Thomas of Northampton, 1220.	Abbot and convent of Croxton.
John de Salteby, accolyte, 1223.
John de Graham, 1263.
Robert de Natham, 1288.
Thomas Ayle[4], 1562.	The Queen.
Robert Bridges[5], 1649; died 1662.	Parliamentary Sequeſtrators.
Paul Balguy[6], April 27, 1662.	John eighth earl of Rutland.
Thomas Sawbridge[7], 1690.	John ninth earl of Rutland.
Philip Hacket[8], June 25, 1700; died 1735.
William Middleton, inducted 1735.	John ſecond duke of Rutland.
Robert Burnaby[9], May 14, 1765.
Philip Hacket, Sept. 11, 1770; the preſent rector 1799.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

Againſt the South wall is a monument[10], which, on four braſſes, contains the following arms and inſcriptions (ſee Plate XXXVI. fig. A.)

On a lozenge ſhield at top the nine following coats:

Quarterly, 1. Chambers; 2. Ermine, a feſs checky, Or and Sable; 3. Sable, gutté de ſang Argent, and a canton of the laſt; 4. Or, on two bars Sable, ſix lions paſſant Argent; 5. Sable, three eagles diſplayed Or, Chanſeull; 6. Azure, two bars nebulé Argent; 7. blank; 8. Sable, a chevron between three caſtles Argent; 9. Sable, a feſs between three birds Or within a border of the laſt, a creſcent for difference; ſee fig. 10. Under this is written:

"Here lyeth interred the body of Mary Barnes, the daughter of Richard Chamber, of Gadeſby, eſquire, and, while he lived, lord of half the yond broke[11] of this towne of South Croxton; which Marye had iſſue two ſonnes, William and John, and two daughters, Elizabeth and Dorchas; and departed this life the xix day of Februarye, in the yeare of our Lord God 1578."

And at bottom theſe arms:

Chambers, impaling Lathbury; fig. 11.

Quarterly, 1. and 4, Chambers; 2. and 3, Ermine, a feſs checky, Or and Sable; impaling, Quarterly, 1. and 4, Pochin; 2. Or, on two bars Sable, three water-bougets Argent, a mullet for difference; 3. Sable, three fleurs de lis Argent within a border Or; fig. 12.

On a ſtone againſt the South chancel wall;

"In memory of a dear and dutiful daughter, Elizabeth Pick,
18 years of age, 1773."

Whoſe life ('tis thought) for want of care was loſt,
Which many ſorrowful tears her parents coſt:
Grieved their hopes ſeemed, by imprudence croſt:
But truſt good God, whoſe wiſe decrees are beſt,
Has ta'en her from them to eternal reſt
And the celeſtial manſions of the bleſt.

In the church-yard is the pedeſtal of a croſs.

---

[1] Cotton MSS. Claudius D. XI. p. 212. a.—216. a.

[2] To the priory of Malton relates alſo the following original deed, preſerved in the Lambeth Library. "Bulla Gregorii prioribus Croylandiæ & Leiceſtriæ, ut determinent cauſam monachorum de Sempringham, conguerentum Archiepiſcopum & Archidiaconum Eboracenſem, vicarias ſuas contra jus augmentare." Lambeth MSS. DCXLIII. N° 52.

[3] "My grandfather and grandmother's arms [Argent, two birds Gules; impaling, ..., a chevron between three anchors, ...; Plate XXXVI. fig. 14.] were quartered on it after their marriage. My grandfather left Croxton, and went to Leiceſter, in 1713. This ſeal was dug up from one of the beds in the garden about two years back; ſo that it muſt to a certainty have lain there for more than 80 years, no ways corroded, cankered, or blackened. It is in the higheſt ſtate of preſervation, and exceedingly well graved, by Mr. Jonathan Backerfield, of Leiceſter, an ingenious artiſt." Philip Hacket.

[4] In the Certificate referred to under Allexton, p. 8, Mr. Ayle is thus deſcribed: "Preſbyter, non conjugatus; parv' doctus; reſidet; hoſpitalis; deget ibidem; non licentiatus, nec prædicat; nullum aliud habet."

[5] He was buried in this church; and the oldeſt Regiſter now in being begins with his death.

[6] He reſigned, and went to Beby in 1690: ſee p. 171. He gave the rent of a quarter of a yard-land, in the upper lordſhip of Croxton, to the poor of Croxton and Beby at his deceaſe, to be paid on Eaſter Wedneſday, and to be diſtributed to antient widows who moſt frequented the church.

[7] "On Mr. Sawbridge's aſking the ninth earl of Rutland to give him the living of Croxton, relying upon the ſlender recommendation of five hands only of the pariſhioners; the earl telling him "there were but few voices in his favour;" he anſwered, "They were as many as your lordſhip had when you put up for knight of parliament." Meeting with this rebuff, and about to recede, the noble lord called him back; and, ſmiling at his ruſtic freedom, ſaid, "However, Mr. Sawbridge, I will give you the living, notwithſtanding your obſervation has ſome truth in it." He reſigned Croxton early in the year 1700; and, on his appointment to the vicarage of Billeſdon, was put into the commiſſion of the peace by the ſame earl, who was then lord lieutenant of the county." P. H.

[8] "At a particular juncture, when there was no reſident clergyman (ſuppoſed to be in Mr. Hacket's time, who went to Leiceſter in 1713 upon a litigation about a chief farm, to which was annexed the manor of the Upper lordſhip, now in the poſſeſſion of John Peach Hungerford, eſq. inheriting from Mr. Peach, of famous memory); the old regiſter, comprehending all entries before 1662, was not forthcoming, and could no where be diſcovered. It is ſuppoſed the clerk at that time, who was called the Doctor, was tampered with, and gave up the book to the flames, of which he had been in poſſeſſion but juſt before. He ſold a pot of beer, on which any perſon might have acceſs to a regiſter. It is thus eſtates are too often alienated. I was told this circumſtance by an aged and very intelligent man, who died at near 100 years of age. The next Regiſter has been alſo mutilated in a very material part." P. H.

[9] "Which Mr. Burnaby reſigned for Wanlip, a worſe living, but nearer Leiceſter, he being rector of St. Margaret's there." P. H.

[10] There is no family-vault.

[11] "Half the lord of the yond broke of the town of South Croxton means, and is always underſtood in that ſenſe, half the lord of the manor of the Nether lordſhip of South Croxton aforeſaid, which (as ſtated in p. 235.) was incloſed in 1757. It was then in the hands of three proprietors only, Mr. Palmer Johnſon, Mr. William Pochin, and the Rev. William Middleton. This laſt has been ſold off, with the impropriate tithes, in one or two allotments, ſince that time." P. H.

Pedigree of HACKET, of Penterry, Abkettleby, and South Croxton.

Continued from the Viſitation of 1683; ſigned at Leiceſter by John Hacket, Eſq. Aug. 4, 1683.

Sir Walter Hacket, of Minn Court, co. Lancaſter. = ... dau. of . . . Hudleſton, of the North.

Thomas Hacket, of Penterry, co. Monmouth, eſq = Anne, dau. of ſir Peter Veel, of Glouceſterſhire, knt.
died 1659, aged 97.

1. Philip, died unmarried.
2. Robert, died unmarried.
3. Henry Hacket, of Penterry, died vitâ patris, circa 1642. = Frances, dau. of ſir Richard Catchmay, of Bigeſware, co. Glouceſter, knt.
1. Anne, died unmarried.
2. Frances, died unmarried.

1. Philip Hacket[1], marr. Dorothy[2], another of the three daughters and coheirs of John Danvers, of Thruſſington; but died ſ. p; his will dated April 9, 1672.
2. John Hacket[3], of Abkettleby, eſq. in the commiſſion of the peace for the county; died Nov. 26, 1686. = Suſanna[2], dau. and coheir of John Danvers, of Thruſſington, a younger brother to Danvers of Swithland.
Mary. = Thomas Cocks, of Caſtleditch, co. Heref. eſq.
Frances.

1. Charles Hacket[4], fellow and founder's kinſman of New Coll. Oxford, ætat. 22, 1683; M. A. there June 13, 1688.
2. Phil. Hacket[5], a child of Wincheſter College, æt. 20 in 1683; afterwards rector of South Croxton, vicar of All Saints, and confrater of Wigſton's Hoſpital; died April 17, 1735, æt. 72. = Jane Holder, died in May 1747, æt. 80.
3. Thomas, æt. 12.
[Theſe three ſons were all fellows of New College at the ſame time.]
1. Elizabeth, æt. 20.
2. Anne, æt. 17.
3. Mary, æt. 16.
4. Dorothy, æt. 11.

1. Char. Hacket, gent. born Nov. 6, 1701; died unmarried at Fort George in the Eaſt Indies in 1735.
2. Clement[6] Hacket, born May 25, 1704, marr. Suſanna[7], dau. of —— Barker, belonging to the cathedral of Peterborough, and had two ſons: 1. John; and 2. Philip, died unmarried in the army.
3. Philip Hacket, gent. born May 6, 1708; killed by a fall from his horſe Auguſt 16, 1770, æt. 63. = Elizabeth, dau. of Tho. Hacket, of Wikeham, gent.
Jane, born and died 1706.
Frances, born and died in 1710.

1. Rev. Philip Hacket, A. B. the preſent rector of South Croxton, born 1727; living 1799[10]; but has no children. = ... dau. of the Rev. Will. Bareſby, vicar of Loſeby and Radcliffe on the Wreake.
2. Charles Hacket[8], died Aug. 5, 1770, æt. 35. =
3. Thomas Hacket, proctor of the Eccleſiaſtical Court of Leiceſter, died Aug. 7, 1781, æt. 41. =

Thomas Hacket.
1. Thomas.
2. Philip-John-Danvers Hacket[9].

[1] "This Philip Hacket, who died before his brother and wife, by joint conſent, ſettled the eſtates at Odſton, Shakerſton, and Holwell, on his wife Dorothy; and made his brother John executor; and his heirs to inherit the eſtate there after her deceaſe; on this expreſs condition, to conſent to ſell a reverſionary eſtate at Kibworth (on the death of Mrs. Haſtings, of Kibworth, widow), and to pay his debts; or otherwiſe to give up all right and title to the Holwell eſtate. He alſo gave £50. to his niece Frances Cocks. Dorothy afterwards married Dean Addiſon, the Spectator's father; which connexion was brought about by my grandfather marrying Jane, daughter of the Rev. James Holder, a near relation of Joſeph Addiſon. I remember my grandmother telling me, that Mr. Hunter, the head-ſchool-maſter of Lichfield, with whom Joſeph the Spectator was placed at ſchool, had oftentimes 99 and near 100 boarders living with him for their education; but never raiſed 100 complete. He was obliged to incorporate ſeveral neighbouring houſes, and join them to his ſchool-habitation, to accommodate ſo large a family. Garrick, I think, and Johnſon, were part of their time under the tuition of this famous claſſical maſter. On ſome conſiderable revolt or commotion of the great boys of the ſchool, when all was deſperate, and the boys flying off in detachments, young Addiſon reduced them; ſhewed the neceſſity of obeying the maſter and governor in all things that appertained to their improvement; and made ſuch an excuſe for their rebellion, that he was ever after regarded as prime miniſter; admirably foretelling the public office he ſo well filled under the Queen, with ſuch ſplendid abilities, though no fine orator. Before Dorothy died, ſhe confirmed the deviſe of the eſtates of Odſton and Skakerſton; and left them to Philip Hacket of South Croxton, together with the Dean's library. Joſeph Addiſon, whom my grandfather always viſited and correſponded with, made him a preſent of a ſett of the octavo edition of the Spectator when firſt publiſhed, which I have now in my library. Such, however, has been our infatuation and miſmanagement, we never inherited a foot of the eſtates of Odſton and Shakerſton. My grandfather made his claim; but ſome other perſon oppoſed him, and he deſiſted." P. H.

[2] "The two ladies, Suſanna and Dorothy Danvers, when maidens, had been loſt in Thruſſington fields, returning from a neighbouring viſit on foot a little too late. By the ringing of the great bell at eight o'clock at night at Hoby, a ſmall diſtance from Thruſſington, they probably ſaved their lives: at leaſt they were relieved out of their diſtreſs, and regained their home, the Grange-houſe, to their no ſmall ſatisfaction. In commemoration of which, they ſettled a piece of land from each of their fortunes jointly, conſiſting of four or five acres, lying in a meadow in Thruſſington lordſhip; appointing the ſaid bell to be rung at the ſtated hour to the end of time, whilſt there is a bell: and made the vicar of Thruſſington and rector of Hoby truſtees and guardians of the performance." P. H.—Of this circumſtance, ſee farther under Thruſſington.

[3] "John Hacket, eſq. of Abkettleby, kept a pack of hounds, and a coach and ſix, in which he commonly travelled to receive his rents at Kibworth Beauchamp. He uſed to go to the Swan at Market Harborough, and ſend for his tenants. I was told this circumſtance by Mrs. Sollers herſelf, who kept the ſaid inn when near 100 years of age. She was a miracle of a woman, and tript as nimbly as a young one. When King Charles II. went a progreſs, and viſited the interior of the country, being at Belvoir Caſtle with his whole ſuite and attendants, in company with the earl of Rutland, he took a breakfaſt at Mr. Hacket's at Abkettleby. Being ſpoken of by that Nobleman as an honeſt, ſpirited, country gentleman, and a moſt jovial companion, the King would have knighted John; but the honour was declined, on account of the precarious ſituation of his finances. There was ſomething very remarkable in the death of this Mr. Hacket. The earl of Rutland, Chevy Hartopp, John Hacket aforeſaid, eſqrs. and ſome other neighbouring gentlemen, went to dine with ſquire Bennett of Welby, ſpent the afternoon very jovially, bordering on exceſs, and ſat up late at night. This happened on the 25th of November, 1686. During the courſe of the evening Mr. Hacket had occaſion to go to the door ſeveral times; on the three laſt, each, an owl perched on his ſhoulder invariably. The laſt time, when he returned to the company, he told them of the phænomenon that had occurred to him. They were ſtruck at the relation; whilſt he made a joke of the omens, if they were ſuch, and aſked the other gentlemen if they were ſo ſuperſtitious as to believe ſuch appearances ſignified any thing? But he himſelf laughed at it, as a matter of no conſequence When the meeting came to break up, which was ſoon after (ſome ſtayed all night), Mr. Hacket had no ſervant. It was but a ſhort diſtance to his own home, little more than half a mile; the field open and not incloſed, in Abkettleby lordſhip. They would have perſuaded him to take Mr. Bennett's footman home with him: "What, gentlemen, do you think I am afraid of the owl?" and ſwore, by all that was ſacred, no ſervant ſhould attend upon him on his way. Accordingly he ſet off upon his horſe, in a wiſe and ſteady mood, as he no doubt thought himſelf to be in (we all think ourſelves very knowing at ſuch times!) However, the company had ſo ordered it, that Mr. Bennett's ſervant was to follow him at a diſtance. In going down a narrow ſtoney-lane leading into Abkettleby field, he heard horſes' feet following him; he turned back, and found a man-ſervant, who had been ſent out to keep him in eye till he reached his own houſe; he fell into a paſſion with the poor fellow for dogging him, as he termed it, and actually whipped him back again quite to the hall; thinking it to be an inſult, as not being capable to conduct himſelf with ſafety. The man then juſtly left him to his own guidance. Before he arrived home, and but a little way from his own hall, he fell from his horſe, and was found early in the morning not quite dead, but almoſt, by a ſhepherd's wife, lying at a land's end in ſnow and water. There had been a fall of ſnow and ſleet, accompanied by a froſt, at the ſeaſon. Being brought home and put to bed, in a few hours after he departed this life, aged 52. He was at the time a widower. His wife Suſanna, daughter of John Danvers, eſq. of Thruſſington, formerly of Shakerſton, brought him an immenſe fortune in landed eſtates in the county of Leiceſter; Abkettleby, Holwell, Thruſſington, Odſton, Shakerſton, Kibworth Beauchamp, &c. to the value of near £2000. a year. As to the Penterry eſtate, which was John Hacket's original patrimony, he only mortgaged it to a relation, into whoſe hands it was committed till it ſhould caſt itſelf out, not thinking to ruin his eldeſt ſon entirely. By this contrivance, he made it feazible of its reverting back again to him entire in a few years. But, when the Fates are adverſe, how vain are the moſt prudent projects! how unfortunate the beſt and moſt generous intentions! Upon the diſſolution or diſperſion of the family ſoon after his death, the earl of Rutland, who was godfather to all the ſeven children, ſent the four ladies at his own expence to a Proteſtant nunnery or ſeminary in French Flanders; and at the duke of Marlborough's conqueſt of that country they were liberated, and all returned to England, and were well and comfortably married and ſettled. Mrs. Alſton, one of the daughters, had a female ſervant that lived with her at Chelſea (one of the Guys of Abkettleby); and was ſent down, at her own requeſt, to be buried among her anceſtors there, at the great age of near 100 years. I remember her being brought down in a hearſe for interment. The Monmouth eſtate had ſome years after cleared itſelf. The mortgagee and relation of the family called out for the right heir to take re-poſſeſſion. The whole family was diſperſed, and not one had a ſettled home; the eldeſt and youngeſt ſons both dead, and the heir could not be heard of. No one came to claim. The lord of the manor, ſir William Morgan (whom I have ſo often in my youth ſeen dawbed upon the walls among his ſtud of horſes) ſeized the eſtate to his own uſe. Philip Hacket, the only ſurvivor of the three ſons, and heir at law, was now ſettled as rector of South Croxton; and, in 1711, made his demand of the eſtate, as belonging to him, of ſir William Morgan; who told him, “If he could clearly make out his right as true heir to his relation Morgan of the Temple, a barriſter at law, he would reſign.” By the aſſiſtance of Judge Probert, Mr. Hacket's relation, this was done to the full ſatisfaction of the ſaid barriſter. Mr. Hacket and ſir William Morgan met at . . . . Sir William ſays, “My couſin, I ſuppoſe, is ſatisfied of your right; but, before I reſign, you ſhall agree to a handſome conſideration for my keeping it ſafe for your inheritance again.” My grandfather argued, “how unreaſonable his demand; ſince he had received the rents for more than 14 years, without any deductions farther than what were unavoidable.”—“If then you will not agree to my propoſal, get it, and take it; for upon no other terms will I reſign.” When Mr. Hacket returned to Croxton from this unſucceſsful application, he ſaid, “I have had trouble enough through my father's indiſcretion and ill conduct; and will not go to law with this unjuſt man; but will leave the buſineſs to my eldeſt ſon Charles, who is every way competent to the undertaking;” which Charles afterwards went to the Eaſt Indies, to gain a fortune to aſſiſt him in recovering his eſtate; where a third fever carried him off, and he was buried at Fort St. George, when Hodſon was governor, in 1735, the very year his father died in. As he was ſuppoſed to carry the principal writings with him, and as they could not be found, by the moſt accurate ſearch, in England, a future claim by the next claimant was defeated for want of them.” P. H.

[4] “This Charles Hacket, eldeſt ſon of John Hacket, eſq. was reckoned and eſteemed at the time one of the fineſt gentlemen in England. He was a man of nice honour; and, the family drooping, he ſtopped a gentleman in his coach in London for bearing his arms upon his carriage. But the gentleman either proved relationſhip, or his right to the ſame; which ſatisfied Charles for the preſent. His father thought, amid all his extravagancies, not to ruin his eldeſt ſon entirely; but only mortgaged the Monmouth eſtate for a few years, expecting the patrimony would revert back to the family: but, behold, all the deſigns and contrivances of feeble man are but vain, though never ſo deeply and artfully laid; for this antient bulwark he planned and retained to keep the family from falling and coming totally to ruin. Charles, ſoon after, or near to the death of his father, was killed in town, falling by a duel, or was rather murdered: As he was coming down ſtairs in a certain houſe, he was run through the body by a perſon perſonating a gentleman; Charles made a ſpring down ſtairs, finding himſelf deſperately wounded, and ran his antagoniſt through his body. Both died inſtantly on the ſpot. A lady was in the caſe, whom the other called his wife, I think. This account I had from my grandfather and father both. I leave every one here, melancholy as the affair is and ſo ſudden, to make their own reflections. Thus periſhed in a moment one of the fineſt men in England; who, no doubt, had he lived a little longer, might have re-eſtabliſhed the family once more.” P. H.

[5] “Philip Hacket was born on Eaſter Monday, April 20, 1663; ordained deacon in the cathedral church of Lichfield (with ten more deacons and prieſts) by the right reverend the biſhop of that dioceſe, Sept. 24, 1699; inſtalled vicar of Brewood, in the cathedral church of Lichfield, March 15, 1699; and June 16, 1700, was ordained prieſt (alone) at Magdalen College, Oxford, by the ſame hands. Mem. the firſt leſſon for the morning ſervice ended thus, ‘Put me into the prieſt's office, that I may eat a piece of bread.’ He was inducted into the rectory of South Croxton by Robert Segrave, of Twyford, June 26, 1700; was appointed to ſerve the cure of Norton in Staffordſhire in June, and that of St. Michael in Lichfield Aug. 30, and was licenſed to both by Lancelot Addiſon, in his Triennial Viſitation, Dec. 9, 1701; and, on the firſt of February following, he married Jane, daughter of the Rev. George Holder *, ſacriſt of the cathedral church of Lichfield. Mem. the leſſon that day contained the Inſtitution of Matrimony.” P. H.

[6] “He died by a duel, (with his antagoniſt alſo) at the age of about 51. We have had generally one or two killed of the family in every generation.” P. H.

[7] “Suſanna, after the death of her huſband Clement, married again a captain in the army; who died, and left her a handſome fortune in Stretton Ground. When ſhe died, ſhe left it to her ſon John, the Squire of the family; and he ſpent it like a gentleman in a ſhort time.” P. H.

[8] “The ſaid Charles was a valiant ſoldier at the battle of Minden, with the great lord Granby; who conferred upon him the commiſſion of an officer, which he never lived to enjoy. He left a ſon Thomas, as valiant a ſoldier as his father, in the Coldſtream regiment of Guards, who was put apprentice to a ſurgeon and apothecary at Muſſleborough in Scotland. He left his occupation; went a volunteer with Pearſon; and fought Paul Jones in that deſperate engagement, when, through a miſtake only, Paul Jones effected his eſcape. He afterwards entered into the Guards; and was in every engagement with that corps on the Continent; received two wounds only; one upon the ſhin-bone by a cannon-ball ſplintering a ſtone, and driving part of it againſt his leg; another over his left eye, hacked down, in a hazy morning when on the piquet-guard, by a French chaſſeur, who had no time to eſcape, and was ſhot dead by his comrade. Hacket's wound, though very bad, would never permit him to go into an hoſpital, but got perfectly well, and he now bears his honourable ſcar as his beſt reward. He would never accept of any promotion; and, when he returns to his native country, ſhall find an aſylum from his uncle. He is a brave fellow, about 31 years old.” P. H.

[9] “As fine a youth, and as neat and well-diſciplined a ſoldier as any in the army; was ſeven years in the firſt foot guards, and now 24 years old. He was at the attack of Dunkirk; and in the engagement on the Continent, when colonel Earle was killed at his ſide; afterwards, at the ſiege of Valenciennes; and then came home unhurt, but ſick. On the application of major Drummond and ſir George Cooke, colonel of the Weſt York militia, by great exertions he was obtained out of the Guards, I giving my conſent. Two of the beſt men were given in his room, and a large ſum of money; and was immediately made ſerjeant-major at a guinea per week, £9. per annum arrears, and an annuity ſettled upon him for life. I have had ſeveral petty commiſſions offered me, but refuſed them all. When this removal occurred, the militia was very much in diſorder, and wanted ſtricter diſcipline. He has reſtored the regiment; and all the officers are become his profeſſed friends. He will make his own way: his ſobriety and ſteady conduct are unexceptionable. When in the guards, he taught numbers of the aſſociated gentlemen their diſcipline in the court of the Foundling Hoſpital and their own houſes, from whom he received great favours, and promiſes of aſſiſtance in future promotion, if he would continue in the corps where he was. By this employment, he cleared about £50. in a few months, which he carries off with him undiminiſhed into Yorkſhire. He is a very ſaving lad, and a good œconomiſt in the army; and I intend to make him, in part, my heir of what little I leave behind me.—I have waded through a painful taſk, and melancholy, becauſe continually reminding me of the horrid devaſtation and diſperſion of an antient and good family, through the ill conduct of one ill-judging man, wanting œconomy, and perhaps every other moral and Chriſtian virtue, though a perſon of genius and good learning. I cannot ſay with the humility of the great Poet, and “not a ſtone tell where I lie;” for there is one in Abkettleby chancel, inſcribed with the letters “J. H. E.” What a ſatire from his whole family does this remain of his bad conduct to them:—no farther diſtinction—no mark of a man that ſo figured away during his life-time, as made the world to wonder. No one foot of land do his deſcendants at this time inherit out of ſo large an eſtate—neither title, property, and ſcarce his name belong to any! Well may we ſay with Ovid, in the conteſt between Ajax and Ulyſſes, ſed vix ea noſtro voco.” P. H.

[10] “I ſerved the curacies of Dalby and Gaddeſby for more than 27 years; in which period, on my own calculation, I had walked and rode more than 20,000 miles; and performed the duty acceptably for leſs than £800. I ſerved Keame, another church belonging to the Soke, during the whole time, as well as my living; and performed the duty well, or to the beſt of my abilities; ſcarcely miſſing any duty incumbent upon me three times, in ſo great a length of years; an inſtance of perſeverence and patient induſtry that perhaps deſerves to be chronicled. No flying-curate on Newmarket Plain was ever preſſed more and harder to reach the wiſhed-for goal in point of time. No victuals or drink, to expreſs it vulgarly, all day till the evening, when I always eat like a trooper, and ſlept well upon it. Preached three times in the courſe of the appointed hours; and, like the Welſhman, made nothing of it. I am now in the 70th year of my age, and never knew an hour's illneſs in my life. My father had uſed facetiouſly to ſay, ‘I ſhall give no more fortune than I have done; but I have given you a good conſtitution, and that is worth £1500. of any man's, or rather woman's money.’ Riſum teneatis, amici?” P. H.—[See a P. S. to this note in p. 263.]

---

* Who died Aug. 25, 1701, æt. 66; and was buried in the nave of Lichfield cathedral. See his epitaph in Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. I. p. 251.

DALBY,

DALBY,

antiently called Dalby Magna by way of diſtinction from the ſmaller lordſhip of the ſame name, and afterwards Dalby Chaucombe, Chalcombe, Jacombe, Chakum, Saucomb, and Shauecombe, for that the greateſt part of it belonged to the priory of Chaucombe in Northamptonſhire, [or that the Chaucombes [1] were formerly lords of it] is bounded by Aſhby Folvile, Kirkby Beler, Little Dalby, and Burrow. It is twelve miles North-Eaſt from Leiceſter; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, within the deanry of Goſcote.

The lordſhip of Great Dalbi, containing eight ploughlands, was held, in the reign of king Edward the Confeſſor, by Godric, with the privileges of ſac and ſoc; and was then worth ſixty ſhillings. At the general ſurvey it was worth 70 ſhillings, and was then held by Godefrid under Walter de Conſtantiis biſhop of Lincoln. The land was equal to ſix ploughs. In the demeſne were three ploughs and two bondmen; and ſeven villans and ſixteen ſocmen had ſix ploughs. There was a meadow ſix furlongs long and ſix broad. Within this manor one knight held a ploughland; which was worth ten ſhillings [2].

Not long after the Conqueſt, Hugh de Anaf [3], a Norman, afterwards called Hugh de Chacômbe [4], was lord of this place, and of Chaucombe [5], co. Northampton, where he founded a priory [6], to which he gave the church here, with two yardlands, and paſture for 20 beaſts and 300 ſheep, as appears by the following extract from his foundation charter:

"In nomine Sancte & Individue Trinitatis; univerſis ſancte matris eccleſie filiis, ad quos preſens carta pervenerit, Hugo de Chaucumbe ſalutem. Sciatis me dediſſe & conceſſiſſe, & hâc preſenti cartâ meâ confirmâſſe, pro ſalute anime mee & Annabilis uxoris mee, & heredum noſtrorum, & Hodierne uxoris mee (cujus tempore preſens carta facta fuit), & omnium anteceſſorum & ſucceſſorum noſtrorum, in puram & perpetuam eleemoſinam, Deo & Beate Marie, & Apoſtolis Petro & Paulo, & canonicis regularibus de Chaucumbe ibidem Deo ſervientibus & ſervituris, ad edificationem eccleſie ſue & edificiorum ſuorum, totum toftum illum qui vocatur Benelande in Occidentali parte ſubtùs Chaucumbe & eccleſiam parochialem ejuſdem ville de Chaucumbe, &c.; & eccleſiam de Magnâ Daubi, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis; & in eâdem villâ communem paſturam nobiſcum, & cum hominibus noſtris, ſcilicet, triginta animalibus & duodecies-viginti ovibus; & illam virgatam terre que fuit Roberti Verguntai [7], cum pertinentiis ſuis; & totum illum toftum qui jacet inter terram Ricardi de Lokintun & terram fratrum Sancti Lazari; & illam virgatam terre que fuit Hugonis Prepoſiti & Willielmi Frone; & quatuor ſeliones terre de forland que jacent juxta diviſam de Melton; & tres ſeliones terre de dominico meo quod vocatur Hevedlond ſuper Thirnam, & medietatem eccleſie de Retherby, cum pertinentiis ſuis; & ibidem unum cotagium quod Galfridus tenuit, &c. Hiis teſtibus; Walkelino abbate de Sancto Jacobo Northamtonie, Euſtachio abbate de Dorkeceſtre, Alexandro priore de Eſſebi, Johanne ſubpriore de Daventre, Roberto priore de Landâ, Radulfo perſonâ de Midelton, Benedicto ſacerdote de Cropri, Roberto ſacerdote de Wardinton, Elyâ Foliot perſonâ de Wardon, Reginaldo perſonâ de Bereford [with eight more by name], & multis aliis [8]."

The charter polled. Indorſed, in an antient hand, "Hugonis de Chaucumbe;" and, in a more modern hand, "De Fundacione." A round ſeal of green wax, about two inches large, riſing at the edge diſh-wiſe, affixed to white and red ſilk ſtrings: it has a ſhield, Fretty, on a chief a creſcent between two ſtars; inſcribed, "✠ SIGILL' HUGONIS DE CHAUCUMB [9]."

"Hugo de Chaucumb ut cuſtos, & magiſter Hylarius cum eo, reddunt compotum (to king John) de firmâ de Warewic' & de firmâ de Leirceſtriâ [10]."

"Hugo de Chaucumbe, ut cuſtos, reddit compotum de firmâ de Warewicſcirâ & Leirceſtreſcirâ [11]."

"Hugo de Chaucumbâ reddit compotum (to king Richard I.) de firmâ de Staffordſcirâ de dimidio anno [12]."

He had iſſue ſir Robert de Chaucombe, knt. whoſe only daughter, Annabille, brought this manor, inter alia, to Stephen de Segrave her huſband, and, ſurviving him, gave 100*s*. annual rent here to the priory of Chaucmobe for ever [13].

The deſcendants from Gilbert and Annabille are here ſet down from an old MS. [14] lately poſſeſſed by the right honourable lord William Howard, of Naworth Caſtle [15]: "Dominus Hugo de Anaf, miles, veniens è Normanniâ tempore Conqueſtoris, fundavit prioratum de Chacombe, & habuit uxorem Annabiliam; de quibus Robertus de Chacombe, miles & heres ejus, cui nupta Juliana . . . . , qui portavit arma de aureo, cum le chief ſanguineo, & unum baculum de rubeo colore. De quibus Annabilia filia & heres predicti Roberti nupta domino Gilberto de Segrave; & ſic conflatum eſt nomen de Chacombe in Segrave. De ipſis Gilberto & Annabiliâ exivit Nicholaus, filius & heres; cui nupta fuit Matilda Lucy. De quibus prodîerunt dominus Johannes de Segrave, dominus Nicholaus de Segrave, dominus Galfridus de Segrave, dominus Petrus, & dominus Gilbertus; & predictus Johannes de Segrave nupſit Chriſtiane de Pleſſy; de quibus dominus Stephanus de Segrave, Eleanora-Kiriell, Margareta, Alicia, & Chriſtiana de Moune. Et predictus Stephanus nupſit Alicie de Arundell; de quibus Edmundus, qui obiit in cunis; & Johannes de Segrave, & Stephanus. Qui Johannes nupſit domine Margarete de Brotherton; de quibus Johannes de Segrave & Elizabetha. Predictus Johannes nupſit Blanche filie Johannis domini de Mowbraye, & obiit ſine herede de ſe. Et predicta Elizabetha nupta fuit Johanni de Moubray, filio & heredi predicti Johannis de Moubray; de quibus Johannes de Moubray comes de Nottingham, & Thomas frater ejus [16]."

---

[1] MS. Chetwynd.

[2] "Godefridus tenet de Epiſcopo 8 carucatas terræ in Dalbi. Terra eſt 6 carucarum. In dominico ſunt 3 carucæ & 2 ſervi; & 7 villani & 16 ſochmanni habent 6 carucas. Ibi 6 quarentenæ prati in longitudine & in latitudine. Valuit 66 ſolidos; modò 70. Godric tenuit cum ſacâ & ſocâ. In ipſâ villâ tenet unus miles 1 carucatam terræ; & valet 10 ſolidos." Domeſday, fol. 231. a. 1.

[3] In a Rental of the lands belonging to this priory, preſerved in the College of Arms, it is ſaid that this religious houſe was founded by Hugh de Aneſy, or de Anaff, a Norman knight, who came in with the Conqueror; and poſſibly the founder might be deſcended from this Hugh de Aneſy; but that the convent itſelf was not in being till towards the latter end of the reign of Henry II. may be gathered from the witneſſes to the charter of foundation [printed above]; two of whom are Walkelin abbot of St. James in Northampton, and Alexander prior of Canons Aſhby. Now Walkelin was choſen abbot 26 Henry II. and ſat till 7 John; and Alexander was contemporary with him. Tanner, Notit. Mon. ſub Chaucombe.

[4] Arms: Or, a chief and bend Gules; Plate XXXVI. fig. 19. See under Segrave, in Burton, p. 243.

[5] Pat. Edw. III. p. 2. m. 36. per Inſpex. [6] Of Chaucombe priory, ſee hereafter under Rotherby, where they alſo had property.

[7] In Dugdale, Mon. Angl. vol. II, p. 279, this name is Verguntarii.

[8] Madox, Formulare Anglicanum, p. 250. Form. CCCCXXII; and ſee Dugdale, Mon. Angl. vol. II. p. 279.

[9] Plate XXXVI. fig. B. [10] Magn. Rot. Pip. 7 Joh. 13. a. [11] Ibid. 8 Joh. Rot. 1. a. [12] Ibid. 6 Ric. I. Tit. Staff.

[13] MS. Chetwynd; and ſee Dugdale's Warwickſhire, vol. II. p. 817. [14] In Chronicis apud Chaucombe.

[15] "At Naworth Caſtle in Cumberland is a complete copy of Domeſday in MS. collected by that honourable and learned Antiquary and lover of all learning the lord William Howard, younger ſon of Thomas duke of Norfolk, who ſold the manor of Narborough, co. Leiceſter, to Walter Haſtings, eſq." MS. Chetwynd.—I have good authority for ſtating that the library here alluded to has long been removed from Naworth Caſtle; but where it is now I know not. It was there when Mr. Pennant viſited the caſtle 1772. Mr. Groſe, who was there the ſame year (not 1732, as miſprinted in Hutchinſon, Cumberland, vol. I. p. 136.), ſays, "the books are old: there are not above one or two of the MSS here now." Mr. Hutchinſon found the regiſter of Lanercourt Abbey, ſome treatiſes on religious ſubjects, and one on nobility; all MS. [16] In Chronicis apud Chaucombe.

In the Segrave Chartulary the following deeds occur:

1. A grant from Hugh de Anvers, to Hugh de Chaucomb and his heirs, of five virgates of land in Great Dalby, of the fee of Richard Baſſet, to be held of the capital lord by foreign ſervice, in the proportion of 48 virgates to one knight's fee.

2. A grant from Robert de Chaucomb, to the prior and convent of Chaucomb, of one meſſuage, with a toft and croft, nuper Letitie mulieris, near the court (curia) of the ſaid canons in Dalby, in exchange for one meſſuage, with a toft and croft, near the garden of the ſaid Robert, which was formerly in the occupation of Turkill, and for an annual rent of 2*s*. which he had been accuſtomed to pay for Michael of Retheresby (q. Rotherby, or Rereſby?); and of Swineſfeir, which the ſaid canons releaſed to Robert and his heirs.

3. A fine between Thomas prior of Chaucombe petent', and the ſaid Robert de Chaucombe deforc', of nine bovates of land, with the appurtenances, in Dauby, granted to the prior and his ſucceſſors, in exchange for a virgate in Morton, recovered againſt the ſaid prior and Robert, by Maud de Brochampton, William de Kinton, and others, to be held in pure alms of the ſaid Robert and his heirs by foreign ſervice, for every thing but what was due to Robert and his heirs for the toft belonging to a bovate held by William the ſon of Emma.

4. A fine between Gilbert de Segrave and Annabilia his wife querentes, and the ſaid Roger impedientem, of the manor of Dalby, with the appurtenances, granted to the ſaid Gilbert and Annabilia and their heirs, to be held of the ſaid Robert and his heirs in liberum maritagium of the ſaid Annabilia, if Robert ſhould have no other heir than the ſaid Annabilia and Milicent the wife of Ralph Baſſet; but if that ſhould happen, then to hold for the life of Robert; remainder to Ralph and Milicent Baſſet and their heirs for ever.

5. A quit claim from Julian widow of Robert de Chaucombe, to Ralph and Milicent Baſſet, of all her right of dower in the vill of Great Dalby.

6. A grant of quit-claim from Hugh de Dytheſworth, to Gilbert de Segrave and his heirs, of the homage of Roger Beler, and of his ſervice, namely, of 20*s*. annual rent for a tenement held of the ſaid Hugh in the vill of Dalby, on the feaſts of St. James and St. Martin, with the reliefs, eſcheats, gardens, and all other appurtenances.

7. A quit-claim from Hugh ſon of Benedict de Dytheſworth, to Nicholas de Segrave and his heirs, inter alia, of all that he poſſeſſed, or might poſſeſs, in Dalby Chaucombe, to be held freely [1].

In the time of king Henry II. the prior and convent of Launde were ſeiſed of 11 bovates in Dalby, given them by Richard Baſſet and Maud his wife, and confirmed by that king [2].

Richard Burdett granted to the maſter and brethren of Burton Lazars all his lands in Great Dalby, containing one carucate, for the health of king Henry II. and of William Burdett his father; to which William the ſon of Hugh Burdett, his nephew, added his confirmation.

Concerning the tithes of theſe lands the following compoſition occurs between the priory of Chaucombe and the brethren of that hoſpital; and a mutual oath was taken by both parties:

"Hec eſt convencio facta inter priorem & conventum de Chaucombâ ex unâ parte, & magiſtrum & fratres domûs Sancti Lazari de Bortonâ ex alterâ; videlicet, quòd dicti magiſter & fratres de Bortonâ de carucatâ terre quam habent in villâ de Dalbi, decimas garbarum perſolvent ſicut ſolvere conſueverunt; ſcilicet de terrâ quam habent ex dono Ricardi Burdet; ceteras vero decimas ad predictam terram pertinentes non perſolvent: de terris vero adquirendis, decimas garbarum & fœni, & ceteras decimas de jure debitas & conſuetas, ſalvis eorundem fratrum privilegiis, eccleſie de Dalbi perſolvent. Hanc autem compoſicionem fidelitèr & firmitèr obſervandam, utraque pars inſpectis ſacroſanctis ewangeliis juravit. Facta eſt autem hec compoſicio, die Sancti Hugonis Lincolnienſis epiſcopi, in capellâ fratrum de Borton, anno gratie milleſimo ducenteſimo viceſimo nono. In hujus autem rei teſtimonium, huic preſenti ſcripto in modum cyrographi inter nos & illos confecto, ſigillum capituli noſtri, unà cum ſigillis judicum, ſcilicet magiſtri Walteri de Taney archidiaconi Eſtridinge, & magiſtri Godardi penitentiarii Eborac. appoſuimus. Hiis teſtibus, dompno Waltero decano de Saxelby, magiſtro Johanne de Ayleſburi, dompno Willelmo de Chaucumb (with ſeven others) & aliis [3]."

Great Dalby is not noticed in the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about the year 1240; but in the Itinerary of 1280, it anſwered, with Aſhby Folvile and Bareſby, collectively as one vill.

The Abbey of Vaudey in Lincolnſhire had two acres of meadow in Dalby, by the gift of Hugo Norris [4].

In 1296, Nicholas de Segrave, at his death, held the manor of Chakun Dalby, with four carucates of land, and the appurtenances there, of the biſhop of Lincoln, by ſcutage. Eleven virgates of land there were held of the aforeſaid Nicholas in villanage, which Nicholas held them of the biſhop; and John de Segrave, his ſon and heir, was then aged 30 [5].

John de Segrave and the prior of Chalcombe held the twelfth part of a knight's fee in Dalby and Chacumb of Robert de Tateſhale, deceaſed [6].

In 1313, maſter William de Bois held one knight's fee in Dalby of Alan la Zouch, deceaſed [7].

In 1325, Stephen de Segrave, deceaſed, and Alice his wife, held the manor of Dalby Chaucombe of John de Segrave, but by what ſervice was not known; and John de Segrave was his ſon and heir [8].

In 1328, Robert de Holland, deceaſed, held, as of the right and inheritance of Maud his wife, one knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Dalby Chaucombe, which the heir of William de Boys held [9].

In 1346, John de Segrave (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 20*s*. for half a knight's fee in Dalby Chacombe and South Croxton; the maſter of the hoſpital of Burton St. Lazarus 2*s*. for a twentieth part of one knight's fee in Dalby Chacombe; the prior of Chacombe 4*s*. for a tenth part of one knight's fee in Dalby Jacombe; all parcel of the fees of Cheſter and Huntingdon [10].

In 1353, John de Segrave, at his death, held the manor of Dalby Chacombe [11].

In 1395, William la Zouch of Haringworth, knight, deceaſed, held half a knight's fee in Babbegrave, Dalby, and Barneſby, called Burdett's Fee, which Thomas Aſheby of Louſeby held [12].

In 1399, it was found that Thomas Mowbray, late duke of Norfolk, died ſeiſed of the manor of Dalby Chacombe; and in that year Margaret his relict died alſo ſeiſed of the ſame manor [13].

In 1406, Thomas Mowbray earl Marſhal died ſeiſed of the manor of Dalby Chacomb [14].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Great Dalby was rated at 2*l*. 9*s*.; and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum.

In 1422, Maud widow of John Lovel, knight, died ſeiſed of one knight's fee in Dalby Chacombe, which the earl Mareſcal held [15].

In 1437, Conſtantia counteſs Mareſcal died ſeiſed of the manor of Dalby Chacombe, which extended itſelf into the towns and hamlets of Dalby Chacombe, Kirkby Belers, Dalby Parva, Pickwell, Erdburgh, Thorp Sechevile, and Twyford; and Ed. Grey was her ſon and next heir [16].

In 1454, ſir William Lovel, knt. died ſeiſed of one knight's fee in Dalby Chacomb, which the earl Mareſcal held [17].

In 1461, John Mowbray duke of Norfolk was one of the juſtices itinerant South of Trent. He went a pilgrimage in 1461; and died that year ſeiſed of the manor of Dalby Chacombe, with the hamlets of Thorp Sachevile and Twyford, appurtenances of the ſaid manor, held of the biſhop of Lincoln by knight's ſervice[1].

---

[1] Appendix to vol. II. p. 119.

[2] Cart. 4 Edw. IV. per Inſpex.

[3] Madox, Form. Angl. p. 30. Form. LIII.—This agreement has the letters CYROGRAPHUM cut through indentways.

[4] Dugdale, Bar. Angl. vol. I. p. 833.

[5] Eſch. 24 Edw. I. N° 54. Leic.

[6] Eſch. 31 Edw. I. N° 30. Leic.

[7] Eſch. 7 Edw. II. N° 36. Leic.

[8] Eſch. 29 Edw. II. N° 91. Leic.

[9] Eſch. 2 Edw. III. N° 54. Leic.

[10] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[11] Eſch. 27 Edw. III. N° 69. Leic.

[12] Eſch. 19 Ric. II. N° 52. Leic.

[13] Eſch. 1 Hen. IV. N° 71. Leic.

[14] Eſch. 8 Hen. IV. N° 76. Leic.

[15] Eſch. 1 Hen. VI. N° 51. Leic.

[16] Eſch. 16 Hen. VI. N° 60. Leic.

[17] Eſch. 33 Hen. VI. N° 28. Leic.

A petition of his ſon and ſucceſſor John Mowbray, duke of Norfolk, for permiſſion to borrow money on the ſecurity of his manor of Dalby Chacombe, and of his other landed property, has been already printed[2] from the Rolls of Parliament. He died in 1477, ſeiſed of this manor, which was held of the biſhop of Lincoln by knight's ſervice[3].

On the marriage of Richard of Shrewſbury duke of York and Norfolk, and earl Marſhal, to Anne daughter of John Mowbray late duke of Norfolk in 1477, the manor of Dalby Chaucombe was ſettled on Elizabeth widow of John the late duke[4].—From the Mowbrays this manor came by deſcent to Maurice lord Berkeley, who, in 1507, died ſeiſed (inter alia) of the manor of Dalby Chaucombe[5]; and Thomas lord Berkeley died ſeiſed of it in 1534, leaving Henry Berkeley his ſon and heir[6]; from whom the lordſhip has regularly deſcended, by intermarriages, to the preſent owner.

In 1564, there were 48 families in Great Dalby.

In 1586, it was found that William Hartopp, deceaſed, was ſeiſed of one piece of meadow in Dalby Magna, late in tenure of John Wiſeman; and that he held it of the queen in capite[7].

The freeholders here in 1630 were, Thomas Offley, Abraham Cooke, Arthur Franke, William Palmer, eſqrs.

In 1655, 1*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* was collected in Great Dalby, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont.

In 1720, 13 freeholders polled from this pariſh; and in 1775, we find only 7 names.

Of the antient reſidence of the Segraves and Mowbrays at this place the Hall-yards are ſtill to be diſtinguiſhed, on a level with the baſe of the church, and contiguous; conſiſting of 5 or 6 acres, divided into home-ſpots; one of which has a raiſed terrace round it, viſible and permanent at this day.

The lordſhip, containing about 2400 acres, was incloſed, without any act of parliament, in 1753; and the inhabitants in general live better now, than they did when the fields were in an open ſtate. Several have bought eſtates; and the value of the land in general is 20*s.* an acre; ſome of it ſtill higher.

Sir Charles Sedley, bart. of Nuthall, co. Notts, who died Aug. 25, 1778, gave this lordſhip, with ſeveral others[8], by will, to Sedley Burdett[9], eſq. (the ſecond ſon of his nephew Francis); intending them to be a proviſion for a ſecond branch of this antient family. But this unfortunate young gentleman, who was of an amiable character (his conduct and demeanor deſerving it) was, in October 1793, drowned, with his companion the lord viſcount Montague; taking into their heads the daring freak of ſailing down the river Rhine, in Germany, in the moſt boiſterous part of it, in a flat-bottomed punt, which turned topſy-turvy with them. Great Dalby in conſequence devolved to his elder brother (now ſir Francis Burdett, bart. M. P. for Burroughbridge in Yorkſhire) as heir at law.

The preſent number of houſes is about 60.

On the ſchool-houſe in the town-ſtreet:
“ This ſchool-houſe was erected anno Dom. 1787.”

Donations to the poor.

“ Mrs. Alice Hurſt, wife of Mr. Richard Hurſt, late of Barrowby, in the county of Lincoln, left by will 10*s.* yearly for ever to the poor of this pariſh; it being the place of her birth; and to be diſtributed among the poor on the firſt day of January yearly for ever by the overſeers of this pariſh.

William Pick, churchwarden, 1785.”

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	93	16	1
Expended in county rates, &c.	6	10	6
———— on the poor, —	87	5	7
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	2	2	0
Expended in litigations, —	11	1	1
Money raiſed for 1783, —	91	3	4
———————— 1784, —	92	0	10
———————— 1785, —	92	0	11
Medium of theſe three years,	91	15	0
———— of county expences,	9	13	0
———— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	0	0	0
———— of nett annual expences,	82	2	0
———— of attending on magiſtrates,	0	4	6
———— of entertainments at meetings,	0	0	0
———— of law expences, —	3	10	4
———— of ſetting the poor to work,	20	0	5

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 45.

Concerning this CHURCH, (ſee Plate XXXVI.)

which is dedicated to St. Swithin, the following entry[10] is preſerved in the pariſh-regiſter: “ The ſteeple, being an high ſpire, fell upon the body of the church, on the 2d day of January 1658, and brought to the ground the North aile and the middle aile, leaving only ſtanding part of the chancel and the South aile. It was very large and beautiful, the roof of the high leads counted the beſt carved work in all Leiceſterſhire. On the South part of the wall of the high leads were the arms of England and Mowbray. It fell on the very morning of the Lord's day, about one o'clock. It gave us warning all that night before, by ſtones falling down on the bells. I was told, in the year above, by a venerable old gentleman, a bachelor, whom I buried ſoon after at the age of 88, that, by tradition from father to ſon, he heard, they had rung the old year out, and new in, much and long, by uncommon exertions; and that it was a miraculous and providential eſcape, the ſteeple did not fall on the heads of the ringers, or, by a protraction of a ſmall portion of time, on the congregation aſſembled for Divine Worſhip.

Loſs of lead and glaſs, ...	£.260	0	0
Loſs of timber, ...	25	0	0
Bays of building, bell-frames, bell-floors, and ſeats, ...	360	0	0
Loſs of ſtone-work of the church, ſteeple, and chancel, ...	1000	0	0
Loſs of ſlating the chancel, ...	15	0	0
Sum total	1660	0	0

Atteſted (1658) by Francis Alderman, vicar; John Wartnaby, William Quenby, chuchwardens.”

It is traditionally ſtated on the ſpot, that the pariſh, upon this great loſs, ſent out two perſons of good addreſs, with a petition, well atteſted, containing the particulars; who not only made their application in the vicinity, but a great part of the kingdom; and thus obtained a large ſum of money towards rebuilding the edifice; but, having contracted a diſſipated life by their perambulation, and not frequently called upon to give an account of their commiſſion, they ran away with the whole ſum.

The church was afterwards re-built by a brief[11] and ſubſcription; ſome great families then in being, and connected with the lordſhip, contributing handſomely; and the deficiencies ſupplied by the chief freeholders and principal inhabitants. It is a handſome building, cut out of Gretton hard ſtone quarry. The tower, though low, of the ſame materials, and capable of carrying a ſpire, which probably will never be re-erected. It contains five bells, thus inſcribed:

---

[1] Eſch. 1 Edw. IV. N° 46. Leic.

[2] See it in vol. II. p. 138.

[3] Eſch. 17 Edw. IV. N° 58. Leic.

[4] Rot. Parl. (17 Edw. IV.) vol. VI. pp. 168, 169; and ſee pp. 227. 411.

[5] Dugdale, Bar. Angl. vol. I. p. 367.

[6] Eſch. 26 Hen. VIII.

[7] Eſch. 28 Eliz.

[8] See before, under Kirkby Beler, vol. II. p. 232.

[9] The venerable Sir Robert Burdett, who died March 15, 1797, in his 81ſt year, was twice married. By his firſt lady, who was an only ſiſter of the above-mentioned Sir Charles Sedley, he had three ſons; of whom, the eldeſt died young; and Francis the ſecond (who died in 1794) had two ſons; Sir Francis Burdett, bart. the preſent owner of Dalby; and Sedley Burdett, eſq. who died as above. By his ſecond lady, who was of the Rutland family, Sir Robert Burdett had no children.

[10] “‘This entry, which had been almoſt obliterated by time and other accidents, was reſtored by my own hand, by a Renovavit, under the ſignature of P. Hacket, Curate, 1771.”

[11] In 1661, there was collected at Hinckley, on this brief, 18*s.* 0½*d.*; at Burbach, 14*s.*; and at Howden in Yorkſhire, 9*s.* 11*d.*

1. "God will ſave his Church.—1684."

2. "Franſes Goodwin, anno Domini 1598."

3. The alphabet; and alſo, on a ſhield, three bells.

4. This and the fifth was re-caſt by ſubſcription [1]; John Wartnaby churchwarden. Thomas Hedderley fecit, Nottingham, 1784."

5. "I to the church the living call,
And to the grave do ſummons all."

"John Wartnaby, churchwarden. Thomas Hedderley fecit, Nottingham, 1784."

The windows in the upper ſtory of the tower are new and neat; the Weſt door, and windows over it, very handſome, old, arched, but all ſtopped up!

The South aile is a handſome building, of the ſame ſubſtantial ſtone with the tower.

In 1590, Mr. Wyrley ſays, "Dalby Magna ad honorem de Segrave pertinebat. Tria ſcuta admodum pulchra in Auſtrali extra eccleſiam videntur, viz. Rex, Leic', & Segrave. In eccleſiâ Segraiorum ſcutum ſupereminet."

On the outſide are four old ſhields, fig. 13—16.

1. Blank.

2. Sable, a lion rampant Arg. crowned Or, Segrave.

3. Gules, three lions paſſant guardant Or, a file with three labels Argent. Thomas de Brotherton earl of Norfolk.

4. Quarterly; France antient; 2. and 3. England; 4. France modern.

Over the porch, on the South ſide of the church:

"This porch was re-built in 1776;
Willm Wartnaby and Robert Sharp churchwardens."

The inſide conſiſts of a chancel, nave, and South aile, ſeparated by two large broad arches, and a plain pillar; three long, large windows on the South ſide, reaching from top to the bottom; the ſame on the North ſide, but the lower parts mortared up.

The chancel is poor and mean; and has a deſpicable Eaſt window of brick.

The old font is engraved in Plate XXXVI.

In the Matriculus of 1220 [2], Great Dalby is deſcribed to be under the patronage of the prior of Chaucomb; who held it in proprios uſus, and appointed a vicar, whoſe endowment may be ſeen in the Lincoln Regiſters.

In 1650, Dalby Chaucomb was returned as an impropriation; the rectory worth ......; the vicarage £20.; and the incumbent "ſufficient."

In 1344, the rectory was taxed at 16 marks, paid 2*s.* for Peter-pence, and 7*s.* 6¾*d.* for procurations. The vicarage was taxed at 4 marks. In 1534-5, the ſynodals were 3*s.* 8*d.*; and the value of the vicarage £8.

In the king's books Dalby Magna is entered as a diſcharged living. "Valet in decimis majoribus & minoribus, cum manſo, pomario, & aliis proficuis, 8*l.* 4*s.* 7*d.*;" clear yearly value £16.

The epiſcopal procurations are, for the rectory 1*s.* 8*d.*; the vicarage 1*s.*; the archidiaconal 3*s.* 6*d.*

The Feaſt-day, which formerly followed St. Swithin, was changed in 1792 to the firſt Sunday after Trinity.

VICARS.	PATRONS.
Hugh de Waterberkwe, 1232.	Prior and convent of Chaucomb.
Geoffrey de Mardefeld, 1238.
William de Seviſby, 1263.
Robert de Mardefeld, 1268.
Peter de Duncherch, 1272.
Thomas de Wyſtowe, 1286.
Hugh Swinton, 1534.
Robert Baker [3], 1562.
Thomas Watts.
Francis Alderman, 1658.
Timothy Carington, May 8, 1662.	George duke of Buckingham.
Thomas Peale, Dec. 19, 1681.	Sir Charles Sedley, bart.
George Henſon, Feb. 24, 1717.	King George I. by lapſe.
John Greatorex, March 12, 1757.	Sedley Burdett, eſq.
Thomas Nixon [4], M. A. April 21, 1761; died July 18, 1786.
John Dewe, 1786; reſigned 1796.	Sedley Burdett, eſq.
Mr. Nixon, junior, filius predicti, 1796.	Francis Burdett, eſq.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

In the chancel.

On flat ſtones:

1. "Here lie interred the remains of Elizabeth Lumley, wife of William Lumley, gent.; who departed this life March .... 1704."

2. "Here lieth the body of Miles Whitwick, of Burton Lazars, gent.
who died April 7, 1711, aged 56 years.
Alſo the body of three of his daughters,
Sarah, Katharine, and Martha, interred one year before."

Here are alſo two or three ſtones without inſcriptions.

In the church-yard:

"Here lieth the body of William Pick,
who departed this life Sept. 27, 1761,
aged 73 years.
Alſo Anne, the wife of William Pick;
ſhe died Dec. 26, 1762, aged 66 years.
In this cold bed here conſummated are
The ſecond nuptials of a happy pair,
Whom envious Death once parted, but in vain,
For now himſelf hath made them one again."

"Here lies interred the body of William Blower, who departed this life the 21ſt of November, 1773,
in the 88th year of his age.
In prime of life Induſtry mark'd his way,
And led him on to wealth with honeſty;
Which when obtain'd, his near relations ſhar'd
With him the fortune his induſtry rear'd,
By which his days were bleſs'd; and glad was he
To ſee in's life his friend's proſperity:
And, when Death call'd, his mind was well prepar'd
To obey the ſummons, to attend his Lord."

"William Blower died Aug. 4, 1714, aged 55.
Anne his wife, daughter of William and Ann Hodgkin, died Jan. 25, 1757, aged 92."

"John Brown, died April 2, 1765, aged 72."

---

[1] The Rev. Philip Hacket, 25 years curate of this pariſh, and rector of South Croxton, was a great promoter and ſubſcriber to this work; and, by the help of Mr. Wartnaby, a gentleman of good eſtate in Great Dalby, brought it to a completion.—"I had been before concerned in the bell-way, a good peal of which I much admire. At Prittlewell in Eſſex, where I was curate for a twelvemonth, I completed a peal of ſix, by raiſing a ſubſcription, and contributing myſelf. There were only five before. Theſe bells are a very pretty tuneable ſett; the new one by Pack; and the others that wanted it chipped. This new bell was filled with punch in the market-place, and chriſtened, as they were pleaſed to ſay, by the curate. P. H."

[2] See the Introductory Volume, p. lx.

[3] In the Certificate referred to under Allexton, p. 8, Mr. Baker is thus deſcribed: "Preſbyter, non conjugatus; competentèr doctus; reſidet; hoſpitalis; degit ibidem; non licentiatus, nec prædicat; nullum aliud habet."

[4] Rector alſo of Nuthall, and vicar of Hucknall, co. Notts. His death was occaſioned by a fall from his horſe about a month before, as he was paſſing by a mill; the horſe, taking fright at one of the wheels, unfortunately threw his rider.

DALBY ON THE WOULDS,

ſo named from its ſite (Ƿoulꝺ[1] in the Saxon language ſignifying an hill, mount, or high place), and commonly called Wold Dalby or Old Dalby, is ſeated on a bold and pleaſant eminence in the Northern edge of the county; and is bounded by Grimſton on the South, Wartnaby on the South-eaſt, Nether Broughton on the Eaſt, Willoughby on the Weſt, and Upper Broughton on the North. It is about 5 miles diſtant from Melton, and 15 from Leiceſter; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote.

At the time of the general ſurvey, Ralph the ſon of Hubert held of the King nine ploughlands in Dalbi; and Robert was his under-tenant. In the reign of Edward the Confeſſor, this land had been worth three pounds; and at the ſurvey was worth four pounds. It was equal to twelve ploughs. One was in the demeſne; and one knight, with two ſocmen, thirteen villans, and eight bordars, had ſeven ploughs. There was a meadow one mile long, and half a mile broad; and a ſpinney two furlongs long, and one broad[2].

Humfrey the Chamberlain held one ploughland here of the king. There were two ploughs and a half; one was employed in the demeſne; and three villans had half a plough. There were ſix acres of meadow[3].

Ansfrid alſo held one ploughland in Dalby, at the time of the ſurvey, under Roger de Buci, which in the reign of the Confeſſor had been valued at twelve pence, but was then worth three ſhillings. This land was equal to one plough, and employed three villans, with one bordar. There were ten acres of meadow[4].

Ralph Fitz Hubert, the ſeat of whoſe barony was at Criche, co. Derby[5], had iſſue Ralph, who in the time of king Henry I. gave four yard-lands in Hertſhorne, co. Derby, to the Knights Templars. To him ſucceeded Hubert Fitz Ralph in 1165, who gave to the monks of Derley, co. Derby, the advowſon of the church of Criche[6].

The manor of Old Dalby was given by Robert Boſſu earl of Leiceſter, in the time of king Henry II. to the Knights Hoſpitallers of Saint John of Jeruſalem (who had a preceptory here) in exchange for other lands; and in 1210 we find the following agreement:

"Hec eſt finalis concordia facta in curiâ d̄ni regis apud Eveſham, 29 die Julii, anno regni regis Johannis undecimo, coram d̄no rege, Simone de Pateſhull, Jacobo de Potherne, Henrico de Ponte Audomer, juſticiariis, & aliis fidelibus d̄ni regis tunc ibi preſentibus, inter Robertum priorem Hoſpitalis Jerl̄m in Angliâ petentem, per fratrem Robertum de Waii poſitum loco ſuo ad lucrandum vel perdendum, & Hubertum filium Rad̄i, per Robertum de Eincourt poſitum loco ſuo ad perdendum vel lucrandum, de feodo unius militis, cum pertinentiis, in Dauby de Wauz, in com' Leic'; unde placitum warantie charte fuit inter eos in eâdem curiâ; ſcilicet, quòd idem Hubertus recognovit predictum feodum unius militis, cum pertinentiis, eſſe jus predicti prioris & fratrum predicti Hoſpitalis, habendum & eiſdem priori & fratribus, & eorum ſucceſſoribus, & sc̄e domui Hoſpitalis Jerl̄m, in liberam, puram, & perpetuam eleemoſinam; & ipſe eis warantizavit tam feodum illud, quàm ſervitium illius feodi; ita tamen quòd predicti prior & fratres, & eorum ſucceſſores, acquietabunt eundem Hubertum & heredes ſuos verſùs omnes gentes in perpetuum de ſervitio quod ad feodum illud pertinet; & pro hâc acquietatione idem Hubertus dedit & conceſſit predictis fratribus totum tenementum quod Paganus filius Swani de eo tenuit in Röele, cum ipſo Pagano, & cum totâ ſequelâ ſua, ſcil', unam bovatam terre quam Gaufridus filius Herward tenuit in eâdem villâ, cum tofto & crofto, & gardino, & cum omnibus pertinentiis & libertatibus ad eandem bovatam pertinentibus, &, ad incrementum illius bovate, quatuor acras terre quas idem Gaufridus tenuit in Sudſtubbinges, & illud toftum quod eſt proximum predicto tofto verſùs Aquilonem, & unam acram terre & dimidiam que abuttant predicto gardino verſùs Auſtrum, & quinque acras terre juxta Glappewellegrif, & duas acras in Strethelbut, & quatuor acras apud Dalewang, & tres acras ad caput de Dalewang, & quatuor acras apud Poſelandeſick, & dimidiam bovatam terre cum tofto adjacente, & aliis pertinentiis ſuis, que Rogerus filius Roberti tenuit in eâdem villâ; habend' & tenend' eidem priori & eiſdem fratribus, & eorum ſucceſſoribus, & sc̄e domui Hoſpitalis Jerl̄m, in liberam, puram, & perpetuam eleemoſinam, quietam ab omni ſeculari ſervitio & exactione; & idem Hubertus & heredes ſui warantizabunt predictis priori & fratribus, & eorum ſucceſſoribus, totum predictum tenementum quod Paganus filius Swani tenuit in Röele verſùs omnes gentes. Et hec concordia facta fuit, preſente predicto Pagano & concedente. Idem etiam Hubertus dedit & conceſſit eiſdem priori & fratribus, & sc̄e domui Hoſpitalis Jerl̄m, octo acras terre, cum pertinentiis, in Siäidhuges, quas Rogerus filius Steivulfi tenuit, ſicut illas que pertinent ad tenementum quod idem Paganus tenuit in Röele; habendas & tenendas eiſdem priori & fratribus, & eorum ſucceſſoribus, in liberam, puram, & perpetuam eleemoſinam[7]."

"This religious order of the Knights Hoſpitallers began about 1124, after the recovery of Jeruſalem by that famous Godfrey of Bulloigne and the Chriſtian Princes. At their firſt inſtitution[8] they were, by ſolemn oath, bound to ſerve pilgrims and other poor paſſengers in the hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem, which was then the chief ſeat of their order[9]. But, that city being taken by the Saracens in 1187, and the Chriſtians not long after expelled the Holy Land, they conquered the Iſle of Rhodes about the year 1308, making the city of Rhodes[10] their chief ſeat; which they valiantly maintained, againſt all the aſſaults of the Mahometans, till the year 1522; when Solyman the Magnificent (the Turkiſh emperor), after a long and bloody ſiege (they having in vain implored the aſſiſtance of the Chriſtian princes) forced them to a ſurrender; the knights removing to the Iſle of Malta, which was then given them by the Emperor Charles the Fifth, and was after bravely defended by them againſt the forces of the ſaid Solyman in the memorable ſiege of 1566. It hath ſince been ſtrengthened and beautified with a new city, and is at this day (1642) accounted one of the ſtrongeſt bulwarks of Chriſtendom[1]. The chief ſeat of this order in England was in the Weſt ſuburbs of London near Smithfield[2], where they had a fair church and ſtately palace[3].

---

[1] "See what is ſaid on the Wolds under Waltham, vol. II. p. 379.—In King Lear, I would read,

St. Wennole wended o'er the Wole;
He met the night-mare, and her night-foal.

The Saint is well known in Norfolk. Mares have never nine foals." G. A.

[2] "Radulfus filius Huberti tenet de Rege 9 carucatas terræ in Dalbi, & Robertus de eo. Terra eſt 12 carucarum. In dominico eſt una; & unus miles, cum 2 ſochmannis, 13 villanis, & 8 bordariis, habent 7 carucas. Pratum ibi 1 leuvæ longitudinis, & dimidiæ leuvæ latitudinis. Spinetum 2 quarentenarum longitudinis, & 1 quarentenæ latitudinis. Valuit 3 libras; modò 4 libras." Domeſday, fol. 235. a. 1.

[3] "Humfridus Camerarius tenet de Rege in Dalbi 1 carucatam terræ. Ibi fuerunt 2 carucæ & dimidia. In dominico eſt una; & 3 villani habent dimidiam carucam. Ibi 6 acræ prati." Ibid. fol. 236. a. 1.

[4] "Ansfridus tenet 1 carucatam terræ in Dalbi de R[ogero]. Terra eſt 1 carucæ. Ibi ſunt iii villani, cum 1 bordario; & 10 acræ prati. Valuit 12 denarios; modò 3 ſolidos." Ibid. fol. 234. b. 1.

[5] See Thoroton's Nottinghamſhire, p. 43.

[6] To whom ſucceeded . . . . . the ſon and heir of Julian his daughter, whoſe marriage was by the king in 1222 granted to Philip Mare, then a great man in Nottinghamſhire. Rot. Fin. 6 Hen. III. m. 1.

[7] Ex collectionibus St. Lo. Kniveton.

[8] This appears from Gregorius Tholoſarius, lib. xv. Syntagm. cap. 34.

[9] "This order grew to ſo great an eſtate and wonderful riches, that they had within Chriſtendom, in the year 1240, 19,000 lordſhips or manors: of which order, as of their eſtate, greatneſs, ordinances, valour, and worthy acts by them done againſt the Turks, Saracens, Arabians, and Pagans, Henry Panteleon hath written a great volume for 600 years, printed at Baſil 1581."

[10] "Which city was famous for two things; firſt, for the ſite and ſtrength thereof, ſtanding upon the ſea, and encompaſſed with treble ſtrong walls and trenches, having an exceeding large and ſafe haven at the very entrance into the city, the plot whereof is ſet down in Brune's [Braun's] Theatre of Cities, part I. Map 50; next, for that great and huge moles or ſtatue called the Coloſſus,

The profeſſion of this religious order was, to defend Chriſtianity againſt Pagans, and to fight for the Church. They uſed for their habit a black upper-garment, with a white croſs in the fore part thereof. None were to be admitted that were of a defamed life, or without being gentlemen by blood. The prior eſpecially was required to be a gentleman by deſcent; and was ſtyled Primus Baro Angliæ[4].

"It is not long ſince I ſaw a manuſcript of certain acts and ordinances made by this order, as alſo of the valuation or rental of all their lands in England, made, as it ſeems, 46 Edward III, which is now in the cuſtody of Walter Fowler, eſq. of St. Thomas near Stafford, and was lent to me by the learned and my very good friend maſter Thomas Allen, of Glouceſter-hall of Oxford; out of which I tranſcribed the following lines relative to the preceptory of Dalby[5].

"Anno Domini 1371, 12 Junii, venerabilis vir dominus Raimundus Berengarii, magnus preceptor ſacre domûs Sc̄i Johannis Jeruſalem, & locum-tenens reverendiſſimi domini fratris Rogeri de Dinibus, ſacre domûs ejuſdem hoſpitalis magiſtri digniſſimi, & ejus honorabilis conventûs, ac viſitator generalis in partibus Anglie & Hibernie, & ceteris partibus ciſmarinis, applicuit regnum Anglie & civitatem London', in quo regno Anglie & prioratu, viz. in domo de Shengey, priorat' Anglie predict', in aſſembleiâ tentâ & celebratâ ibidem juſſu & mandato prenominati prioris & preceptoris magni, locum-tenentis & viſitatoris, in eodem anno, in feſto Sc̄orum Simonis & Jude, 28 die Octobris, per eundem domini magiſtri locum-tenentem & viſitatorem, de & cum conſilio & aſſenſu venerabilis viri domini fratris Johannis Paveley, prioris ejuſdem hoſpitalis in Angliâ ſuo nomine, fratris Johannis de Dalton prioris eccleſie Fontis Clericorum, fratris Willielmi Middleton locum-tenentis Tricoplerii & preceptoris de Willoughton & Beverley, fratris Rogeri de Middleton preceptoris de Dynnemore, fratris Ricardi de Wirkeby preceptoris de Eigle, fratris Roberti Hales preceptoris de Stebach & Samford, fratris Johannis de Dingley preceptoris de Dalby & Rotheley, fratris Michaelis Macy preceptoris de Quennington, fratris Willielmi de Hulles preceptoris de Badeſley, fratris Johannis de Dampford preceptoris de Shengey, fratris Johannis Deyville preceptoris de Ribſton, fratris Roberti de Normanton preceptoris de Baleſhall; ipſorum nominibus & vice ceterorum preceptorum prioratûm jam abſentium, à quibus abſentibus de noſtro conſilio habebant poteſtatem ad omnia infra-ſcripta ordinananda, que fuerunt per preceptores decreta; preſtiterunt juramentum, cruce ipſorum habitum manu tactâ; fuerunt infra-ſcripta propoſita & prolocuta, ut infra, &c.:

Preceptorium de Dalby.

Redditus de Walton valet per annum 3lī. 14s̄. 8đ. ob̄.

Redditus de Oſgathorpe valet per annum 16s̄. 3đ.

Redditus de Swannington valet per annum 8s̄. 6đ.

Manerium de Hether, viz. terra, pratum, & paſtura, eidem manerio pertin', dimiſſa ad firmam per annum — — — 46s̄. 8đ.

Molendinum fullatorium ibidem dimittitur per ann' 13s̄. 4đ.

Molendinum aquaticum ibidem dimittitu rad firmam per annum — — — 50s̄.

Redditus de Hether valet per annum 7lī. 11s̄. 3đ.

Redditus iſtarum, Thorpe, Weſton, Coſby, Sutton juxta Broughton Aſtlea, & Sharneford, valet per annum — — — 42s̄. 1đ.

Redditus iſtarum villarum, Leire, Aſhby, Abkettleby, Holowell, Seuſterne, Bukminſter, Statherne, Hardby, & Howes, valet per annum 6lī. 4s̄. 2đ.

Redditus iſtarum villarum, Braunſton, Plungar, Broughton, Grimſton, Saxulby, Edmerthorpe, Billingburough[6], Kirby Bellers, Eſthorpe, valet per annum — — 6lī. 5s̄. 4đ. ob̄.

Redditus de Billeſdon, Foxton, Halughton, Blaſon, Thedingworth, South Kinelingworth, Moueſly, Queniburrow, Aſhby Folvile, Gaddeſby, Burſtall, Onlep, & Thurgarſton, valet per annum 31s̄.

Redditus iſtarum villarum, Butteſwel, Lutterworth, Stormeſworth, Poultney, Walton, Kilby, Sheveſby, Scaldeford, valet per annum — 6lī. 4s̄. 8đ.

Redditus de Swirkeſton, Nether Seile, Over Seile, Twicros, Billeſton, Shenton, Kirkby Malory, valet per annum — 24s̄. 2đ. & dim' libra piperis.

Redditus de Cotes, Houghton, Preſtwold, Burton ſur le Would, Wimeſwould, Willoughby ſur le Would, valet per annum — 3lī. 10s̄. ob̄.

Annualis penſio eccleſie de Aſhby Parvâ 6s̄.

Annualis penſio eccleſie de Ramſton — 6s̄.

Redditus de Dalby valet per annum 6lī. 9s̄. 4đ.

Molendinum ventriticum ibidem dimittitur ad firmam —— —— xs̄.

Rectoria de Dalby valet per annum — 100s̄.

Subboſcus de Dalby valet per annum 40s̄.

Fraeria ibidem dimittitur ad firmam per an' pro 20lī.

Perquiſita curie de Dalby valent per annum 52s̄. 3đ.

Paſtura de Widenpole dimittitur ad firmam per annum ad — — — 40s̄.

Dominium de Beaumont dimittitur ad firmam pro xxlī.

Ad manerium de Dalby pertinent 12 carucate terre, unde ſuſtentari poſſunt 60 vacce, 60 boviculi, 1200 oves utriuſque ſexûs, & 10 porci & porcelli.

Summa totalis receptûs, 103lī. 16s̄. 7đ. ob̄. q̄.

Et ſic in marcis, 155 marc. 9s̄. 11đ. ob̄. q̄.

Dalby cum Beaumont, & cum terrâ Walleis, LXII marc'; & ſolvit priori de Ware 20s̄. pro penſione.

Coloſſus, (ſee Andrew Favin's Deſcription hereof, agreeing with this, in his Theatre of Honour, fol. 390.) made to the proportion of a man (in honour of the Sun) by Chares the ſcholar of Lyſippus, that excellent ſtatuary and founder, ſo much admired by king Alexander the Great, wrought in copper in the ſpace of 12 years, at the charge of 300 talents of gold, by the appointment of Demetrius king of Macedon, about 300 and odd years before the Incarnation of Chriſt. It was of the height of 70 cubits (or 35 yards), and ſet (as ſome write) with the feet ſtanding upon two rocks at the very mouth of the haven, under which the greateſt ſhip might paſs in her ruff without vailing or ſtriking ſail. In one hand it held a pike; in the other a ſword; upon his breaſt a looking-glaſs, wherein ſuch as inhabited this iſland were able to diſcover afar off what ſhips came to arrive in the port. It fell down by an earthquake about 56 years after the raiſing of it; and, ſo lying (as Pliny reporteth, Nat. Hiſt. lib. xxxv. cap. 7.) it yielded greater wonder to the beholders; for, the circumference of the thumbs was ſuch, that few men could fathom them; the fingers equalled ordinary ſtatues; within the body were ſeen great huge ſtones of a mighty bigneſs, with which the whole body was poiſed; and, amongſt the Seven Wonders of the World, this was accounted the greateſt. It was ſet up again, and ſo ſtood till the year of our Lord 655; at which time (as George Cedrenus, a Grecian, in his Annals, fol. 335, reporteth) Moavias, by Cedrenus called Mabias, the caliph of Egypt and Syria, having gotten a great victory of Conſtantius the emperor, ſon of Heraclitus the emperor, won the whole iſle of Rhodes, and overthrew this Coloſſus, after it had ſtood (from the firſt erection thereof) almoſt 1000 years, but, as Cedrenus ſaith, 1365 years; with the copper thereof he loaded 900 camels, and brought it by land to Alexandria in Egypt. In imitation hereof (as Pliny reporteth, lib. xxxv. cap. 7.), the emperor Nero cauſed his ſtatue to be made 120 feet high. Of this Coloſſus the Rhodians were called Coloſſians, to whom by that name St. Paul (as Cedrenus is of opinion) wrote his Epiſtle from Rome, who had been before at Rhodes, as it appeareth by Acts xxi. 1." Burton, p. 84.—The Rhodians are called Coloſſians in Sandys's Travels performed in 1620; p. 71. ed. 5; but Cedrenus blundered egregiouſly in not recollecting that the Coloſſians, to whom St. Paul directed his epiſtle, were inhabitants of Coloſſæ [Κολοσσαι] the capital of Phrygia.

[1] Burton, MS.

[2] Founded by Jordan Briſet very early in the twelfth century.

[3] The ſeal uſed by this priory in 1189 is given in plate XXXIX. fig. 7. from a deed by which "G. de Neap' prior & totum capitulum fratrum Hoſpitalis Jer'l'm in Angliâ" entered into an obligation that divine ſervice ſhould daily be performed "in capellâ Will' fil' Nigell' apud Swerling." See Madox's Collections, Muſ. Brit. 4527. Plut. XIX. G. p. 1.

[4] Willis, vol. I. p. 129.

[5] Burton, MS.

[6] Q. ubi; ſi non in agro Linc'? Vide Mon. Angl. tom. II. p. 806. a. l. 28.

Onus preceptoris de Dalby.

In viſitatione domini prioris pro duobus diebus 40s̄.
In denariis capituli —— 40s̄. 10đ.
In ſeuag' procuratis pro eccleſiâ ibidem 6s̄. 8đ. ob̄. q̄.
Iterum priori de Ware, pro terris in Beaumont, per annum — — — — 20s̄.
In ſtipendiis unius capellani per annum 53s̄. 4đ.
In feodis ſeneſchalli & ſubſeneſchalli per annum 3lī. 16s̄. 8đ.
In ſtipendiis cuſtodum boſcorum & paſturarum 26s̄. 8đ.
Summa totius oneris, 14lī. 13s̄. ob̄. q̄.
Et ſic in marcis, 21 marc. 13s̄. ob̄. q̄."

Old Dalby is not noticed in the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about the year 1240; but, in the Itinerary of 1280, it anſwered collectively as one vill, with Asfordby, Saxulby, and Shouldby.

Certain lands within the preceptory of Dalby and three bovates in Broughton were held of the abbot of Croxton, as lord of Broughton [1].

A diſtinct manor within the lordſhip of Dalby was antiently the inheritance of the family of Walleis, by grant from Robert Boſſu earl of Leiceſter; and, in 1314, king Edward II. granted, at the inſtance of Roger le Brabazon, to Oliver Waleis and his heirs liberty of free-warren in all their demeſne lands at Dalby ſuper Waleas and Swithland. "Hiis teſtibus; venerabilibus patribus, W. archiepiſcopo Cantuar', totius Anglie primate; J. Norwicen' epiſcopo; Adomaro de Valentiâ, com' Pembrochie; Humf' de Bohun, com' Hereford' & Eſſex'; Hugone le Diſpenſer ſeniore; Barth' de Badleſmere; Rad' Baſſet; Joh' de Crumbwell, ſeneſcallo hoſpitii noſtri; & aliis. Dat' per manum noſtram, apud Weſtm', xxvi° die Junii. Per ipſum regem [2]."

The Knights Hoſpitallers were ſo highly eſteemed, that, in 1322, they obtained, by authority of an act of parliament, the ſeveral poſſeſſions of the Knights Templars[3], who had a few years before (in 1312) been ſuppreſſed by pope Clement V. on the ground of various enormities[4]; and at the ſame time the ſoke of Rothley was appended to the preceptory of Dalby, under the ſtyle of "The Commandery of Dalby and Rothley."

In 1346, the prior of the Hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 20*s.* for half a knight's fee in Dalby and Saxulby, parcel of the honour of Leiceſter [5].

The laſt of the family of Walleis who had any eſtate at Old Dalby was ſir John le Walleis, knight [6]; who in 1352 exchanged this manor with the Knights Hoſpitallers of St. John of Jeruſalem in England, for that of Thurmeton (now Thrumpton), co. Nott. an eſpecial licence having been granted for that purpoſe [7]; and it was found, on this occaſion, that the manor of Dalby was held under Hugo Meynill, by the ſervice of one roſe annually [8].

In 1407, William ſon of Hugo Meynill of Langley died ſeiſed of a manor at Dalby on the Wolds [9]; and, on occaſion of his death, the following proceſs occurs:

"Prior Sc̄i Joh̄is Jeruſalem eat ſine die verſùs dominum regem, qui ipſum implacitavit pro perquiſitione manerii de Dalby ſuper le Wold ſine licentiâ. Ipſe prefert cartam regis Edwardi Tertii de licentiâ conceſſâ, quòd ipſe poſſit concedere manerium de Thurmeton, in com' Nott', Joh̄i Walleys, in excambium pro predicto manerio de Dalby [10]."

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Old Dalby was rated at 2*l.* 10*s.*; and in the ſubſidy of 1445 at the ſame ſum, but an abatement was then made of 3*s.*

In the "Regiſtrum cartarum, indenturarum, &c. de domibus & terris hoſpitalis S. Joannis Jeruſalem in Angliâ ad firmam dimiſſis, ab anno 1503 ad annum 1526 [11]," are the following leaſes:

1. The right worſhipfull brother ſir Thomas Newport, bailiff of the Eagle, and commander of the commandery of Dalby and Rothley, was called to the ſervice of their religion, by the lieutenant-maſter and convent of the order, by their bull under lead, bearing date at Rhodes, Sept. 2, 1503; with full authority to anticipate to his uſe the fruits and revenues of his commandery for the term of three years; on which ſecurity 100 marks were lent him by John Harfray, clerk, parſon of Over Broughton, co. Nottingham; a warrant for whoſe re-payment is preſerved in the Regiſter of the priory, dated 28 June, 1505.

2. June 28, 1505, in conſideration of the eminent ſervices of Thomas Newport, preceptor of Dalby and Rothley, who with great trouble and expence had recovered for the priory of St. John the manor of Hether from Robert Kingſton, of the annual value of 10*l.* a leaſe of this manor was granted for life to his brother Robert Newport, a knight of Rhodes, at an annual rent of 16*s.* 8*d.* to be paid at the preceptory of Dalby.

3. The ſame day a leaſe was granted, to the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter, of The Temple Lands at Bagrave [12].

4. A leaſe for life of the hoſpital at Boſton, in Lincolnſhire, was let to Thomas Cranoe, prieſt, for 4*l.* a year, and of the parſonage there for 27*l.*; the whole rent to be paid yearly, on the feaſt of St. Barnabas the Apoſtle, to the commander of Dalby.

5. Roger Temple, of Barton ſubtus Nede, com' Staſford, who held under the prior and brethren of St. John's, as his anceſtors had long done, certain lands and tenements at Temple juxta Welleſburg, at an annual rent of 5 marks, obtained a grant of the ſame lands, July 1, 1512, to himſelf and his heirs for ever, at a rent of 4 marks, to be paid yearly at Rothley; with exemption from every other payment, except that of four marks, nomine relevii, on the death of every tenant.

6. A leaſe for 99 years was granted, 24 April 1514, to John Belton, abbot of Olveſton, and his convent, of certain tofts and crofts, and two yard-lands, in North Marfelde, being the lands belonging to the lordſhip of Rothley, the rent payable to the commander of the commandery of Dalby and Rothley, 50*s.*; and, in lieu of the cuſtomary payments due to the cuſtom of the ſoke of Rothley on the change of a tenant, the abbey was to pay 13*s.* 4*d.* on the death or change of every abbot.

7. The reverſion of a leaſe for 50 years to Richard Cave, of Stanford, gent. of the manor and rectory of

---

[1] Croxton Regiſter.

[2] Cart. 9 Edw. II. n. 2.

[3] For a more particular account of the Templars and their poſſeſſions ſee hereafter, under Rothley.

[4] "It is ſtrange, that, if the Knights Templars gave umbrage by their vaſt poſſeſſions, the whole ſhould be given to the Knights Hoſpitallers, who were rich enough before, without any proviſion made for increaſing their number, &c. &c. But the grant for ſuppreſſion of religious houſes ſwept them alſo away." G. A.—"Browne Willis ſays, that, upon the ſuppreſſion of the Knights Templars, the beſt part of their lands were given to the Knights Hoſpitallers. Admitting however, which may not have been really the caſe, that the Knights Hoſpitallers obtained in England all the poſſeſſions that had belonged to the Knights Templars, they certainly did not ſucceed to them in other countries. For, according to Moſheim (Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, vol. III. p. 208.) a part only of their revenues was beſtowed upon other orders, eſpecially on the Knights of St. John, now of Malta; and the reſt confiſcated to the reſpective treaſuries of the ſovereign princes in whoſe dominions their poſſeſſions lay. It is ſuggeſted by Moſheim, that Philip of France, the principal accuſer of the Knights Templars, was prompted by mercenary motives to induce the pope to ſuppreſs the order, and that Clement V. was an avaritious, as well as vindictive and turbulent prince; an innuendo implying that the pontiff himſelf had a ſhare of the ſpoil. A reaſon for the preference given to the Knights Hoſpitallers ſeems to have been, that theſe immenſe poſſeſſions had been given for the maintenance and the defence of the pilgrims to the Holy Sepulchre; a practice that was prevalent at the beginning of the fourteenth century. And might not the pope ſtill flatter himſelf that there would be another cruiſade formed upon the prepoſterous notion of recovering the Holy Land by the united force of arms of the European princes?" S. D.

[5] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[6] MS. Chetwynd.

[7] Clauſ. 26 Edw. III. pars 1. m. 116; and Rot. Pat. 26 Edw. III. pars 1. m. 6. de excambio hujus manerii cum Thurmeton. See Peck's MSS. vol. IV. (Harl. MSS. 4937), p. 107.

[8] Eſch. 26 Edw. III. N° 25. Leic.

[9] Eſch. 9 Hen. IV. N° 5. Leic.

[10] Placita coram rege, Term. Trinit. anno 9 Hen. IV. Rot. 9. in Recept. Scaccarii.

[11] Cotton MSS; Claudius E. VI.

[12] See farther particulars under the account of that village.

Swinford, with all their meſſuages, lands, and other appurtenances, "exceptis boſcis & ſubboſcis, wardis, maritagiis, releviis, & eſchaetis;" which were reſerved to the priory of St. John, and to the preceptory of Dyngley in Northamptonſhire. The rent, to be paid to the preceptory of Dingley, 17*l.* ſterling. Dated Oct. 2, 1519.

8. A leaſe to Andrew Nowell, of Dalby, gentleman, for the term of his life, of the rectory of Rothley; dated at their houſe of St. John, at Clerkenwell, near London, July 7, 1524; rent, £12. ſterling.

9. Brother John Babington, preceptor of Dalby and Rothley, perſonally attending a chapter of the order at Clerkenwell, May 1, 1526, was permitted to anticipate the revenues of his preceptory for three years; for which purpoſe, a leaſe for that term was granted to Humfrey Babington, eſq. Anthony Vinald, merchant of Genoa, and Dr. John Mabilfreyn, a brother of their houſe, on a rent of 57*l.* 5*s.* 1¾*d.* for the two firſt years, and of 200*l.* for the third year, of the whole Preceptory, with all its rights, except only the woods, under-woods, oblations, advowſons, wardſhips, marriages, eſcheats, reliefs, naives, penſions, heriotts, and mortuaries.

10. A leaſe to Richard Robinſon, of Dalby on the Wold, yeoman, and Alice his wife, for the joint lives of themſelves and one of their ſons, of a meſſuage, two barns, a cow-houſe, and a waſte piece of land (vaſternum), with two cloſes, three virgates of land, &c. in the town and fields of Dalby on the Wold; conſtituting him alſo keeper of all the woods in Dalby belonging to the preceptory, for which he was to have "decem plauſtrata bonorum focalium, & unam togam de ſectâ valettorum preceptoris dicte preceptorie de Dalby pro tempore exiſtentis;" dated May 1, 1526; rent, 42*s.* ſterling.

11. To Barnaby and Baldwyn Somer, of Loughborough, gentlemen, a leaſe of the tithes of the villages of Grymeſton, Cawdewell, and Wycame; dated May 1, 1526; rent, 9*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*[1]

The ſeal of the prior of the Hoſpital of Jeruſalem in England, repreſented in Plate XXXIX. fig. 8, is that uſed by William Hulles, prior in the reign of king Henry VI. of England, and by Thomas Docwra, prior in the reign of king Henry VIII. The ſeals are both alike in the interior part. On the reverſe of each of theſe ſeals there is a privy ſeal, or counter-ſeal; each impreſſed with a ſhield of arms. But theſe counter-ſeals are both of them ſo ſmall, and preſſed ſo deeply into the wax, that they are indiſtinct. The inſtrument, to which the ſeal uſed by William Hulles is, begins thus: "Omnibus Chriſti fidelibus hoc ſcriptum indentatum viſuris vel auditurris, frater Willielmus Hulles, prior Hoſpitalis Sancti Johannis Jeruſalem in Angliâ, & ejuſdem Hoſpitalis confratres, ſalutem in Domino ſempiternam.——conceſſiſſe & confirmâſſe priori & conventui domûs ſalutationis prope Londoniam"——and ends thus: "Datum in domo noſtrâ de Clerkenwell, in celebratione capituli noſtri ibidem, die Martis, decimo-nono die menſis Junii, anno Domini milleſimo-cccc°-triceſimo-primo, & anno regni regis Henrici Sexti poſt Conqueſtum nono."—The inſtrument, to which the ſeal uſed by Thomas Docwra is affixed, beginning thus: "Omnibus Chriſti fidelibus, ad quos preſens ſcriptum indentatum pervenerit, frater Thomas Docwra, prior Hoſpitalis Sancti Johannis Jeruſalem in Angliâ, & ejuſdem prioris confratres, ſalutem in Domino ſempiternam." It is a grant to Antony de Viualdis of a corrody, a gown, and a yearly penſion in their houſe. It ends: "Datum apud domum noſtram Sancti Johannis de Clerkenwell, in capitulo ibi celebrato, ſeptimo die menſis Julii, anno Domini milleſimo-quingenteſimo-viceſimo-quarto, & anno regni regis Henrici Octavi ſexto-decimo."—Both theſe inſtruments do remain in the treaſury of the Court of Augmentations this preſent year, 1721[2].

The following inedited paper will throw ſome light on this long celebrated religious order:

"The ꝑſonall anſwers of Syr Thomas Dyngley[3] to the poſycyons of Syr Ambros Cave[4].

To the firſte, he belewythe yt to be true.

To the ſeconde, he belewythe yt to be true.

To the thyrde, he belewythe yt to be true.

To the fourthe he ſaythe that, by the lawe, ſtabylymentys, and auncyent cuſtumes of the relygyon of Seint John's, the grete maſter of the ſame religyon, oones every fyve yeres after his eleccyon, duryinge the tyme of his incumbencye in the chyefe maiſterſhip of the ſaid religyon, may, of his mere right, gyve, in every realme or nacyon chryſtened, where thordur of Seint John's hathe poſſeſſyons, any one commaundry of grace, beinge voyde by deathe or otherwyſe, to any of the knyghtys of the ſaid relygyon, auncyent and benemerent, beinge of the ſame realme or nacyon where the ſayd commaundry vakythe; and that w^{t}out the conſent or counſell of the brethrern or convent of the ſayd relygyon, as he belevythe. And that alſo every prior and caſtylan, deimpoſte of the ſayd relygyon, throughe all realmes and natyons chryſtened, as ys byforeſayd, by the lawe, ſtabylymentys, and cuſtumes byforeſayd, may, in certeyn caſes well knowen amonge the priours and knyghtys or brethern of the ſayd relygyon, gyve any one commaundry, beinge vacant, w^{t}in the compaſſe or precincte of his pryory, and that w^{t}out the conſent or counſell of the grete mayſter, and alſo w^{t}out the conſent or counſell of the lyveten^{u}nt, m^r, or brethern of the ſayd relygyon, as he belevythe. Over and beſydes whiche caſes before expreſſyd, he belevythe the gyfte and dyſpoſycyon of all other commaundrys of the forſayd relygyon, beinge voyde, to apperteyne and belong to the grete m^r and cōvent of the ſayd relygyon lykewyſe, as in this poſycyon ys conteynyd; and, otherwiſe, he belevythe the ſame poſycyon to be untrue in every parte and parcel therof.

To the fyfte he ſaythe, that, when the grete m^r of the ſayd religyon ys choſen, and the ſame m^r, ſo choſen, not preſent amonge the convent electours the tyme of his eleccyon, the counſell complete choſythe one lyvetn^{u}nt-maiſter of the ſayd relygyon, whiche, ſo choſen and elected, may, by the counſell and conſent of the ſaid convent, doo, ſpede, and excyſe all things about the collacyons, dyſpoſycyons, and provyſyons of the vacant commaundryes of the forſayd relygyon, beyng out of the caſes byfore expreſſyd lykewiſe, as in this poſycyon ys conteynyd; and, otherwyſe, he belewythe the ſame poſycyon to be untrue in every ꝑte and ꝑcell therof.

To the ſyxte and ſevynthe, he belevythe them to be true.

To the viiijth, nynthe, and tenthe, he belevythe them to be untrue in every ꝑte and ꝑcell therof.

To the xjth he ſaythe, that he was, and yet ys, in reall and peſſable poſſeſſyon of the commaundry of Shyngay; and otherwyſe he belevythe this poſycyon to be untrue in every ꝑte and ꝑcell therof.

To the xijth, xiijth, and xiiijth, he referryth hym to the kyngys l̄res of commyſſyon, and to thactys of the courte in that behalf.

To the xvth and xvjth he ſaythe, that he is of Southamptonſhyre, and true ſubjecte to the kyngys hyghnes, and of hys gracys juryſdyccyon; and that the ſame ys and goythe upon ſuche thinges as he hathe byfore grauntyd; and otherwyſe he belevythe the ſame poſycyons not to be true in any parte or parcell therof[5]."

The preceptory of Dalby and Rothley, with their manor of Hether, were returned by the commiſſioners to be worth, in ſpiritualities and temporalities, the clear annual ſum of £231. 7*s.* 10*d.*; and the revenues of the commandery of Old Dalby amounted to £103. 16*s.* 7½*d.* a year, or £91. 2*s.* 8*d.* clear[6].

---

[1] Cotton MSS. Nero E. VI. pp. xii. xxi. xxv. ccl. cclviii. cclxxxviii.

[2] Madox's Collections relative to Religious Houſes, Muſ. Brit. 4527. Plut. XIX. G. p. 2.

[3] Of the family probably which took their name from the village of Dingley in Northamptonſhire, where the Knights Hoſpitallers had a commandery, or preceptory; greateſt part of which, though ſomewhat modernized, remains, and is now the ſeat of John Peach Hungerford, eſq. who for ſeveral years moſt honourably repreſented the county of Leiceſter in parliament.

[4] Sir Ambroſe Cave had a penſion of £66. 13*s.* 4*d.* as a Knight Hoſpitaller.

[5] Cotton MSS. Cleopatra E. IV. fol. 141.

[6] For the particulars, ſee the original ſurvey in the Firſt Fruits Office.

"For ſome ages, it was extolled as the higheſt expreſſion of devotion, and a reverence to our Saviour, to go and view the places of his abode; and chiefly the places where he was crucified, buried, and aſcended to heaven. Upon which, many entered into a religious knighthood, who were to defend the Holy Land, and conduct the pilgrims. Thoſe were of two ſorts; the Knights Templars and Hoſpitallers. The former were the greater and richer; but the other were alſo very conſiderable. The popes and their clergy did every where animate all princes and great perſons to undertake expeditions into theſe parts, which were very coſtly and dangerous, and proved fatal to almoſt all the princes that made them. Yet the belief of the pains of purgatory, from which all were delivered by the pope's power who went on this expedition; ſuch as died in it being alſo reckoned martyrs, wrought wonderfully on a blind and ſuperſtitious age. But ſuch as could not go were perſuaded, that, if on their death-beds they vowed to go upon their recovery, and left ſome lands to maintain a knight that ſhould go thither and fight againſt the infidels, it would do as well. Upon this, great and vaſt endowments were made. But there were many complaints made of the Templars, for betraying and robbing the pilgrims, and other horrid abuſes, which may reaſonably be believed to have been true; though other writers of that age lay the blame rather on the covetouſneſs of the king of France, and the pope's malice to them: Yet, in a general council, the whole order was condemned and ſuppreſſed, and ſuch of them as could be taken were cruelly put to death. The order of the Hoſpitallers ſtood, yet did not grow much after that. They were beaten out of the Holy Land by the Sultans, and lately out of the Iſle of Rhodes, and were at this time in Malta. Their great maſter depended on the pope and the emperor; ſo it was not thought fit to let a houſe, that was ſubject to a foreign power, ſtand longer. And it ſeems they would not willingly ſurrender up their houſe, as others had done; therefore it was neceſſary to force them out of it by an act of parliament[1]." On the 22d of April, 1540, a bill was brought into the houſe of lords, "de reductione poſſeſſionum Hoſpitalariorum Sancti Johannis de Jerlm in Angliâ;" which was that day read for the firſt time, and on the 26th the ſecond time, and on the 29th the third time; by which both their houſe in England, and another they had in Kilmainham in Ireland, were ſuppreſſed, great penſions being reſerved by the act to the priors. But on the 14th of May, the parliament was prorogued to the 25th, and a vote paſſed, that all the buſineſs which had been diſpatched in that ſeſſion ſhould remain in force, notwithſtanding the prorogation[2].

The diſſolution of this religious order accordingly took place May 7, 1540, being Aſcenſion-day; by which their lands and poſſeſſions (then valued at the yearly ſum of 3385*l.* 19*s.* 8*d.*) were given to the king. The act[3] "prohibits the confreres to uſe their habit or titles; veſts the king in their houſes, churches, lands, goods, chattels, and debts, &c. and that all of the order be diſcharged of their obedience to their religion; and that the ſaid corporation of St. John's Jeruſalem in England and Ireland (in which kingdom the grand prior's fixed habitation was at Kilmainham, as that of England was in London) be finally diſſolved and aboliſhed, &c."

We are informed by Dr. Fuller[4], that "of all penſions, the largeſt in proportion and ſtrongeſt in conveyance (as paſſed not as the reſt by letters patent, but by act of parliament) were thoſe aſſigned to the lord prior, and thoſe of the order of the Knights Hoſpitallers. Theſe being men of high birth and honourable breeding, the king no leſs politicly than civilly thought fit to enlarge their allowance (a main motive which made them ſo quietly to ſurrender their ſtrong and rich hoſpitals) as in the printed ſtatute doth appear."

Their names and penſions were as follows:

To ſir William Weſton[5], lord prior, £1000.; to ſir John Rawſon, grand prior of this order in Ireland, £600.; to Clement Weſt, £200.; John Sutton, £200.; Richard Poole, £133. 6*s.* 8*d.*; Joſeph Rawſon, £133. 6*s.* 8*d.*; Giles Ruſſel, £100.; George Aylmer, £100.; Benjamin Belnigham, £100.; Thomas Pemberton, £80.; Edmund Huſe, £66. 13*s.* 4*d.*; Ambroſe Cave, £66. 13*s.* 4*d.*; Richard Brooke, £66. 13*s.* 4*d.*; Cuthbert Leighton, £60.; Thomas Copledike, £50.; William Tirrell, £30.

The total of theſe penſions, amounting to £3036. 13*s.* 4*d.* with other payments, gratuities, &c. appropriated to ſome of the officers of this houſe, had probably exceeded the income of the endowment, if the king had not been ſoon eaſed of the lord prior's ſtipend; "whoſe hoſpital and earthly tabernacle were, as Mr. Fuller expreſſes it, diſſolved together; gold, though a great cordial, being not able to cure a broken heart." By the act of parliament an honorary proviſion was alſo made of £10. per annum for ten others, who were junior confreres, or novices, and had profeſſed themſelves of this order; Anthony Rogers, Owſwald Maſſingberd, James Huſſey, Thomas Thornell, Richard Lupton, Philip Babington, Henry Gerard, Dunſton Newdegate, Richard Lambert, David Godſon. And to the two chaplains, Walter Lymſey and John Winter, and John Mapleſden, clerk, the ſub-prior, and William Ermſteed, clerk, maſter of the Temple, were continued the old ſalaries which had been allowed them by the houſe[6].

"In the 32d year of Henry the Eighth, a bold challenge at juſts was made to all comers that would, in France, Flanders, Scotland, and Spain. Here it was expected that ſome of our Knights Hoſpitallers (whoſe houſe by act of parliament was diſſolved but a month before) ſhould appear valiantly in their vindication, of and concerning any injuſtice offered unto them. But they kept themſelves cloſe, probably not ſo much for fear of all the challengers, as of one of the ſpectators, king Henry himſelf; as ſure, if conquerors, of the king's anger, and others envy; if worſted, of their own diſgrace. Beſides, by the laws of their order, they were not to tilt againſt Chriſtians, but only to ſpend their ſpears againſt Pagans and Infidels. Laſtly, the challenge ſeemed only one ſent to foreigners[7]."

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor of Dalby within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	32	8	10
Expended in county rates, &c.	5	10	6
——— on the poor, &c. —	26	18	4
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	2	0	0
Expended in litigations, —	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	43	4	6
——— 1784, —	58	10	7
——— 1785, —	60	8	0
Medium of theſe three years,	54	1	0
——— of county expences,	8	3	10
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	0	0	0
——— of nett annual expences,	45	7	2
——— of attending upon magiſtrates,	0	19	1
——— of entertainments at meetings,	0	16	6
——— of law expences, —	1	11	8
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	2	11	5

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in Dalby on the Woulds, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 45.

---

[1] Burnet's Hiſtory of the Reformation, vol. I. p. 133;

[2] Journals of the Houſe of Lords, vol. I. pp. 132. 137.

[3] Stat. 32 Hen. VIII. cap. 24.

[4] Church Hiſtory, Book VI. p. 344.

[5] Though he had ſo very large a penſion aſſigned him, he never received a penny of it; for he was ſo much concerned at theſe proceedings, that he died of grief; and was buried in Clerkenwell church in a fair tomb, having the portraiture of a dead man, lying on a ſhroud, the moſt artificially cut in ſtone (ſaith Weever) that ever man beheld, with plates of braſs, on which was engraved an inſcription, the following part of which was remaining in Mr. Weever's time:

. . . . hoſpitalitate inclytus, genere præclarus . . . . .
Hanc urnam officii cauſa . . . . .
Ecce quem cernis tuo nomini ſemper devotum
Suſcipe in ſinum, Virgo Maria, tuum.
Spes me non fallat quam in te ſemper habebam,
Virgo, da facilem . . . . . .

[6] Willis, Mitred Abbeys, vol. I. p. 133.

[7] Fuller, ubi ſupra, p. 370.

Andrew Noel, eſq. was, May 11, 1523, conſtituted the king's feodary in the counties of Northampton and Rutland; and on June 13, the year after, his feodary in Leiceſterſhire. Feb. 12, 1543-4, he had a grant of all that capital manor and ſite of the late preceptory of Dalby-upon-the Woulds, in Leiceſterſhire, late the poſſeſſions of the Knights of St. John of Jeruſalem; alſo of the manor of Purybarre in Staffordſhire[1]. In 28 Henry VIII. he was ſheriff of the county of Rutland; alſo in 4 Edward VI. and 4 Mary[2]. In 1548, he purchaſed the ſeat and manor of Brook[3] in Rutlandſhire; and was elected one of the knights for that county to the firſt parliament held by queen Mary, in 1553[4]. His firſt wife was Dorothy, daughter of Richard Conyers, of Blaſton, and widow of Roger Flower, of Whitwell. She dying in 1548, he married, ſecondly, Elizabeth, daughter of John Hopton, eſq. and relict of ſir John Perient, who ſurvived him, as appears by his epitaph; which proves that the Peerages miſtake in calling Elizabeth the firſt and Dorothy the ſecond wife. He died in 1562; and was ſucceeded in the eſtate at Dalby, Brook, &c. by Andrew Noel, eſq. who was afterwards knighted. He was thrice ſheriff of the county of Rutland[5]; and was choſen one of the knights of that county to ſeveral parliaments in the reign of queen Elizabeth; particularly in 43 Eliz. when, being ſheriff of the county of Rutland, he returned himſelf, jointly with ſir John Harrington; which was queſtioned to be a good return by Mr. ſerjeant Harris. On which ſir Edward Hobby replied, "that the houſe might well receive him, for that the bailiffs of Southwark returned themſelves in the 21ſt of the queen's reign, and were received." And Mr. Cary moving to know whether it were with his will, ſir John Harrington ſaid, "Of his own knowledge, he knew him very unwilling; but the freeholders made anſwer, they would have none other." However, on the queſtion being put, whether a warrant ſhould be iſſued for a new election, it was carried in the affirmative[6]. He married Mabel, ſixth daughter of ſir James Harrington, knt. and ſiſter and coheir of John lord Harrington, of Exton; died at Brook in Rutland, Oct. 19, 1607; and was buried, Dec. 8, in the church of Dalby, with great pomp. He left, at his deceaſe, ſir Edward Noel his heir; Charles, who died at the age of 28 unmarried, in 1619, and was buried at Brook in Rutlandſhire; Arthur, aged 9; and Alexander Noel, aged 5, who was of Whitwell in the county of Rutland, and married Mary, daughter of Thomas Palmer, of Carlton in Northamptonſhire, eſq. and left iſſue ſir Andrew Noel, of Whitwell[7]. Sir Andrew Noel had alſo three daughters, Lucy, married to William lord Eure; Theodoſia, to ſir Edward Cecil, afterwards viſcount Wimbleton[8]; ſhe died in Holland, and is buried in the collegiate church of Utrecht; and Elizabeth, to George lord Audley in England, and earl of Caſtlehaven in Ireland. By an inquiſition taken at Leiceſter, March 22, 1607, it was found that ſir Andrew Noel, knt. died ſeiſed of the manor and parſonage of Dalby on the Wolds; alſo of 20 meſſuages, 20 cottages, 20 gardens, one windmill, 200 acres of land, 260 acres of meadow, 200 acres of paſture, 258 acres of wood, and 5*s.* rent in Dalby, parcel of the poſſeſſions of the late-diſſolved hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem in England; alſo of two meſſuages, two cottages, 100 acres of land, 40 acres of meadow, 100 acres of paſture, and two acres of wood in Dalby, ſome time parcel of the poſſeſſions of Thomas Babington and Eleanor his wife; alſo of three meſſuages, four cottages, one dovecote, 200 acres of land, 100 acres of meadow, 200 acres of paſture, and 40 acres of wood in Dalby, ſome time parcel of the poſſeſſions of William Wigston, knight; that they were held of the king in capite, by the ſervice of a tenth part of one knight's fee; that he died Oct. 19, 1607; and that Edward Noel, knt. his ſon and heir, was then aged 25 years and upwards[9].

Of a brother of this ſir Andrew (who was knighted by the queen at Greenwich March 2, 1586) Mr. Burton thus writes:

"I cannot here let paſs unremembred a worthy gentleman, maſter Henry Noel[10], brother to the ſaid ſir Andrew Noel, one of the gentlemen-penſioners[11] to queen Elizabeth; a man for perſonage, parentage, grace, geſture, valour, and many excellent parts, inferior to none of his rank in the Court; who, though his lands and livelihoods were but ſmall, having nothing known certain but his annuity and his penſion, yet in ſtate, pomp, magnificence, and expences, did equallize barons of great worth. If any ſhall demand whence this proceeded, I muſt make anſwer with that Spaniſh proverb:

'Aquello qual vienne de arriba ninguno lo pregunta.

That which cometh from above let no man queſtion.'

This is the man of whom a great Perſonage[12] made this enigmatical diſtich [thus cited by Mr. Horace Walpole, in Royal and Noble Authors, p. 30, note, 'There cannot be a ſillier ſpecies of poetry than Rebus; yet of that kind there are few better than the following, which the queen made on Mr. Noel:]

'The word of denial, and letter of fifty,
Is that gentleman's name that will never be thrifty.'

He, being challenged (as I have heard) by an Italian gentleman at the baloune (a kind of play with a great ball toſſed with wooden braces upon the arm) uſed therein ſuch violent motion, and did ſo over-heat his blood, that he fell into a calenture, or burning fever; and thereof died, Feb. 26, 1596; and was, by her majeſty's appointment, buried in the abbey church of Weſtminſter, in the chapel of St. Andrew[13].

On a fair monument in the chancel of Brook church, the following inſcription preſerves the memory of one of ſir Andrew's ſons:

"Carolus Andræi proles generoſa Noeli
  Incolit hunc tumulum corpore, mente polum.
In quo certârunt totas exprimere dotes
  Natura & virtus, Marique Minerva, ſuas:
Eſſe pium tribuit Virtus, Natura decorum,
  Mars fortem, ingenium clara Minerva dedit.
Hic tamen eripitur primævo flore Juventæ,
  Ut ſoleat rapido gemma periri noto.
If gifts of mind and body might Make Death forbear to claim his right,
This compleat Knight had not by fate
Enjoy'd on earth ſo ſhort a date:
But Death, impartial in his power,
Untimely cropt this blooming flower;
Whoſe hopeful Youth, ſcarce in her prime,
Did promiſe much for future time.
  Obiit anno Dom. 1619, ætatis ſuæ 28."

Sir Edward Noel, reſiding at Brook in the county of Rutland, was made a baronet (the 34th in number) ſoon after the firſt erection of that honour. And though he ſold Dalby (his antient inheritance), yet had he ſo fair an eſtate remaining, as that, being a perſon much eſteemed for his abilities otherwiſe, he was, March 23, 14 Jac. advanced to the degree and dignity of a baron of this kingdom[14], by the title of lord Noel of Ridlington, co. Rutland; which honour he received from the king at Burley[1] in that county. He married Juliana[2], eldeſt of the daughters and coheirs of ſir Baptiſt Hickes, knight and baronet; from whom we find the following ſhort letter, addreſſed to her aunt the Lady Herrick:

---

[1] Originalia 35 Hen. VIII. Pars 2. Rot. 99.
[2] Wright's Rutland, p. 14.
[3] Pat. 2 Edw. VI. pars 3.
[4] Ex Collect. Browne Willis, arm.
[5] Wright, pp. 13. 15.
[6] D'Ewes's Journal.
[7] MS. I. 16. p. 267. in the Office of Arms; Wright, p. 28.
[8] Inſcript. Tum. apud Wimbledon, com' Surr.
[9] Eſch. 5 Jac. I.
[10] Fuller, p. 137; Wood, Faſti Oxon. 1592; Appendix, p. 6.
[11] "Theſe Penſioners, whom Shakeſpeare reckons above Earls*, were certain witty, handſome, young gentlemen, much admired by queen Elizabeth, who had her purſe to ſupply them in all their expences, and therefore could afford to ſpend more upon any occaſion than even Earls themſelves. Of this ſort of Penſioners, as I take it, originally were, ſir Robert Dudley, ſir Walter Raleigh, ſir Philip Sidney, ſir Robert Devereux, and ſeveral more. One of theſe ſparks threw away his money ſo faſt, that the Queen herſelf complained of it. The perſon I now mean was Mr. Henry Noel." Peck's Notes on Shakeſpeare, printed with his Life of Milton, &c. p. 225. Sir Henry Noel, one of the greateſt gallants of thoſe times, ſwore, as he was a gentleman, he never heard a man ſpeak with ſuch a grace as Dr. Andrews biſhop of Chicheſter, then dean of Weſtminſter. Sir John Harrington, p. 141.
[12] Q. Elizabeth.
[13] Dart, vol. II. p. 7; but neither he nor earlier deſcribers of Weſtminſter Abbey give any epitaph for him.
[14] Dugdale, Bar. Angl. vol. II. p. 435.

* In "The Merry Wives of Windſor," Act II. Scene 2. Mrs. Quickly tells Falſtaff, "There have been Earls, nay, what is more, Penſioners here."

"Madam, I beſeeche you to excuſe mee in that I doe ſo ſparingly preſent you with veniſon. I am aſhamed to doe ſoe. Yett the ſcarcity therof, by reaſon of the King's beinge heere, and the reſtreynt, doth inforce mee to doe ſoe att this time; but herafter I doubt nott butt to have meanes to performe this kindnes in a better faſhion. My huſband, myſelfe, and children, be well, I thancke God. He commends his ſervice to you; and, with my kindeſt love to you, I reſte your verie lovinge neece, JULIAN: NOEL[3]."

On the advancement of ſir Baptiſt Hickes to the titles of lord Hickes of Ilmington, co. Warwick, and viſcount Campden of Campden, co. Glouceſter, 5 May, 4 Car. I. the lord Noel obtained a grant of the ſaid honours to himſelf and the heirs males of his body in reverſion, in caſe the ſaid ſir Baptiſt ſhould die without iſſue male; which titles he accordingly enjoyed, on the death of his father-in-law, in 1629[4]; and, approving himſelf alway moſt loyal to king Charles the Firſt in the times of the rebellion, departed this life, in the king's garriſon at Oxford, March 10, 1643; whence he was carried to Campden, where he lies buried under a large mural monument[5] erected over him by his lady; who, after his deceaſe, reſided at Brook, in great eſteem for her hoſpitality

---

[1] When king James I. was on a viſit to the Marquis of Buckingham, at Burley on the Hill (ſee p. 213), the following verſes were written by Mr. Francis Beaumont, in the perſon of the Marquis:

"Sir, you have ever ſhin'd upon me bright;
But now you ſtrike and dazzle me with light.
You, England's radiant Sun, vouchſafe to grace
My houſe, a ſphere too little and too baſe.
My Burley, as a Cabinet, contains
The Gem of Europe, which from golden veins
Of glorious Princes to this height is grown,
And joins their precious virtues all in one.
When I your praiſe would to the world profeſs,
My thoughts with zeal and earneſt fervour preſs
Which ſhould be firſt; and their officious ſtrife
Reſtrains my hand from painting you to life.
I write, and, having written, I deſtroy,
Becauſe my lines have bounds, but not my joy."

Amongſt the Poems of the ſame writer are two with the following titles: 1. "Of New Greatneſs, to my Lord Marquis of Buckingham;" 2. "An Epithalamium to my Lord Marquis of Buckingham and his fair and virtuous Lady."

[2] Howe's Continuation of Stow's Chronicle, fol. 102.

[3] See her ſignature, Plate XXIV. 13.

[4] Baptiſt lord Hickes died, in the pariſh of St. Lawrence in the Old Jewry, Oct. 18, 1629; and was thence conveyed to Campden [*], where a very ſtately tomb is erected to his memory; having, on a raiſed ſlab of black marble, the recumbent effigies of himſelf and his lady in their robes of ſtate; the canopy ſupported by twelve pillars of Egyptian marble, with pediments, &c.

On the firſt tablet:

"To the memory of her dear deceaſed Huſband, BAPTIST Lord HICKES, Viſcount CAMPDEN, born of a worthy family in the city of London; who, by the bleſſing of God on his ingenious endeavours, aroſe to an ample eſtate, and to the aforeſaid degree of honour; and, out of thoſe bleſſings, diſpoſed to charitable uſes, in his life-time, a large portion, to the value of 10,000 pounds; who lived religiouſly, virtuouſly, and generouſly, to the age of 78 years; and died Oct. 18, 1629.

ELIZABETH Viſcounteſſe CAMPDEN, his dear Conſort, borne of the family of the MAYS, lived his wife, in all peace and contentment, the ſpace of 45 years; leaving iſſue by her ſaid lord and huſband two daughters; JULIANA, married to EDWARD Lord NOEL, now Viſcount CAMPDEN; and MARIA, married to Sir CHARLES MORRISON, knight and baronet; hath piouſly and carefully cauſed this monument to be erected, as a teſtimony of their nuptial love; where both their bodies may reſt together, in expectation of a joyful Reſurrection."

On the ſecond tablet:

"Ad terram CAMPDENICAM.
CAMPDENA felix, poſſides largas opes;
corpus patroni, quod recondis, optimi;
dominum potentem prædiis, & qui addidit
iſtis honorum floſculos terris novos.
Domino ſepulchrum præbeas: ille ædibus decoravit amplis, hortulis nitidis, agrum tuum, nec ædem negligi eſt paſſus Dei;
ſed indigentes fortè ſuſtinuit pia
vivo voluptas; mortuo fac ſis quies.
Hìc & pudicam, quæ ſocia vitæ fuit, tenes matronam: corpus hoc geminum fove reſuſcitandum, & contegas almo ſinu."

[5] This monument repreſents a vault [†]; the folding doors of which are opened, and bear the following inſcriptions. In a niche within are the ſtatues, in Parian marble, of lord Noel and lady Juliana, large as life, ſtanding in their winding-ſheets.

"This monument is erected to preſerve the memory and pourtrait of the Right Honourable
Sir EDWARD NOEL Viſcount CAMPDEN,
Baron NOEL of Ridlington, and HICKS of Ilmington, a lord of heroic high parts and preſence. He was a knight baneret in the wars of Ireland, being young, and then created baronet anno 1611. He was afterwards made, baron of Ridlington. The other titles came unto him by right of dame JULIANA his wife, who ſtands collateral to him in this monument, a lady of extraordinary great endowmentsboth of virtue and fortune. This goodly lord died at Oxford, whither he went to ſerve and aſſiſt his Souverain Prince Charles the Firſt; and ſo was exalted to the Kingdom of Glory,
8 Martii, 1642.
The Lady JULIANA,
eldeſt daughter and coheire
of that mirror of his time,
Sir BAPTIST HICKES, Viſcount CAMPDEN.
She was married to that noble Lord who is here engraven by her; by whom ſhe had BAPTIST Lord Viſcount CAMPDEN, now living (who is bleſſed with a numerous and gallant iſſue).
HENRY, her ſecond ſon, died a priſoner for his loyalty to his Prince.
Her eldeſt daughter, ELIZABETH, was married to JOHN Viſcount CHADWORTH.
MARY, her ſecond daughter, to the very noble Knight, Sir ERASMUS DE LA FONTAINE.
PENELOPE, her youngeſt daughter, died a mayd.

"This excellent Lady, for the pious and unparalleled affections ſhe retained to the memory of her deceaſed Lord, cauſed this ſtately monument to be erected in her life-time [‡], in September
anno Dom. 1664."

On a ſcroll:

"Joſhua Marſhall ſculp. Lond. fecit [§]."

On a mural monument the buſt of Lady Penelope Noel in a Vandyke dreſs, the drapery of which is peculiarly fine:

"To the moſt exquiſite model of Nature's beſt workmanſhip, the richeſt magazine of all divine and moral virtues, PENELOPE NOEL.

Having added to the nobilitye of her birth a bright ſhine of true nobleneſſe, the exemplarie ſweetneſs of her converſation, her contempt of earthly vanities, and her zealous affections towards Heaven, after 22 years' devotion, commended her virgin ſowle into the hands of its true bridegroom, JESUS CHRIST, May 17, ann. 1633. Over whoſe pretious duſt here reſerved, her ſad parents, EDWARD Lord NOEL and Viſcount CAMPDEN

[*] In the Regiſter is a covenant, dated Aug. 30, 1629, between ſir Baptiſt and the pariſh, whereby he is entitled to the ſole property of the chapel at the end of the South aile for the ſepulture of his family. "It is adorned," ſays Mr. Bigland, vol. I. p. 282, "with ſuch noble monuments of marble, as equal, if not exceed, any in England.

[†] It is extraordinary Mr. Bigland ſhould call this a cabinet, when the ſtatues within in ſhrouds clearly beſpeak it a vault.

[‡] Lady Juliana ſurvived the erection of this monument 16 years; and died at Exton, in 1683, aged 95.

[§] "Mr. Walpole has not recorded ſuch an Artiſt as Joſhua Marſhall; and it appears improbable that he who could give ſuch a ſpecimen of the art, as this Monument exhibits, ſhould have been ſo obſcure as to eſcape his notice. This is a highly finiſhed performance, though to the deſign many objections may be offered. The attitudes are lively and expreſſive; but the drapery peculiar to the grave, much too unnatural and improbable to produce the intended effect." Bigland, p. 283.

and

hoſpitality and charity, and departed this life there, Nov. 25, 1680, being then 95 years of age; leaving Baptiſt, ſon and heir, lord viſcount Campden, baron of Ridlington and Ilmington, who was as loyal as his father to Charles I; having raiſed and maintained, at his own coſt, a troop of horſe and a company of foot, in that king's ſervice, at his then garriſon of Belvoir [1]; and paid to the ſequeſtrators £9000. compoſition for his eſtate, beſides £150. a year, ſettled on the teachers of the times [2]. After the reſtoration of king Charles II. he was made lord-lieutenant of the county of Rutland; and departing this life at Exton, Oct. 29, 1682, was buried on the North ſide of that church; where a noble monument is erected to his memory, 22 feet high, and 14 feet in breadth, containing, at a convenient diſtance from the floor, two admirable ſtatues, of himſelf and ſecond lady, upright, ſomething bigger than the life; and between them a pedeſtal, ſupporting an urn. On the outward ſides of the ſtatues are placed two great pyramids, each ſupporting a vaſe of black marble twiſted about with feſtoons of white; and in ſeveral parts of the monument are repreſented in bas relief the ſeveral matches of the ſaid lord, and all the iſſue, as well living as dead, by thoſe matches [3].

On two tables of black marble are the following inſcriptions:

1. "Here reſteth Baptiſt Noel, lord viſcount Campden, baron of Ridlington and Ilmington, lord-lieutenant of the county of Rutland. His eminent loyalty to his two ſovereigns king Charles I. and II. his conjugal affection to four wives; his paternal indulgence to nineteen children; his hoſpitality and liberality to all that deſired or deſerved it (notwithſtanding ineſtimable loſſes in his eſtate, frequent impriſonments of his perſon, ſpoil and havock of ſeveral of his houſes, beſides the burning of that noble pile of Campden), have juſtly rendered him the admiration of his contemporaries, and the imitation of poſterity. He left this life, for the exchange and fruition of a better, the 29th day of October, in the LXXIſt year of his age, anno Domini MDCLXXXII."

2. "He took to his firſt wife Anne Fielding, ſecond daughter to William earl of Denbigh, by whom he had three children, who died in their infancy. By his ſecond wife [4], Anne counteſs of Bath, he had one ſon ſtill-born. By his third wife, Heſter, one of the four daughters and coheirs of Thomas lord Wotton, he had two ſons and four daughters: 1. Edward, the preſent earl of Gainſborough, governor of Portſmouth, lord-lieutenant of Hampſhire and Rutland; 2. Henry Noel, late of North-Luffenham, eſq. who died in the 35th year of his age; 3. Mary, the preſent counteſs of Northampton; 4. Juliana, wife of William lord Allington; 5. Heſter, who died an infant; 6. Elizabeth, wife of Charles lord Durſley, ſon and heir apparent of George earl of Berkeley. By his fourth wife (who ſtandeth by his ſide) Elizabeth Bertie, eldeſt daughter of Montague earl of Lindſey, lord great-chamberlain of England, he had nine children; 1. Lindſey Noel, who died in his infancy; 2. Catharine, now wife of John earl of Rutland; 3. Baptiſt Noel [5], eſq. now living; 4. John Noel, eſq. alſo now living; 5. Bridget Noel, alſo living; 6. a ſon, whoſe early death prevented his baptiſm; 7. James Noel, eſq. who died in the 18th year of his age; 8. Martha-Penelope, now living; 9. a ſon ſtill-born."

On the pedeſtal between the two great ſtatues:

"To the pious memory of her ſaid huſband, his wives, their and her own children, Elizabeth, his laſt wife in her life-time gave monies, and left orders for the building of this monument, which, by her third ſon and executor the honourable John Noel, was punctually performed, 1686."

On a ſeparate monument in the ſame church:

"To the ſacred memory of the lady Anne Noel, ſecond daughter of William earl of Denbigh, who was married to Mr. Baptiſt Noel, eldeſt ſon of ſir Edward lord Noel and Hicks, viſcount Campden. She changed this life for a better the 24th of March, in the year of Salvation, 1636. She had by her ſaid huſband three ſons, the eldeſt Charles, alſo the ſecond Charles, and the third Edward; which three ſons deceaſed before any of them came to the age of 2 years."

Henry Noel, eſq. ſecond ſon of Edward viſcount Campden by his third wife, reſiding at North Luffenham in the time of the rebellion, and refuſing to deliver up his houſe, arms, and perſon to the lord Grey of Groby, who demanded them for the Parliament, was forced by fire and batteries to capitulate; and though the articles were, 1. That the rebels ſhould ſee the fire quenched; 2. That all in the houſe ſhould have liberty to depart whither they would; 3. That none ſhould enter the houſe but commanders; yet, not regarding any obligation, promiſe, or agreement, they enter the houſe, as well common ſoldiers as officers, rob, plunder, waſte, burn, and deſtroy, his goods, accounts, writings, and evidences, raviſh his maid ſervants, enter the adjoining church, and there deface a goodly monument erected to his deceaſed lady: and having thus ranſacked all from the living to the dead, they carried the ſaid Mr. Noel priſoner to London, where he remained a long time in Peter-houſe [6], a conſtant ſufferer for the royal cauſe [7].

James Noel, ſeventh child of the fourth marriage of the ſaid Baptiſt, ſecond viſcount Campden, born July 27, 1663, has a neat monument erected to his memory, in the North ſide of the church of Exton; the inſcription whereof ſhews his extraordinary abilities:

"Jacobus Noel,
Baptiſtæ Vicecomitis de Campden, è quartâ uxore Elizabetâ, Montacuti comitis de Lindſey, magni camerarii Angliæ,
filiâ, filius quintus;
ingentis ſpei juvenis,
formâ præcellens æquè
ac ſtaturâ eminens:
inſigni ſupra annos
tam animi quam corporis cultu, & vigore præditus,
obiit Junii 24, 1681, ætatis ſuæ 18.

Quem Puerum forſan facies dixiſſet, & ætas,
 Fecerat hunc virtus, atque ſtatura, Virum.
Maturus vixit, licet immaturus obivit;
 Ingenii vis hoc, mors dedit illud, opus.

Great as his birth did all his actions ſhew,
His very recreations ſpoke him ſo.
Spritely his mien, yet grave, diſcreet, and wiſe,
Free from the age's grand debaucheries.
Virtue with ſtature ſtill his years outran;
He died in's nonage, and yet liv'd a man.

Eodem fato conjunctus Linſeius ejuſdem Baptiſtæ & Elizabetæ filius primulus, qui obiit anniculus, Martii 12, an. Domini 1656.
Item eorundem parentum filius quartus,
cui ob præproperum nimis fatum defuit prænomen, 1662 [7]."

and the Lady JULIAN his wyfe, dropped theyr tears, and erected this marble to the deare memorie of theyr invaluable loſſe.

Superata tellus ſidera donat.

On a mural marble monument, with the buſt of Lady Anne Noel in the dreſs of the times, is this inſcription:

"To the ſacred memory of Lady ANNE NOEL, ſecond daughter of WILLIAM Earl of DENBIGH; who was married to BAPTIST NOEL, eldeſt ſonne of EDWARD Lord NOEL and HICKES Viſcount CAMPEDEN. Shee changed this life for a better the 24th of March, in the year of Salvation 1636. Shee had iſſue by her ſaid huſband three ſonnes; the eldeſt, CHARLES; alſo the ſecond, CHARLES; and the third, EDWARD; which three ſonnes deceaſed before eyther of them accompliſhed 2 yeares."

---

[1] Wright, p. 108.

[2] Liſt of Compounders, printed 1655.

[3] The whole, ſays Mr. Wright, is the workmanſhip of that juſtly admired artiſt, Mr. Grinlin Gibbon, whoſe carvings at Windſor, Whitehall, and elſewhere, not only in this nation, but in foreign parts, have cauſed him to be eſteemed the beſt of Engliſh Statuaries, and perhaps inferior to none beyond the ſeas.

[4] She was daughter of ſir Robert Lovet, of Liſcomb in Bucks, and widow of Edward Bourchier earl of Bath.

[5] Anceſtor to the late earl of Gainſborough.

[6] A houſe belonging to the lord Petre, in the pariſh of St. Botolph without Alderſgate.

[7] Wright, p. 78.

[8] Ibid. p. 60.

Edward firſt earl of Gainſborough, eldeſt ſon of Baptiſt viſcount Campden, having with great integrity performed ſundry acceptable ſervices to Charles II. and married, firſt, the lady Elizabeth, eldeſt daughter and coheir of Thomas-Wriotheſley fourth earl of Southampton, and lord high treaſurer of England (by Rachel his firſt wife) with whom he had the lordſhip of Titchfield in the county of Southampton, was, by letters patent dated 3 Feb. 33 Charles II. (his father then living) advanced to the degree and dignity of a baron of this realm, by the title of lord Noel of Titchfield; with limitation, for want of iſſue male of his body, to the younger ſons of his father Baptiſt viſcount Campden. Moreover, his majeſty conſtituted him lord-lieutenant of the county of Southampton, warden of the New Foreſt, and governor of Portſmouth. Succeeding his father in 1682, he was likewiſe conſtituted lord-lieutenant of the county of Rutland, and cuſtos rotulorum of the ſame; and in December that year was, for his great merits and abilities, created earl of Gainſborough, with limitation of that honour to his younger brothers.

His lordſhip's ſecond wife was buried at Great Mintern in Dorſetſhire, where is a handſome monument of white marble, with the following inſcription:

"Beneath lies the body of Mary, counteſs dowager of Edward earl of Gainſborough, daughter of the honourable James Herbert, of Kingſey in the county of Buckingham, eſq. Her firſt huſband was ſir Robert Worſeley, of Appledercomb in the Iſle of Wight, in the county of Southampton, knt. and bart. Her life was exemplary for piety, prudence, charity, and other divine and moral virtues; and, departing hence, left the fragrance of them behind her to embalm her memory. She died the 6th of April, 1693, in the 45th year of her age."

This noble lord departed this life in 1689, leaving iſſue one ſon, Wriotheſley-Baptiſt, and four daughters.

Wriotheſley-Baptiſt, ſecond earl of Gainſborough, married Catharine, eldeſt daughter of Fulke Grevile, fifth lord Brooke; which lady was afterwards married to John duke of Buckingham, and, dying Feb. 7, 1703, was buried in Weſtminſter-abbey. The earl her huſband, departing this life Sept. 21, 1690, left iſſue only two daughters, lady Elizabeth, married June 9, 1704, to Henry Bentinck, firſt duke of Portland; and lady Rachel, wedded to Henry Somerſet, ſecond duke of Beaufort, in Feb. 1705-6, to whom ſhe was ſecond wife, and dying Sept. 13, 1709, was buried at Badminton in Glouceſterſhire.

On the failure of the iſſue male of this Wriotheſley-Baptiſt, ſecond earl of Gainſborough, the honours deſcended to the iſſue of the honourable Baptiſt Noel, ſecond ſon to Baptiſt ſecond viſcount Campden, by his fourth wife Elizabeth, daughter of Montague earl of Lindſey; which Baptiſt Noel, eſq. ſeated at Luffenham in the county of Rutland, was elected one of the knights for that ſhire in 1685; and left iſſue, by his wife Suſannah, daughter and heir of ſir Thomas Fanſhaw, of Jenkins, in the pariſh of Barking in Eſſex, (by his wife Margaret, daughter and heir to ſir John Heath) two daughters, and one ſon;

Baptiſt, born 1685, and ſucceeded his couſin Wriotheſley-Baptiſt, as third earl of Gainſborough, Sept. 21, 1690; and, having married the lady Dorothy Manners, ſecond daughter of John firſt duke of Rutland, died of the ſmall-pox, in the 29th year of his age, April 17, 1714: leaving iſſue three ſons, Baptiſt, his ſucceſſor; John, who died Dec. 26, 1718; and James, who was one of the repreſentatives for the county of Rutland in three parliaments, and died, in 1752, unmarried.

They had alſo three daughters; lady Catharine; lady Suſannah, firſt wife to Anthony fourth earl of Shafteſbury; and lady Mary, who died young in 1718. The counteſs their mother died April 27, 1739.

Baptiſt, the eldeſt ſon, ſucceeded as fourth earl of Gainſborough, &c. and married Elizabeth, daughter of William Chapman, eſq. by which lady (who died Dec. 15, 1771, having taken to her ſecond huſband Thomas Noel, eſq. before-mentioned, ſecond ſon of the honourable John Noel, youngeſt ſurviving ſon of Baptiſt, ſecond viſcount Campden, by the fourth marriage) his lordſhip had three ſons; 1. Baptiſt, 2. Henry, ſucceſſively earls of Gainſborough; and, 3. Charles, who died young: alſo nine daughters; 1. lady Elizabeth, born in 1731; 2. lady Jane, who was born in 1733, and married Gerrard-Anne Edwards[1], of Welham in Leiceſterſhire, eſq. 3. lady Juliana, who was born in 1734-5; on Feb. 7, 1760, wedded George Evans lord Carbery in the kingdom of Ireland, and died Dec. 18, 1760; 4. lady Penelope, born in 1735-6, and died young; 5. lady Anne, born in 1737; 6. lady Lucy, married on April 26, 1765, to Horatio Mann, eſq. nephew of ſir Horatio Mann, bart. many years the Britiſh reſident at Florence; ſhe died in Italy Feb. 2, 1778; 7. lady Mary; 8. lady Suſanna, who died April 24, 1758; and, 9. lady Sophia.

The character of Baptiſt, fourth earl of Gainſborough (who died March 21, 1750-51) has been delicately drawn by the Rev. John Skynner[2], then fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge, and afterwards public orator there, in his ſermon upon the melancholy occaſion of his funeral; which he delivered in the following words: "His heart was naturally tender, as his ſentiments were rationally refined, which diffuſed a remarkable delicacy over his actions toward the firſt and principal object of his affection; and there was that politeneſs, as well as tenderneſs, in his whole conjugal deportment, as ſecured a firm and uninterrupted happineſs. It was the ſtudy of his life to inſtil into the amiable partner of it every accompliſhment that adorns a female mind. He gained the hearts of his children by affection; which is ill ſupported by mere authority; and he knew how to render himſelf their companion, without any danger of forgetting that he was their father. He was careful to aſſiſt the tender openings of their reaſon, and to cultivate in their hearts the nobleſt and moſt generous ſentiments. He preſerved the obedience of his ſervants without ſeverity; and gained their affections without leſſening his ſuperiority. His heart was too great to behave towards them with that inſolence of rank, which is the certain characteriſtic of low minds in high ſtations. A dignity, thus tempered with humanity, was attended with ſuitable effects; and one ſhall ſeldom find in the houſe of the great ſuch a number of ſervants, ſo decent, ſo orderly, ſo obſervant, ſo well diſpoſed; and moſt of them (which is a peculiar circumſtance) have grown up under his own roof. His benevolence ſpread itſelf over the whole circle of human exiſtence; and every inſtance of diſtreſs was the object of his enlarged compaſſion. He would not oppreſs the modeſty of the preſent, or injure the virtues of the abſent, to call forth the loudeſt peals of mirth that unfeeling ſprightlineſs ever raiſed. On the contrary, he endeavoured to conceal thoſe blemiſhes in others, which he could not correct, and to extenuate rather than magnify their faults. His beneficence was refined, uniform, and unbounded. It aroſe not from oſtentation; few delighted more in concealed acts of bounty: it reſulted from a thorough conviction of the duties of humanity, from a ſenſe of the various caſualties of life; and from the overflowings of a natural compaſſion. He relieved, without offending the delicacy of diſtreſs; and rendered poverty rather ſenſible of the heart that pitied, than even of the hand which beſtowed. The hoſpitality of his temper was extremely remarkable: no gueſt ever entered his manſion, who was not received with all the warmth of the moſt generous welcome. His ſkill in muſic, painting, and poetry; his knowledge in the principal arts and embelliſhments of elegant life; and a very judicious knowledge in hiſtory and the ſciences, rendered him, at all times, capable of furniſhing out a polite entertainment, both for himſelf and others of the ſame improved and cultivated taſte. His heart was ſo ſtrongly ſuſceptible of the ſocial impreſſions, that he made it an inflexible rule of his conduct, never to revive the remembrance of an injury which he had once forgiven. To ſpeak of him in the more extenſive relations of ſociety, he was a true Briton, zealouſly devoted to the intereſt of his country, and conſequently moſt inviolable in his attachments to the preſent Royal Family. Accordingly he contributed to the ſupport of thoſe principles when they were lately in ſo much danger of being ſubverted (in 1745); and the ſervices he then performed in maintenance of our civil and religious rights were honoured with the expreſs thanks (as they juſtly merited) of his Sovereign. In fine, every tender affection ſoftened his diſpoſition; every elegant grace adorned his mind; and a thouſand engaging acts were perpetually flowing from the generoſity of his heart, and the liberality of his hand."

---

[1] See before, in vol. II. p. 875.

[2] D. D. 1756; preſented to the rectory of Eaſton near Stamford by the late earl of Exeter; which he ſtill enjoys, and has a numerous family.

His lordſhip's eldeſt ſon and ſucceſſor, Baptiſt, fifth earl of Gainſborough, and the 20th deſcendant in paternal line from his great anceſtor Noel, who aſſiſted William duke of Normandy in the Conqueſt of England, 1066, was born June 8, 1704; but, being on his travels, died a bachelor at Geneva May 30, 1759; upon which his only ſurviving brother, Henry, who was born in 1743, became the ſixth earl of Gainſborough[1]. He was educated at King's college, Cambridge; where he took the degree of M. A. in 1761; and, Feb. 4, 1765, took his ſeat in the Houſe of Peers. His lordſhip applied to and encouraged the ſtudy of natural hiſtory, in which ſcience he had collected a very valuable library, and was conſidered by the Linnæan Society as properly qualified to be one of the four honorary members, together with ſir Joſeph Banks, Mr. Pennant, and the late Marſhal de Nouaille. He was high-ſteward of the corporation of Chipping Campden in Glouceſterſhire; and died at Exton, unmarried, April 9, 1798.

The royal licence has ſince been granted to Gerrard-Noel Edwards, eſq. the ſon of his ſecond ſiſter, to take and uſe the name and arms of Noel.

The two following entries are about the beginning of the ſixteenth century: "Manerium de Dalbie tenetur de dominâ reginâ in capite, per ſervicium 10^e^ partis feodi militis, & per redditum, 10s. 11d."

"Edwardus Noell, miles, tenet Dalby ſuper les Wolds manerium in capite, & Broughton manerium. Terre perquiſite de Tho. Babington' & de Wiggeſton milite, in Dalbie, tenentur de rege in capite per 20^am^ partem feodi militis."

In 1629, Henry Poole, of Dalby on the Woulds, bore, Quarterly, 1. and 4. Argent, a chevron between three creſcents Gules, Poole; 2. and 3. Argent, a pile Gules. Creſt, a bird volant Or, charged on the breaſt with a mullet Gules[2].

"This manor," ſays Mr. Burton, "in 1641, was not many years ſince the inheritance of ſir Andrew Noel[3], knight; whoſe ſon Edward Noel viſcount Campden ſold the ſame, not long ſince, to the illuſtrious and right honourable George duke of Buckingham."

The only freeholder in 1630 was Thomas Sheldon, eſq.

In 1655, was collected in Old Dalby, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of £1.

In 1722, ſeven freeholders polled from this pariſh; and in 1775 we find four names.

On the ſequeſtration of George Villiers the ſecond duke of Buckingham, the lordſhip of Old Dalby appears to have fallen into the poſſeſſion of Oliver Cromwell; for, on his ſon Richard's retiring from the Protectorate, it appears that he poſſeſſed the lordſhip of Dalby, then worth £989. 9s. 1d. a year, and that of Nether Broughton worth £533. 8s. 8d.; but that both thoſe lordſhips had been ſettled on his brother Henry Cromwell at the time of his marriage[4].

This manor was afterwards reſtored to the duke of Buckingham; who ſold it to Judge Jefferys; from whom it paſſed to ſir Charles Duncombe, knt.; and deſcended to Anthony Duncombe, eſq.

By an act, paſſed in 1741, for "charging, ſelling, and applying, part of the ſettled eſtate of Anthony Keck[5], eſq. (of Lincoln's Inn), for raiſing money, towards the purchaſe of the manors of Dalby and Broughton, in the county of Leiceſter, contracted for purſuant to, and for the purpoſes of, the laſt will of Anthony Keck, his grandfather; and for ſettling part of the premiſſes ſo contracted for, in lieu of, and as an equivalent to and for, the ſettled eſtate ſo to be charged, ſold, and applied; and for other purpoſes therein mentioned;" it appears that Mr. Keck had then contracted with Anthony Duncombe[6], eſq. to pay £52,000. for the purchaſe of theſe manors, with the advowſon of Nether Broughton, and divers other lands and hereditaments, in the county of Leiceſter, the particulars of all which are minutely ſpecified in a ſchedule annexed to the act:

Dalby on the Woulds,		£.1465	0	2
Nether Broughton,	—	522	15	0
Land at Aſfordby,	—	18	0	0
Tithe of 199 acres,	—	5	5	0
The total yearly value	—	2011	0	2

excluſive of the advowſon of Nether Broughton; and of the wood-land, being 30 acres, 2 roods, 23 perches[7].

In 1748, another act paſſed, for "repealing part, and explaining and amending other parts, of the above-mentioned act; by which the whole agreement, as far as relates to Broughton and Dalby, are ſet aſide, on Mr. Keck's having paid £1500. to Anthony lord Feverſham, as a compenſation for the damage and inconvenience which had happened, or might enſue, from the non-performance of the covenant[8]. In 1763, the barony of Feverſham became extinct; but the eſtate devolved to his lordſhip's two daughters and coheireſſes, Frances, married to John Bowater, eſq. and Anne, married to the right hon. Jacob-Pleydell Bouverie earl of Radnor.

In 1788, a partition took place, between Mr. Bowater and lord Radnor, of this and other eſtates and hereditaments, in which they were jointly intereſted, in reſpect of their wives before-mentioned; when this manor and part of the eſtates late of lord Feverſham in this pariſh, including Dalby Hall, were allotted to Mr. and Mrs. Bowater[9].

Old Dalby is extraparochial, and amenable to no court: a conſtable does all the offices of the place.

The number of families is now about 50; forty years ago there were 46; but, as the place is ſubject to no ſpiritual court, no regiſters till lately have been kept. The number of families now (1799) are 54.

In a wood in this lordſhip is a very fine ſpring of the chalybeate kind, which throws out an immenſe quantity of water, and is thence conducted by a leaden aqueduct to the manſion-houſe, and ſerves the whole pariſh for culinary purpoſes. It will ruſt a bar of iron an inch through in a year[10].

---

[1] Arms of Noel earl of Gainſborough. Or, fretty of ten pieces Gules, a canton Ermine. Creſt, on a wreath, a buck at gaze Argent, attired Or. Supporters, two bulls Argent; armed and unguled Proper. Motto, TOUT BIEN, OU RIEN. Noel viſcount Campden, Noel of Kirkby Maloſy, Noel of Hilcote, and Noel of Preſhall, with others of that antient family, all retain the original arms, but diſtinguiſhed by various eminent differences.

[2] Harl. MSS. 2017.

[3] "Dalby on the Old is the ſeat of ſir Andrew Noel, knight." Wyrley, MS. in 1590.

[4] Journals of the Houſe of Commons, vol. VII. p. 665.

[5] Anthony Keck, eſq. of Southampton-ſtreet, Bloomſbury, died Nov. 24, 1736, ſuppoſed to be worth £7000. a year (Gent. Mag. vol. VI. p. 685); having by will, dated Jan. 29, 1729, bequeathed his real eſtates to his wife for life; remainder to his daughter Martha, wife of the Rev. David James, of Woughton, Bucks; remainder ſucceſſively to his daughter's three ſons, Anthony, David, and Thomas James, and their heirs male; and by a ſubſequent will, Nov. 18, 1736, after ſome ſmall legacies, and an annuity of £187. 12s. to his grandſon David, gave the reſidue of his perſonal eſtate in truſt, to be divided equally between his grandſons Anthony and Thomas. Anthony James, eſq. the eldeſt grandſon, then of Lincoln's Inn, obtained an act of parliament, March 21, 1736-7, under the grandfather's will, to aſſume the name of Keck; and in 1739 married Anne, daughter of William Buſby, eſq. (vol. II. p. 846) with whom he had a fortune of £4000. and on whom he ſettled £380. a year); and in 1745 (his mother, grandmother, and brother Thomas, being then all dead), obtained the firſt act of parliament above-mentioned for purchaſing Dalby and Broughton. See Journals of the Houſe of Commons, vol. XXII. p. 816; vol. XXIV. p. 892; vol. XXV. p. 659.

[6] Created lord Feverſham, of Downton, co. Wilts, in 1747.

[7] From the act of parliament, 18 Geo. II.

[8] Ibid. 21 Geo. II.

[9] See vol. II. p. 120.

[10] From the information of the rev. Thomas Hoe, the preſent curate of Old Dalby.

Pedigree of NOEL, of OLD DALBY. (Continued from the Viſitation of 1619.)

Noel, lord of Elenhall, co. Stafford. = ...

1. Robert, founder of the priory of Raunton, co. Stafford. = Alicia.
2. Richard.

1. Thomas, lord of Elenhall, and patron of Raunton priory. = Margaret, ſiſter of Guy le Strange, of Shropſhire.
2. Philip Noel, of Hilcot, co. Stafford. = ...

1. Alice, coheireſs, living 11 Joh. = William, ſon of Richard Harecourt.
2. Johanna, coheireſs, living 11 Joh. = William Duſton[1].
Robert Noel, to whom Alice Harecourt gave lands. = Johanna, dau. of ſir John Acton, knt.

Royſia, dau. and heir, lady of Raunton, married John Doilley, who was living 52 Hen. III. =
Thomas.
Philip Noel, of Ceſtford, living 52 Hen. III. = . .

Philip Noel, of Ceſtford and Newbold. = ...

Philip Noel, died before his father. = Cecilia, out-lived her huſband; 12 Edw. II.

Thomas Noel. = Alice, dau. and heir of Henry of Wyverſton.
Philip Noel, of Newbold, ſervant to the earl of Stafford, living 39 Edw. III.

William Noel, of Newbold. = ...

Richard Noel, of Newbold. = ...

Jane Sonde, dau. of . . . . firſt wife. = 1. Thomas Noel, of Newbold. = Jane, dau. of Roger Draycot, of Paneſley, co. Stafford, ſecond wife.
2. Robert Noel, living 28 Hen. VI.

Iſabella, wife of Thomas Chetwood, living 6 Edw. IV.
Robert Noel, of Hilcot, 6 Edw. IV. = Matilda, dau. of . . . . Brereton.

1. James Noel, of Hilcot. = ... dau. of . . . . Poole, of Langley, Derby, eſq.
2. Richard.
3. John, rector of Swynerton.
4. Richard, d.ſ.p.
5. Humphrey.
7. Leonard, d.ſ.p.
6. Thomas Noel, of Preſhall. = Dorothy, dau. and heir of Henry Pettitte, of Badgſomes (or of John Kynardſley).

Edward Noel, of Preſhall.

1. Robert Noel, of Hilcot. = Mary, dau. of . . . Aſpland, of Eſſex.
Dorothy, dau. of Reginald Coniers, of Wakerley, relict of Roger Flower, of Whitwell, firſt wife. = 2. Andrew Noel, of Old Dalby. = Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Will. Hopton, of Shropſhire, relict of ſir John Peryent, knt. 2d wife.
3. Arthur, died ſ. p.

Philip Noel, of Hilcot, living 1583.

1. John Noel, of Whelleſborough, (where ſee an account of his deſcendants).
2. Sir Andrew Noel, of Dalby, died 1607. = Mabell, dau. of ſir James Harrington, of Exton, Rutl. knt.
3. Henry, d. 1596.
4. George.
5. William.
1. Elizabeth, wife of Anthony Faunt, of Foſton.
2. Goudith.

Sir Edward Noel, of Dalby, and of Brook, co. Rutland; created a baronet June 22, 1611; and a baron in 1617 by the title of lord Noel of Ridlington; died 1642. = Juliana, dau. and coheir of ſir Baptiſt Hickes, of Hunington, co. Warwick, and viſcount Campden of Campden; obtained, 4 Charles I, a grant of them to himſelf and the heirs male of his body in reverſion, in caſe the ſaid Baptiſt ſhould die without iſſue male; which titles afterwards he accordingly enjoyed.
Lucy, wife of William lord Euer.
Theodoſia, wife of Edward Cecil, 3d ſon of Thomas earl of Exeter.
Elizabeth, firſt wife of George earl of Caſtlehaven.
Sir Charles Noel, knt. died 1619.
Arthur Noel.
Alexander Noel, of Pickwell. = Mary, ſiſter to Galfr. Palmer, knt. attorney-general.

Sir Andr. Noel, of Whitwell, co. Rutl. = Anne.

1. Baptiſt-Patricius Noel, born 1666.
2. Andrew, b. 1668.

Anne, eldeſt dau. to Will. Fielding earl of Denbigh, firſt wife. = Baptiſt, ſon and heir, died Oct. 29, 1683. = Anne, dau. to ſir Robert Lovett, knt. widow of Edw. earl of Bath; ſecond wife. = Heſter, one of the four daughters and coheirs of Thomas lord Wotton; third wife. = Elizabeth, dau. to Montague earl of Lindſey, fourth wife.
1. Elizabeth, wife of ſir Gilbert Chaworth.
2. Penelope.
2. Henry, died 1643. = . . .

Three ſons, died young.
One ſon died young.
Juliana, dau. and ſole heir, living 1731. = Charles, who ſucceeded his grandfather Richard earl of Burlington, anno 1697-8.

Richard earl of Burlington, b. April 25, 1695.

Elizabeth, eldeſt dau. to Tho. earl of Southampton, firſt wife. = Edward, created earl of Gainſborough by king Cha. II. 1682. = Mary, dau. of James Herbert, of Kingſton, Bucks, eſq. ſecond wife.
Henry.
1. Mary. = James earl of Northampton.
2. Juliana. = Lord Allington.
3. Heſter, died young.
4. Elizabeth. = Charles earl of Berkeley.
1. Lindſey, d. young.
3. James, died of the ſmall-pox.
Catharine. = John lord Ros.
Bridget, unmarried.
Penelope. = ... Dormer, eſq.
2. Baptiſt. = Suſanna, dau. of ſir Tho. Fanſhaw.

Baptiſt, third earl of Gainſborough d. 1714. = Dorothy, 2d dau. of John Manners, duke of Rutland.
Elizabeth.
Suſanna.

Wriotheſley-Baptiſt, ſecond earl of Gainſborough. = Catharine[2], the eldeſt dau. of Fulke Grevile lord Brooke.
Frances. = Lord Digby.
Elia. = ... Norton, eſq.
Diana, died unmarried.
Another daughter.

1. Baptiſt, fourth earl of Gainſborough, died 1750-51. = Elizabeth, dau. of William Chapman, eſq.
2. John, died 1718.
3. James, died 1752.
Three daughters; ſee p. 252.

Elizabeth. = Henry Bentinck lord viſcount Woodſtock, afterwards (1716) the firſt duke of Portland.
Rachel, died 1759. = Henry Somerſet, ſecond duke of Beaufort (his ſecond wife).

1. Baptiſt, fifth earl of Gainſborough, died 1759.
2. Henry, ſixth earl of Gainſborough, died 1798.
3. Charles, died young.
Nine daughters; of whom ſee p. 252.

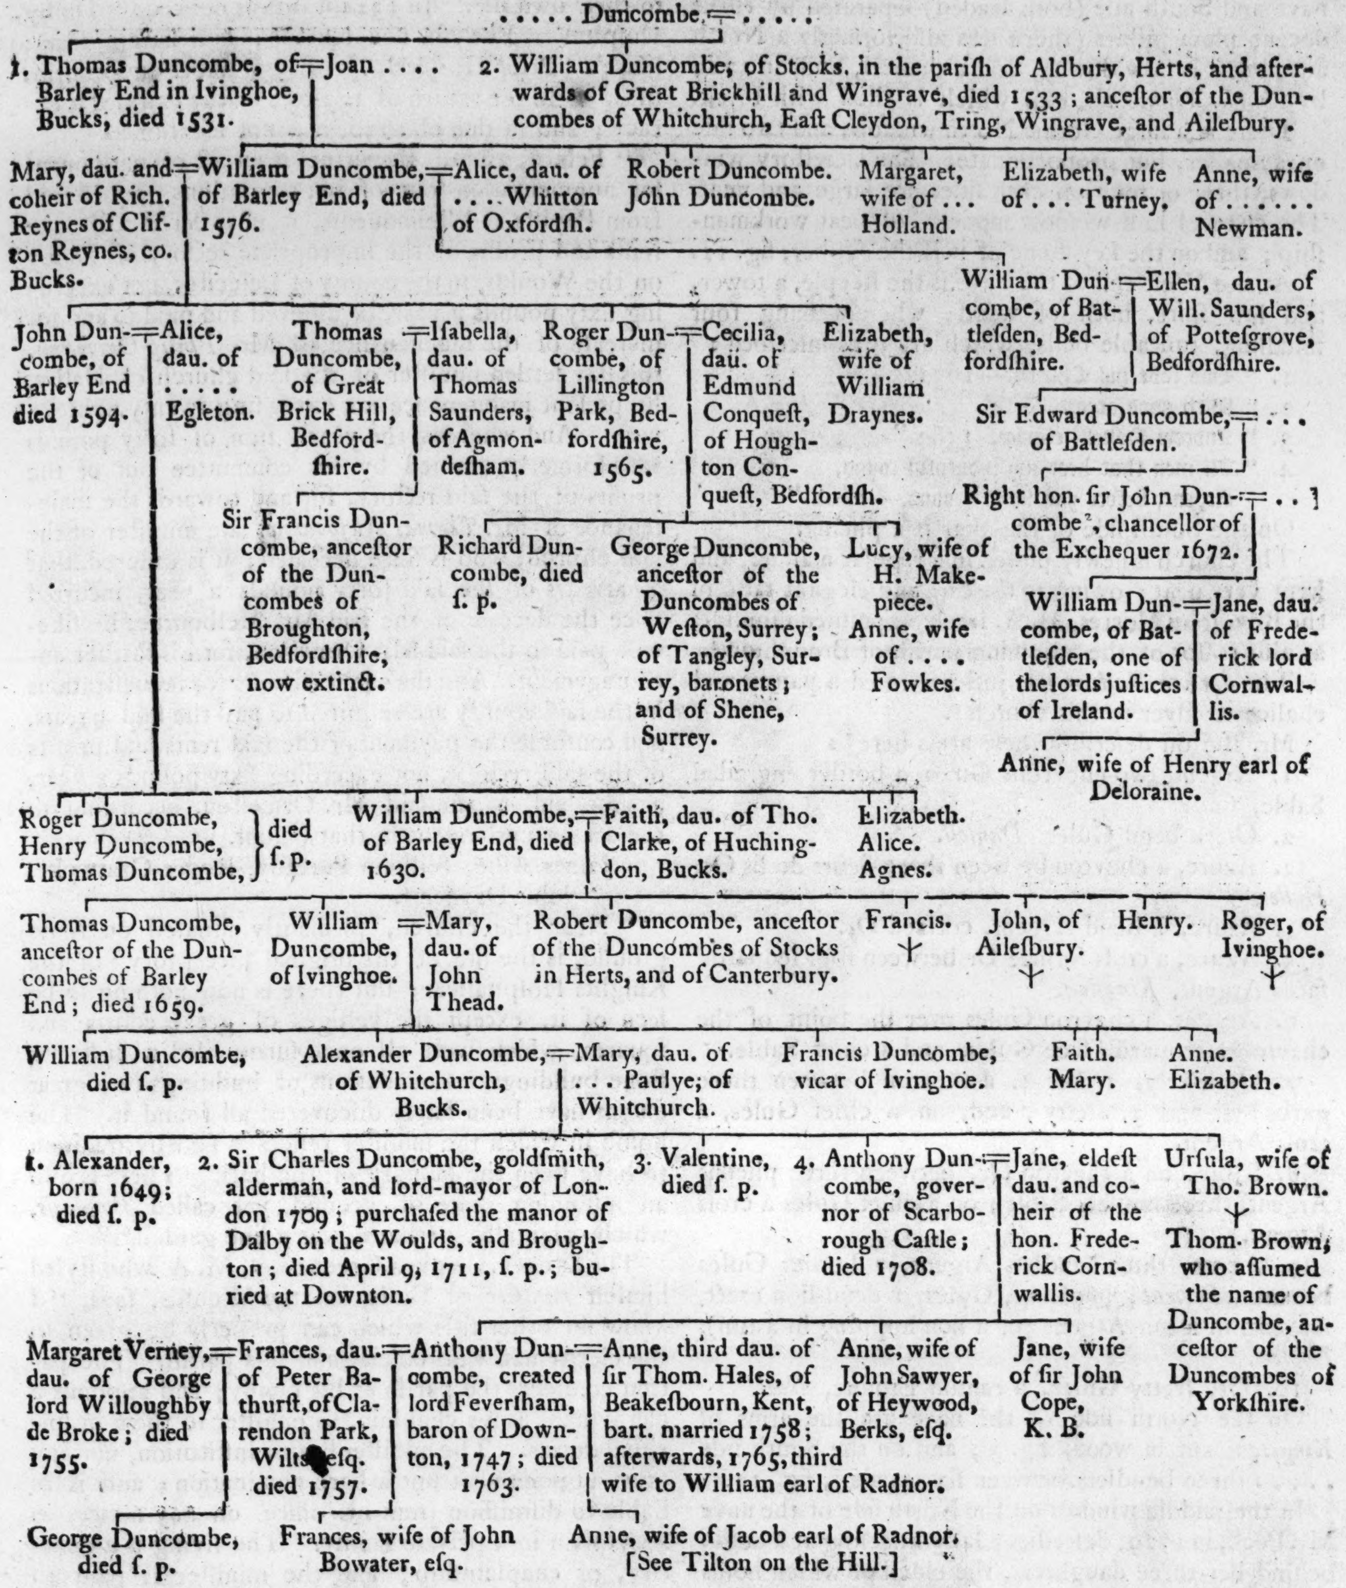
---

[1] Fines 11 John.

[2] This lady married to her ſecond huſband John Sheffield duke of Buckingham, and, dying Feb. 7, 1703, was buried in Weſtminſter Abbey.

Pedigree of the DUNCOMBE Family[1].

(For the Arms, ſee p. 254.)



..... Duncombe = ...

1. Thomas Duncombe, of Barley End in Ivinghoe, Bucks, died 1531. = Joan ....
2. William Duncombe, of Stocks, in the pariſh of Aldbury, Herts, and afterwards of Great Brickhill and Wingrave, died 1533; anceſtor of the Duncombes of Whitchurch, Eaſt Cleydon, Tring, Wingrave, and Aileſbury.

Mary, dau. and coheir of Rich. Reynes of Clifton Reynes, co. Bucks. = William Duncombe, of Barley End, died 1576. = Alice, dau. of .... Whitton of Oxfordſh.
Robert Duncombe.
John Duncombe.
Margaret, wife of ... Holland.
Elizabeth, wife of ... Turney.
Anne, wife of ...... Newman.

William Duncombe, of Batleſden, Bedfordſhire. = Ellen, dau. of Will. Saunders, of Potteſgrove, Bedfordſhire.

John Duncombe, of Barley End died 1594. = Alice, dau. of .... Egleton.
Thomas Duncombe, of Great Brick Hill, Bedfordſhire. = Iſabella, dau. of Thomas Saunders, of Agmondeſham.
Roger Duncombe, of Lillington Park, Bedfordſhire, 1565. = Cecilia, dau. of Edmund Conqueſt, of Houghton Conqueſt, Bedfordſh.
Elizabeth, wife of William Draynes.

Sir Edward Duncombe, of Battleſden. = ...

Sir Francis Duncombe, anceſtor of the Duncombes of Broughton, Bedfordſhire, now extinct.

Richard Duncombe, died ſ. p.
George Duncombe, anceſtor of the Duncombes of Weſton, Surrey; of Tangley, Surrey, baronets; and of Shene, Surrey.
Lucy, wife of H. Makepiece.
Anne, wife of .... Fowkes.

Right hon. ſir John Duncombe[2], chancellor of the Exchequer 1672. = ..]

William Duncombe, of Batleſden, one of the lords juſtices of Ireland. = Jane, dau. of Frederick lord Cornwallis.

Anne, wife of Henry earl of Deloraine.

Roger Duncombe,
Henry Duncombe,
Thomas Duncombe, } died ſ. p.
William Duncombe, of Barley End, died 1630. = Faith, dau. of Tho. Clarke, of Huchingdon, Bucks.
Elizabeth.
Alice.
Agnes.

Thomas Duncombe, anceſtor of the Duncombes of Barley End; died 1659.
William Duncombe, of Ivinghoe. = Mary, dau. of John Thead.
Robert Duncombe, anceſtor of the Duncombes of Stocks in Herts, and of Canterbury.
Francis. ✝
John, of Aileſbury. ✝
Henry.
Roger, of Ivinghoe. ✝

William Duncombe, died ſ. p.
Alexander Duncombe, of Whitchurch, Bucks. = Mary, dau. of ... Paulye; of Whitchurch.
Francis Duncombe, vicar of Ivinghoe.
Faith.
Mary.
Anne.
Elizabeth.

1. Alexander, born 1649; died ſ. p.
2. Sir Charles Duncombe, goldſmith, alderman, and lord-mayor of London 1709; purchaſed the manor of Dalby on the Woulds, and Broughton; died April 9, 1711, ſ. p.; buried at Downton.
3. Valentine, died ſ. p.
4. Anthony Duncombe, governor of Scarborough Caſtle; died 1708. = Jane, eldeſt dau. and coheir of the hon. Frederick Cornwallis.

Urſula, wife of Tho. Brown. ✝
Thom. Brown, who aſſumed the name of Duncombe, anceſtor of the Duncombes of Yorkſhire.

Margaret Verney, dau. of George lord Willoughby de Broke; died 1755. = Frances, dau. of Peter Bathurſt, of Clarendon Park, Wilts, eſq. died 1757. = Anthony Duncombe, created lord Feverſham, baron of Downton, 1747; died 1763. = Anne, third dau. of ſir Thom. Hales, of Beakeſbourn, Kent, bart. married 1758; afterwards, 1765, third wife to William earl of Radnor.
Anne, wife of John Sawyer, of Heywood, Berks, eſq.
Jane, wife of ſir John Cope, K. B.

George Duncombe, died ſ. p.
Frances, wife of John Bowater, eſq.
Anne, wife of Jacob earl of Radnor. [See Tilton on the Hill.]

---

[1] "This name is Saxon, and is ſuppoſed to be derived from Dun, a hill or hilly plain; and Combe, a valley between hills, which exactly correſponds with the ſituation of Barley End in Bucks, where the elder branch of the family has reſided many years. Comb-bank, in Kent, lord Frederick Campbell's houſe, is ſo ſtyled for the ſame reaſon." This note is by the late Rev. John Duncombe, of Canterbury. It appears from Le Neve's Faſti, vol. I. p. 220, that in 1257 William Duncombe was archdeacon of Suffolk.

[2] "While king Charles I. was a priſoner at Cariſbrook Caſtle, 1648, he was his own chaplain, as not thinking it fit to accept of any of the Preſbyterian miniſters on that account; albeit, as occaſion offered, he thanked and was civil to them, when they applied themſelves to him for that purpoſe. Among others, one Troughton, who was chaplain to colonel Hammond, governor of the Iſle of Wight, and preacher to the ſoldiers of the garriſon of Cariſbrook, would many times be in the preſence-chamber when his majeſty was at dinner. And though he was a young man, yet he was a ſcholar, had good education, and would argue notably in defence of ſome tenets he held in oppoſition to certain ceremonies and diſcipline in the Epiſcopacy. The king uſually after meals would walk for near an hour, and take many turns in the preſence-chamber, and when he found the chaplain there, he would pleaſurably enter into diſputation with him, and the chaplain would be very earneſt in defence of his opinion. The king never checked him for his confidence, but allowed him his liberty, and would be very pleaſant and merry with him. The king, being a good logician, and well read in hiſtory and matters of controverſy, gained ground of his opponent, and would pleaſe himſelf with one paſſage which happened, and that was this: During their diſcourſe, the chaplain then ſtanding at the end of the preſence-chamber, between a lieutenant of the garriſon (who had a ſword in his hand, and was earneſtly liſtening to what the king ſaid in the debate) and a gentleman who was not known there, the king, in the heat of his diſcourſe, ſuddenly diſarmed the lieutenant by taking the ſword out of his hand, which made him look ſtrangely, and the more when his majeſty drew it, for that put the chaplain in a fright alſo, he not imagining the reaſon, until the ſtranger (better underſtanding the king's meaning) fell upon his knees, and the king laying the naked ſword upon his ſhoulder, conferred upon him the order of knighthood, telling him withall, it was to perform a promiſe to his relations. This ſtranger's name was John Duncombe, of Battleſden in Bedfordſhire, eſq. who was afterwards a ſervant to king Charles II. ſworn a member of his privy council May 22, 1667, being then one of the commiſſioners of his majeſty's treaſury, and at length, on the reſignation of ſir Anthony Aſhley Cooper, chancellor and under-treaſurer of the Exchequer about the 20th of November, 1672. I had this ſtory from ſir Thomas Herbert the Traveller, then one of the grooms of his majeſty's bed-chamber." Wood, Athen. Oxon. vol. II. p. 688.

The CHURCH or rather CHAPEL, (ſee Plate XXXVII.), dedicated to St. John the Baptiſt, is ſmall, conſiſting of a nave and South aile (both leaded) ſeparated by three decent plain pillars (there was alſo formerly a North aile, but it is now down); and a chancel, built in 1729 by Charles Duncombe, eſq. which is tiled with brick.

There is a large Gothic North window, and two ſide ones ſmaller, but proportionate. The clereſtory windows, three or four on each ſide, are large and neat. The chancel Eaſt window modern, of neat workmanſhip; and on the key-ſtone of it is the cypher, fig. 11.

At the Weſt end of the nave is the ſteeple, a tower, and low ſpire, both of wood; wherein hang four middling, tuneable bells, which are thus inſcribed:

1. "God ſave his Church.—1631."
2. "With good accord."
3. "Andrew Nouell, eſquier, 1582."
4. "All men that hear my mournful ſound,
   Repent, before you lie in ground.—1608."

On the South ſide of the altar is a piſcina.

The church is newly pewed in a regular manner, and kept very neat; owing to the care and elegant taſte of the Rev. John Morres, M. A. lately appointed miniſter, as alſo rector of the adjoining pariſh of Broughton[1].

The earl of Radnor has juſt preſented a patten and chalice of ſilver to this church[2].

Mr. Burton deſcribes theſe arms here[3]:

1. Argent, two chevrons Gules, a border engrailed Sable, Clare.
2. Or, a bend Gules, Danſell.
3. Azure, a chevron between three fleurs de lis Or, Hulles.
4. Azure, a bend Argent, cotized Or.
5. Azure, a croſs formée Or between four leopards' faces Argent, Kingſton.
6. Argent, a chevron Gules over the point of the chevron a leopard's face Gules, and a chief Sable.
7. Quarterly, 1. and 4, a chevron between three garbs; 2. and 3, fretty; and, on a chief Gules, a croſs Argent.
8. Sable, on a chevron Or, between three pheons Argent, three mullets Sable; on a chief Gules a croſs Argent.
9. Azure, three bendlets Argent, a border Gules bezanty, Perient; impaling, Gules, a demi-lion erect, Argent, in a tun Argent (or a lion hopping in a tun), Hopton.
10. Or, fretty Gules, a canton Ermine, Noel.

On the North ſide of the nave are the arms of Kingston, cut in wood, fig. 5; and on the South ſide ..... three bendlets between ſix martlets, fig. 12.

In the middle window on the North ſide of the nave Mr. Peck, in 1729, deſcribes a lady kneeling at a deſk; behind her three daughters, the eldeſt of which holds a ſhield; on which appears, Or, on a feſs .... three cinquefoils .....; in baſe a croſier, fig. 13.

In the Matriculus of 1220, the Knights Hoſpitallers of St. John of Jeruſalem are ſaid to be patrons of the church of Dalby; and they had then the profits thereof to their own uſe. In 1344 it is thus noticed: "Dalby Hoſpital'. Eccleſia non taxatur; eccleſia ejuſdem 5 marc'. Prior Hoſpitalis Jeruſalem habet in proprios uſus."—In the return of 1534-5, Dalby is ſtyled a curacy; and in that of 1650, it is not mentioned.

"Feb. 3, 1652. By virtue of an act of parliament for augmentation out of impropriations ſequeſtered from Papiſts and delinquents, it is ordered that the rents and profits of the impropriate rectory of Dalby on the Woulds, in the county of Leiceſter, not exceeding ſixty pounds a year, be allowed and paid to and for increaſe of the maintenance of Mr. Philip Ormeſton, this day ſettled miniſter of the ſaid church of Dalby, his preſent maintenance not exceeding twenty nobles a year. And whereas the yearly ſum of forty pounds was formerly granted by this committee out of the profits of the ſaid rectory, for and towards the maintenance of Mr. Thomas Melbourne, late miniſter of the ſaid church, who is ſince deceaſed; it is ordered, that all arrears of the ſaid forty pounds a year, incurred ſince the deceaſe of the ſaid Mr. Melbourne, be likewiſe paid to the ſaid Mr. Ormeſton, for his farther encouragement. And the commiſſioners for ſequeſtrations in the ſaid county are required to pay the ſaid arrears, and continue the payment of the ſaid rents and profits of the ſaid rectory, not exceeding ſixty pounds a year, as aforeſaid, to the ſaid Mr. Ormeſton, according to the act of parliament in that behalf.

James Aſhe, William Purefoy, Roger Gratwyke, John Dryden[4].

"Near the church, pleaſantly ſituated on riſing ground, is the ſite of the original preceptory[5] of the Knights Hoſpitallers; but there is now nothing to be ſeen of it, except the veſtiges of great courts and ſquares, which were all once ſurrounded with ſtrong ſtone buildings. Foundations of buildings to a great extent have been lately diſcovered all round it. The houſe in which the miniſter reſides is ſaid by tradition to have been the laundry of the hall. There is alſo an adjoining piece of ground, yet called Paradiſe, which originally, perhaps, was a fine garden[6]."

The late rev. Stephen Greenaway, M. A. who ſtyled himſelf miniſter of Dalby on the Woulds, ſays, "I know no other title which can properly be given to the clergyman who officiates in this pariſh. The patron conſiders the pariſh as his family; and appoints a clergyman, as his chaplain, to miniſter to them in ſpiritual duties. The miniſter has no inſtitution, nor any other appointment but a bare nomination; and is as liable to diſmiſſion from his office, on any notice, as a chaplain in a private family. The living is a donative, or chaplainſhip; and the miniſter is paid 40 guineas a year out of the eſtate." In Bacon's Liber Regis, it is entered as a curacy, worth £80. a year.

The wake is kept on the Sunday next after the feaſt of St. John the Baptiſt.

---

[1] Since printing the account of Nether Broughton, the Rev. John Morres, the rector, has built a new and neat parſonage-houſe there. He is nephew of Dr. Morres, many years vicar of Hinckley; was lately of Brazen Noſe College, and took the degree of A. M. Oct. 23, 1788.

[2] To the church of Nether Broughton lord Radnor has alſo preſented a patten and chalice of ſilver, ſo exquiſite for taſte, deſign, and workmanſhip, that I with great pleaſure preſent to my readers an engraving of them from a drawing tranſmitted to the Gentleman's Magazine by my worthy friend Dr. Ford; ſee Plate XXXVIII. No apology will, on this occaſion, I believe, be neceſſary for copying the following letter to Mr. Urban:

"Permit me, through your extenſive communication, to offer to public notice, a very choice and coſtly gift, which the piety and liberality of a noble Peer has lately dedicated to the church. It is a paten and cup from the earl of Radnor, for the uſe of the altar at Nether Broughton, Leiceſterſhire; every way correſponding with the character of that Nobleman, ſo juſtly eſteemed for claſſical erudition, judicious taſte, poliſhed manners, unſhaken integrity, and inviolate attachment to the principles of orthodox belief. This leads him to a reverence for the ſervice, and whatever contributes to the dignity and ornament of churches under his immediate patronage. There is a chapel in the cathedral of Saliſbury belonging to his lordſhip, in right of anceſtry, which I am informed is converted into an oratory for his own uſe, and beautified with a profuſion of elegance. The annexed plate repreſents the donation above-mentioned. I was charmed with the deſign and execution of it; and delighted to find, amidſt ſuch a decay of piety, and decline of affection for the houſe of God, among perſons of high rank, zeal for that worſhip, which is after the beauty of holineſs in the Church of England, was not quite waxed cold. At my requeſt, Mrs. Morres, lady of the rector of Nether Broughton, moſt obligingly condeſcended to delineate the workmanſhip; and ſhe has touched it with all the delicacy and ſpirit of her maſterly pencil. The drawing repreſents the front and two adjoining compartments of the cup, which is of beautifully enchaſed ſilver, gilt on the inſide. It is of a hexagon form, with a circular rim. In the centre of the reverſe are the arms of Radnor; and on the compartment on each ſide the ſame inſcription as that on the paten. The hexagon baſis of the cup exactly fits into the paten. I only add, that the attention of the noble donor to the honourable and graceful celebration of the Euchariſt, could not have been directed to a place, where is a more becoming propriety and preciſion in the obſervation of the rights and ceremonies of our moſt excellent Church. Yours, &c. T. F. Melton Mowbray, May 22, 1799."

[3] Plate XXXVII. fig. 1—10.

[4] From the original books of the Committee of ſequeſtration, preſerved in the Bodleian Library.

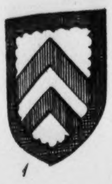
[5] Some account of the general value of this perceptory has been given in pp. 245. 247; and farther particulars of it will be ſtated under the hiſtory of Rothley.

[6] From the MSS. of Mr. Peck, 1729.

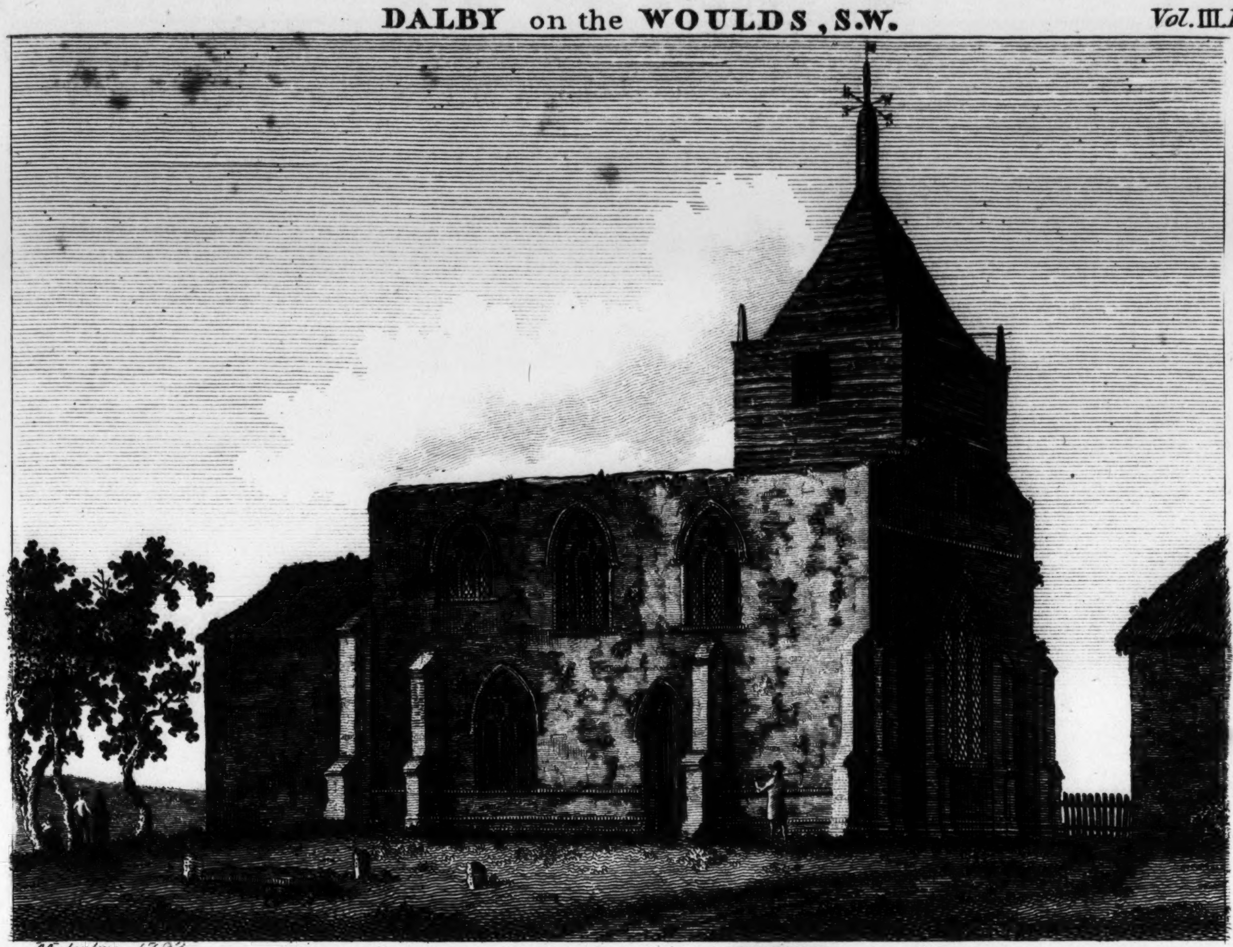
MINISTERS.

DALBY on the WOULDS, S.W.

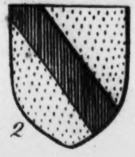
Vol. III. Pl. XXXVII. p. 256.



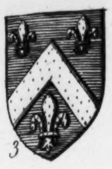
1



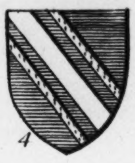
Malcolm 1792



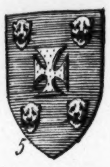
2



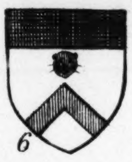
3



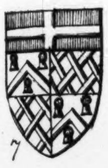
4



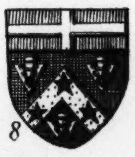
5



6



7



8

Fig. 17.

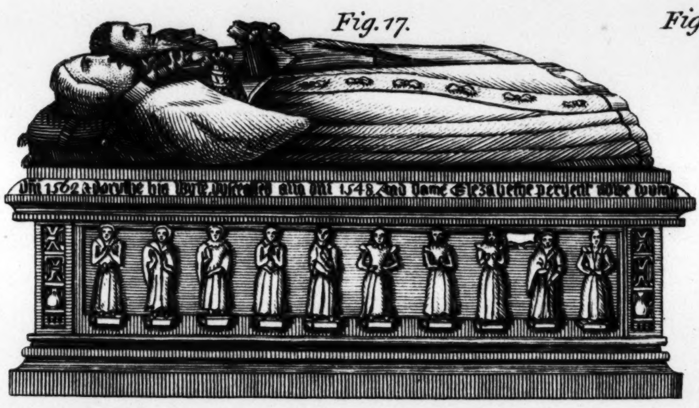


Fig. 11.

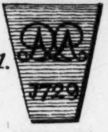
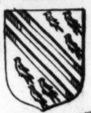
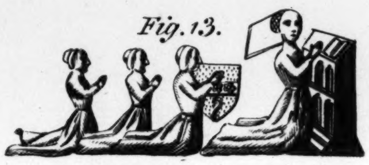
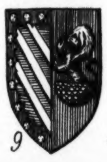




12

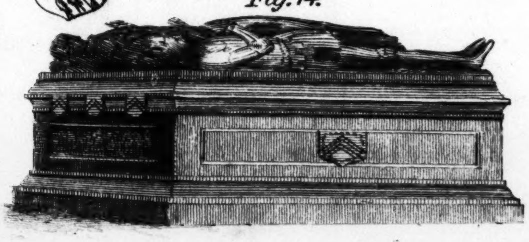
Fig. 13.

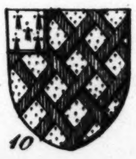




9

Fig. 14.





10

Fig. 27.

or or sa gu
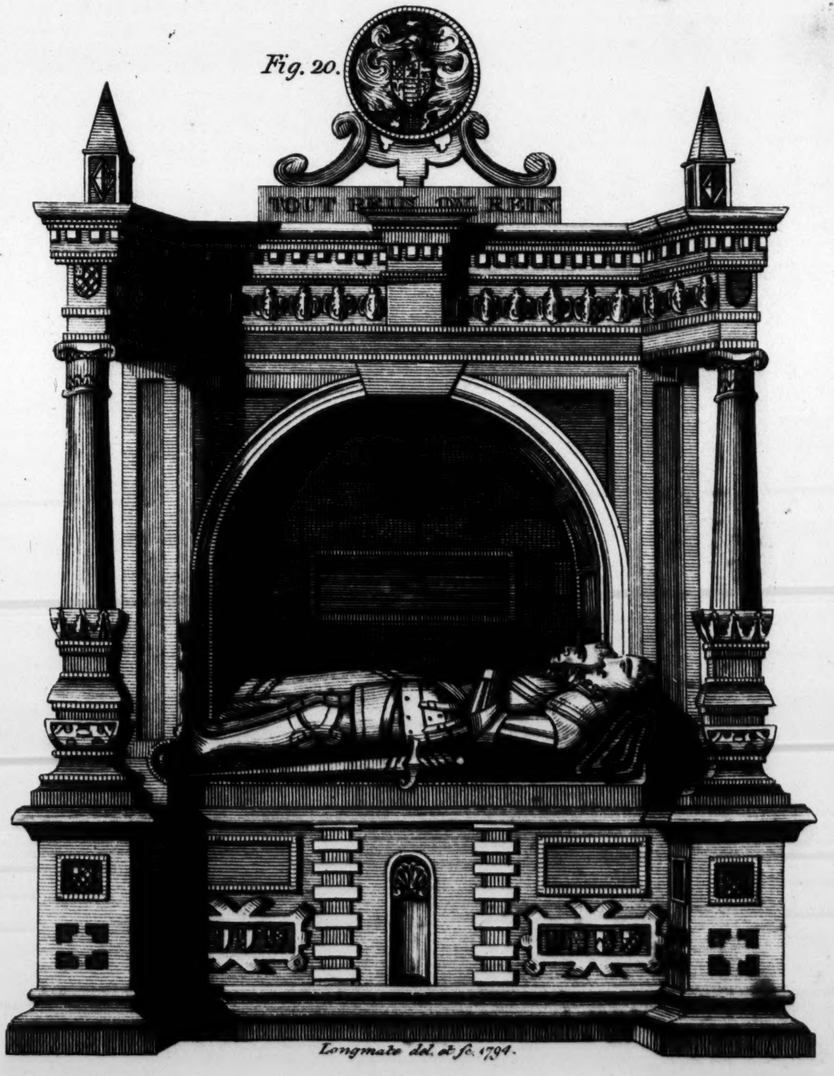
ar

Fig. 20.



TOUT BIEN OU RIEN

Longmate del. et sc. 1794.

Fig. 28.

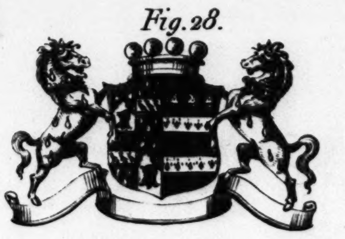


Fig. 29.

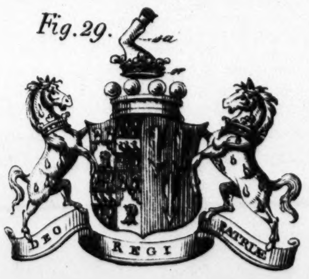
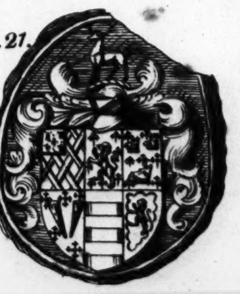
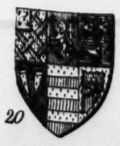


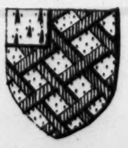
sa
or
DEO
REGI
PATRIÆ

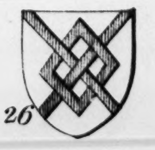
Fig. 21.



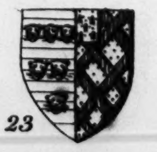


20

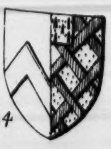




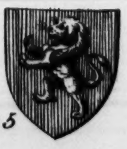
26



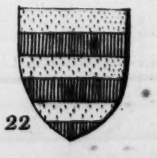
23



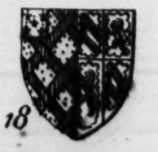
24



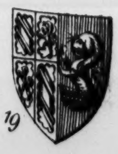
25



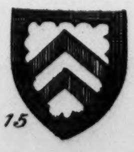
22



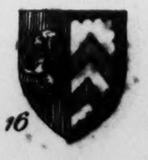
18



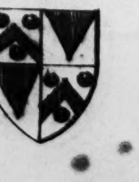
19



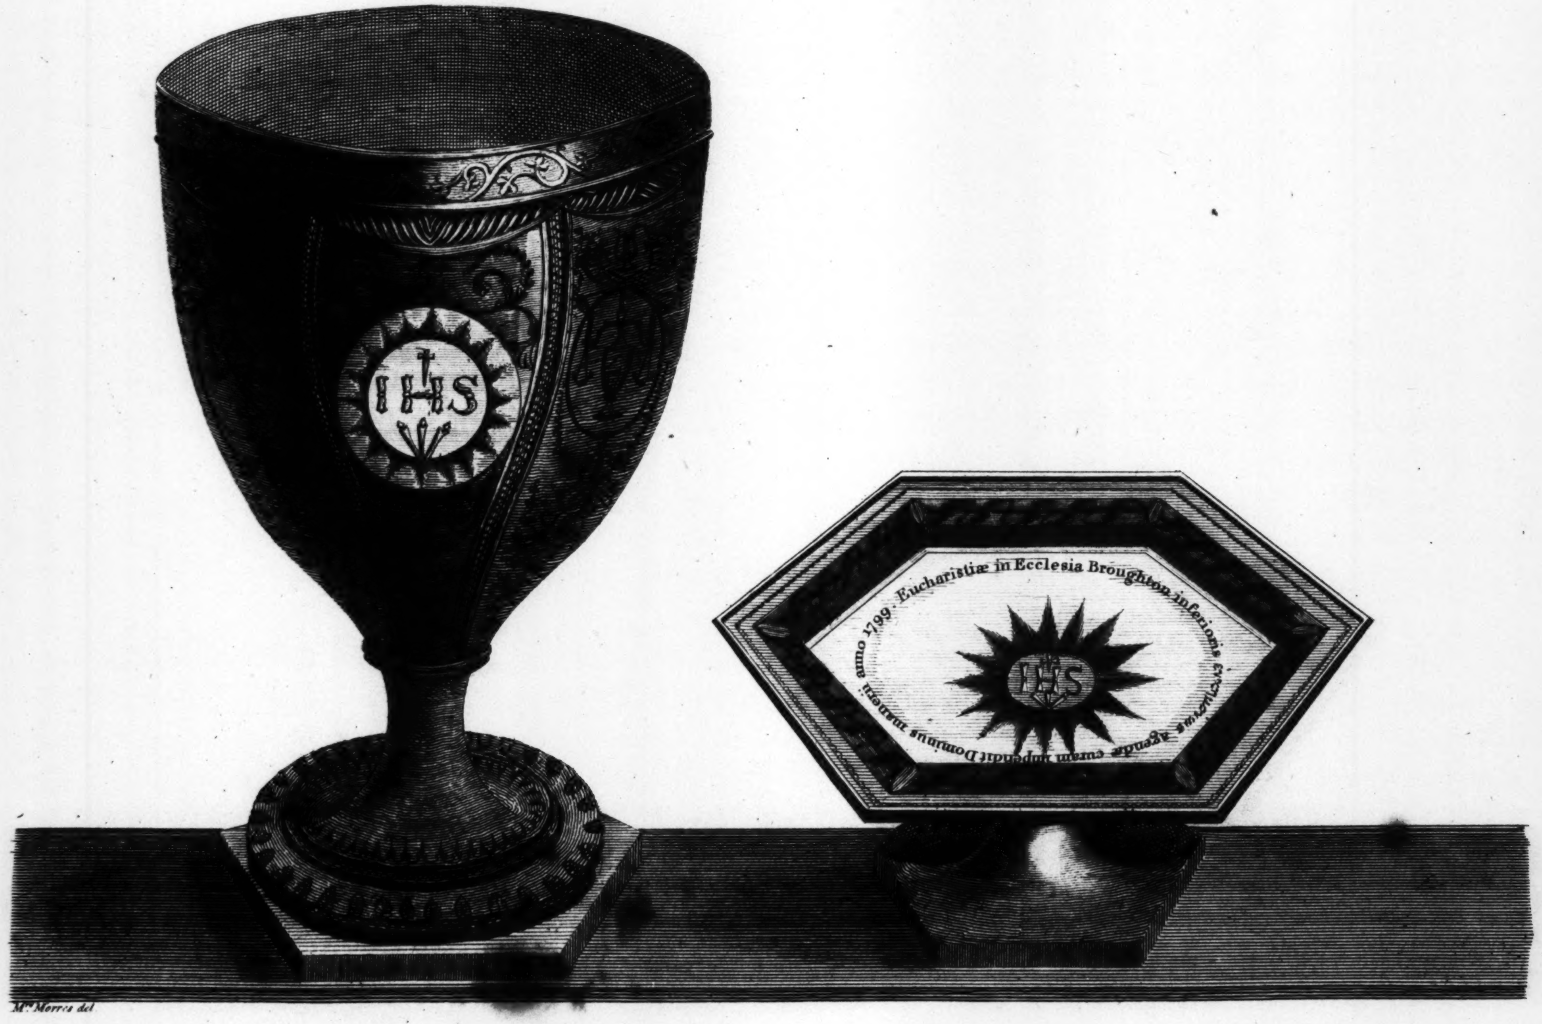
15



16



30



IHS
Eucharistiæ in Ecclesia Broughton inferioris agendæ curam impendit Dominus manerii anno 1799.
IHS

Mrs. Morres del

PATTEN & CHALICE presented to NETHER BROUGHTON CHURCH, by the Earl of Radnor.

MINISTERS.	PATRONS.
John de Dalderby [1], 1272.
John Derby, chaplain, Sept. 22, 1414.	Henry Crumwell, locumtenens of W. Hulle, prior of the hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem [2].
John Allen, LL. D. about 1525.	Cardinal Wolſey, in the plenitude of power.
Theophilus Ruſted [3].
Thomas Melbourne, 1651.	Parliamentary Sequeſtrators.
Philip Ormeſton, 1652.
Robert Harriſon, died 1740.	Anthony Duncombe, eſq.
Stephen Greenaway [4], M. A. 1740; died 1795.
John Morres, M. A. 1796.	Jacob earl of Radnor.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

On a monument, ſtanding in Mr. Burton's time, but ſince, with many others, defaced and gone, was this inſcription:

"Hic jacent corpora Johannis Berkley et Emme conſortis ejus; qui obiit 1383."

In the chancel are three very fine monuments of the Noel family, curiouſly wrought with figures, but ſadly defaced and ruinated. What a pity, ſhame, want of taſte and gratitude, to let the tombs of anceſtors decay, whoſe manſions and eſtates the heirs are ſo ſtudious to improve: but ſo it is in too many parts of this county.

Adjoining to the North-eaſt corner is an altar-monument, about three feet ſquare (fig. 14.), with figures of two men in complete armour, with large flowing beards, and greyhounds at their feet; betwixt them a lady; and two ſons; and under them this inſcription:

"Thes be yᵉ pyctturs of Jhon Hopton[5], eſquier, an̄ his wyfe, and aftᵈ wyfe ũto ſir Thom' Tyrull, knyght."

On the ſide of this monument, Argent, two chevrons Gules within a border engrailed Sable, Clare; fig. 15.

On the Weſt end Hopton; impaling Clare, fig. 16.

Round another altar-tomb of alabaſter on the ſame ſide; fig. 17.

"Here lyeth m̄ Andrewe Noell, eſquyer, diſceaſed yᵉ xxiii day of Januarie, aⁿᵒ dn̄i 1562; and Dorythe his wyfe, dyſceaſſed an̄o dn̄i 1548; and dame Elezabethe Peryent, now lyving, and late wyfe to yᵉ ſaid Andrewe Noell: whoſe ſoulles God pardon."

At the Eaſt end, carved on ſtone: Noel; impaling, Quarterly, 1. and 4, ... a bend between two cottizes within a border engrailed ....; 2. and 3, Or, a lion rampant within a border engrailed, Tyrrell; fig. 18.

At the Weſt end:

1. Shield of Noel ſingly, fig. 10.
2. Quarterly, 1. and 4, ... a bend between two cottizes within a border engrailed Or: 2. and 3, Tyrrell; impaling Hopton; fig. 19.

Nearly oppoſite to the laſt, on the South ſide, on a large and handſome monument; fig. 20:

"In Abitum illuſtriſſimi viri domini Andreæ Noel,
Equitis aurati, & dominæ Mabiliæ uxoris ejus, Epitaphium.
Qui quidem Andreas animam Chriſto reddidit die XIX Oct. anno Dō 1607;
Mabilia autem die XXI Junii, anº Salutis 1603.
Andreæ ſtatua eſt de clarâ ſtirpe Noelli,
Militis; & ſecum Mablia ſponſa jacet:
Ut quos unus amor, mens una, in corpore bino,
Junxerat; hos unus continet hic tumulus.
Qui, licèt æthereas non carpant ampliùs auras;
Illorum virtus, gloria, fama, viget."

Arms at the top[6]:

Quarterly of ſix: 1. Noel; 2. Gules, a lion rampant within a ſemé of croſs croſslets fitchée Or, Capel; 3. Azure, ſemé of croſs croſslets Or, three boars' heads couped Argent, Bere; 4. Sable, ſemé of croſs croſslets, two flutes Or, Williams of Tame in Oxfordſhire; 5. Barry of ſix, Or and Gules, Owen; 6. Tyrrell. Motto, TOUT BIEN, OV RIEN.

Arms at bottom in a row:

1, 2, 3, Noel; impalements blank.

4. Noel ſingle.
5. Barry of ſix, Or and Gules, Owen; fig. 22.
6. Barry of twelve, ... ſix leopards' faces ..... impaling Noel; fig. 23.
7. Gules, a chevron between three ..... defaced; impaling Noel; fig. 24.
8. Noel ſingle.

At the Eaſt end.

1. Gules, a lion rampant ......; fig. 25.
2. At the Weſt end.
3. Barry of twelve, ... ſix leopards' faces.

On the top of one pillar are the arms of Noel; and on the other there has been a coat of arms, now defaced. At bottom, Noel; and on the other, Argent, a frett Gules, Vernon; fig. 26.

Three atchievements are here ſet up for the late lord Feverſham's family.

1. Per chevron engrailed, Gules and Argent, three talbots' heads eraſed counterchanged, Duncombe; impaling, Gules, three croſſes recercele, voided Or; a chief Vaire, Ermine and Erminois, Verney[7]. Supporters, on the dexter, a horſe Sable, gutte de Sang, and ducally collared Or; on the ſiniſter, an antelope Argent, ſpotted Gules, armed, erected, and unguled Or; fig. 27.
2. Quarterly, 1. and 4, Duncombe; 2. and 3, Sable, gutté de l'eau, on a feſs Argent, three Corniſh choughs Sable, Cornwallis; impaling, Sable, two bars Ermine, in chief three croſſes patée Or, Bathurſt[8]. Supporters, two horſes Sable, gutté de ſang, and ducally gorged Or, fig. 28.
3. Quarterly, Duncombe and Cornwallis; impaling,

---

[1] John de Dalderby, preſented to the rectory of Hether, 17 kal. Maii, 1271, was preſented in 1272 to Dalby: which not being then eſtimated to be worth more than five marks a year, he had a diſpenſation, 4 non. Maii, to hold Hether with it. He vacated both in 1301, on accepting the biſhoprick of Lincoln, of which dioceſe he had been appointed chancellor in 1293.

[2] Reg. Chicheley, archiep. Cant. p. 248.

[3] Brother to the well-known and moſt charitable Mr. Thomas Ruſted; beſides which, and his ſequeſtration, we know nothing about him. See Walker's Sufferings of the Clergy, p. 345.

[4] See his portrait, and ſome account of him, vol. II. 121. 884; to which may be added, the following extract, from the Preface to the Gentleman's Diary for 1797, where the Editor ſays, "he is ſorry to inform his readers of the death of the Rev. Stephen Greenaway, M. A. rector of Nether Broughton, cum Old Dalby, Leiceſterſhire, and vicar of Cropwell Biſhop, Nottingham; which happened in September 1795, at the good old age of 81. He was the author of the Queſtions and Anſwers in this Diary, ſigned Philocritus; of the Odes without any name; and of the poetical pieces under the ſignature Ουτις. His favourite ſtudy was the Hebrew Scriptures, which he continued as long as he was able, and dictated the anſwer to the 171ſt queſtion but a few weeks before his death (ſee Gent. Diary, 1798, p. 15); when his hope, to the Author's knowledge, was full of immortality. He continued to do his duty of a pariſh prieſt till he frequently fainted away in the middle of it; and his whole deſire was to prove himſelf a faithful ſervant of his Lord and Maſter. The death of ſuch a man is a public loſs."

[5] Father to dame Elizabeth Peryent, the ſecond wife of Andrew Noel, eſq. though the Peerage erroneouſly calls her his firſt wife. She outlived Mr. Noel, as appears by the above epitaph; and alſo by a Memorandum in the Exchequer, Trin. Record. 7 Eliz Rot. 61. "De dominâ Eliz. Peryn, viduâ occaſionatâ ad oſtendendum quo titulo tenet manerium de Dalby, & alia, in com' Leiceſtriæ & Rutlandiæ."

[6] The ſame arms are on the ſeal engraved in fig. 21.

[7] This lady was daughter of the late lord Willoughby de Broke.

[8] This lady was Frances Bathurſt, related to earl Bathurſt. She was married to the late Anthony Duncombe lord Feverſham, Nov. 2, 1756 (being his ſecond wife); and died, in childbed of a daughter, Nov. 21, 1757, now Mrs. Bowater.

Gules, three arrows Or, Hales[1]. Supporters, two horſes as before. Creſt, a horſe's hind-leg and thigh erect Sable, ſhoe Argent, iſſuing out of a ducal coronet Or, fig. 29.

On a braſs plate on a flat ſtone:

"Here lieth Captain Timothy Hemſley; and near him Katharine his wife,
daughter of John Morton,
of Sileby, eſq. He departed
this life the 4th day of January, anno 1690, aged 65 years."

In the nave, on flat ſtones:

1. "Here lieth the body of
Mrs. Anne Shepherd, widow, who died the 24th of April, 1733, aged 69."

2. "Here lieth interred the body of
Mr. Jonathan Shepherd,
who departed this life April 10, 1729,
in the 72d year of his age."

3. "Here lieth interred the body of Jonathan-Lewis Shepherd, gent.
ſon of the late Matthew Shepherd by Mary his wife;
who departed this life Feb. 9,
in the year of our Lord 1747,
and the 34th year of his age."

4. "Here lie interred the remains of Hugh ſon, and Elizabeth daughter, of Matthew and Mary Shepherd, of this pariſh.
Hugh died in 1760, aged 37;
Elizabeth in 1775, aged 50."

[Mrs. Elizabeth Shepherd[2], by her will in 1773, gave £10. towards building a ſchool-houſe, when the pariſh will bear the expences for other neceſſaries. This £10. was at intereſt till it became £20.; and then the inhabitants added £26. and built a ſchool-houſe in the year 1793.]

On a mural tablet in the South aile:

"Near this place
lies interred the body of Robert Harriſon, rector of Nether Broughton, and miniſter of this pariſh; who departed this life the 27th day of May, 1740, aged 74 years.
Alſo Barbara his wife, who departed this life the 22d day of June,
1730, aged 50 years.
And two of their daughters,
Dorothy and Barbara.
Dorothy died July 12, 1730, aged 27 years;
Barbara died June 30, 1730, aged 24 years."

[In the Regiſter are entered the "Progenies Roberti Harriſoni cleri, & Barbaræ uxoris ejus," between 1700 and 1715, to the number of twelve children.]

The following inſcription is intended to be placed on a mural tablet at the Eaſt end of the church, under the chancel window:

"Pauliſper
(ſupremâ laborantium meſſe remunerandus)
juxta tumulatur
STEPHANUS GREENAWAY, A. M. annos pluſquam LVIII
apud nos & vicinos Broughtonienſes,
Paſtor, Concinator, Catechiſta vigilantiſſimus.
In quo Scientia, Pietas, Fides, moreſque ſuperioris ſeculi ſuperſtites,
mœſtum ſui deſiderium bonis omnibus reliquere.
Sublatum ex oculis,
ne ex animo quoque exemplum excidat,
tumulum, quo filius patrem deflet, amore inſcribi voluit T. H.
Obiit prid. non. Septembris, anno Domini MDCCXCV. ætatis LXXXII."

On upright ſtones in the church-yard:

"To the memory of Mary Rudring, aged 71 years.
In brief, to ſpeak her praiſe, let this ſuffice;
She was a wife, both frugal, good, and wiſe;
Of children capable; to her huſband kind;
All certain ſymptoms of a virtuous mind."

Thomas Faulds died May 19, 1778, aged 76.
Anne his wife, Oct. 1, 1782, aged 77.
Thomas Wood, Feb. 9, 1793, aged 88.
Elizabeth his wife, May 6, 1786, aged 94.

John Aleyn, or Allen, firſt of Oxford, and then M. A. of Cambridge, though Wood rather thinks LL. B. Archbiſhop Warham ſent him to the Pope; and remaining at Rome 9 years, he was created LL. D. there, or in ſome Italian univerſity. After his return he became chaplain to cardinal Wolſey, who probably knew him at Oxford. He was a very uſeful man to the cardinal, and ſoon became commiſſary of his court, as legate à latere; and was even ſuſpected as guilty of perjury, as well as of great diſhoneſty, in the execution of his office. He mightily aſſiſted the Cardinal in ſuppreſſing the forty ſmall monaſteries, in order to found his two colleges at Oxford and Ipſwich. In part of remembrance for his ſervices, Wolſey procured him the living of Old Dalby, though it belonged to the maſter and brethren of Burton Lazars. In 1525 he became LL. D. in Oxford, and in 1528 was conſecrated archbiſhop of Dublin and chancellor of Ireland. In 1534, he was taken, in a time of rebellion, by Thomas Fitzgerald, eldeſt ſon of the earl of Kildare, and, by his command, cruelly murdered in the 58th year of his age; which by ſome was looked upon as a judgement on him for his concern in the diſſolution of Daventry priory, among many others, which was one of the forty above-noticed. However, in deteſtation of ſo bloody a fact, the place where it was committed was afterwards hedged-in, overgrown, and unfrequented[3]; and people obſerved that all the acceſſaries thereof being after pardoned for rebellion, ended their lives miſerably[4].

His preferments are thus ſtated in biſhop Kennett's MS additions to Wood:

"March 6, 1510, John Aleyn was preſented to Aldyngton, with the chapel annexed, by the archbiſhop pleno jure[5]. He was ſucceeded there by Eraſmus; and preſented, Jan. 29, 1511, to Riſeburgh in the deanry of Riſeburgh, by the ſame archbiſhop[6]. Nov. 19, 1524, magiſter Johannes Allen utriuſque juris doctor, was preſented to the perpetual vicarage of Alborne, vacant by the death of John Stane, clerk, on the preſentation of the prioreſs and convent of Ambreſbury, on the vacancy of the ſee of Saliſbury. Jan. 12, 1527, he was preſented to the rectory of Sundridge, in Shoreham deanry, in Canterbury dioceſe; and ſucceeded by John Barlow, 1528. Nov. 11, 1528, archbiſhop Warham preſented Chriſtopher Veyſey to Stoner church, the advowſon of which had been granted to him by the abbot and convent of St. Auguſtine at Canterbury[7].

Letter from Thomas Cardinal of York, concerning the admiſſion of Oliver Veſey, chaplain to the pariſh church of S. Wokindon, London dioceſe, by the free reſignation of John Allen, LL. D. laſt rector, on the preſentation of Clement Harleſton, eſq. and William Tyrrell, eſq. alternate patrons of the ſaid church. Dated 10 Dec. 1526[8].—He was prebend of Reculverland in the church of St. Paul from 1526 to 1528[9].

---

[1] This lady was Anne, daughter of ſir Thomas Hales, of Beakeſbourne and Howletts in Kent, bart.; who was married, after the death of lord Feverſham, July 22, 1765, to William the late earl of Radnor. The preſent earl married, Jan. 24, 1777, Anne, only daughter of the above lord Feverſham by this lady.

[2] The widow, it is ſuppoſed, of Mr. Shepherd, who in 1745 was tenant of the capital meſſuage and land at Dalby, at an annual rent of £76. 10*s.*

[3] Herbert's Hiſtory of Henry VIII. ed. 1672, p. 292.

[4] Wood, Athen. Oxon. vol. I. p. 672; vol. II. p. 35.

[5] Reg. Warham, fol. 342. a. Mr. Haſted, vol. III. p. 459, omits him between Linacre, who was preſented 1509, and Eraſmus 1511. Newcourt, vol. I. p. 203.

[6] Reg. Warham, fol. 344. a.

[7] Ibid. fol. 396.

[8] Reg. Tonſtal ep'i Lond.

[9] Newcourt, vol. II. p. 448.

FRISBY,

commonly called (for diſtinction from the other) Friſby ſuper Wrethek, or Wreke, is bounded by Grimſton on the North, Gaddeſby on the South, Kirkby Beler and Asfordby on the Eaſt, and Shouldby and Rotherby on the Weſt; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote.

Friſebi, at the time of the Conqueror's ſurvey, is noticed as two manors; one portion containing one ploughland and four acres of meadow, with a mill of twenty-eight pence value, dependent on the manor of Barrow[1]; the other, ſubordinate to Rothley, contained eight ploughlands and four acres of meadow; and two ſhillings were paid from part of a mill[2].

This village was given, together with the church, by Richard Baſſet and Maud Ridell his wife, to the priory of Laund[3], and confirmed to them by king Henry I.

On the aid granted to king Henry III. in 1235, towards the marrying of his ſiſter with the emperor of the Romans, William de Bringhurſt paid 16*d*. for a 20th part of a knight's fee in Friſby.

In the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about 1240, Friſeby Hervis is deſcribed as conſiſting of two ploughlands; Philip de Staunton had one ploughland there, and Henry Murdac another. And in Friſeby was "dim' feodum quod Hugo Diſpenſator tenet de Rogero de Moubray."

Roger de Quinci earl of Winton died, in 1270, ſeiſed of four knights' fees in Brantiſton, Honecote, Friſby, Galby, Stretton, and Norton, (value £10. each,) which William Burdet held; Eleanor de Vaus, relict of the ſaid Roger earl of Winton, held the ſaid four knights' fees in dower; and Robert Burdet held the ſame under her and the heirs of the ſaid earl[4].

In the Itinerary of 1280, Friſby, Rotherby, and Brookſby, anſwered collectively as one vill.

In 1305-6, the following inquiſition and licence occur:

"Juratores dicunt, quòd non eſt ad dampnum d̄ni regis, nec aliorum, ſi d̄nus rex concedat Willielmo filio Willielmi le Clerk, quòd ipſe xii acras terre & v acras prati, cum pertinentiis, in Friſeby ſuper Wrethek, in com' Leic'; Johanni Aldus, quòd ipſe xx acras terre & v acras prati, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; & Roberto le Mouner & Alicie uxori ejus, quòd ipſi viii acras prati, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; dare poſſint & aſſignare priori & conventui de Laund, in com' Leic' predicto. Et dicunt, quòd terre predicte & pratum tenentur in capite de predicto priore[5]."

"Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. ſalutem. Licèt, de communi conſilio regni, ſtatuerimus, quòd non liceat viris religioſis, ſeu aliis, ingredi feodum alicujus, ita quòd ad manum noſtram deveniat, ſine licentiâ noſtrâ & capitalis domini de quo res illa immediatè tenetur; per finem, tamen, quem dilectus nobis in Chriſto prior de Landâ fecit nobiſcum, coram dilectis noſtris Willielmo de Hamelton cancellario noſtro, & Johanne de Drokenesford tenentem-locum theſaurarii noſtri, conceſſimus & licentiam dedimus, pro nobis & heredibus noſtris, quantum in nobis eſt, Willielmo filio Willielmi le Clerk, quòd ipſe xii acras terre & v acras prati, cum pertinentiis, in Friſeby juxta Wrethek, in com' Leic', Johanni Aldus, quòd ipſe xx acras terre & v acras prati, cum pertinentiis, in eâdem villâ; & Roberto le Mouner & Alicie uxori ejus, quòd ipſi octo acras terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, dare poſſint & aſſignare prefato priori & conventui de Laund, habendas & tenendas eidem priori & conventui, & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, in perpetuum. Et eiſdem priori & conventui, quod ipſi predicta terras & pratum, cum pertinentiis, à prefatis Willielmo, Johanne, Roberto, & Aliciâ, recipere poſſint, & tenere ſibi & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, ſicut predictum eſt. Teſte rege, apud Lindhurſt, 1° die Februarii[6]."

In 1329, Philip Danet gave to the maſter of St. John's hoſpital at Leiceſter certain lands at Friſby, Wheſton, and Crafts, to find a prieſt to pray for his ſoul, and the ſouls of all the faithful[7].

On the 17th of October, 13.. the prior and convent of Laund obtained, for a fine certain, the following royal grant concerning their poſſeſſions at Dalby:

"Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. Sciatis, quod per finem quem dilectus nobis in Chriſto prior de Landâ fecit nobiſcum, pardonavimus, eidem priori & conventui ejuſdem loci, tranſgreſſionem quam fecerunt adquirendo ſibi & ſucceſſoribus ſuis in feodo, poſt publicationem ſtatuti de terris & tenementis ad manum mortuam non ponendis editi, unam rodam prati cum pertinentiis in Friſebye ſuper Wrethek, de Willielmo de Hikeling; quatuor acras terris cum pertinentiis in eadem villâ, de Willielmo de Gylmyn; quinque acras & quartam partem unius rode terre, & medietatem unius acre prati, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Alicia Burneheved; tres rodas terre & dimidiam, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villa, de Rogero Leceſone; tres acras & tres rodas terre & dimidiam, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Willielmo Nouſle; unam rodam terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Willielmo de Kirkeby; unam acram & unam rodam terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Hugone Walrand; tres rodas & tres partes unius rode terre, & unam rodam prati & dimidiam, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Ricardo Kempheved; quatuor acras, tres rodas, & tres partem unius rode prati, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Johanne Kybus; unam acram, & quartam partem unius rode terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ de Juliana que fuit uxor Walteri de Aſheby; medietatem unius acre terre cum pertinentiis in eadem villâ, de Henrico de Wykingſton; medietatem unius acre prati cum pertinentiis in eadem villâ, de Galfrido de Vilers; duas acras, tres rodas, & quartam partem unius rode terre cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ de Galfrido de Mom^{r}; duas rodas, & tres partes unius rode terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Letitiâ, que fuit uxor Galfridi de Mom^{r}; unam acram, tres rodas, & quartam partem unius rode terre, & unam rodam prati, cum pertinentiis, in eâdem villâ, de Adam de Whatboroughe; duo toſta, unum croftum, unam bovatam terre, & tres acras prati, cum pertinentiis, in eâdem villâ, de Elenâ filiâ Johannis Aldus; unam rodam terre & dimidiam, cum pertinentiis, in eâdem villâ, de Adam Not; unam rodam terre, cum pertinentiis, in eâdem villâ, de Cecilliâ Norman; unum toftum, unam acram & dimidiam, & quartam partem unius rode terre, & medietatem unius acre prati, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Ricardo Aldus, capellano; duo toſta, & medietatem unius acre prati, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Roberto Mom^{r}; medietatem unius crofti, & tres partes unius rode terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Johanne Aldus, capellano; unum meſſuagium, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Thoma de Sixteneby; unum meſſuagium, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Aliciâ Burneheved; & xxx^{a} ſolidos redditus, cum pertinentiis, in Halſtede, de Petro de Lubbenham, perſonâ eccleſie de Haldanby; & etiam quinque acras, & tres rodas terre, & duas acras & unam rodam prati & dimidiam, cum pertinentiis, in predictâ villâ de Friſeby, de Johanne le Clerk, in eſcambium, pro quinque acris & tribus rodis terre, & duabus acris & unâ rodâ prati & dimidiâ, cum pertinentiis, in eâdem villâ; quinque acras & duas rodas terre & dimidiam, duas acras & unam rodam, & quartam partem unius rode prati, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Radulpho

---

[1] "In Friſebi 1 carucata terræ & dimidia; & 4 acræ prati; & molinum 28 denariorum." Domeſday, fol. 237. a. 1.

[2] "In Friſebi 8 carucatæ terræ, 4 acræ prati; & de parte molini 2 ſolidos." Ibid. fol. 230. b. 1.

[3] Cart. 4 Edw. III. n. 5. per Inſpeximus.

[4] Eſch. 5 Edw. I. N° 36. Leic.

[5] Inq. ad quod dampnum, 34 Edw. I.

[6] Pat. 34 Edw. I. m. 36.

[7] Pat. 2 Edw. III. pars 1. m. 28.

Gerveys & Thomâ fratre ejus, in eſcambium pro quinque acris & duabus rodis terre & dimidiâ, duabus acris & unâ rodâ & quartâ parte unius rode prati, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; tres acras & tres rodas terre & dimidiam, & quartam partem unius rode terre, & medietatem unius rode, & quartam partem unius rode prati, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Thomâ Sixtenbye, in eſcambium pro tribus acris & tribus rodis terre, & dimidiâ & quartâ parte unius rode terre, & medietate unius rode, & quartâ parte unius rode prati, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; unam acram terre & dimidiam, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Reginaldo filio Gervaſii, in eſcambium pro unâ acrâ terre & dimidiâ, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; tres rodas terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Petro Mabile, in eſcambium pro tribus rodis terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; medietatem unius acre terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Johanne Pote, in eſcambium pro medietate unius acre terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; tres rodas terre, & unam rodam & quartam partem unius rode prati, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Petro de Wythyne, in eſcambium pro tribus rodis terre, & unâ rodâ & quartâ parte unius rode prati, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; tres rodas & dimidiam, & quartam partem unius rode terre, & unam acram prati, cum pertinentiis, in eâdem villâ, de Aliciâ Burneheved, in eſcambium pro tribus rodis & dimidiâ, & quartâ parte unius rode terre, & unâ acrâ prati, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; duas acras & tres partes unius rode terre, & unam vivariam, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Margeria Claver, in eſcambium pro duabus acris & tribus partibus unius rode terre, & medietate unius rode prati, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; unam acram terre, & unam acram prati & dimidiam, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Johanne de Sixtenbye, in eſcambium pro unâ acrâ terre, & unâ acrâ prati & dimidiâ, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; duas acras terre, & duas rodas prati & dimidiam, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Willielmo Ken, in eſcambium pro duabus acris terre, & duabus rodis prati & dimidiâ, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; unam rodam terre, & unam rodam prati, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Rogero Marg^r, in eſcambium pro unâ roda terre, & unâ rodâ prati, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; unam acram & medietatem unius rode prati, & duos denarios redditûs, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Petro atte-Milne, in eſcambium pro unâ acrâ & medietate unius rode prati, & duobus denariis redditûs, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; unam rodam terre & tres rodas prati, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Willielmo Palmer, in eſcambium pro unâ rodâ terre & tribus rodis prati, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; unam rodam terre, cum pertinentiis, & dimidiam, in eadem villâ, de Simone Lole, in eſcambium pro unâ rodâ terre & dimidiâ, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; medietatem unius acre terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Ricardo Paukeſone, in eſcambium pro medietate unius acre terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; quartam partem unius rode terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Radulpho de Friſebye, capellano, in eſcambium pro quartâ parte unius rode terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; unam rodam terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Henrico Skeſtington, in eſcambium pro unâ rodâ terre in eadem villâ; unam rodam & quartam partem unius rode terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ, de Willielmo Baxter, in eſcambium pro unâ rodâ & quartâ parte unius rode terre, cum pertinentiis, in eadem villâ; unam acram terre, & unam rodam prati & dimidiam, in eadem villâ, de Adam de Feure, in eſcambium pro unâ acrâ terre, & unâ rodâ prati & dimidia, in eadem villâ. Et conceſſimus eiſdem priori & conventui, pro nobis & heredibus noſtris, quantum in nobis eſt, quod ipſi predicta meſſuagia, toſta, crofta, vivariam, terras, prata, & redditus, cum pertinentiis, retinere poſſint & habere, ſibi & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, juxta formas adquiſitionum predictarum, de capitalibus dominis feodi illius, per ſervicia inde debita & conſueta, in perpetuum. In cujus, &c. Teſte rege, apud Dunſtable, xvii die Octobris [1]."

In 1337, a meſſuage and bovate of land in Friſby were given to the prior and convent of Laund by John Robyn of Asfordby and Alice Buchand [2].

In 1343, it was found that one meſſuage, one toft, two acres and an half of land, and the moiety of one rood, with the appurtenances, in Friſby ſuper Wrethek, which Peter Plank the capellan (who was outlawed for the felony which he had committed) held, were the property of the prior of Laund [3].

In 1346, John de Twycroſs and other free tenants of the fee of Baſſet (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) were aſſeſſed 5*s*. for an eighth part of one knight's fee in Friſbie, parcel of the fees of Cheſter and Huntingdon [4].

In 1367, "Petrus de Malo & alii, inquiſitione captâ virtute officii ſui, dicunt, quòd prior & conventus de Laundâ appropriaverunt unum meſſuagium & duas acras terre, cum ſuis pertinentiis, in Friſeby, cum quodam crofto, que fuerunt Matildes Baxters; & ſibi appropriaverunt duo meſſuagia & XXII acras terre, cum pertinentiis, in Tilton [5]."

"At this place was born that reſolute frier Richard de Friſby, doctor of divinity, of the order of the Friers Minors; who, in 1402, conſpiring againſt the king, was apprehended; and, at his arraignment, being demanded what he would do if king Richard II. were living, and there preſent, boldly anſwered, "that he would fight in his behalf againſt any man whatſoever, even unto death." Wherefore, after trial had, his ſentence was given to be drawn and hanged in his religious habit; but his brethren the friers, hardly brooking this diſgrace done to their order, obtained licence of the king, that the body might be taken down forthwith, and committed to burial [6]."

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Friſby was rated at 2*l*. 19*s*. 6*d*.; and in the ſubſidy of 1445 at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 5*s*.

"In Friſby was the ſeat of an antient family of the Brokeſbys, who were of great eſtate and living in theſe parts, as I have been aſſured by an antient regiſter of all the records and evidences belonging to their lands in this county [7], written in vellum, and made about the reign of king Henry VI; wherein it did appear, by an inquiſition taken 27 Henry VI, that Bartholomew de Brokeſby [8] died in 1447, without iſſue, and left Edward Brokeſby his brother [9]."

In 1482, "Juratores dicunt, quòd non eſt ad dampnum d̃ni regis, nec aliorum, ſi d̃nus rex concedat Thome Grene capellano, & Radulpho Fraunceis gentilman, quòd ipſi unum toſtum, & tres acras & quinque virgatas & dimidiam terre, cum ſuis pertinentiis, in Melton Mowbray & Friſeby, in com' Leic', dare poſſint priori de Landâ; & quòd quinque virgate terre in Melton Mowbray tenentur de dicto priore, &, ultra, de d̃no rege; & dicta toſtum & terre, cum ſuis pertinentiis, in Friſeby, tenentur de Johanne Bret per ſervicium unius denarii & fidelitatem; & idem Johannes tenet de rege [10]."

The total of the receipts of the priory of Laund, from the manor, the rectory, and the water-mill of Friſby, including ſome rents at Wartnaby and Grimſton, in 1540, was £36. 3*s*. 8*d*. [11]

In 1564, there were 32 families in Friſby.

Certain lands in Friſby were held by leaſe from the Crown by Thomas Giles in 1583 [12]; and in 1584, certain concealed lands in Friſby and Wigſton were let to Peers Domvile at the annual rent of 16*s*. 7*d*. [13]

---

[1] Pat. 3 Edw. III. pars 2. m. 16.

[2] See hereafter, under Laund.

[3] Eſch. 19 Edw. III. N° 10. Leic.

[4] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw III.

[5] Eſch. 41 Edw. III. N° 46. Leic.

[6] MS. Burton; from Tho. de Walſingham, fol. 365. Ypod. Neuſtr. p. 557; and ſee hereafter, under Laund.

[7] This curious Regiſter of Bartholomew Brokeſby was purchaſed by Anthony Wood, and by him given to the Bodleian Library, where it is ſtill preſerved; N° 8595. 7. The ſame volume contains alſo the Regiſter of Roger Waltham, who poſſeſſed conſiderable property at Friſby and ſeveral other towns in the neighbourhood. See vol. II. p. 243.

[8] Who was buried at Ouſton, where his tomb was preſerved with peculiar marks of ſolemnity; ſee vol. II. p. 759.

[9] MS. Burton.

[10] Inq. ad quod dampnum, 21 Edw. IV. N° 67.

[11] See the particulars hereafter, under Laund.

[11] Leaſes in the Augmentation Office.

[13] Ibid.

The freeholders here in 1630 were, Robert Sharpe, gent. Richard Steele, alias Kitchin, and Richard Sharpe.

John Sharpe, of Friſby, married Mary, daughter of William Sanders, eſq. of Welford, by Dorothy Belgrave his ſecond wife [1].

In 1641, the lordſhip of Friſby was the inheritance of Gregory Brokeſby, eſq. [2]

The MSS. of ſir William Heyrick, of Beaumanor, furniſh the following memoranda:

"Concerning my eſtate at Friſby upon Wreke, 1638: Land held of Beamanor, in the county of Leiceſter.

Richard Steele and Richard Sharpe, which ſhould pay one rent at Michaelmas, one quiver, two flights, and four ſhillings in money, with ſuit of court.

Mr. Andrew Burton, eſq. was feodary the year above-written.

This Mr. Steele and Mr. Sharpe bought their land of one Maſkal at a place called Twycroſte. To enquire where this land lies, and in whoſe poſſeſſion it is at this day. The heirs of one Segrave formerly held this land [3]."

"Oct. 4, 1650. Ordered, that the commiſſioners for compounding with delinquents be deſired to cauſe their ſub-commiſſioners for ſequeſtrations in the county of Leiceſter to certify to them what the arrears of the profits of the vicarage of Friſby in the ſaid county, ſequeſtered from John Holland, do amount unto, and to certify the ſame to this committee by the twelfth day of November next; on which day this committee will take the petition of the inhabitants of Friſby aforeſaid (now read) into conſideration [4]."

In 1655, there was collected in Friſby, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 1*l.* 4*s.* 3*d.*

In 1656, the uſual payment at Beaumanor for Twycroſs thing, of 4*s.* and two flights of arrows, was made by Mr. Richardſon [5].

In 1722, 15 freeholders polled from this pariſh; and in 1775, we find 32 names.

Facing the door of the Crown alehouſe in this village is a neat croſs, with ornamented mouldings in the ſhaft; and at a ſmall diſtance from the town, in a place called Friſby Hags, or The Hag-way [6], probably from its roughneſs, the old way leading from Leiceſter to Melton Mowbray, rather more than a quarter of a mile diſtant from the interſection of The Hag-way and Laund-way, neither of which have been uſed for ſome years [7], is another croſs, commonly known by the name of The Stump Croſs [8], apparently of Ketton ſtone, placed upon four circular ſteps, the loweſt of them ſunk level with the ground; on which are a few rude letters, not antient, but cut about 50 years ago by two ſhepherds. The croſs ſtands upon a high eminence; having been erected, probably, when the lands adjoining were more woody and leſs cultivated than at preſent, and might ſerve as a guide to the weary and way-loſt pilgrim, or as a reſting-place to count his beads and ſay his Ave Marias. This conjecture is the more likely, as the mid-diſtance between Laund Abbey and Carcolſton is as near this ſpot as poſſible; and it ſhews the conſequence of theſe religious places, as the name of Laund Way has been perpetuated at leaſt 500 years.

In 1760, an act was paſſed for dividing and incloſing the common fields, meadows, paſtures, and waſte grounds, in the pariſh of Friſby upon the Wreke; in which the king is deſcribed as patron of the vicarage; ſir Nathanael Curzon, bart. as lord of the manor and impropriator of the great tithes; William-Brecknock Wragge, clerk, as vicar, entitled to the ſmall tithes; and the ſaid ſir Nathanael Curzon, William Brecknock Wragge, in right of his glebe, John Baſs, eſq. the Rev. Thomas Hurſt, Thomas Hinman, and others, as owners of lands in the ſaid fields. Mr. Wragge, as vicar, was to have, in the firſt place, an allotment as a full equivalent for the glebe; and ſir Nathanael Curzon an eighth of the remainder in lieu of great tithes, over and above his ſhare in common with the other proprietors, in proportion to his quantum of right in the ſoil.

Daniel Robinſon, gent. was lord of this manor in 1791.

In the pariſh is an hoſpital, founded by Mrs. Briggs in 1719, for ſix poor widows, who are allowed about £4. each yearly, with coals, from lands at Colſton-Baſſet. Truſtees are, Mr. Nicks of Market Orton and the rev. Mr. Brereton.

The Regiſter begins in 1659; and the firſt 20 years give 141 baptiſms, 97 burials, and 17 marriages; and 20 years ending with 1789, 192 baptiſms, 105 burials, and 152 marriages; and there are no more than 65 families in the pariſh. Hence it appears Friſby had 100 marriages at leaſt more than its proper quantity; as Asfordby, a neighbouring pariſh, containing 73 families, affords but 45 during that period; and, in fact, Friſby, after the Marriage Act, was for ſeveral years, upon a ſmaller ſcale, the Gretna Green of Leiceſterſhire [9].

1759

Mary Erick, daughter of Thomas Erick [10], born in 1669.

Buried, March 17, 1758, Eſther Sampſon, aged 100; and received from this pariſh collection, at 2*s.* a week, above £100.

In 1758, 24 burials are entered; 13 of which are of the ſmall pox.

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor of Friſby within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	52	1	3
Expended in county-rates, &c.	6	4	4
——— on the poor, ——	45	16	11
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	8	17	10
Litigations, — — —	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	35	2	8
——————— 1784, —	39	11	5
——————— 1785, —	53	16	11
Medium of theſe three years,	42	17	0
——— of county expences,	7	12	0
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of churches, roads, &c.	4	9	11
——— of nett annual expences,	30	15	1
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	0	15	8
——— of entertainments at meetings,	0	7	10
——— of law expences, —	0	10	6
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	2	18	3

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 46.

---

[1] Bridges, vol. I. p. 593.

[2] MS. Burton.

[3] From the original, in ſir William Heyrick's hand-writing.

[4] From the original books of the Committee, in the Bodleian Library.

[5] From the Court Rolls at Beaumanor.

[6] So Walſingham or Our Lady of Walſingham's Way, in Norfolk.

[7] From the information of Mr. Garland, who now reſides in the lordſhip of Laund, but formerly lived at Friſby; and knew the croſs and its ſituation extremely well. See both this and Stump Croſs in Plate XXXVI.

[8] "When the interdict in the reign of king John took place, ſepulture could not be in conſecrated ground: therefore men endeavoured to bury as near as they could, as in the outſide of church-yards; but the chief method ſeems to have been to have fixed upon ground ſeemingly naturally conſecrated, as where ways croſſed each other, which ſeemed ſymbolically conſecrated primâ facie. In proceſs of time, croſſes of wood were ſet up over their graves, with hands to direct travellers; and, if ſuicides were there buried, they thought their bodies (which otherwiſe might be rudely treated, being deteſted criminals) would remain more quiet, having the figure of the croſs over them, which to break down, level, or remove, would be impious; and to remind travellers of Chriſtianity, as well as to ſhew that the deceaſed profeſſed Chriſt, and deſired Chriſtian burial in cemeteries again, and hoped for the removal of the interdict. Theſe croſſes decaying in time, and the upright poſt only remaining over the centre of the grave; the opinion prevailed, that ſuch unfortunate ſuicides had always a ſtake drove through their bodies." S. CARTE, MS. [This ſeems a ſingular mode of accounting for the driving a ſtake through the body of a ſuicide; and Mr. Carte, though a lawyer, forgot that this practice was intended as a protection inſtead of a puniſhment.]

[9] "One would like to know how many couple were certainly married at Friſby, or the greateſt number, in one year. The vicar made no ſcruple of declaring that he would marry any that came." G. A.

[10] Suppoſed to be the father of Abigail Erick, mother of the celebrated Dean Swift. Several perſons of the name of Swift occur in the early part of the Regiſter.

The CHURCH, (ſee Plate XXXIX.) dedicated to Thomas Becket, conſiſts of a tower (in which are three bells); a neat ſpire with four pinnacles; two chancels, an embattled nave, North and South ailes, and a South tranſept with an aile; and has all the appearance of a former ſplendor.

On a pretty neat tower (vilely patched with mortar, and the windows boarded up) ſprings a lively ſpire, with beautiful Gothic open windows. The four pinnacles are placed on the ſummit of the battlements, and do not grow from the tower, which gives a lightſome appearance not commonly to be met with.

The North aile has three very broad windows, each in four compartments; but half way ſtopped up with mortar. At the Eaſt end of this aile, a very neat ſmall window (ſadly defaced, &c.), and two very fine bold niches, with ornaments on either ſide; and a ſmall piſcina.

The South aile is very ample, and the ſide-windows good; one very grand, of remarkable dimenſion, well ramified, and ſuited to a cathedral, but in decay.

The window in the chapel at the Eaſt end is plain.

A room, or rather a place of rubbiſh, at the Weſt end, on the North ſide of the tower (antiently a ſchool, and occaſionally uſed for a veſtry), contains a few old Latin books, left by Nicholas Sharpe, lord of the manor; among others, St. Auguſtine, and Origen, and other Fathers, in a wretched condition.

The whole floor, pulpit, pews, and furniture, are in ſhameful neglect and filth.

In the chancel are three ſtalls.

The font is octagon and plain; ſee Plate XXXVI.

Mr. Burton notices theſe arms here, fig. 1—5.

1. Gules, a lion rampant Argent. Mowbray.
2. Argent, a maunch Sable. Haſtings.
3. Argent, a croſs moline Sable. Copley.
4. Barry of ſix Or and Azure, the third bar charged with a lion paſſant guardant Gules.
5. Barry, nebulé of ſix, Argent and Sable, on a canton Gules a mullet pierced Or. Brokeſby.

Here remains a perfect piſcina.

In the Matriculus of 1220[1], Friſby is deſcribed to be in the patronage of the prior of Laund, who held it to his own uſe as vicar from the time of the foundation of that houſe; and paid 3*s*. to the monks of St. Severin in Normandy for a third part of the ſheafs ariſing from the demeſne of the earl of Cheſter.

In 1344, the rectory was taxed at 18 marks, and paid 2*s*. for Peter-pence; the vicarage was alſo taxed at 5 marks.

In 1534-5, the ſynodals were 3*s*. 6*d*.; and the value of the vicarage 8*l*.

Mr. Robert Sharpe of Friſby was patron of the vicarage in 1641.

In 1650, Friſby was returned as an impropriation; the rectory worth 100*l*.; the vicarage 13*l*.; and the incumbent as "no preacher."

The living is a vicarage, in the gift of the king, worth about £95. a year; and the endowment may be ſeen in the epiſcopal regiſtry at Lincoln. The hon. Mr. Curzon is the preſent owner of the impropriation.

In the king's books it is noticed as a diſcharged living, worth, in decimis majoribus & minutis, cum exitibus manſ' & ten' gleb' 7*l*. 16*s*. 8*d*.; clear yearly value 43*l*. 7*s*. 10*d*.; certified value 70*l*.

The epiſcopal procurations are, for the rectory 6*s*.; the vicarage 2*s*.

VICARS.	PATRONS.
William, 1220.	Prior and convent of Laund.
Thomas de Waſſingburg, 1269.
Walter de Landa, 1258.
Hugo de Weſton, 1286.
Richard Hawkins, 1534.
John Holland, diſpoſſeſſed 1650.
Thomas Errick, Feb. 2, 1663.	King Charles I.
Henry Storer, Feb. 8, 1691.	King William and Queen Mary.
Henry Storer, July 8, 1703.	Queen Anne.
Richard Wenman, April 18, 1722; died 1755.	King George II.
William-Brecknock Wragge[2], 1755; ſequeſtered 1791.	King George II.
John Noble, Dec. 16, 1796.	King George III.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

Mr. Wyrley mentions a monument for

"Alicia uxor Bartholomei Brokeſby, 1460."

And Mr. Burton obſerves, that, on a monument of ſir John Digby, of Kettleby, knight, is graven the arms of Digby, Azure, a fleur de lis Argent; impaled with Griffin, Argent, a griffin ſegreant Sable[3]; which ſir John Digby died in the 25th of Henry VIII.

Neither of theſe monuments is now remaining[4].

Upon the North wall in the chancel are two blank ſhields, under which, in an arched receſs in the wall, is the following inſcription upon alabaſter:

"HERE LIETH
THE BODIE OF NICOLAS
SHARPE, OF FRISBY IN THE COUN-
TYE OF LEICESTER, GENTLEMAN,
CHEFE LORD OF THIS TOWNE AND ASFORD-
BIE; WHO DEPARTED THE 10TH OF APRIL, AN. 1614."

Bleſſed are the dead which hereafter die in the Lord! Even ſo ſaith the Spirit, that they may reſt from their labours; and their works do follow them. Rev. xiv. 13. —The righteous periſheth, and no man conſidereth it. Iſaiah, lvii. 15.—He that hath pity, &c. Prov. xix. 17. —Bleſſed is the man. Pſ. xl. 4.—I know that my Redeemer liveth. Job xix. 25.—I am the Reſurrection, &c.

On flat ſtones in the chancel.

"Richard Jeſſon died Nov. 11, 1750, in the 65th year of his age.

Margaret his wife died June 1, 1754, aged 71.

Sarah, daughter of John and Elizabeth Jeſſon, died Nov. 29, 1740, in her third year.

George, the ſon of Richard and Margaret Jeſſon, aged 3 years."

"Sacred to the memory of John Mathen. He died Sept. 13, 1796, aged 48 years."

In the nave.

"Here lie interred the remains of the rev. Mr. Richard Wenman, A. M. rector of Sutton St. Anne's, co. Nottingham, and vicar of this pariſh 33 years.
He departed this life Aug. 6, 1755,
aged 67 years."

---

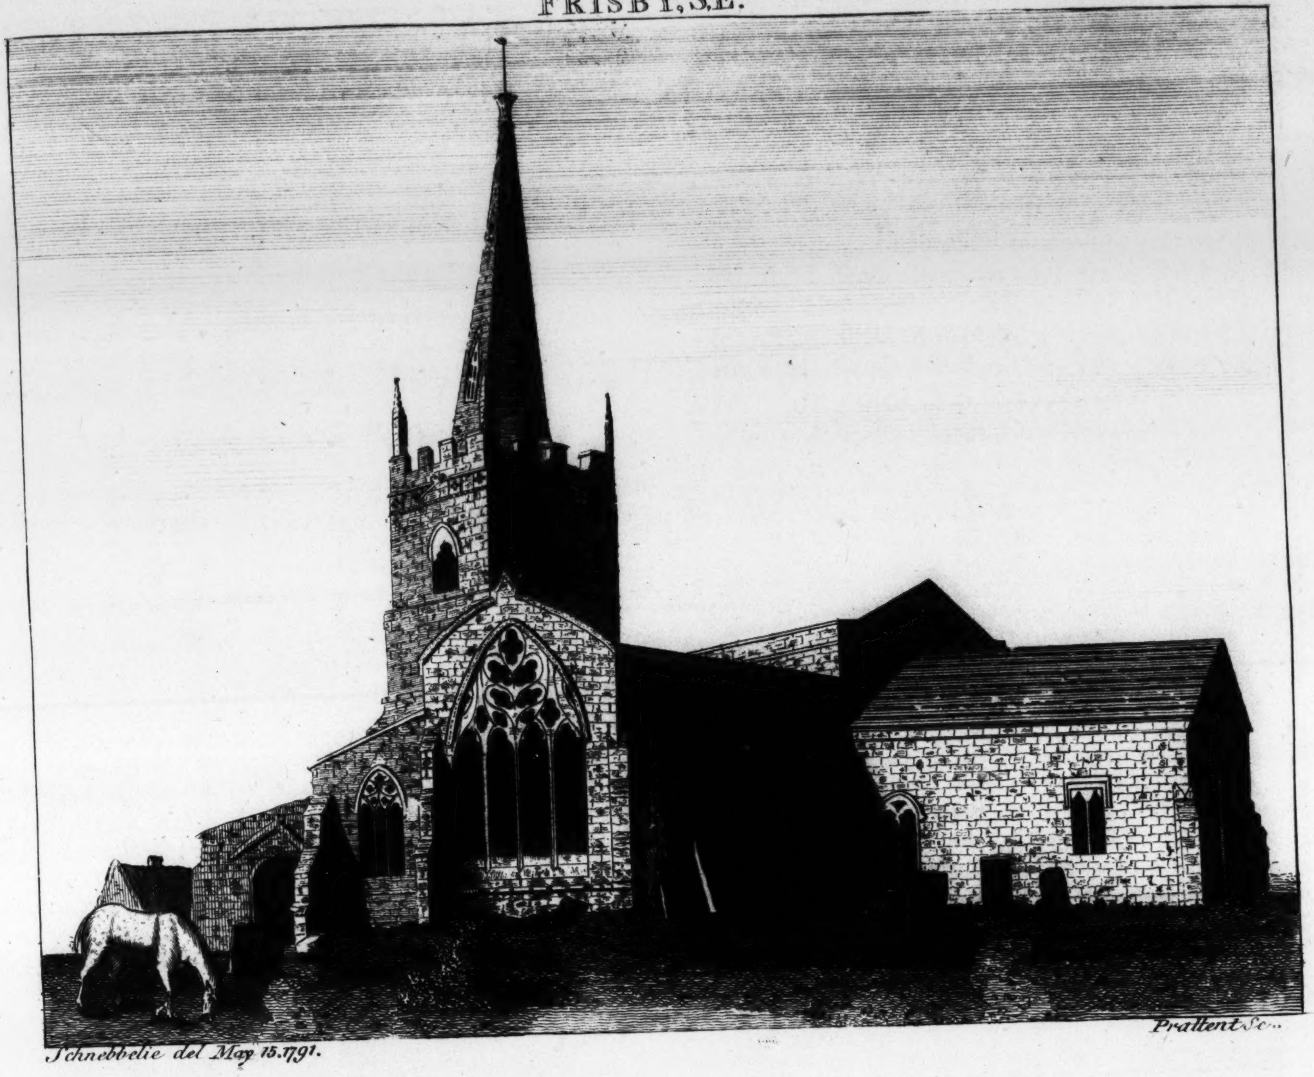
[1] See the Introductory Volume, p. lx.

[2] Mr. Wragge (who was a younger brother to the rector of Galby) was ſentenced, at Leiceſter, at the Lent aſſizes of 1790, to be tranſported for 14 years, for marrying two ſervants of Mr. Hudſon of Wanlip, without licence or publication of banns, contrary to the ſtatute; but, on account of his age and infirmities, was indulged with tranſporting himſelf out of the kingdom; and the living was put into ſequeſtration for the benefit of his family.

[3] Plate XXXIX. fig. 6.

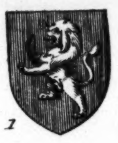
[4] I ſtrongly ſuſpect that this monument of Digby and Griffin may have crept into Burton's notes by a miſtake; as a monument of the ſame deſcription is alſo noticed by him at Melton Mowbray. See vol. II. p. 255.

FRISBY, S.E.

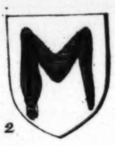


Schnebbelie del May 15. 1791.

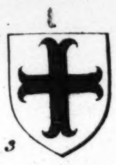
Prattent Sc.



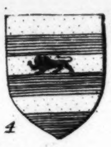
1



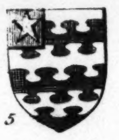
2



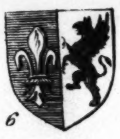
3



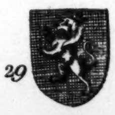
4



5



6



29

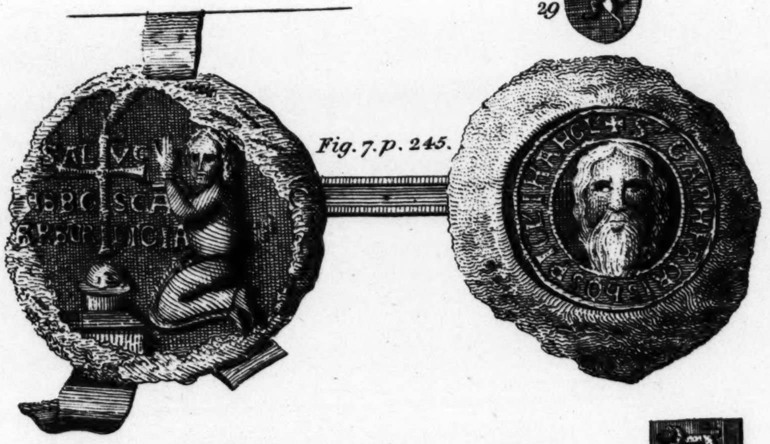


Fig. 7. p. 245.

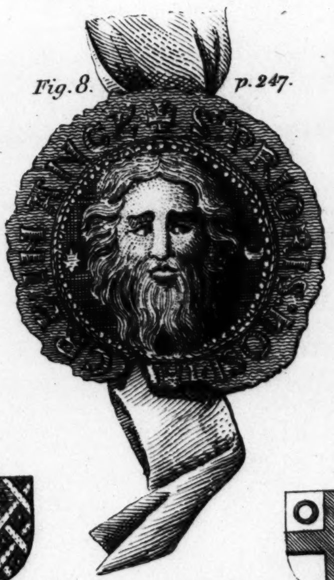

Fig. 8. p. 247.

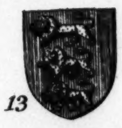
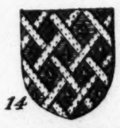
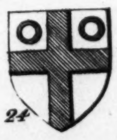
Anno dnicē Incarnᵒ mº cº lxxxixº. apd Lond.



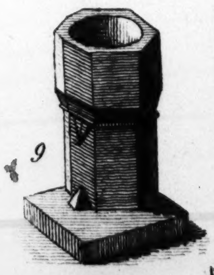
13



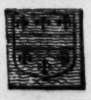
14



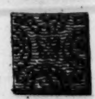
24



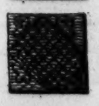
9



10



11



12

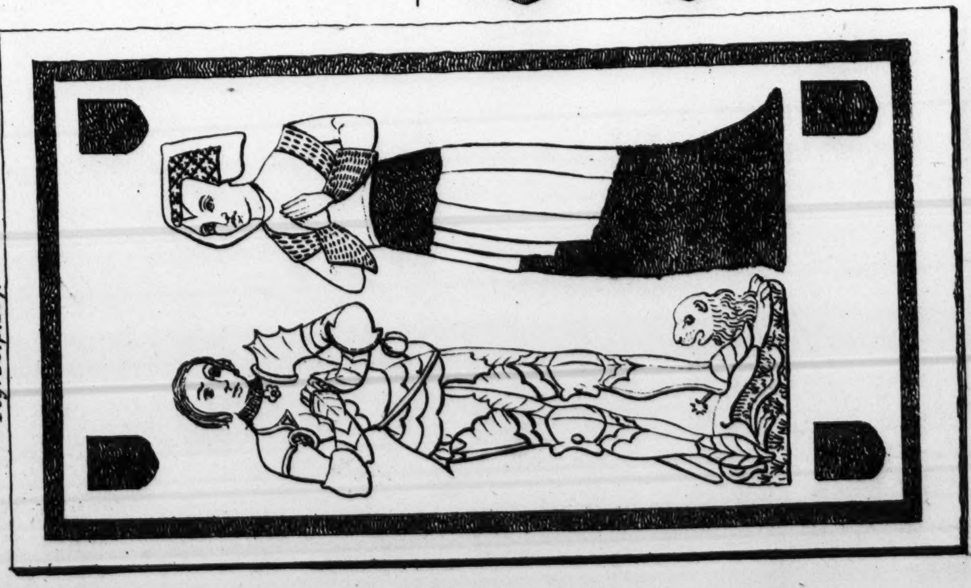


Fig. 28. p. 267.

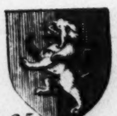
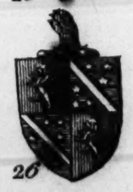
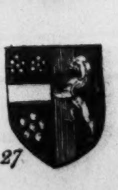


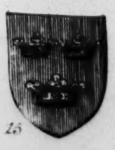
25



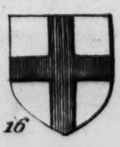
26



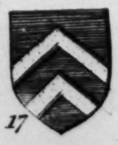
27



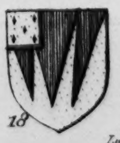
15



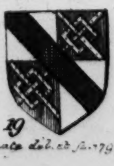
16



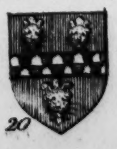
17



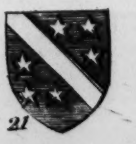
18



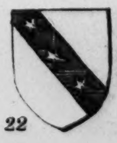
19



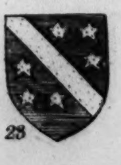
20



21



22



23

Longmate del. et sc. 1796.

"In memory of Mrs. Elizabeth Wenman, relict of the rev. Mr. Wenman;
who departed this life April 6, 1770."

"Ann Clayton, ſiſter to Elizabeth the wife of Richard Wenman, vicar of this pariſh,
died May 25, 1750."

In the South aile:

"Near to this place
lie the remains of Letitia and William, daughter and ſon of William-Brecknock Wragge,
vicar of this pariſh,
by Jane[1] his wife;
who died of the ſmall-pox,
April the 21ſt and May the 2d, 1785;
Letitia aged 7 years,
William aged 5 years."

In the church-yard:

Elizabeth Robinſon, widow, from Relſton, Lincolnſhire, died Dec. 7, 1762, aged 104 years.
John Hollingſhead died May 1761, aged 78.
Anne Hollingſhead died Dec. 1757, aged 77.
John Clark died Dec. 6, 1775, aged 71.
Ruth Clark died April 28, 1784, aged 90.

---

[1] Mr. Wragge's firſt wife (Mary, ſiſter of Shukbrugh Aſhby, eſq. of Quenby) died Jan. 14, 1764; and was buried at Blaby Their only daughter, Sarah, was married, May 31, 1796, to the Rev. John Noble, the preſent vicar of Friſby.

Poſtſcript to Mr. HACKET's concluding NOTE on SOUTH CROXTON, p. 239.

"There is one yard-land at South Croxton, called the Court Land, belonging to the duke of Rutland, which I have the honour and permiſſion to rent on reaſonable terms, about 18 acres; one cloſe of which is about four acres, more or leſs, antiently called the Court Cloſe. Why it was ſo called, I know not, except that in this cloſe ſtood a houſe where ſome court was held formerly. The late old Duke, the preſent Duke's great grandfather, and ſelf, went together into the iron-houſe at Belvoir Caſtle, where their writings are depoſited on ſhelves; but we ſoon deſiſted, not knowing how they were claſſed, there being nobody about the Caſtle that knew how to aſſiſt in the ſearch. He was then deſirous of knowing, by my information, unde derivatur Court-Cloſe; but I never learned afterwards, as he was more than fourſcore then, and perhaps his curioſity dwindling with his body, dying ſoon afterwards at the age of 84. The manor does not belong to that family, except loſt for want of claiming, though the living does. May it always do ſo to the end of time! as no family more diſintereſtedly confer their livings on their friends. Owing to the favours I have received, I have almoſt re-built the parſonage-houſe, or rather new-moulded the ſame, new front, new-roofed, ſaſhed, and ſlated. It is now as neat a country-box, with a ſpacious homeſtead and glebe about it, as any in the county of Leiceſter; with more than 100 acres of land branching behind it, ſet for more than £110 per annum. I have ſeveral ſpots unexonerated, and the home-premiſſes worth more than £10. per annum; with 407 acres unexonerated in the Nether lordſhip, belonging to Mr. Palmer Johnſon as mentioned before. I am happy that this gentleman at the laſt incloſure was not willing to come in. His reaſon was, if the French came, they would take away all eſtates to which tithes appertained. One of his family had juſt before given £800. for the lay-tithes; yet he would not exonerate his eſtate of the other part belonging to the Church. My living is called a Semi-rectory. This circumſtance will create a law-ſuit ſome time or other between the owner of his eſtate and the rector, as they pretend to plead cuſtom and a modus for the greateſt part of the grazing land, which by a rate tithe would amount to a mere trifle.—I cauſed our ſteeple to be repaired, two arches of which over the bell-windows were in a ſcrambling and ruinous condition, not apparently able to ſupport the battlements and ſpire long. As this is a fine obeliſk, and ſeen from far, conſpicuouſly at Loughborough, &c. &c. I thought it a pity, and dangerous, to neglect it any longer. The roof of the South aile was nearly in the ſame condition. I called a meeting; and, by menaces and other influential means, prevailed for an order of ſpeedy repairs of both. The ſpire is likewiſe pointed with mortar as hard as the ſtone it is built with, as well as the outſide of the church. I cauſed a new weather-cock to be erected at the ſame time; which, however, through the badneſs of the old ſpindle, tumbled down in leſs than three weeks. Another was put up ſoon after, partly at my own expence. The contrivance (not to ſay of ingenious invention) was my own, by cutting a thick ſquare bar of iron at the bottom into four prongs, and drilling and chiſſeling four holes, to anſwer their ſtride, at equal diſtances in the top-ſtone, which was a little convex. In the cavities were poured 32 pounds of melted lead, to keep down the ſpindle from riſing; and a large bowl of the ſame metal, at the bottom of the iron-work, to throw off the wet and rain from lying there, and prevent its rotting, which we found to be the caſe with the old one.—We had a narrow eſcape at Croxton, by the falling down of a very heavy oak beam belonging to one of the forward bays, where a large portion of the pariſhioners uſed to ſit. One end was rotten; and we obſerved it giving way two days before it fell. The whole expence of theſe jobs or neceſſary repairs was more than £100." P. H.

GADDESBY. See under ROTHLEY, in the Hundred of WEST GOSCOTE.

HOBY,

HOBY,

antiently called Hoby, Hobye, Houby, Howby, Houtheby, and Holbrook, is 9 miles diſtant from Leiceſter, 7 from Melton; bounded by Thruſſington, Rotherby, and Brookſby; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote.

In the reign of Edward the Confeſſor, Ulf held the lordſhip of Hobie, with ſac and ſoc. It contained four ploughlands and two oxgangs, employed four ploughs, and was valued at two ſhillings. At the time of the general ſurvey it was worth twenty ſhillings; and was held by Adelelm under Drogo de Bevrere. One plough was employed in the demeſne; and eight villans, with four bordars, had another plough. There were ſix acres of meadow [1].

In the Teſta de Nevill, Houby Gilebert is deſcribed as conſiſting of ſeven ploughlands and two oxgangs; Houby Truſſibot, one ploughland; and Houby Deivill, one.

In the reign of king Henry III. William Baſſet of Sapcote had lands here, which he gave in frank marriage with Emma his daughter to ſir Robert de Grendon, of Grendon, co. Warwick, knight; together with the homage and ſervice of ſir Stephen de Segrave, knight [2].

William de Houby, ſon of Henry, and grandſon of Waleran, conveyed to Stephen de Segrave and his heirs certain lands in Segrave [3].

In the Itinerary of 1280, Hoby, Thruſtington, Rakedale, Wilghes, and Radclive, anſwered collectively as one vill.

Hoby was afterwards the inheritance of the antient family of the Houbys, who took their names from the place, and continued owners of it till it paſſed away with an heir female (as is ſhewed in the deſcent) to James Beler of Kettleby Beler; one of whoſe granddaughters and coheireſſes, Joan, brought it to William Villiers, of Brokeſby, eſq.; from whom it deſcended to ſir George Villiers, baronet.

"From the town of Hoby the antient family of Hobies iſſued. It is ſeated near upon Wreke [4].

Pedigree of HOUBY.

Alan de Houby, 6 Hen. III.

Gilbert de Houby, 49 Hen. III.=Maud, who was a widow 29 Edw. I.

Gilbert de Houby, of Hoby, 24 Edw. I.=Maud, third ſiſter and coheir of ſir William de Kirkby, died 5 Edw. II.

Walter de Houby, knt. died 26 Edw. III.=Alice.

Anketill de Houby, 21 Edw. III.=...

Gilbert de Houby, died before his father.=...

Anketill de Houby, of Sutton Cheynell, 21 Ric. II. 1 Hen. V.=...

Agnes, daughter and heir, married to ſir Robert de Frithby, knight.

Anthony de Houby, lord of the manors of Hoby and Sutton, died 1 Hen. VI.=...

Edward de Frithby,=...

Elizabeth, daughter and heir, married to ſir James Beler, of Kettleby Beler; and afterwards to Thomas Segrave.

John de Frithby, knt.=....

John de Frithby, died ſ. p.

In 1301, it was found that Matilda de Houby held one knight's fee in Houby of Henry de Nottingham; which Henry held the ſame of Thomas de Wappenburn, and of Thomas de Waſſingle, Richard de Beyvill, and William de Ryvell; which Henry and Thomas, Richard and William, held the ſame of John de Wake; which John held the ſame of Roger de Moubray, deceaſed [5].

In 1325, it was found that John de Segrave, deceaſed, and Chriſtian his wife, held divers rents in Houby; alſo the advowſon of the church of Houby, worth 24 marks; and that John de Segrave (ſon and heir of Stephen de Segrave, couſin of the aforeſaid John de Segrave ſenior) was his next heir [6].

In 1346, Ralph Baſſet of Drayton (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 10*s.* for a quarter of one knight's fee in Ratchliſſe and Houby; Henry de Nottingham 10*s.* for a quarter of one knight's fee in Thruſſington, Ratchliſſe, and Howby; Walter de Houghby 5*s.* for half a quarter of one knight's fee in Howby; and John de Milton 5*s.* for half a quarter of knight's fee; all parcel of the fees of Cheſter and Huntingdon [7].

Sir Robert de Horpedon, knt. by Emma his wife, daughter of William Baſſet, obtained in free marriage all the lands of her father at Hoby, with the homage and ſervice of ſir William de Segrave, knt. [8]

In 1349, Thomas Wake de Lydell held, at his death, one knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Houby, which the heir of Robert de Freytheby held, value £12. And in the ſame year Henry Hillary at his death held nine virgates of land in Houby, then in the hands of 12 natives (nativi), of the heir of William de Ros, as of the caſtle of Belvoir, by the ſervice of 2*s.* a year for all ſervice; and Edward Hillary, his ſon and heir, was then aged 26 [9].

In 1352, ſir Walter Houby, knt. held, at his death, certain lands, tenements, and rents, in Houby, of Katharine, relict of Henry de Nottingham, by knight's ſervice; and John de Fritheby, ſon of Robert de Fritheby, was his next heir [10].

In the ſame year, William de Ros of Hamelake held, at his death, a quarter of one knight's fee in Houby of the king in capite, which the heirs of Walter de Houby held; alſo a quarter of one knight's fee in Houby, which the heirs of Thomas de Multon held; alſo the thirtieth part of one knight's fee in Houby, which Robert under the Kirk held; alſo the moiety of one knight's fee in Houby, which the prior of Quorndon held [11].

In the ſame year, John [Plantagenet] earl of Kent, held, at his death, one knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Houby, late parcel of the inheritance of Thomas Wake de Lydell; which the heir of Robert de Fretheby held [12].

In 1353, John de Segrave held, at his death, lands at Houby [13].

In 1358, John de Segrave [14] held, at his death, the advowſon of the church of Houby; and Mary de Segrave, his daughter and heir, was then aged 15[1].

---

[1] "Adelelmus tenet de Drogone [de Bevrere] 4 carucatas terræ & 2 bovatas in Hobie. Ibi fuerunt 4 carucæ. In dominico eſt 1 caruca; & 8 villani, cum 4 bordariis, habent 1 carucam. Ibi 6 acræ prati. Valuit 2 ſolidos; modò 20 ſolidos. Ulf tenuit, cum ſacâ & ſocâ," Domeſday, fol. 236, a. 1.

[2] MS. Chetwynd.

[3] Appendix to vol. II. p. 112.

[4] Wyrley, MS. 1595.

[5] Eſch. 29 Edw. I. N° 47. Leic.

[6] Eſch. 19 Edw. II. N° 88. Leic.

[7] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[8] Wadland's MS note on Burton.

[9] Eſch. 23 Edw. III. pars 1, N° 75. & 82.

[10] Eſch. 26 Edw. III. N° 51. Leic.

[11] Eſch 20 June, 26 Edw. III. N° 53. Leic.

[12] Eſch. 26 Edw. III. N° 54. Leic.

[13] Eſch. 27 Edw. III. N° 69. Leic.

[14] Sir William Dugdale, in his Baronage, vol. I. p. 676, a. makes this laſt John de Segrave to have died in 23 Edw. III; but it is a miſtake, by a tranſpoſition of the figures, 23 for 32.

In 1361, John de Moubray of the Iſle of Axeholme, at his death, held one knight's fee in Houby, which Thomas de Wake held[2].

In 1362, John de Fretheby, at his death, held the manor of Houby of Katharine lady of Thurſtington, as of her manor there, by knight's ſervice; and Edward de Fretheby was his brother and next heir[3].

In 1373, Robert de Melton, clerk, granted a certain yearly rent of 80 marks, out of his manor of Houby, and all other his lands there, which he had of the gift of ſir Edward de Fritheby, knt. to William Sixtenbye, John his brother, and others, for term of life[4].

In 1375, Edward de Fretheby, knt. died ſeiſed of the manor of Houby, with the appurtenances, held of Katharine lady of Thurſtinton by knight's ſervice[5].

In 1399, it was found that Thomas Mowbray late duke of Norfolk held certain lands in Houby; alſo one knight's fee there, with the appurtenances; and in the ſame year, that Margaret late dutcheſs of Norfolk was ſeiſed of certain lands in Houby[6].

In 1406, Thomas Mowbray earl Mareſcal died ſeiſed of certain meſſuages, lands, and rents, in Houby[7].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Hoby was rated at 2*l.* 5*s.* 10*d.*; and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 2*s.*

The family of the Hetons, of Heton, co. York, ſeem to have had a conſiderable intereſt here; for, it appears that Anthony Howeby was accuſtomed to pay yearly the half £12. in rent, for the manor of Howeby, to William de Heton, of Heton, co. York, and Elizabeth (daughter of James Ozell) his wife[8]. The reaſon of a family at that diſtance having concerns here muſt be Ozell's daughter and heir; for, the warrant for the fine is againſt Elizabeth and her heirs, not againſt her huſband and his heirs; ſo that Ozell either married a heir of Howby, or at leaſt had lands in Houby[9].

In 1422, Anthony Howby died ſeiſed of the advowſon of the church of Howby (value ten marks), held under John Burdet, eſq. as of his manor of Thurſington; and Elizabeth wife of Thomas Segrave was his daughter and next heir[10].

In 1432, John Mowbray duke of Norfolk died ſeiſed of the church of Howby, value 10 marks[11].

In 1461, John Mowbray duke of Norfolk died ſeiſed of one knight's fee in Howby, then held by John Beler, who afterwards founded a chantry in this church[12]:

"Johannes Vyllers, de Fulnetby in com' Lincoln', armiger, &c. ſalutem. Cùm Jaſperus Ruſkyn, nuper de Weſt Sutton, in com' Leic', gentilman, per ſcriptum ſuum relaxationis, cujus datum eſt 8° die Septembris, anno 22° Edwardi IV, mihi prefato Johanni & heredibus meis relaxavit totam propertam ſuam quam habuit ſeu habere potuerit in advocatione cantarie de Houby, cum manſione, capellâ, & gardino eidem pertinentibus, in com' Leic' predicto; ac totam partem ſuam in omnibus terris & tenementis ſcituat' & jacent' in villis & campis de Magnâ Dalby, Tyrlington, Bradley, & Bringhurſt, dicte cantarie pertinentibus, ad intentionem quòd ego predictus Johannes Vyllers & heredes mei inveniemus idoneum capellanum ibidem celebraturum in perpetuum, & ad perficiendam ultimam voluntatem Johannis Beler armigeri, & dicti Jaſperi defuncti: Sciatis me prefatum Johannem Vyllers conceſſiſſe, & per hoc preſens ſcriptum relaxâſſe me & heredes meos prefatum Jaſperum & heredem ſuum ad inveniendum idoneum capellanum celebraturum in formâ predictâ, apud Howby predictam, pro animabus dicti Johannis Beler & heredum ſuorum, pro tenementis predictis, pro parte ſuâ mihi conceſſ'; & etiam ad defendend', obſervand', & conſervand' eundem Jaſperum & heredes ſuos pro conceſſione & relaxatione cantarie predicte indempnem versùs Bartholomeum Vyllers, & alios executores teſtamenti predicti Johannis Beler, de quâdam obligatione continenti in ſe mille marcas, in quâ idem Jaſpero obligatus eſt eidem Bartholomeo & aliis ad perficiendam ultimam voluntatem predicti Johannis Beler. Ac etiam idem Jaſperus conceſſit prefato Johanni Vyllers & heredibus ſuis, per idem ſcriptum relaxationis, totam partem ſuam quam ſibi contigit evenire in omnibus terris & tenementis in Ingoreſby de hereditate dicti Johannis Beler, prout in eodem ſcripto pleniùs continetur. In cujus rei teſtimonium, hiis ſcriptis indentatis predicti Johannes Vyllers & Jaſperus ſigilla ſua alternatim appoſuerunt. Dat' quinto die Auguſti, anno regni regis Ricardi Tertii poſt Conqueſtum Anglie ſecundo[13]."

In 1564, there were 37 families in Hoby.

Lionel Cranfield earl of Middleſex, in 1623, married Anne, daughter of James Brett, eſq. of Hoby, by Anne his wife, ſiſter to Mary counteſs of Buckingham[14].

By the pedigree of Sheldon, it appears that Benjamin Weſton married, about the middle of the laſt century, the daughter of Thomas Sheldon, of Hoby, relict of Chriſtopher Villars earl of Angleſey; which Benjamin was the fourth ſon of Richard Weſton earl of Portland[15].

Lady Villiers was the only freeholder in 1630.

In 1655, there was collected in Hoby, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 14*s.* 2*d.*

Mr. Browne of Hoby was in 1720 a landholder at Lilburn, co. Northampton[16].

In 1722, five freeholders polled from this pariſh; and in 1775, we find ten names.

In an act paſſed in 1760, for incloſing the common fields in Hoby, containing about 1000 acres, ſir John Robinſon, bart. and William Hewett, eſq. are deſcribed as lords of the manor, and owners of two thirds of the lands; Henry Browne, clerk, patron and rector, and as ſuch entitled to all tithes and other rectorial or vicarial dues; John Orton clerk, John Batſon, William Morris, and others, proprietors of the reſidue of the lands. The ſaid proprietors were entitled to the ſwap, or firſt math, of ſeveral parcels of ground in a meadow adjoining to the pariſh, called The Eaſt Morenes; and Mr. Browne, as rector, to the tithe of the ſaid ſwap. The rector's allotment was made in lieu of all tithes and payments, except ſurplice-fees, a yearly modus of ſix ſhillings for a fulling-mill in Hoby, and two ſmall pieces of meadow-ground near adjoining; a compenſation alſo for tithes of a ſwap in The Eaſt Morenes, and for the antient incloſures, called The Hall Cloſe, Green Creſt, The Cunnery, and Oddiſon Cloſe. The rector had alſo a farther allotment as a compenſation for the bread and corn cuſtomarily paid by the occupiers of the common-field to the pariſh-clerk as part of his ſalary. For the convenience of the rector and his ſucceſſors, the Hall-cloſe, containing about 9 acres, with Garner's garden and part of the widow Glover's garden, were to be given in lieu of a part of his portion of the new allotment; and his portion was charged with the repairs of the chancel and cuſtomary taxes. Reſervation is made of the rights which the rector of Rotheley, the widow Sherard, Edward Hutchinſon, and John Seagrave, reſpectively, had to the ſwap of about three acres in The Auſtrean Meadow; of about an acre called The Bridge Pieces; of the right of the rector of Asfordby and the neatherd of Asfordby, reſpectively, to the ſwap of two acres, called The Moor's Back, or Moor's Bank; and of the right of George Wrighte, eſq. to the ſwap of an acre called The Weſterns, near adjoining to Brokeſby mill.

"Mrs. Catharine Gregory, of Hoby, lately deceaſed, by her laſt will and teſtament, dated June 12, 1723, and proved at Leiceſter Sept. 16, 1727; gave and deviſed to the miniſter and overſeers of Rotherby in the ſaid county, and their ſucceſſors for ever, and to her executors and truſtees, and their heirs for ever, all that cloſe in Rotherby aforeſaid, known by the name of Waſe's Lammas Cloſe, in truſt; that they apply the income thereof yearly for inſtructing the poor children of Rotherby in the Church Catechiſm; and alſo to find them books; and to have ſome of them, ſo inſtructed, put out to trades, as often as the rent will allow; and to let each child of the pariſh have a Bible when they leave ſchool.

---

[1] Eſch. 32 Edw. III. N° 44. Leic.
[2] Eſch. 35 Edw. III. pars 2. N° 10.
[3] Eſch. 36 Edw. III. pars 1. N° 70.
[4] Clauſ. 47 Edw. III.
[5] Eſch. 49 Edw. III. pars 1. N° 53.
[6] Eſch. 1 Hen. IV. N° 71. & 72. Leic.
[7] Eſch. 8 Hen. IV. N° 76. Leic.
[8] Fin. 7 & 10 Hen. V.
[9] Gaſcoigne, MS note; ex evidentiis Johannis Gaſcoigne, baronetti, de Barnebow, co. Ebor.
[10] Eſch. 1 Hen. VI. N° 6. Leic.
[11] Eſch. 11 Hen. VI. N° 43. Leic.
[12] Eſch. 1 Edw. IV. N° 46. Leic.
[13] Harl. MSS. 7178.
[14] Dugdale, Bar. Angl. vol. II. p. 446.
[15] Ibid. p. 461.
[16] Bridges, I. 593.

The ſaid Mrs. Catharine Gregory, by her ſaid laſt will, gave and deviſed unto the miniſters and overſeers of the poor of Hoby, and unto their ſucceſſors for ever, and unto her executor and truſtees, and their heirs for ever, the ſum of twenty pounds in truſt; that they put out the ſame, and apply the income thereof yearly to have the poor children of Hoby taught and provided for, as the poor of Rotherby are by her laſt will directed to be taught and provided for [1]."

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor within the year ending at Eaſter 1776, —	49	19	4
Expended in county rates, &c.	3	17	4
——— on the poor, —	47	5	6
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	3	7	6
Expended in litigations, —	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	78	13	4
——— 1784, —	72	15	3
——— 1785, —	66	17	8
Medium of theſe three years,	72	15	5
——— of county expences,	5	8	0
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	0	0	0
——— of nett annual expences,	67	7	5
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	0	3	7
——— of entertainments at meetings,	0	3	4
——— of law expences, —	4	3	3
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 46.

Pedigree of CLERKE, of HOBY.

From the Viſitation of 1683; entered at London, Dec. 1, 1683; (no arms produced, nor any to be found.)

. . . . . Clerke, of Wreſtlingworth, co. Bedford. = ... dau. and ſole heir of . . . . Stacey, of . . . . ., by his wife, dau. and heir of ſir James Harrington.

1. Edward Clerke, B. D. rector of Hoby, born at Leiceſter; æt. 68 in 1683. = Rebecca, dau. of . . . . . Gery, of Barwell, clerk. She died about 1666.

2. Richard Clerke, citizen and vintner of London; living 1683. = ...

1. Frances, wife of . . . . . Sprigg, of the Six Clerks Office in Chancery.
2. . . . . wife of . . . . . . Gery, D. D. miniſter of Braunſton, co. Leiceſter; living 1683.

Edward Clerke, of Lambeth, co. Surrey, merchant, æt. 22, unmarried 1683.

Sarah, æt. 24, unmarried 1683.

1. John Clerke, eldeſt ſon, died in the Eaſt Indies unmarried.
2. Charles, only ſurviving ſon, in the Eaſt Indies 1683.
Richard, and Mary, died unmarried.

The CHURCH (ſee Plate XL.)

dedicated to All Saints, conſiſts of a tower, in which are 4 bells; a plain ſtone ſpire; chancel anſwering the nave, from which it is ſeparated by a ſcreen; and two ailes, ſeparated by four lofty arches, over which are clereſtory windows; all leaded.

The bells are thus inſcribed:

1. "A. B. C. D. E. F."
2. "✠ Newcombe of Leiceſter made me, 1604."
3. "Come, and pray; come."
4. "Cœlorum Chriſte,
   Platiat tibe [2], Rex, ſonus iſte!—1613."

The font is octagon, with one kneeling ſtep; Plate XXXIX. fig. 9.

In the chancel are a piſcina and a locker, and the remains of two ſtone ſeats.

The following arms are on painted tiles here; fig. 10—12.

. . . . . a feſs between ſix croſs croſslets, Beauchamp.

. . . . a fancy ornament.

. . . . checquè . . . . Warren.

In the Eaſt window of the North aile (fig. 13, 14.):

1. Gules, three lions paſſant guardant in pale Or. England.

2. Azure, fretty Or, between each frett a fleur de lis of the ſecond.

Mr. Burton alſo mentions theſe other arms in this church, fig. 15—27.

Gules, three ducal crowns Or, 2. and 1, St. Edmond king of the Eaſt Angles.

Argent, a croſs Gules, St. George.

Azure, two chevrons Or, Chaworth.

Or, three piles Gules, a canton Ermine, Baſſet.

Quarterly, Argent and Gules, in the ſecond and third quarters a frett Or, over all a bend Sable, Spencer.

Gules, a feſs Vaire between three leopards' faces jeſſant of fleurs de lis Or, Cantelupe.

Azure, a bend between ſix mullets Argent, Houby.

Argent, on a bend Azure, three mullets of the firſt, Wenard of Cornwall.

Argent, a croſs between two annulets Vert, one in dexter chief, and the other in ſiniſter baſe; Kirkby.

Per pale, Gules and Sable, a lion rampant Argent, Beler. This remains in the ſecond window from the bottom, on the North ſide of the nave.

Quarterly, 1. and 4, Beler; 2. and 3, Azure, a bend between ſix mullets Argent, Houby. Creſt, a cock's head, Gules.

Sable, a feſs between three cinquefoils Argent, Villers antient; impaling Beler.

Mr. Wyrley notices here, "a fair glaſs monument wrought in mail. On his mantle, Sable, a lion rampant Argent, crowned Or, fig. 29; written,

: : : : SEGRAUE DE HOBIE D'NI DE HOBIE
: : : : : EPISCOPUS : : : : : : [3]"

In the South aile hath been a chantry.

In 1210, "Robertus de Ros, conſenſu Alani de Hoby, preſentavit ad eccleſiam de Hoby [4]."

In the Matriculus of 1220 [5], Hoby is deſcribed to be in the patronage of William de Ros; the rector G. inſtituted per quondam legatum.

The Segrave Chartulary notices a grant from William de Ros to Stephen de Segrave and his heirs, of the advowſon and patronage of the church of Hoby, to be held of him and his heirs by homage and fealty [6].

In 1344, the procurations were, 5*s*. 6¾*d*.; the rectory was taxed at 20 marks, and paid 3*s*. for Peter-pence. The then patron was John de Segrave.

In 1534-5, the procurations and ſynodals were 10*s*. 8*d*.; and the value of the rectory £31.; and Thomas Bingham, the chantry-prieſt, had a penſion of 5*l*. 6*s*. 8*d*.

In 1642, the patronage of the church of Hoby was in controverſy between Charles lord Berkeley and ſir George Villiers, bart. [7]

"Oct. 9, 1644. Referred Edward Smith, miniſter, &c. to the Aſſembly, for the cure of the church of Hoby.

"Dec. 23, 1646. Whereas the rectory of the pariſh church of Hoby, in the county of Leiceſter, is and ſtandeth ſequeſtered by the Committee of Parliament for the ſaid county, from Thomas Rawſon, for his delinquency, to the uſe of Edward Smith, a godly and orthodox divine; this Committee do confirm the ſaid order; and do therefore order that the ſaid Mr. Smith do forthwith officiate the cure of the ſaid church as rector, and preach diligently [8]."

In 1650, the rectory was returned worth £100; and the incumbent as ſufficient.

The Rev. Richard Coxe, who died rector in 1713, was alſo patron; and, by his daughter, the rectory came by marriage to the Brownes.

The preſent value in the king's books is £22. 8*s*. 9*d*.

The epiſcopal procurations are, 5*s*.; the archidiaconal, 11*s*. 0¾*d*.; redd' 6*d*.

The wake is now kept on the Sunday next after the feaſt of All Saints.

---

[1] From a printed paper, hung up in the chancel at Hoby.

[2] Ita; pro "placcat tibi."

[3] This probably was placed here in honour of Gilbert de Segrave, biſhop of London 1313—1317; of whom, and of his family, an account will be found under the pariſh of Segrave.

[4] Burton, MS.; ex Rot. eccleſiæ de Lincoln, apud Lincoln, 10 Hen. III.

[5] See the Introductory Volume, p. lx.

[6] Appendix to vol. II. p. 112.

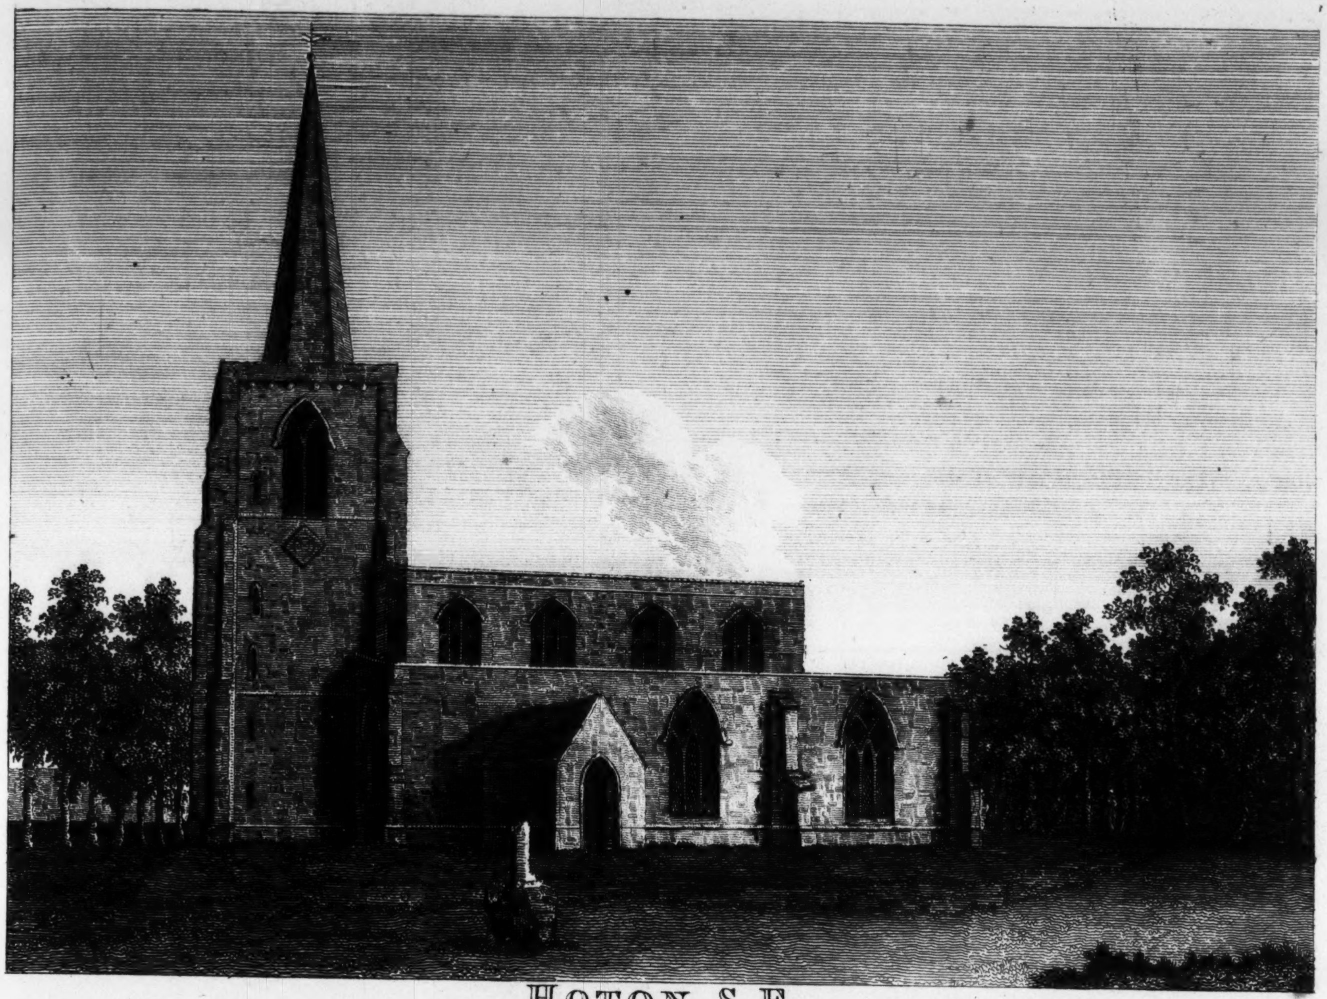
[7] MS. Burton.

[8] From the original Minute-book of the Committee of Sequeſtrations, preſerved in the Bodleian Library.

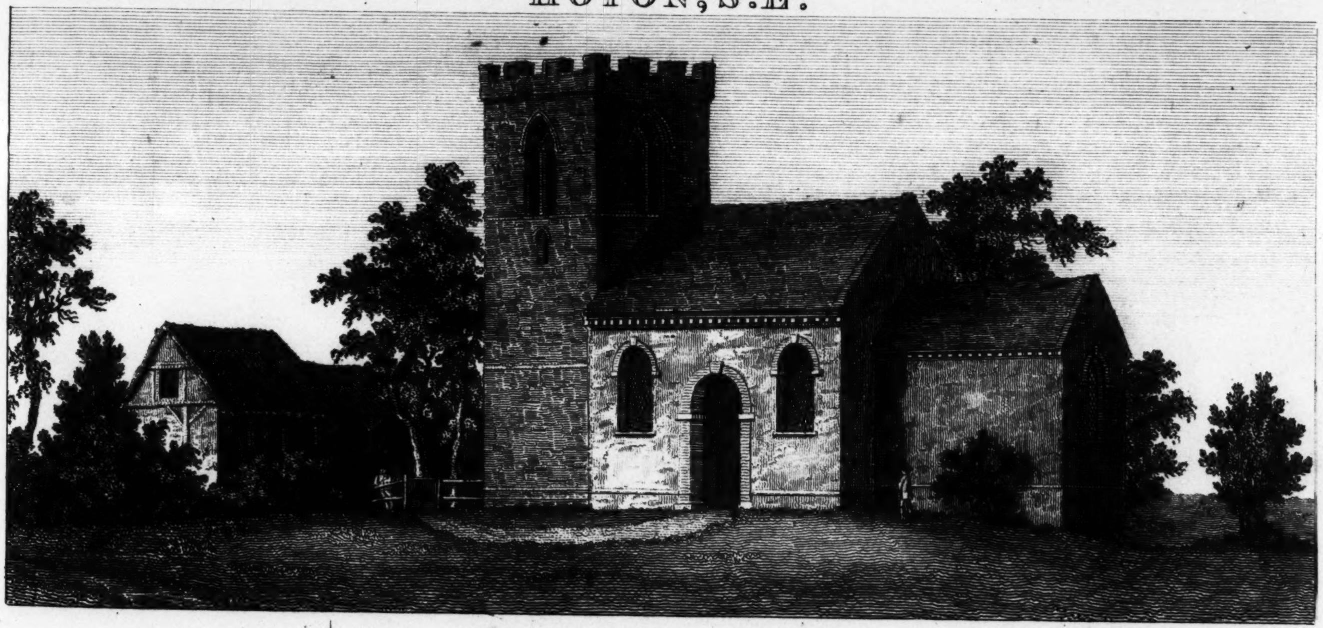
RECTORS.

Vol. III. Pl. XL. p. 266.

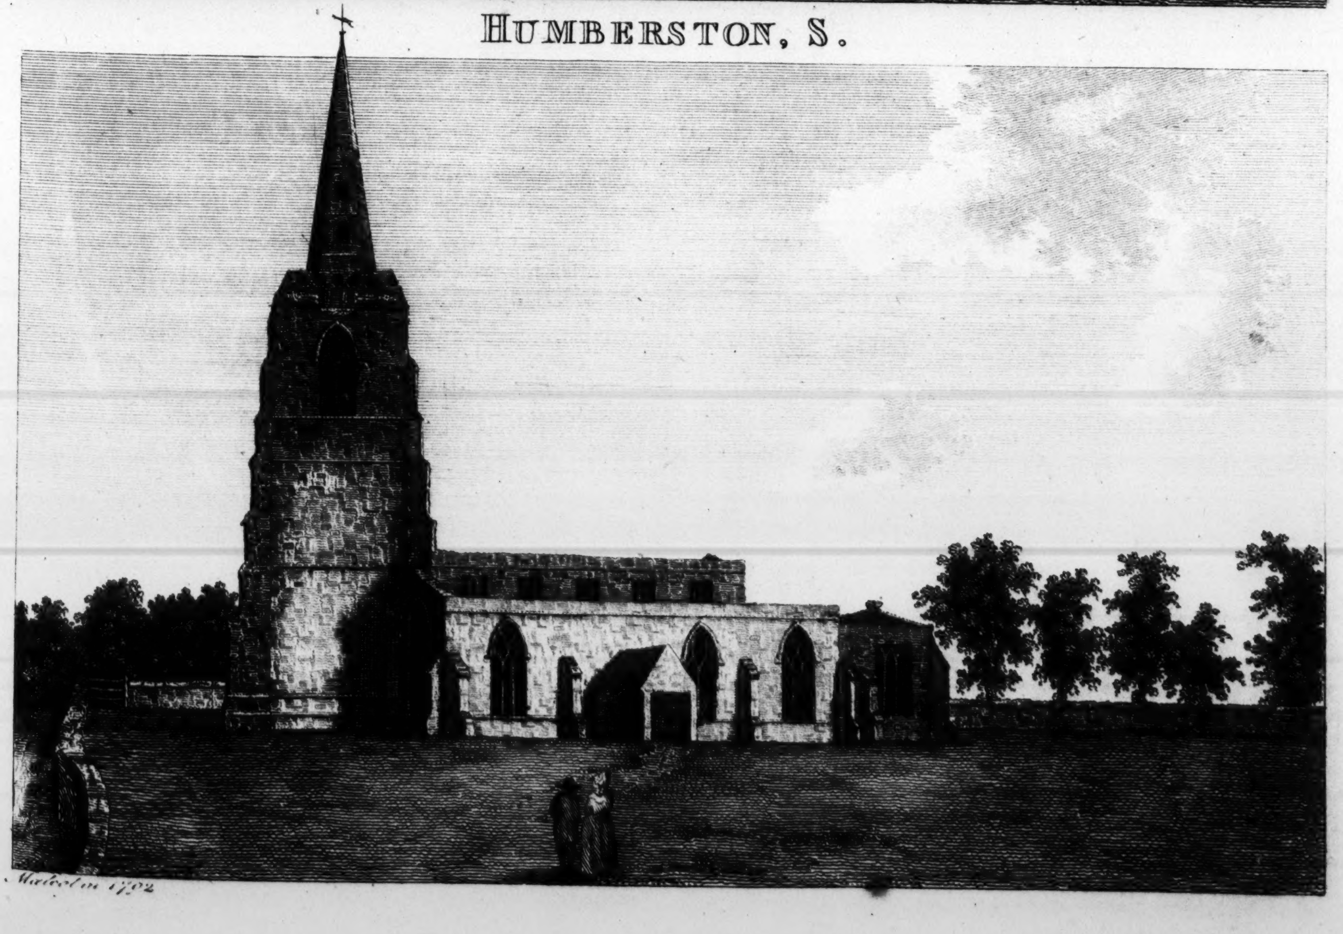
HOBY, S.



HOTON, S.E.



HUMBERSTON, S.



Malcolm 1792

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
Stephen de Kirketon, clerk, 1220.
Stephen de Heydon, an accolyte.	Prior and convent of Laund.
Robert de Merton, died 1274.	Robert de Ros, with conſent of Alan de Hoby.
Walter de Merton, preſbyter.	Prioreſs and nuns of Eton.
Thomas de Ruſſelon, died 1278.
Robert of Leiceſter, ſubdean, 1278.	Sir Nicholas de Segrave.
George Heneage, 1534.
Richard Smyth [1], 1562.
William Read, died 1617.
Matthias Scampton, 1617—1640.
——— Rhodes [2], 1640.
Thomas Rawſon [3], M. A. July 6, 1642.
Edward Clarke, 1662; died 1696.	Sir George Villiers, knt. pleno jure.
Richard Coxe, Jan. 30, 1696; died 1713.	Himſelf the patron.
Andrew Burnaby, 1713.	Mrs. Cox [4].
Robert Browne, 1722; died 1732.	John Coxe, clerk, and Robert Browne, gent.
Henry Browne, brother to the laſt, 1732—1743.	Robert Browne, gent.
Henry Browne, ſon of Robert, 1743—1784.	Himſelf the patron.
Henry Browne, nephew to the laſt, March 22, 1784.	Himſelf the patron.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

In the nave, on an alabaſter ſtone, is cut with a chiſel a large figure of a woman (probably the Bleſſed Virgin), and, underneath, the figures of a woman, and at her feet one ſon and three daughters, all kneeling and praying to it; with this inſcription:

"Here lieth the bodie of Marie wife of John Sharpe; who deceaſed the [5] day of Marche, in the yeare of our Lord
God 1566; on whoſe ſoull Jheſus have mercy, amen."

On another plaſter ſtone there, a man, a woman, and a child, kneeling and praying; with this inſcription:

"Here lyeth the bodies of Anthonye
. . . . . . and Margery his wife;
whiche Anthonye died the ſecond day of February, 1588.
Anthonie, who was buried the . . . . .
of January,
15 81."

On a ſtone in the chancel-floor, within the rails:

"Richard Coxe [6], late rector of Hoby, departed this life Dec. 23, A. D. 1713,
in the 42d year of his age."

On the ſame ſtone:

"Here lyeth John his ſon, who dyed Nov. 13, 1717,
in the 19th year of his age.
Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth, before the evil days come."

"Sarah Coxe, relict of the abovesaid Mr. Coxe, who departed this life the 30th of April,
anno Dom̄ 1734, aged 69."

On another ſtone there:

"Here lies the body of Mrs. Emma Gale, third daughter of Thomas Waze, of Rotherby, gent.;
who departed this life Nov. 4, 1714,
in the 64th year of her age."

On the ſame ſtone:

"Here alſo lieth the body of
Mrs. Catharine Gregory, ſecond daughter of Thomas Waze, of Rotherby, gent.;
who departed this life Sept. 12,
in the year of our Lord 1727,
in the 80th year of her age."

On a flat ſtone in the chancel:

"Here lies the body of
Mr. Robert Browne, late rector of this pariſh (and Brampton in Northamptonſhire).
Ob. Aug. 21, { Salut. 1732, ætat. 50.
Here alſo lieth the body of Mrs. Anne the wife of the late rector Mr. Robert Browne.
Ob. July 21, anno { Salut. 1743,
ætat. 46."

"Here lieth the body of Mr. John-Coxe Browne, ſon of Robert and Anne Browne. Ob. Jan. 15, an. Sal. 1781, æt. 60.
Henry ſon of Mr. John-Coxe Browne and Alice his wife, died March 31, 1759, æt. 3."

In the nave.

"Here lieth interred the body of Mr. Thomas Watts, late of Hinckley in this county;
who departed this life 7 Jan. 1765, aged 70."

"Sacred to the memory of Matthias Palling, late of the City of London, eſq. merchant;
who departed this life the 22d of October, 1785,
aged 73."

"Here lieth interred the body of George Palling, who departed this tranſitory life the 15th day of May, in the year of our Lord 1779,
and in the 60th year of his age.
Here are alſo depoſited the remains of Elizabeth relict of the aboveſaid George Palling;
who departed this life May 7, 1789,
in the 70th year of her age."

In the South aile, or chantry, are two ſtone ſeats. On a large ſlab of fine grey marble, in the South aile, are the effigies of an armed knight and his lady in braſs; but the braſſes containing the inſcriptions, and thoſe at the four corners which contained the arms, are all torn off. (See Plate XXXIX. fig. 28.)

On a white marble monument on the South wall:

"Near this place lies interred the remains of Mrs. Sarah-Anne Standley, relict of Thomas Standley, gent. of Leiceſter, and daughter of the Rev. Robert Browne, rector of this pariſh.
She died of the ſmall-pox September 7, 1792,
aged 67 years."

In the North aile:

"Will. Henton died 27 Nov. 1718, in his 78th year."

"Damaris, wife of William Henton, died July 24, 1708, in the 58th year of her age."

"Thomas Henton, ſon of William and Damaris Henton, died April 28, 1729, aged 59."

---

[1] In the Certificate referred to under Allexton, p. 8, Mr. Smyth is thus deſcribed: "Preſbyter, non conjugatus; competenter doctus; reſidet; hoſpitalis; deget ibidem; non licentiatus, nec prædicat; nullum aliud habet."

[2] "James Squire, curate to Mr. Rhodes, who, after two years poſſeſſion, was caſt out by Mr. Rawſon." Pariſh Regiſter.

[3] It appears, by his memorandum in two places in the Regiſter, that he was afterwards reſtored; and died in 1662. See p. 268.

[4] Whoſe daughter married Mr. Robert Browne, afterwards rector, who died in 1732, leaving a ſon in his minority. The rectory was held 11 years by Mr. Henry Browne, uncle to the young man.

[5] The exact day was never put in.

[6] This inſcription notwithſtanding, the ſaid Mr. Coxe was not buried here, but at . . . . in Glouceſterſhire, where he died.

"Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Henton, died Feb..... 17... aged 67."

"Mary, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Henton, grand-daughter of William Henton,
died Nov. 4, 1742, aged 20."

"George Henton, ſon of Thomas and Elizabeth, died April 3, 1758, aged 31.
"Anne his wife, April 12, 1783, aged 50."

"Jane, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Henton, died June 10, 1743, aged 20."

"Alice, daughter of Thomas and Joanna Henton, died May 24, 1790, in her 29th week."

"In memory of Samuel Pike, the late ſchoolmaſter of this pariſh; who departed this life
March 29, 1785, aged 72 years."

In the church-yard.

On a table-monument, on the South ſide of the chancel:

"Here lyeth the body of Edward Clarke, late rector of this pariſh;
who departed this life November the 10th day,
in the year of our Lord 1696, aged 81."

On a mural tablet at the Eaſt end:

"Near this place lies Richard Pick,
who died Sept. 29, 1719, aged 80;
and Elizabeth his wife, died July 20, 1733, aged 88.
Catharine their daughter died April 27, 1727, aged 37;
and James Pick their ſon, Jan. 2, 1738, aged 53."

On various upright ſtones:

Anne, wife of Dan. Alſopp, died July 1, 1760, aged 71.
William Beeby, Dec. 24, 1761, aged 73.
Anne, wife of John Paling, Feb. 14, 1725, aged 53.
James Paling died June 9, 1721, aged 44.
Elizabeth his wife, June 24, 1741, aged 64.
Robert Paling, Dec. 4, 1762, aged 61.
Sarah his wife, March 9, 1747-8, aged 49.
James Paling, Jan. 5, 1760, aged 57.
Dorothy his wife, Sept. 22, 1780, aged 77.
Thomas Paling, Oct. 20, 1771, aged 50.
Rebecca his wife, Dec. 5, 1758, aged 42.
Henry Willows died Dec. 2, 1761, aged 81.
Bridget Wilbourn, 28 Dec. 1777, aged 55.
Thomas Wilbourn, Feb. 6, 1795, aged 63.
Thomas Hickling, April 20, 1757, aged 55.
Elizabeth Hickling, 18 Dec. 1784, aged 78.
Thomas Henton, July 17, 1757, aged 60.
George Henton, 30 April, 1711, aged 82.
Elizabeth wife of George, May 12, 1682, aged 50.
William Henton, 15 May, 1786, aged 49.
Alice relict of Thomas Henton, 18 Jan. 1783, aged 82.
Joſeph Henton, 16 May, 1767, aged 61.
Joſeph Henton, 15 Jan. 1787, aged 43.
William Henton, Oct. 19, 1727, aged 66.
William Willows, ſenior, 5 July, 1782, aged 67.
Mary his wife, 22 Jan. 1762, aged 45.
Catharine, ſecond wife, 9 Jan. 1789, aged 85.
John Allen, 23 Jan. 1778, aged 77.
Elizabeth Allen, 21 April, 1778, aged 70.

"THOMAS RAWSON, M. A. was admitted to the rectory of Hoby July 6, 1642. He had married Lydia the daughter of ſir Roger Neviſon knight; a gentlewoman whoſe education was ſuitable to her birth and quality; and who lived with him in a manner no way beneath it, until the breaking-out of the rebellion; at which time he was forced to abſcond, to avoid the miſeries of a priſon. They ſoon after put his living in ſequeſtration, and appointed one Smith to ſucceed him; who, being denied the poſſeſſion of the parſonage-houſe by Mrs. Rawſon, got a party of horſe from Leiceſter, which, by force, in a barbarous and inhuman manner, dragged her out of the houſe, and turned her into the church-yard; and for ſome days and nights ſhe and her family lay in the church-porch and belfry, until Mr. Needham, rector of Rotherby, having notice of this ſad and deplorable condition of Mrs. Rawſon and her children, gave them leave to dwell in the parſonage of that living. But, not long after, Mr. Needham himſelf falling under the ſame calamity of ſequeſtration, the miſerable woman, with her numerous family, was turned out of houſe and home a ſecond time, and forced to lie in the church-porch at Rotherby, as ſhe had before done at Hoby. However, at length ſhe was admitted within the doors, and lived in ſome part of the church (poſſibly in the belfry here alſo), where they put up blankets for a ſkreen betwixt the family and the congregation. In this habitation ſhe continued for ſome time; and then Sir Thomas Hartopp gave them leave to dwell in ſome out-houſes belonging to a tenement which he had in Rotherby; where they had no ſtairs, but went to the upper rooms by a ladder; and where they entirely ſubſiſted upon the charity of their neighbours and ſome other friends, who ſent them relief. They had no leſs than nine or ten children, which were too many to be long maintained in that manner; and they were at length reduced to the proviſion which the law had made; and, in plain words, brought to the pariſh of Hoby, not for habitation only, but for relief and maintenance. Here then Mrs. Rawſon was put into a very mean houſe, and had but one pitiful room for her whole family. After which, the pariſh bound out one of her children to a lace-maker. Two more of them were taken off at length, and tabled at the charge of ſome of her friends, in a widow's houſe of the pariſh, for eight pounds a year; Sir Henry Hudſon of Melton Mowbray kept two more of them; and other two were boarded with one Matthias Wolfe, the lace-man with whom the other brother was apprentice, but at whoſe charge we know not. One piteous and unhappy child likewiſe, whoſe name was George, being lame, was forced to be put into the hoſpital by the pariſh. It may well be thought, that, even after Mrs. Rawſon was eaſed (if we may ſo call it) in this manner from the burthen of moſt of her children, yet the remaining part of her afflictions could not but ſit very heavy upon a perſon who had been born and educated as ſhe was. But, before the children were thus taken off from her, their miſeries were inexpreſſible. Let the reſt part be gueſſed at by this one inſtance: "There are at this time (ſays Walker in 1714), or were very lately living, ſome who have ſeen Mrs. Rawſon and her children ſtand round a ſieve of horſe-beans, eating them by handfulls: to thoſe they had not any bacon (butter, to be ſure, they could have none in the ſieve); nor, as far as I can gueſs, had they ſo much as a bit of bread with them; and, as to the new-faſhioned platter in which they were ſerved up, 'tis certain they had not a pewter diſh left them, nor, if I miſtake not, a diſh or a ſpoon of any kind; not ſo much as a wooden bowl; much leſs was there a table, chair, or ſtool, in the houſe. And therefore, as the extremity of miſery neceſſitated them to feed on what was proper for brutes only; ſo they were forced to take their food in the ſame manner, even from the ground. A gentlewoman, who was one of the beholders of this ſad ſpectacle, added, when ſhe related this ſtory, that tongue could not expreſs the hardſhips they underwent. And, to complete the miſeries, Mrs. Rawſon had, if I judge aright, four or five children born under theſe calamities conſequent upon the ſequeſtration; and, for want of neceſſaries, died either in, or ſoon after, childbirth of the laſt of them. 'Tis ſaid ſhe was laid of the 14th child. However, 'tis certain ſhe had two at leaſt under her miſeries; one with which ſhe was big when ſhe was dragged firſt out of doors; and the other with which ſhe died. How Mr. Rawſon diſpoſed of himſelf during the time that his family lay under thoſe miſeries, I cannot learn. I find he lived to the Reſtoration, and was re-poſſeſſed of his benefice; but did not live long enough to reap a year's profit. He was a worthy good man, and very well beloved by thoſe who knew him." Thus far from Mr. Walker's Sufferings of the Clergy, p. 345. Let it be added, however, that it appears by the Journals of the Houſe of Commons, "that Lydia, wife of Mr. Thomas Rawſon, miniſter of Hoby, obtained a fifth part of the profits of the parſonage in 1645."

HUMBERSTON,

antiently called Hamerſtone and Humberſtone, is bounded by Scraptoft, Thurnby, Evington, Belgrave, Thurmaſton, and Barkby Thorpe; is 3 miles diſtant from Leiceſter; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote.

Hugo de Grenteſmainell, at the time of the general ſurvey, held nine ploughlands in Humerſtone, the ſoc of which belonged to Sceltone. It had been valued, in the reign of Edward the Confeſſor, at twenty ſhillings; but at the ſurvey was worth forty ſhillings. The land was equal to ſix ploughs. Fourteen ſocmen, with ſix bordars, had ſeven ploughs and a half; and there were twelve acres of meadow [1].

This village is not noticed in the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about the year 1240.

Richard de Grey, who was taken priſoner at Kenelworth in 1265, after the battle of Eveſham, was then ſeiſed of a virgate of land in Humberſton, worth 14*s*. a year [2].

In the Itinerary of 1280, Humberſton, Thurmeſton, and Belgrave Gate, anſwered collectively as one vill.

In 1298, it was found that Edmund earl of Lancaſter, the king's brother, deceaſed, held divers lands at Humberſton [3].

John de Humet conveyed to Stephen de Segrave and his heirs one bovate and a half of land in Humberſton, which Henry the ſon of Robert held, together with the ſaid Henry, & toto exitu ſuo, & ſequelâ ſuâ; one acre in Litlemede, and two ſelions near le Portwey; one ſelion per Wolfrichwell, a toft above the town held by Juliana; and one croft containing four ſelions held by William the ſon of Walter; all which were to be held of the ſaid John by homage and a pound of cumin, or two pence yearly, at the feaſt of St. Michael, for all ſervices, except foreign ſervice [4].

Stephen de Segrave conveyed to the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter a virgate of land at Humberſton, in exchange for ſome of their property at Segrave [5]; and their property in this pariſh is thus deſcribed in their Regiſter:

"Habemus in Humberſton eccleſiam & rectoriam, cum decimis garbarum & feni, in propriis uſibus; tum ex antiquo habuimus advocationem eccleſie predicte, ex dono Arnaldi de Boſco & Joh̄is Humet, & ex confirmatione regis Henrici Secundi, &c. Et percipimus indè annuatim, per manus rectoris tunc, nomine penſionis, vi s̄. viii đ. ſicut patet in Matriculo Ep̄i, in hiis verbis: "Eccleſie de Humburſton patronus abbas Leyc'; perſona Ric̄us de Glocest', inſtitutus per H. Lincoln', ſolvens abbati Leic' dim' marcam ab antiquo, tummodò nihil, quia in propriis uſibus noſtris."

Memorand', quòd epiſcopus Linc' habet penſionem annualem, ſcil', xl s̄. de eccleſiis Humberſton & Hungarton, pro partibus fructuum & proventuum tempore vacationis vicariarum earundem eccleſiarum; ideo abbas & conventus Leic' modò recipiunt predictas partes fructuum & proventuum tempore vacationis vicariarum predictarum, &c. ut in compoſitione.

Monachi de Sc̄o Ebrulfo perceperunt duas garbas de dominico Joh̄is de Humet ab antiquo; & nos jam ſolvimus annuatim priori de Schen pro dictis garbis xx s̄. per novam compoſitionem.

Decima garbarum redd' xvi lī. xiii s̄. iii đ.; modò x marc'.

Decima feni redd' per annum, x s̄.

Require poſtea in decimâ feni.

Ordinatio vicarii ibidem per venerabilem Joh̄em epiſcopum Ebor' & Apoſtolice ſedis legatum facta, &c.

Vicarius de Humburſton habeat unum manſum competens & honeſtum, cum curtilagio iii virgatarum terre de glebâ eccleſie, cum pratis & paſturis, & omnibus pertinentiis ſuis. Habeat etiam omnes & omnimodas oblationes, decimaſque omnimodas perſonales, & decimas lane, agnorum, aucarum, porcellorum, lini, canabi, molendinorum, &c.; & omnia ad altaragia pertinentia, &c. ut in ordinatione. Dictus vicarius denarios Petri colligat & percipiat, & de iiſdem, ut mos eſt, ſatisfaciat, &c. Decimas & alia onera extraordinaria, quoties & quando occurrerint, dictus vicarius pro tertiâ parte tantummodò agnoſcat, ſubeat, & ſupportet, &c.

Habemus ibidem, ex dono Wiłłi de Martiwaſt, unam virgatam terre & iii ſeliones terre apud Suthmedwe versùs ductum aque, quas dedit . . . . [6] eccleſie Sc̄e Marie de Humburſton, &c. ut in cartâ ix[a].

Habemus ibidem, ex dono Rad̄i Martiwaſt, unam virgatam terre, cum toſto & crofto; & per eandem cartam dedit nobis Thomam de Weſthorp, cum omni ſequelâ ſuâ, &c. ut in cartâ xii[a].

Habemus cartam Roberti de Heyâ de Humburſton, per quam dedit nobis, conceſſit, & quietum-clamavit, totum jus ſuum & clameum quod habuit in iiii virgatis terre, & cum homagiis & ſerviciis illorum qui tenent iii virgatas de ipſis iiii, &c. ut in cartâ xiii[a].

Habemus ibidem, per aliam cartam, ex dono predicti Roberti de Hayâ, ſervicium quod habuit in predictis iiii virgatis terre, quas in capite tenuit de abbate Leyc' per v s̄. annuatim; videlicet, homagium & ſervicium Ric̄i de Campedon de i virgatâ terre, xv đ. & i par albarum cirotecarum; & homagium & ſervicium W. Caſteleyn de unâ virgatâ terre, iiii s̄.; & homagium & ſervicium W. Bawdweyn de unâ virgatâ terre, xv đ. & i lib̄. cumini, cum wardis, releviis, &c.; ſalvâ eleemoſinâ de quartâ virgatâ hoſpitalis Sc̄i Johannis, &c.

Mem', quòd nos remiſimus d̄no Henrico duci Lancaſtrie omnes terras quas habuimus in Everley in Wylſhyr, cum unâ carectatâ ligni quam habuimus cotidiè in foreſtâ Leiceſtr'; ſcil', pro appropriatione eccleſiarum de Humberſton & Hungarton, ex ſumptibus ſuis factâ [7].

Habemus ibi advocationem eccleſie, ex dono Ernaldi de Boſco & Joh̄is de Humetz [8].

Notandum, quòd omnes vicarii noſtri de archidiaconatu Leyceſtrie ſolv̄nt ſynodalia, preter vicarios de Hungarton & Humburſton, pro quibus nos ſolvimus ex ordinatione epiſcopi [9]."

In the terrier referred to under Barkby, p. 45, Humberſton fills four pages.

The property of the abbot and convent of St. John at Croxton is alſo thus deſcribed in their Regiſter [10]:

"Joh̄es Humet dedit Wiłło le Beus unam virgatam terre in Humberſton, quam Yvo filius Ricardi tenuit, cum eodem Yvone & ſequelâ ejus; & unum toftum & duos ſeliones in eâdem villâ, quas Wiłłus Peverillus tenet, cum eodem Wiłło & ſequelâ ejus; reddendo annuatim unam libram cumini pro omni ſervicio.

Item predictus Wiłłus de Beus dedit nobis predictam virgatam terre, cum predicto Yvone & ſequelâ ejus; & unum toftum & duos ſeliones quas predictus Wiłłus Peverillus tenet, cum ejus ſequelâ, in puram eleemoſinam.

Item Joh̄es Humet dictam donationem nobis confirmavit, ſalvo forinſeco ſervicio; & remiſit unam libram cumini, quam de predictâ terrâ percipere ſolebat.

Item idem Joh̄es dedit nobis, in liberam & perpetuam eleemoſinam, ii bovatas terre, quas Wiłłus de Stutevile tenuit, cum ejus ſequelâ; & totum pratum ſuum de dominio in Suthmede; liberè & quietè, ſalvo forinſeco; ad inveniendum luminare de cerâ in perpetuum coram altari Sc̃e Marie ad miſſam ejuſdem Virginis in prefatâ eccleſiâ, & omnibus noctibus Dominicis & feſtis duplicibus per annum.

---

[1] "Idem [Hugo de Grenteſmainell] tenet 2 carucatas terræ in Humerſtone. Soca pertinet ad Sceltone. Terra eſt 6 carucarum. Ibi 24 ſochmanni, cum 6 bordariis, habent 7 carucas & dimidiam. Ibi 12 acræ prati. Valuit 20 ſolidos; modò 40 ſolidos." Domeſday, fol. 232. a. 2.

[2] Appendix to vol. II. p. 86.

[3] Eſch. 25 Edw. I. N° 51. Leic.

[4] Cart. 18 Edw. III. n. 10.

[5] Appendix to vol. II. p. 115.

[6] Sic in MS.

[7] Charyte's Rentale, fol. lxv. a.

[8] Ibid. fol. cciii. b.

[9] Ibid fol. ccxv. b.

[10] See alſo the Appendix to vol. II. p 86.

Item Ricardus de Grey omnes predictas terras, & pratum, & predictum toftum, cum pertinentiis & aiſiamentis, pro ſe & heredibus ſuis, nobis confirmavit, in liberam & perpetuam eleemoſinam; ita tamen quòd nec ipſe nec heredes ſui, ratione relevii, warde, vel eſchaete, ſecte, vel alicujus auxilii, ſive cujuſlibet alterius conſuetudinis, in predictis terris de cetero exigere poterunt; ſed quieti & immunes ſimus ab omni ſervicio ſeculari tantùm quantùm pertinet ad dimidiam carucatam terre ejuſdem feodi in eâdem villâ.

Item ſciendum, quòd Hugo filius Yvonis de Humberſton, & Feliciana uxor ſua, & heredes eorum de eiſdem legitimè exeuntes, tenent de nobis unam virgatam terre, de predictis terris in Humberſton, liberè, quietè, & ſolutè, reddendo indè nobis xiis̃. ad iiii terminos; ſcil', ad Natale iiis̃. ad Paſcha iiis̃. ad feſtum Sc̃i Joh̃is Baptiſte iiis̃. & ad Mich' iiis̃.; faciendo forinſeca ſervicia quanta pertinent ad tantam terram; ita quòd non poſſint predictam terram dare, vendere, invadiare, vel ad firmam dimittere, vel alienare, abſque licentiâ & aſſenſu noſtro.

Item Anketinus de Humberſton & Matilda uxor ſua, & heredes eorum de eiſdem legitimè exeuntes, tenent de nobis unam bovatam terre liberè, quietè, reddendo indè nobis annuatim vis̃. ſterlingorum ad iiii predictos terminos; ſcil', ad Natale xviiiđ. &c.; faciendo forinſeca, ut ſuprà; ita quòd non poterint dare, &c. ut ſuprà.

Item Walterus de la Sire & Wymarta uxor ejus, & heredes eorum de eiſdem legitimè exeuntes, tenent de nobis unam bovatam terre in predictâ villâ liberè, quietè, reddendo vis̃. ad terminos predictos, ut ſuprà; faciendo, ut ſuprà; ita quòd non, ut ſuprà.

Item Walterus de Evinton & heredes ſui tenent de nobis, pro homagio & ſervicio ſuo, unum toftum & ii ſeliones in eâdem villâ liberè, quietè, reddendo nobis annuatim iis̃. ad iiii terminos; ſcilicet, ad Natale viđ. ad Paſcha viđ. ad Bapt' viđ. ad Mich' viđ.

Memorandum; redditus noſtri in eâdem villâ xxvis̃.

Robertus de Daleby in Leiceſtreſcirâ tenet de nobis, ſibi & heredibus ſuis, pro homagio & ſervicio, unam bovatam terre in Humberſton, quam Anketinus filius Yvonis tenuit, reddendo nobis annuatim vis̃. viđ. ad iiii terminos, & faciendo nobis forinſeca ſervitia, exceptâ wardâ predicte terre & maritagio filii ſui. Et, poſt mortem ipſius Roberti, heres ejus dabit nobis, nomine relevii, xiiis̃. argenti ad introïtum terre [1]."

Abbas de Croxton habet in Humberſton dim' car' terr' de dono domini Joh' Humet, & pratum; & confirmatum eſt de dom' Ric' le Grey, in puram eleemoſynam. Redd' xxvi ſol'. [2]

In this town are two manors; one of which was ſome time the inheritance of the Martivalls, lords of Noſeley; and from them came by marriage to ſir Robert de Sadington, knt. The heir of Sadington was married to Haſtings, and brought both this manor and Noſeley to her huſband; which afterwards came to Heſilrige. The other manor belonged to the family of the Hotofts for ſeveral generations.

Aug. 19, 1344, king Edward III. granted to Robert de Sadington, his chancellor, liberty of free-warren in all his demeſne lands at Humberſton [3].

In 1346, Joan de Hotoſt of Humberſton (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 5*s*. for half a quarter of a knight's fee; Robert de Sadington 4*s*. for a tenth part of a knight's fee; Robert de la Hay 2*s*. for a twentieth part of a knight's fee; Robert de Evington 2*s*. for a twentieth part of a knight's fee; John de Glenn 2*s*. for a twentieth part of a knight's fee; and John de Layton 5*s*. for half a quarter of a knight's fee; all ſituated in Humberſton, and parcel of the honour of Leiceſter [4].

In 1361, Henry Plantagenet duke of Lancaſter died ſeiſed of three knight's fees in Evington and Humberſton, which Richard de Grey held; alſo of one knight's fee in Mouſelegh and Humberſton, which Anketine Hubaud held [5].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Humberſton was rated at 4*l*. 9*s*. 6*d*.; and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 4 marks.

In 1474, it was found that ſir William Heſilrige, knight, died ſeiſed of the manor of Humberſton, and by writing confirmed the ſame to William Heſilrige his ſon; which was held of the king, as of the honour of Leiceſter, by the ſervice of a ſixth part of a knight's fee; and that he afterwards confirmed the ſame manor to Elizabeth daughter of Thomas Staunton, eſq. [6]

In 1476, William Heſilrige, eſq. died ſeiſed of the manor of Humberſton, held of the king, as of the honour of Leiceſter, by the ſervice of the ſixth part of a knight's fee; and Thomas Heſilrige was his ſon and heir [7].

"Both the manors," ſays Mr. Burton, "came in the time of king Henry VII, by purchaſe, to that wealthy lawyer Thomas Keble, eſq. who was called to the degree of a ſerjeant on Nov. 20, 1486; and became king's ſerjeant in 1499. His arms were, Barry of ſix, Nebulé, Argent and Sable, on a canton Gules a creſcent Or; which coat ſtandeth in the South-eaſt window of the church of St. Dunſtan in the Weſt in Fleet-ſtreet, London, amongſt other ſerjeants' arms there [8]. This ſerjeant was a man of ſound judgement, quick and ſharp conceit, great reading, and very eloquent. And (as it appeareth by the book of Reports in king Henry the Seventh's time) one of the greateſt practice in thoſe days. What his lands were at the time of his death, this brief of the inquiſition [9] taken after his deceaſe will diſcover: Two manors in Humberſton, held of the king as of the honour of Lancaſter; the manor of Thruſſington; the manor of Congeſton, with the advowſon of the church; the manor of Stony Staunton, with the advowſon of the church; the manor of Eaſtwell; the manor of Hamilton; one meſſuage, three tofts, and two bovates of land, in Howes; one meſſuage and eight acres of land in Barrow; two meſſuages, four crofts, one toft, five yard-lands, and five acres of meadow, in Shepeſhed; five meſſuages and ſeven yard-lands in Overton Saucey and Overton-Quatermerſh; one meſſuage and one toft in Radcliff upon Wreke; lands in Scalford and Kirkby Beler; three meſſuages, five tofts, 44 acres of land, in Leiceſter and Belgrave; one meſſuage in Humberſton-gate near Leiceſter; one meſſuage, one mill, and half a yard-land, in Scraptoft; two meſſuages, two tofts, one yard-land, ſeven bovates of land, in Barkby; two yard-lands and a half in Barkby Thorpe; two meſſuages, two cloſes, and four yard-lands and a half in Great Stretton; three meſſuages, one toft, one cloſe, ſeven yard-lands, and 24*s*. rent in Little Stretton and Norton; one meſſuage and one yard-land in Knighton; four meſſuages, one cloſe, and three yard-lands, in Evington; all within this county, and moſt of them purchaſed by him. "This," adds Mr. Burton, "may be obſerved of this man, that though it be but 138 years ſince he died, there is not of his name and kindred (as far as I could ever learn or find) any one now remaining; and of all this great eſtate which he left to deſcend, there is not one part of it belonging to any that is either of the name or blood, but all ſold, diſperſed, and gone.—Sic dii voluere [10]."

After the death of Thomas Keble, eſq. in 1501, an inventory of his eſtate was taken, by Valentine Maſon, general appraiſer to the moſt reverend Father in God the Lord Cardinal and Archbiſhop of Canterbury, July 6, 1501; from which theſe extracts are taken.

---

[1] Peck, MSS. 4955; è Codice MS. de Domeſday, fol. 7. a.

[2] Croxton Regiſter; and the Valor of 26 Hen. VIII.

[3] Appendix to vol. II. p. 115.

[4] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[5] Fin. 35 Edw. III. m. 23.—See more in Aſhby Magna.

[6] Eſch. 14 Edw. IV. N° 25. Leic.

[7] Eſch. 16 Edw. IV. N° 26. Leic.

[8] The Serjeant's arms here mentioned by Mr. Burton (ſee Plate XXXIV. fig. 17.) periſhed in the great fire of London; and are not noticed by ſir William Dugdale; though he gives three plates under the title of "Inſignia in feneſtris Refectorii infra Hoſpitium cognom. Sergeant's Inne in Fleet-ſtreet, A. D. 1599, ubi tunc temporis reperta ſunt per Guil. Burton, Interioris Templi Socium, in rebuſque heraldicis non minimè peritum."

[9] Eſch. 17 Hen. VII. n. 5.

[10] Burton, MS.

In the parlour.

	£.	s.	d.
A compleat hanging of broad Alexander, containing in length 60 yards, and in breadth 3 yards—ſix ſcore yards, at 2*d*. per yard	1	0	0
One dozen of cuſhions of verders ſtuffed with feathers — —	0	13	4
A ſperver [1] of broad Alexander	0	13	4
A feather bed and bolſter —	1	0	0
A pair of old fuſtians —	0	8	0
A pair of blankets — —	0	2	0
A pair of flaxen ſheets of 3 breadths, containing 21 yards, at 6*d*. each, —	0	10	6
A counterpane of tapeſtry work, ſore worn,	0	5	0
A table, two chriſtalls, two forms, two chairs, and a cupboard —	0	2	0
An old cupboard-cloth of green ſay	0	0	6

In the chamber over the parlour.

A compleat hanging of green ſay	0	6	8
Two carpets — —	0	10	0
A ſperver of broad Alexander —	0	10	0
And old feather-bed and bolſter	0	8	0
An old counterpane of tapeſtry work	0	3	4
A counterpane of imagery work	0	10	0
A counterpane of verders with birds	3	0	0
A cupboard — —	0	2	0
A counterpane of red damaſk, ſore worn, 34 yards — — —	5	0	0
A ſperver of red damaſk, with curtains of coarſe red ſarcenet —	3	6	8
A pillow and two cuſhions, covered with ray ſattin from Burges [2], ſtuffed with feathers	0	13	4
A pair of new fuſtians —	0	13	4
Six hangings of tapeſtry work, containing 90 yards, at 12*d*. per yd. —	4	10	0
One remnant of black double ſattin, containing 3 yards, at 8*s*. per yd.	1	4	0
Three doublet-cloaths of tawney ſattin, 8 yards and a half, at 8*s*. yd. —	3	8	0
A remnant of tawney ſattin, containing 2 yards and half, at 6*s*. yd. —	0	15	0
A remnant of black ſtamyn [3], containing 2 yards and half, at 2*s*. yd. —	0	5	0
A pair of great old amber beads, of twelve ſtones — —	0	10	0
A pair of beads, ten ſtones, caſſidens, &c. jaſper, partly covered with gold	4	0	0
A book written in French on parchment, called La Abuſe in Court —	0	10	0
An old harneſs-girdle, with divers little buckles — — —	1	6	8
An altar-cloth of arras, containing in length 3 yards, in breadth one yard, at 1*l*. 6*s*. 8*d*. per yd. — —	4	0	0
Two remnants of black velvet, containing 10 yards, at 12*s*. per yard —	6	0	0
A piece of tawney velvet, containing 3 yards, at 12*s*. per yard —	1	16	0
Eight pieces and a half of new broad Alexander, at 8*s*. per piece —	3	8	0
Five cheſts, of divers ſorts —	0	10	0
Two remnants of black velvet, containing 4 yards and half, at 12*s*. —	2	14	0
A book in French, of the Chronicles, on parchment — —	2	13	4
A book imprinted, called Ludovicus de Vitâ Chriſti — —	0	10	0
A doublet cloth of black ſtamyn, containing 4 yards. at 2*s*. per yd. —	0	8	0
A little velvet pouch, with a ſingle ring, ſilver and gilt — —	1	0	0
A little ſperver of ray ſilk, with curtains of green — — —	4	0	0

In the kitchen.

Three garniſh of pewter veſſels, little occupied, at 21*s*. per garniſh —	3	3	0
Three dozen of platters, 5 great chargers, a dozen and three porringers, and 2 dozen and four ſawcers — —	3	6	8
A great braſs pot — —	0	12	0
Two braſs pots of 3 gallons each	0	10	0
Four little poſſnets, at 12*d*. each poſſnett	0	4	0
Three great pans, of 5 gallons each pan	0	15	0
Three other little pans —	0	6	0
A little mortar of braſs, and a peſtle	0	4	0
Two pair of racks — —	0	6	8
A little pair of racks —	0	2	0
Two pair of broches ſquare —	0	11	4
Two great round broches —	0	6	0
Two little round broches —	0	1	8
Two bird broches — —	0	1	0
Two chaffing-diſhes — —	0	2	0
A great pewter chaffour, ſomewhat broken,	8	2	0
Three pair of pot-hooks, and four hanging irons — —	0	0	10
A frying pan — —	0	0	6
Two cullenders — —	0	0	4
Two ſkimmers, two ladles, and a gridiron	0	1	8
A great kettle — —	0	2	0
A cleaving knife, and three ſlicing (carving) knives — —	0	0	8
And in lumber and traſh —	0	0	6

Plate.

Two baſons and two ewers, part gilt, weighing 117 oz. at 3*s*. 4*d*. oz. —	19	10	0
Three ſtanding cups with covers, two chaſed and one plain, a goblet with a cover, and two little ſalts with covers, all gilt, weighing 96 oz. at 3*s*. 6*d*. per oz.	16	16	0
Six great bowls, with a cover gilt, and two little ſalts with a cover (wrethyn) wrought and enemelled, 208 oz. at 3*s*. 8*d*. per oz.	38	2	8
Two little goblets with two little covers gilt, four old goblets pounſed, two pieces chaſed, 22 ſpoons, and a flat piece, 100 oz. at 3*s*. per oz. — —	15	0	0
Six pieces, chaſed, with a cover partly gilt, 165 oz. at 3*s*. 4*d*. —	37	10	0
Two pots (of ſilver double gilt) weight 94 oz. at 4*s*. per oz. — —	20	7	4
Two great baſons, with two ewers, partly	30	10	2
Six goblets with two covers gilt, 110 oz. at 4*s*. per oz. — —	22	0	0
Six goblets with two covers, part gilt, 100 oz. at 3*s*. 4*d*. per oz. —	16	13	4
Four great ſalts with a cover chaſed and gilt, 52 oz. at 4*s*. per oz. —	10	8	0
Twelve great ſpoons with knobs, wrought and gilt, 24 oz. at 4*s*. —	4	16	0
A dozen of ſpoons not gilt, 14 oz. at 3*s*. 2*d*. per oz. — — —	3	4	4
A little ſpoon of working gold, 1 oz. 3-4ths — — —	3	1	8
A ſignet of fine gold, with an eagle diſplayed, 2 oz. except 30 dwts. at 3*l*.	3	17	6
A little piece with a cover gilt, 12 oz. ½, at 4*s*. per oz. — —	2	10	0
A little pot not gilt—pax bread—two cruets, and a ſacrying bell, 25 oz. at 3*s*. 2*d*. per oz. — —	3	19	2
Two pottle pots, 63 oz. at 3*s*. per oz.	9	16	6
A wafer with a boſs broken —	1	0	0
A little ſalt, of gold, with a cover chaſed with oak-leaves, 2½ oz. at 3*l*. per oz.	7	10	0
A ſtanding wafer with a cover gilt	1	10	0
A chalice, with a patten and cover, with round knobs, 16 oz. at 3*s*. 4*d*. —	2	13	4

Wearing geere.

A ſingle gown of ſcarlet, ſore worn, with a hood of the ſame — —	0	10	0
A crimſon gown (ſingle) with a hood of the ſame — — —	1	0	0
A night-gown of worſted-ſtuff, furr'd with coarſe black lawn —	0	12	0
A ſingle gown, of violet colour, with a

---

[1] "The head or teſter of a bed, ſomewhat perhaps in the canopy form; Randle Holme's Armory, III. XII. XLI, p. 449; the conical bell tents; canopies reaching down to the ground. See Merchant Taylors arms; Kent's Guillim 631; ſparver three tents; Ermine trimmed with Blue and Gules, &c.; arms of the Company of Upholſterers, called in their patent, 5 E. IV. ſpervers. Again, lower down in the ſame page, 449, a tent or a ſperver [looks like a circular canopy with curtains down to the ground; a circular tent; ſee their arms.] Sparver. Then every of them [4 yeomen] ſtick up the aungell about the bedde, and lette down the corteyne of the bedde, or Sparver.—A camp, or turn-up bed, from Spannan, abdere, to ſhut or cloſe up. Archæol. IV. 313. I rather think canopy or half-teſter curtains faſtened a-top. It was a ſtate bed. G. A.

[2] Bruges.

[3] Etamine in French.

hood — — —	0	13	4
Three ſingle gowns of blue ray, with two hoods, ſore worn, at 8*s*. each	1	4	0
Two ſingle gowns of green ray, with two hoods — — —	0	16	0
A gown, cloth of new blue ray and worſted — — —	0	13	4
A new gown, cloth of blue ray and tawney — — —	0	13	4
A gown, cloth of green ray and violet	0	13	4
An old cloak, of violet —	0	5	0
A red mantle, ſore worn —	0	3	4
A brown tawney gown, furred with fox-ſkins — —	0	13	4
A brown tawney gown, furred with black lamb — —	1	0	0
A ſhort riding gown, lined with black cotton — — —	0	10	0
A coarſe ſingle gown of muſter	0	8	0
A ſingle gown, with a hood of murray in grain — — —	1	3	4
A violet gown, ſingle, with a hood	1	2	0
A doublet of black velvet —	1	6	8
A doublet of tawney ſattin —	0	12	0
A jacket of black velvet, furred with martin-ſkins — —	1	6	8
A book, in French, wrote on parchment	1	0	0
An old ſcarlet gown of his firſt wife's, unfurred, with an old furfull, quarter deep, and lettyce — — — —	2	0	0
A woman's gown with violet in grain, unfurred, with a purfull of mynkes, quarter deep — — — —	2	0	0
A chyrtle of ruſſet camblet —	0	13	4
An old gown of his firſt wife's, unfurred, with a purfull of white lettyce, quarter deep — — —	1	6	8
A gown, cloth of new green ray	0	13	4
The two compleat veſtments of green broad Alexander — — —	2	0	0
A frontell for an altar of green ſilk fringed — —	0	12	0
An altar-cloth of green Alexander	0	5	0

In the chapel.

Two altar-cloths of Alexander, plain	0	3	0
A crucifix of wood —	0	1	8
Two images, one of our Lady, another of St. John — — —	0	2	8
Two curtains for the altar, of changeable Tartian — —	0	6	8
A veſtment, ſore worn —	0	13	4
A corporas, and the caſe, of old black velvet — — —	0	1	0
A pax, a ſacryng bell, two cruets of latyn [1] (horn) — —	0	0	8

In the barn.

A little ſtack of wheat, containing, by eſtimation, 4 quarters, at 3*s*. 4*d*. the qr.	0	13	4

In the granary.

Fifty quarters of malt, at 3*s*. 4*d*. per qr.	8	6	8

Corn in the fields.

A ryck of peaſe, containing, by eſtimation, 15 quarters, at 2*s*. qr. —	1	10	0
Eighteen acres of barley, at 6*d*. per acre	1	10	0
Eighteen loads of timber (hewn), at 4*s*. per load — — —	0	16	0
Two mill-ſtones, for a windmill, of Engliſh make — —	0	18	0
One fodder of lead —	0	5	4
Three waynes ſhod with iron —	10	0	0
Two plows, with the harneſs —	0	6	8

Cattle, &c.

Twelve ſcore ſheep, wethers, unclipped, at 1*s*. 8*d*. apiece — —	20	0	0
Eight ſcore ewes, unclipped, at 13*d*. apiece — — —	8	13	4
Eight ſcore lambs, at 6*d*. apiece	4	0	0
Twenty-ſeven bullocks, at 7*s*. apiece	9	16	0
A couple of oxen, at —	1	3	4
439 wethers of young and old (6 ſcore to the hundred) at 9*l*. per hund. —	38	3	6
379 fleeces of wool, at 4*d*. per fleece	6	19	8
Six ſcore hogs (ſheep ſo called) that were ſhorn, at 12*d*. each —	6	0	0
Fifty-three ſteers and heifers, at 9*s*. one with another — —	23	10	6
Eighteen kine (cows), at 8*s*. apiece	7	4	0
A grey trotting gelding, at —	1	0	0
A black ambling hobby, at —	1	6	8
A grey ambling gelding, at —	1	3	4
A little dunn ambling horſe, at	1	0	0
A great black trotting gelding, at	10	0	0
And an old grey gelding, at —	0	10	0
Three ſwans — —	0	10	0
Three cranes [2] — —	0	5	0
Two geeſe — —	0	3	4

⁂ The account of the live ſtock in this inventory is not a little curious, particularly as to the prices between trotting and ambling horſes. The Readers of this Hiſtory may compare the prices of many of theſe items with thoſe of the ſame ſpecies at different periods in the Regiſtrum Roffenſe, pp. 132, 133; with ſome items at an earlier period, in a detail of the ſtock that was to be left on the manors of the biſhop of Rocheſter at the time of his demiſe; and in Hutchinſon's Hiſtory and Antiquities of Durham, vol. II. p. 597, there is an accurate inventory of the ſtock, &c. delivered to John Machon, maſter of Sherborn Hoſpital, Sept. 24, 1636.

In 1503, the manor of Humberſton is noticed as belonging to the family of Keble, with certain lands and tenements there, held by the king as of the dutchy of Lancaſter, but by what ſervice was unknown.

In 1504, ... Cotton died ſeiſed of certain lands and tenements in Humberſton, held of the king, as of his honour of Leiceſter, but by what ſervice was then unknown [3].

Walter Keble (ſon of Thomas) died July 31, 1522, ſeiſed of the manor of Humberſton (worth 8*l*.) and of 2 meſſuages and 240 acres of land in Humberſton and Belgrave, held of the king as of the dutchy of Lancaſter; the manor of Thruſſington (worth 12*l*. 6*s*.) ſix meſſuages, one cottage, two tofts, ſixteen virgates and four bovates of arable and meadow, in Thruſſington, and lands in Ratcliffe on the Wreke, held under ſir Maurice Berkeley; the manor of Staunton juxta Sapcote (worth 5*l*.), with the advowſon of that church, held under the manor of Stipenſhill, co. Warwick; the manor of Eaſtwell (worth 5*l*. 12*s*. 8*d*.), ſix meſſuages, 10 tofts, 520 acres of land, and 8*s*. 4*d*. rent, in Eaſtwell and Kirkby Beler, held of the king as of the dutchy of Lancaſter; ſix meſſuages, one cottage, 11 virgates and a half of arable land, 40 acres of meadow, paſture, &c. in Stathern, Harby, and Plungar; and lands at Howes, Kirkby Beler, Shepeſhed, Scalford, Barkby, Thorpe Barkby, Barrow upon Soar, Stretton Magna and Parva, Stoughton, Keame, Evington, Billeſdon, Congeſton, and Overton. By his ſecond wife, Milicent daughter of Thomas Heſilrige, eſq. (who ſurvived him) he left a ſon, Francis, aged 2 years; and two daughters, Lucia and Anne. Thomas Keble of Rereſby is called his conſanguineus; and it is added by Cole, that Jo. Keble was his couſin; Thomas Heſilrige, his father-in-law; and the lady Margaret Egerton [4] his mother-in-law [5].

---

[1] "Q. a baſe metal; ſee Shakeſpeare's joke to Ben Jonſon of tranſlating the Spoons into Latyn." G. A.

[2] "The three cranes, valued at 20*d*. apiece, are undoubtedly herons; they are mentioned along with bitterns and geeſe, and not of higher value; but that was by no means the caſe ſo late as 1603. Mr. Townley, in his account of the Iſle of Man has uſed the ſame language; he ſays, he ſaw vaſt numbers feeding on the ſea-ſhore of the Iſle on fiſhes; theſe were certainly herons. Cranes eat only grain. In ſome places herons are called cranes, though totally different in ſize; weight of crane 10lb. of heron 3lb.; and are common in England; whereas a crane is a very great rarity. I ſaw one that was ſhot in the Fens near Cambridge, about 30 years ago." G. A.

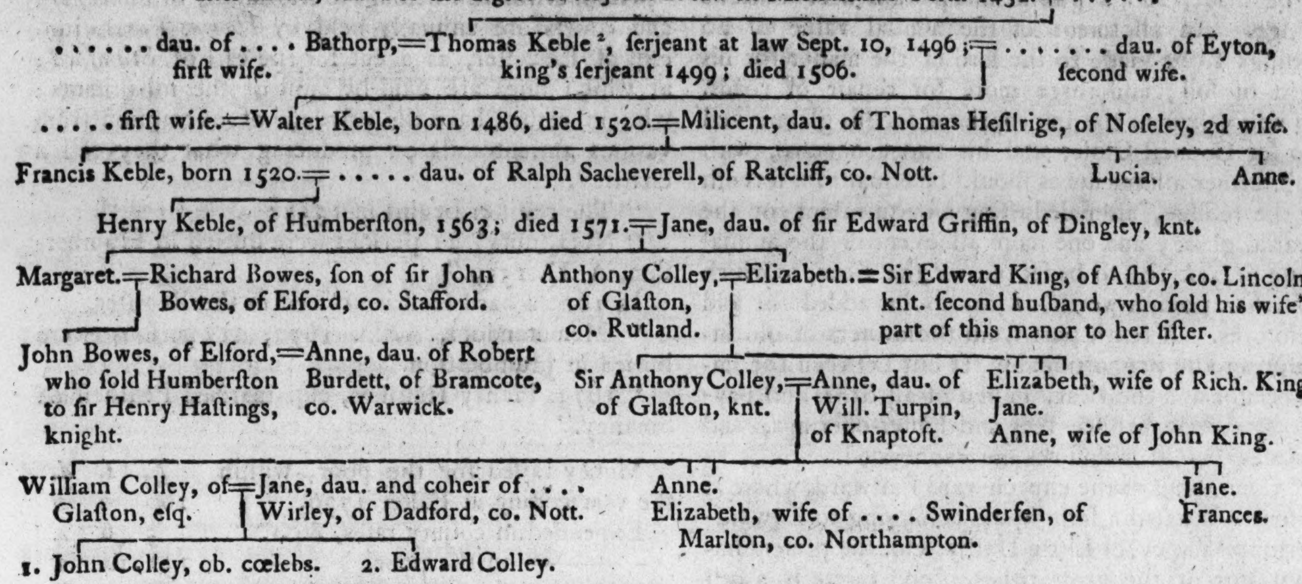
[3] Eſch. 20 Hen. VII.

[4] Of whom ſee under Thruſſington.

[5] Inq. taken at Leiceſter, and alſo at Boſworth, 27 Nov. 14 Hen. VIII.; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. I. (Harl. MSS. 756.) pp. 138. 396.

Pedigree

Pedigree of KEBLE[1].



Walter Keble, called to the degree of ſerjeant at law in Michaelmas Term 1452.=......

...... dau. of .... Bathorp, firſt wife.=Thomas Keble[2], ſerjeant at law Sept. 10, 1496; king's ſerjeant 1499; died 1506.=....... dau. of Eyton, ſecond wife.

..... firſt wife.=Walter Keble, born 1486, died 1520.=Milicent, dau. of Thomas Heſilrige, of Noſeley, 2d wife.

Francis Keble, born 1520.=..... dau. of Ralph Sacheverell, of Ratcliff, co. Nott. Lucia. Anne.

Henry Keble, of Humberſton, 1563; died 1571.=Jane, dau. of ſir Edward Griffin, of Dingley, knt.

Margaret.=Richard Bowes, ſon of ſir John Bowes, of Elford, co. Stafford.

John Bowes, of Elford, who ſold Humberſton to ſir Henry Haſtings, knight.=Anne, dau. of Robert Burdett, of Bramcote, co. Warwick.

Anthony Colley, of Glaſton, co. Rutland.=Elizabeth.=Sir Edward King, of Aſhby, co. Lincoln, knt. ſecond huſband, who ſold his wife's part of this manor to her ſiſter.

Sir Anthony Colley, of Glaſton, knt.=Anne, dau. of Will. Turpin, of Knaptoft.

Elizabeth, wife of Rich. King.
Jane.
Anne, wife of John King.

William Colley, of Glaſton, eſq.=Jane, dau. and coheir of .... Wirley, of Dadford, co. Nott.

Anne.
Elizabeth, wife of .... Swinderſen, of Marlton, co. Northampton.

Jane.
Frances.

1. John Colley, ob. cœlebs. 2. Edward Colley.

Thomas Kebyll, eſq. died July 17, 1526, ſeiſed of the manors of Humberſton; alſo of 5 meſſuages, 2 cottages, 16 virgates of arable, 30 acres of meadow, 40 of paſture, held under the manor of Evington, by fealty and ſuit of court only; alſo of a manor in Rereſby, called Chamberlaine's manor, worth 20 marks, and held under William Aſhby by knight's ſervice. He had a ſiſter Joice; and by his wife Elizabeth, left a ſon John, aged 12 years, and three daughters, Elizabeth, Margaret, and Joice[3].

The lands here which belonged to Croxton abbey were granted, in 1539, to Thomas earl of Rutland and Eleanor his lady in fee[4].

In 1564, there were 24 families in Humberſton.

On the death of Henry Keble, eſq. in 1571, without heirs male, his property devolved to his two daughters and coheirs, Elizabeth and Margaret.

In 1585, Henry Sacheverell, eſq. died ſeiſed of a moiety of divers manors, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, in Humberſton, held of the queen, as of her honour of Leiceſter, by the ſervice of half a quarter of a knight's fee[5].

In 1593, Jane Booſe (or Bowes) of Humberſton, was fined £55. as a reaſon for abſenting herſelf from the pariſh-church for 3 months following April 1, in the 34th year of the Queen's reign; and £20. more for a like abſence from Tueſday in the 4th week of Lent to the 24th of April following (being one month), in the 35th year. It appeared, by inquiſition taken before ſir George Haſtings knt. and Francis Monk, eſq. that ſhe had

The firm of the manor called Hotofts in Humberſton, with ſeveral lands and hereditaments in Humberſton and Boſworth, and two windmills in Humberſton, of the annual rent of	53	0	4
The firm of Heſilrige manor in Humberſton, with rents there and at Boſworth,	3	6	8
The firm of two meſſuages, &c. at Evington, worth	0	13	4

All which were ſeized into the queen's hands, till ſhe ſhould make ſubmiſſion[6].

From the heireſs of Keble this lordſhip was purchaſed by ſir Henry Haſtings[7], who died in 1629, and was inherited by his ſon Henry; who, it is remarked by Simmonds in his Diary, "lived at Humberſton private[8]." He was, however, taken priſoner by the parliamentary forces, and confined at Leiceſter, whilſt Humberſton was in their hands, which he at laſt ſold[9]; and was fined 2072*l*. 13*s*. 4*d*. by the ſequeſtrators; and Anthony Haſtings was alſo fined £80.

The freeholders here in 1630 were, John Thiſtlethwaite, eſq. Valentine Bale, eſq. Thomas Harris, gent. Robert Wilſon, and William Dawes.

In 1655, was collected in Humberſton, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 6*s*. 3*d*.

The lordſhip of Humberſton, ſoon after the Reſtoration, became the property of Mr. Sutton[10]; who married the heireſs of the Bales; and from his grandſon it was purchaſed ſoon after the year 1750 by William Pochin, eſq. the late worthy member for the county.

In 1722, 22 freeholders polled from this pariſh; and in 1775 we find 23 names.

In an act paſſed in 1788, for dividing, allotting, and incloſing, the ſeveral open fields, meadows, and commonable grounds of Humberſton, containing about 1400 acres, William Pochin, eſq. is deſcribed as lord of the manor, and owner of a conſiderable part of the ſaid fields and right of common; Edward-Hartopp Wigley, eſq. as impropriator of the rectory, and entitled to all the great and impropriate tithes, except the tithe of hay ariſing from an antient incloſure called Mill Cloſe, and on the orchards, homeſteads, and antient incloſures included in the ring of the town; or, in lieu of part of the ſaid impropriate tithes, viz. the tithes of hay within the ſaid fields, meadows, and commonable grounds, to a piece of land, by him now held in ſeveralty, in the ſaid pariſh, called Council Cloſe, about ſix acres, and to two cow-commons, or common paſture for two cows, tithe-free, in the ſaid fields, meadows, and commonable grounds, by way of modus or compoſition for ſuch impropriate tithes of hay; alſo to five yard-lands of glebe land, and right of common in the ſaid commonable grounds; and as owner alſo of other part of the ſaid fields, meadows, and commonable grounds, and right of common; the rev. John Dudley, clerk, as patron and incumbent of the vicarage, entitled to the tithe of wool and lamb, and all other vicarial tithes within the ſaid pariſh, or to certain moduſes in lieu of ſome of ſuch tithes, alſo to the tithe of hay ariſing on the ſaid mill-cloſe, and the orchards, homeſteads, and antient incloſures within the ſaid ring of the town, except thoſe belonging to the ſaid impropriator as ſuch, and an orchard belonging to John Baſs, formerly part of the impropriate eſtate, alſo to three yard-lands of glebe land, and to right of common in the ſaid commonable grounds. And Marmaduke Tomline, eſq. Thomas Hawes, John Iliffe, Thomas Allſop, William Tailby, John Freer, gentlemen, and others, were then proprietors of, or intereſted in, the reſidue of the land of which the ſaid commonable grounds conſiſted, and of the right of common thereon. The turnpike roads were not to be altered; but convenient private roads to be made, and a public ſheep-waſh near Salter's Bridge. An allotment of the annual value of 20 ſhillings to be made to the lord of the manor for his right of ſoil; and three more for repair of roads. An equivalent to the impropriator for his glebe; and alſo for Council Cloſe, and his two commons; with ſuch farther allotments as ſhould be equal to a ſeventh of the reſidue, after deducting an equivalent for the vicarial glebe; and one more allotment of the annual value of 31*l.* 10*s.* to be ſet out for the vicar, to which a farther portion worth 2*l.* 2*s.* to be added for old incloſures. A tenth part from the owners of old incloſures to be proportionably ſet out between the impropriator and the vicar, in lieu of all tithes and payments, except ſurplice fees and Eaſter-offerings, and moduſes for old incloſures not exonerated.

---

[1] "From Le Neve's Faſti, p. 366, it appears there was an Edward Keble, who was admitted to the third prebendal ſtall in Weſtminſter Abbey in June 1547; but, according to Widmore, he was ſoon deprived. Whether he bore any relation to the Kebles of Leiceſterſhire, I know not. An account is given of Joſeph Keble in the Biographical Dictionary, in which character there are ſome peculiar traits of him as a lawyer, and as a minuter of notes of Sermons, as well as of reports in the courts of Weſtminſter Hall. All that is ſaid is, that he was the ſon of a lawyer. There are many of the name of Keble in the neighbourhood, and chiefly in the farming line; but it is probable that not one of them has any knowledge of the anceſtor of his family." S. D.

[2] Another Thomas Keble had been called to the ſame degree in 1486.

[3] Inq. at Leiceſter, 21 Nov. 17 Hen. VIII.; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. IV. (Harl. MSS. 759.) p. 180.

[4] Grants in the Augmentation Office.

[5] Eſch. 27 Eliz.

[6] Inq. at Loughborough, 28 May, 36 Eliz.

[7] Sir George Haſtings, butler to the earl of Cheſter, died of the plague, June 4, 1641.

[8] Simmonds' Diary, 1645.

[9] See before, under Belgrave.

[10] See p. 276. note 3.

"Contiguous to the church-yard Eaſtward, where at preſent is ſituated a farm-houſe belonging to Edward-Hartopp Wigley, of Little Dalby, eſq. the preſent impropriator of the great tithes, ſtood formerly a cell dependent on the Abbey of Leiceſter, in which, it is ſaid, ſix friers or brothers were maintained. The houſe in which they lived was taken down with great difficulty, from the great ſtrength and firmneſs of the materials, about the year 1726. Tradition relates the following particulars reſpecting this place: That, if a lay brother, travelling between the abbeys of Leiceſter and Laund, arrived at the cell of Humberſton about eight in the morning, the brothers were to find him a breakfaſt and a pint of beer; if he arrived at noon, he was to have a dinner and beer; if after eight at night, he was to be provided with a ſupper and lodging, and to proceed to Leiceſter before breakfaſt in the morning.

"To the North Weſt of the village, in a part of the field at preſent known by the name of Hoſton, it is ſaid, another religious houſe or nunnery was ſituated; and thoſe who are fond of the marvellous have not failed to ſay, that there was a ſubterraneous paſſage thence to Leiceſter Abbey[1]. The teſtimony of ſome of the inhabitants, who declare that ſteps have been diſcovered thereabouts, is more deſerving of credit; and it is certain that ſeveral articles of iron houſehold-furniture have been found. As the ſpot is a pleaſant eminence, it is very probable that what report has called a religious houſe may have been, like Stoughton Grange, a country-reſidence belonging to the abbots of Leiceſter.

"Near the ſame place is a ſtone, which ſeems to confirm the generally-received opinion of naturaliſts concerning the growth of thoſe bodies: for, notwithſtanding great pains have been taken by a late proprietor of the land to keep it below the ſurface, it defeats his efforts, and riſes gradually, though not inſenſibly[2]. It is remarkable as being the only ſtone of the ſame kind nearer than Charnwood Foreſt, which is about eight or nine miles diſtant; and is poſſibly the peak of a vaſt bed of rock-ſtone, which may lie beneath the intermediate country.

Humberſton ſtill belongs to the dutchy of Lancaſter; and courts are annually held by Thomas Pares, jun. eſq. of Leiceſter, as agent for the earl of Stamford; at which fines are paid by moſt of the inhabitants; who in return have the privilege of exemption from various antient tolls on producing what they call a charter[3].

"The regiſter begins in 1557:

"Nota, nota! 21 perſons were buried in Humberſton, A. D. 1559."

In 1607 a hard froſt is noticed in the Regiſter.

"Memorandum, A. D. 1670, 21 perſons were buried in Humberſton."

"1673, Henry Haſtings, eſq. married Pentheſſilea Smalley."

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor, within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	160	0	0
Expended in county rates, &c.	5	6	4
——— on the poor, —	151	14	2
Rent of workhouſe[4] and habitations,	3	7	3
Expended in litigations, —	1	3	8
Money raiſed for 1783,	214	1	1
——— 1784, —	200	12	8
——— 1785, —	149	6	2
Medium of theſe three years,	188	0	0
——— of county expences,	14	2	11
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of churches, roads, &c.	9	11	0
——— of nett annual expences,	164	6	1
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	1	8	8
——— of entertainments at meetings,	3	5	10
——— of law expences, —	0	1	2
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0
Expences of the poor in 1796,	229	0	0
——— 1797,	330	0	0
——— 1798,	243	0	0
Average of three years,	267	6	8

CHARITABLE DONATIONS,

given and left, for the uſe of the poor and church of the pariſh of Humberſton, by perſons unknown[5]:

A piece of land called Church-head-land, a piece of land in Upper Marſton, three pieces in the North head; the crops of which are let or ſold to the beſt bidder every year, and the moneys ariſing therefrom have been diſpoſed of from time immemorial, half for the uſe of the church, and half for the uſe of the poor. Alſo 35 pounds; the intereſt of which is to be diſtributed amongſt the poor, according as the vicars, churchwardens, and overſeers of the poor ſhall direct.

William Warner } Churchwardens, Joſeph Allen } 1788.

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 47.

The CHURCH, (ſee Plate XL.)

dedicated to St. Mary, conſiſts of a tower (in which are 5 bells); a ſtone ſpire; the windows quatrefoils in ſquares; a chancel; and a nave, of one pace with the chancel, ſeparated from two ſpacious ailes by five pointed arches on octagon pillars and capitals, and five clereſtory windows; the South windows plain; and the South-weſt in the chancel ſquare.

Mr. Burton's MS. ſays, "Upon the South outſide of the wall of the ſteeple, on the top, next to the battlements, lie two large pictures, cut in ſtone, of St. Peter and St. Paul. At the head of the one, and the feet of the other, are cut in ſtone two cinquefoils Ermine, the arms of the Abbey of Leiceſter; by which it appeareth that the abbots of Leiceſter (who were patrons of this church[6], and held the ſame appropriated to them) were founders of the ſteeple, if not of the whole church."

The tower of this church is embattled, and adorned with a cornice of quatreſoils; and under this, on the South face, are two figures in rude relief lying on their ſides, and, as far as could be diſtinguiſhed by the diſtance, repreſenting a ſaint with a drawn ſword, and another; perhaps St. Peter and St. Paul. A rude ſketch of them is given in Plate XXXIV. fig. 7; and of other ornaments in fig. 8, 9.

---

[1] Vide Leiceſter, Subterranea.

[2] "So that the Romans, perhaps, did not go far for the ſtone uſed for their miliary inſcription. See Introduction, p. clv." G. A.

[3] "Theſe certificates it has been cuſtomary to take out at the courts for that purpoſe within theſe twenty years. Some of them I have ſeen." J. D.

[4] From the information of the late Rev. John Dudley, vicar of this pariſh; and of his ſon John Dudley, fellow of Clare Hall, Cambridge.

[5] "This ground is ſuppoſed to have been left to the pariſh of Humberſton by Hugh Botham, of London, coach-maker: who alſo deviſed by his will, now in the poſſeſſion of the Rev. Henry Woodcock, vicar of Barkby, various pieces of ground to Syſton, Barkby, Evington, &c." J. D.

[6] "In a caſe in my poſſeſſion, drawn up for counſel's opinion, on a queſtion in diſpute concerning the advowſon of this vicarage, it is ſaid, "It was originally in De Boſco & Humetz, who rebuilt the church; and the rectory in the duke of Lancaſter;" the former of which poſitions is ſeemingly confirmed by the plea of John de Humetz againſt the abbot of Leiceſter, in the Placita recited in p. 275." J. D.

Over the point of the upper windows are the ſymbols of the Evangeliſts; and in the belfry window are the ſketches ſhewn in fig. 10, 11.

At the Eaſt end of the North aile is an old communion-table.

In the South wall of the chancel is a piſcina.

The principal part of the church has open ſeats.

The font, which is octagon, on a ſmaller octagon ſhaft, and ſtands on a large circular kneeling-ſtep, is ornamented with niche-work; ſee fig. 12.

Mr. Burton notices theſe arms; fig. 13—15.

Barry of ſix; Argent and Azure. Grey.

Barry of ſix; Argent and Azure; three torteauxes in chief. Grey.

Per pale, Gules and Sable, a lion rampant Argent; Beler.

Ernaldus primus de Boſco gave the church of Humberſton to the abbey of Leiceſter; and the abbey of St. Ebrulf had a yard-land, cum decimis de duabus aulis, in Humberſton, of the gift of Hugh Grenteſmainell, which was confirmed by Robert earl of Leiceſter[1].

In the Matriculus of 1220[2], Humberſton is deſcribed to be under the patronage of the abbot of Leiceſter; the rector, Richard of Glouceſter, inſtituted by Hugh biſhop of Lincoln, and paying a penſion of half a mark from old time. The monks of St. Ebrulf received two ſheaves from the demeſne of John de Humet of old time.

"Abbas de Leic', ſummonitus ad oſtendendum quare non permittat Joh̃em de Humaz preſentare idoneum perſonam ad eccleſiam de Humberſtone, que vacat, &c. quia advocatio illius eſt jus ſuum & eccleſie ſue, ut illam quam Jordanus pater ſuus dedit eis per chartam ſuam, quam pertulit, & que hoc teſtatur; & Joh̃es dicit, quòd ipſe Jordanus non potuit advocationem illam dare, quia ipſe non habuit niſi cuſtodiam terre in quâ eccleſia illa ſita eſt per matrem ipſius Joh̃is, cujus hereditas terra illa fuit; & indè petit conſiderationem curie. Et abbas dicit, quòd ipſe eſt heres patris ſui, & ideò debet illa ei warrantizare[3]."

"Litera conceſſa domino Papæ de licentiâ dandâ abbati & conventui de Leiceſtre, quòd ipſe adquirere valuerit eccleſiam de Humberſtone, dioceſis Lincolnienſis. Dat' apud Eltham, 3 Martii, 1329[4]."

Humberſton and Hungerton were appropriated to the abbey of St. Mary de Pratis by a papal legate; who alſo endowed a vicarage for each of theſe churches, which were to pay a penſion of 20*s.* each to the biſhop of Lincoln at Michaelmas.

In 1344, the procurations were, 7*s.* 6¾*d.*; the rectory was taxed at 25 marks, and paid 3*s.* for Peter-pence. The abbot of Leiceſter had alſo a penſion from it of half a mark.

In 1534-5, the ſynodals were 5*s.* 10*d.*; and the value of the vicarage 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

The rectory and tithes of Humberſton coming to the crown by the ſtatute 30 Henry VIII, were leaſed to Henry Mannynge for 21 years, by queen Elizabeth, in 1570, at the rent of 14*l.* 8*s.* 8*d.*[5]; and afterwards granted, by letters patent, 11 Aug. 1582, to ſir Chriſtopher Hatton; namely, the ſite of the rectory 62*s.*; tithes of ſheaves of corn and grain and tithe-barn, 10*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; tithe of hay, 13*s.* 4*d.*; to hold of the manor of Eaſt Greenwich in ſocage; redd' per ann' 7*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.* to the queen; penſion to the biſhop of Lincoln, 20*s.*; ſynodals to the archdeacon, 11*s.* ob̃. q̃.; and, for a ſtipend to the curate of Hinckley, 106*s.* 8*d.*; to the receiver of the county, or receipt of the Exchequer, at Lady-day and Michaelmas.

FRANCIS PHILIPS, Auditor.

By indenture dated Nov. 16, that year, and enrolled in the court of Chancery, this rectory, and the advowſon of the vicarage, were conveyed by ſir Chriſtopher Hatton to John Chippendale, LL.D.

There was a ſuit in the Exchequer in 1604 Bale verſus H...es, rectorem.

In 1642, the patron of this church was Mr. Valentine Bale, brother to ſir John Bale of Carleton, ſon of ſir George Bale, eſq. ſon of John Bale of Sadington, knight.

In 1650, Humberſton was returned as an impropriation; the rectory worth £100. the vicarage £30; and the incumbent as "no preacher."

In the king's books it is entered as a diſcharged living; value, "in decimis majoribus & minoribus, cum manſo & aliis proficuis, £8. Penſio Epiſcopi £2. Terra pro reparatione eccleſiæ."

The epiſcopal procurations are, for the rectory 3*s.* 9*d.* the vicarage 1*s.* 8*d.*; the archidiaconal 3*s.* 6*d.*

RECTOR.	PATRONS.
Richard of Glouceſter, ſubdeacon, 1228.	Abbot and convent of Leiceſter.
VICARS.
Thomas Male, 1534.
Henry Bucks[6], M. A. 1562.
Thomas Wilſon before 1600.
. . . . . . H . . es, 1604.
Thomas Warriner died 1618.
John Ley, 1632.
Richard Benſkin, 1632—1638.
Thomas Boſſe, preſbyter, 1639.
John Muſſon, miniſter, 1648.
Francis Hanmer, Sept. 15, 1649; died about 1670.
Richard Adams[7], ejected 1661.
Roger Chapman[8], May 31, 1661; died 1687.	Eliz. Bale, pro hâc vice; & Rex ad corroborand'.
Henry Whatton, Aug. 1, 1687; died 1704.	William Bale, eſq.
George Anderſon, Sept. 18, 1704; reſigned for other preferment 1710.	Archbiſhop of Canterbury by lapſe; the ſee of Lincoln being vacant.
Robert Harriſon, June 12, 1711; reſigned 1714.	N. G. Murcot.

---

[1] Vet. Rot. in Bibl. Cotton.

[2] See the Introductory Volume, p. lix.

[3] Placita incerti temporis regis Johannis, Rot. notat. 5. in Recept. Scaccarii, Rot. 9.

[4] Catalogue des Rolles François, II. 16.

[5] Leaſes in the Augmentation Office.

[6] In the Certificate referred to under Allexton, p. 8, Mr. Bucks is thus deſcribed: "Preſbyter, non conjugatus; doctus; reſidet; hoſpitalis; deget ibidem; non licentiatus, ſine cur'; nullum aliud habet."

[7] "After his ejectment, he married a wife at Mountſorell, and there ſet up a meeting in his own houſe. At firſt many perſons were afraid to appear at it; but it afterwards increaſed very much, and he continued it about 14 years. Juſtice Babington, who, though a ſober man, was very zealous againſt the Diſſenters, and oppreſſed them more than all the other juſtices in that county, was very ſevere againſt him. He fined him 12*d.* per day, and ſent to the officers of the pariſh to make diſtreſs for it. The poor men were ſo troubled in conſcience, that they knew not what to do. At length, upon the juſtice's threatening them, they ſeized his pewter, and ſent it to the pewterer's, who refuſed to buy it. After this, the juſtice ſent for Mr. Adams, and told him he was not againſt his keeping ſchool in his houſe, but, if he would not leave off his meeting, he muſt expect to be troubled. Soon after this the juſtice died of exceſs of bleeding. Mr. Adams went to London, and being of the Baptiſt denomination, ſucceeded Mr. David Dyke at Devonſhire-ſquare. He was a man of great piety and integrity. He lived to a great age, and could not preach ſome years before his death. Mr. Mark Key, his aſſiſtant, ſucceeded him in the paſtoral care of the church. Croſby, Hiſt. Bapt." Palmer, vol. II. p. 116.

[8] Curate alſo of Thurmaſton.

VICARS.	PATRONS.
Paul Dudley, March 14, 1714; died 1760.	Walter Noble, by conſent of William Higgs, gent.
John Dudley, M. A. Jan. 1, 1761; died 1794.	Iſaac Dudley, fiſhmonger.
John Dudley, M. A. 1794.	John Dudley, clerk, on his own petition.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

On a flat ſtone in the chancel:

"Here lieth the body of Samuel Bale[1], ſon and heir of William Bale,
late of Humberſton, eſq.
who departed this life the 20 day of May, A.D. 1687,
aged 30 years.
Alſo the body of Elizabeth his wife,
the fourth daughter of George Faunt, of Foſton, in the county of Leiceſter, eſq,
She was interred June 23, 1710, aged 51."

In the North-eaſt corner of the South aile ſtands an altar-tomb, about 7 feet in length, 3 in breadth, and 3½ in height. The upright part is formed of the ſame kind of free-ſtone of which the tower and ſteeple are built, ornamented with niches now filled up; under which are four blank ſhields (two on the South ſide, and two at the end of the tomb), but no traces of arms; and, as they are not much defaced, it ſeems probable that none were ever engraved upon them. The top is one large entire ſlab of alabaſter, on which is cut-in a man, bareheaded, and in plated armour, ſword and dagger at his ſides; and a dog looking up to him (Plate XXXIV. fig. 16.)

Round the ſlab the following parts of an inſcription, deeply cut, are ſtill legible:

"Hic jacet Ricaꝛdus . . . . . .
Hotoft, aꝛmiger, qui obiit . . . . die Aprilis, ... anno dñi MCCCCLX°, cuj' a'i'e ꝑpiciet' deus. Amen."

There was formerly, at the upper end of the South aile, an alabaſter monument for Thomas Keble, ſerjeant at law, who died in 1500, with his figure at whole length, dreſſed in a ſerjeant's ſcarlet robes, and coif, between his two wives; and on the ſides thereof were painted theſe arms:

1. Keble, fig. 17; ſee p. 270.
2. Gules, a chevron Ermine between three eagles diſplayed Argent. Eaton of Warwickſhire, fig. 18.
3. Quarterly, Keble and Eaton, fig. 19.
4. Sable, a chevron between three creſcents Or, fig. 20.
5. Quarterly, 1. and 4. Keble; 2. and 3. Argent, on a bend Sable five bezants. Palmer, fig. 21.

Of this tomb, which Mr. Burton's printed book had aſcribed to Walter Keble, no trace remains.

In the South-eaſt corner of this aile ſtands a plain altar-tomb of free-ſtone, having at the top a large ſlate-ſtone much broken and ſplintered; on which we read,

"HERE LIETH THE
BODYE OF JANE GRAY,
. . . . FROM THE
. . . . . . OF THE BARONS
. . . . MAR-
. . . . ED BOWES[2]
. . . . HIS
. . . .
. . . ."

At the Weſt end of the tomb ſeems to have been cut in relief a woolſack, or a tablet for arms or inſcription; and on the front are two blank ſhields, fig. 22.

In the wall, over this tomb, is another piſcina; and on each ſide of the Eaſt window two perks.

At the Eaſt end of the South aile, on an altar-tomb of brick covered with ſlate:

"Thomas Sutton[3],
de Kenſington, com' Middleſex', arm^r^, emptor terrarum in hâc villâ,
hìc cineres poni voluit.
Obiit 9[illegible] die Septembris, anno æræ X^t^ianæ 1732, ætatis ſuæ 83.
"Hìc ſimul jacet uxor ejus de 2^dis^ nuptiis Maria Sutton, Gulielmi Okeden, de More-critchell in agro Dorſetienſi, arm^i^, filia.
Extremum diem clauſit 10° die Septembris, anno ætatis 48, Salutis Humanæ 1714."

On flat ſtones:

"Here lyeth the body of Mary,
the wife of William Hawes, who departed this life
July 1, anno Dom. 1713, aged 37.
Alſo the body of William Hawes, who departed this life December 13, 1750,
in the 77th year of his age."

"Here lyeth the body of William Hawes,
who departed this life May the 11th,
anno Dom. 1671, aged 32.
And the body of Joane Hawes his wife,
who departed this life May the 19th,
anno Dom. 1712, aged 68."

"Here lyeth the body of William Hawes, ſon of William Hawes by Mary his wife;
who departed this life Oct. 22, 1728, aged 20 years."

"Here lyeth the body of Anne,
the wife of Thomas Hawes, gent.;
who departed this life the 15th day of October, 1765,
aged 55 years."

"In memory of Thomas Hawes, gent.
He exchanged time for eternity
the 4th of September, 1785, aged 76 years."

"Beneath reſt the remains of William ſon of Thomas Hawes, gent. by Anne his wife;
who departed this life Feb. 20, 1780,
aged 42 years."

"Under this ſtone lieth the body of John Hawes.
He died the 29th day of April, 1757, aged 4 years."

---

[1] "This is the only grave-ſtone of the Bales, who were poſſeſſed of the advowſon and of other property in this pariſh, and were early in the ſeventeenth century diſtinguiſhed by the titles of Eſq. and Gent. in the Pariſh Regiſter." J. D.

[2] "This name of Bowes, or Boſe (ſee p. 273.) is to be met with on one of the bells of the church, which has this inſcription, "Jane Boſe gave me, 1673." J. D.

[3] "See the arms of Sutton of Kenſington, Argent, a chevron between three bulls paſſant Sable, in Plate XXVI. fig. 6. from the ſeal to a letter written in 1739, by the Rev. John Sutton, M. A. and prebendary of Briſtol.—Thomas Sutton was the ſon of a Mr. Sutton of London, by a daughter of one of the Bales of Humberſton. The huſband dying, left two children; Thomas and Mary. The widow came to reſide at Humberſton amongſt her relations; and, as the grand-daughter of Mary informed me, "Thomas Sutton," to uſe her words, "had often tented ſheep in this field." Hence perhaps his attachment to the place. Mary married Mr. John Croxton, or Croſon, of this place, yeoman; and there are of her deſcendants ſtill in the village, though in humble circumſtances. Thomas Sutton was firſt a ſilk-mercer in London, and afterwards of Kenſington, in the commiſſion of the peace for the county of Middleſex, and a commiſſioner for licenſing hackney-coaches 1715—1725. He purchaſed the advowſon of the living of Mr. William Higgs, of London, merchant (who had alſo the impropriation), and the eſtate now in the Pochin family, of Henry Haſtings, eſq. (whom report deſcribes as a man of looſe manners and extravagant habits). Mr. Sutton died in 1732, and left many children by his two wives. Of theſe, Thomas, who ſucceeded him in his eſtates; and John, who was a prebendary of Briſtol from 1723 to 1740.—Thomas Sutton, eſq. of the Middle Temple, ſucceeded his father in 1725 as a commiſſioner for licenſing hackney-coaches; and was appointed in June 1741 a commiſſioner of the Salt-office; but, being deprived of that place (during the adminiſtration of the duke of Newcaſtle) in 1756, and having no iſſue, he ſold the eſtate in Humberſton to Mr. Pochin for a certain ſum, and an annuity of £100. a year during the lives of himſelf and ſecond wife. This contract, which took place between the years 1756 and 1758, neither of them long ſurvived. He died Feb. 3, 1759; and was buried at Kenſington. His firſt wife was buried at Humberſton in 1736. See her epitaph in p. 277." J. D.

"Here lyeth the body of William Wilſon, ſon of Thomas Wilſon, gent. by Anne his wife.
He departed this life Auguſt 31, anno Dom. 1723,
aged 45 years.
He left iſſue one ſon (viz.) William.
And alſo the body of Anne his widow.
She departed this life Sept. 15, 1754, aged 71 years."

"Here lyeth the body of Thomas Wilſon, eldeſt ſon of William Wilſon, of Humberſton, gent.;
who departed this life the 15th day of July,
anno Dom. 1685, aged 35.
Alſo the body of Thomas Wilſon,
the ſecond ſon of Thomas Wilſon, gent.
was here interred the 13th day of April,
anno Dom. 1711, aged 28."

"Here lyeth the body of Frances the wife of William Marriott, of Cotteſbach, gent.
ſecond daughter of Thomas Wilſon, of Humberſton, gent.;
who departed this life the 31ſt day of Auguſt,
anno Dom. 1719, aged 39 years."

"Here lyeth the body of Mr. Henry Whatton, Maſter of Arts, of Trinity College in Cambridge, and 17 years vicar of this church;
who departed this life October the 2d,
anno Dom. 1704, aged 44 years.
Alſo the body of Mary Whatton, his wife, who died March 29, 1728, aged 70 years."

"Here lyeth the body of Catharine daughter of Mr. Henry Whatton, vicar of Humberſtone; who departed this life January 12, 1692, aged 1 year and 6 months."

"Alſo the body of Samuel Whatton, his youngeſt ſon, was here interred the 29th day of July, 1716, aged 22 years."

In the North aile.

"Here lieth the body of Mrs. Elizabeth
Whittington, born at Stone in Kent, Aug.
22, 1742; died July 29, 1770.
She was ſupremely lovely in her perſon,
and not leſs amiable in her temper and behaviour.
Here lyeth alſo Frederic, her ſon, aged 8 months."

At the Eaſt end of this aile:

"Under this ſtone lyeth the body of Catharine Sutton, wife of Thomas Sutton, of the Inner Temple, barriſter at law.
She departed this life the 25th of June,
anno Dom. 1736, aged 31."

In the nave:

"Here lyeth Holland, ſon of the Rev. Paul and Hannah Dudley;
who was interred Jan. 6, 1725, aged 10 years.
And by his ſide his ſiſter Suſanna, who was buried April the 9th, 1733, aged 13 years, 8 months, and 5 days."

"In memory of the Rev. Paul Dudley, who was 45 years vicar of this pariſh, and died the 27th day of December, 1760,
in the 77th year of his age.
Alſo of Hannah his wife,
who died the 24th of June, 1750, aged 72 years."

"Here lie the remains of the Rev. John Dudley.
He ſucceeded his father,
Paul Dudley, as vicar of Humberſton,
A. D. 1760; and died May 18, 1794,
in the 78th year of his age."

"Here lie the remains of Bridgette, relict of the Rev. John Dudley.
She died Nov. 19, 1797,
In the 72d year of her age."

"Beneath lie interred the remains of Hannah, the wife of John Iliffe, and daughter of Thomas and Hannah Nixon, of Beeby, who departed this life Nov. 25, 1774, aged 32 years.
Alſo of Ann, daughter of John and Hannah Iliffe, who died in her infancy."

In the church-yard.

John Iliffe died July 3, 1721, aged 71.
Margaret his wife died March —, 1728, aged 73.
Joſeph Iliffe died March 14, 1760, aged 65.
Anne his wife, Oct. 1, 1758, aged 42.
Mary, the daughter of Joſeph Iliffe, Sept. 15, 1751, aged 11.
Elizabeth, daughter of William Iliffe, Sept. 9, 1768, aged 31.
Sarah, wife of John Iliffe, died Feb. 13, 1772, aged 37.
Edward Biſhop died Feb. 22, 1739, aged 52.
Mary his wife died Jan. 6, 1784, aged 91.
John Wormleighton died Dec. 26, 1769, aged 72.
Mary his wife died June 7, 1765, aged 61.

In Camberwell church-yard, Surrey:

"Sacred to the memory of Mrs. Sarah Gwillim[1], who was born at Humberſton, in the county of Leiceſter, in the year 1704; and died at Walworth, in this county, July 11,
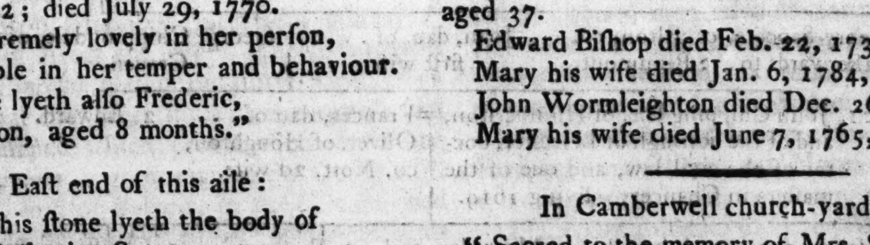
1783, in the 79th year of her age."

---

[1] Siſter to Mary, relict of Edward Biſhop.



Pedigree of HASTINGS, of HUMBERSTON and BELGRAVE[1]. (From the Viſitation of 1683.)

Signed at Leiceſter, 24 March, 1681-2, by H. HASTINGS, of Humberſton.

See the arms Plate XXIV. fig. 6; and the deſcription of them, p. 276.

Francis earl of Huntingdon, and knight of the Garter, died June 20, 1561. = Catharine, eldeſt dau. and coheir of Henry Pole lord Montacute.

Sir Edward Haſtings, knight, fourth ſon, of the Abbey of Leiceſter; died in 1603. = Barbara, dau. and coheir of ſir William Devereux, knt. younger ſon of Walter viſcount Hereford, and widow of Edward Cave, eſq.

1. Sir Henry Haſtings, knt. bought Humberſton; died 1619; and was buried at St. Mary's in Leiceſter. = Mabel, dau. of Anthony Faunt, eſq. of Foſton.

2. Walter, died ſ. p.

Henry Haſtings, of Humberſton, eſq. ob. circa 1656; buried at Humberſton. = Jane, dau. of . . . . Goodall, of Belgrave, co. Leic. gent. buried at Humberſton.

Walter Haſtings, died unmarried at Windſor, circa 1672.

Sir Rich. Haſtings, of Chelſea, co. Middleſex, bart. d. ſ. p. marr. . . . . dau. of . . . . . Pointz, and widow of . . . . . Gorge. She marr. 3dly, a Gorge alſo.

Anthony Haſtings, of Windſor. = . . . dau. of . . . . . Watkinſon.

1. Mabel, wife of Nich. Herbert, of the King's County in Ireland.
2. Lucy, wife of Ferdinand Sacheverell, of Hopwell, co. Derby.
3. Elizabeth, wife of Robert Tirwhit, of Lincolnſhire.
4. Barbara.
5. Jane, wife of . . . Tomkins.

1. Henry Haſtings, of Ireland, married . . . .
3. Edward.
4. Anthony.

Anne, Lucy, and other daughters.

2. George Haſtings, of London, = Elizabeth, dau. of ſir Oliver Fleming, knt. maſter of the ceremonies.

1. Jane, wife of Joſeph Cradock, ſome time chamberlain of the borough of Leic.
2. Lucy, wife of Tho. Dyſon, of Leiceſter, gent.
4. Ferdinand, } died unmarried.
5. Edward, }

1. Henry Haſtings, of Humberſton, co. Leiceſter, eſq. æt. circa 37, 1681; the next male branch to the earls of Huntingdon, after the deſcendants of Henry Haſtings, of Woodlands, third ſon to George earl of Huntingdon, born March 22, 1643; married Pentecoſt, dau. of Edmund Smalley, of Leiceſter, gent.

2. Walter Haſtings, of Rempſton, co. Nott. born May 10, 1645; living 1681. = Hannah, dau. Edmund Cradock, of Leiceſter.

3. Rich. Haſtings, [ſome time an exciſeman at Lutterworth, afterwards] of B. . . . . . co. Hants, living 1681, æt. circa 35, unmarried.

Henry Haſtings, of Caſtle Donington.

1. Jane.
2. Anne.

Pedigree of CHIPPINGDALE, of HUMBERSTON. (See the Viſitation of 1619.)

Arms: Azure, ſemé of fleur de lis Or, and two lions' paws eraſed and erect in feſs Argent, pointing to each other. Creſt, a lion's paw eraſed, parted per feſs indented Argent and Gules, holding a fleur de lis Or[2].

. . . Chippingdale, of Craven, in the county palatine of Lancaſter. = ...

. . . . . married Henry Sapcote, of Elton, co. Huntingdon; and afterwards to . . . Beaumont.

Joan, dau. of . . . . first wife. = George Chippingdale, of Craven. = Mary, dau. of . . . . ſecond wife.

Elizabeth, dau. of Garbrand Harkes, of Oxford, firſt wife. = 1. John Chippingdale, of Humberſton, and of the borough of Leiceſter, doctor of the civil law, and one of the maſters in Chancery; living 1619. = Frances, dau of . . . Oliver, of Houghton, co. Nott. 2d wife.

2. Edward.

Edmond, died unmarried.

1. Tobias Chippingdale, of the Middle Temple, London, ob. ante patrem. = Iſabel, dau. of ſir Tho. Cave, of Bagrave.

2. John Chippingdale, of Blakenhall, co. Suffolk, 1619. = Mary, dau. and heir of Wiſl. Garrett, of Heighinton in the pariſh of Waſhenburgh, co. Lincoln.

3. William, a merchant, ſlain by the Spaniards.
4. Henry.
5. Henry.

1. Chriſtiana, married Francis Stareſmore, of Frolesworth.
2. Elizabeth, marr. the Rev. Richard Meredith, dean of Wells.
3. Katharine, married to John Walker, of Barton under Needwood, Staff.
4. Elizabeth.
5. Martha.

Elizabeth, dau. and heir. = Valentine Bale, gent. poſſeſſed the advowſon of Humberſton in 1641 in right of his wife.

1. William, ſon and heir, æt. 9, 1619.

2. John.

Elizabeth. Katharine.

---

[1] "Humberſton Gate and Belgrave Gate are two principal ſtreets in Leiceſter town; and were probably ſo named from Gates at their extremities, facing or looking towards the neighbouring villages of thoſe names; at leaſt this is the common caſe in fortified towns. Or it may mean a way or road leading to thoſe villages. Thus Church-gate, both at Leiceſter and at Loughborough, denotes the road leading to the church. At Leiceſter we have alſo Senvis Gate and Gallowtree Gate. In the North they ſay, "Gang your Gates;" i. e. Go your ways. In Bury St. Edmund's, Street is added, as North Gate-ſtreet, Riſby Gate-ſtreet, &c. See Ray's North Country Words. So that the addition of Street ſeems an unneceſſary tautology. At Bury the pride and vanity of the inhabitants have changed the names of the principal trading ſtreets, though not the beſt or largeſt, from Cook Row to Abbey Gate-ſtreet, becauſe it leads to the modern Abbey Gate. And at Leiceſter Cank-ſtreet has been changed to Cheapſide; and a narrow opening near the Market-place is called St. James's-ſquare. By ſuch changes we loſe ſight of antient uſes. This was the Cueria, whilſt the Abbey flouriſhed; ſo probably Petty Cury at Cambridge and elſewhere. Dr. Lort told me, that Hatton Garden was changed to Hatton-ſtreet, Duck-lane to Duke-ſtreet, and Cow-lane to King-ſtreet; and that the inhabitants of Savile Row, which conſiſts but of a few houſes, were very deſirous of changing to Savile Street. I want to know what good the word Street, which belongs to almoſt every place in London and Weſtminſter, does in a direction. I ſhall expect to ſee in time Strand-ſtreet, Ludgate-hill-ſtreet, and even Red-lion-paſſage-ſtreet." G. A.

[2] Theſe arms, with the creſt (Plate XXXIV. fig. 23.) were given by ſir William Dethick, Garter, to John Chippingdale, of Humberſton, 16 May, 1594.

HUNGERTON,

otherwiſe written Hungarton, Hungurton, Hungretone, Hungerſton (including the hamlets of Bagrave, Ingarſby, and Quenby) is an extenſive pariſh, about ſeven miles diſtant from Leiceſter. It is bounded by Scraptoft, Keame, Beby, South Croxton, Cold Newton, Tilton, and Houghton; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote.

At the general ſurvey, Hungretone is not ſeparately noticed, being at that time included under Barkby, then the property of Robert de Todeni, and deſcribed as containing eighteen ploughlands, of which a knight in Hungretone held ſix; and had in demeſne one plough and two bondmen, and ſeven ſocmen with three ploughs. There were in the whole manor ſixteen acres of meadow; but how much of this was in Hungretone is not ſtated[1].

From Robert de Todeni this lordſhip came to Walter Poer, who, about the time of king Henry II, gave the church of Barkby, together with that of Hungerton and its chapels, and divers lands there, to the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter[2].

William de Albini Brito[3] gave to the church of our Lady at Belvoir, where he was buried, the land which Waleran his ſurveyor held in Hungerton[4]; and the tithe of the rents of all his lands, in what ſort ſoever, payable to himſelf or his heirs for the time to come.

Hungerton is not noticed in the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about 1240; but a conſiderable part of it came ſoon after to ſir Peter de Lincoln, knt. who in 1249 gave all his lands and tenements here and at Thorpe juxta Barkby, of the fee of Belvoir, to the priory of Oſolveſton[5].

"Ego Petrus de Lincolniâ, filius Thome de Lincolniâ, dedi, &c. canonicis de Oſolveſton terras in Hungarton. Teſte, Rob. Mauncell (inter alios milites)[6]."

In the Office of Arms are ſeveral other deeds with ſeals of theſe Lincolns ſeated on horſe-back, very large, ſhewing that they were lords of this town; and I have ſeen evidence which proves them from one attending de Lincolnia, a great man at the Conqueſt[7].

Robert de Ros, lord of Belvoir, in 1268, confirmed the donation made by Peter de Lincoln of certain lands in this his fee to the convent of Ouſton[8]; and a like confirmation was granted by William de Ros his ſon[9].

Robert Sardin alſo gave them all his lands, &c. in Hungerton, except half a rood, which he had appropriated for providing a lamp in honour of the bleſſed Virgin in the church of Hungerton.

William Pykard gave them a meſſuage, with a toft and croft, and a virgate of land: witneſs, "d̃no Hamnone[10] tunc rectore de Hungarton, Ric̃o Burdett, Will̃o de Quenby, & aliis."

William de Barewe, maſter of St. John's Hoſpital at Leiceſter, gave them, in exchange, three butts of land in Hungarton More, on the ſide towards Quenby.

William Pykard and Simon de Hiberniâ occur alſo as benefactors to the abbot and convent of Ouſton; who were bound to pay 100*s*. annually to Amicia the wife of Peter de Lincoln for the quit-claim of divers lands and tenements in Hungarton. Witneſs, Euſtace de Folvile and others[11].

The next poſſeſſors of this lordſhip were the Aungerviles; who enjoyed it till the time of king Henry III, Robert de Aungervile being then lord of it. I have now before me an original releaſe from Nicholas de Aungervile to Roger le Brabazon, of 12*l*. rent, for which he was bound to the ſaid Nicholas, for lands at Wingrave and Rolleſham in Bucks; dated at Leiceſter, "die Sabbati proximâ ante feſtum Sc̃i Laureñ', 1279. Teſtibus; d̃nis Laurencio de Sc̃o Mauro, Ric̃o Fukeham, & Galfrido de Langel', militibus; d̃nis Hugone de Viennâ & Joh̃e Ruſſel, clericis; Thomâ de Bray, Will̃i fil' Nich̃i de Ingwareſby, Nich̃i de Burbach; & aliis[12]."

In the Itinerary of 1280, Hungarton, Quenby, Beby, and Cayham, anſwered collectively as one vill.

In 1346, the abbot of Oſolveſton (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 5*s*. for half a quarter of one knight's fee; the abbot of Leiceſter the ſame ſum for half a quarter of one knight's fee; and the maſter of St. John's in Leiceſter, 16*d*. for a thirtieth part of one knight's fee; all ſituate in Hungerton, and parcel of the fees of Cheſter and Huntingdon[13].

In the Segrave Chartulary is noticed an agreement, by which the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter obtained from Stephen de Segrave ſix virgates of land, with the appurtenances, at Hungerton, in exchange for lands at Segrave[14]; and the lands of the abbot and convent here are thus deſcribed in their Regiſter:

Habemus in Hungurton, ex dono Thome de Lincoln', unam carucatam terre, cum pertinentiis; illam, ſcil', quam nos aliquando tenuimus ad firmam de ipſo.

Habemus ibidem, ex dono predicti Thome, VI virgatas terre, cum toftis & croftis, & omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, &c. ut in cartâ v^a; & cum unâ dimidiâ acrâ terre que jacet juxta croftum Gamell ſuper Dikfurlong, &c. ut in cartâ v^a.

Habemus confirmationem Petri de Lincoln', filii Thome de Lincoln', de omnibus predictis.

Habemus ibidem, ex dono Walteri filii Bente, II virgatas terre, cum toſto & croſto & meſſ' eidem pertinentibus, & cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, &c.

Habemus ibidem, ex dono Rogeri de Reriſby, VI virgatas terre, cum toftis & croftis.

Item habemus, ex dono ejuſdem Rogeri, per eandem cartam, duas ſeliones ſub Marehil, & grangiam ſuam quam habuit ibidem, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis.

Habemus ibidem, ex dono Will̃i de Babbegrave capellani, unum toftum, cum placeâ ex alterâ parte vie ejuſdem tofti, & unam ſelionem extra illam placeam, &c. ut in cartâ XII^a.

Habemus ibidem, ex dono Walteri de Bereforde[15], rectoris eccleſie de Hungurton, quoddam toftum, cum meſſuagio & eorum pertinentiis, quod Robertus de Quenby aliquando tenuit, &c. Item quoddam toftum, cum pertin', quod Will̃us Herbert aliquando tenuit.

Habemus ibidem, ex dono Walteri filii Simonis de Berford, unam virgatam terre cum pertin', & VI buttas ad eandem virgatam terre pertin', &c. ut in cartâ XVI^a.

Habemus ibidem, ex dono Will̃i de Hungurton, unum croftum quod jacet inter curiam hoſpitulariorum Leyc' uſque partem Orientalem & viam que deſcendit de Lewmewell, &c. ut in cartâ XVIII^a.

Habemus ibi, ex dono Margarete relicte Rogeri Abonentun de Hungurton, II virgatas terre, cum II toftis & pertinentiis ſuis, ut in XIX^a cartâ.

Habemus ibi, ex perquiſito fratris Will̃i Charyte, tunc prioris, unum croftum vocatum Croftum Sc̃e Marie, cum pertinentiis; & jacet ex dextrâ parte vie uſque Quenby, ut in cartâ VII^a II libri de Chartwary. Item habemus, per eundem fratrem Will̃um Charyte, ibidem aliud croftum jacens ex ſiniſtrâ parte vie uſque Quenby, ut in cartâ v^a II libri de Chartwary. Item habemus per eundem ibi unam acram terre continentem IIII ſeliones jacentes in campo Occidentali in ulteriori fine de le Holywelldall, inter terram Roberti Smyth ex unâ parte & terram abbatis de Wolſton ex alterâ. Que omnia data fuerunt conventui ad duo dat' per dictum fratrem W. Charyte, ut in cartâ IIII^{a}. Item, per eundem Willm Charyte, VI ſeliones jacentes pro unâ acrâ ex utrâque parte vie in Yngwarby-gate, ut in cartâ VI^{a} II libri de Chartwary. Omnia data fuerunt ut ſuprà.

---

[1] See before, under Barkby, p. 44.

[2] Regiſter of the Abbey of Leiceſter.

[3] Of the name of Brito; ſee before in vol. II. p. 24.

[4] This paragraph is Mr. Peck's; but the Hungerton here intended is probably a hamlet of Lincolnſhire; ſee vol. II. Appen. p. 3.

[5] Records in the Office of Arms; and ſee before, p. 53.

[6] See under Ouſton, vol. II. p. 758.

[7] Vide Clauſ. de ann. 48 Hen. III. in Turre Lond. quod Will's de Goniz, Robertus filius Pagani, & Beatrix de Lincolniâ, ſunt participes & heredes Albredi de Lincolniâ. S. Roper, MS.

[8] Appendix, vol. II. p. 147.

[9] Ibid. p. 148.

[10] Hamon de Honoria was rector in 1261.

[11] Appendix to vol. II. p. 147.

[12] The wax from the ſmall ſeal which was appended to this deed is entirely worn away.

[13] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[14] Appendix to vol. II. p. 115.

[15] Rector in 1233.

Quelibet virgata terre de Hungurton reddit per annum IId̄. ob̄. q̃. pro decimâ feni.

Summa virgatarum, XLVI. Summa denariorum, x s̃.

Mem', quòd abbas Leic' tenet omnia terras & tenementa ſua in Hungerton in puram & perpetuam eleemoſinam, de omnibus auxiliis regum quieta; ſicut patet in quarterio de auxiliis dandis pro primogenitis regum faciendis militibus, qui eſt in libro placitorum [1].

In 1352, William de Ros of Hamlake died ſeiſed of the ſixteenth part of one knight's fee in Hungerton and Barkby, held of the king in capite, which the maſter of St. John's in Leiceſter held [2].

In 1363, Margery widow of William de Ros of Hamlake died ſeiſed of one knight's fee, half a quarter and the ſixteenth part of one knight's fee, in Barkby, Croxton, Hungarton, Quenby, and Howes, which Thomas de Lincoln held [3].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Hungerton was rated at 19*s.*; and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but in the latter year was wholly exonerated.

Among the poſſeſſions of Ouſton abbey at the diſſolution, Hungerton is mentioned as worth 6*l.* 18*s.* [4]; and divers lands here which belonged to that abbey were demiſed to Richard Buſshoppe for a term of 40 years, by leaſe dated Sept. 4, 25 Henry VIII. [5]

The lands of the abbey of Leiceſter at Hungerton were granted to the family of Cave.

In 1564, there were 27 families in Hungerton, two in Bagrave, one in Ingarſby, and one in Quenby.

Brian Cave, eſq. died July 30, 1590, ſeiſed of this manor and alſo of the advowſon and vicarage of Hungerton; and alſo of the manor of Ingarſby; Staunton Grange and Hugglescote Grange, in the pariſh of Ibſtock, with divers cloſes and tenements in that pariſh; and the advowſon, donative, &c. of Houghton ſuper Montem. His wife Barbara died 26 Jan. 30 Eliz.; and he left two ſons, Henry, aged 40, and Francis [6].

In 35 Eliz. Henry Cave was ſeiſed of this manor and impropriation [7].

The freeholders here in 1630 were, Henry Kempe, Thomas Maſon, John Clarke, William Ratcliffe; and at Quenby George Aſhby.

In 1655, there was collected in Hungerton, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of £1. 7*s*.

In 1722, eleven freeholders polled from Hungerton and two from Quenby; and in 1775, we find four names.

In an act paſſed in 1762, for dividing the open fields of Hungerton, containing about 900 acres, Shukbrugh Aſhby, eſq. is deſcribed as lord of the manor, and ſeiſed of the impropriate rectory of Hungerton, and entitled to all the great and ſmall tithes, and alſo as patron of the vicarage, and a proprietor of nearly five parts in ſix of the ſaid fields, and entitled alſo to right of common over the ſame fields, and to the ſoil of all the waſte ground in Hungerton; and the Rev. George Aſhby, B. D. as vicar, entitled to all the glebe land within the ſaid fields, and to right of common therein, in reſpect of ſuch land; and Mary Edwin, widow, and others, as proprietors of the reſidue of the land in the ſaid fields, and entitled to the reſidue of the right of common. The allotment to Mr. Aſhby, as lord of the manor, in lieu of his right to the ſoil of the ſaid waſte grounds, is directed to be held in ſeveralty for ever, and diſcharged of all common and other right of or in any other of the proprietors or perſons intereſted in the ſaid fields, in, upon, or over the ſame, of ſuch parcel and quantity of land (part of the ſaid fields) as ſhould be equal in value to his then right and intereſt in the ſoil of the ſaid waſte grounds; and an allotment to him of ſuch titheable land in the ſaid fields as ſhould contain one full ſeventh part of the titheable land therein, to be veſted in him as a full recompence for all his ſaid great and ſmall tithes [8] (except ſuch tithes as were payable out of any yards, gardens, orchards, or antient incloſures in Hungerton, the owners whereof had no land or right of common in the ſaid fields, ſubject to the ſame ſort of aſſeſſments as the ſaid great and ſmall tithes were ſubject to, and no other. The allotment to the vicar, in lieu of the glebe-land and right of common in the ſaid fields belonging to the vicarage, of ſuch parcel or parcels of the land in the ſaid fields, to be equal in value to the ſaid glebe land and right of common, without any deduction for the great and ſmall tithes; the glebe land and right of common being tithe-free.

The preſent number of houſes in Hungerton is about 35; almoſt all of which were rebuilt by the late Shukbrugh Aſhby [9], eſq.; who dying in 1792, this manor, with the greateſt part of the village, became the property of his two daughters and coheirs, Mary-Elizabeth, wife of William Latham, eſq. F. R. S. and F. A. S. and Dorothea wife of ſir Thomas Huſſey Apreece, bart. who are now the joint owners.

Extracts from the Regiſter of Hungerton [10].

Elizabeth, daughter of George Aſhby, eſq. born Oct. 30, 1624.

William Aſhby, ſon of George Aſhby, eſq. born Oct. 10, 1637.

Bennit, ſon of George Aſhby, eſq. buried March 22, 1643.

Mr. George Aſhby, an antient juſtice of peace of Leiceſterſhire for many years ſpace, bur. July 2, 1653.

Mary Aſhby, daughter of George Aſhby, eſq. baptized Dec. 26, 1653.

Mary, daughter of George Aſhby, eſq. of Quenby, buried Aug. 20, 1669.

Thomas Ekins, eſq. and Mary Aſhby were married Sept. 28, 1676.

Dorothy, daughter of George Aſhby, eſq. buried Sept. 22, 1681.

Elizabeth Aſhby, wife of George Aſhby, eſq. late of Quenby, died the 29th of January, 1682.

Elizabeth, daughter of George Aſhby, eſq. and Hannah his wife, was born the 6th of January, and baptized the 22d of the ſame month, 1683-4.

George and Waring, ſons of George Aſhby and Hannah his wife, were born 14 Feb. 1684-5.

Waring, ſon of George Aſhby, eſq. and Hannah his wife, buried March 29, 1685.

Richard, ſon of George Aſhby, eſq. and Hannah his wife, baptized Nov. 5, 1686.

John, ſon of George Aſhby, eſq. and Hannah his wife, born Nov. 27, and baptized Dec. 10, 1687.

Mary, daughter of George Aſhby, eſq. and Hannah his wife, born May 24, and baptized June 7, 1689.

Edmond, ſon of George Aſhby, eſq. and Hannah his wife, born June 1, and baptized the 7th of the ſame month, 1690.

Hannah, daughter of George Aſhby eſq. and Hannah his wife, born March 2, and bapt. the 15th, 1691.

Anne, daughter of George Aſhby, eſq. and Hannah his wife, baptized Dec. 20, 1694.

Waring, the ſecond, ſon of George Aſhby, eſq. and Hannah his wife, born Nov. 22, and bapt. Dec. 9, 1697.

William, ſon of George Aſhby, eſq. and Hannah his wife, born Oct. 12, baptized Oct. 31, 1701.

William, ſon of George Aſhby, eſq. of Quenby, buried Nov. 30, 1701.

---

[1] Charyte's Rentale, fol. lxvi. a.

[2] Eſch. 26 Edw. III. N° 53. Leic.

[3] Eſch. 37 Edw. III. N° 62. Leic.

[4] Firſt Fruits Office.

[5] Records in the Augmentation Office.

[6] Inq. 8 June, 30 Eliz. Cole's Eſcheats, vol. III. (Harl. MSS. 758.) p. 193.

[7] Burton, MS.

[8] "How then could the vicar have any, as Arthur Young ſtates? See p. 298." G. A.

[9] See his epitaph, inſcribed by an affectionate daughter, in p. 285.

[10] The Regiſter on parchment begins in 1681. Only two entries of marriages till 1684; in which there is only one. None till 1687, and then only one. One in 1688; two in 1689, in which year I judge the actual regiſter properly begins. The burials begin September 1679; the chriſtenings October 1681. G. A.—See farther extracts from theſe Regiſters, relative to the family of Edwin, in p. 286.

John, ſon of John and Hannah Aſhby, was born on Saturday May 9, and baptized the 30th, 1722; George Aſhby, eſq. and Edmond Aſhby, godfathers, and madam Ekins, of Ruſhden, godmother.

George Aſhby, jun. eſq. buried Dec. 6, 1721.

Elizabeth, daughter of John and Hannah Aſhby, born at Quenby the 14th of Auguſt, 1723, and baptized the 25th of the ſame month; aunt Colmore and couſin Elizabeth Freeman, godmothers; and John Hanbury, eſq. merchant in London, godfather.

Elizabeth, wife of Waring Aſhby, eſq. buried May 25, 1725.

George Aſhby, eſq. of Quenby, bur. Feb. 11, 1728.

John Freeman, of Wellingborough, Northamptonſhire, eſq. and Elizabeth Aſhby, of Quenby in this pariſh, married Feb. $\frac{6}{17}$, 1705-6.

Mr. George Chiſſeldine, of St. Martin's pariſh, in Leiceſter, and Hannah, daughter of George Aſhby, eſq. married April 13, 1721.

Hannah, widow of George Aſhby, buried May 30, 1732-3.

Waring Aſhby, eſq. buried Oct. 31, 1770.

Shukbrugh Aſhby, eſq. buried Feb. 6, 1792.

Elizabeth, widow of the late Shukbrugh Aſhby, eſq. buried Nov. 19, 1795.

A charity of £50. to buy bread for the poor of Hungerton was given by Hamlet Clarke[1], a poor lad of this place, who went up to London, and throve; to which £50. more were added in 1765 by the late Shukbrugh Aſhby, eſq.

---

[1] From the coincidence of name, I am tempted to ſuppoſe that this was the attorney of a court of record in London, 1611-12; from one of whoſe files the following extracts were copied:

"Imprimis, one inſtrumente called a Viole de Gambo, with the ſtringes and one ſticke, with ſtringes to play vpon it — — — — xxxs.

Item, three hundred one quarterne and ſeventeene poundes nett waighte of hard wax — xxxjl. xvs.

Item, one payre of rayſed ſilver hangers* and girdles of rugged purle — — xvijs.

Item, one payre of girdle and hangers of ſilver purle and cullored ſilke — — xiijs. iiijd.

Item, one payre of girdles and hangers vpon white ſattene — — — xiijs.

Item, ſeaven and thirtye greate elephante teeth, waighing eighte and twentye hundred two quarters and ſeaven pounde, at vijl. xs. per hundred ccxiiijl. iiijs. iiijd.

Item, two hundred and fifteene dryed neats-tonge, at xiijd. the tonge — — xvjl. iijs. vjd.

Item, thirtye gamons of Weſtphalia bacon, at iijs iiijd. the gamon — — — vl.

Item, two payre of fyne mixt worſted hoſe, at iijs ijd. per payre — — vjs. iiijd.

Item, two payre of coarſe mixt worſted hoſe, at iijs. ijd. per payre — — — vjs. iiijd.

Item, fower pipes of white wine — xxl.

Item, ſeaven hogſheads of Orleance white wine xvijl. xs.

Item, xxiiijtye yardes of purple ſatten, at xjs. per yarde xiijl. iiijs.

Item, one bagge of hoppes, N° 5. waighing iijc. xxiijl. waighte, at xxiijs. per hundred — iijl. xiijs.

Item, eleven dozen of ſilke garters, at xiiijs. per dozen. vijl. xiiijs.

Item, one fanne of feathers not valued.

Item, one fanne of feathers with a ſilver handle not valued.

Item, a jacke, with a waighte of iron, and a jacke-rope and wheels — — xijs.

Item, two rolles of tobacco, waighing three ſcore poundes, at ijs. and vjd. per pounde — vijl. xs.

Item, one rolle of tobacco, wayinge twenty and nine poundes, at viijs. per pounde — xjl. xijs.

Item, a white ſtone-horſe — xls.

Item, a bay ſtone-horſe — — xls.

Item, a dun ſtone-horſe — — xs.

Item, a white geldinge — — xls.

Item, a black geldinge — — xs.

Item, a greye geldinge — — xs.

Item, three dung cartes — — iijl.

Item, the harneſſes for the ſaid horſes and geldinges xxs.

Summa totalis xjl. xs.

Item, iij buttes and one butte and iij quarters of a butte of ſherry ſacke — — xxxl. xvs."

To purſue the hiſtory of Mr. Hamlet Clarke:

Engraven in braſs, on a flat ſtone, in the chapel of Upminſter, in Eſſex, are the figures of a man and woman, with an eſcutcheon at each corner of the ſtone in braſs; three out of the four eſcutcheons have been taken away. On the remaining one, at the right hand of the ſtone at top, is the following:

A bend engrailed charged with three lozenges . . . . impaling . . . . . a feſs humetté charged with a bird, between three flowers.

"Under this marble do lye buried, in an aſſured hope of a joyful reſurrection, Hamlett Clarke, of London, gent.
Alice his ſecond wife, the widow of Will. Latham, eſquier, late lord of the mannor of Gaynes, by whome ſhee had five ſonnes and one daughter, yet livinge; and ſeven other children deceaſed. And her eldeſt ſon, Raphe Latham,
eſq. now lord of the mannor aforeſaid, married Marye,
the daughter and heir of the ſaid Hamlett, by Elnur †, a former wife, who lieth interred in the pariſh church of
St. Martin's in Irenmonger Lane, London.
The ſaid Hamlet Clarke died the day of 16 ;
the ſaid Alice Clarke died the 7th daye of July,
1636. The ſaid Raphe by the ſaid Marye had 3
children; viz. Hamlett, a ſonne, and Marye, a daughter, now living; and Martha, buried in his chappel the 23d daie of Auguſt, 1624."

Between the church and chapel was the following:

"Hamlet Clarke, of London, gent. after he had married Mary his daughter and only child, to Ralph Latham, of Upminſter, eſq. did himſelf marry Alice Latham, widow, mother of the ſaid Ralph; who, out of his pious devotion to the honour of God, did, at his ſole charge, repair and beautifie this chapel, an. D. 1630."

Arms painted on glaſs in the Eaſt window of St. Mary's chapel:

Or, on a bend engrailed Azure, three lozenges of the field . . . . Clarke, of London, between the coats of two wives.

On the dexter:

Argent, on a feſs humettè Gules, a bird Or, between three flowers (Hearts Eaſe) proper.

On the ſiniſter:

Or, three quatrefoils Gules; D'Ewes.

Creſt, on a wreath, a talbot's head Or, gorged with a feſs engrailed Azure, charged with three lozenges Or.

Extract from the Regiſter of Upminſter.

1627, March 29, Hamlett Clarke and Alice Latham married.

1636, July 11, Alice Clarke, wife of Hamlet Clarke, buried.

1671, Sept. 5, Mary, wife of Thomas Skipwith, eſq. buried.

1694, June 2, ſir Thomas Skipwith, knt. and bart. of the pariſh of St. Giles in the Fields, London, buried in St. Mary's chapel; whoſe former wife was a Latham, and buried in St. Mary's chapel (the burying place of the family). The ſaid ſir Thomas was buried by her on the North ſide of the Eaſt end of the chapel.

* The following extract from the Tragedy of Hamlet is a full explanation of theſe terms:

Oſr. The king, ſir, hath wagered with him ſix Barbary horſes, againſt the which he hath impon'd, as I take it, ſix French rapiers and poniards, with their aſſigns, as girdle, hangers, and ſo: three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very reſponſive to the hilts, moſt delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.—Ham. What call you the carriages?—Oſr. The carriages, ſir, are the hangers.—Note. —hangers.] It appears from ſeveral plays, that what was called a caſe ‡ of hangers, was anciently worn.—So, in the Birth of Merlin, 1662:

"He has a fair ſword, but his hangers are fallen."

Again,

"He has a feather, and fair hangers too."

Again, in Rhodon and Iris, 1631:

"———— a rapier
Patch'd with gold, with hilt and hangers of the new faſhion."

Steevens.

The extracts having belonged to Hamlet Clarke, ſhould not paſs unobſerved by one who produces an extract from Hamlet in explanation thereof; nor ſhould it be forgot, that one of the witneſſes to Shakſpeare's will was named Hamlet Sadler.—The editor of the "Bibliotheca Topographica" alſo has lately picked out the few following articles from the Regiſter of St. Bride's, London, for the uſe of future commentators: "1590, xviith of May, Iſabell the wife of Hamblet Panketman was buried. 1592. Hamlet Evans buried ixth of Nov." Gent. Mag. vol. LVIII. pp. 111. 199.—This name, however, may have no relation to Prince Hamlet. A ſimilar inſtance of thriving induſtry and laudable gratitude Tamworth experienceed in a perſon of the name of Porch, who left a charity to that town, ſtill ſubſiſting; but he had no connexion with any family of the name, great or ſmall, as he got his name from being found an expoſed infant in the church porch. Being brought up by the pariſh, and going to London, where he throve, he made the above-mentioned return of gratitude. I believe the hiſtory of Clarke was ſomewhat ſimilar: whether he was found in a Hamlet I cannot ſay for certain. But, when the Foundling Hoſpital was firſt eſtabliſhed, I was told that ſuch names were given to them from the fancies of the ſponſors, as may puzzle future philoſophers from their oddneſs to account for." G. A.

† In the church of St. Martin Ironmonger-lane, on a fair monument at the upper end of the chancel, is inſcribed:

"Here under lyeth buried Eleanor wife of Hamlet Clarke, free of the worſhipful Company of Fiſhmongers, London, and one of the four Clerks of the Lord Mayor's Court, London, aforeſaid. She dyed on Sunday the 14th of January 1626; and was buried on Friday the 19th of the ſame; after they had been married 33 years, and about two months. They had iſſue only Mary, married to Ralph Latham, of Upminſter, in the county of Eſſex, eſq. common ſerjeant at law of this honourable city. And the ſaid Eleanor had alſo Elizabeth, another daughter, by Charles Barnard, a former huſband, married to Thomas Latham, of Stifford in Eſſex, gentleman."—A very fair ſkreen at the entrance into this church was inſcribed, "Me fieri fecerunt Hamlettus Clarke, generoſus, & Radulphus Latham, armiger, 20 Martii, 1629."

‡ Sheath or ſcabbard, wrought with ſilk and ſilver or gold thread in raiſed work. See ſuch an one for a knife in Archæol. XII. 21. Lady Cullum of Bury has one.

continentem IIII ſeliones jacentes in campo Occidentali in ulteriori fine de le Holywelldall, inter terram Roberti Smyth ex unâ parte & terram abbatis de Wolſton ex alterâ. Que omnia data fuerunt conventui ad duo dat' per dictum fratrem W. Charyte, ut in cartâ IIIIª. Item, per eundem Willm Charyte, VI ſeliones jacentes pro unâ acrâ ex utrâque parte vie in Yngwarby-gate, ut in cartâ VIª II libri de Chartwary. Omnia data fuerunt ut ſuprà.

Quelibet virgata terre de Hungurton reddit per annum II đ. ob. q. pro decimâ feni.

Summa virgatarum, XLVI. Summa denariorum, x s̃.

Mem', quòd abbas Leic' tenet omnia terras & tenementa ſua in Hungerton in puram & perpetuam eleemoſinam, de omnibus auxiliis regum quieta; ſicut patet in quarterio de auxiliis dandis pro primogenitis regum faciendis militibus, qui eſt in libro placitorum [1].

In 1352, William de Ros of Hamlake died ſeiſed of the ſixteenth part of one knight's fee in Hungerton and Barkby, held of the king in capite, which the maſter of St. John's in Leiceſter held [2].

In 1363, Margery widow of William de Ros of Hamlake died ſeiſed of one knight's fee, half a quarter and the ſixteenth part of one knight's fee, in Barkby, Croxton, Hungarton, Quenby, and Howes, which Thomas de Lincoln held [3].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Hungerton was rated at 19*s.*; and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but in the latter year was wholly exonerated.

Among the poſſeſſions of Ouſton abbey at the diſſolution, Hungerton is mentioned as worth 6*l.* 18*s.* [4]; and divers lands here which belonged to that abbey were demiſed to Richard Buſshoppe for a term of 40 years, by leaſe dated Sept. 4, 25 Henry VIII. [5]

The lands of the abbey of Leiceſter at Hungerton were granted to the family of Cave.

In 1564, there were 27 families in Hungerton, two in Bagrave, one in Ingarſby, and one in Quenby.

Brian Cave, eſq. died July 30, 1590, ſeiſed of this manor and alſo of the advowſon and vicarage of Hungerton; and alſo of the manor of Ingarſby; Staunton Grange and Hugglescote Grange, in the pariſh of Ibſtock, with divers cloſes and tenements in that pariſh; and the advowſon, donative, &c. of Houghton ſuper Montem. His wife Barbara died 26 Jan. 30 Eliz.; and he left two ſons, Henry, aged 40, and Francis [6].

In 35 Eliz. Henry Cave was ſeiſed of this manor and impropriation [7].

The freeholders here in 1630 were, Henry Kempe, Thomas Maſon, John Clarke, William Ratcliffe; and at Quenby George Aſhby.

In 1655, there was collected in Hungerton, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of £1. 7*s.*

In 1722, eleven freeholders polled from Hungerton and two from Quenby; and in 1775, we find four names.

In an act paſſed in 1762, for dividing the open fields of Hungerton, containing about 900 acres, Shukbrugh Aſhby, eſq. is deſcribed as lord of the manor, and ſeiſed of the impropriate rectory of Hungerton, and entitled to all the great and ſmall tithes, and alſo as patron of the vicarage, and a proprietor of nearly five parts in ſix of the ſaid fields, and entitled alſo to right of common over the ſame fields, and to the ſoil of all the waſte ground in Hungerton; and the Rev. George Aſhby, B. D. as vicar, entitled to all the glebe land within the ſaid fields, and to right of common therein, in reſpect of ſuch land; and Mary Edwin, widow, and others, as proprietors of the reſidue of the land in the ſaid fields, and entitled to the reſidue of the right of common. The allotment to Mr. Aſhby, as lord of the manor, in lieu of his right to the ſoil of the ſaid waſte grounds, is directed to be held in ſeveralty for ever, and diſcharged of all common and other right of or in any other of the proprietors or perſons intereſted in the ſaid fields, in, upon, or over the ſame, of ſuch parcel and quantity of land (part of the ſaid fields) as ſhould be equal in value to his then right and intereſt in the ſoil of the ſaid waſte grounds; and an allotment to him of ſuch titheable land in the ſaid fields as ſhould contain one full ſeventh part of the titheable land therein, to be veſted in him as a full recompence for all his ſaid great and ſmall tithes [8] (except ſuch tithes as were payable out of any yards, gardens, orchards, or antient incloſures in Hungerton, the owners whereof had no land or right of common in the ſaid fields, ſubject to the ſame ſort of aſſeſſments as the ſaid great and ſmall tithes were ſubject to, and no other. The allotment to the vicar, in lieu of the glebe-land and right of common in the ſaid fields belonging to the vicarage, of ſuch parcel or parcels of the land in the ſaid fields, to be equal in value to the ſaid glebe land and right of common, without any deduction for the great and ſmall tithes; the glebe land and right of common being tithe-free.

The preſent number of houſes in Hungerton is about 35; almoſt all of which were rebuilt by the late Shukbrugh Aſhby [9], eſq.; who dying in 1792, this manor, with the greateſt part of the village, became the property of his two daughters and coheirs, Mary-Elizabeth, wife of William Latham, eſq. F. R. S. and F. A. S. and Dorothea wife of ſir Thomas Huſſey Apreece, bart. who are now the joint owners.

Extracts from the Regiſter of Hungerton [10].

Elizabeth, daughter of George Aſhby, eſq. born Oct. 30, 1624.

William Aſhby, ſon of George Aſhby, eſq. born Oct. 10, 1637.

Bennit, ſon of George Aſhby, eſq. buried March 22, 1643.

Mr. George Aſhby, an antient juſtice of peace of Leiceſterſhire for many years ſpace, bur. July 2, 1653.

Mary Aſhby, daughter of George Aſhby, eſq. baptized Dec. 26, 1653.

Mary, daughter of George Aſhby, eſq. of Quenby, buried Aug. 20, 1669.

Thomas Ekins, eſq. and Mary Aſhby were married Sept. 28, 1676.

Dorothy, daughter of George Aſhby, eſq. buried Sept. 22, 1681.

Elizabeth Aſhby, wife of George Aſhby, eſq. late of Quenby, died the 29th of January, 1682.

Elizabeth, daughter of George Aſhby, eſq. and Hannah his wife, was born the 6th of January, and baptized the 22d of the ſame month, 1683-4.

George and Waring, ſons of George Aſhby and Hannah his wife, were born 14 Feb. 1684-5.

Waring, ſon of George Aſhby, eſq. and Hannah his wife, buried March 29, 1685.

Richard, ſon of George Aſhby, eſq. and Hannah his wife, baptized Nov. 5, 1686.

John, ſon of George Aſhby, eſq. and Hannah his wife, born Nov. 27, and baptized Dec. 10, 1687.

Mary, daughter of George Aſhby, eſq. and Hannah his wife, born May 24, and baptized June 7, 1689.

Edmond, ſon of George Aſhby, eſq. and Hannah his wife, born June 1, and baptized the 7th of the ſame month, 1690.

Hannah, daughter of George Aſhby eſq. and Hannah his wife, born March 2, and bapt. the 15th, 1691.

Anne, daughter of George Aſhby, eſq. and Hannah his wife, baptized Dec. 20, 1694.

Waring, the ſecond, ſon of George Aſhby, eſq. and Hannah his wife, born Nov. 22, and bapt. Dec. 9, 1697.

William, ſon of George Aſhby, eſq. and Hannah his wife, born Oct. 12, baptized Oct. 31, 1701.

William, ſon of George Aſhby, eſq. of Quenby, buried Nov. 30, 1701.

---

[1] Charyte's Rentale, fol. lxvi. a.

[2] Eſch. 26 Edw. III. N° 53. Leic.

[3] Eſch. 37 Edw. III. N° 62. Leic.

[4] Firſt Fruits Office.

[5] Records in the Augmentation Office.

[6] Inq. 8 June, 30 Eliz. Cole's Eſcheats, vol. III. (Harl. MSS. 758.) p. 193.

[7] Burton, MS.

[8] "How then could the vicar have any, as Arthur Young ſtates? See p. 298." G. A.

[9] See his epitaph, inſcribed by an affectionate daughter, in p. 285.

[10] The Regiſter on parchment begins in 1681. Only two entries of marriages till 1684; in which there is only one. None till 1687, and then only one. One in 1688; two in 1689, in which year I judge the actual regiſter properly begins. The burials begin September 1679; the chriſtenings October 1681. G. A.—See farther extracts from theſe Regiſters, relative to the family of Edwin, in p. 286.

John, ſon of John and Hannah Aſhby, was born on Saturday May 9, and baptized the 30th, 1722; George Aſhby, eſq. and Edmond Aſhby, godfathers, and madam Ekins, of Ruſhden, godmother.

George Aſhby, jun. eſq. buried Dec. 6, 1721.

Elizabeth, daughter of John and Hannah Aſhby, born at Quenby the 14th of Auguſt, 1723, and baptized the 25th of the ſame month; aunt Colmore and couſin Elizabeth Freeman, godmothers; and John Hanbury, eſq. merchant in London, godfather.

Elizabeth, wife of Waring Aſhby, eſq. buried May 25, 1725.

George Aſhby, eſq. of Quenby, bur. Feb. 11, 1728.

John Freeman, of Wellingborough, Northamptonſhire, eſq. and Elizabeth Aſhby, of Quenby in this pariſh, married Feb. $\frac{6}{17}$, 1705-6.

Mr. George Chiſſeldine, of St. Martin's pariſh, in Leiceſter, and Hannah, daughter of George Aſhby, eſq. married April 13, 1721.

Hannah, widow of George Aſhby, buried May 30, 1732-3.

Waring Aſhby, eſq. buried Oct. 31, 1770.

Shukbrugh Aſhby, eſq. buried Feb. 6, 1792.

Elizabeth, widow of the late Shukbrugh Aſhby, eſq. buried Nov. 19, 1795.

A charity of £50. to buy bread for the poor of Hungerton was given by Hamlet Clarke [1], a poor lad of this place, who went up to London, and throve; to which £50. more were added in 1765 by the late Shukbrugh Aſhby, eſq.

---

[1] From the coincidence of name, I am tempted to ſuppoſe that this was the attorney of a court of record in London, 1611-12; from one of whoſe files the following extracts were copied:

"Imprimis, one inſtrumente called a Viole de Gambo, with the ſtringes and one ſticke, with ſtringes to play vpon it — — — — xxxs.

Item, three hundred one quarterne and ſeventeene poundes nett waighte of hard wax — xxxjl. xvs.

Item, one payre of rayſed ſilver hangers* and girdles of rugged purle — — xvijs.

Item, one payre of girdle and hangers of ſilver purle and cullored ſilke — — xiijs. iiijd.

Item, one payre of girdles and hangers vpon white ſattene — — — xiijs.

Item, ſeaven and thirtye greate elephante teeth, waighing eighte and twentye hundred two quarters and ſeaven pounde, at vijl. xs. per hundred ccxiiijl. iiijs. iiijd.

Item, two hundred and fifteene dryed neats-tonge, at xiijd. the tonge — — xvjl. iijs. vjd.

Item, thirtye gamons of Weſtphalea bacon, at iijs iiijd. the gamon — — — vl.

Item, two payre of fyne mixt worſted hoſe, at iijs ijd. per payre — — vjs. iiijd.

Item, two payre of coarſe mixt worſted hoſe, at iijs. ijd. per payre — — — vjs. iiijd.

Item, fower pipes of white wine — xxl.

Item, ſeaven hogſheads of Orleance white wine xvijl. xs.

Item, xxiiijtye yardes of purple ſatten, at xjs. per yarde xiijl. iiijs.

Item, one bagge of hoppes, N° 5. waighing iijc. xxiijl. waighte, at xxiijs. per hundred — iijl. xiijs.

Item, eleven dozen of ſilke garters, at xiiijs. per dozen. vijl. xiiijs.

Item, one fanne of feathers not valued.

Item, one fanne of feathers with a ſilver handle not valued.

Item, a jacke, with a waighte of iron, and a jacke-rope and wheels — — xijs.

Item, two rolles of tobacco, waighing three ſcore poundes, at ijs. and vjd. per pounde — vijl. xs.

Item, one rolle of tobacco, wayinge twenty and nine poundes, at viijs. per pounde — xjl. xijs.

Item, a white ſtone-horſe — xls.

Item, a bay ſtone-horſe — — xls.

Item, a dun ſtone-horſe — — xs.

Item, a white geldinge — — xls.

Item, a black geldinge — — xs.

Item, a greye geldinge — — xs.

Item, three dung cartes — — iijl.

Item, the harneſſes for the ſaid horſes and geldinges xxs.

Summa totalis xjl. xs.

Item, iij buttes and one butte and iij quarters of a butte of ſherry ſacke — — xxxl. xvs."

To purſue the hiſtory of Mr. Hamlet Clarke:

Engraven in braſs, on a flat ſtone, in the chapel of Upminſter, in Eſſex, are the figures of a man and woman, with an eſcutcheon at each corner of the ſtone in braſs; three out of the four eſcutcheons have been taken away. On the remaining one, at the right hand of the ſtone at top, is the following:

A bend engrailed charged with three lozenges . . . . impaling . . . . . a feſs humetté charged with a bird, between three flowers.

"Under this marble do lye buried, in an aſſured hope of a joyful reſurrection, Hamlett Clarke, of London, gent.
Alice his ſecond wife, the widow of Will. Latham, eſquier, late lord of the mannor of Gaynes, by whome ſhee had five ſonnes
and one daughter, yet livinge; and ſeven other children deceaſed. And her eldeſt ſon, Raphe Latham,
eſq. now lord of the mannor aforeſaid, married Marye,
the daughter and heir of the ſaid Hamlett, by Elnur †, a former wife, who lieth interred in the pariſh church of
St. Martin's in Irenmonger Lane, London.
The ſaid Hamlet Clarke died the day of 16 ;
the ſaid Alice Clarke died the 7th daye of July,
1636. The ſaid Raphe by the ſaid Marye had 3
children; viz. Hamlett, a ſonne, and Marye, a daughter, now living; and Martha, buried in his chappel the 23d daie of Auguſt, 1624."

Between the church and chapel was the following:

"Hamlet Clarke, of London, gent. after he had married Mary his daughter and only child, to Ralph Latham, of Upminſter, eſq. did himſelf marry Alice Latham, widow, mother of the ſaid Ralph; who, out of his pious devotion to the honour of God, did, at his ſole charge, repair and beautifie this chapel, an. D. 1630."

Arms painted on glaſs in the Eaſt window of St. Mary's chapel:

Or, on a bend engrailed Azure, three lozenges of the field . . . . Clarke, of London, between the coats of two wives.

On the dexter:

Argent, on a feſs humettè Gules, a bird Or, between three flowers (Hearts Eaſe) proper.

On the ſiniſter:

Or, three quatrefoils Gules; D'Ewes.

Creſt, on a wreath, a talbot's head Or, gorged with a feſs engrailed Azure, charged with three lozenges Or.

Extract from the Regiſter of Upminſter.

1627, March 29, Hamlett Clarke and Alice Latham married.

1636, July 11, Alice Clarke, wife of Hamlet Clarke, buried.

1671, Sept. 5, Mary, wife of Thomas Skipwith, eſq. buried.

1694, June 2, ſir Thomas Skipwith, knt. and bart. of the pariſh of St. Giles in the Fields, London, buried in St. Mary's chapel; whoſe former wife was a Latham, and buried in St. Mary's chapel (the burying place of the family). The ſaid ſir Thomas was buried by her on the North ſide of the Eaſt end of the chapel.

* The following extract from the Tragedy of Hamlet is a full explanation of theſe terms:

Oſr. The king, ſir, hath wagered with him ſix Barbary horſes, againſt the which he hath impon'd, as I take it, ſix French rapiers and poniards, with their aſſigns, as girdle, hangers, and ſo: three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very reſponſive to the hilts, moſt delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.—Ham. What call you the carriages?—Oſr. The carriages, ſir, are the hangers.—Note. —hangers.] It appears from ſeveral plays, that what was called a caſe ‡ of hangers, was anciently worn.—So, in the Birth of Merlin, 1662:

"He has a fair ſword, but his hangers are fallen."

Again,

"He has a feather, and fair hangers too."

Again, in Rhodon and Iris, 1631:

"———— a rapier
Patch'd with gold, with hilt and hangers of the new faſhion."

STEEVENS.

The extracts having belonged to Hamlet Clarke, ſhould not paſs unobſerved by one who produces an extract from HAMLET in explanation thereof; nor ſhould it be forgot, that one of the witneſſes to Shakſpeare's will was named Hamlet Sadler.—The editor of the "Bibliotheca Topographica" alſo has lately picked out the few following articles from the Regiſter of St. Bride's, London, for the uſe of future commentators: "1590, xviith of May, Iſabell the wife of Hamblet Panketman was buried. 1592. Hamlet Evans buried ixth of Nov." Gent. Mag. vol. LVIII. pp. 111. 199.—This name, however, may have no relation to Prince Hamlet. A ſimilar inſtance of thriving induſtry and laudable gratitude Tamworth experienceed in a perſon of the name of Porch, who left a charity to that town, ſtill ſubſiſting; but he had no connexion with any family of the name, great or ſmall, as he got his name from being found an expoſed infant in the church porch. Being brought up by the pariſh, and going to London, where he throve, he made the above-mentioned return of gratitude. I believe the hiſtory of Clarke was ſomewhat ſimilar: whether he was found in a Hamlet I cannot ſay for certain. But, when the Foundling Hoſpital was firſt eſtabliſhed, I was told that ſuch names were given to them from the fancies of the ſponſors, as may puzzle future philoſophers from their oddneſs to account for." G. A.

† In the church of St. Martin Ironmonger-lane, on a fair monument at the upper end of the chancel, is inſcribed:

"Here under lyeth buried Eleanor wife of Hamlet Clarke, free of the worſhipful Company of Fiſhmongers, London, and one of the four Clerks of the Lord Mayor's Court, London, aforeſaid. She dyed on Sunday the 14th of January 1626; and was buried on Friday the 19th of the ſame; after they had been married 33 years, and about two months. They had iſſue only Mary, married to Ralph Latham, of Upminſter, in the county of Eſſex, eſq. common ſerjeant at law of this honourable city. And the ſaid Eleanor had alſo Elizabeth, another daughter, by Charles Barnard, a former huſband, married to Thomas Latham, of Stifford in Eſſex, gentleman."—A very fair ſkreen at the entrance into this church was inſcribed, "Me fieri fecerunt Hamlettus Clarke, generoſus, & Radulphus Latham, armiger, 20 Martii, 1629."

‡ Sheath or ſcabbard, wrought with ſilk and ſilver or gold thread in raiſed work. See ſuch an one for a knife in Archæol. XII. 21[illegible]. Lady Cullum of Bury has one.

The CHURCH (ſee Plate XL.)

dedicated to St. John the Baptiſt, conſiſted originally of an embattled tower (in which are three bells); a low, crocketed ſpire, a nave, and chancel.

An aile, nearly coeval, adjoins it on the South ſide, with a regular porch; and having at the Eaſt end a chancel, or ſeparate chapel, appropriated to the owners of Quenby Hall; and ornamented with neat pews, for the accommodation of the family, the vicar, and ſome of the tenants, which were built by the late Shukbrugh Aſhby, eſq. out of the cedar trees hereafter noticed under Quenby [1].

At the Weſt end of this aile are two ſeats, the property of the preſent owner of Ingarſby.

At the North-eaſt corner of the church, and extending beyond the regular chancel, is a diſtinct chapel, or chancel, the property of Mr. Archdeacon Burnaby, as owner of the lordſhip of Bagrave.

Mr. Wyrley deſcribes theſe arms at Hungerton:

Gules, ten bezants, a quarter Ermine. Zouch.

Gules, a cinquefoil Ermine, a border Sable bezanté. Aungervile.

Azure, a chevron Ermine between three leopards' faces Or, Aſhby.

Gules, three mallets [2] Argent.

Argent, a bend engrailed Sable. Ratcliffe.

The altar-piece and pulpit, both of which are very neat, were erected by the late Shukbrugh Aſhby, eſq. out of the above-mentioned cedar trees. He alſo preſented the plate for the communion ſervice.

In the Matriculus of 1220, Hungerton is deſcribed as under the patronage of the abbot of Leiceſter; the rector William inſtituted by . . . .; paying to the abbot 20*s*. a year, and a ſtone [petra] of wax, of old time. The chapel of Ingwardby was to be ſerved thrice every week from the mother church; and the monks of St. Ebrulf received two ſheaves from the demeſne of Roger Aungervile of old time.

The Regiſter of Leiceſter Abbey thus ſtates it:

"Habemus in Hungarton advocationem eccleſie, cum decimis garbarum & feni, ex dono Walteri le Powr, & ex confirmatione regis Henrici II. &c. & xxs̄. annue penſionis de rectore, & unam petram cere: ſicut patet in Matriculo epiſcopi, in hiis verbis: "Eccleſie de Hungarton patronus abbas Leyc'; perſona Wiłłus inſtitutus, perſolvens dicto abbati xxs̄. & unam petram cere ab antiquo; & habet capellam de Yngwarby, que conſuevit deſerviri per III dies in ebdomate per matricem eccleſiam. Monachi de Sc̄o Ebrulfo percipiunt ibi duas garbas de dominico Rob̄ti e Angervill ab antiquo." Indè ſolvimus annuatim priori de Schene IIs̄. Et modò habemus predictam eccleſiam in proprios uſus; & ſic ceſſat penſio predicta tam de xx s̄. quàm de petrâ cere predictâ [3].

"Pro priore & conventu de Leiceſtriâ.

"Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. ſalutem. Sciatis quòd, de gratiâ noſtrâ ſpeciali, & pro quadraginta marcis quas dilecti nobis in Chriſto abbas & conventus de Leyceſtriâ nobis ſolvent, conceſſimus & licentiam dedimus, pro nobis & heredibus noſtris, quantum in nobis eſt, eiſdem abbati & conventui, quòd ipſi eccleſiam de Hungerton, que eſt de advocatione ſuâ propriâ, ut dicitur, appropriare, & eam appropriatam in proprios uſus tenere poſſint ſibi & ſucceſſoribus ſuis in perpetuum, ſine occaſione vel impedimento noſtrî, vel heredum noſtrorum, juſticiariorum, eſcaetorum, vicecomitum, aut aliorum ballivorum ſeu heredum noſtrorum quorumcunque. In cujus, &c. Teſte rege, apud Weſtm', VIII° die Octobris. [1352.]

Per ipſum regem, ad inſtantiam ducis Lancaſtrie [4]."

This is a true copy of the record, and is examined.

HEN. ROOKE, Clerk of the Rolls.

"Anno Dn̄i 1353. Ordinatio vicarii per venerabilem Johannem ep̄um Ebor' & ap̄lice ſedis legatum facta, in hiis verbis: 'Vicarius de Hungerton habeat, pro manſo ſuo, totam rectoriam eccleſie de Hungerton, cum curtilagiis, pomariis, & ortis, ad dictam eccleſiam pertinentibus, &c. ut in ordinatione. Item predictus vicarius habeat xxx acras terre de glebâ ipſius eccleſie, cum pratis, paſcuis, &c. Habeat etiam & percipiat omnes & omnimodas oblationes & decimas perſonales, decimas lane, agnorum, aucarum, &c. & omnia ad altaragia provenientia, &c. Item dictus vicarius denarios Petri colligat & percipiat, & de eiſdem, ut mos eſt, ſatisfaciat, &c. Item decimas & alia onera extraordinalia, quoties & quandocunque occurrerint, dictus vicarius pro tertiâ parte tantummodo agnoſcat, ſubeat, ſupportet, &c.'

"Mem', quòd ep̄us Lincoln' habet penſionem annualem, ſcil' XL s̄. de eccleſiis de Hungerton & Humberſton, pro partibus fructuum & proventuum tempore vacationis vicariorum earundem eccleſiarum. Ideò abbas & conventus Leic' modò recipiunt predictas partes fructuum & proventuum tempore vacationis predictorum vicariorum, &c. ut in compoſitione. Et, ſi dictus ep̄us voluerit, tempore vacationis dictorum vicariorum, partes predictas fructuum & proventuum dictarum eccleſiarum petere, & eas cum effectu habere, tunc omninò ceſſabit predicta penſio, ſcil' XL s̄.; & predicti abbas & conventus de predictâ ſolutione exonerentur in perpetuum.

"Mem', quòd nos habemus appropriationem eccleſiarum de Hungarton & Humberſton, ex ſumptibus đni Henrici ducis Lancaſtrie factam, pro quietâ clamatione terrarum noſtrarum & tenementorum in Everley, & unius carectate ligni cotidiè in foreſtâ Leic', &c. ut patet in cartâ, ex confirmatione regis Edwardi III." [5]

The following original document relative to this vicarage is communicated by the Rev. George Aſhby, B. D.

Compoſitio realis ſuper portione vicarie eccleſie parochialis de Hungarton, monaſterio beate Marie de Pratis Leiceſtrie appropriate.

"Univerſis Sancte Matris Eccleſie filiis preſentes literas viſuris vel audituris, & illis preſertim quorum intereſt in hâc parte, ſeu quomodolibet intereſſe poterit in futurum, Willielmus, permiſſione divinâ, Lincoln' epiſcopus, ſalutem in omnium Salvatore, ac fidem indubiam preſentibus adhibere. Cùm inter venerabiles & religioſos viros abbatem & conventum monaſterii beate Marie Virginis de Pratis Leiceſtrie, rectores ſive proprietarios eccleſie parochialis Sc̄i Botolphi de Hungarton, noſtre Lincolnienſis diœceſeos, ex parte unâ, & magiſtrum Wiłłum Ireland, artium mag̃rum, vicarium perpetuum eccleſie parochialis predictâ, ex alterâ, de & ſuper perceptione nonnullarum decimarum, oblationum, fructuum, & proventuum vicarie perpetue antedicte, exorta fuiſſet nuper materia queſtionis; tandem partes predicte, lites, diſſentiones, & controverſias, que ex premiſſis & eorum occaſione inter eaſdem partes aliquandiu evenerunt, & veriſimilitèr in futurum evenire poſſent, amputare & evitare volentes, poſt diverſos tractatus inter ipſas partes in hâc parte habitos atque factos, mediantibus ſuis conciliariis & amicis, pro bono perpetue pacis & concordie inter ſe fovend' & conſervand' finalitèr, ad quandam devenerunt amicabilem compoſitionem ſive tranſactionem, & inter ſe compoſuerunt ſive tranſegerunt in hunc qui ſequitur modum; viz. quòd prefati religioſi viri abbas & conventus monaſterii beate Marie de Pratis Leic', rectores ſive proprietarii antedicti, & eorum ſucceſſores quicunque pro tempore exiſtentes, prefato mag̃ro Wiłło Ireland, vicario perpetuo eccleſie parochialis predicte, ejuſque ſucceſſoribus quibuſcunque futuris, ſive eorum deputatis ſive aſſignatis, octo libras bone monete, ad quatuor anni terminos, per equales portiones; viz. ad feſta Natalis Dn̄i proximè futuri quadraginta ſolidos, Annunciationis beate Marie Virginis XL ſolidos, Sc̄i Joħis Baptiſte XL ſolidos, & Sc̄i Micħis Arcħi XL ſolidos, nomine decimarum, oblationum, fructuum, & proventuum, ac pro decimis, oblationibus, fructibus, & proventibus, ad prefatum vicarium, jure & nomine vicarie ſue antedicte, ſpectant & pertinent, fidelitèr & integrè, ac ſine aliquali diminutione, perſolvend'. Item quòd predictus vicarius & ſucceſſores ſui predicti habebunt manſum vicarie predicte, cum terris arabilibus, pratis, paſcuis, & communibus, eidem

---

[1] See p. . . 295

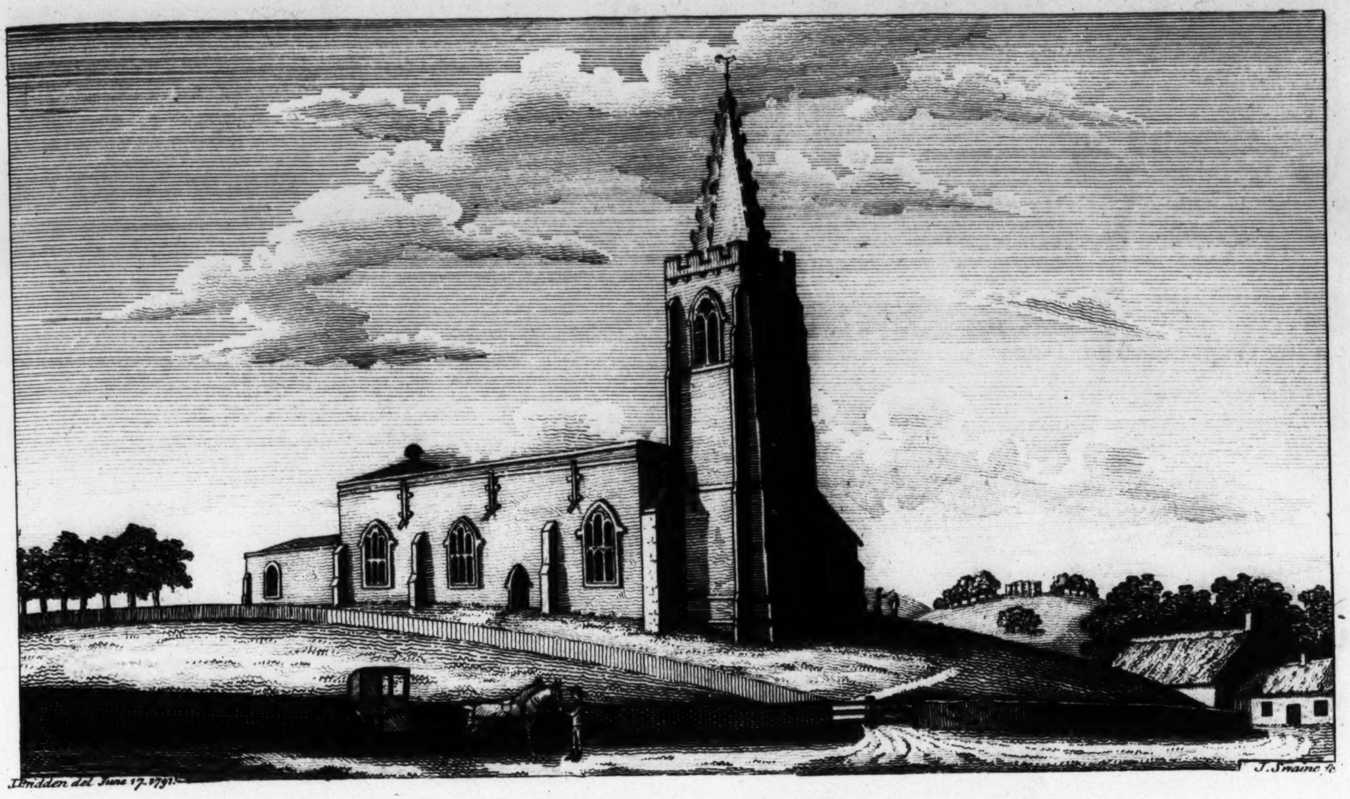
[2] Theſe Mr. Burton calls croſſes portate.

[3] Charyte's Rentale, fol. lxvi.

[4] Secunda pars Patentium de anno regni regis Edwardi Tertii viceſimo-quinto.

[5] Charyte's Rentale, fol. lxviii.

HUNGERTON, N.W.



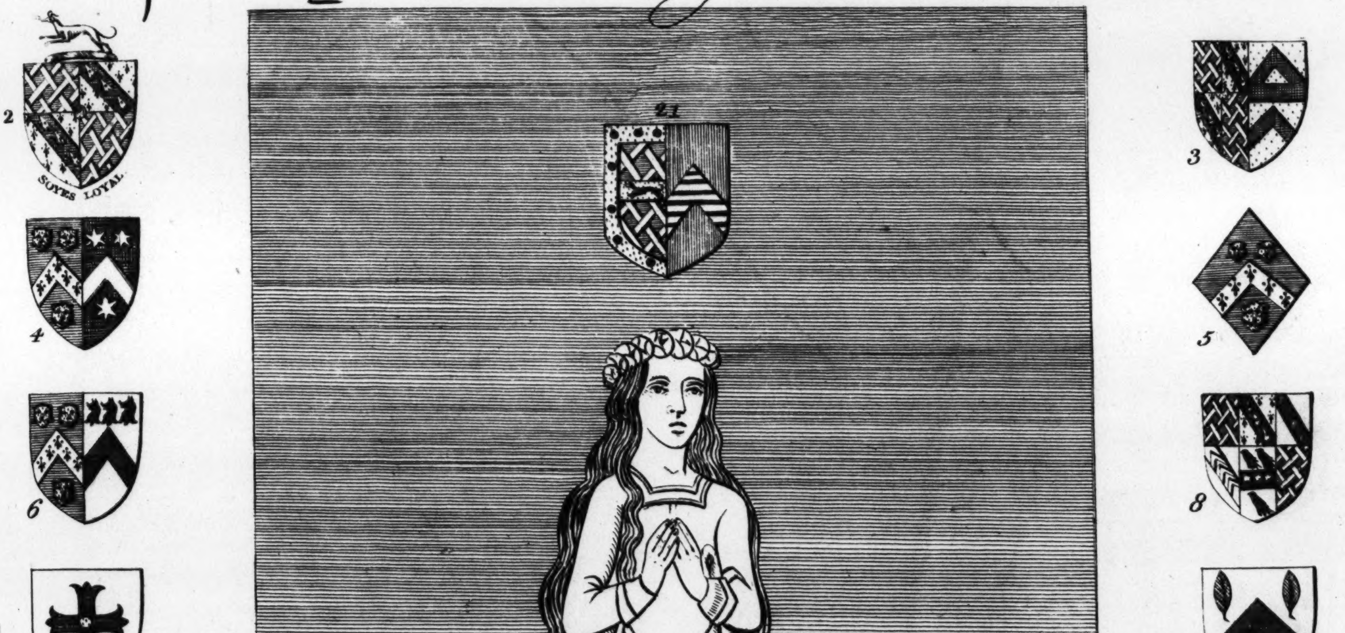
J. Pridden del. June 17. 1791.

J. Swaine sc.

Varing Ashby

Shuk: Ashby

Elizabeth Ashbie



2
SOYES LOYAL
3
21
4
5
6
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18 19 20
22
23

Fig. 7. p. 286.

vicarie pertinentibus; atque unam virgatam terre, jacentem in campo de Hungarton predictâ, vocatam Woodcockys-lond, cum croftis ſuis & pertinentiis, ad annuum valorem duodecim ſolidorum; ita quòd idem vicarius & ſui ſucceſſores reddant indè annuatim prefatis abbati & conventui eorumque ſucceſſoribus octo ſolidos legalis monète Anglie, ad duos anni terminos, per equales portiones, viz. ad feſta Sc̃i Mic̃his Arc̃hi & Annunciationis beate Marie Virginis. Et quòd iidem abbas & conventus prefato vicario & ſuis ſucceſſoribus remittent IIII ſolidos ſumme predicte XII ſolidorum in recompenſatione pro IIII acris terre cum dimidiâ jacentibus & exiſtentibus in campis de Bagrave, eidem vicario, ratione & jure vicarie ſue predicte, ab antiquo ſpectant'; quas IIII acras terre cum dimidiâ idem vicarius modernus, pro ſe & ſuis ſucceſſoribus, vult & concedit, quòd dicti abbas & conventus habeant in perpetuum. Et ſi contingat aliquam ſummam ſummarum predictarum, modo quo prefertur ſolvendam, ad aliquod feſtum feſtorum predictorum quo ſolvi deberet, in parte vel in toto, à retro fore non ſolut', quòd tunc benè liceat prefato vicario & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, in villâ & campis de Baggrave diſtringere, & hujuſmodi diſtrictiones ſic captas ibidem effugare, abducere, & penès ſe retinere, donec & quouſque predicta ſumma, ſic à retro exiſtens inſolut', eidem vicario & ſucceſſoribus ſuis plenariè & integrè fuerit perſoluta; et, ſi hujuſmodi ſumma, modo & formâ ac termino ſupradictis eiſdem vicario & ſucceſſoribus ſuis perſolvenda, per unum menſem integrum à retro fuerit non ſoluta, tunc volunt & concedunt ſupradicti abbas & conventus, pro ſe & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, quòd prefatis vicario & ejus ſucceſſoribus, nomine pene, & pro penâ, quotiens hoc acciderit, viginti ſolidos amittent & fidelitèr perſolvent. Et ſupradicti vicarius, & ſui ſucceſſores perpetuis futuris temporibus ſucceſſivè exiſtentes, cure animarum parochianorum dicte eccleſie parochialis Sc̃i Botolphi de Hungarton fidelitèr deſervient in divinis, ſeu ſic deſerviri facient; ſacramentaque & ſacramentalia parochianis ejuſdem miniſtrabunt, ſeu facient miniſtrari; oneraque ordinaria & extraordinaria eidem vicarie perpetue incumbentia ſubibunt, ſupportabunt, & agnoſcent in perpetuum. Et prefati abbas & conventus, & eorum ſucceſſores, habebunt omnia altaragia, cum ceteris emolumentis que pertinent, ſive in futurum pertinere poterint eidem vicarie, ratione dotationis ejuſdem, omneſque & ſingulas decimas, tam majores quàm minores, mixtas & minutas, ac mortuaria tam viva quàm mortua, & oblationes, necnon cetera fructus, redditus, & emolumenta eccleſie quecunque, ad dictam eccleſiam parochialem aut vicariam ejuſdem ante hec tempora pertinentia (exceptis pre-exceptis), in perpetuum. Quibus quidem concordiâ, compoſitione, & tranſactione ſic factis, partes predicte, volentes & affectantes ipſas concordiam, compoſitionem, & tranſactionem, noſtris authoritate & decreto perpetue firmitatis robore vallari & confirmari coram nobis, in capellâ intra hoſpitium noſtrum, Vetus Templum nuncupatum, in ſuburbiis civitatis Londonii ſituatum, locum utique noſtre juriſdictionis ſolitum & conſuetum, nono die menſis Julii, anno Dñi MDVII°[1]."

A true copy. JOHN BRADLEY, deputy regiſtrar.

A penſion to the biſhop of Lincoln of £2. from the rectories of Hungerton and Humberſton, and of 10*s*. from Twyford, are all payable at Michaelmas.

In 1344, the procurations were, 7*s*. 6¾*d*.; the rectory was taxed at 35 marks; and paid 1*s*. for Peter-pence. The abbot of Leiceſter had alſo a penſion from it of 20*s*. and a ſtone of wax.

In 1534-5, the value of the vicarage was £9. 6*s*. 8*d*.

In 1540, the appropriated rectory of Hungerton was granted to Brian Cave[2].

In 1622, it was the property of ſir Brian Cave[3]; and in 1641, of ſir Robert Banaſter, knt.[4]

Nov. 2, 1646. By virtue, &c. it is ordered, that the yearly ſum of £50. be paid out of the profits of the impropriate rectory of Hungerton, in the county of Leiceſter, ſequeſtered from ſir Robert Banaſter[5], delinquent, to and for increaſe of the maintenance of Thomas Seed, miniſter of the pariſh church of Onelippe in the ſaid county, the vicarage thereof being worth but £50. per annum; and the ſequeſtrators, &c. profits are due and payable.

March 17, 1647-8, Sir Robert Banaſter, of Paſſenham, co. Northampton, ſettled £50. a year on the church of Hungerton, for which he was allowed £800. a year out of his fine for delinquency[6].

In 1650, this church was returned as an impropriation, the rectory worth 100*l*. the vicarage worth 50*l*. and the incumbent as "no preacher."

The vicarage of Hungerton was united to that of Twyford in 1732; and is deſcribed in the king's books as a diſcharged living, worth in money and glebe, £9. 18*s*. 1½*d*.; clear yearly value £28. 6*s*. 2*d*.

"Twyford is ſaid, in the king's books, to be worth, in great and ſmall tithes, manſe, and other profits, £8. 8*s*. 6*d*.; and in Bacon's Liber Regis the clear yearly value is ſtated at £47. 2*s*. 6*d*. But this is certainly a miſtake; Twyford was never worth £20. to me: but, if the chapelry of Thorpe was included in it, it might amount to £47. 2*s*. 6*d*. It ſeems to me as if the value of Twyford and Thorpe were added together, and then given ſeparately as the value of Twyford only. Hungerton conſiſted only of a piece of ground in the common field to the value of £10. a year; and a ſtipend of £8. paid by lord Maynard from Ingarſby lordſhip. This, with a trifle for Eaſter offerings, was the whole of the rectory. In ſhort, the three made about £60. a year: but in my time Hungerton was incloſed; and the value of the land inſtantly doubled from £10. to £20. On the other hand, the churches uſed to be ſerved for £13. apiece; but I could not find a curate that would ſtay for £60; ſo that I was glad to run away myſelf, and leave them[7]. The vicarage of Twyford has alſo probably received ſome augmentation from the late incloſure[8]."

The epiſcopal procurations at Hungerton are, for the rectory 3*s*. 4*d*.; the vicarage 1*s* 8*d*.; at Twyford, for the rectory 2*s*. 8*d*.; the vicarage, 1*s*. 8*d*.; and a penſion of 10*s*. to the biſhop of Lincoln.

Money raiſed for the poor[9] of Hungerton within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	£.	s.	d.
	130	12	4
Expended in county rates, &c.	8	12	10
———— on the poor, —	120	10	4
Rent of workhouſe and habitation,	6	1	0
Expended in litigations, —	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	123	12	6
———————— 1784, —	123	5	6
———————— 1785, —	154	11	7
Medium of theſe three years, —	133	16	6
———— of county expences, —	0	0	0
———— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of churches, roads, &c.	0	0	0
———— of nett annual expences,	133	16	6
———— of attending on magiſtrates,	0	1	8
———— of entertainments at meetings,	0	14	9
———— of law expences, —	0	7	11
———— of ſetting the poor to work,	4	18	10

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 47.

---

[1] Extracted from the Regiſtry of the Right Rev. William Smith, Lord Biſhop of Lincoln.

[2] "He was patron of Hungerton, and owner of Bagrave and Ingarſby; all part of the plunder of Leiceſter Abbey." G. A.

[3] Burton, p. 142. [4] Ibid. MS. [5] Of Paſſenham in Northamptonſhire; of whom ſee hereafter, under Ingarſby, p. 291.

[6] Impropriations purchaſed by the Committee ſitting at Goldſmiths Hall for Compoſitions with Delinquents, publiſhed Sept. 22, 1648.

[7] "Arthur Young, eſq. is perpetually railing, in books and converſation, againſt tithes, as the ruin of huſbandry; and in one of his tours has inſtanced in 12 pariſhes. One was Hungerton, where you will obſerve that I had not a farthing of tithes in any ſhape whatever. Another was Haſelbeche in Northamptonſhire, which, though a rectory, perhaps never had its tithes taken in kind either in the time of the preſent or late rectors. The preſent incumbent never takes any, or a mere trifle, in kind; as I remember he took for a cloſe or two which my couſin George Aſhby broke up, which had not been done before. Of the other ten inſtances nothing is known: but it is ſingularly unlucky, that the two which are well known ſhould perfectly contradict the writer's purpoſe; but, when a point is to be proved, liſts and calculations are eaſily made out." G. A.

[8] This paragraph is communicated by the Rev. George Aſhby.

[9] "I think I have heard Mr. Waring Aſhby ſay, that he could remember when it did not exceed £5." G. A.

RECTORS.

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
Walter de Bereford, 1230.	Abbot and convent of Leiceſter.
Hamno de Honoria, 1261.
Hugo de Vienna, ſubdean, 13 kal. Jan. 1274-5.
Hugo de Dover, died 1275.
VICARS.
John Kempe, 1534.
Samuel Muſton[1], 1659.	George Aſhby, eſq.
John Taylor, May 14, 1669.
Thomas Sawbridge[2], June 4, 1685.	Mary Aſhby, widow, pleno jure.
Richard Browne, Feb. 18, 1717.	King George I. by lapſe.
Nicholas Broughton, Dec. 21[3], 1719.	George Aſhby, eſq.
Joſeph Juxon[4], Jan. 9, 1722-3.	King George I. by lapſe.
George Aſhby[5], B. D. Nov. 7, 1757.	Waring Aſhby, eſq.
Thomas Clarke, B. A. 1767; the preſent vicar 1799.	Shukbrugh Aſhby, eſq.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

Dame Mabell Oneby, the firſt wife of ſir John Oneby of Hinckley, was buried here; but no monument is erected to her memory.

On the North wall of the Bagrave chancel, incloſed with iron rails, is a tablet, with theſe arms: Quarterly; 1. Azure, fretty, Argent, Cave; 2. and 3. Ermine, on a bend Sable, three whales heads Or, Whalley; in the feſs point, a creſcent Or. Creſt, on a wreath, a greyhound currant Sable; motto, SOYES LOYAL.

Alſo the above quarterings; impaling, Or, a feſs between two chevrons Sable, Liſle; Plate XLI. fig. 2, 3.

And on each ſide, the cyphers "F.C." and "F.M."

"Monumentum Franciſci Cave, de Baggrave, ar. qui obiit die an° 15....[6] et Margar' uxor' ſuæ, quæ ob. 26 die Octob. an° 1568."

In the Quenby chancel.

On a flat ſtone:

"George Aſhby, of Quenby, eſquire, renowned for the antiquity of his family, which hath flouriſhed there in a perpetual deſcent four hundred and eighty years;
but more renowned for his own prudence, moderation, and nobleneſs of mind. After he had a long time faithfully ſerved his country, in the office of juſtice of peace and quorum, died July 1, 1653,
being aged 72, and reſts
here till he riſe to immortality."

On another flat ſtone:

"Here reſteth the body of George Aſhby, eſq.
ſon and heir of George Aſhby, of Quenby, eſq. deceaſed;
and alſo the body of Elizabeth his wife,
ſole daughter of George Bennet,
of Welby within this county, eſq. deceaſed.
He had iſſue by her four ſons, viz. George, Bennet, John, and William;
and five daughters;
viz. Elizabeth, Mary, Sarah, Anne, and Mabel.

---

[1] He ſigned in that year the famous Repreſentation of the Puritan Divines.

[2] He publiſhed an Aſſize Sermon in 1695.

[3] The late ſir Noah Thomas, it is believed, was either ſon, or nephew, to a vicar of Hungerton.

[4] He publiſhed "A Sermon upon Witchcraft, occaſioned by a late illegal attempt to diſcover Witches by Swimming, preached at Twyford, in the county of Leiceſter, July 11, 1736," 8vo. His text, "Thou ſhalt not ſuffer a witch to live," overſet all the reaſoning that he could offer againſt there being any ſuch thing. He was alſo rector of Eaſtwell, by diſpenſation April 6, 1746. Guy, the founder of the hoſpital, left £1000. apiece to many relations within a certain degree; and Abigail, Mr. Juxon's wife, was one.

[5] Born Dec. 5, 1724, in the houſe of the miniſter of St. John's chapel, in Red Lion-ſtreet, Clerkenwell; educated at Croydon, Weſtminſter, and Eton ſchools; admitted of St. John's College, Cambridge, Oct. 30, 1740; B. A. 1744; M. A. 1748; B. D. 1756; many years preſident of that college. He reſigned Hungerton in 1767. In 1774 he accepted the college living of Barrow in Suffolk, where he has conſtantly reſided near 25 years. In October 1780, he was inducted into the living of Stansfield in Suffolk, owing to the favour of Dr. Roſs biſhop of Exeter, who entirely unſolicited gave him a valuable portion of the vicarage of Bampton in Oxfordſhire; but which being out of diſtance from his college living, he procured an exchange of it for Stansfield. Dr. Roſs's friendſhip for him began early in college, and continued uniformly ſteady through all following changes of place and ſituation. See a ſlight account of this learned perſon in the "Anecdotes of Mr. Bowyer," p. 189, by his friend; who had the happineſs of rejecting another pamphlet in the Markland controverſy, which was falſely aſcribed to the Doctor. In 1793 he had reaſon to apprehend loſs of ſight, as may be ſeen by his caſe in Gent. Mag. vol. LXIII. p. 977, which gradually increaſed, and ſoon reduced the extent and ſatisfaction of his former ſtudies through a long and healthy courſe of years: he is ſtill in good health, chearful (July 1799), and thankful.—To this reſpectable Divine I have repeatedly expreſſed my obligations in the courſe of the preſent arduous undertaking; and am happy in this opportunity of repeating them, for prompt and uſeful information on every ſubject of literature. See particularly his Diſſertation on the Leiceſter Miliary, vol. I. p. clv; which, however, having been written for private information only, and after long lying dormant being haſtily printed without proper reviſal, will juſtify our here preſerving an apology from the worthy Author:

"This Eſſay was printed under peculiarly unfavourable circumſtances, but which are not worth troubling the reader with; Mr. Aſhby, however, has been miſunderſtood, as impeaching Mr. Pochin's taſte; whereas he meant the contrary; not that he claimed it to mend the roads, but as commiſſioner, in which character only he could pretend to recover it from the firſt occupant; and ſo what followed ſhews.—He wiſhes alſo, that in p. clv. col. 2, ſect. 4, ſtood at the head of ſect. 3, both making only one paragraph, and ending, 'This argument, however, muſt be confined to inſcriptions of public monuments, if true even of them; for, as to private addreſſes, Ælian introduces his tactics to our emperor with Dive Adriane Cæſar Auguſte.'—P. clvi. col. 2, add, 'An inſcription to Antoninus Pius being broken in half length-ways may be read as if it wanted only a word, or ſo, for Hadrian; Dr. Chandler's Travels in Greece, 78, 1. Much like this has been the fate of our inſcription.'—P. clvi. col. 2, l. 59, r. 'Moreri's Dict. ad v.'—That and the preceding paragraph ſhould ſtand as a note to the firſt Entreroches.—P. clviii. col. 1. After Ch. Gray, eſq. add, 'and preſerved in Mr. Gough's Camden, vol. II. p. 58.'—And to the P. S. add, 'Nor can any better proof of the propoſed reading being right be expected, or had, than the curious inſcription publiſhed in the ſame noble repoſitory, vol. III. p. 28. See too the Archæologia, vol. V. p. 94."

To the labours of Sylvanus Urban Mr. Aſhby has occaſionally for many years been a valuable contributor; and the "Anecdotes of Mr. Bowyer" were much enriched by his communications, under the ſignature of Dr. Taylor's Friend. In the Archæologia of the Society of Antiquaries (where he became a member in 1774) vol. III. p. 165, is his Diſſertation on a ſingular Coin of Nerva, found at Colcheſter, in the poſſeſſion of Charles Gray, eſq. M. P. for Colcheſter. Mr. Aſhby is the Suffolk Clergyman of whom the Rev. Thomas Harmer ſpeaks ſo handſomely in his preface to the third volume of "Obſervations on Scripture;" and has now, by favour of Mr. Harmer's daughter, his corrections and additions to the whole, to about the quantity of half a ſheet or more; but they are written in an exceeding ſmall ſhort-hand, and have been ſhewn to ſome of his congregation, who can make nothing of them. The Diſſenters, it is believed, generally uſe Rich's ſhort-hand; but the daughter ſays, that Mr. Harmer employed one, with alterations of his own; ſo that a decypherer is wanted here, as well as a ſhort-handwriter.—Another perſon who ſpeaks handſomely of Mr. Aſhby without naming him (as biſhop Percy, Granger, and Mr. Gough have done) is Mr. Barrington, on the Statutes, ed. 1775, p. 212, note, deſcribing the great oven at Melton Mowbray; which we have copied in this Hiſtory, vol. II. p. 249.

[6] This date is left blank, the monument having been erected in Mr. Cave's life-time.

He was renowned for the antiquity of his family, which hath flouriſhed at Quenby above 500 years;
and no leſs for his perſonal virtue,
as appeared in the loyall and prudent diſcharge of the office of a juſtice of peace, in which he long ſerved his majeſty king Charles the Firſt;
in the third year of whoſe reign he was high-ſheriff of this county.
He died the 1ſt day of July, being aged 72 years.
And the ſaid Elizabeth his wife died the 29th day of January, 1681, being then aged 75 years.
In dutifull obſervance of the deceaſed,
the ſaid John Aſhby and William Aſhby, executors to the ſaid Elizabeth,
have placed this as a memorial."

On a mural monument:-

Arms: Aſhby; impaling Shukbrugh; fig. 4.

"George Aſhby, of Quenby, within this pariſh, eſq.
ſon and heir of George Aſhby, of Quenby aforeſaid, eſq.
deceaſed, and Elizabeth his wife,
ſole daughter of George Bennet,
late of Welby within this county, eſq. deceaſed, was born July the 29th, anno Domini 1629.
He took to wife Mary Shukbrugh, ſole daughter and heir of Euſeby Shukbrugh, late of Naveſby in the county of Northampton, eſq. deceaſed, and grand-daughter and heir of Edward Shukbrugh, late of Naveſby aforeſaid, eſq. deceaſed;
by whom he had iſſue three ſons and five daughters,
born as followeth; viz.
Mary, Elizabeth, George, Dorothy, Lucy,
Shukbrugh, Euſeby, and Margaret;
every of which ſurvived him, except Lucy.
He was high-ſheriff of this county in the eighteenth and nineteenth years of the reign of our ſovereign lord king Charles II.
He died the 29th of May, anno Domini 1672,
and underneath lyeth interred.
In pious memory of the deceaſed,
the ſaid Mary, his relict and executrix, hath cauſed to be erected this monument."

On a flat ſtone in the North-eaſt corner:

"Hic jacet
Georgius Aſhbie,
de Quenby, in comitatu
Leiceſtriæ, armiger.
Natus 29 Julii, anno Domini 1629;
denatus 29 Maii, 1672.
Etiam
Maria ejus uxor,
quæ obiit 15 Aprilis,
anno { ætatis 93.
Salut. 1721."

On a mural monument:

In a lozenge, the arms of Aſhby; fig. 5.

"To the memory of Dorothy Aſhby, daughter of George Aſhby, late of Quenby,
in this pariſh, eſq. and Mary his wife; who departed this life the 11th day of September, in the year of our Lord 1681,
in the 24th year of her age.
This monument was erected by George and Shukbrugh Aſhby, her brothers and executors."

On the floor is another inſcription for the ſame lady:

"Here lieth interred
the body of Dorothy Aſhby, third daughter of George Aſhby, late of Quenby, eſq.
and Mary his wife;
who, in the prime of her years (being aged 23)
chearfully left this world a chaſte and pious virgin, September the 11th, anno Domini 1681."

On the North wall:

"In this vault lies honeſt George Aſhby the Planter. He was ſon and heir of George Aſhby, of Quenby in the county of Leiceſter, eſq. and Mary his wife. He married Hannah, the daughter and coheir of Edmund
Waring, of Umphriſton in the county of Salop, eſq. by whom he had iſſue ſeven ſons and four daughters; viz.
Elizabeth, George, and Waring;
Richard, John, Mary, Edmund, Hannah, Anne, Waring, and William. He was high ſheriff for this county in the laſt year of king James and the Firſt of king William. He had the honour of being twice[1] choſen to repreſent this county in parliament without any expence to himſelf or family.
He then ſaved this county five thouſand pounds one year in their taxes; and procured ſeveral advantages to it, which it is hoped this county will long enjoy the benefit of."

On the South wall:

Arms: Aſhby; impaling Argent, a chevron; and in chief three foxes heads erazed Sable, langued Gules; Cumberland; fig. 6.

"Infra jacet
Eliz. Waring Aſhby, armig. nuper uxor,
Reverendi Richardi Cumberland, D. B.
de Peakirk, in agro Northampton, rectoris, necnon de Northampton archidiaconi, filia.
Quæ, fidei in Deum, in parentes pietatis, in conjugem amoris, liberalitatis in pauperes, in omnes benevolentiæ, omnigenæ denique virtutis, fulgidum præbuit exemplum. Hæc, poſtquam ſibi ſatis, aliis licet parum, vixerat, relicto filio unico (Georgio, viz.) haud multos menſes nato die Maii viceſimo ſecundo; annoque Salutis 1725°, ætatis autem ſuæ viceſimo (proh dolor!)
mortem obiit.
In deſideratiſſimæ ſuæ uxoris memoriam hoc mœſtiſſimus poſuit conjux monumentum."

On the ſame wall:

"Near this place are depoſited,
among thoſe of his anceſtors,
the remains of Shukbrugh Aſhby, of Quenby, eſq.
a man eminently diſtinguiſhed for his learning,
probity, and benevolence.
To the Infirmary of Leiceſter he was a munificent benefactor.
This village of Hungerton he almoſt wholly re-built from a principle laudable and truly diſintereſted.
He married Elizabeth, daughter and ſole heireſs of Richard Hinde, of Cold Aſhby, Northamptonſhire, eſq. by whom he had iſſue three daughters;
Mary-Elizabeth, Catharine, and Dorothea.
He died January 27, 1792,
in the 68th year of his age,
beloved, revered, regretted.
This marble is inſcribed by Dorothea his youngeſt daughter,
as a memorial of his virtues, and as a teſtimony of reſpectful gratitude and filial piety.
We ſhall alſo bear the image of the heavenly.
1 Cor. chap. xv. 49."

---

[1] "In ſir Charles Whitworth's Succeſſion of Parliaments he occurs but once, viz. for 1695; but that uſeful author does not enumerate any but thoſe returned at general elections; which is a great defect, as many returned on vacancies (which in 1707, on the death of Mr. Verney, was the caſe here) are not mentioned at all; as would have been the caſe of Shukbrugh Aſhby, eſq. who repreſented the borough of Leiceſter for the two or three laſt months only of a ſeſſion." G. A.

In the aile:

On a large flat blue ſtone is a ſmall braſs figure, covered in the middle by Mr. Goodall's two pews; the arms over it, and the inſcription under it, being wholly torn away; ſee the Plate, fig. 7.

This was placed here in memory of Mary the firſt wife of Brian Cave, eſq. lord of Ingarſby[1], who was the daughter of ſir George Throgmorton, knt. and died in 1510. It was noticed by Mr. Wyrley in 1595; who preſerves theſe arms; which are added to the plate:

Azure, fretty of eight, Argent; on a feſs Or, a greyhound in full courſe, Sable; within a bordure Or, pelletée; Cave of Ingarſby; impaling, Gules, a chevron Argent, charged with three bars gemelles Sable; Throgmorton, fig. 21.

Cave, as the laſt; impaling, on a bend, three eſcallops, fig. 22.

Azure, fretty Argent, an annulet for difference, Cave of Bagrave; impaling, Gules, on a chief Argent, a lion paſſant Sable, fig. 23.

On other flat ſtones:

1. "Here lieth the body of Valentine Collins, gent.
who departed this life the 30th day of March, 1714,
in the 62d year of his age."

2. "Here lieth the body of Elizabeth,
the wife of Valentine Collins, gent.
and afterwards the wife of William Scarbrow, gent. who departed this life
the 31ſt day of Auguſt, 1731, aged 56."

3. "Here lieth the body of William Scarbrow, gent.
who departed this life May 20, 1723,
in the 41ſt year of his age."

4. "Here lieth the body of William Goodall, gent.
late of Ingarſby, who departed this life Jan. 14, in the year of our Lord 1719, in the 43d year of his age."

5. "Here lieth the body of Dorothy,
the wife of William Goodall.
She was the third daughter of William Penford, late of Ingerſby. Obiit March 29, 1738, æt. 67."

6. "Here lieth the body of William Goodall of Ingerſby.
He was the ſecond ſon of William Goodall, eſq.
of Holywell, in the county of Lincoln.
Obiit Jan. 1, 1719, æt. 43."

7. "Here lieth interred the body of William Penford, of Ingerſby;
who departed this life the 29th day of May, 1698,
in the 61ſt year of his age."

8. "Here lyeth interred the body of Bridget,
the daughter of William Penford, late of Ingerſby, gent. and Elizabeth his wife;
who departed this life Oct. 11, 1728, aged 58."

9. "Sacred to the memory of

John Goodall, of Ingerſby.
He departed this life
May 16, 1785,
aged 73.

Sarah, the wife of John Goodall,
She departed this life
March 28, 1777,
aged 77."

In the church-yard:

"Jonathan Hill died April 15, 1779, aged 92.
Alice his wife, July 5, 1777, aged 90.
Jonathan their ſon, Sept. 8, 1783, aged 63."

Extracts from the Pariſh Regiſters of Hungerton:

"Saray, daughter of John Edwin and Sary his wife, was baptized 20 Dec. 1683.

Elizabeth Edwin, daughter of Robert Edwin and Alice his wife, was baptized 29 Sept. 1684.

Sarah Edwin, wife of John Edwin, buried 27 Feb. 1684-5.

Elizabeth Edwin, daughter of John Edwin, buried 27 March, 1685.

Mary Edwins, the wife of Roberd Edwins, buried 16 Feb. 1687.

Martha Edwin, daughter of John Edwin and Joane his wife, was baptized 11 May, 1693.

Stephen Edwin of Bagrave, buried 10 April, 1698.

John, the ſon of John and Mary Edwin, of Bagrave, baptized 1 Jan. 1724; buried 20 April, 1724.

John, ſon of John and Mary Edwin, baptized 31 March, 1725; buried 25 June, 1726.

Stephen, ſon of John and Mary Edwin, baptized 29 June, 1727; buried 25 Feb. 1728.

Suſanna, daughter of John and Mary Edwin, baptized 6 Nov. 1729.

Joan, wife of John Edwin, buried 12 Jan. 1731-2.

Suſanna, daughter of John Edwyn junior, gent. and Mary his wife, buried 18 Jan. 1731-2.

George, ſon of John Edwyn junior, gent. and Mary his wife, baptized 6 March, 1732-3.

Mr. Stephen Edwyn, buried 29 March, 1733-4.

Mr. Robert Edwyn, buried 17 Oct. 1734.

Chriſtian, daughter of John Edwyn junior and Mary his wife, baptized 30 June, 1734; buried 31 July.

Mr. John Edwyn ſenior, buried 28 Dec. 1734.

Anna, daughter of John and Mary Edwyn, baptized 15 Oct. 1735.

Mrs. Elizabeth Edwyn, buried 17 Aug, 1748.

Mr. George Edwyn, buried 9 Sept. 1749.

John Edwin, eſq. buried March 20, 1761.

---

[1] See the pedigree of Cave of Ingarſby, hereafter, p. 290.

BAGRAVE,

BAGRAVE,

antiently called Babgrave, Babegrave, Badegrave, Balbegrave, &c. is a hamlet of the pariſh of Hungerton, but is in the hundred of Weſt Goſcote.

In Badegrave, which in Domeſday is noticed only as a member of Rothley, were ſix ploughlands all but three oxgangs, and ten acres of meadow [1].

The religious order of the Knights Templars had very early a conſiderable part of this lordſhip; for, in the Teſta de Nevill [2], compiled about the year 1240, we find theſe entries:

"Magr̃ Milicie Templi tenet 15 virgatas terre in Balbegaue, & habuit ingr̃um ꝑ Joħem de Harecurt [3], qui obiit in Terrâ Sc̃a jam 28 annis elapſis; ſed neſcitur ꝑ quod, &c.

"Item capella de Balbegrave ſolebat pertinere eccleſie de Kayham [4], & pertinet ad ſocam de Role; & modò eſt pertinens eccleſie de Hungerton, que eſt in donatione abbatis de Leyc'; ſed neſcitur quo warranto [5]."

Henry de Quenby, whom we meet with in 1247, was the ſon of William de Babgrave [6].

In 1279, the following inquiſition occurs:

"Babgrave. Anno regis Edwardi vii° facta eſt hec inquiſitio, per dñum R. de Notyngham, H. de Steleden, Joħem de Arundel, inquiſitores per preceptum dñi regis, per xii inquiſitores; per Rogerum Wyvel juratorem, Robertum Mordat militem, juratorem, Johannem Burtonum, Joħem de Honte, Thomam de Langton, Rogerum de Faxton, Joħem de Burneby, Thomam Vaſſett, Ric̃um Bekene, Joħem de Keythorpe, Willm̃ de Gougte, Walterum Illyng, juratores. Dicunt, quòd continentur in eâdem vii carucate terre, & i virgata & quarta pars i virgate terre, ſcil', de quibus magiſter preceptorii Milicie Templi tenet in dominico i virgatam libere tenure dicti magiſtri; ſed Petrus filius Ric̃i & ſui preceptorii participes tenent xv virgatas terre & quartam partem unius virgate; & Robertus Chevercourt tenet in eâdem ii virgatas & dimidiam de dominico. Item magiſtri Sc̃i Lazari de Burton tenent i virgatam & dimidiam; & tenentes liberi de magiſtro Sc̃i Lazari, Rogerus Godfelan, Rađus filius Matilde, Ric̃us filius Henrici, Thomas Mallori, Willũs Weyward, Ric̃us filius Henrici, iii virgatas & dimidiam; Willũs de Aſheby, Rađus filius Matilde, Ric̃us Abbott, Henricus Frevill, iii virgatas; Robertus Chevercort magiſter Sc̃i Lazari, Thomas Mallori, Willũs de Aſſanby, Rađus filius Matilde, Ric̃us Abbot, & omnes participes, tenent de Ric̃o Burden; & Ric̃us de Joħe de Wor'; Joħes de heredibus comitis Leyc', comes de rege in capite; & data ſunt dicto Ricardo Burd pro xii^a parte unius feodi.

"Willũs Burdet chevalier fuit ſeiſitus de uno meſſuagio & quinque bovatis terre, cum pertinentiis, in Babgrave; & de eiſdem tenementis feoffavit quendam Robertum Chevercourt; habend' & tenend' eidem Roberto & heredibus ſuis in perpetuum, de prefato Willõ & heredibus ſuis, per homagium & fidelitatem, & ſectam ad curiam ipſius Willi de Loweſby de tribus ſeptimanis in tres ſeptimanas; de quibus ſervitiis idem Willũs fuit ſeiſitus per manus ejuſdem Roberti, & per manus Rogeri tenentis, ſuo tempore & filii Rogeri heredis. Et de ipſo Willõ deſcendit modo recto cuidam Johanni ut filio & heredi; & de ipſo Joħe, eò quòd obiit ſine herede de corpore ſuo exeunte, deſcendit modo recto cuidam Ric̃o ut fratri & heredi; ac de ipſo Ric̃o, eò quòd obiit ſine herede de corpore ſuo exeunte, deſcendit modo recto cuidam Johanni ut fratri & heredi ſuo; & de ipſo Joħe fratre Ric̃i deſcendit modo recto cuidam Johanni ut filio & heredi ſuo; & de ipſo Johanne filio Joħis, eò quòd obiit ſine herede de corpore ſuo exeunte, deſcendit modo recto cuidam Radulfo ut filio & heredi; & de ipſo Rađo deſcendit modo recto cuidam Johanne nunc uxori Thome Aſheby ut filie & heredi, &c. [7]"

In 1299, it was found, on inquiſition, that there were certain freeholders at Babgrave (which was then an appurtenance of the manor of Thorpe Ernald), who, by antient cuſtom, paid 7*s.* 6*d.* at the view of frank-pledge yearly on the feaſt of St. Martin; and that William la Zouch, ſon and heir of dame Milicent de Montalt, deceaſed, was then aged 22 [8].

In 1304, it was found that Richard de Aſheby, deceaſed, and Alice his wife, held one toft in Babgrave; alſo that they held three acres of land there of the maſter of the Hoſpital of Burton St. Lazarus, by the ſervice of 15*d.* for all ſervice; alſo five roods and an half of land there of maſter William de Boys, by the ſervice of one roſe-flower; alſo five acres of land of William Burdet, by the ſervice aforeſaid [9].

In 1343, Henry de Ferrars died ſeiſed of one knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Thorpe Ernald, Aylmerſthorp, Thurneby, Petlinge, Buſſeby, Bellegrave, Croppeſton, Barneſby, Babbegrave, and Atterton, which William la Zouch of Haringworth held [10].

In 1346, Thomas de Thurmaſton, William de Babegrave, and Robert de Gaddeſby (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon), were aſſeſſed 3*s.* 4*d.* for a twelfth part of a knight's fee parcel of the honour of Winton [11].

In 1352, Simon Iſlip, archbiſhop of Canterbury, gave two meſſuages, four toſts, and two ploughlands, and certain tithes in Babgrave, to the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter, held under William la Zouch by the ſervice of 6*s.* a year; and it ſhould ſeem that the greateſt part of this place came afterwards to the ſaid Abbey [12]. Their poſſeſſions are thus entered in Charyte's Rentale:

"Habemus in Baggrave decimam garbarum & feni, & redditum ſubſcriptum, ex dono Simonis de Yſlep, Cantuarienſis archiepiſcopi; ſcil', unum meſſuagium, ii carucatas terre & prati, cum pertinentiis ſuis, &c.

Willũs Paynter tenet capitale meſſuagium, iiii toſta, iiii virgatas terre & dimidiam; & reddit xliiii s̃. iiii đ.

Georgius Wynſor tenet iii toſta & ii virgatas, & reddit xiii s̃. iiii đ.

Ricardus Bateſon tenet i meſſuagium, iii toſta, ii virgatas terre & dimidiam; & reddit xx s̃.

Summa, lxxvi s̃. viii đ.

Solutiones; ſcil', xx s̃. & i lb. piperis.

Habemus ibi, de perquiſito abbatis & conventûs, & ex feoffamento Ricardi Batteſon & Emmote uxoris ſue, duo meſſuagia, ii toſta, ii virgatas terre & dimidiam, &c. ut in cartis iiii^a & x^a ii libri de Chartwary.

Habemus ibidem, pro decimâ feni, vi s̃. viii đ. per annum. Summa virgatarum, ix.

Reſolutiones; ſcil', magiſtro hoſpitalis de Rotheley xx s̃. & dño de Lowſeby i libra piperis [13]."

Among the good deeds of Frier William Charyte, a benefaction is recorded of ſome lands and tenements in Hungerton and Bagrave, which coſt him £6. and were then worth 23*s.* 4*d.* a year [14].

Theſe lands his own "Rentale" thus notices:

"Habemus ibidem i meſſuagium, i toſtum, xii acras terre & dimidiam, & i dolam prati, ex perquiſitione fratris Willi Charyte."

---

[1] "In Badegrave 6 carucatæ terræ, 3 bovatæ minus; & 10 acræ prati." Domeſday, fol. 230. b. 1.

[2] See vol. I. p. lii.

[3] A John de Harecurt occurs as owner of the manor of Rothley in 1217; who, as it appears by a public deed, had given, whilſt in foreign parts, divers lands within that manor "fratribus Militie Templi" See farther particulars under Rothley.

[4] The church of Kayham was at that time itſelf a chapelry to Rothley.

[5] De Serjantiis arrentatis per Robertum Paſſelewe, tempore Henrici Regis, filii Regis Johannis, in the Teſta de Nevill.

[6] See hereafter, p. 294.

[7] Charyte's Rentale, fol. clxxvii. b.

[8] Eſch. 27 Edw. I. N° 50. Leic.

[9] Eſch. 33 Edw. I. N° 49. Leic.

[10] Eſch. 17 Edw. III. N° 57. Leic.

[11] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[12] Burton, MS.

[13] Charyte's Rentale, fol. xl.

[14] Appendix to vol. I. p. 71.

In 1387, Henry de Ferrars of Groby, knight, died ſeiſed of the manor of Babgrave, which William la Zouch of Haringworth held [1].

In 1395, William la Zouch of Haringworth, knight, died ſeiſed of half a knight's fee in Babbegrave, Dalby, and Berneſby, called Burdett's Fee, which Thomas Aſhby held; and William la Zouch, knight, his ſon and heir, was then aged 23 [2].

In 1444, William de Ferrers of Groby, knight, died ſeiſed of the manor of Babbegrave, which William lord Zouch of Haringworth held [3].

In 1457, Edward de Grey, knight, lord Ferrers of Groby, died ſeiſed of the manor of Babbegrave, which ſir William la Zouch of Haringworth held [4].

In 1463, William la Zouch, knight, lord Zouch and Seymour, died ſeiſed of 4*d.* rent, with the appurtenances, in Babgrave [5].

A leaſe for 99 years was granted, by Thomas Docwra, prior of the hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem, June 5, 1505, to the abbot and convent of Our Lady in the Medowes beſide Leiceſter, of ten tofts, with certain lands, meadows, paſtures, and fields, called Templelands, late in the holding of William Batteſon, of the yearly value of 26*s.* 8*d.* containing 30 acres or more; alſo certain eſcheat lands late in the holding of Nicholas Beke, containing 4 acres, and paying yearly 16*d.* lying within the town and fields of Bagrave; a yearly fee-rent of 20*s.* out of the land of the ſaid abbot and convent, lately occupied by John Thomlinſon; a fee-rent of 4*s.* 2*d.* due by them for Battysford-land; 12*d.* for land held under them by John Thorpe; and divers other parcels of fee-rents ariſing out of lands and tenements purchaſed by the abbot and convent; namely, 6*s.* 8*d.* from 6 yard-lands held by the Warden of Sapcote; 4*s.* from 3 yard-lands held by Robert Bayond; 2*s.* 10*d.* from one yard-land held by Richard Plante; 2*s.* from half a yard-land held by Richard Haliday; 2*s.* 8*d.* from one yard-land held by John Beke; 2*s.* from one yard-land held by Richard Windſor; 2*s.* from one yard-land held by Nicholas Milner; 6*s.* from one yard-land held by Thomas Heyley; and 1*s.* from a ſingle acre held by Edmond Stevenſon. The rent for the whole demiſe was to be 3*l.* 15*s.* 11*d.* payable to the commander of the commandery of Dalby and Rothley. And whereas all theſe lands were ſubject to certain cuſtoms and demands at every change of tenant or occupier, the abbot and convent engaged to pay to the commander 20*s.* ſterling on the death or change of every abbot. In a ſchedule annexed to this leaſe a croft called Temple-cloſe occurs; with one next the Chapel yard, and another called The King's cloſe [6].

Soon after the diſſolution of the abbey of Leiceſter, this manor, with many other lands belonging to that abbey in this county, was granted by king Henry VIII. to Francis Cave, LL. D.

In 1541, two tenements, 100 acres of land, and other premiſes in Bagrave, parcel of the chantry of Sapcote, were granted by king Edward VI. to Edward lord Clinton and Say [7].

Francis Cave, eſq. who occurs in the reign of queen Mary at the head of a commiſſion iſſued by her majeſty to make certain enquiries in this county [8], died in 1584, ſeiſed of one capital meſſuage, and of five other meſſuages, two cottages, one dovecote, and one water-mill, in Babgrave, held of the queen in capite, by the ſervice of a fortieth part of a knight's fee [9].

Suſan, relict of ſir Thomas Cave of Bagrave, married Charles Baghott of the town of Leiceſter [10].

Mr. Burton ſays, "It is now (1641) the inheritance of ſir John Coke, ſecretary of ſtate to king Charles, being brother to ſir Francis Coke, of Truſley, co. Derby, knt. who had it from the king, to him conveyed from ſir Edward Villiers, who bought it of ſir Alexander Cave; whoſe grandfather Francis Cave, Doctor of the Laws, purchaſed it (and moſt of the lands in this county belonging to the Abbey of Leiceſter) of king Henry VIII [11]."

From the Cokes this lordſhip came, about the year 1680, by purchaſe, to John Edwin, eſq.; whoſe grandſon John Edwin, eſq. was high-ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire in 1753-4; and rebuilt the preſent family manſion, the materials of which he brought from Kirby Beler [12]; and of which a view is here given in Plate XLII.

On the death of Mr. Edwin, in March 1761, Bagrave became the property of his daughter and heireſs, married in 1770 to the Rev. Andrew Burnaby, D. D. a native of Asfordby in this county; of which place his father, grandfather, and great grandfather, were in ſucceſſion patrons and rectors, as his youngeſt brother is at this time. After having travelled through the middle ſettlements in North America in 1759 and 1760, Dr. Burnaby was appointed chaplain to the Britiſh Factory at Leghorn, where he reſided five years; in occaſional excurſions, viſited Corſica, and almoſt every part of Italy; and, during the laſt of thoſe years (ſir John Dick having obtained his Majeſty's leave to return to England for his private concerns) had the honour to do the Conſular buſineſs, by the appointment of Government, under the denomination of Proconſul. In 1769 he was preſented to the vicarage of Greenwich; and in 1786 the archdeaconry of Leiceſter was conferred on him by biſhop Thurlow, without the leaſt expectation or ſolicitation on his part. Both theſe preferments he ſtill enjoys; and it is the wiſh of every friend to worth and genius that he may long enjoy them. That he is eminently diſtinguiſhed as a writer, will appear by the liſt below [13]. His Sermons and Charges are excellent compoſitions, as well in a literary point of view, as in their able ſupport of our preſent religious eſtabliſhment; and in his Travels, which have lately reached a third edition, he relates what he ſaw with great fidelity [14].

Edwin-Andrew Burnaby, eſq. the archdeacon's eldeſt ſon, was married Dec. 30, 1794, to the only daughter of the Rev. William Brown, M. A. rector of Burrow in this county; and now makes Bagrave Hall his principal reſidence.

In this hamlet was reſident till very lately a family named Mowbray [15], whom tradition reports to be collaterally deſcended from the antient barons. The laſt of them died lately at a very advanced age.

---

[1] Eſch. 11 Ric. II. N° 26. Leic.

[2] Eſch. 19 Ric. II. N° 52. Leic.

[3] Eſch. 23 Hen. VI.

[4] Eſch. 36 Hen. VI.

[5] Eſch. 8 Edw. IV. N° 53. Leic.

[6] Cotton MSS. Nero VI. p. vii.

[7] Deeds of Exchange in the Augmentation Office, 5 Edw. VI.

[8] "De Franciſco Cave & aliis, aſſignatis ad inquirendum ſuper certis articulis." Paſch. Commiſſ. 1 Mariæ, Rot. 4.

[9] Inq. at Leiceſter, 23 Jan. 26 Eliz.

[10] Viſitation of 1619.

[11] Burton, MS.

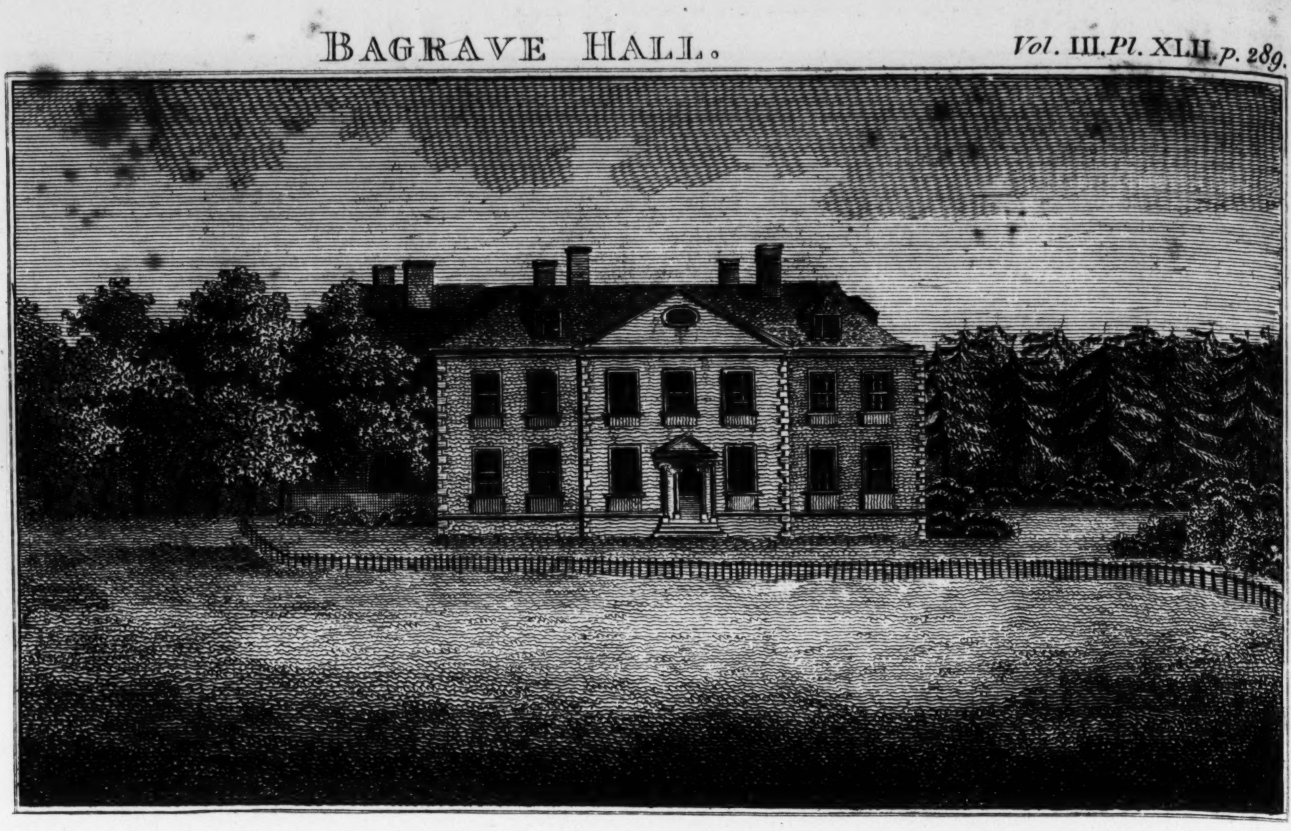
[12] See vol. II. p. 232.

[13] 1. "On the Nature of Subſcription to Articles of Religion (a Sermon preached before the Rev. Dr. John Law, Archdeacon of Rocheſter, at his Viſitation at Bromley, July 17, 1774," 8vo.—2. "Travels through the Middle Settlements in North America in the years 1759 and 1760, (with Obſervations upon the State of the Colonies, 1775," 4to; a ſecond edition in 8vo. 1775.—3. A ſmall volume of Six Sermons; that upon the Nature of Subſcription to Articles of Religion therein included; owing to a particular circumſtance, and by the advice of two of the moſt eminent and diſtinguiſhed Prelates at that time in this Kingdom.—4. "On Religious Zeal, a Sermon preached in Greenwich Church, June 11, 1780 (the time of the riots in London), and addreſſed to every Proteſtant Subject in the Realm," 8vo. [There was alſo printed a penny edition of this ſpirited diſcourſe, for the benefit of the common people.]—5. "A Sermon, preached before the Houſe of Commons, Feb. 11, 1781," (a general Faſt-day), 4to.—6. "A Sermon, preached at Greenwich, on occaſion of the National Thankſgiving, July 29, 1784," 4to.—7. "A Sermon, preached at Greenwich, April 23, 1789, on occaſion of his Majeſty's Recovery," 4to.—8. "Two Charges delivered to the Clergy of the Archdeaconry of Leiceſter, in the Years 1786 and 1787;" publiſhed in 1790, 8vo.—9. "A Sermon, preached at Greenwich, Nov. 4, 1792," publiſhed in 1793, 4to.—10. "The Bleſſings enjoyed by Engliſhmen, a Motive for their Repentance, a Faſt-Day Sermon; preached at Greenwich, April 19, 1793," 4to.—11. "A Charge to the Clergy of the Archdeaconry of Leiceſter, 1797;" which we take the liberty of earneſtly recommending to their ſerious peruſal.

[14] This tour was made previouſly to the diſputes with America, where Dr. Burnaby obſerves in his preface, "a ſpirit of party was univerſally prevalent, and it was not always an eaſy matter to arrive at the knowledge of the truth." The author had no political purpoſe to ſerve; a circumſtance which, with many readers, will raiſe the eſtimation of the work. For what he modeſtly calls "the moſt valuable part of the work, the Diary of the Weather," he profeſſes himſelf indebted to his eſteemed friend Francis Fauquier, eſq. ſon of the late worthy governor of Virginia, who tranſmitted it to him from Williamſburgh while he was chaplain at Leghorn. The third edition of it in 1798-9 is "greatly enlarged by the author."

[15] "I know nothing of Mowbray; but think I remember the name, as now or formerly at Hungerton in moderate life, as I do Collins, Bull, and Scarborow. Names of great families, entirely extinct, often remain amongſt the humbleſt of the people in the neighbourhood." G. A.

BAGRAVE HALL. Vol. III. Pl. XLII. p. 289.



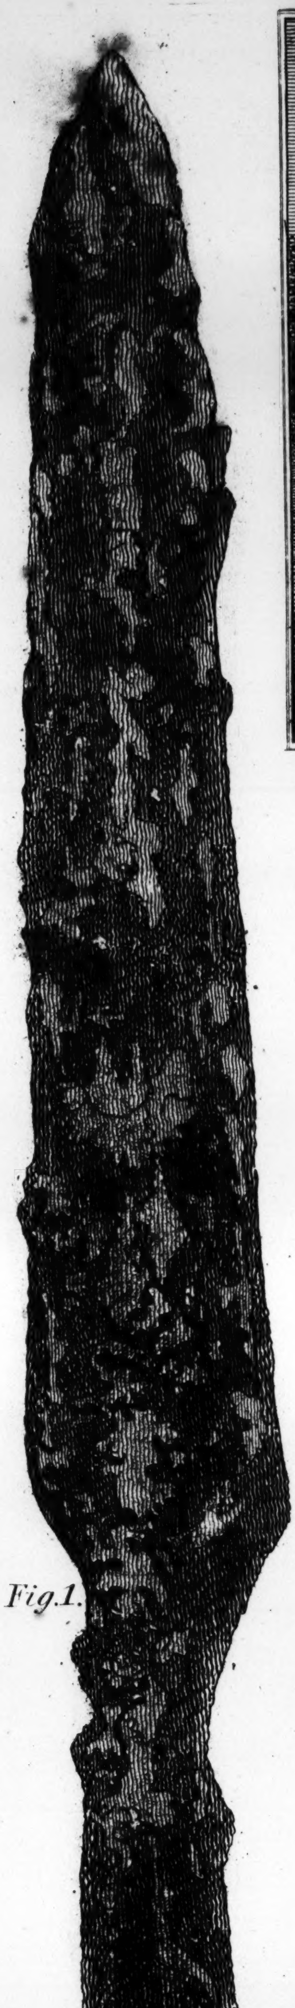


Fig. 1.

Fig. 2.

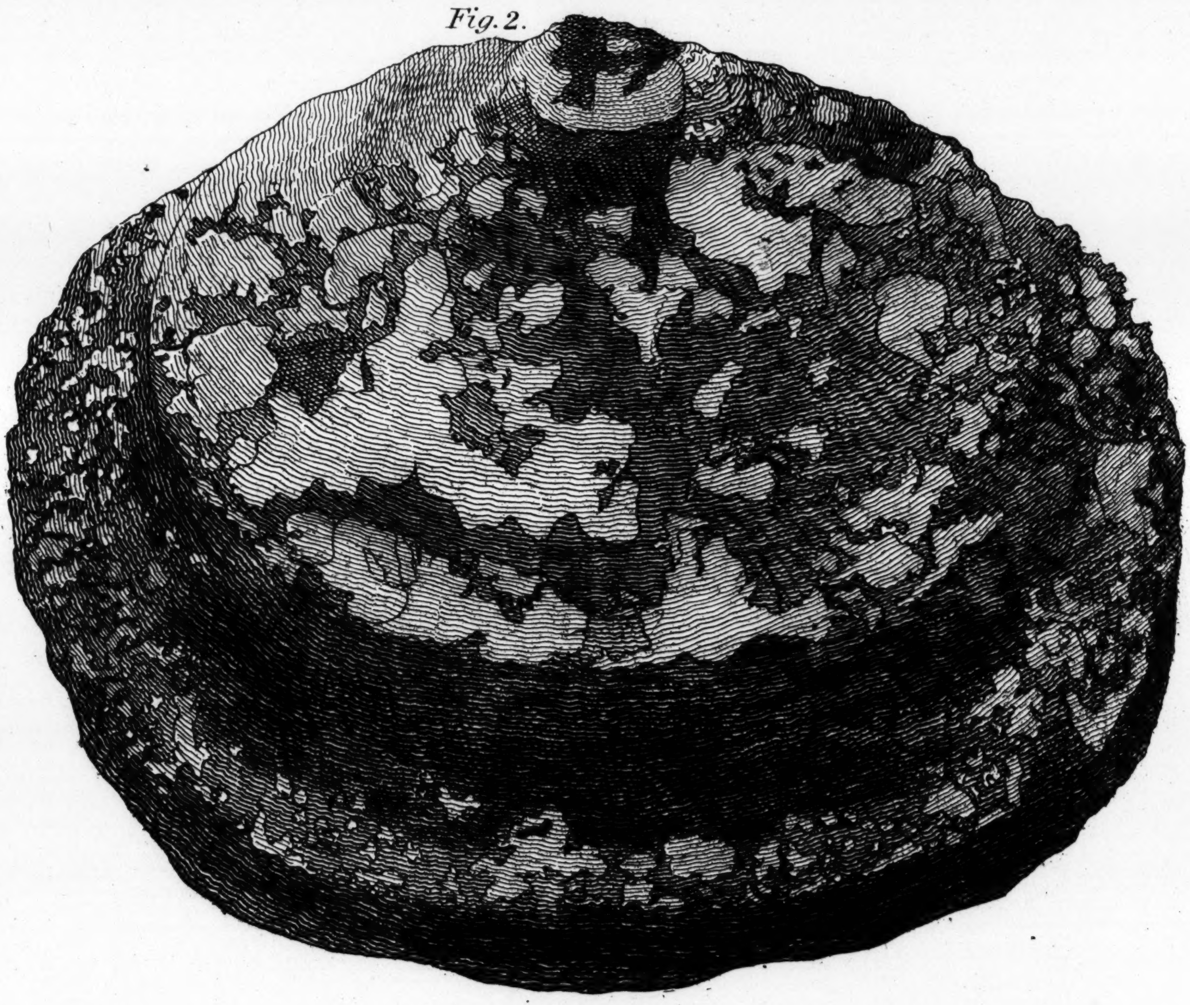

Fig. 3.

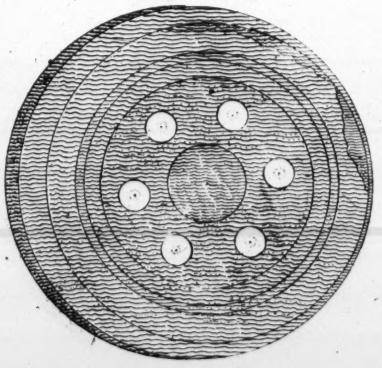

Fig. 4.

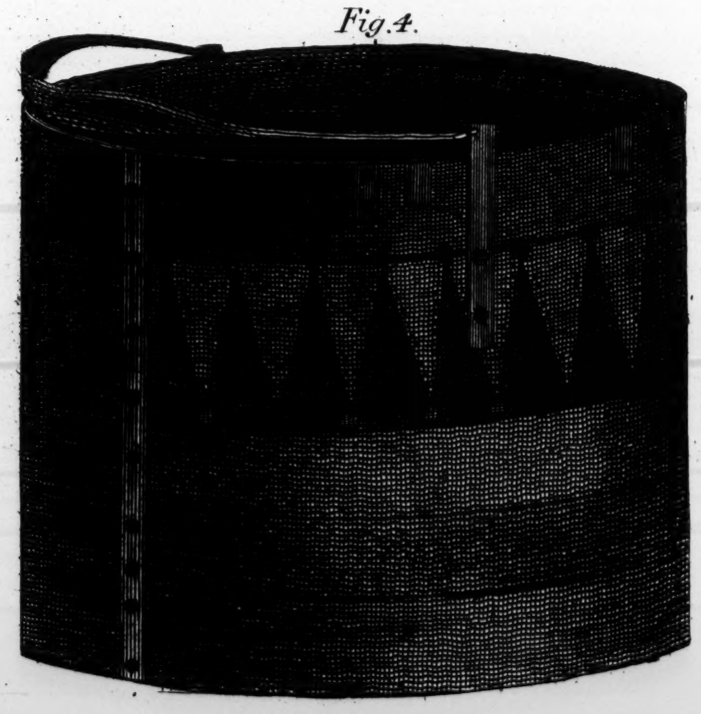
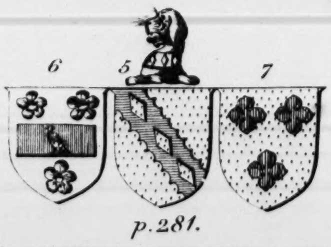
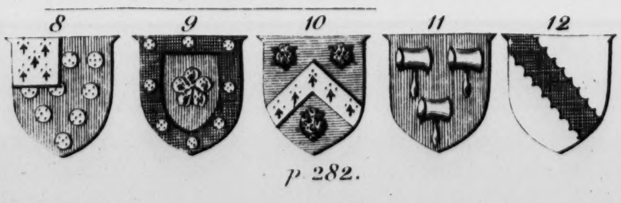




p. 281.



p 282.

The ſpear-head, in the annexed plate, fig. 1. was found, on the accidental opening of a barrow, by a labourer, in the lordſhip of Bagrave; and preſented, about the year 1784, by Mr. Archdeacon Burnaby, with various fragments of arms, and ſome other ſepulchral relics from the ſame place, to the Rev. James Douglas, who, in his "Nenia Britannica, 1793," has exhibited a beautiful repreſentation of it in that ſpecies of aquatinta in which he ſo eminently excels.

"An iron umbo of a ſhield, fig. 2. copied from the ſame plate, has five rivets, which perforate the rim. The iron is of the ſame thickneſs with another which was found in a ſand-pit near Aſh in Kent. Decayed wood is alſo adhering to the interior part of the rim; the metal is not entirely corroded, as is the caſe with that found at Aſh, which I apprehend to ariſe from the difference of the ſoil. The interment at Bagrave ſeems to have been made in a ſtiff clay ſoil; and the one at Aſh in a looſe dry ſand. The latter, I have found by experience, will not preſerve metal and other ſubſtances ſo long as the former. The remains of human bones, and the relics found with them, I have particularly noted at the Aſh burial-place, have been nearly conſumed; excepting now and then ſome of the teeth are diſcernible; the other parts of the body being entirely decompoſed; whereas Dr Burnaby preſented me with the under-jaw of a young ſubject from Bagrave, which is in a perfect ſtate of preſervation[1]."

Fig. 3. is a bone of ſome animal not particularly aſcertained, evidently turned in a lathe, and uſed as a button to connect the drapery. It is not in the leaſt decayed, and the texture uncommonly hard[2].

On a requeſt to Mr. Douglas in 1799, he has obligingly favoured me with the following circumſtantial additions:

"The ſepulchral relics diſcovered at Bagrave apply in my opinion to more than one interment. The ſpear and umbo may belong to one grave; the other relics to a contiguous one. They were accompanied with ſeveral iron ſegments of a circle and fragments of ſpears; the ſegments, an inch in breadth, forming, as I conjecture, the rim of a ſhield, or ſome wooden veſſel, not unuſually found in theſe ſepulchres, about nine inches in diameter; by the fragments, on connecting them, they ſeem to anſwer to two diſtinct rims or hoops. Alſo with ſome rims of very thin braſs, with bracers and their rivets, which ſhew them to have appertained to a ſmall wooden veſſel; the ſegment of the rims proving the diameter to be about ſix inches. A ſpecimen of theſe veſſels, in the ſhape of a pail, 8 inches in diameter, and 7½ inches in height, found at Aſh in the graves of the women, the relics of which I have preſerved, is here copied in fig. 4. The ſize of this veſſel, the care of its preſervation, as may be noted in the remains, and the cuſtom of the antients to throw into the funeral pile, or to inhumate with the body, the things cheriſhed by the perſons when living, naturally incline me to attribute it to a uſe of ſome myſtic nature. I do not pretend to determine the particulars of this uſe, but I ſhould think it dedicated to ſome office more uncommon than that of holding liquids for domeſtic uſes[3].

"Theſe articles, with the circular perforated bone, were all the relics I received from the Archdeacon; but I have no doubt, if a ſlight ſearch was made on the ſpot, at no great depth, ſeveral other remains of this nature would be diſcovered; and which may be affixed to the Saxon interments before the eighth century, deſcribed in p. 126. of my work; at which period cemeteries were conſecrated and connected with churches, when the Saxons were generally converted to Chriſtianity; and before which period, as theſe tumuli will evidence, theſe people interred their dead on waſte lands: which in various places being cultivated, the mound was laid level; and ſucceeding mutations have brought the contents of theſe ſepulchres to light.

"I conceive the annotations of our Antiquaries very erroneous on the large barrows diſcovered in our iſland; which evidently apply, from actual reſearches, to times anterior to the Daniſh invaſion.

"Stukeley called moſt of our round tumuli Roman, and his creed is ſtill followed by many Antiquaries; but the moſt critical reſearches prove the Romans to have raiſed no great ſtructure of earth over their dead, who were chiefly buried near their ſtations. In their funeral obſequies, the laws of the XII Tables prohibited much expence of labour; and it ſhould ſeem that a vote or decree of the ſenate was obtained for their mauſolea, or any extraordinary ſepulchral magnificence. Certain noble families had this honour conferred upon them for perpetuity: hence ſtructures of this nature are ſeldom diſcovered in Britain; which were erected in, or contiguous to, the Capital of the Empire.

"The large barrows which I have opened, and thoſe which I have diſcriminated by reading, and from the communication of gentlemen who have made reſearches of this nature, do not produce any relics to aſcertain their Roman pretenſion. They have no pateræ of Roman workmanſhip, or urns of the ſhape and materials like thoſe found near their ſtations, with various ſepulchral remains in atteſtation of the ſame.

"A Roman road is no evidence of the large barrows being Roman which may be contiguous to it, as proof may be given that a Roman road has been cut through one of them[4]; and theſe erections were of courſe accidentally found in the direction of the road.

"In the graves at Bagrave, which were promiſcuouſly opened (for more than one were doubtleſs diſcovered[5]), the under-jaw of a young ſubject was found, and which I received from the Archdeacon with the other relics; by the teeth it ſhould appear to have belonged to a young perſon of about ten years of age. I mention this, as it is a very material circumſtance for the argument of truth, to prove that this place of interment was not made peculiar to any event of war, there being arms diſcovered in it, but as an ordinary depoſit for the dead; and which will alſo validate the aſſertion that the ſeveral relics found in them were particulars uſed by the living, and, from the ceremony of funeral, buried with them; and as theſe identities have been proved in various places of the Saxon interments, it is proper to ſtate the fact for the government of any Antiquary in his reſearches."

---

[1] As Mr. Douglas deſcribes the umbo from Bagrave very briefly, referring to that from Aſh for its illuſtration; it becomes neceſſary to tranſcribe his account of the latter: "the diameter of which," he ſays, "rather exceeds ſix inches; its weight is 3½ lb.; it is ornamented at the top with a thin plate of ſilver, on a ground of a mixed metal, compoſed of copper and calamine, riveted to the rim point. Round the rim are five ſtuds of the ſame mixed metal, the heads thinly plated with ſilver, and which, penetrating the rim, ſerve as rivets into the wood to faſten it. Remains of wood are ſtill adhering to the ruſt, and by the grain they ſeem to be of aſh. The concavity is continued to the point, and does not exceed a tenth of an inch in thickneſs. When in its perfect ſtate it muſt have exhibited a great accuracy and elegancy of workmanſhip. Apparently it was hammered in a mould, afterwards poliſhed to great luſtre, and uſed by the warriors more perhaps for ornament than actual uſe, unleſs it ſerved, as the Erſe poet has related, for the din of martial proweſs before the troops engaged; when the warrior ſounded his ſhield with the ſtroke of his arms." Nenia Britannica, pp. 27, 28.

[2] Ibid. Plate XXI. p. 88.

[3] For a more minute deſcription of this veſſel, ſee the "Nenia Britannica," p. 52.

[4] "Dr. Charles Maſon obſerved a barrow cut through by the Roman Road on Barham Downs: it muſt therefore have been of an older date than the road, and not regarded by the Romans, who placed their monuments near their high-ways to remind the traveller of his mortality, and to gain a pious wiſh for the deceaſed. Hence ſiſte viator; but out of the reach of being damaged or deſtroyed by them." G. A.

[5] In confirmation of this ſuppoſition, I am aſſured that within theſe three or four years ſeveral other relics were accidentally met with by ſome labourers in the field (amongſt which was one of the Mowbrays, ſee p. 288); but no particular deſcription of the contents of theſe graves was taken at the time.

Pedigree

Pedigree of CAVE, of BAGRAVE and INGARSBY.

Arms: Quarterly; 1. Azure, fretty Argent, Cave; 2. Ermine on a bend, three whales' heads, Whalley; 3. Argent, on a bend Gules three birds . . . . . .; 4. . . . . . on a bend three chevrons, ...; 5. Argent, on a feſs between three martlets Sable, three mullets Argent; 6. Cave. Plate XLI. fig. 8.

Sir John Cave, knt. of the county of York.= . . . . .

Pierius Cave, of the county of Northampton.= . . . . .

Thomas Cave.= . . . . dau. of Paſſemere.

William. John.

Henry. Chriſtopher.

Margaret, dau. of John Saxby, merchant of the Staple, ſecond wife.=Richard Cave, of Stanford, in the counties of Leiceſter and Northampton; died 29 Hen. VIII.=Elizabeth, dau. of Thomas Marow, eſq. of Church Lawford, co. Warwick.

2. Francis Cave, of Bagrave, LL.D. died in 1584.=Margaret, dau. of Tho. Liſle, of Surrey, and ſiſter of Edmund Liſle, of Wilberham, co. Cambridge.

3. Auguſtine, 4. Clement, died without iſſue.

5. Richard Cave, of Pickwell. (See his deſcendants, p 293.)=Barbara, dau. of Will. Fielding, of Newnham Padox, co. Warwick.

Margaret, dau. of Geo. Throgmorton, knt. firſt wife, died 1510.=6. Brian Cave, of Ingarſby; ſee p. 286.= . . . . . dau. of ſir Will. Skipwith, ſecond wife.

1. Sir Thomas Cave, of Stanford, knt. of whoſe deſcendants ſee under that pariſh.

Dorothy, married John Smith, eſq. of Withcote. (See vol II. p. 393.)

Edward Cave.=Dorothy, dau. and coheir of Nicholas Malory, of Newbold Revel, co. Warw.

5. Liſle Cave, of Horſepool Grange, in the pariſh of Thornton. (See his deſcendants, p. 293.)

Margaret, wife of Humph. Babington.

Dorothy, wife of John Barnard.

Catharine, dau. and coheir of Tho. Colt, of Newhall, Eſſex, firſt wife.=Sir Tho. Cave, of Bagrave, d. 1607; married Iſabella, Drake, 2d wife, died ſ. p.=Anne, dau. of . . . . . . Layney. 3d wife.

2. Anthony Cave, of Queniborow.=Frances, dau of Thomas Duport, of Shepeſhed.

Thomas.= . . . . dau. of Anthony Palmer, of Stoke.

Margaret, wife of Gilbert Bury, of Eaſton.

. . . . daughter and heir, wife of . . . . . Page, of the Star-chamber.

3. Brian Cave.= . . . . . . dau. of . . . . . . Cliffe, of the county of Eſſex.

Brian Cave.

4. Henry Cave.=Philippa, only dau. and heir of Rob. Braham, of Barrow. (See his deſcendants under that pariſh, p. 68.)

6. William Cave, married Margaret, dau. and heir of George Clement, of Frampton, co. Lincoln.

1. Edw. Cave, ſon and heir, married Barbara, dau. and heir of ſir William Devereux, knt. died ſ. p.

2. Hen. Cave, of Ingarſby, ſecond ſon and heir.=Elizabeth, dau. of Gregory Iſham, of Braunſton, co. Northampton.

3. Francis, of Pickering Grange.=Frances.

Mary, wife of Thomas Browne, of Wiſtowe, eſq.

Sir Alexander Cave, of Bagrave bart. buried at Rotherby July 29, 1638.=Anne, dau. and heir of ſir John Brooks, of Brocket Hall, knt.

Frances, dau. of ſir Tho Nele, of Warnford, co. Southamp. 1ſt w.=Sir Thomas Cave, of Bagrave, in 1630.=Suſannah, 2d wife; afterwards married to Cha. Baghott.

Elizabeth. Margaret. Eleanor. Frances.

Thomas Cave, ſon and heir, 1652, of the Middle Temple, London, juriſperitus.

Euſebius. Henry. Edward. George.

Sir Rich. Cave, of Ingarſby, knt. ſon and heir. 1630.= . . . . . . dau. of ſir Eraſmus Dryden, of Canons Aſhby, co. Northampton, bart.

Frances. Anne. Elizabeth. Mary.

Capt. Francis Cave, of Ingarſby.=Rebecca, dau. of Robert Roper, of Heanor, co. Derby, eſq. and widow of ſir Will. Villiers, of Brokeſby.

Elizabeth, dau. and ſole heir.=William Wollaſton, eſq. high-ſheriff 1672-3.

Several children.

2. Francis Cave, of Barrowden, co. Rutland.=Anne, ſiſter and coheir of Geo. Durant, of Barrowden.

1. Anne, dau. and coheir, wife of . . . . Smith.
2. Frances, wife of . . . . Jenkinſon.
3. Elizabeth.
4. Temperance.

Iſabella, wife of Tobias Chippingdale. of Humberſtone.

Bridget, wife of James Bury, of Eaſton.

3. Thomas Cave, of Thorpe Sachevile.=Agnes, dau. of Tobias Houghton, of Kelthorp, co. Rutl.

1. William Cave, b. 1609.
2. Tobias.
3. John.

Anne, wife of Thomas Hunſton, of Walpole, co. Norfolk.

Katharine, wife of . . . Cheyney, of Granth.

Dorothy, wife of Arthur Evans.

Brian Cave, ſon and heir, of the Middle Temple, London, died ſ. p.

2. Rev. John Cave, rector of the church of Middleton Cheney, co. Northampton.= . . . . . dau. of Charnelle Petty, of Tetteſwell, co. Oxon. living 1652.

Rev. John Cave, M. A. rector, firſt, of Cole Overton, and afterwards of Nailſton, (where ſee an account of him) died 1690, æt. 52.= . . . . dau. of John St. John, eſq. of Cold Overton.

3. Eraſmus.
4. George, merchant of London.

Elizabeth.=John St. John, eſq. of Cold Overton; [of this family ſee vol. II. p. 141.]

Mary, wife of . . . . Lovon, of Leilk in Scotland.

Anne.

INGARSBY,

antiently called Ingwardby [1], Ingerſbie, Engarſby, Yngwardby, &c. a ſmall hamlet belonging to Hungerton pariſh, was, long ſince, the inheritance of the antient family of the Aungerviles [2].

The abbey of St. Ebrulf had formerly lands here, which were confirmed to them by Robert Boſſu earl of Leiceſter, together with two parts of the tithes of his demeſnes here [3].

Oct. 8, 1319, king Edward II. granted to John de Aungervile and his heirs liberty of free-warren in all their demeſne lands at Ingwardeby. "Hiis teſtibus; J. Elienſ' epiſcopo, cancellario noſtro; Thomâ com' Norfolc' & mareſcallo Anglie, fratre noſtro chariſſimo; Adomaro de Valentiâ, com' Pemb'; Humf' de Bohun, com' Heref' & Eſſex'; Hugone le Diſpenſer juniore; Johanne de Somerye, baronetto de Badleſmere, ſeneſcallo hoſpitii noſtri; et aliis. Dat', per manum noſtram, apud Ebor', viii die Octobris [4]."

Amongſt the hundred and ten houſes in Leiceſter town, which was the property of Hugo de Grenteſmainell, three belonged to Inwareſbie [5].

In 1346, Roger de Aungervile (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 6*s*. 8*d*. for a quarter of a knight's fee in Ingerſbie, parcel of the honour of Leiceſter [6].

"This manor, or the greateſt part thereof (as I find by an old note), was ſometimes belonging to the lords Percy, and by them given to the abbey of Leiceſter. Yet I find, by an Inquiſition taken 26 Edw. III. [7] that the whole manor of Engarſby, except 12 meſſuages, 12 yard-lands, and 11*d*. rent (worth 8*l*. 1*s*. 4*d*.) came to the abbey of Leiceſter by the grant of Simon Iſlip archbiſhop of Canterbury; who had it before of the feoffment and grant of John Byward of Leiceſter, Giles Cloune, Thomas de Leuiſthorpe, and William Aſton; and they had it of the grant and feoffement of ſir Roger de Aungervile, knight. This manor was held by the lord Grey of Codnor, by the ſervice of 75*s*. for three parts of a knight's fee, to be paid at the death or departure of every abbot [8]. Afterwards the abbot and convent of Leiceſter, partly by ſuit and partly by purchaſe, got of Thomas Aſhby of Louſeby and John Bellers the reſt of the lordſhip, the whole making one entire knight's fee [9]."

The property of the Abbey at this place is thus deſcribed in their Regiſter:

"Habemus in Ingwarby capellam pertinentem ad eccleſiam de Hungurton, cum decimis garbarum & feni, &c. ut in Matriculo epiſcopi, in hiis verbis: "Eccleſie de Hungurton patronus abbas Leyc', &c.; & habet capellam de Ingwarby, que conſuevit deſerviri iii diebus in ebdomate per matricem eccleſiam, ſcil', per compoſitionem inter abbatem Leyc' & rectorem de Hungurton, factam anno Dñi m°ccc°l°. Debet ibi eſſe unus capellanus ſingulis diebus & noctibus in perpetuum, continuè commorans, levans, & cubans, ad celebranda divina & adminiſtranda omnia ſacramenta & ſacramentalia, &c. qui habebit iiii lī. pro ſtipendio ſuo, &c. ut in comperto; ſc̄t in ordinatione vicariorum Hungurton & Humburſton ſic ſcribitur: "Religioſi viri predicti, ſcil', abbas & conventus Leyc', ſingulis ſeptimanis ter in capellâ de Yngwarby per idoneum preſbyterum divina faciant celebrari;" cujus dat' eſt anno Dñi m°ccc°liii°.

Monachi de Sc̄o Ebrulfo percipiunt ibi duas garbas de dominico Roberti de Angervill ab antiquo, ſecundùm Matriculum epiſcopi; unde nos ſolvimus annuatim priori de Shene pro dictis iii garbis ii s̄.

Mem', quòd progenitores đni Rogeri de Angervill ordinaverunt dictam capellam de Ingwarby, & eam paritèr dotaverunt, ut patet in ſcripturis.

Habemus ibidem totum manerium de Yngwarby, cum pertin', exceptis xii meſſuagiis, xii virgatis terre, xi đ. per annum, cum advocatione eccleſie ejuſdem, ex dono Simonis de Yſlep, Cantuarienſis archiepiſcopi, &c.; quòd ipſe epiſcopus priùs habuit ex dono & feoffamento Joħis Heyward de Leyc', Egidii Cloune, Thome de Leuiſthorp, & Wiłłi Aſton; & quòd ipſi priùs habuerunt ex dono & feoffamento Rogeri de Aungervill, militis; & cum licenciâ đni Edwardi regis illuſtriſſimi priùs petitâ & optentâ, & per cartam ejuſdem nobis datâ & conceſſâ. Quod quidem manerium tenetur de đno de Gray de Codoner in capite per ſervicium lxxv s̄. pro tribus partibus unius feodi militis, ſolvend' poſt mortem vel ceſſionem cujuſlibet abbatis, ſicut patet in cartâ x^{a}.

Notandum ibidem de auxilio dando ad filium maritandum vel filiam maritandam.

Mem', quòd manerium de Ingwarby recuperata fuit per breve đni regis de rect', ut patet in le Chartwary, anno regni regis Edwardi Tertii xxx°iii°.

Mem', quòd totus campus ibidem continet xlviii virgatas terre, & quelibet virgata continet xxiiii acras, & quelibet acra valet viii đ. Indè in dominico xii virgate, iii acre & dim', & dim' rode; & in villanagio nativorum xvii virgate & dim' pars, vel iii acre & dim' & dim' rode; & in manibus libere tenencium xviii virgate terre & dim'.

Et mem', quòd omnes liberi tenentes ibidem tenuerunt per ſervicium militare, ut patet in Rentalibus Galfridi de Sallow.

Habemus ibidem, de perquiſito abbatis & conventûs, unum meſſuagium & dimidiam virgatam terre, cum pertin', quondam Joħis Buntyng de Ingwarby, & ex feoffamento ejuſdem Joħis, & ex quietâ clamatione Wiłłi Fryſsby. Item ſolvimus regi pro licentiâ ad manum mortuam ix lī. xvii s̄. x đ.

Habemus ibi, ex dono & feoffamento Thome Aſsheby de Lowſby, & cum quietâ clamatione Wiłłi Aſsheby filii ejuſdem Thome & heredis, omnia terras & tenementa, prata, paſcua, paſturas, redditus, & ſervicia ix virgatarum terre & dim', ut dicitur, vel ix virgatarum, ſicut patet in cartâ, que ipſe Thomas habuit in villâ & in campis de Ingwarby, ut patet in cartis xiii & xvi ii^{i} libri de Chartwary; pro quibus ſolvimus ei $\overset{\text{xx}}{\text{iiii}}$ lī. tertio die Januarii, anno regni regis Henrici Sexti poſt Conqueſtum xxx°vi°; ad quam quidem ſolutionem frater Wiłłus Charyte, cum conſenſu abbatis & omnium fratrum, dedit xx lī. Mem', quòd predicte ix virgate terre tenebantur de abbate Leyc' per ſervicium ob̄. per annum.

Habemus ibi, ex dono & feoffamento Joħis Walton clerici & Wiłłi Catt clerici, duo tofta, quinque virgatas terre, & decem acras prati, cum pertin'; que omnia dicti Joħes & Wiłłus, cum licentiâ đni regis optentâ & gratiâ ſpeciali, per cartam eis data priùs recuperaverit per breve đni regis de recto, coram judicibus đni regis de communi banco, versùs Joħem Bellers, prout de recordo in dictâ curiâ remanenti pleniùs patet; & per finem levatam in curiâ đni regis apud Weſtm', &c. inter dictos Joħem & Wiłłum & Joħem Bellers, de dictis duobus toftis, quinque virgatis terre, &c.; & per cartam đni regis de mortizatione dictorum duorum toftorum, &c.; & per breve de privato ſigillo, & de dat' predict', auctoritate parliamenti, pro quatuor libris ſolutis in hanaperio, ſicut patet in cartis de omnibus predictis ſecundùm ordinem in 11° libro de Chartwary. Et pro predictis duobus toftis, v virgatis terre, & x acris prati, cum pertin', ſolvimus unâ die predicto Joħi Bellers c lī. & Ric' de Chambur l s̄ pro exitibus circa Recuvery. Item eidem viii lī. pro exitibus circa mortizationem dictorum toftorum, virgatarum, &c.

---

[1] An Ing is a word frequently uſed in Lincolnſhire, and is derived from the Daniſh Ing, a meadow; Gazophyl. Anglic.—And Hubba and Ingwar were two Saxon commanders.

[2] MS. Burton.

[3] Vet. Rot. in Bibl. Cotton.

[4] Cart. 13 Edw. II. N° 24.

[5] "3 domus pertinentes ab Inwareſbie." Ibid. fol. 230. a. 1.

[6] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[7] See this Inquiſition at large in the Appendix to vol. I. p. 63.

[8] From the Abbey Regiſter.

[9] Burton, MS.

Mem', quòd in feſto Sc̄i Martini ep̄i in yeme, anno regni regis Edwardi Quarti poſt Conqueſtum octavo, ſeiſina de II toftis, v virgatis terre, & x acris prati, cum pertin', in Ingwarby, quondam Joħis Bellers, deliberata fuit ſecundùm formam & exigenciam cujuſdam carte, ſcil' J. Walteri & W. Catt, clericorum, feoffatorum noſtrorum; preſentibus adtunc & ibidem Gilberto Mancheſter adtunc celarario abbathie Leyc', Thomâ Aſsheby de Quenby armigero, Thomâ filio ejus & herede, Ric̄o Reynold de Leyc', W. Ry de eâdem, & Chriſtofero Grampton, vic' de Thurnby, & W. tunc capellano de Ingwarby, ac omnibus tenentibus ibidem commorantibus.

Yngwarby

Habemus modò totum dominicum de Ingwarby in proprios uſus; ſcil', capellam cum pertinentiis, manerium cum pertinentiis ſuis, cum omnibus ortis, pomariis, vinariis, clauſuris, croftis, paſcuis, & paſturis, campis, ſemitis, aquis, & cum omnibus terris, foſſis, & foſſatis, infra bundas & limites in campis de Yngwarby; & cum incremento & proficuo cccc ovium & aliorum animalium groſſorum & parvorum in campis ibi paſcentium; & cum omnibus matricibus vaccis, equabus, ſuiculis, & cum exitibus earum; & cum granis, graminibus, & fenis, ibi exiſtentibus, &c.; que omnia hìc non extenduntur, quia in propriis manibus ſunt. Tamen valent nobis per annum, ſecundùm eſtimationem, ultra repriſas, L lī.

Mem', quòd in omnibus iſtis locis predictis de Ingwarby habemus liberam warennam, tam in aquis quàm in terris, &c. ut patet in cartâ.

Reſolutiones; ſcil', priori de Schen II s̄. ut ſuprà. Item đno de Grey de Codenoure LXXV s̄. ut ſuprà, poſt mortem vel ceſſionem cujuſlibet abbatis [1]."

In 1385, a receipt for 7*s.* occurs, from John Grey, lord of Codenore and Yngwarby, given to ſir William de Aſteley, for the relief of certain lands and tenements, together with the advowſon of the church of Wylleby Watles, formerly ſir Ralph de Aungervile's, for a portion of a knight's fee belonging to the manor of Ingwarby, then in the hands of the abbot of Leiceſter; namely, 6*s.* 8*d.* for the fifteenth part of a knight's fee; and 4*d.* more, as agreed by the ſaid ſir William and the abbot [2].

In 1399, Thomas Mowbray duke of Norfolk died ſeiſed of a quarter of a knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Yngwardby [3].

In 1432, John duke of Norfolk died ſeiſed of half a knight's fee in Ingwardby (parcel of the caſtle of Framlirgham [4], co. Suffolk), which the abbot of Leiceſter held [5].

In 1461, John Mowbray duke of Norfolk died ſeiſed of half a knight's fee in Ingwardby, which the abbot of Leiceſter and Joan Beler held [6].

In 1469, the abbot and convent of Leiceſter being they ſeiſed of the whole manor of Ingarſby, incloſed the open fields thereof (the whole charge of the hedging, ditching, and fencing, amounting to 74*l.* 11*s.* 9*d.*); after which, they made this their principal Grange [7], and continued in the quiet enjoyment of it till the diſſolution of this Abbey. The proceedings on occaſion of this incloſure were entered with great regularity in their Regiſters; and atteſted by a number of the principal inhabitants of the neighbouring villages:

"Et mem', quòd eodem anno ſequente totum dominium de Ingwarby fuit foſſatum circumquaque; pro cujus foſſacione & plantacione ſolvimus diverſis operantibus ib̄m $\overset{\text{xx}}{\text{iii}}$xiiii lī. xvi s̄. ix đ. Summa totalis perquiſitionis̄ & foſſationis, cc$\overset{\text{xx}}{\text{iii}}$xiiii lī. xvi s̄. ix đ. Et mem', quòd facta fuit hec perquiſitio & foſſatio anno Dn̄i MCCCCLXIX, & anno regni regis Edwardi Quarti poſt Conqueſtum octavo; tempore fratris Joħis Pomerey, tunc abbatis monaſterii Leyc', & fratris Wiłłi Charyte, tunc prioris ejuſdem monaſterii, &c.

Mem', quòd diviſimus diverſas parcellas terre ex noſtris propriis in campis de Ingwarby extra foſſas ibi factas, ut patet per certa ſigna, bundas, & metas ibi poſitas, eâ de causâ, ut meliùs potuerimus cariare & vehere cariagia noſtra ad foſſas, ſepes, & hujuſmodi emendas, cùm neceſſe fuerit, ſine gravamine vicinorum noſtrorum; quarum una parcella jacet extra portam Orientalem uſque Coplow, extendens ſe à dictâ portâ uſque ad crucem & ultra, per latitudinem dim' acre terre; quam quidem parcellam Joħes Weylt de Bylſedon modò tenuit, & reddidit VIII đ.

Et memorand', quòd antequàm infoſſavimus predictam paſturam, advocavimus de omni villâ circumjacente eidem dominio de Yngwarby teſtes ſubſcriptos, qui fuerunt videntes preſentes diviſionem foſſe, affirmantes veram equitatem & juſtitiam fieri inter nos & illos illorum dominos, in viis, ſemitis, & limitibus, bundis, meris, & ceteris omnibus, in diviſione dicte paſture.

TESTES. Buſbe. Rob̄tus Gymmys, Joħes Foſter. Thomas Sawkyn, omnes liberè tenentes.

Thurnbe. Item Rycardus Brygge, Joħes Cowper, Joħes Bale, Wiłłus Ywyt, Joħes Oone, liberè tenentes.

Howton. Thomas Worth, Thomas Eyrike, Johannes, Robertus Ewyngton, Joħes Tyrlyngton, Johannes Dawkyn, Joħes Robynſon ballivus đni de la Sowche, Joħes Pache, Wyłłus Fretheby, Rogerus Alyn, tenentes ad voluntatem.

Scraptoft. Wyłłm̄s Wylkyns firmarius prioris de Coventre, Joħes Croxton, Joħes Symkyn, Rob̄tus Palmer, Joħes Bate, Joħes Talyad, Joħes Kyng, Rob̄tus Kyng, Henricus Preſton, Rob̄tus Thurnby, Ric̄us Byrde, tn', Ric̄us Howteſton, & Wyłłus Heſylrygge, armigeri.

Cayham. Liberè tenentes; Joħes Hooſe, Ric̄us Wyntyrton, Joħes Woton, Joħes Woddecoke, Joħes Baldryke, Wyłłus Whatton, Joħes Herberd.

Hungerton. Ric̄us Bate ſenior, Chriſtoferus Wodecoke, Chriſtoferus Wyndeſor, Robertus Leſonne, Wiłłus Cohethe, Joħes Denton, Radulphus Elys, Joħes Farewell.

Quenby. Thomas Aſcheby generoſus, & đnus ville, partivit, vel partitus fuit, terram manibus propriis; Ric̄us Chapman, Ric̄us Halyday, Thomas Hymlyſe.

Billuſdon. Thomas Schewyngton generoſus, Thomas Buſton, Joħes Burdet, Walterus Stafford, Joħes Sturges, Wiłłs Wynſlooe, Wiłłus Woddard, Joħes Torres, Ric̄us Bobe, omnes liberè tenentes."

Among the nativi of the abbey were two belonging to Yngwarby; Henry Peil', who lived at Ketinga; and John Peil', who reſided at Friſby or Wygenſton [8].

By a letter from John abbot of Leiceſter to the lord Cromwell, it appears that the fair lands of this lordſhip were a tempting object to "Maſter Richard Layton," one of the commiſſioners employed in viſiting the religious houſes; and that a preſent of £100. was applied, to ward off the ſeizure of the "only demeane lands the abbey then enjoyed, and without which they could neither bring up beves nor muttons for the mayntenance of their hoſpytalytes [9]."

In 1530, ſoon after the diſſolution of the abbey, the manor of Ingarſby was granted to Brian Cave [10]; who, in 1561, jointly with Edward Williams, obtained a farther grant of lands in Leiceſterſhire and Warwickſhire [11].

About the year 1609, Henry Cave held the manor of Ingarſby and the impropriation of Hungerton; and in 1642 Mr. Burton obſerves, that "this manor not long ſince did belong to ſir Brian Cave, bart. [12] but that it was then the inheritance of ſir Robert Banaſter, knight." This gentleman, as we learn from the inſcription upon his monument[1], was born in Shropſhire, and brought up in the court, where he became a ſervant to three princes. He had three wives and ſeveral children; but none ſurvived him, except Dorothy his only daughter by the laſt wife. This lady was the firſt wife of William lord Maynard, who in her right became lord of the manor of Paſſenham. By her he had iſſue two ſons, Banaſter and William. Banaſter the eldeſt ſucceeded his father in his honours; but the manor of Paſſenham appears to have been aſſigned to William his younger brother. This gentleman was firſt married to Jane the widow of ſir Thomas Fiſher, bart. and one of the daughters and coheirs of ſir John Preſcot, knt. who died without iſſue March 1, 1675. His ſecond wife was Suſan, the daughter and heir of Thomas Evans, eſq. of Bow in Middleſex, by whom he left iſſue two ſons Thomas and Preſcot; and one daughter Anne. Thomas Maynard, eſq. the eldeſt ſon, was appointed one of the commiſſioners of the cuſtoms March 27, 1722; and was living, lord of the manor of Paſſenham, in 1729.

---

[1] Charyte's Rentale, fol. lxvi. b.—lxvii. b.

[2] Appendix to vol. I. p. 72.

[3] Eſch. 1 Hen. IV. N° 71. Leic.

[4] For the family of Mowbray duke of Norfolk, ſee Mr. Loder's Hiſtory of Framlingham, 1798, 4to, paſſim.

[5] Eſch. 11 Hen. VI. N° 43. Leic.

[6] Eſch. 1 Edw. IV. N° 46. Leic.

[7] A grange is deſcribed to be certain lands and buildings thereon for the maintenance of huſbandry, for fattening of the poultry, and other proviſion for the neceſſary uſe of the monaſtery to which it belonged, and which was occupied by their own ſervants; agreeing with which is Lindwode's definition: "Dicuntur (ſaith he) grangiæ, domus ſive edificie, non ſolùm ubi reponuntur grana, ut ſunt horrea, ſed etiam ubi ſunt ſtabula pro equis, boſteria ſive proſepia pro bobus & aliis animalibus, caule pro ovibus, porcitere pro porcis, & ſic de aliis quæ pertinent ad œconomiam; & ſunt loca deputata ſervientibus ad agriculturam & opera ruſtica." Burton, MS.

[8] Appendix to vol. I. p. 7.

[9] See the letter at large in vol. I. p. cxlii.

[10] 1 Pars Original. 31 Hen. VIII. Rot. 208.

[11] 1 Pars Original. 3 Eliz. Rot. 176.

[12] Burton, MS.

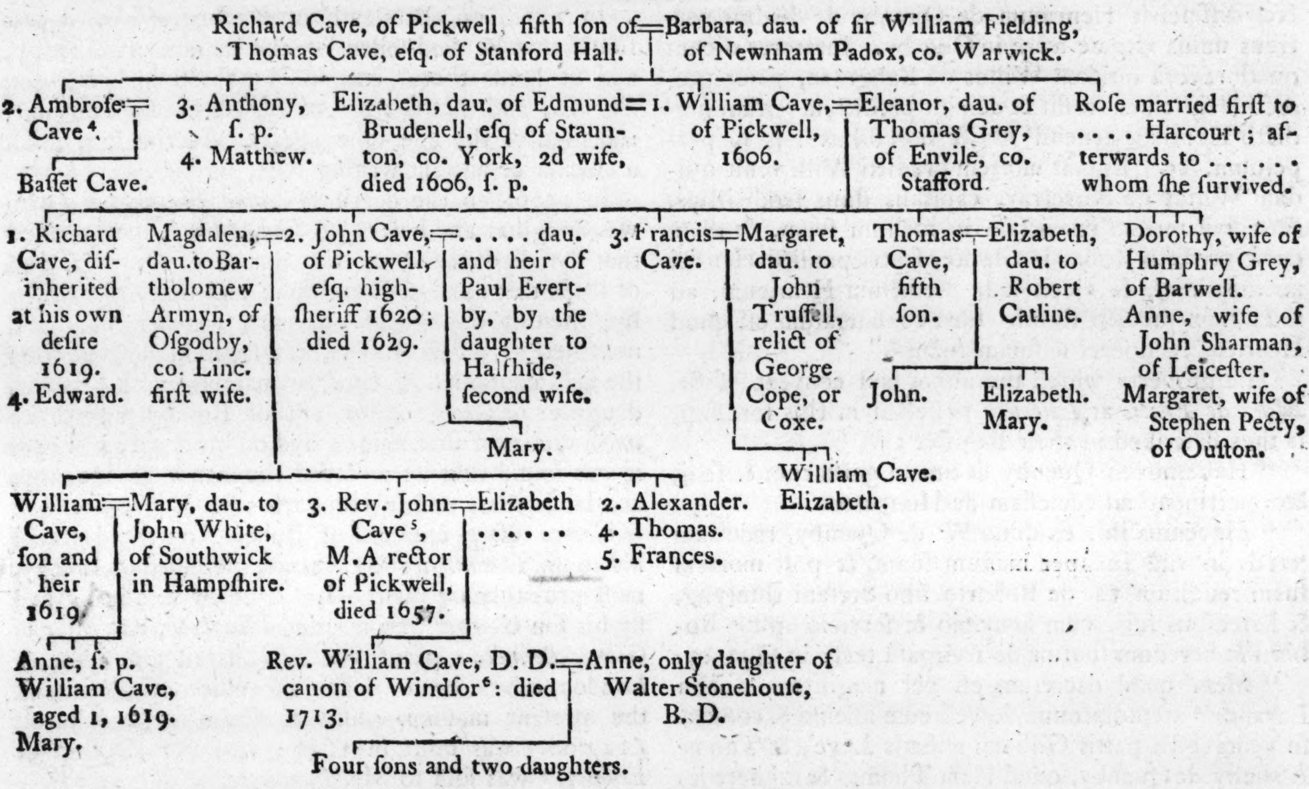
Leland ſays, "From Bellegrave to Ingreſby 4 miles, partly by corn, paſture, and woddy ground. This lordſhip longgid ons to one Algernoune, and after it was given to Leyrceſter Abbey. Now it is Brian Cave's, that boute it of the king. It ſtondith very well, and the grounde aboute it is very riche of paſture[2]."

Ingarſby has been ſaid to be the ſoundeſt land in the county; yet Mr. Richard Bates of this place loſt all his ſheep in the rot of 1757.

Mr. Roper ſays, "There was a family of gentlemen, ſome time lords of Willeſley near Aſhby de la Zouch, called Ingwardby. Peradventure they might come from hence. I have ſeen ſome of their deeds ſealed thus, "S. REGINALDI DE INGWARDBY;" Plate XLVIII. fig. 2.

Ingarſby had formerly a chapel within it; but it now no longer exiſts. It pays £8. in money to the vicar of Hungarton[3].

Pedigree of CAVE, of PICKWELL.



Richard Cave, of Pickwell, fifth ſon of Thomas Cave, eſq. of Stanford Hall. = Barbara, dau. of ſir William Fielding, of Newnham Padox, co. Warwick.

2. Ambroſe Cave[4]. = ; Baſſet Cave.
3. Anthony, ſ. p.
4. Matthew.
Elizabeth, dau. of Edmund Brudenell, eſq of Staunton, co. York, 2d wife, died 1606, ſ. p. = 1. William Cave, of Pickwell, 1606. = Eleanor, dau. of Thomas Grey, of Envile, co. Stafford.
Roſe married firſt to .... Harcourt; afterwards to ...... whom ſhe ſurvived.

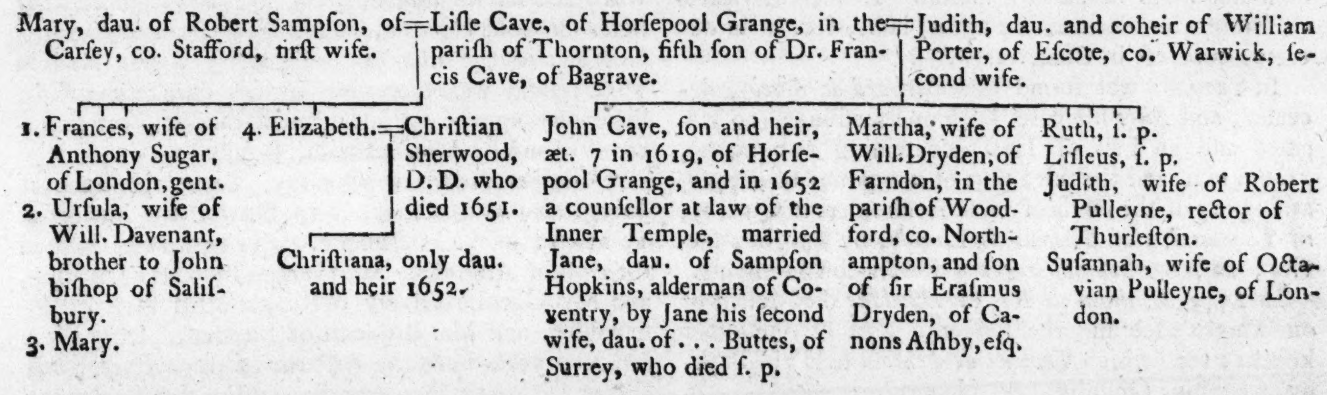
1. Richard Cave, diſinherited at his own deſire 1619.
4. Edward.
Magdalen, dau. to Bartholomew Armyn, of Oſgodby, co. Linc. firſt wife. = 2. John Cave, of Pickwell, eſq. high-ſheriff 1620; died 1629. = ... dau. and heir of Paul Evertby, by the daughter to Halfhide, ſecond wife.; Mary.
3. Francis Cave. = Margaret, dau. to John Truſſell, relict of George Cope, or Coxe.; William Cave. Elizabeth.
Thomas Cave, fifth ſon. = Elizabeth, dau. to Robert Catline.; John. Elizabeth. Mary.
Dorothy, wife of Humphry Grey, of Barwell.
Anne, wife of John Sharman, of Leiceſter.
Margaret, wife of Stephen Pecty, of Ouſton.

William Cave, ſon and heir 1619. = Mary, dau. to John White, of Southwick in Hampſhire.; Anne, ſ. p. William Cave, aged 1, 1619. Mary.
3. Rev. John Cave[5], M.A rector of Pickwell, died 1657. = Elizabeth ......
2. Alexander.
4. Thomas.
5. Frances.

Rev. William Cave, D. D. canon of Windſor[6]: died 1713. = Anne, only daughter of Walter Stonehouſe, B. D.

Four ſons and two daughters.

Pedigree of CAVE, of HORSEPOOL GRANGE.



Mary, dau. of Robert Sampſon, of Carſey, co. Stafford, firſt wife. = Liſle Cave, of Horſepool Grange, in the pariſh of Thornton, fifth ſon of Dr. Francis Cave, of Bagrave. = Judith, dau. and coheir of William Porter, of Eſcote, co. Warwick, ſecond wife.

1. Frances, wife of Anthony Sugar, of London, gent.
2. Urſula, wife of Will. Davenant, brother to John biſhop of Saliſbury.
3. Mary.
4. Elizabeth. = Chriſtian Sherwood, D. D. who died 1651.; Chriſtiana, only dau. and heir 1652.
John Cave, ſon and heir, æt. 7 in 1619, of Horſepool Grange, and in 1652 a counſellor at law of the Inner Temple, married Jane, dau. of Sampſon Hopkins, alderman of Coventry, by Jane his ſecond wife, dau. of ... Buttes, of Surrey, who died ſ. p.
Martha, wife of Will. Dryden, of Farndon, in the pariſh of Woodford, co. Northampton, and ſon of ſir Eraſmus Dryden, of Canons Aſhby, eſq.
Ruth, ſ. p.
Liſleus, ſ. p.
Judith, wife of Robert Pulleyne, rector of Thurleſton.
Suſannah, wife of Octavian Pulleyne, of London.

---

[1] The chancel of Paſſenham church in Northamptonſhire is a neat building, raiſed and beautified by ſir Robert Banaſtre, at his own expence, in 1662, as appears by the following inſcription, written in letters of gold on the North ſide of it, "ROBERTVS BANASTREIVS, miles, hanc ſacram ædem (ad laudem Dei) propriis ſumptibus condidit ætatis ſuæ anno 56, annoque 1626." On the South wall of this chancel is a handſome monument, compoſed of black and red-veined marble, and embelliſhed with gold. At the top, in a ſhield, Argent, a croſs flory Sable, in a feſs point a beſant; Plate XLI. fig. 9. and beneath, in an oval, is repreſented in white marble the buſto of a man in the habit of the times, with a book in his right hand, and under him this inſcription on a tablet of black marble:

"MEMORIÆ SACRUM.
SIR ROBERT BANASTRE, KNT. BORNE AT WEM, IN THE COUNTIE OF SALOP, BRED IN THE COURT,
WHERE HE SERVED THREE PRINCES IN PLACES EMINENT; A MAN PRUDENT, CHARITABLE, AND VERY INDUSTRIOUS.
HEE BUILT AND BEAUTIFIED THIS FAIRE CHANCEL, WHERE HIS BODY IS INTERRED.
HEE HAD THREE WIVES AND SEVERAL CHILDREN; AND BY HIS LAST ONE ONLY DAUGHTER, MARRIED TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE LORD MAYNARD, BY WHOM HEE HAD THE MANNOR-COURT.
HEE DYED THE XVTH OF DECEMBER, 1649, AGED ABOUT 80."

[2] See before, p. 284.

[3] Leland, vol. I. p. 22.

[4] Sir Ambroſe Cave was chancellor of the dutchy of Lancaſter; and his ſiſter Elizabeth was married to William Wyrley, eſq. Shaw, vol. II. p. 173. In Strype's Annals, vol. I. Appendix, XXXVI. is a letter to him from Queen Elizabeth, to enquire into an eſtate, called Till Pits, in Hertfordſhire, taken away from William Heydon, late of Bedwell in that county, by Cardinal Wolſey.

[5] See an account of him, vol. II. p. 773, where, l. 1. for "Elizabeth Brudenell," r. "Magdalen Armyn." Elizabeth Brudenell was the ſecond wife of William Cave, eſq.—Correct alſo a ſimilar blunder in the Brudenell pedigree, vol. II. p. 823.

[6] See an account of him and his other preferments, vol. II. p. 773.

QUENBY[1], a pleaſant manſion, about ſeven miles diſtant from Leiceſter, is not mentioned ſeparately in Domeſday Book, being probably then included under Hungerton, and the property of Robert de Todeni.

Two ploughlands and a half at Quenby were held by Walter under William; but the ſtatement of their value is blended with that of four ploughlands in South Croxton; the whole being deſcribed as one manor, and worth thirty ſhillings[2].

The earlieſt mention that I have met with of this place, which has been for many generations the inheritance of the antient family of Aſhby, is in the following legal proceſs of 1247:

"Aſſiſa venit, &c. ſi Robtus le Clerke de Quenby, &c. diſſeſeivit Henricum de Quenby de duabus partibus unius virgate terre in Quenby. Juratores dicunt quod reverà quidam Wiłłus de Babgrave, pater predicti Henrici, conceſſit & demiſit predictam terram predicto Henrico, tenend' ſibi & heredibus ſuis in perpetuum, &c. Et poſt mortem predicti Wiłłi venit quidam Wiłłus de Nuverray, capitalis d̄nus feodi illius, & ſeiſivit terram predictam in manum ſuam, & illam dedit predicto Robto le Clerke, fratri predicti Henrici antenominati, & ejecit inde predictum Henricum, ad inſtantiam predicti Robti. Ideo conſideratum eſt quod Henricus recuperet ſeiſinam ſuam[3]."

The property which the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter poſſeſſed in this lordſhip, is thus deſcribed in their Regiſter:

"Habemus in Quenby decimam garbarum & feni, &c. pertinent' ad eccleſiam de Hungerton.

"Habemus ibi, ex dono W. de Quenby, redditum xii d̄. in vitâ ſuâ per manum ſuam, & poſt mortem ſuam redditum v s̄. de Roberto filio Stefani Buntyng, & heredibus ſuis, cum homagio & ſervicio ipſius Roberti & heredum ſuorum de i virgatâ terre in Quenby.

"Mem' quod decretum eſt per magiſtrum Ric̄um Lavandr'[4] archidiaconum Leyc', cum aſſenſu & conſenſu venerabilis patris Gilberti abbatis Leyc', & Thome Aſsheby de Quenby, quod idem Thomas & ſui heredes ſolvent annuatim, ad feſtum Michaelis, monaſterio Leyc', xl s̄. per annum, pro omnimodis decimis ſui dominici nunc in paſturâ incluſi. Et ſolvent vicario de Hungurton decimam de agnis, lanis, &c. ut in decreto, quod eſt in Chartwary[5]."

In 1304, it was found that Richard de Aſheby, deceaſed, and Alice his wife, held one meſſuage, 10 virgates and an half of land (containing 200 acres), 5*s*. 6*d*. rent, and the third part of one pound of pepper, ariſing out of the lands of three freeholders in Quenby, of Thomas ſon of Thomas de Lincoln, by knight's ſervice; and that John de Segrave was his ſon and heir[6].

In 1343, William de Ros of Hamlake died ſeiſed of one knight's fee and the ſixteenth part of one other knight's fee (which Thomas de Lincoln held) in Barkby, Croxton, Quenby, and Howes[7].

In 1346, William de Aſhby (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 3*s*. 4*d*. for a twelfth part of one knight's fee, and William le Botiler 3*s*. 4*d*. for a twelfth part of one knight's fee, in Quenby, parcel of the fee of Ros[8].

In 1363, it was found that Margery widow of William de Ros of Hamlake died ſeiſed of one knight's fee, half a quarter and the ſixteenth part of one knight's fee, in Barkby, Croxton, Hungerton, Quenby, and Howes, which Thomas de Lincoln held[9].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laiety in 1416, Quenby was rated at 18*s*. 6*d*.; and in the ſubſidy of 1445 at the ſame ſum; but 2*s*. 6*d*. was then abated.

In 1440, George Aſhby the elder was a benefactor to the chantry of Lapworth, co. Warwick, by giving lands there and at Nuthurſt in that county[10].

In 1461, John Mowbray duke of Norfolk died ſeiſed of one knight's fee in Dalby Parva, Quenby, and Sixtenby, which the heir of Thomas Walke held[11].

The manor of Quenby was in grant from the crown to the Aſhbys previous to 1 Richard III.

In 1514, on the death of William Aſhby, it was found that he died ſeiſed of the manor of Quenby, and of lands there, and in Houghton and Newton Burdet; and that George Aſhby was his ſon and heir, and then of the age of 23 years. In this inquiſition a charter or antient writing is ſet forth[12].

In 1536, on the death of Anne Skevington (who was daughter and heir of William Aſhby), it was found that ſhe died ſeiſed of the manor of Quenby, and of lands there and at Houghton; and that Robert Aſhby, then of the age of 19 years, was her couſin and next heir[13]. This Robert, the ſixth in deſcent from the firſt-mentioned Richard, by marriage with Barbara, daughter of George Aſhby, eſq. of Loſeby, united the two families of that name; and on his death, in 1558, it was found that he poſſeſſed the manor of Quenby, and lands there and in Hungarton[14].

George Aſhby, eſq. ſon of Robert, on the death of his couſin Thomas in 1604, became poſſeſſed of Loſeby, moſt probably by purchaſe. He died in 16[illegible]; and by his ſon George, who married Elizabeth, daughter of George Bennet, eſq. of Welby (citizen and ſalter of London, where he fined for the office of alderman), the preſent manſion-houſe at Quenby (which coſt £12,000.) was built in 1636; and the lordſhip of Loſeby[15] was ſold to Mr. Paramore.

Previous to his ſon's marriage with Mary ſole heir of Euſeby Shukbrugh, of Naſeby, eſq. (whoſe fortune was £2000.) he joined, May 21, 1652, in ſettling lands in Cold Newton, called Fulbeck and Newton Coplow, to the uſes of the marriage. He died in 1653; and was ſucceeded by his ſon, from whoſe hand-writing the following memorandum, communicated to me by Mrs. Latham, is taken:

"George Aſhbie, of Quenby, borne the 29th of July, being Wedneſday, 1629, betwixt the howers of 10 and 11 in the afternoone, Aries 15; and baptized the 13th of Auguſt by Mr. George Bennett of Welby, and Mr. Garviſe Olvery of Staplefourd in Nottinghamſhire, and Mr. Brudnall of Stanton. It is three hundred years ſince the firſt riſe of the Aſhbies. My Father hath writeings ever ſince king John's dayes." This ſecond George died in 1672; and left his ſon and heir, the third George, a minor.

An undated letter[16], written by Mrs. Elizabeth Aſhby, relict of John Aſhby, merchant in London, to George Aſhby, eſq. of Quenby, probably about 1670, gives the following account of their alliances:

"The atchievements of George Aſhbie, alias Aſhbough, of Quenby, co. Leiceſter, eſq. together with the ſeveral families which the Aſhbys have married:

---

[1] On the monument of Mary Hall, daughter of George Aſhby, and wife of Henry Hall, in Poplar chapel, it is called Quenby; but this is evidently by a miſtake of the ſtone-cutter. See Lyſons's Environs of London, vol. III. p. 463.

[2] See before, under South Croxton, p. 231.

[3] Placita de anno 31 Hen. III. in Recept. Scaccarii, Rot. 9.

[4] This muſt have been between the years 1485, when Lavender became archdeacon, and 1489, when Thomas Aſhby died.

[5] Charyte's Rentale, fol. cxx. b.

[6] Eſch. 35 Edw. I. N° 49. Leic.

[7] Eſch. 17 Edw III. N° 60. Leic.

[8] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[9] Eſch. 37 Edw. III. N° 62. Leic.

[10] Dugdale's Warwickſhire, vol. II. p. 742.

[11] Eſch. 1 Edw. IV. N° 46. Leic.

[12] Inq. 4 Nov. 6 Hen. VIII. N° 114. in the Rolls chapel.

[13] Inq. 3 Oct. 28 Hen. VIII. N° 112. in the Rolls chapel.

[14] Inq. 24 Oct. 5 & 6 Philip & Mary, N° 108. in the Rolls chapel.

[15] See hereafter, under that pariſh.

[16] See her hand-writing in Plate XLI.; and a letter of another Elizabeth Aſhby, in vol. II. p. 681.

The great eſcutcheon is of Aſhby of Quenby, Azure, a chevron Ermine between three leopards' faces Or, impaled with Shukbrugh of Naſeby; Sable, a chevron between three mullets Argent; Plate XLI. fig. 4.

Upon the dexter Aſhby is,

1. Argent, a chevron Sable between three haſle-leaves Vert, by the name of Heſilrige, fig. 10.

2. Ermine, a bend counter-compony, Argent and Sable, by the name of Curzon, fig. 11.

3. Argent, three bulls heads eraſed Sable, armed Or, by the name of Skeffington; fig. 12.

4. Argent, a lion rampant Sable, armed and langued Gules, a chief Gules, by the name of Aſhby of Loſeby, fig. 13.

5. Or, a feſs Vert, cotized Gules, by the name of Enderby, fig. 14.

6. Argent, two lucies in ſaltire Azure, by the name of Gedney of Ancaſter, fig. 15.

7. Parted per pale, Argent and Gules, two bars embattled and counterchanged on the field, by the name of Dennett, fig. 16.

Upon the ſiniſter Aſhby is,

1. Argent, a bend engrailed Sable, a creſcent Sable, by the name of Ratcliffe, fig. 17.

3. Gules, 10 bezants, 4. 3. 2. 1. by the name of Zouch; fig. 18.

4. Ermine, three chaplets Or, on a bend Gules, by the name of Martivall; fig. 19.

5. Azure, two bars Argent, by the name of Aſhby of Loſeby, fig. 20.

The mantle of Aſhby of Quenby is, Gules, doubled Argent.

The Herald finds it in his books, that the antient name of Aſhby was Aſhbowe; therefore hath fancied to put it in this form as you ſee; but may be you may put it into a better form, now you ſee the matches with this family, and better colours. I cauſed another draught to be drawn with the Aſhbys alone, with the creſt and mantle, that you may make your choice which you like beſt; or it may be, if the table be a ſquare one, you may add the creſt and mantle to that with the Aſhbowe. But who muſt pay for this now? For my part, I cannot: for here is ſuch a ſcarcity of corn, I think I ſhall ſpend all I have. Barley is five ſhillings a ſtrike; but, if you think good to have one, I ſhall pay for the tranſporting of it, and ſhall keep it for you as ſafe as I can. I deſire to enjoy it but for my life. My charge is ſo great, and rents ſo fallen, that I can but juſt make both ends meet. I wiſh you would ſo forecaſt your buſineſs, that you would come over, and be an aſſiſtance to me; for I have no help of your brother, but am fain to leave all to ſervants. If you would come over, as ſoon as my mother is dead, I would break up houſe, and come and live with you; but, if I ſhould go away before, I might loſe all, for ſhe grows very weak. I am afraid ſhe will grow a child, and then I know not what will become of all; for ſhe will not be got away. Your brother Aſhby hath ſo much employment about his own affairs, he cannot be helpful to me: he is going to incloſe Naſeby They take it unkindly you never write to them.

ELIZABETH ASHBY."

Mary, widow of the firſt George Aſhby, eſq. either by purchaſe or otherwiſe, became poſſeſſed of the manor and impropriate rectory of Twyford; and afterwards was re-married to George Hewett, eſq. of Rotherby, who joined with her in ſettling the ſaid manor, June 10, 1682, previous to the marriage of her grandſon George Aſhby and Hannah Waring. Previous alſo to the ſaid marriage, a ſettlement was in like manner made of the manor of Quenby, the capital meſſuage there, the manor of Hungerton; a meſſuage and four yardlands in Hungerton, in the tenure of Daniel Chamberlaine; a meſſuage and ſix yardlands, in the tenure of Samuel Davenport; a meſſuage and ſix yardlands, in the tenure of Matthew Taylor; ſome cottages, in the tenure of Thomas Dalby, ... Davye, and Richard Biſhop; a meſſuage, farm, and four yardlands, in Hungerton, in the tenure of John Cartwright; ſix yardlands, in the tenure of William Tipler, Thomas Dalby, Richard Biſhop, John Gamble, William Pick, William Ratcliff, and Thomas Ayliff; a meſſuage, called Maſon's Farm, in the tenure of Valentine Collins, and other parcels particularly deſcribed; the rectory and impropriate church and tithes of Hungerton; the manor and impropriate rectory of Twyford; the cloſes in Newton, called Fulbeck and Coplow; certain parcels in Naveſby, particularly deſcribed; the impropriate rectory of Naveſby, with the tithes and glebe-lands; the advowſons of Hungerton, Twyford, and Naveſby; and all other the lands in England which had been the property of the third George's father.

George Aſhby, eſq. the fourth of the name, was repreſentative in parliament for the county of Leiceſter in 1695 and 1707 [1]; and high ſheriff in 1688-9. By his wife Hannah, he had ſeven ſons and four daughters; and, dying in February, 1728, was buried at Hungerton. This gentleman, uſually ſtyled "honeſt George Aſhby the Planter" from his attachment to that pleaſing and rational purſuit, was known to Mr. Evelyn from this circumſtance, who is ſaid to have made him a viſit at Quenby. Nine fine cedars of Lebanon were planted by him, probably from a cone brought over or procured by his uncle William Aſhby, a Turkey merchant. Theſe fine trees were in a flouriſhing condition when Mr. Shukbrugh Aſhby came to the eſtate; but, being blocked up by other trees from ſight, he laid them open to view; which they took ſo ill, that they immediately all died. Mr. Aſhby very properly applied the wood to the wainſcotting of the Eaſt end of Hungerton chancel.

"I once ſaw them," ſays a friend, "in a deep ſnow, when their long and horizontally-ſpread branches ſunk gradually under the weight, till at laſt, by a ſpring, they ſhook off their load, and reſtored themſelves. I remember the ſcene was a moſt curious one; as I viewed it from the leads of the houſe, a moſt vivid Aurora borealis played by its reflected lights on the tops of the then numerous trees."

He was ſucceeded by his ſon Waring Aſhby, eſq. a gentleman of moſt engaging addreſs and hoſpitable manners. He ſerved the office of high ſheriff for the county in 1733; and died in 1770.

George Aſhby, eſq. his ſon, who reſides at Haſelbeech Hall, co. Northampton, near his eſtate at Naſeby, is a truly worthy gentleman, and univerſally reſpected [2].

The purchaſer of Quenby was a near relation, Shukbrugh Aſhby, eſq. of Blaby, a gentleman of firſt-rate moral and literary attainments; under whoſe benignant care a village of new cottages was ſoon erected at Hungerton, which he permitted the inhabitants to enjoy at the trifling quit-rent of 6*d*. a year; beſides which, he furniſhed other comfortable and reſpectable-looking houſes for tenants upon the Quenby land.

Mr. Shukbrugh Aſhby dying Jan. 18, 1792, after having languiſhed for ſome years in a ſtate of debility, occaſioned by paralytic ſtrokes; the manor and eſtate of Quenby became, by the entail, the property of his brother Nathanael Aſhby, who is unmarried; and if he dies without iſſue, the property at Quenby will deſcend to his two nieces, Mrs. Latham and lady Apreece.

The following picture of Mr. Aſhby's mind is ſo faithfully delineated, that no apology will be neceſſary for introducing it here. "To ſuffer the traits of a deſerving character to ſink into oblivion my mind revolts at; and more ſo, when I daily read panegyricks upon the memory of others, who, perhaps, poſſeſſed not a tenth part the worth of merit of him I mean. No, my father! thou ſhalt not be forgot. Take then to thy memory my offering incenſe of affection and reverence: the tribute of truth has been already paid; while he, whoſe ſacred hand penned out the 15th Pſalm, pointed then the finger of Truth to thy perfect likeneſs. Nor will the following ſketches of outline fail the notice of recollection of many who reſpected the late worthy original, whoſe inclination ſcrupled large ſocieties unleſs as an unknown ſpectator, or that his preſence was neceſſary to general good; but whoſe courage was amply ſufficient of ſupport in an unexpected attack upon his conſtitution, which, he was ſenſible, threatened either his immediate or procraſtinated death. In that dilemma he ſhewed himſelf the man of courageous fortitude, and pious reſignation. In health, his amuſements led him to retirement; for, the expanſe of his ideas of ambition was only to make happy thoſe around him. He would lay out plans for that purpoſe, which were as often known to be put in execution; and the method he has frequently taken to ſettle grievances with his tenants has been by the return of rent back again into the needy man's hand, who has returned to his family with a prayer in his heart that cannot have been thrown away. But not to them alone did he limit his bounty; gratitude is not ſo rare a commodity but it will ſpeak at other places. Though he poſſeſſed in an eminent degree both a great mind and a good heart, yet, as not poſſeſſing one particle of worldly cunning, theſe qualities laid him open at times to the impoſitions of the crafty unprincipled. Drunkenneſs and low buffoonry he ever held in contempt; and for this cauſe he has been accuſed of unpleaſant ſingularity: but hoſpitable was his door; and oppreſſion near him has been fain to ſhrink behind the veil of meekneſs, to the detection of which his penetration had been fully ſufficient—yet, could he look for thoſe faults in others of which he had none in himſelf? He poſſeſſed his ſhare of pride, but it was that of conſcious rectitude, and the ſcorn of an ill action; and, while this pride ſequeſtered him from the faſhion of wealth and folly, humility bent him to the beggar. The lines of goodneſs were deeply charactered on his face; and, ſo perfect were they imprinted, the ſtamp held out to the laſt hour of his life; while, previous to his lingering illneſs, his mien conveyed that ſomething of expreſſion which beſpoke the inbred gentleman, to which the ignorant, as well as the better-informed, gave voluntary aſſent. To ſum up his character, how few like him have done ſo many deeds of good! how few ſo little ill! Perhaps there may yet be found one whom emulation may prompt to vie as a copy to the above example. A glimmering of light already breaks forth, which may in time rekindle thoſe aſhes which were conſigned to earth on the eve of the morning which gave the latter life. Go then, my ſon, and prove it! M. E. L."

---

[1] See what is ſaid, p. 285, of ſir Charles Whitworth's Succeſſion of Parliaments, who gives him only one ſeat.

[2] See the Rev. John Maſtin's Hiſtory of Naſeby, p. 73.

Mary [illegible]

The preamble to his laſt will is thus emphatically expreſſed; "I Shukbrugh Aſhby, of Quenby, in the county of Leiceſter, eſq. being perfectly ſatisfied reſpecting the truth of a future ſtate, and of a governing providence in the preſent, do reſign my ſoul into the hands of that all-wiſe and eternal Being who created it, and without any doubt confiding in his mercy, who has been moſt graciouſly pleaſed to reveal it in a more particular manner to his creatures under the diſpenſation of the Chriſtian Religion. My mortal part, which alone is ſubject to diſſolution, I deſire may be interred with all poſſible privacy, but with the greateſt decency, in the family-vault in Hungerton Church. And my worldly eſtate I diſpoſe of in manner following," &c.[1]

Though this family have been numerous, long, and nobly ſeated, yet their names appear on public occaſions[2] ſeldomer than one ſhould expect—now and then ſheriff—11 Richard II. Richard Aſhby of Quenby; 19 Henry VI. Thomas Aſhby of Loſeby; 20 Elizabeth, Thomas Aſhby of Quenby; 43 Elizabeth, George Aſhby of Quenby; 3 Charles, George Aſhby of Quenby; 13 Charles II. George Aſhby of Quenby; my grandfather laſt of James II. and conſequently 1 William and Mary[3]; he was M. P. too for the county;—the late Shukbrugh Aſhby, 31 Geo. II. and member alſo for the town 1784.

Mr. Arthur Young, in his Eaſtern Tour, ſays, "Quenby Hall is an old houſe; but, what is very extraordinary, in an admirable ſituation, being on a very high eminence, finely wooded, that commands all the country: it was formerly the taſte to place their ſeats in the loweſt and moſt unpleaſant ſituations of a whole eſtate. Mr. Shukbrugh Aſhby, when he came to the eſtate, found the houſe a mere ſhell, much out of repair, and the offices in ruin. He has in a few years brought the whole into complete order; fitted up all the rooms in a ſtyle of great propriety; his furniture rich, and ſome of it magnificent—and his collection of prints an excellent one. His library ſuperbly filled with the beſt and moſt expenſive books in ſeveral languages; the bindings remarkably elegant. Around the houſe is a new terrace, which commands a great variety of proſpect; on one ſide very extenſive, over a diſtant hilly country, and even to the mountains of the Peak. On the other ſide, a beautiful landſcape of hanging hills, with ſcattered wood, ſhelving into a winding valley, ſo low, that you look down upon it in a very pictureſque manner: the ſides of the hills all cut into rich incloſures. Beſides various offices, and a very complete kitchen-ground, this gentleman has alſo erected three new farm-houſes, and a parſonage, in a neat and ſubſtantial manner, of brick and tile; and ſome cottages in the ſame manner; and placed them at the entrance of his village, in ſuch a manner that they have a moſt agreeable effect. Theſe works are very noble; they ornament a country, encourage induſtry, promote that uſeful circulation which ſhould ever attend the reſidence of a man of fortune, and are ſure to acquire that fame which is due to ſo juſt a ſpecies of patriotiſm[4]."

Mr. Young's deſcription of the library and prints, I can affirm from actual inſpection in 1790, is not exaggerated. The library was principally furniſhed by the late celebrated bookſeller, "honeſt Tom Payne." And ſo judicious was the ſelection, that Mr. Payne frequently offered to re-purchaſe the whole at the price for which he ſold the books, with a conſiderable addition for intereſt of money; an uncommon fact, but well atteſted.

Quenby is flat-roofed and leaded; a moſt ſubſtantial building, on an expenſive plan; thick brick-walls, with door and window-jambs of ſtone. The tradition in the family is, that, from the great quantities of materials uſed under ground, as much money was ſpent as it was thought would have finiſhed the whole. Had the houſe been a parallelogram, much of the outward walling would have been ſaved.

The picture of a lady ſtill remains, who is ſuppoſed to have had a main hand in building or compleating this houſe; but her features are now ſcarcely traceable.

A view of Quenby hall, contributed by Mrs. Latham, is given in Plate XLIII; and in Plate *XLIII. is a ſmaller view of the houſe, with a correct ground-plan, which the following admeaſurements will illuſtrate:

The hall, 41 feet 6 inches by 20 feet 6 inches; with extended bow-windows from the floor to the cieling 27 feet; two lights of windows.

Beſt ſtair-caſe, 21 feet by 21, with three flights to a floor.

Common ſtair-caſe, 21 feet by 21, three flights to a floor.

---

[1] See his hand-writing, and that of Mr. Waring Aſhby, in Plate XLI.

[2] A Nicholas Aſhby was prior of Weſtminſter and biſhop of Landaff 1441. See Le Neve and Willis. John Aſhby was choſen in 1477 abbot of Darleigh, Derbyſhire. Tanner's Notitia Mon. fol. Addenda ſheet, p. 91. Thomas Aſhby, with two more prieſts, founded a chapel in Leadenhall in 1478. Maitland's London, vol. II. p. 187. Aſhby, queen Elizabeth's embaſſador to James I. Robertſon's Hiſtory of Scotland, vol. II. pp. 163. 166. Aſhby, a curious apothecary at Kettering is noticed in Morton's Northamptonſhire, p. 382. An author, perhaps not much known, may be added to the liſt who publiſhed, "Poemata de prioribus lingua Anglica veteri, compilata & exarata per Georgium Aſhby, Clericum Signati Margaretæ Reginæ Angliæ. Codex membr. folio; Catalogus MSS. Angliæ, Oxoniæ, 1697," fol. p. 374. N° 9678. 492.—If it were at all neceſſary, a hundred of the name in old and modern times might be enumerated, as major Aſhby, one that defended Pontefract Caſtle for king Charles I; admiral ſir J. Aſhby, in queen Anne's time; a baronet in Hertfordſhire, &c. &c. Perhaps none of them belong to this family, or even the county. The admiral for certain belonged to the neighbourhood of Yarmouth, Suffolk.

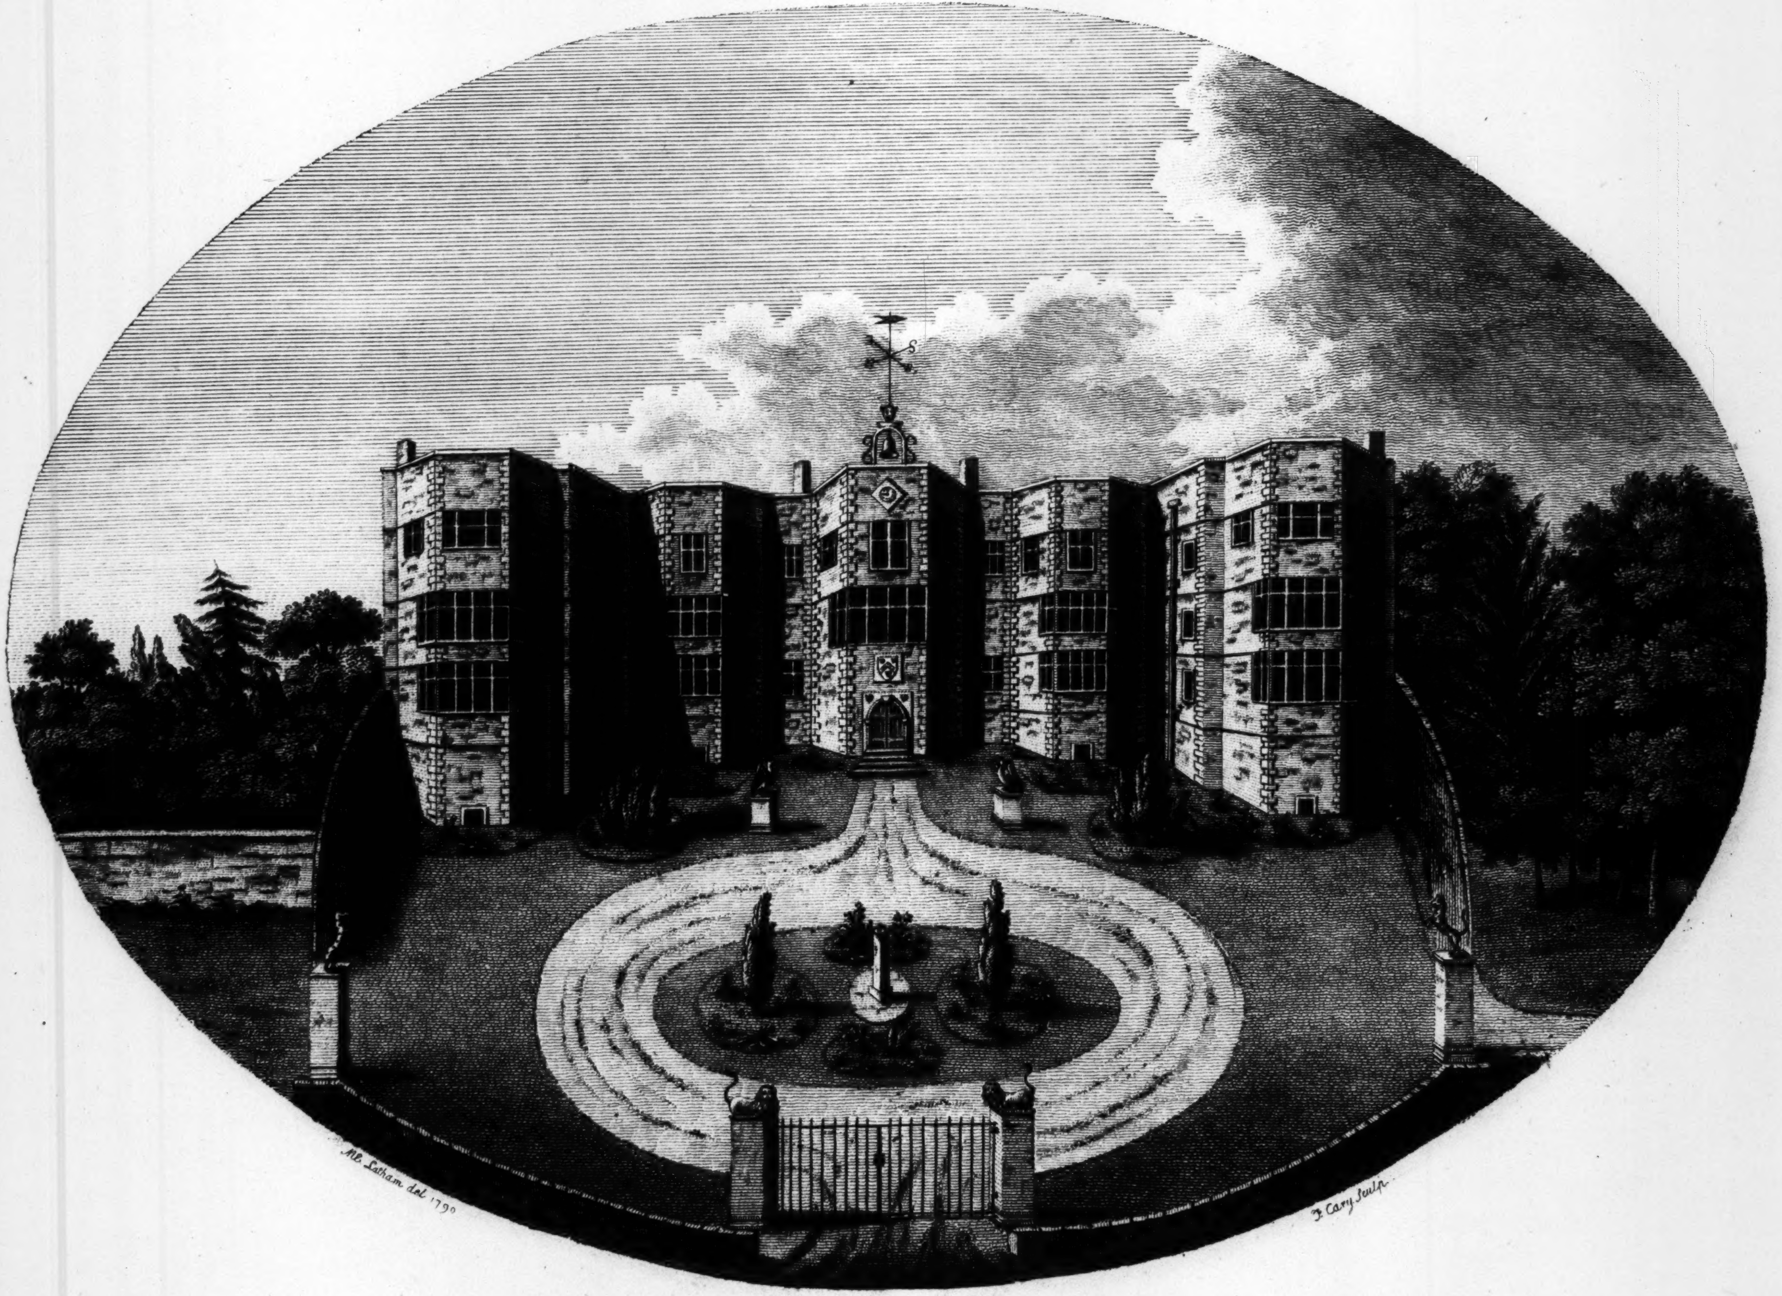
See p. 493 & 357.

[3] The old ſheriffs continued another year, from want of time to chuſe new ones properly. See Bridges's Northamptonſhire, Introduction, p. 8.

[4] Young's Eaſtern Tour, vol. I. p. 80.

Dining-

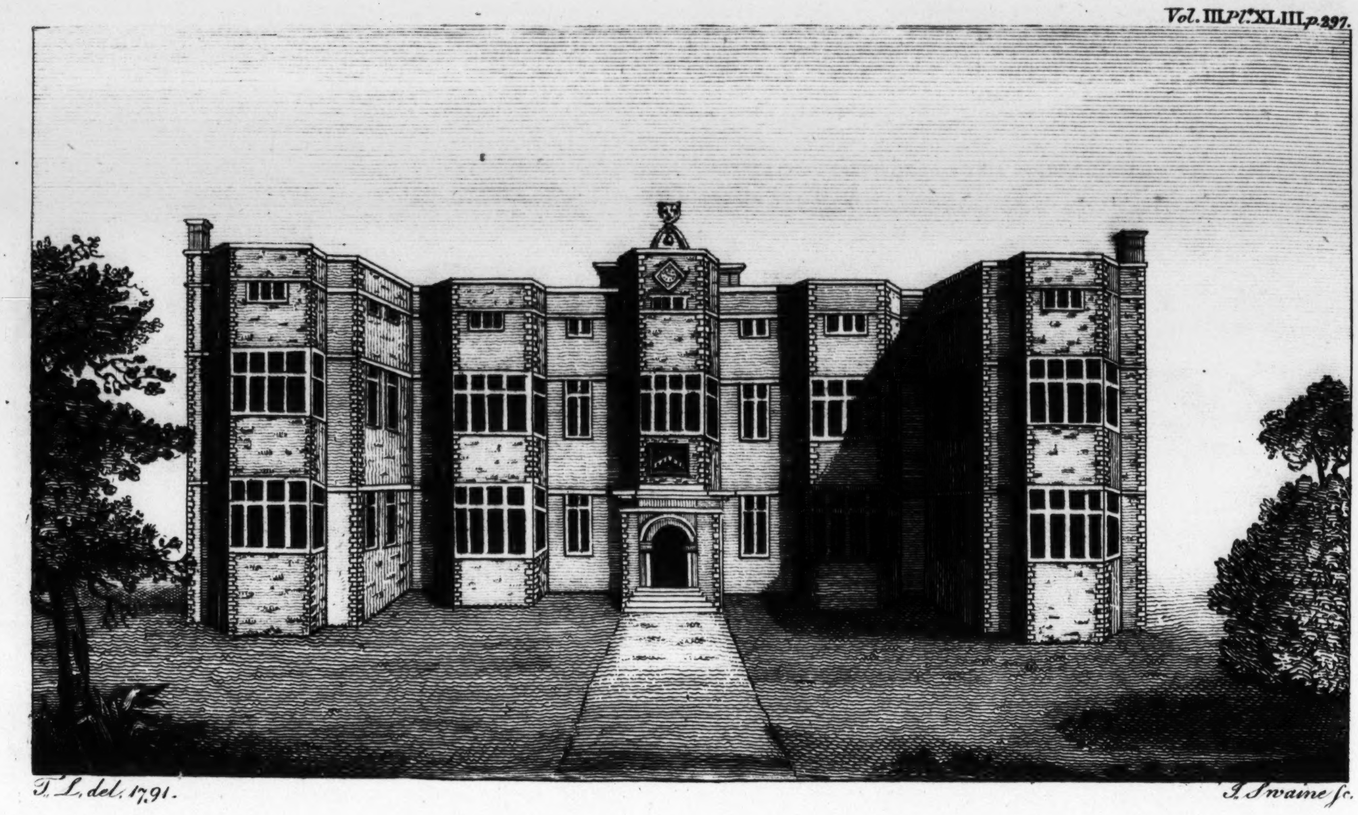
QUENBY HALL.



M. Latham del. 1790

J. Cary Sculp.

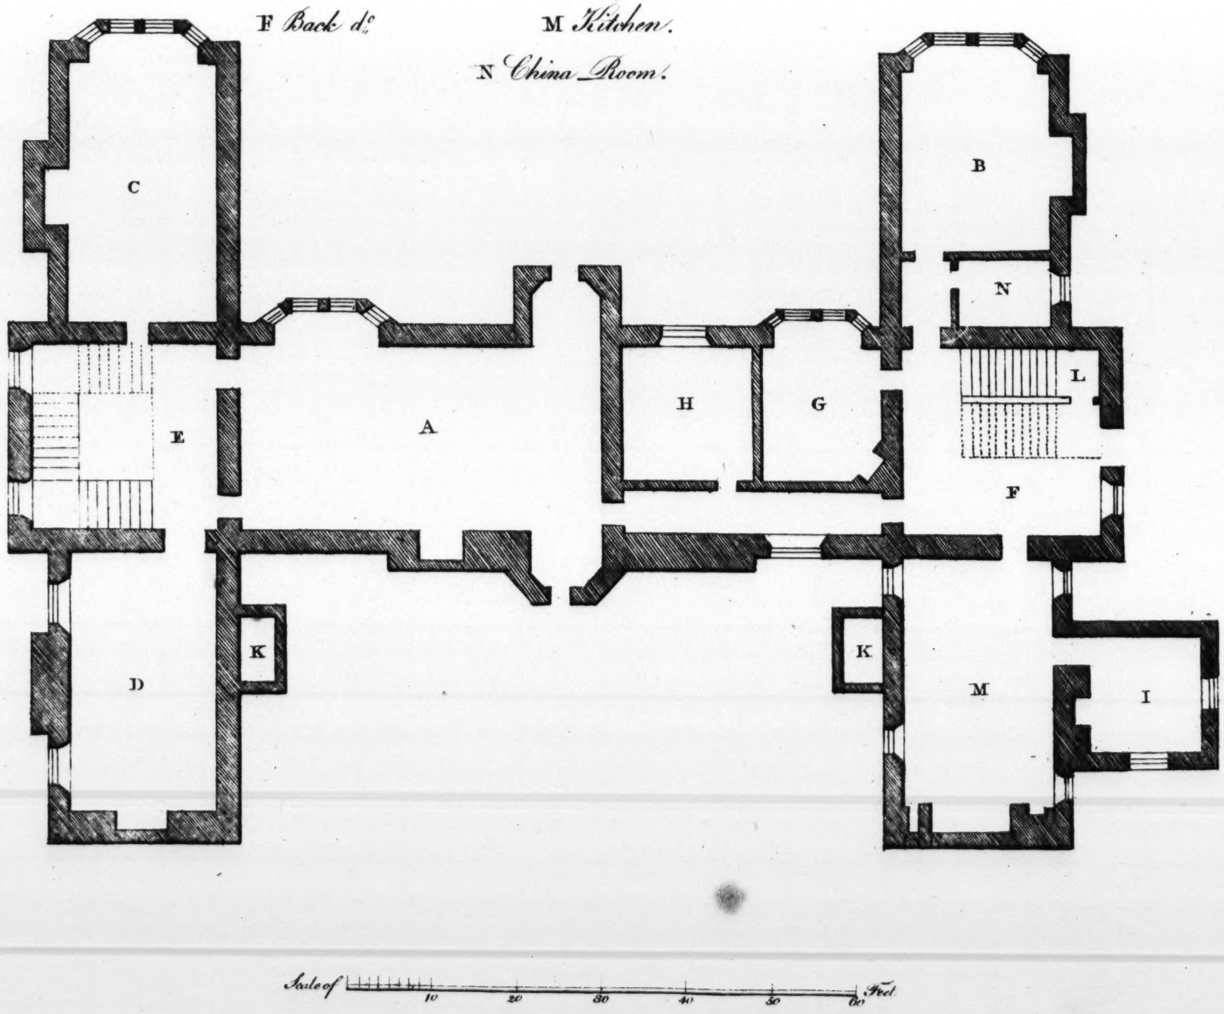
This Plate is contributed by Mrs Latham.



J. L. del. 1791.

J. Swaine sc.

A	Great Hall.	G	Breakfasting Parlour.
B	Dining Parlour.	H	Butler's Pantry.
C	Withdrawing Room.	I	Servants Hall.
D	Unfinshed Room.	KK	Water Closets to the second floor.
E	Grand Stair-case.	L	Going down to the Cellars.
F	Back d.º	M	Kitchen.
N	China Room.



C
B
N
L
E
A
H
G
F
K
D
K
M
I
Scale of 10 20 30
40
50
60 Feet

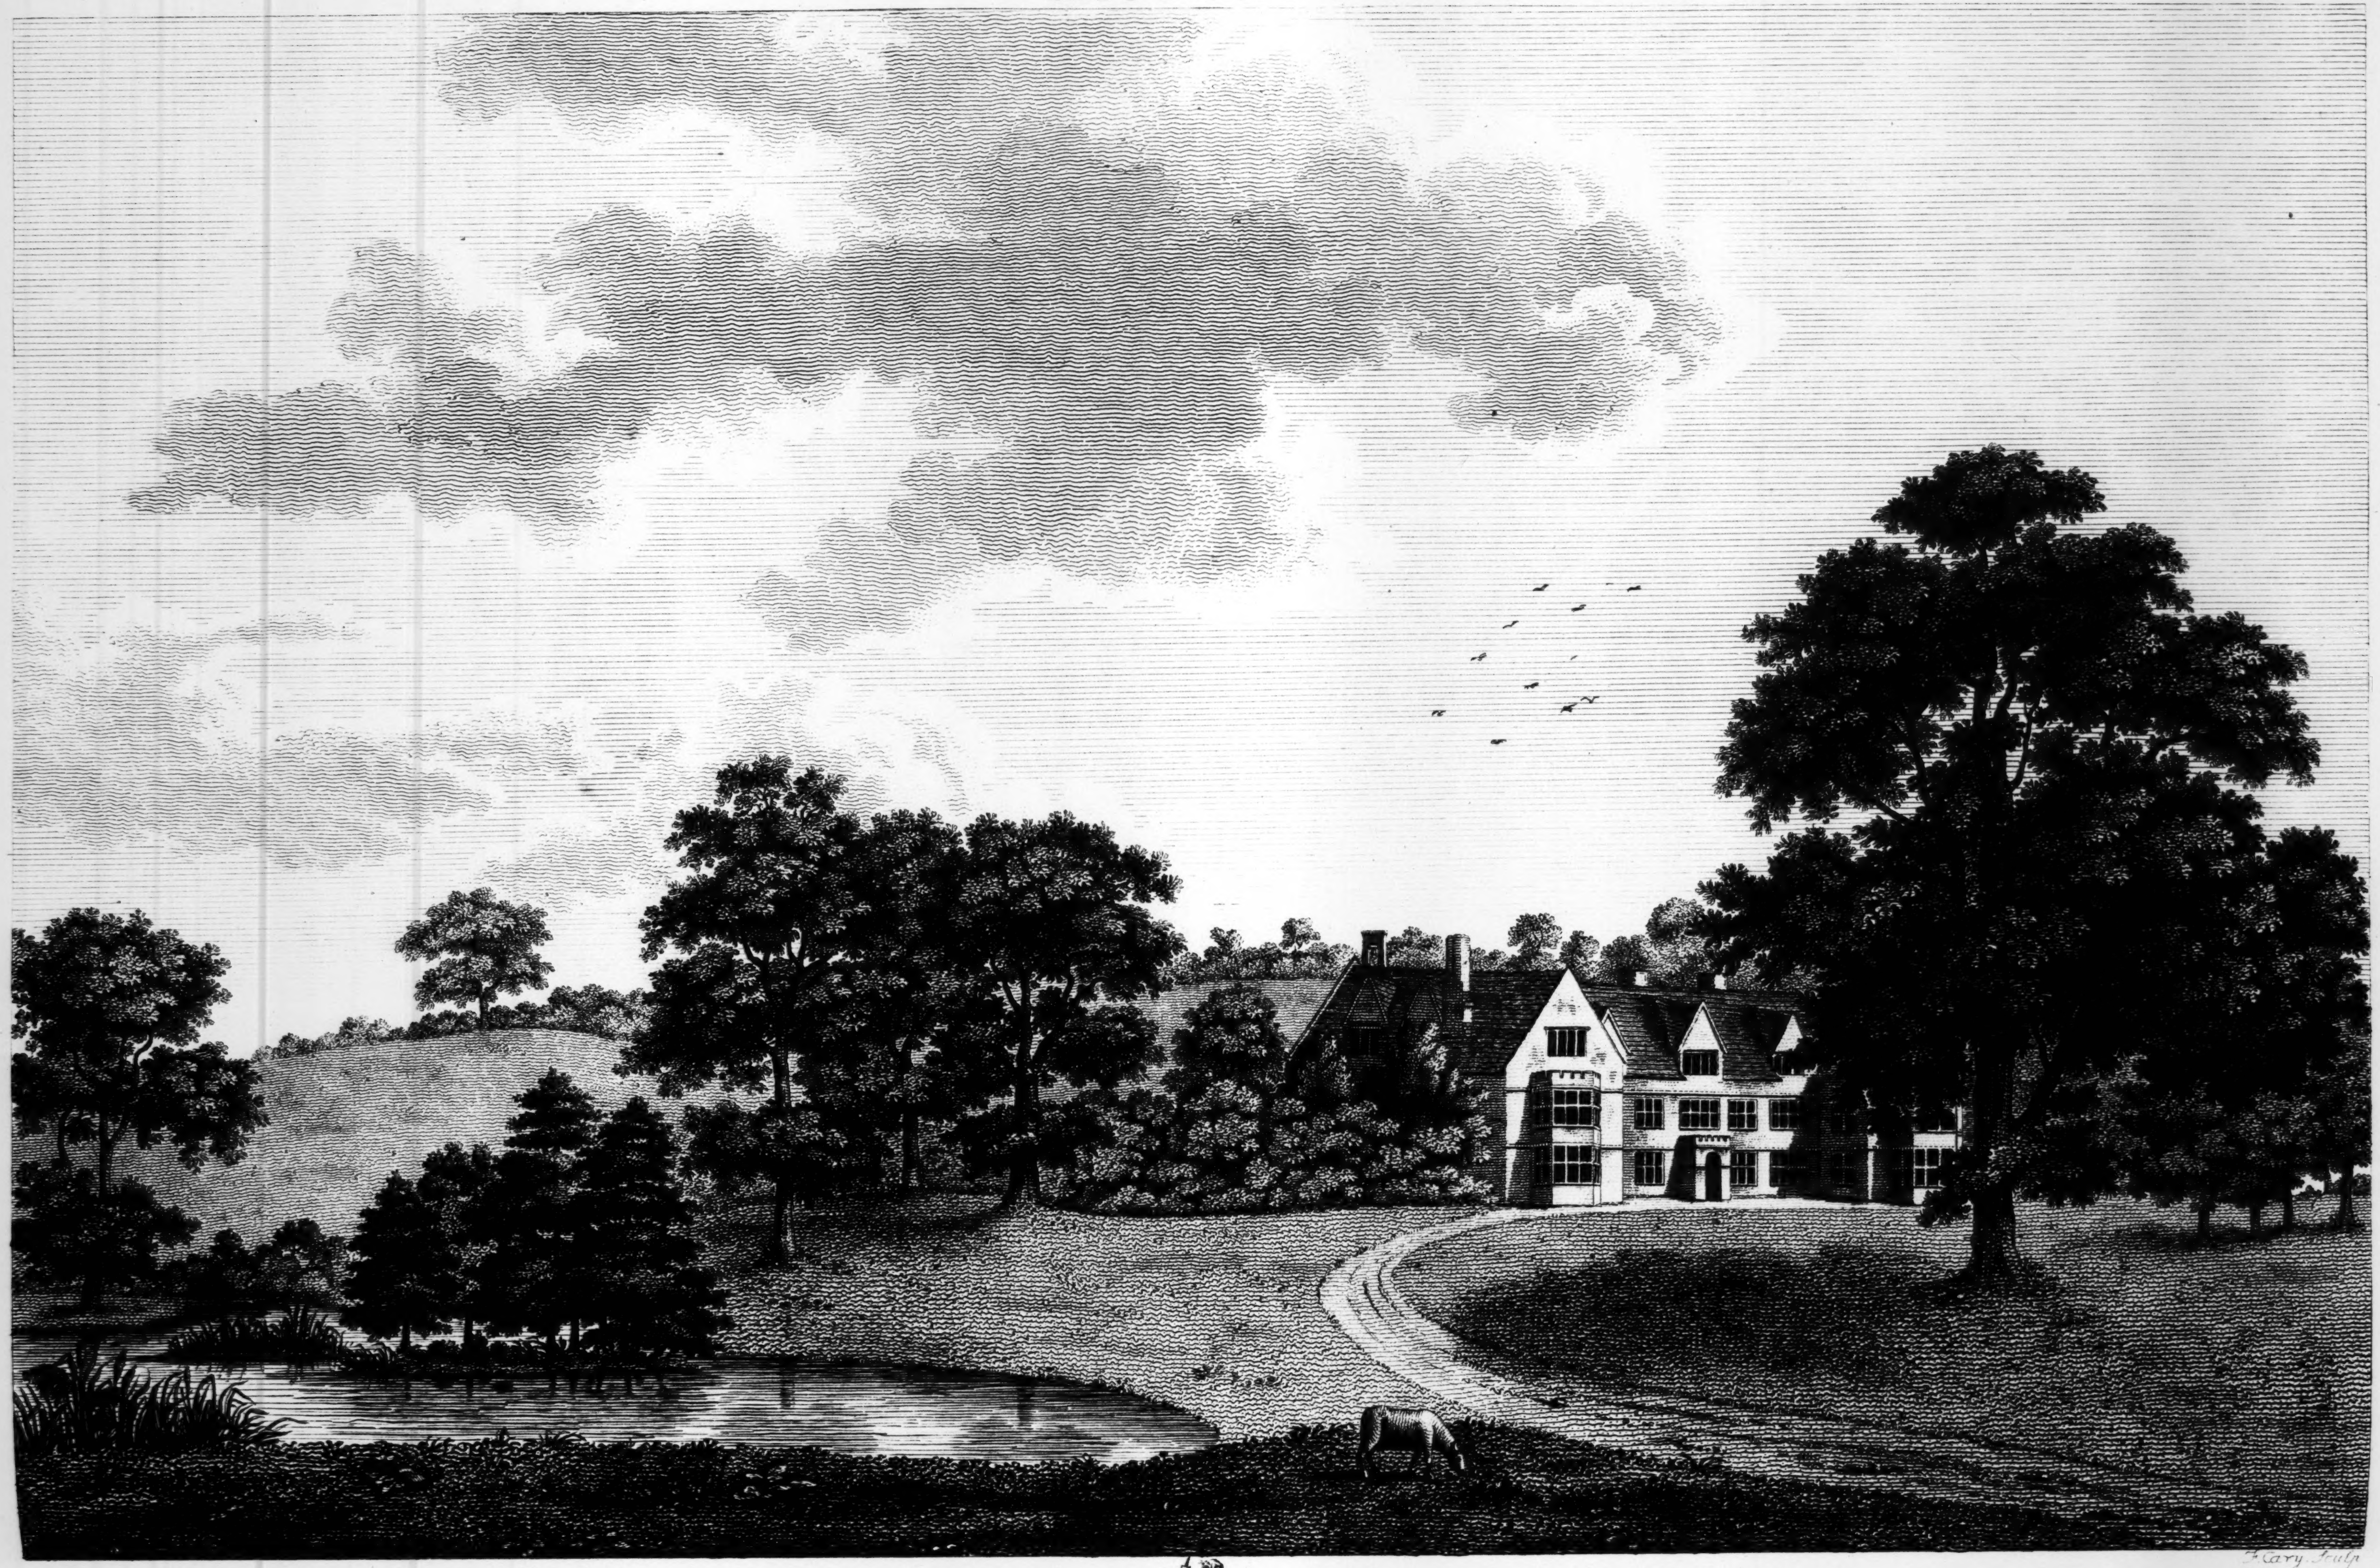
Longmate sculp.t

QUENBY HALL, with a PLAN of the GROUND FLOOR.

LAUNDE.



J. Cary Sculp.

To JOHN SIMPSON, Esq. this Plate is respectfully inscribed

by his much obliged and faithful humble Servant

Dining-parlour, 21 feet by 17; in height 12 feet 6 inches; one bow-window.

Drawing-room, 29 feet 6 inches by 17; height 12 feet 6 inches; one large bow-window.

A room unfiniſhed, 29 feet 6 inches by 17; height 12 feet 6 inches; two windows.

Breakfaſt-parlour, 14 feet 6 inches by 18; height 12 feet 6 inches; bow-window.

Kitchen, 29 feet 6 inches by 17; height ditto.
Butler's pantry, 15 feet by 15; height ditto.
Servants hall, 14 feet 6 inches by 15 feet 6; height 8 feet 6.
Scullery, 14 feet by 14.
Larder for keeping meat, 17 feet by 10; two windows latticed.
Arched cellars under every one of the above rooms.

Second floor:

Beſt bed-chamber, 24 feet by 17; height 12 feet.
Dreſſing-room to ditto, 9 feet by 12.
Second bed-chamber, 24 feet by 17; height ditto.
Dreſſing-room to ditto, 9 feet by 12.
Water-cloſet to ditto, 7 feet by 6.
Third bed-chamber, 24 feet by 17; height ditto.
Dreſſing-room to ditto 11 feet by 9.
Fourth bed-chamber, 21 feet by 17; height ditto.
Water-cloſet to ditto.
Dreſſing-room to ditto, 14 feet by 14.
Ditto to ditto, 12 feet by 9.
Fifth room, 15 feet by 10; height 12 feet.
Library, 26 feet by 20; height ditto.
Paſſage, 11 feet by 5.
Ditto 10 feet by 8.

Attic-ſtory:

Yellow-room, 21 feet by 17; height 9 feet.
Dreſſing-room to ditto, 12 feet by 9.
Paſſage, 9 feet by 5.
Long garret, 30 feet by 17.
Small ditto, 12 feet by 15.
Garret over the hall, 44 feet by 21.
Two ſmall garrets, 11 feet 6 inches by 14 feet 6.
Paſſage, 23 feet by 5.
Blue room, 21 feet by 17; height 9 feet.
Dreſſing-room to ditto, 12 feet by 17.
Green room, 20 feet by 17.
Dreſſing-room, 11 feet by 10.
Small garret, 10 feet by 9.
Paſſage, 9 feet by 7.

Mr. Throſby ſays, "Some of the views from this ſeat, and others to it, abound with rich ſcenery. The landſcapes from it are formed to command delight. At hand, there are extenſive incloſures, ſtocked with fine cattle, both on the hills and in the valleys beneath; ſome of which are exquiſitely wooded; beyond, on the middle ground, every thing that field diverſity can preſent you with that is lovely, except water, lies before you. As to the diſtant mountains of the Peak in Derbyſhire, terraced with ſubordinate broad objects, they are penciled with the ſweeteſt harmonious touches by the diſtant atmoſphere. Thoſe views towards this ſeat, in the vallies near, have a more confined, but not leſs magnificent appearance; they are like, but with leſs formality, the elevations of a grand edifice, drawn by an eminent architect, to captivate his employer, in which you ſee every part and every faſcinating ornament diſtinct. This noble building, in one valley ſouthwardly, at no great diſtance from it, has more of a caſtle-form and caſtle-ſite than is eaſily imagined."

The following exact account of the proſpects from Quenby was drawn up ſome years ago by a worthy gentleman who was well acquainted with the country.

"The Eaſt proſpect from Quenby Hall in the county of Leiceſter. Cold Newton, with three lodges; Loſeby church, in which they pariſh to; Halſtead town; Knawſton town; Burleigh, in the county of Rutland, the ſeat of lord Winchelſea; pleaſant hills of good land, which command a very large proſpect as far as Naſeby in Northamptonſhire, where the battle was fought by king Charles and Oliver Cromwell; part of Warwick, Nottingham, and Derby ſhires.—South-eaſt: Quenby Coplow.—South: two large hills in Billeſdon lordſhip, one called the Great Hill; the other Green Hill; a wood in Noſeley lordſhip; a new church at Galby; Houghton church, and part of the town.—South-weſt: Houghton windmill; Ingerſby houſe, and grounds of healthful rich land, belonging to lord Maynard; Thurnby church; Narborough church; Enderby; Croft-hill; and part of Warwickſhire.—Weſt: Keame town; Scraptoft wood; a large mount, with a ſummer-houſe on the top of it, belonging to Edward-Hartopp Wigley, eſq. Humberſton church; the five churches at Leiceſter, and part of the town; Braunſton, the ſeat of Mr. Winſtanley: Deſborough church.—North-weſt: Hungerton town, church, and windmill; Barkby church; Burſtall church; Belgrave church; Steward Hays, the ſeat of the earl of Stamford and Warrington; Bradgate Park, with a high hill, on which was formerly a windmill called Old John, and now an obſervatory or obeliſk; a long range of Foreſt hills; Syſton church; Wanlip town; Sileby church; Barrow on Soar; Loughborough church; Burley Houſe, the ſeat of Mrs. Tate; Buddon wood, the beauty of Leiceſterſhire; an obeliſk belonging to Mr. Phillips; Stanford Hall in Nottinghamſhire, the ſeat of Mr. Daſhwood; Woodhouſe; the hills in Derbyſhire beyond Buxton, which are above 50 miles diſtant from Quenby.—North: South Croxton church; Gaddeſby church and lodge; Grimſton town; Old Dalby wood; Wartnaby town; Saxulby town and windmill.—North-eaſt: Thorpe town, chapel, and wood; Burrow town; Burrow hill; Somerby; Cold Overton; Loſeby Hall, the ſeat of the Woollaſtons; Waltham church, near Belvoir Caſtle."

Mr. Young, in his "Tour through the Midland Counties," gives the following account of the huſbandry of this neighbourhood[1].

"The principal part of the country is grazing farms, which riſe from £100. to £900. a year; the open field arable farms from £50. to £80. a year. The ſoil is all a ſtrong rich clay; letting (incloſed) from 10*s*. to 30*s*. an acre; on an average about 18*s*. The open fields to 10*s*. The courſe of crops in the open fields is, 1. fallow—2. barley or wheat—3. beans. In the incloſures; 1. turnips, drawn and fed on graſs—2. barley—3. wheat or oats. This is a wretched courſe. Sometimes, 1. turnips—2. barley —3. clover two years—4. wheat.—In the hiring and ſtocking of farms, they reckon £1000 neceſſary for a farm of £200. a year; and in general that five rents will ſtock grazing farms. An open one, five rents. Land ſells at from 30 to 35 years purchaſe. Poor-rates 1*s*. to 4*s*. in the pound; 20 years ago they were 3*d*. Fifteen[2] years ago the rates of this pariſh were £9. a year; now they are £140. to £150.; and this vaſt riſe they attribute much to the exceſs of tea-drinking; the loweſt of the poor drink it twice a day, while their children have not bread to eat[3]. It is not owing to an increaſe of numbers; for they had as many poor 15 years ago as now, and their pay, which is now 10*d*. was then only 8*d*. The employment is ſpinning jerſeys for ſtockings. Few leaſes granted. The farmers carry their corn eight miles[4]."

---

[1] The reader, who would ſee the more minute particulars of farming here, may conſult Mr. Young's Tour, pp. 81—91.

[2] More likely fifty. A reſpectable gentleman uſed to ſay, that he (who remembered as far back as 1720, or farther,) remembered them at 7*l*. or 8*l*.; and that then (perhaps 1755) they were 70 or 100. But this may be known for certain from the pariſh accompts; and it is worth while, as here is only one alehouſe, and no increaſe of manufacture or improved huſbandry, but the contrary on incloſure. In his father's time a taylor would work from early day to late at night for 4*d*. or 6*d*.; would in that time make a livery ſuit, and after all call to the maids to bring their ſtays and cloaths. They were called Whip-Cat-Taylors, from Whittle-gate Taylors. A Taylor ſaid, that half the year he worked at home, and the other half he whipp'd the cat abroad. In the North, the Taylor, &c. when he comes and works at your houſe, bargains for ſo much wages and his whittle-gate, the going of the knife, i.e. victuals.

[3] The indignation of Mr. Throſby, as a native of the county, is properly excited againſt this raſh aſſertion: "Mr. Young may be right reſpecting ploughing, ſtating of farms, the price of land, &c. &c.; but his picture of the poor ſeems over-charged. What monſters of parents muſt we have in Leiceſterſhire, if what he ſays be true! I thank my God, that I know of no mothers but thoſe who would ſupply the wants of their infants before their own." Excurſions, p. 134.

[4] An antiquarian friend obſerves, "In Bibl. Top. Brit. N° LI. p. 878. you complain that corn is not brought to Leiceſter. Here Mr. Young very properly mentions the hardſhip of carrying it 8 miles. Forty years ago they carried it to Leiceſter, 11 miles of what in moſt countries would be thought impaſſable; uſed to ſet out in winter when quite dark; then, if they ſold ever ſo ſoon, were delayed deſignedly at the alehouſe by the maltſter or brewer, that promiſed to pay them there; and ſo had all the way to come back in the dark. Is this right?" On this ſubject another friend obſerves, "I wonder my venerable and as much eſteemed relative ſhould, as an Antiquary, make objections to old Quenby for its diſtance from Leiceſter. He has not viſited thoſe parts lately, or he would have ſeen the roads improved; the modern manners and taſte unfortunately are too much diffuſed every where. I wiſh there were within the circle of my acquaintance, whom I could name, of the ſame old-faſhioned notions as my father's, he would look to his happineſs from the grateful ſmiles of the dependants around him." M. E. L.

Leiceſterſhire has long been famous for "the largeſt ſheep and greateſt fleeces;" and that part of Shropſhire confining on Staffordſhire for "the pureſt wool[1]."

Mr. Warner, who rented a cloſe adjoining to Quenby, about 20 years ſince, had 60 ewes; each of which brought twins, and one three; and this at a ſeaſon when lambs happened to be ſcarce.

A houſekeeper in the family of the Aſhbys, whoſe name was Elizabeth Scarbrow, afterwards Orton, who married and ſettled at Little Dalby about 1720, was the diſperſer of this famous cheeſe, firſt known in the neighbourhood by the name of Quenby cheeſe; but now called Stilton cheeſe, from an innkeeper of Stilton town, in Huntingdonſhire, upon the great North-road, buying it in quantities, and retailing it to travellers; and it may not be impertinent to notice, that the publick are indebted for it to lady Beaumont, whoſe name is in the title of the receipt.

In the ſurveyor's report for Leiceſterſhire to the Board of Agriculture, are the following remarks: "Stilton Cheeſe is made in moſt of the villages round Melton Mowbray; but I found it impoſſible to get at the ſecret of making it from the dairy people; and, from the converſation I had with one of the firſt managers, I ſhould ſuppoſe two cheeſes were never made alike, as it depends upon ſoil, herbage, ſeaſons, heat, cold, wet, dry, &c. &c. There is no doubt but thoſe cheeſes require a great deal of care and attention, owing, I ſhould ſuppoſe, to their richneſs and thickneſs. They run from 8 to 16 or 18 pounds, very ſeldom larger, and are ſold at 1*s.* per pound (moſt of the inns in the county retail them, the price 13*d.* and 14*d.* per pound.)—In reſpect to the grand ſecret of making Stilton cheeſe, I ſhould have left the county without acquiring the proceſs, if it had not been for the politeneſs and attention of major Cheſelden, of Somerby, who, upon my acquainting him with my diſappointment, kindly undertook to procure it for me from one of his tenants, who was among the firſt for making it. The following is the receipt: "Take the night's cream, and put it to the morning's new milk, with the rennet; when the curd is come, it is not to be broke, as is done with other cheeſes; but take it out with a ſoil-diſh altogether, and place it in a ſieve to drain gradually; and, as it drains, keep gradually preſſing it till it becomes firm and dry; then place it in a wooden hoop; afterwards to be kept dry on boards, turned frequently, with cloth binders round it, which are to be tightened as occaſion requires. N.B. The dairy-maid muſt not be diſheartened if ſhe does not ſucceed perfectly in her firſt attempt."—In the dairies which I viſited, the cheeſes, after being taken out of the wooden hoop, were bound tight round with a cloth, which cloth was changed every day until the cheeſe became firm enough to ſupport itſelf; after the cloth was taken off, they were rubbed every day all over, for two or three months, with a bruſh; and if the weather is damp or moiſt, twice a day (and, even before the cloth was taken off, the top and bottom was well rubbed every day).—I was informed by the maker, that they were never better for the table than at a year old, but I believe they are ſeldom cut ſo ſoon. The beſt of the other ſort of cheeſe, made in the county, is, in my opinion, better than the generality of the Stilton, as it is but ſeldom you meet with a real good one.

Mr. Monk omits a main reaſon for their not being made alike. When a woman firſt begins to make for ſale, ſhe makes them good, attending to the number of her cows and acres. This being ſoon noticed in the neighbourhood, ſhe receives orders for many more againſt next year. Theſe ſhe executes, though probably without having a ſingle cow or acre more than at firſt. Muſt ſhe not therefore lower their goodneſs? Mr. Monk, however, muſt have been peculiarly unlucky in the ſpecimens he met with of this juſtly-admired ſort of cheeſe; or he would not have ſo oddly preferred the common cheeſe of the country.

In a gravel-pit, not far from Quenby, are found ſome curious foſſils: ſeveral of them in the form and ſize of a ſcallop ſhell; others, that of a worm: one of the latter is repreſented in Plate IX. fig. 10.

Pedigree of ASHBY, of LOSEBY. (Continued from Mr. BURTON's MS.)

Arms: Quarterly of ſix; 1. Argent, a lion rampant Sable, a chief Gules; Aſhby of Loſeby. 2. Azure, five bezants; Zouch of Lubbeſthorpe. 3. Azure, two bars Or, each charged with three martlets Gules; Burdet. 4. Ermine, a croſs engrailed Sable; Pollard. 5. Argent, a chevron Azure, between three ſtaples Sable; Illingworth. 6. Aſhby. Creſt, a ram's head couped Argent, armed Or; Plate XLVIII. fig. 31.

William de Aſhby, 1240—1279.=

William Aſhby de Melton, 1342.=

Richard de Eſſeby, high-ſheriff 1638.= 2.13

Richard de Aſhby, of Loſeby and Lubbeſthorpe in right of his wife, living 1391.=Elizabeth, dau. and heir of John Burdet, by Elizabeth, dau. and coheir of ſir Roger de la Zouch of Lubbeſthorpe. Vol IV.38

Thomas Aſhby, of Loſeby and Lubbeſthorpe, died 1422.=Elizabeth.
William Aſhby, of Welby, 1405.=Joan, 1440.

Thomas Aſhby, of Loſeby, 6 and 30 Hen. VI. died 1468.=Catharine, dau. of Robert Brett, of Addington.
1. Chriſtiana.
2. Agnes.

William Aſhby, of Loſeby, died 1499.=Agnes, dau. of ſir Richard Illingworth, knt. chief baron of the Exchequer, died 1492.
Joice, married to Geoffrey Sherard, of Stapleford.
. . . . =John Findern.

. . . . . = ... Carleton.
Catharine.=Will. Smith.
William Aſhby, died 1544.=Agnes Poultney, died 1527.
Carlia.= . . . . Herkeirk.
Elizabeth.=Will. Waryn[2].
Edward Aſhby.=Marg Bawde. + + married p. 493

Agnes.= . . . . . . Brokeſby.
Thomas.
George Aſhby, died 1545.=Alice, dau. of John Digby, of Kettleby.
Barbara, b. 1508; d. 1588; æt. 90.=Robert Aſhby, of Quenby.
Francis, ſ. p. marr. . . . . . relict of . . . Brown.
William.
Eliz . married . . . . Hy Newton. [illegible]

John Aſhby, died 1558.=Elizabeth, dau. of William Tanfeild, of Gayton, co. Northampton.

Thomas Aſhby, died 1604.=Anne, dau. of John Beaumont, of Gracedieu, widow of . . . . Dutton.

William Aſhby.=Joyce, dau. of Edward Minors, of Uttoxeter.
Frances.=R. Throgmorton.
Mary.= . . . . . Eaſt.
Bridget.= . . . . . Fox.
George.
Elizabeth.
Anne.

William Aſhby, living 1605.

---

[1] See Mr. Brokeſby's Letter to Mr. Hearne, in Leland's Itinerary, vol. VI. p. 104.

[2] William Waryn, merchant of the Staple of Calais, was buried at Melton Mowbray; ſee vol. II. p. 254: and in a chapel on the South ſide of the chancel of Okeham, Rutland, on a plate of braſs fixed in a marble grave-ſtone:

"Sub hoc marmore requieſcit tumulatus Franciſc. Waryn, de Okeham, Mercator Stapule ville Callec. filius Williel. Waryn, hic coram iſto altari ſepulti; qui quidem Franciſcus duxit in uxorem Elizabetham Aſheby, quondam filiam Willielmi Aſheby de Loweſby, in com. Leiceſt. armigeri; qui quidem Franciſcus diem clauſit extremum xx die Auguſti, anno Dom. M.Dx°. et anno regni regis Henrici VIII ii°; cujus anime propitietur Deus."

Pedigree

Pedigree of ASHBY, of QUENBY.

Richard de Aſhby, lord of the manors of South Croxton and Quenby in 1297; died in 1304; (ſee p. 232).=Alice.

William Aſhby, of Quenby.= . . . . . .

William Aſhby of Quenby, 20 Edw. III. 1346 and 1383.= . . . . .

Thomas Aſhby, of Quenby, 20 Henry VI. 1442 and 1458.=Catharine, dau. of William Heſilrige, of Noſeley, co. Leic.

William Aſhby, of Quenby, 1489; died May 31, 1515.= . . . . . .

1. George Aſhby, died ſ. p. 2. William Aſhby.= . . . . . dau. of . . . . . Curſon, of Croxhall, Derbyſhire. 3. Robert Aſhby.= . . . . . .

Anne Aſhby, died ſeiſed of Quenby, May 12, 1536, ſ. p. and Robert her couſin was her heir.=George Skevington, of Skeffington, Leiceſterſhire.

Robert Aſhby, of Quenby, died Aug. 24, 1557.=Barbara, dau. of George Aſhby, of Loſeby, Leiceſterſhire, died 1598, aged 105.

Charles Aſhby.

1. George Aſhby, of Quenby, 1607; high-ſheriff 1601; bought Loſeby, on the death of Thomas Aſhby, in 1604.=Mary, dau. of Andrew Gedney, of Enderby, co. Lincoln.

2. Joyce Aſhby, married William Pell of Kettleby and Rolleſton, co. Leiceſter. No iſſue.

3. Dorothy Aſhby, married Parr Lane; 2dly, Robert Bradſhaw, of Morebarne, co. Leiceſter, died 1612.

4. Elizabeth Aſhby, married John Ward, of Carleton Curlieu.

5. Margery Aſhby, married Ambroſe Nedham, of Allexton, co. Leic.

1. George Aſhby, of Quenby and Loſeby, ſon and heir, aged 30, 1619; died July 1, 1653, aged 72.=Elizabeth, dau. of George Bennet, of Welby, co. Leiceſter, alſo of London, ſalter (who fined for alderman) March 1625; died Jan. 26, 1682, aged 75.

2. Henry Aſhby. 3. William Aſhby, fellow of Trin. Coll. Camb. 1610. 4. Thomas Aſhby. 5. Anne Aſhby.=Gervaſe Teverey, of Stapleford, Nott. 6. Dorothy Aſhby. 7. Bridget Aſhby.

1. George Aſhby, of Quenby, bo. July 29, 1629; high-ſheriff 18 and 19 Cha. II. died May 29, 1672; buried at Hungerton.=Mary, ſole heir of Euſeby Shukbrugh, of Naſeby, Northampton. marr. June 24, 1652; d. April 15, 1721, aged 93; bur. at Hungerton; 2d huſband, George Hewett, of Rotherby, co. Leiceſter.

2. Bennet Aſhby, died young.

3. John Aſhby, merchant of London.=Elizabeth, dau. of ſir Benjamin Thorowgood, alderman of London, died . . . . . aged 95.

4. William Aſhby, a Turkey merchant.=Mary, dau. and heir of . . . . Brittan, of Thorpe-Sachevile, co. Leiceſter.

5. Elizabeth Aſhby, firſt wife.=Richard Inge, of Thorpe-Conſtantine, Staffordſhire.

6. Mary Aſhby, 7. Sarah Aſhby, both died unmarried.

8. Anne Aſhby, marr. Robert Cotton, of London.

9. Mabel Aſhby, marr. ſir John Onebye, of Hinckley, co. Leiceſter. No iſſue.

(Children of John Aſhby and Elizabeth Thorowgood:) 1. John Aſhby, of Carolina.= 2. Richard Aſhby, died Feb. 4, 1769, aged 84; bur. at Melton Mowb.= 3. Jemima Aſhby, died May 31, 1751, aged 60; bur. at Melton Mowbray. 4. Theodoſia Aſhby.

Thomas Aſhby, of Quenby, Carolina.=

. . . . Aſhby,= . . . Fawcett. No iſſue.

1. William Aſhby, of Thorpe-Sachevile, died about 1768.= 2. Mary Aſhby. 3. Elizabeth Aſhby.

William Inge, died young.

1. William Aſhby.=Frances Davis, of Oakham, Rutland.

2. Richard Aſhby, rector of Barwell, Leiceſter, d. 1757.

3. Sam. Aſhby, rector of Barwell, d. 1778.=Elizabeth Bloxham.

4 James Aſhby, died unmarr.

5. Mary Aſhby.= . . . Elſon, of Portſdowne.

6. Elizabeth Aſhby, died 1788; buried at Melton Mowbray.=Reuben Parke, attorney, of Melton Mowbray, died 1784; buried at Melton Mowbray.

7. Frances Aſhby.

1. Frances Aſhby. 1. Sarah Aſhby. 3. Charlotte-Harriſon Aſhby; married Samuel Maltby, jun. 4. Elizabeth-Dorothea Aſhby.=Thomas Bullivant, of Oakham.

Several children.

1. Elizabeth-Bloxam Aſhby, b. 1767; d. 1773.
2. Frances Aſhby, b. 1770; living 1799.
3. George Aſhby, b. 1772; d. 1778.
4. Samuel Aſhby, b. 1774; d. 1779.

Mary-Anne Elſon, firſt wife.=John Suffield Brown, of Leeſthorpe.=Jane-Wilhelmina Cheſelden, ſecond wife.

1. William Parke, died 1790; bur. at Melton Mowbray.
2. Reuben Parke, died young.
3. Samuel Parke.
4. Reuben Parke, died young.
6. James Parke.

5. Rawſon Parke, married, January 1790, Elizabeth Holmden, of Crowley, Worceſterſh.; (his only ſon, Rawſon Parke, b. Dec. 13, 1790, died May 20, 1790, was buried at Melton Mowbray.)

7. Frances-Heſilrige Parke, married Thomas Hartley, of London; and has ſeveral children.

1. Mary Aſhby, born May 13, 1653.=John Ekins, of Ruſhden, co. Northampton.

2. Elizabeth Aſhby, b. Oct. 18, 1654; died July 21, 1705.=Sir Nathan Wrighte, knt. of Barwell, lord keeper 1700. [See before, p. 219].

3. George Aſhby, of Quenby, born July 16, 1656.=Hannah Waring. [See his deſcendants (the elder branches of the family) in p. 300].

4. Dorothy Aſhby, b. Dec. 18, 1657; died Sept. 11, 1681, aged 24.

5. Lucy Aſhby, born April 7, 1659; died before her father.

6. Shukbrugh Aſhby, b. April 10, 1660; died May 4, 1750, aged 90; buried at Melton.=Mary, dau. of Nele Hewet, of Dunton-Baſſet, co. Leiceſter; died Nov. 30, 1743, aged 77: buried at Melton Mowbray.

7. Euſeby Aſhby, b. July 15, 1662; fellow of Trin. Coll. Cambr. 1693. No iſſue. Left his eſtate to his nephew Shukbrugh.=Mary, dau. of William Major, of Leiceſter.

8. Margaret Aſhby, marr. Aug. 18, 1687.=William Boothby, of Marſton, co. Leic.

. . . . . Ekins.= . . . . Barker, of the Grove, Chiſwick.

Thomas. Mary.= . . . . Pacey, of Millbank, Weſtminſter. A daughter.

2. Nele Aſhby, of Lincoln's Inn, born Aug. 10, 1694; died . . . . 176. . ſ. p.

1. Shukbrugh Aſhby, born Sept. 14, 1690; died Jan. 14, 1752; buried at Blaby, co. Leic.=Mary, dau. and heir of Nathaniel Cradock, of Coſſington, co. Leic. (by Mary, dau. of Tho. Saunders, of Sibbertoft, Northamptonſhire), died May 19, 1760, aged 64; bur. at Blaby.

3. Edward Aſhby, b. May 26, 1695.

2. Mary Aſhby, b. . . . . . . died Jan. 10, 1764; bur. at Blaby.=William Brecknock Wragge, vicar of Friſby, Leiceſter.

Sarah Wragge, born Jan. 5, 1755; now living unmarried.

1. Shukbrugh Aſhby, F. R. S. b. Oct. 6, 1724; high-ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire 1758; purchaſed Quenby 1759; M. P. for Leiceſter 1784; died Jan. 27, 1792; bur. at Hungerton.=Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Rich. Hinde, of Cold-Aſhby, co. Northampton, b. Aug. 5, 1723; died Nov. 8, 1795; bur. at Hungerton.

3. Nathaniel Aſhby, born Dec. 9, 1730.

4. Dorothy Aſhby, born Nov. 25, 1731, 2d wife.=Thomas Myddelton, vicar of Melton-Mowbray, died 1773.

Thomas-Aſhby Myddelton, born Sept. 7, 1773; died May 29 1780; buried at Melton Mowbray.

5. George Aſhby, died Aug. 7, 1760, at C. C. C. Cambridge, aged 22, buried at St. Edward's church there, ſ. p.

1. Mary-Elizabeth Aſhby, born April 23, 1747, at Stretton; marr. Oct. 18, 1770, at Eltham.=William Latham, F. R. S. F. A. S. of Eltham, Kent, b. Dec. 10, and baptized Dec. 31, 1742, at Eltham.

2. Catherine Aſhby, born Aug. 26, 1748; died in 3 or 4 days: bur. at Great Glen.

3. Dorothea Aſhby, born Jan. 18, 1750, at York; married April 15, 1771, at St. James, Weſtm.=Tho. Huſſey Apreece, of Waſhingley, co. Huntingdon, bart. 1782.

1. Maria Elizabeth, b. May 1, and bapt. May 28, 1772, at Eltham.

2. Harriet, b. Nov. 10, and bapt. Dec. 1, 1773, at Eltham; marr. April 1798, Tho. Byron, at Marylebone.

3. William-Aſhby Latham, b. Feb. 6, and bapt. Mar. 22, 1775, at Eltham.=Mary Miller, dau. of Michael Miller, of Briſtol, mar. July 15, 1797, at St. George's, Han.-ſq.

4. Dorothea-Hinde, born May 3, and bapt. June 1, 1779, at Eltham.

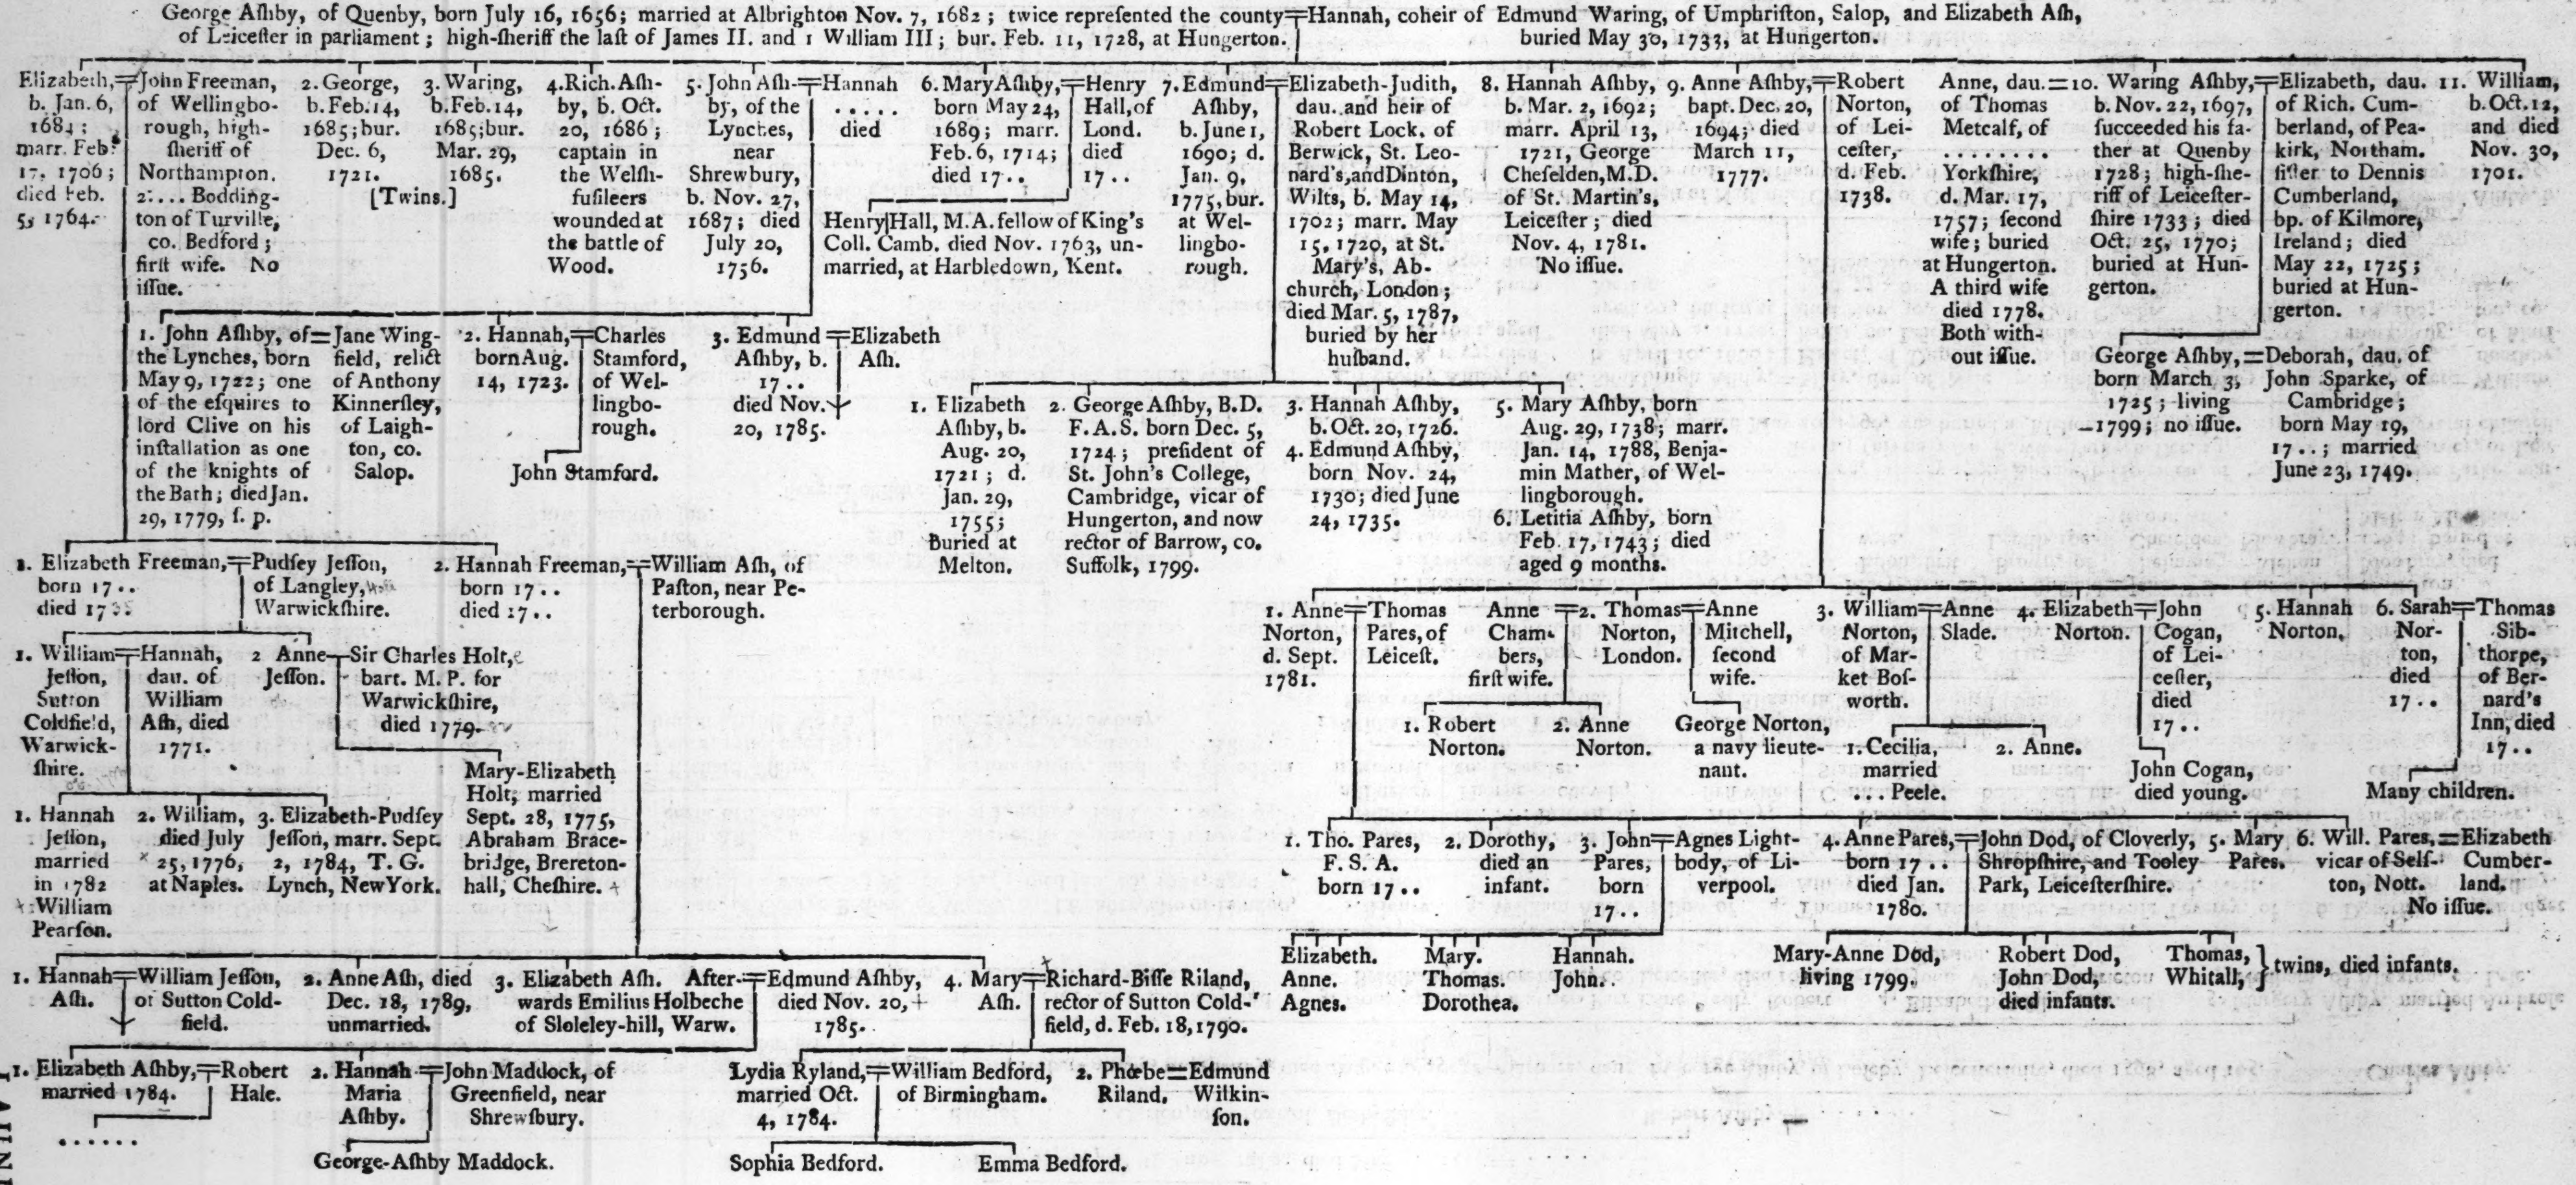
Shukbrugh-Aſhby Latham, William-George Latham, } Twins, born Dec. 29, 1798

1. Amelia, born April 15, 1772.

2. Shukbrugh-Aſhby Apreece, eldeſt ſon, born Dec. 17, 1773.=Jane Carr, of Portland Place, 1798.

3. Thomas-George Apreece, born Aug. 17, 1791.

Pedigree of the Elder Branch of the Family of ASHBY, of QUENBY, continued from p. 299.

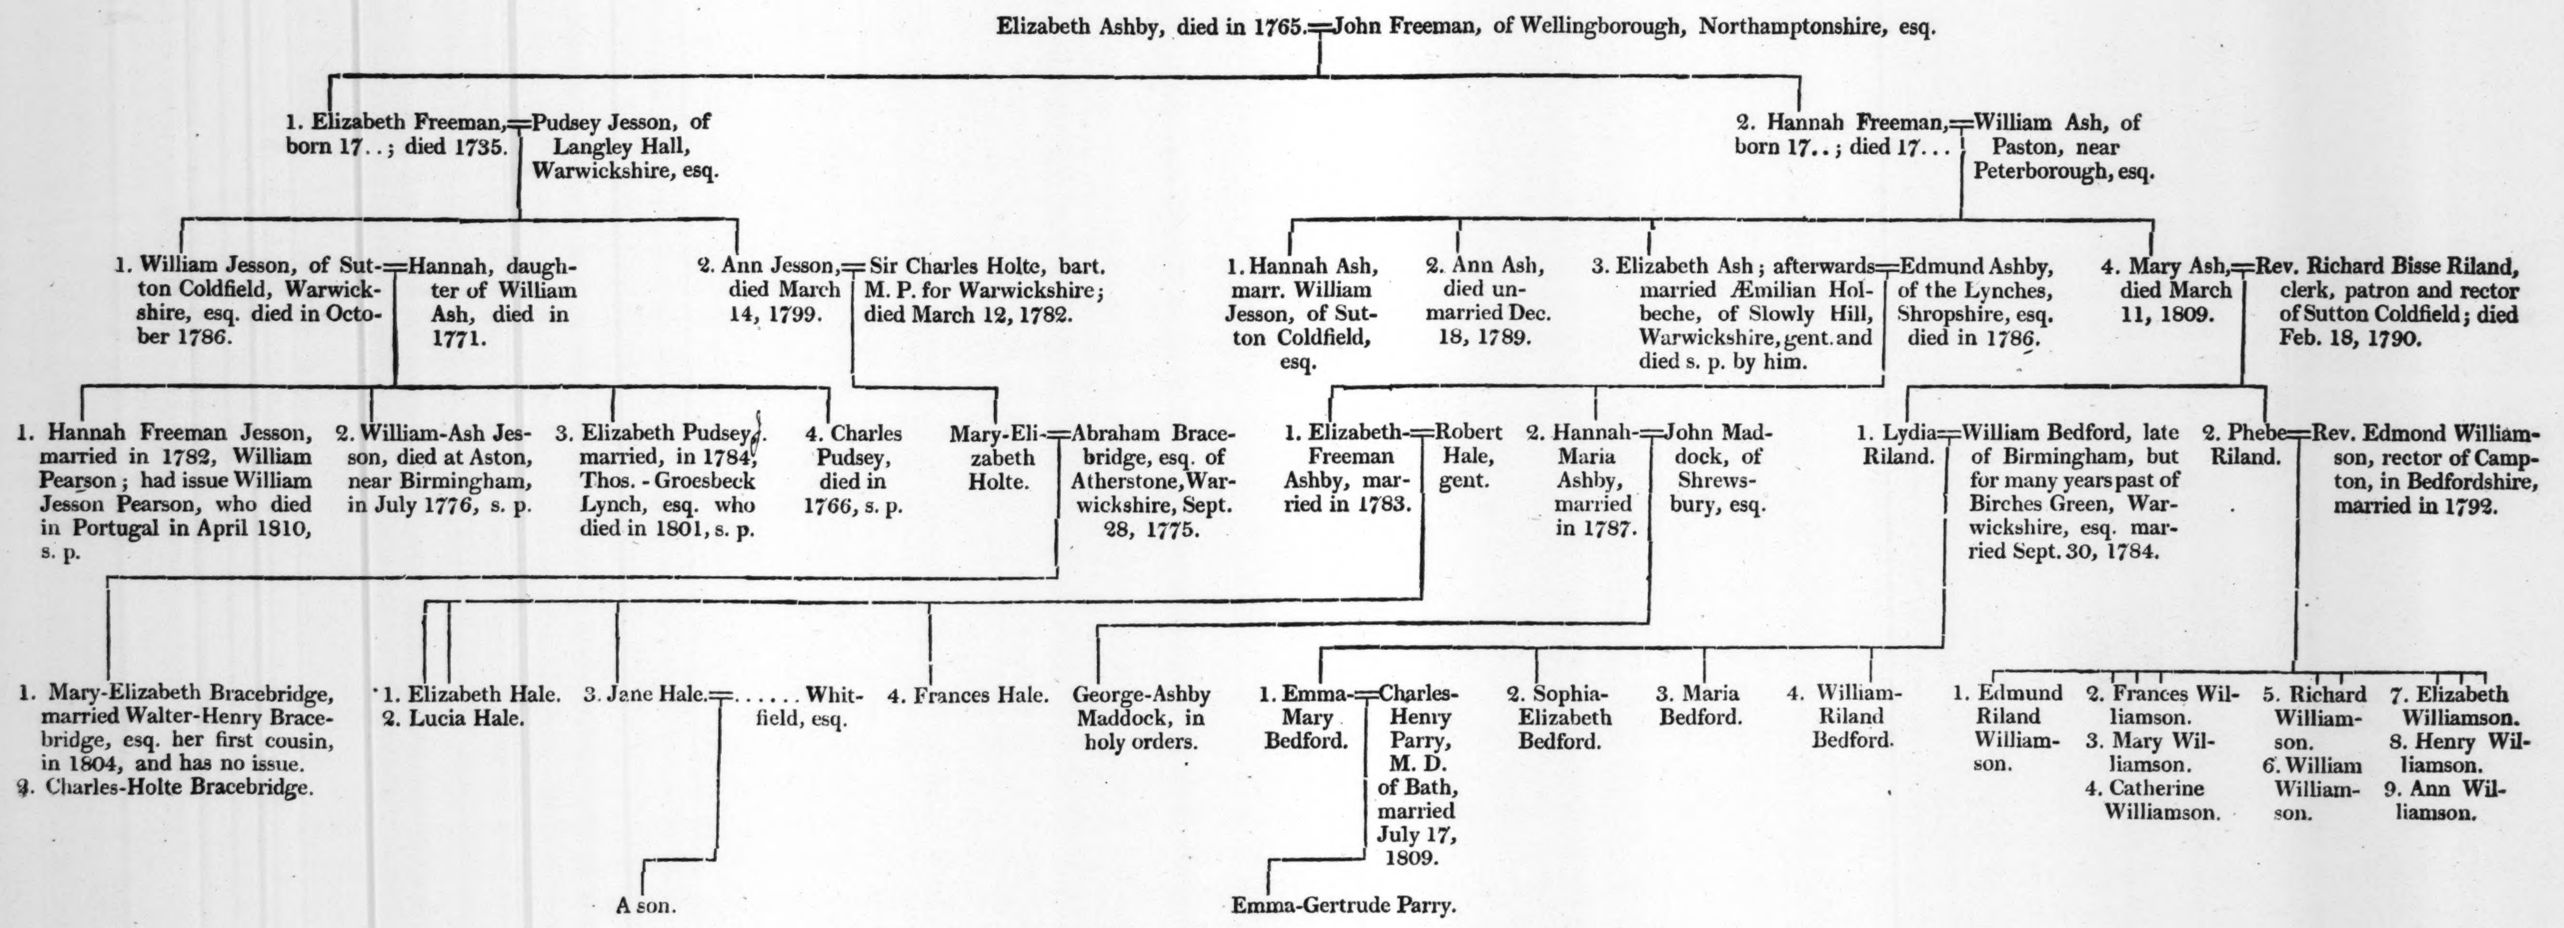


George Aſhby, of Quenby, born July 16, 1656; married at Albrighton Nov. 7, 1682; twice repreſented the county of Leiceſter in parliament; high-ſheriff the laſt of James II. and 1 William III; bur. Feb. 11, 1728, at Hungerton. = Hannah, coheir of Edmund Waring, of Umphriſton, Salop, and Elizabeth Aſh, buried May 30, 1733, at Hungerton.
Elizabeth, b. Jan. 6, 1684; marr. Feb. 17, 1706; died Feb. 5, 1764. = John Freeman, of Wellingborough, high-ſheriff of Northampton. 2. . . . Boddington of Turville, co. Bedford; firſt wife. No iſſue.
2. George, b. Feb. 14, 1685; bur. Dec. 6, 1721.
3. Waring, b. Feb. 14, 1685; bur. Mar. 29, 1685.
[Twins.]
4. Rich. Aſhby, b. Oct. 20, 1686; captain in the Welſh fuſileers wounded at the battle of Wood.
5. John Aſhby, of the Lynches, near Shrewbury, b. Nov. 27, 1687; died July 20, 1756. = Hannah . . . . . died
6. Mary Aſhby, born May 24, 1689; marr. Feb. 6, 1714; died 17 . . = Henry Hall, of Lond. died 17 . .
Henry Hall, M.A. fellow of King's Coll. Camb. died Nov. 1763, unmarried, at Harbledown, Kent.
7. Edmund Aſhby, b. June 1, 1690; d. Jan. 9, 1775, bur. at Wellingborough. = Elizabeth-Judith, dau. and heir of Robert Lock, of Berwick, St. Leonard's, and Dinton, Wilts, b. May 14, 1702; marr. May 15, 1720, at St. Mary's, Abchurch, London; died Mar. 5, 1787, buried by her huſband.
8. Hannah Aſhby, b. Mar. 2, 1692; marr. April 13, 1721, George Cheſelden, M.D. of St. Martin's, Leiceſter; died Nov. 4, 1781. No iſſue.
9. Anne Aſhby, bapt. Dec. 20, 1694; died March 11, 1777. = Robert Norton, of Leiceſter, d. Feb. 1738.
Anne, dau. of Thomas Metcalf, of . . . . Yorkſhire, d. Mar. 17, 1757; ſecond wife; buried at Hungerton. A third wife died 1778. Both without iſſue. = 10. Waring Aſhby, b. Nov. 22, 1697, ſucceeded his father at Quenby 1728; high-ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire 1733; died Oct. 25, 1770; buried at Hungerton. = Elizabeth, dau. of Rich. Cumberland, of Peakirk, Northam. ſiſter to Dennis Cumberland, bp. of Kilmore, Ireland; died May 22, 1725; buried at Hungerton.
11. William, b. Oct. 12, and died Nov. 30, 1701.
1. John Aſhby, of the Lynches, born May 9, 1722; one of the eſquires to lord Clive on his inſtallation as one of the knights of the Bath; died Jan. 29, 1779, ſ. p. = Jane Wingfield, relict of Anthony Kinnerſley, of Laighton, co. Salop.
2. Hannah, born Aug. 14, 1723. = Charles Stamford, of Wellingborough.
John Stamford.
3. Edmund Aſhby, b. 17 . . died Nov. 20, 1785. = Elizabeth Aſh.
1. Elizabeth Aſhby, b. Aug. 20, 1721; d. Jan. 29, 1755; Buried at Melton.
2. George Aſhby, B.D. F.A.S. born Dec. 5, 1724; preſident of St. John's College, Cambridge, vicar of Hungerton, and now rector of Barrow, co. Suffolk, 1799.
3. Hannah Aſhby, b. Oct. 20, 1726.
4. Edmund Aſhby, born Nov. 24, 1730; died June 24, 1735.
5. Mary Aſhby, born Aug. 29, 1738; marr. Jan. 14, 1788, Benjamin Mather, of Wellingborough.
6. Letitia Aſhby, born Feb. 17, 1743; died aged 9 months.
George Aſhby, born March 3, 1725; living 1799; no iſſue. = Deborah, dau. of John Sparke, of Cambridge; born May 19, 17 . .; married June 23, 1749.
1. Elizabeth Freeman, born 17 . . died 17 . . = Pudſey Jeſſon, of Langley, Warwickſhire.
2. Hannah Freeman, born 17 . . died 17 . . = William Aſh, of Paſton, near Peterborough.
1. William Jeſſon, Sutton Coldfield, Warwickſhire. = Hannah, dau. of William Aſh, died 1771.
2 Anne Jeſſon. = Sir Charles Holt, bart. M. P. for Warwickſhire, died 1779.
Mary-Elizabeth Holt, married Sept. 28, 1775, Abraham Bracebridge, Brereton-hall, Cheſhire.
1. Hannah Jeſſon, married in 1782 William Pearſon.
2. William, died July 25, 1776, at Naples.
3. Elizabeth-Pudſey Jeſſon, marr. Sept. 2, 1784, T. G. Lynch, New York.
1. Hannah Aſh. = William Jeſſon, of Sutton Coldfield.
2. Anne Aſh, died Dec. 18, 1789, unmarried.
3. Elizabeth Aſh. Afterwards Emilius Holbeche of Sloleley-hill, Warw. = Edmund Aſhby, died Nov. 20, 1785.
4. Mary Aſh. = Richard-Biſſe Riland, rector of Sutton Coldfield, d. Feb. 18, 1790.
1. Elizabeth Aſhby, married 1784. = Robert Hale.
. . . . . .
2. Hannah Maria Aſhby. = John Maddock, of Greenfield, near Shrewſbury.
George-Aſhby Maddock.
Lydia Ryland, married Oct. 4, 1784. = William Bedford, of Birmingham.
Sophia Bedford.
Emma Bedford.
2. Phœbe Riland. = Edmund Wilkinſon.
1. Anne Norton, d. Sept. 1781. = Thomas Pares, of Leiceſt.
Anne Chambers, firſt wife. = 2. Thomas Norton, London. = Anne Mitchell, ſecond wife.
1. Robert Norton.
2. Anne Norton.
George Norton, a navy lieutenant.
3. William Norton, of Market Boſworth. = Anne Slade.
1. Cecilia, married . . . Peele.
2. Anne.
4. Elizabeth Norton. = John Cogan, of Leiceſter, died 17 . .
John Cogan, died young.
5. Hannah Norton.
6. Sarah Norton, died 17 . . = Thomas Sibthorpe, of Bernard's Inn, died 17 . .
Many children.
1. Tho. Pares, F. S. A. born 17 . .
2. Dorothy, died an infant.
3. John Pares, born 17 . . = Agnes Lightbody, of Liverpool.
4. Anne Pares, born 17 . . died Jan. 1780. = John Dod, of Cloverly, Shropſhire, and Tooley Park, Leiceſterſhire.
5. Mary Pares.
6. Will. Pares, vicar of Selſton, Nott. = Elizabeth Cumberland. No iſſue.
Elizabeth. Anne. Agnes.
Mary. Thomas. Dorothea.
Hannah. John.
Mary-Anne Dod, living 1799.
Robert Dod, John Dod, died infants.
Thomas, Whitall, } twins, died infants.

LAUND,

[To face p. 300 of Vol. III.

CORRECTIONS and ADDITIONS to the PEDIGREE of the elder branch of ASHBY, of QUENBY, in EAST GOSCOTE HUNDRED.



Elizabeth Ashby, died in 1765.=John Freeman, of Wellingborough, Northamptonshire, esq.
1. Elizabeth Freeman, born 17..; died 1735.=Pudsey Jesson, of Langley Hall, Warwickshire, esq.
2. Hannah Freeman, born 17..; died 17...=William Ash, of Paston, near Peterborough, esq.
1. William Jesson, of Sutton Coldfield, Warwickshire, esq. died in October 1786.=Hannah, daughter of William Ash, died in 1771.
2. Ann Jesson, died March 14, 1799.=Sir Charles Holte, bart. M. P. for Warwickshire; died March 12, 1782.
1. Hannah Ash, marr. William Jesson, of Sutton Coldfield, esq.
2. Ann Ash, died unmarried Dec. 18, 1789.
3. Elizabeth Ash; afterwards married Æmilian Holbeche, of Slowly Hill, Warwickshire, gent. and died s. p. by him.=Edmund Ashby, of the Lynches, Shropshire, esq. died in 1786.
4. Mary Ash, died March 11, 1809.=Rev. Richard Bisse Riland, clerk, patron and rector of Sutton Coldfield; died Feb. 18, 1790.
1. Hannah Freeman Jesson, married in 1782, William Pearson; had issue William Jesson Pearson, who died in Portugal in April 1810, s. p.
2. William-Ash Jesson, died at Aston, near Birmingham, in July 1776, s. p.
3. Elizabeth Pudsey, married, in 1784, Thos.-Groesbeck Lynch, esq. who died in 1801, s. p.
4. Charles Pudsey, died in 1766, s. p.
Mary-Elizabeth Holte.=Abraham Bracebridge, esq. of Atherstone, Warwickshire, Sept. 28, 1775.
1. Elizabeth-Freeman Ashby, married in 1783.=Robert Hale, gent.
2. Hannah-Maria Ashby, married in 1787.=John Maddock, of Shrewsbury, esq.
1. Lydia Riland.=William Bedford, late of Birmingham, but for many years past of Birches Green, Warwickshire, esq. married Sept. 30, 1784.
2. Phebe Riland.=Rev. Edmond Williamson, rector of Campton, in Bedfordshire, married in 1792.
1. Mary-Elizabeth Bracebridge, married Walter-Henry Bracebridge, esq. her first cousin, in 1804, and has no issue.
2. Charles-Holte Bracebridge.
1. Elizabeth Hale.
2. Lucia Hale.
3. Jane Hale.=...... Whitfield, esq.
4. Frances Hale.
George-Ashby Maddock, in holy orders.
1. Emma-Mary Bedford.=Charles-Henry Parry, M. D. of Bath, married July 17, 1809.
2. Sophia-Elizabeth Bedford.
3. Maria Bedford.
4. William-Riland Bedford.
1. Edmund Riland Williamson.
2. Frances Williamson.
3. Mary Williamson.
4. Catherine Williamson.
5. Richard Williamson.
6. William Williamson.
7. Elizabeth Williamson.
8. Henry Williamson.
9. Ann Williamson.
A son.
Emma-Gertrude Parry.

N. B. Mary Ashby, who married in 1788 Benjamin Mather, died about 1799, s. p.

L A U N D,

Launde, or Lawnd, a ſequeſtred ſpot on the borders of the county of Rutland, at the time of the Conqueror's ſurvey, was a diſtinct manor, then in the tenure of Gerard, who held it under Robert de Buci[1].

The name is undoubtedly derived from its ſituation; a plain extended between two woods[2]. It is 14 miles diſtant from Leiceſter, 7 from Uppingham, 5 from Oakham; and is bounded by Lodington, Whatberg (otherwiſe Whadborough), Withcote, and by Lyefield and Belton (the two laſt places being in the county of Rutland). In the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county it is within the deanry of Goſcote.

At this place Richard Baſſet[3] and Maud his wife, daughter and heir of Geoffrey Ridell by Geva his wife, daughter of Hugh Lupus earl of Cheſter[4], in the latter part of the reign of Henry I, about 1125, founded a priory of Black Canons of the order of St. Auguſtin, to the honour of St. John the Baptiſt[5], “pro ſalute anime Gulielmi Conqueſtoris;” and gave to it the village of Lodington, within which it ſtood, with the church; the village of Friſby, with the church; together with the churches of Abkettleby, Oadby, Staunton[6], and Witherley, in this county; Aſhby Legers, Piteſle, Weldon, and Weſton, in Northamptonſhire; Wardley in Rutland; Colſton Baſſet in Nottinghamſhire; Hatherſege in Derbyſhire; Thatcham in Berkſhire; Patingham[7], and perhaps Walſall[8], in Staffordſhire; all which poſſeſſions and eſtates ſo granted, both ſpiritual and temporal, were confirmed in free alms by king Henry I; diſcharging at the ſame time the priory from all ſecular ſervice, &c. and granting them “ſoc & ſac, tol & theam,” &c.

“Henricus rex Anglie, Willielmo archiepiſcopo Cantuarienſi, & Alexandro epiſcopo Lincoln', comitibus, baronibus, & omnibus fidelibus ſuis, clericis & laicis, ſalutem. Sciatis me conceſſiſſe & confirmâſſe omnes donationes quas Ricardus Baſſet & Matildis Ridel uxor ejus fecerunt Deo & canonicis eccleſie Sancti Johannis Baptiſte de Landâ, quam fundaverunt pro animâ regis Willielmi patris mei; ſcilicet, villam de Lodinton, cum eccleſiâ, & omnibus ejuſdem ville pertinentiis; Friſeby, cum eccleſiâ ejuſdem ville, & omnibus pertinentiis ſuis; eccleſias de Weledon, de Weſton, de Weleham, de Piteſle, de Eſſebi, de Warleie, de Ketleby, de Ondeby, de Coleſton, de Haderſege, de Stanton, de Thacheham, de Patingham, de Widerle, de Walveſhull. Preterea concedo, & cartâ meâ preſenti prefatis canonicis confirmo, quicquid eis ab aliis datum fuerit, tam in terris quàm in eccleſiis, & in aliis redditibus quibuſlibet, ſicut carte donatorum teſtantur. Quare volo & firmitèr precipio, quòd omnia ſupradicta benè & in pace, liberè & quietè, & honorificè, teneant in perpetuum, in liberam eleemoſinam, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, abſque omni ſeculari ſervicio & conſuetudine, in boſco, in plano, in pratis, in paſturis, in molendinis, & ſtagnis & aquis, in viis, in ſemitis, & in omnibus locis, & ſicut Ricardus Baſſet unquam melius & liberius, vel aliquis anteceſſorum ſuorum, tenuit; cum ſocâ & ſacâ, & tol & theam, & infangenetheof, & cum omnibus libertatibus ad liberam & perpetuam eleemoſinam pertinentibus. Teſtibus; Rogero epiſcopo Saleſb', Ranulpho cancellario, Simone comite, Gilberto de Aquilâ, Hugone vicecomite Leyceſtrie. Apud Weſtmonaſterium[9].”

The ſame king, by another charter, confirmed the privileges and poſſeſſions of this foundation; and ſome towns are included in this confirming charter, which are not ſpecified in the former; viz. “totam villam de Lodinton, & quinque virgatas terre de Nortunâ, cum hominibus & omnibus ad eaſdem terras pertinentibus;” and, in addition to the churches confirmed by the other grant, thoſe of Holt[10], Brinton[11], and of Malueſhull[12].

“Henricus rex Anglie, archiepiſcopis, epiſcopis, abbatibus, comitibus, baronibus, juſticiariis, vicecomitibus, miniſtris, & omnibus fidelibus ſuis, clericis & laicis, Francis & Anglis, totius Anglie, ſalutem. Sciatis me conceſſiſſe & confirmâſſe Deo & Sancto Johanni Baptiſte de Lodintonâ, & canonicis ibidem Deo ſervientibus, omnes eccleſias, & terras, & redditus, & tenaturas ſubſcriptas, quas Ricardus Baſſet & Matildis uxor ſua eis in eleemoſinam dederunt & conceſſerunt, ſicut cartule predicti Ricardi Baſſet teſtantur; videlicet, totam villam Lodintonam, & quinque virgatas terre de Nortunâ, cum hominibus & omnibus ad eaſdem terras pertinentibus, ſicut Ricardus Baſſet & uxor ſua dederunt & conceſſerunt, & ſicut carte ejus teſtantur. Et preterea concedo & confirmo, in perpetuam eleemoſinam, omnes eccleſias quas predictus Ricardus Baſſet eis dedit & conceſſit, ſicut cartule ſue teſtantur; videlicet, eccleſias de Weledon, & de Weſton, & de Weleham, & de Holt, & de Pitteſleye, & de Eſſebi, & de Warleâ, & de Chetelbi, & de Friſeby, & de Oundeby, & de Coleſton, & de Herſegiâ, & de Stanton, & de Tacheham, & de Patingham, & de Wirdedelai, & de Brinton, & de Malueſhullâ. Has omnes tenaturas, tam in terris quàm in eccleſiis & aliis redditibus, & quecunque bona iſti vel alii domini dederunt eiſdem canonicis, vel daturi ſunt, eis in perpetuam eleemoſinam confirmo, & preſenti ſigilli mei impreſſione corroboro. Quare volo, &c. Teſtibus; H. epiſcopo Wyntonienſi, G. de Glintonâ, Alberico de Veer, & R. de Sigillo. Apud Windeſor[13]; &c.”

By a charter of Geoffrey Ridel, printed in the “Liber Niger,” it appears that the canons of Laund held three ploughlands[14] within his fee. They had alſo in free alms ten ploughlands in Lodington; in Daubus [Dalby] one ploughland and three oxgangs; one ploughland in free alms at Weſton; eight ploughlands in Friſby, held by foreign ſervice[15]; and one ploughland in Weſton[16].

King Henry II. confirmed to them the church of Ernehale in Nottinghamſhire, with its appurtenances; and farther confirmed all the former endowments of Richard Baſſet and his wife: in which charter of confirmation is alſo included " dimidium Grimeſtone," with the church and its appurtenances; Salterford; the church of Colſton; the church of Wardley, with the chapel of Belton; the church of Flethen [1]; the church of Little Peatling, &c.; in Dalby eleven bovates of land; in Norton five virgates of land; the church of Abketleby, with the chapels of Wartnaby and of Holwell, and in Holwell one carucate of land; the land late of Ralph de Swyneford; and one carucate in Walecot and Upetun; all the churches, &c. recited the former grants; one virgate of land in the village of Tilton, and meadow land in Hereſmore [2], of the gift of Everard and Waleran, and their men, and the whole pariſh; & culturas domini inter Holbec & boſcum de Herewardſwode; the church of Reideby (Rotherby); and two virgates in Langham; the church of Glaſton; the mill of Paunton; Holwell, with its appurtenances; and two virgates of land in Skeffington. It appears alſo by this charter, that the priory was built " in territorio ville de Lodington."

---

[1] See hereafter, p. 329.

[2] “For through this laund anon the deer will come.” Shakeſpeare, Third Part of King Henry VI. Act III. Scene I. So, in the old Play of Orlando Furioſo, 1594, “And that they trace the ſhady lawnds.” See Steevens's edition, 1793, vol. X. p. 299.

[3] Juſtice of England in the time of king Henry I. and king Stephen, and grandfather of Richard Baſſet of Weldon.

[4] MS. Burton.

[5] Tauner's Notitia; Dugdale, Bar. Angl. vol. I. fol. 378. a.; and Monaſt. Angl. vol. II. fol. 90. a.

[6] Suppoſed to be Stony Staunton, the property of the Baſſets; but, if ſo, it was ſoon exchanged for other property. “Stanton,” however, may be found in all counties.

[7] By Pat. 18 Edw. III. p. 1. m. 22, this church was confirmed to them, together with the chapel of Pateſhall.

[8] See note 12.

[9] Dugdale, Mon. Angl. vol. II. p. 90; ex Cart. 4 Edw. III. n. 5. per Inſpeximus. Videſis Plac. coram Rege, Term. Mich. 14 Ric. II. Rot. 28. Northampton.

[10] This is probably the chapel, not now exiſting, which has been noticed under Abkettleby, vol. II. p. 16.

[11] There are a Great and Little Brington in Northamptonſhire, near Daventry, in Newbottle-grove hundred. One of theſe probably is the Brinton here intended; though the connexion does not appear in Bridges.

[12] Perhaps Walſall in Staffordſhire. In the former charter it is called Walveſhull. “*Malue*ſhull” probably is an inaccurate reading; and yet, when contracted into “Malſhall,” or “Melſhall,” it is not unlike an Engliſh name.

[13] Dugdale, ubi ſupra.

[14] A ploughland, or carucata terræ, was then worth about 40s. a year. See Dugdale, Mon. Angl. vol. I. p. 809.

[15] If this land had been held in pure alms, it had been exempt. If the lord had acquitted it, he muſt have paid the forenſic out of his demeſne. If the king confirmed it in free alms, the tenant was quit, and the lord too. Ruſſel, MS.

[16] Liber Niger, pp. 210—212.

" Henricus rex Anglie, dux Normannie & Aquitanie, & comes Andegavie, omnibus archiepiſcopis, &c. ſalutem: Sciatis me dediſſe & conceſſiſſe eccleſie Sancti Johannis Baptiſte de Landâ, & canonicis ibidem Deo ſervientibus, eccleſiam de Ernehalâ, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis; & inſuper confirmâſſe illis omnes donationes quas Ricardus Baſſet & Matildis uxor ejus, & heredes ſui, rationabilitèr eis fecerunt; ſcilicet, totam villam de Lodinton, in cujus territorio Abbatia fundata eſt, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis; & Freſby, cum eccleſiâ ejuſdem ville, & cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis; dimidium Grimeſtone, cum eccleſiâ & pertinentiis ſuis; Salterford; eccleſiam de Coleſton; eccleſiam de Warleg, cum capellâ de Belton; eccleſiam de Flethen; eccleſiam de Petlingis; eccleſiam de Widredele; eccleſiam de Ondeby, &, in eâdem villâ, quinque virgatas terre; in Dalby undecim bovatas terre; in Norton quinque virgatas terre; eccleſiam de Chetelbi, cum capellis de Wartnodby & de Holewell, & in Holewellâ unam carucatam terre; eccleſias de Weledon, & de Weſton, & de Weleham; & terram que fuit Radulphi de Swineford; & unam carucatam in Walecote & Upetun. Inſuper & omnes eccleſias domini eorum; videlicet, eccleſiam de Piteſlai, & de Aſſeby, & de Stanton, & de Brinton, & de Tacheham, & de Walveſellâ, & Patingham, & de Herſege, & omnes alias eccleſias, terras, & poſſeſſiones, quas Ricardus Baſſet & heredes ſui illis rationabilitèr dederunt, ſicut carte eorum teſtantur. Preterea eiſdem canonicis concedo & confirmo quicquid eis ab aliis rationabilitèr datum eſt, tam in eccleſiis, quàm in terris, & in aliis redditibus & rebus quibuſlibet, ſicut carte donatorum teſtantur; videlicet, eccleſiam de Tiltonâ, cum capellis & omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, & in eâdem villâ unam virgatam terre, & prata de Hereſmore, de dono Everardi & Walerani, & hominum eorum, & totius parochie; & culturas domini inter Holebec & boſcum de Herewardeſwde; & eccleſiam de Reidebi; & duas virgatas in Langeham; & eccleſiam de Glaeſton; & molendina de Panton; & Hotwet, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis; & duas virgatas terre in Scheftinton. Quare volo & firmitèr precipio, &c. Teſtibus; Thomâ cancellario regis, comite Cornubie, Ricardo de Humet conſtabulario, Gwarino filio Gerardi camerario. Apud Northamptoniam."

About the year 1180, Fulk ſon of Warine [3] gave to the church of St. John the Baptiſt at Laund and the convent there, in pure alms, Burgtnett [4] and all the incloſed arable land within the circuit, as it had been uſed to be cultivated, and common of paſture after harveſt-time for their beaſts and ſheep in all his uncultivated and waſte lands (warectis & aſſartis) in Whatberg; Witneſſes; Odo abbot of Ouſton and divers others. And this grant was afterwards confirmed and enlarged by his wife Eva and Fulco their ſon.

In 1189, an agreement was made, by cirograph interſealed, that the prior and convent of Laund ſhould pay to the prior and convent of Chaucombe annually one mark of ſilver, &c. for the advowſon of a moiety of the church of Rotherby.

" Hec eſt finalis concordia facta inter W. priorem et conventum de Landâ, et W. priorem & conventum de Chaucombe, coram W. Rothomagenſi archiepō, G. filio Petri, Hugone Bardolf, Oſberto filio Hervi, Michaelo Belet, magiſtro Thomâ de Heſſeburn, Stephano de Sancto Jacobo, & aliis baronibus et fidelibus domini regis: quando placitum fuit inter Wach' priorem & conventum de Landâ tenentes, et Hugonem de Chaucombe petentem, de advocatione medietatis eccleſie de Reirebi; quod prior & conventus de Landâ ſolvent priori & conventui de Chaucombe annuatim unam marcam argenti ad duos terminos; ſcil', ad Paſcha dimidiam marcam, & ad feſtum Michaelis dimidiam marcam. Ut autem iſta concordia recta & inconcuſſa permaneat, ſigillorum noſtrorum impreſſione ex utrâque parte roboravimus [5]."

About the ſame period, the following confirmation was obtained from Hugh biſhop of Lincoln:

" Omnibus Chriſti fidelibus ad quos preſens ſcriptum pervenerit, Hugo, Dei gratiâ, Lincclnie epiſcopus, ſalutem in Domino. Ne donaciones locis religioſis facte alicujus improbitate vel malignitate poſſint in poſterum retractari, prudens antiquorum cavit ſollertia ſcriptos authenticos ad poſterorum memoriam eaſdem donaciones exarare, & ſcripto munimento perpetuum eis robur commodare: Nos, igitur, veterum veſtigia pia ſequentes, beneficia que eccleſie Sancti Johannis Baptiſte de Landâ, & canonicis ibidem Deo ſervientibus, a Chriſti fidelibus collata ſunt, eidem domui duximus noſtrâ auctoritate confirmare, & ad perpetuitatis memoriam propriis vocabulis deſignare; videlicet, villam de L dinton, de dono Ricardi Baſſet, cum eccleſiâ & molendinis, & omnibus pertinentiis; Landas, ubi canonici manent, cum molendino & hominibus ibidem demorantibus; Sunbr' & Friſeby, cum eccleſiâ Sancti Gudlaci, & cum molendino & ceteris pertinentiis; in Ondebi eccleſiam Sancti Petri, cum ſuis pertinentiis; eccleſiam Sancte Elene de Ketleby, cum capellis & pertinentiis ſuis; eccleſiam Sancte Marie de Warle, cum capellâ de Beltun; eccleſiam Sancte Marie de Weledon, cum pertinentiis ſuis; eccleſiam Sancte Marie de Weſton, cum capellâ de Sutton; eccleſiam Sancti Andree de Welleham; eccleſiam Sancte Leodegarii de Aſſeby; eccleſiam Sancte Marie Magdelene de Blathewic, & eccleſiam Sancti Andree de Erningworde, de dono Ricardi filii Roberti; eccleſiam Sancti Nicholai de Buggedon, de dono Roberti filii Hugonis; eccleſiam Sancti Andree de Glaeſton, de dono Philippi de Moors & Jordani fratris ejuſque; eccleſiam Sancti Petri de Tilton, cum capellis & omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, de dono Edwardi de Tilton; eccleſiam Sancte Marie de Eiſſeby, cum capellis & pertinentiis aliis, de dono Radulphi de Folevile. Ut igitur hec noſtra confirmatio perpetuis perſeveret temporibus, eam duximus preſenti ſcripto & ſigillo noſtro communire; ſalvis epiſcopalibus conſuetudinibus, & Lincolnie eccleſie dignitate. Teſtibus; Ham' Linc' eccleſie decano; magiſtro Ricardo de Swalewedon; magiſtro Ger' de Roell; Euſtachio de Wilton, Hugone de Sancto Edwardo [6]."

Their right to the advowſon of the church of Wardley, however, ſeems to have been diſputed in 1207; for, in that year, Walter de Baſkerville and Iſolda his wife " petunt verſus priorem de Landâ de advocatione eccleſie de Warely [7]."

From Peter de Nevill [8], of Allexton, who was foreſter of the counties of Leiceſter and Rutland under

---

[1] This probably was Fladborough, in Nottinghamſhire; though Thoroton in this particular is ſilent. There is a Flethen in Huntingdonſhire; and ſeveral Fleets, in Lincolnſhire.

[2] I have no doubt of this being the modern Whadborough; which was then the king's land.

[3] Sheriff of Shropſhire, a great warrior amongſt the Welſh, and founder of a priory of black monks of the order of Grandmont Limoiſin at Alberbury in Shropſhire; Tanner, Not. Mon. p. 449.

[4] In another charter called Burghſeit; that part of Whadborough which appended to Burrow. Of this part of their property, ſee more particularly hereafter, in the hiſtory of that hamlet.

[5] Madox, Formulare Anglicanum, in Diſſertatione, fol. xiv. ex autographo in Officio Curiæ Augmentationum. The original deed has the word CIROGRAPHUM in capitals cut through indentwiſe; and a ſeal hanging on a parchment label, with a counter-ſeal.

[6] Communicated by the Rev. E. Williams, of Eaton near Shrewſbury, from the MSS. of Mr. Dodſworth.

[7] Wright's Rutland, p. 133. è Fragmentis 4 Johannis, Rot. 13. They preſented, however, John de Florentia to that church in 1241; Reg. Groſſeteſte, Pont. 7.

[8] Of whom ſee vol. II. p. 516; vol. III. p. 6.

Henry the Second (as his father had been under Henry the Firſt) the prior and convent about this period obtained the following grant:

"Sciant preſentes & futuri, quod ego dominus Petrus de Nevill de Alaxſton conceſſi et quietum clamavi priori et conventui de Landâ, totam communam paſturam in terris inter Weſt parcum ſuum de Lodinton & Helotecros, & deinde per quandam viam que vocatur Redegate, & ſic ulterius per ſiketum quod deſcendit ad quareram dictorum prioris & conventûs, & ab eodem ſiketo uſque ad curiam hoſpitalis, pro me & heredibus meis in perpetuum; & quod liceat eis dictas terras arare, ſeminare, vel pratum inde facere, & proficuum ſuum, &c. inde facere, ſine contradictione meâ vel heredum meorum; ſalvâ dicto domino Petro communâ paſturâ in eiſdem, temporibus apertis, dummodò habeat dominium ville de Witkot, & dimidiam earum terrarum domini regis in eadem villâ, non obſtante aliquâ obligacione a domino priore quocunque modo michi alias factâ. In cujus rei teſtimonium, &c. Hiis teſtibus; domino Johanne Samſon; Petro de Huppingham; Galfrido Venatore; Johanne de Diggeby; Waltero de Norton; & aliis[1]."

By the record of a perambulation made in 1217, it appears that king Henry III, in the ſecond year of his reign, granted a commiſſion to John Mareſchal, chief juſtice of the foreſts, William de Cantelupe, ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire, Hugo de Nevile, William de Albini, Robert de Roppeſley, and others, to perambulate, mere, and bound out, the foreſt of Lyfield, co. Rutland, which from North to South lieth on the edge of Leiceſterſhire; and had been (as it ſhould ſeem) afforeſted again by king Henry II, after the firſt diſafforeſting thereof; which, by force of the ſaid commiſſion, was performed and mered by twelve knights, ſir Ralph Baſſet of Weldon, ſir William de Preſton, and others, by deed indented, to which all the ſaid knights, with the abbot of Ouſton and the prior of Laund, ſet their ſeals; by which it appeareth, that the meres betwixt the ſaid counties of Leiceſter and Rutland were the bounds of the ſaid foreſt on the Weſt, and the river of Welland on the South; and ſo farther bounded as in the ſaid record is more particularly expreſſed. Within theſe bounds was the village of Withcote, with a wood, which the king held in demeſne by exchange with Reginald de Withcoc; and which, with all the neighbouring woods (the Hereſwode in Whatberg[2], recorded in Domeſday as being four miles long, and one broad[3]) were diſafforeſted by the king. The Lady Wood (as it is now called) in Leiceſterſhire, with Lyfield Foreſt and The King's Lodge in Rutland, are remaining proofs of the original ſituation of the foreſt and woods in this neighbourhood.

In the Matriculus of 1220, Richard Baſſet is ſtated to be the patron of the priory of Laund; and in 1223 Ralph Baſſet of Drayton was ſummoned to anſwer the prior of Laund, that he ſhould hold his covenant, formerly made by indenture or cirograph, concerning common of paſture in Colſton Baſſet, co. Notts; which he accordingly did[4].

By a fine paſſed at Weſtminſter in 1230, between Ralph de Eſtre petent, and Oſbert prior of Laund querent, concerning the rectory of St. Mary of Blatherwick in Northamptonſhire, the ſaid Ralph releaſed to the prior and his ſucceſſors all claim of right[5].

In 1236, on the marriage of the ſiſter of king Henry III. to the emperor of the Romans.

"Prior de Landâ redd' comp' de 100s̄. de auxilio prelatorum conceſſ' dño regi ad maritand' ſororem ſuam Romano imperatori. In theſ̃o lib', & quietus eſt[6]."

In the ſame year, the prior of Laund preſented to the church of Glaſton, co. Rutland; and the incumbent paid an annual penſion of 6*s*. 8*d*. at the feaſt of St. Michael to the priory of Laund[7].

About this period alſo the following confirmation was obtained from Bp. Groſſeteſte:

"Robertus, Dei gratiâ, Lincoln' epiſcopus, omnibus archidiaconis, decanis, necnon & omnibus fidelibus per epiſcopatum conſtitutis, ſalutem & paternam benedictionem. Quamvis, ex injuncto nobis officio, curam omnium nobis ſubditorum agere debeamus; eis tamen in poſterum propenſiùs providere movemur, quos & ampliori familiaritatis ratione complectimur, & arctioris vite profeſſores conſpicimus. Inde eſt quod dilectis fratribus de Landâ, tam ſubſtitutis quam ſubſtituendis, omnes poſſeſſiones quas in noſtrâ dioceſi canonicè optinent, ſeu in futurum rationabilibus modis, Deo adjuvante, adipiſci poterunt, epiſcopali auctoritate confirmamus, & preſentis ſcripti patrocinio cum ſigilli noſtri impreſſione communimus. In quibus hec propriis duximus exprimenda vocabulis; eccleſiam Sancti Johannis, ejuſdem loci, cum pertinentiis ſuis; villam de Lodinton, cum eccleſiâ ejuſdem ville, & omnibus pertinentiis ſuis; Friſebi, cum eccleſiâ ejuſdem ville, & omnibus pertinentiis ſuis; eccleſiam de Chetelbi, cum capellâ de Holewele, & omnibus pertinentiis ſuis; eccleſiam de Redrebi; eccleſiam de Ondebi; eccleſiam de Warlegâ, cum capella de Beltunâ; eccleſias de Weledun, de Weſton, de Welleham, de Patlinge, de Aſſebi juxta Davintre; eccleſiam de Tiltun, cum capellis de Whatebergâ & Merdefeld; eccleſiam Glaſtun, & molendinum de Pantun; eccleſiam de Widredelai; eccleſias de Arnigworde, de Buggedun, de Blatherwick, cum pertinentiis ſuis. Decernimus itaque ut pronominate poſſeſſiuncule, et omnia que largicione quorumcunque fidelium, Deo dante, adepturi ſunt, firma eis, & ſucceſſoribus eorum, & integra & intemerata permaneant. Si quis autem eaſdem vel vi vel fraude minuere, perturbare, vel auferre temptaverit, niſi, prius commonitus, celeriùs reſipuerit, perpetuo anathemati ſubjaceat, & divine ultionis judicium in ſe ſentiat. Quicunque verò prefata bona, Deo inſpirante, auxerit, Remunerator omnium bonorum cum remiſſione omnium peccatorum centuplum accipiat, & vitam eternam in futuro, in perpetuum victurum cum Domino, poſſideat[8]."

In 1241, they had lands in Claydon[9], co. Oxon.

In 1247, the priories of Laund and Alberbury entered into a ſolemn agreement concerning their reſpective boundaries at Whadborough[10].

In 1248, they obtained a grant of free-warren in all their demeſne lands at Lodington; with permiſſion to incloſe their wood ſituate on the borders of Rutland, with a ditch and fence, and to convert it into a park.

"Rex archiepiſcopis, &c. ſalutem. Sciatis nos conceſſiſſe, & hâc cartâ noſtrâ confirmâſſe, dilecto nobis in Chriſto fratri Roberto de Martivaus, priori de Launde, & conventui ejuſdem loci, quod ipſi & ſucceſſores ſui in perpetuum habeant liberam warennam in omnibus dominicis terris manerii ſui de Ludington, in com' Leic'; ita quod nullus intret terras illas ad fugandum in eis, vel ad aliquid capiendum quod ad warennam pertineat, ſine licentiâ & voluntate ipſius prioris & conventûs, vel ſucceſſorum ſuorum, ſuper forisfacturam noſtram decem librarum. Conceſſimus etiam eiſdem priori & conventui, quod boſcum ſuum quem habent in eodem manerio, in confinio foreſte noſtre de Roteland, claudere poſſint foſſato & hayâ, & parcum inde facere, ſecundum quod ſibi viderit expedire; & quod ipſi & ſucceſſores ſui in perpetuum teneant parcum illum & boſcum illum ſic clauſum, ſine impedimento aut occaſione noſtri, vel heredum noſtrorum. Quare volumus, &c. Hiis teſtibus; Simone de Monteforti, com' Leic'; Roberto Paſſelaco[11], archid' Lewenſi; Willõ de

---

[1] Communicated by the Rev. E. Williams, from the MSS. of Dodſworth.

[2] Which in ſubſequent perambulations ſeems to have been corrupted to Stereſwode. See vol. II. p. 517.

[3] "Silva totius Vicecomitatûs Hereſwode vocat' habet' 4 leuvas in longitudine, & 1 leuvam in latitudine." Domeſday, fol. 230.

[4] Thoroton, Nottingham, p. 81. a; Teſt. de Nov. Plac. de Banco Com. Trin. 27 Hen. III. Rot. 5; & Plac. de Banco, 27 Hen. III. Cart. 35 Hen. III. m. 2.

[5] Fines 14 Hen. III.

[6] Teſta de Nevill.

[7] Reg. Lincoln; and Wright's Rutland, fol. 65. & Comp. Johannis Dodinton, pro comitat. Rutl. in Offic. Augmentationum.

[8] Dodſworth, MSS. ut ſupra, B. Nº 6.

[9] Fin. Oxon. 25 Hen III.

[10] See more particulars hereafter under Whadborough.

[11] Robert Paſſelew, archdeacon of Lewes, died 8 Id. June 1252, at Waltham Abbey, and was there buried. Weever, p. 645.—Robert Paſſelew (ſee Browne Willis's Mitred Parliamentary Abbeys, vol. I. p. 192.) occurs witneſs to a charter, "dat. Nov. 22, 33 Hen. III, reg. temp. eccleſ. Roffenſ." p. 56. The arms of this family are, a feſs between three mullets pierced. Plate XLV. fig. 10.—According to Le Neve, p. 56, he was elected to the ſee of Chicheſter; but the election diſallowed by the Pope.—In "Magna Britannia Antiqua & Nova," vol. V. p. 543, it is ſtated, that, on the death of biſhop Nevill, "the prebendaries proceeded to an election of another biſhop; and, to pleaſe the king, choſe one Robert Paſſelew for their biſhop; becauſe the king had a great kindneſs for him, upon the account of his induſtry and quick diſpatch of buſineſs; but he had ſo little learning, that the biſhops of the kingdom diſdained his company, and uſed their endeavours to make his election void, and put into his place Richard de Wich."

Cantilupo; Bertramo de Cryoll; Hugone de Vivian; Johanne de Lexinton; Paulino Paumar', Bart' Peche; Roberto Walerand; & aliis. Dat' per manum noſtram apud Weſtm', xxv° Julii [1].”

About the year 1250, Robert prior of Laund, by conſent of his convent, renounced to the priory of Alberbury certain privileges at Whadborough; and obtained in return a conſiderable portion of land ſituated between the boundaries of Halſted and Laund [2].

In 1281, they held plea of aſſize for their mill at Paunton, in the county of Lincoln [3].

When king Edward I, in the 22d year of his reign, 1294, commanded all monaſteries to receive protections from him; among the canons regular were the abbot of Leiceſter and the prior of Laund [4].

In 1298, Hugo de Ilveſton, rector of Arthingworth, gave to the prior and convent of Laund, then patrons of that church, one toft in the townſhip of Arthingworth, belonging to the rectory [5].

Feb. 1, 1305-6, they obtained from William, ſon of William le Clerk, 12 acres of arable land and 5 acres of meadow at Friſby ſuper Wrethek; from John Alden 20 acres of arable and 5 of meadow; and from Robert le Mounes and Alice his wife 8 acres of meadow, in the ſame village [6].

In 1308, David Scevington was permitted to give to the abbot and convent of Laund five marks of rent, at Halſtede and Skeffington, in exchange for certain lands in thoſe villages [7].

In 1313, they obtained from king Edward II. the two following charters of confirmation:

1. “ Rex archiepiſcopis, &c. ſalutem. Inſpeximus cartam quam dominus Henricus, quondam rex Anglie, progenitor noſter, fecit Deo & canonicis eccleſie Sancti Johannis Baptiſte de Landa, in hec verba: [Henricus rex Anglie, Willielmo archiepiſcopo Cantuar', &c. prout ſupra, de verbo ad verbum.] Inſpeximus etiam quondam aliam cartam quam idem dominus Henricus quondam rex Anglie, progenitor noſter, fecit predictis canonicis, in hec verba. [Henricus Rex Anglie, archiepiſcopis, epiſcopis, &c. ſalutem, prout ſupra.] Inſpeximus etiam quandam aliam cartam domini Henrici [ſecundi], quam fecit eiſdem canonicis, in hec verba. [Henricus Rex Anglie, dux Normannie, &c. prout ſupra.] Et conceſſimus eiſdem priori & canonicis, quod ipſi & ſucceſſores ſui habeant liberam warennam in omnibus dominicis terris ſuis manerii ſui de Lodinton, in com' Leic'. Dat. per manum noſtram apud Weſtmonaſterium, decimo die Octobris.” [8]

2. “ Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. ſalutem. Conceſſionem & donationem quas Johannes filius Milonis de Mardefeld fecit canonicis de Landâ, de unâ virgatâ terre, cum pertinentiis, in Skeftington; & donationem & conceſſionem quas idem Johannes fecit eiſdem canonicis, de redditu v s̃. quos anteceſſores ipſius Johannes percipere conſueverunt annuatim de predictâ terrâ; conceſſionem etiam, remiſſionem & quietam clamantiam, quas magiſter & fratres militie Templi Salomonis in Angliâ fecerunt priori de Landa & predictis canonicis, per breve regis, coram juſtitiariis de banco apud Weſtmonaſterium, pro tenementis & pertinentiis ſuis que tenuerunt in Tilton juxta Landam, de feodo ipſorum magiſtri & fratrum; remiſſionem etiam, conceſſionem, & quietam clamantiam, quas Thomas Randolf de Skeftington, filius Johannis Randolf de Friſebye juxta Gaubye, fecit eiſdem priori & canonicis, de omnibus ſerviciis, exactionibus, demandis, & omnibus aliis que de predictis tenementis peti poſſint; donationem inſuper, conceſſionem, & confirmationem, quas Willielmus de Scevington, de com' Devon', fecit predictis canonicis, de omnibus terris, tenementis, & poſſeſſionibus, cum pertinentiis, de quibus iidem canonici feoffati ſunt in Halſted & Skeftington, per David de Skeftington, patrem ipſius Willielmi; necnon remiſſionem, relaxationem, & quietam clamantiam, quas idem Willielmus, de ſe & heredibus ſuis, fecit eiſdem canonicis, de toto annuo redditu in eorum feoffamento contento; & de omnibus redditibus, debitis, conſuetudinibus, & ſerviciis, cum pertinentiis, in quibus iidem canonici prefato Willielmo & heredibus ſuis qualitercunque tenebantur, pro predictis terris, tenementis, & poſſeſſionibus; obligationem etiam quam idem Willielmus, pro ſe & heredibus ſuis, fecit predictis canonicis, de acquietando & defendendo ipſos, & ipſorum ſucceſſores, verſus Reginaldum Clifford & heredes ſuos, de omnibus ſerviciis, conſuetudinibus, exactionibus & ſecularibus demandis, que qualitercunque ab ipſis canonicis exigi poterunt vel vendicari, ratione terrarum, tenementorum, poſſeſſionum, ac annui redditûs predictarum donationum, quas Willielmus de Medburne, perſona eccleſie de Sutton Courtenei, fecit prefati priori & canonicis, de omnibus redditibus & ſerviciis, generalibus & ſpecialibus, que habuit vel aliquo modo habere potuit, in terris & tenementis illis, cum pertinentiis; remiſſionem etiam & quietam clamantiam, quas Johannes de Diggeby de Tilton, miles, fecit predictis priori & canonicis, de omnibus ſerviciis, generalibus & ſpecialibus, que habuit, vel aliquo modo habere potuit, de univerſis terris & tenementis que iidem prior & canonici, de feodo & dominiis ejuſdem Johannis, tenent in Halſted & Skeftington, de feoffamento Davidis de Scevington & heredum ſuorum; & de toto jure & clameo quod habuit, vel aliquo modo habere potuit, in eiſdem terris & tenementis, cum pertinentiis: Ratas habentes & gratas eas, pro nobis & heredibus noſtris, quantum in nobis eſt, concedimus & confirmamus ſicut carte & ſcripta, quas predicti prior & canonici inde habent rationabiliter teſtantur. In cujus, &c. Teſte rege, apud Weſtm', x° die Oct.” [9]

In a plea at Northampton in 1329, it appeared that the prior of Laund held a meſſuage and two virgates of land in Arthingworth, of the yearly value of 37*s*. 9½*d*.; and the advowſon of the church, worth 100*s*. a year, but by whoſe gift, or by what authority, was unknown; and that the ſaid prior in the time of king Edward I. had appropriated to himſelf and his church a certain toft belonging to the church of Arthingworth, which he had obtained from the then rector [10], and paid for it to the rector for the time being 3*s*. a year, by what ſervice was unknown. The ſheriff was directed to ſummon the prior to appear; who, attending by his attorney, aſſerted that R̄. biſhop of Lincoln, and Robert, the ſon of Robert, the ſon of Hugh, had given the church of Arthingworth, with its appurtenances, to the priory of St. John the Baptiſt at Laund, freely and quietly, for the ſouls of king Henry III. and of his heirs, &c.; and that the meſſuage aforeſaid, with the two virgates of land, were given by William ſon of Robert de Brent, for the health of his own ſoul and that of his parents, to the canons of Laund, to be held in pure alms, before the paſſing of the ſtatute of mortmain; and that the toft aforeſaid was purchaſed one day before the paſſing of that ſtatute. This was proved by the oaths of divers witneſſes; and alſo that they were the ſame lands which had been mentioned in the preſentment. “ Ideo idem Prior inde ſine die,” &c. [11]

In 1330, king Edward III. again confirmed to this priory the following towns and churches:

“ Rex archiepiſcopis, &c. ſalutem. Sciatis me conceſſiſſe & confirmâſſe Deo & S. Johanne Baptiſte de Lodintonâ, & canonicis ibidem Deo ſervientibus, omnes eccleſias & terrâs, redditus, & tenaturas ſubſcriptas, quas Ricardus Baſſet eis dedit & conceſſit, viz. totam villam Lodintonam, & quinque virgatas terre de Nortunâ, cum hominibus & omnibus ad eaſdem terras pertinentibus, ſicut Ricardus Baſſet eas dedit & conceſſit; & Friſeby, cum eccleſiâ ejuſdem ville, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis; dimidiam Grymeſton, cum eccleſiâ, & pertinentiis ſuis; Salterford; eccleſiam de Coleſton; eccleſiam de Warleghe, cum capellâ de Belton; eccleſiam de Flethen; eccleſiam de Petlinges; eccleſiam de Widredele; eccleſiam de Oundebye, & in eâdem villâ v virgatas terre; in Dalbye xi bovatas terre; in Nortun v virgatas terre [12].

“ N. B. Juratores dicunt, quod remanet ultra donationem, &c. Radulpho de Baſſet de Drayton, manerium de Drayton, in [hund' de Sparkenho] in com' Leic', cum pertinentiis, quod valet c ſ.; ſet ignorant de quo tenetur[1]."

---

[1] Cart. 32 Hen. III. m. 2.

[2] See under Whadborough.

[3] Plac. Aſſiſ. com. Linc. 9 Edw. I. Rot. 77.

[4] Stevens, vol. II. p. 70.

[5] Bridges, MS.; and ſee p. 305.

[6] See before, under Friſby, p. 259.

[7] Inq. ad quod dampn. 2 Edw. II. N° 92. Leic.; and Pat. 2 Edw. II. N° 92. Leic.

[8] Cart. 7 Edw. II. n. 38.

[9] Pat. 7 Edw. II. pars 1. m. 12.

[10] See the fourth paragraph of this page.

[11] Bridges, MS. vol. S. p. 410; è Placitis Corone apud Northampton, coram Galfrido Ridell & ſociis ſuis Juſtic' Itinerant', 3 Edw. III. Rot. 48.

[12] Cart. 4 Edw. III. n. 5. Videſis Plac. coram Rege, Mich. Ric. II. Rot. 28. Northampt.

In 1333, the prior and convent obtained the king's writ, addreſſed to Geoffrey le Scrope and his brethren the juſtices of the common pleas, directing them to cauſe John de Boyvill to acquit them from any penalties for non-appearance at the courts of Barrow, in reſpect to two meſſuages and three bovates of land which they held at Friſby[2].

In the ſame year, Robert de Donyngton, vicar of Lodington, had the king's licence to give to the prior of Laund 4 meſſuages, 4 virgates, one bovate, and one acre of land, and 2*s*. 6*d*. of rent, with the appurtenances, in Eaſt Norton, Tilton, Welham, and Lodington. And it was found that the ſaid Robert held in Welham one meſſuage, one bovate of land, and 2*s*. 6*d*. rent, by the ſervice of 6*s*. a year, to John Damory; who held the ſame under the lord Baſſet of Weldon, by the ſervice of a pair of doves. The ſame Robert held alſo in Lodington[3] one meſſuage and one virgate of land, with two parts of another virgate, of the prior of Laund, by the ſervice of 13*s*. 8*d*. a year[4].

Sir Thomas Latimer, lord of the manors of Braybroke, Wardon, and Corby, in Northamptonſhire, died in 1336; and was buried in Laund abbey[5].

In 1337, Robert de Doddington had permiſſion to give a meſſuage and a bovate of land to the prior and convent in exchange for lands in Skeffington; John Robyn of Asfordby and Alice Burwhed a meſſuage and a bovate of land in Friſby, then held by Maud Bakepuiz. And it was found that the land in Tilton[6] was held under the prior by the ſervice of 5*s*. a year; and the rent of the meſſuage under the lady De Burgh, by ſuit of court; and the meſſuage and lands at Friſby were held under the prior[7].

In 1342, it was found that Ralph Baſſet held the advowſon of the priory of Laund by fine levied "in curiâ domini regis[8]." This Ralph, a lineal deſcendant of the founder[9], having been a great benefactor to the prior and convent of Laund, founded a chantry here for ever, for one prieſt, to celebrate divine ſervice daily in their conventual church, for the health of his ſoul, and the ſoul of Joan his wife, daughter of Thomas Beauchamp earl of Warwick[10].

Joan daughter and coheir-general of Baſſet was married to ſir Thomas de Ayleſbury, knt.; one of whoſe heirs general, Iſabel, married to ſir Thomas Chaworth, of Wiverton, co. Nottingham, knight, who thereby obtained the patronage of this priory. Hence Leland ſays, "The Chaworths were ſaid to be founders of Laund priory[11]."

Between this place and Withcote ſtood an antient caſtle, called Sauvey caſtle, the ſeat (as it ſhould ſeem) of the lord Baſſet of Weldon, from whom by the above marriage it alſo came to ſir Thomas Chaworth[12].

In 1367, it was found by writ that the prior and convent had appropriated a meſſuage and two acres of land, with a croft, at Friſby, which had belonged to Maud Baxters; and two meſſuages and 32 acres of land at Tilton[13]; and in 1370, a regular complaint againſt the encroachments of this priory was made to the king in parliament, in the following terms:

"Monſtreit ſoit a nr̃e Seigñr le Roy & a ſon Prive Counſeil, qe les biens & chateux ſire Hugh le Deſpenſer le piere furont forfaites, nom̃ent boves, vaches, & moultons, et grante ſum̃e d'argent, lequel profit devereyt aver venu a nr̃e Seigñr le Roy, la vient le priour de la Laund du counte de Leyceſtre, & meſmes les chateux & treſour, a la valiaunce de cent livers & plus, unt pris & ſeſſye & beſele, a grant damage ñre Seigñr le Roy. Item meſmes ceux priour & covent unt purchaſe terres encontre fourme de ſtatute, a grante ſumme, & ſur ceo unt ils confirme lour Chartre, en envoygliſment de l'eſtatute. Item meſmes ceux priour & covent unt terres a la valiaunce cent liveres per an, leſqueux terres unt eſte taxes & taillables avant ceo qe eux viendront en lour mayns, & puis cel houre qe eux furont ſeiſſes, le Roy ne avoit nul manere de profit, a damage ñre Seigñr le Roy de trois centz livers per diverſe temps, & tote eſt per affiauntz de baillefs & autres ſerjauntz & aſſiſſours du payſe, per quei nulle verite ne poet eſtrer trie. Et ſi ñre Seigñr le Roy & ſon Counſeill ne preynont le plus toſt garde, tote ſa terre devendra en mayne de Religioun. Et ſi ñre Seigneur le Roy voille ſagement overer, il fra enquere come bien de terre eſt enmortye per mayn de Religion puis le ſtatute, & la verra il coment ſa terre eſt deſue: Dont pluſurs gentz de ſa terre priount remedie."

To which complaint the following anſwer was given:

"Soit ceſte Peticion mande as Threſ' & Barons de l'Eſcheker, & comande a eux, qe veue la Peticion & les choſes contenues en ycele, facent outre ceo q'il verront qe ſoit a faire pur le profit de Roi[14]."

In 1390, the prior and convent of Laund had the king's licence to appropriate the church of Aſhby Folvile[15]; and in the ſame year it was found, by a plea, that the patronage of the church of Arthingworth was in the gift, which had been founded by an anceſtor of Richard Baſſet, but that they had been deprived of it by a ſentence of the papal court at Rome[16].

In 1397, they obtained the king's licence for appropriating the church of Abkettleby.

In 1402, the prior of Laund, with a prieſt of Ware, were convicted of treaſon, drawn and hanged; as were alſo ſir Roger Claryngdon, knt. and ten[17] brethren of the order of Friers minors[18]:

"Unfortunate was the end of two priors[19] of this houſe; the one called Walter de Baldock, who (as Thomas de Walſingham, in his Hiſtory, in the time of king Henry IV, writeth) was firſt a canon of Dunſtable, and, forſaking his cloiſter, followed the court of king Richard the Second; and, there ſerving a great while, expected preferment, and (as he ſaith) having long and hardly ſtruggled with fortune, was at length, by the ſaid king Richard, rewarded with the government of this houſe of Laund; and, after the coming of king Henry IV. to the crown, entering into ſome action againſt the ſaid king[20], for that he concealed the ſame, though never put in practice, was thereupon attainted of treaſon, and executed, in 1402[21].

---

[1] Ad quod dampnum, 5 Edw. III. 1331. N° 112. Leic.

[2] Pat. 7 Edw. III.

[3] See under that pariſh.

[4] Inq. ad quod dampnum, 7 Edw. III. Leic.

[5] Bridges, MSS. vol. M. p. 126.

[6] See under that pariſh.

[7] Inq. ad quod dampnum, 11 Edw. III. N° 59. Leic.—See before, p. 260.

[8] Inq. 15 Edw. III. N° 36.

[9] The Baſſets had branched out into ſeveral families, poſſeſſed of large eſtates in various counties, whoſe deſcents are all to be found in Dugdale's Baronage, vol. I. p. 378 & ſeqq. See alſo hereafter, under Rakedale, Sapcote, &c.

[10] Dugdale, vol. I. p. 380; ex codice MS. pervetuſto, penès Thomam comitem Arundel, ann. 1640, fol. 82. a.

[11] Itin. vol. V. p. 93.

[12] Burton, MS.

[13] See before, under Friſby, p. 260.

[14] Rot. Parl. 4 Edw. III. 1370; vol. II. p. 50.

[15] See before, under Aſhby Folvile, p. 31.

[16] Plac. coram Rege, 14 Ric. II. Term. Mich. Northampton, Rot. 28.

[17] One of theſe brethren was a native of Friſby; ſee before, p. 260.

[18] Continuation of Hiſt. Chron. p. 495. Stow ſays, p. 427, eight grey friers were hanged in London, and two at Leiceſter.

[19] Mr. Burton's ſecond inſtance, that of Lancaſter the laſt prior, is a miſtake; ſee p. 309.

[20] The people of England were already weary of Henry's government; and, wiſhing to ſee Richard reſtored, it was given out, that the king was ſtill alive, and in Scotland. Henry was obliged to publiſh ſeveral proclamations in the Weſt, and other parts of the kingdom, to put a ſtop to the report, to apologiſe for his own adminiſtration, and to prevent all aſſemblies and confederacies of diſaffected perſons. None were more zealous in propagating that report than the Franciſcan friars; who had always adhered to the late king, and were ready to join in any conſpiracy, either for reſtoring him, or dethroning the uſurper. They had been ill treated, as well as others, on a general notion of their ſentiments on that point; and many of that order being taken up, on ſuſpicion of a plot with ſir Roger Clarendon (the Black Prince's natural ſon) a prieſt of Ware, the prior of Lawne, and nine other Religious, were executed with him at Tyburn; one of them, perſiſting at the gallows in the reſolution of venturing his life for king Richard, was hanged in the habit of his order. Carte, Hiſtory of England, vol. II. p. 656; referring to Rymer, vol. VIII. p. 189; Chron. Otterbourne, and Walſingham.

[21] Burton, MS. from Thomas Walſingham, fol. 365. and Hypod. Neuſtr. fol. 557.—Thomas Otterbourne alſo ſays, "Circa feſtum Pentecoſtes facta fuit conjuratio contra regem quorundam affectantium mortem ejus, et nonnullorum aſſerentium regem Ric. vivere, et invitantium multos ad ſtandum cum rege Ric. quem affirmabant quàm citiùs in palam venturum, et ſuos fideles con-

In 1409, Thomas Coleman, prior of Laund, granted to Thomas Brigge, clerk, for the term of his life, an annual rent of 20 marks, to be received out of the manors of Lodington and Tilton [1].

In a book of fifteenth and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Laund was taxed as a member of Lodington; and was again ſo taxed in 1445; in which year the prior and convent obtained leave to appropriate the church of Oadby [2].

April 3, 1458, John Baddely, with Thomas Myles prior of Laund, releaſed to ſir William Cateſby and his heirs their right in all the lands at Aſhby Legers, which ſir William had then newly incloſed within his park; reſerving only the tithes payable to the priory from the rectory of that place [3].

In 1464, the following leaſe was obtained from the abbot and convent of St. James near Northampton:

"Omnibus Chriſti fidelibus ad quos preſens ſcriptum indentatum pervenerit, Willielmus Yon abbas monaſterii S. Jacobi juxta Northampton, & ejuſdem loci conventus, ſalutem, &c. Sciatis nos dediſſe, &c. Thome Fryſſeby, priori de Landa, & ejuſdem loci conventui, omnia & ſingula terras & tenementa noſtra, redditus, &c. cum pratis, viſu franciplegii, &c. in villis & campis de Halſtede & Whaddeburgh, in com' Leic', habend', &c. ad feodifirmam in perpetuum de capitalibus dominis feodorum, &c. reddendo inde annuatim nobis, &c. 35 s̄. 4 d̄. &c. Dat' 6° die menſis Novembris, anno regni regis Edwardi Quarti poſt Conqueſtum quarto. Hiis teſtibus; Thomâ Palmer, Johanne Boyvile, Johanne Bellers, Ricardo Kootft; Johanne Pultney, armigeris, & aliis [4]."

In 1477, lands in North Mardefeld were given by Thomas Grene, chaplain, and Ralph Francis, gentleman; and a meſſuage and lands at Halſted and Whatborough, by Peter Curteys and Everard Digby; as appears by the following documents:

"Juratores dicunt, quòd non eſt ad dampnum d̄ni regis nec aliorum, ſi rex concedat Thome Grene capellano, & Radulpho Frаunceis gentilman, quòd ipſi unum toftum & unam virgatam terre in Merfeld North; & Petro Curteys & Everardo Digby, quòd ipſi unum meſſuagium, unum toftum, & quatuor virgatas terre, cum pertinentiis ſuis, in Halſted & Whatborough; dare poſſint priori de Landâ, in com' Leic'; & quòd toftum & virgata terre in Merfeld North tenentur de eodem priore, per fidelitatem pro omnibus ſerviciis; & quòd predicta meſſuagia & terra in Halſted & Whatborough tenentur de eodem priore, per fidelitatem pro omnibus ſerviciis, & prior tenet de d̄no rege in liberam & puram eleemoſinam [5].

"Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. ſalutem. Sciatis quòd, cùm nos, vi° die Martii, anno regni noſtri xvii°, pro quodam fine nobis ſoluto in hanaperio noſtro, per literas noſtras patentes, conceſſimus & licentiam dedimus, pro nobis & heredibus noſtris, quantum in nobis dilectis nobis in Chriſto priori & conventui de Landâ, & eorum ſucceſſoribus, quòd ipſi terras, tenementa, redditus, reverſiones, & ſervicia, uſque ad valorem xx marcarum per annum juxta verum valorem eorundem ultra repriſalia, tam de feodo ſuo proprio quàm alieno (exceptis terris, &c. que de nobis tenentur in capite), acquirere & in manum mortuam ponere poſſent; habend' & tenend' ſibi & ſucceſſoribus ſuis in perpetuum, ſtatuto de terris & tenementis ad manum mortuam ponendis edito, aut aliquo alio ſtatuto, actu, vel ordinatione in contrarium factis, ſeu aliquâ re, cauſâ, vel materiâ, non obſtante; nolentes quòd predicti prior & conventus, vel eorum ſucceſſores, ratione ſtatuti predicti, per nos vel heredes noſtros indè occaſionentur, moleſtentur, vexentur in aliquo, ſeu graventur; ſalvis tamen capitalibus dominis feodorum illorum ſerviciis indè debitis & conſuetis, Nos, conceſſionem predictam effectui debito mancipari volentes, conceſſimus & licentiam dedimus dilectis nobis Thome Grene capellano, & Radulpho Fraunceis gentilman, quòd ipſi unum toftum & unam virgatam terre in Mereſeild North, in com' Leic'; & Petro Curteis & Everardo Digbye; quòd ipſi unum meſſuagium, unum toftum, & quatuor virgatas terre, cum pertinentiis, in Halſtede & Whatborough, quòd ipſi unum meſſuagium, unum toftum, & quatuor virgatas terre, cum pertinentiis, in Halſtede & Whatborough, in eodem com' Leic' (que ad xxxviii s̄. iiii d̄. per annum extenduntur, & que de aliis quàm de nobis tenentur, prout per quandam inquiſitionem indè, coram Thomâ Ward eſcaetore noſtro in com' predicto, de mandato noſtro captam, & in cancellariâ noſtrâ retornatam, eſt compertum), dare poſſint & aſſignare prefatis priori & conventui de Landâ; habend' & tenend' ſibi & ſucceſſoribus ſuis in perpetuum, in valorem xl s̄. per annum, in partem ſatisfactionis xx marcarum, &c.; & eiſdem priori & conventui, quòd ipſi dictam terram, &c. recipere poſſint & tenere ſibi & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, ſicut predictum, in perpetuum, tenore preſentium ſimilitèr licentiam dedimus ſpecialem, ſtatutis predictis non obſtantibus; nolentes, &c.; ſalvis, &c. In cujus, &c. Teſte rege, apud Weſtm', viii° die Maii [6]."

In 1482, Thomas Grene and Ralph Francis gave a toft and lands at Melton Mowbray and Friſby [7].

In 1495, the patronage of Laund was in the heir of Baſſet of Weldon; and, at the general ſuppreſſion of monaſteries, 1539, this priory came to the crown; their revenues, liberties, privileges, immunities, gifts, &c. being then exceedingly ample and extenſive [8].

The value at that period, according to Dugdale, was £399. 3*s*. 3¾*d*.; but Speed ſtates it to have amounted to £510. 16*s*. 5¾*d*. [9]

	£.	s.	d.
By the ſurvey in the Office of Firſt Fruits, it appears they had in ſpirituals	189	0	0
In temporals	222	1	2
In demeſne	40	0	0
Sum	451	15	9¾

Their regular outgoings were,

To the biſhop of Lincoln		5	2	0
To the chapter of Lincoln		11	13	4
To the archdeacon of	Leiceſter	1	8	10½
	Northampton	1	0	3¼
	Nottingham	0	7	7¾
	Stafford	0	13	6
To the abbot of	St. James, Northampton	2	6	8
	Oulveſton [10]	1	0	0
To the prior of	Brecknock	1	10	0
	Coventry	1	0	0
	Shene	1	6	8
To the College of	All Saints, Oxon,	8	0	0
	Southwell	1	0	0
To the chantry of St. Chad, Salop,		8	0	0
In augmentation of the vicarages of	Abkettleby	0	6	8
	Friſby	2	0	0
	Oadby	1	6	8
	Patingham	2	0	0
	Roſthorne	2	6	8
	Tilton	1	6	8
	Welham	1	6	8
	Weſton	1	0	0

---

conſolaturum, et dignè remuneraturum. Unde quidam ſacerdos captus apud Ware, qui ſcripſerat nomina multorum, qui futuræ perturbationis authores extitiſſent, tractus et ſuſpenſus; et poſtea prior de Lawne ſortem ſimilem expertus. Suſpenſus eſt & dominus Rogerus Claringdon, miles, filius, ut dicebatur, nothus quondam nobilis principis Edwardi, filii regis Ed. III, et cum eo ſuus armiger et valectus. Poſt aliquod tempus capti ſunt octo fratres, de ordine minorum, et ad judicium publicum dedecoroſè tracti et examinati & convicti, quod contra regem feciſſent, London. tracti, ſuſpenſi & decapitati ſunt."

[1] Clauſ. 10 Hen. IV. m. 2.

[2] See under that pariſh; and, concerning the advowſon, ſee Plac. in com. Leic. 12 Edw. I. Rot. 2; Pat. 24 Hen. VI. pars 1. m. 37; & Pat. 31 Hen. VI. p. 1. m. 20, 21.

[3] Bridges, MS. vol W. p. 18; out of ſir W. Cateſby's evidences, taken March 1, 1607, then in the cuſtody of Mr. Arthur Agard.

[4] Communicated by Mr. E. Williams from Dodſworth's MSS.

[5] Eſch. 17 Edw. IV. n. 59.

[6] Pat. 17 Edw. IV. n. 59. Leic.; & Pat. 18 Edw. IV. n. 1. m. 13.

[7] See before, under Friſby, p. 260.

[8] One proof of this is the well-known public road, which for at leaſt 500 years has been accuſtomed to be called Launde Way, proceeding immediately from this village, and paſſing through or by many of the towns which were given by the founder.

[9] Tanner's Notitia, fol. 236.

[10] From this abbot they received an annual pittance of 2*s*. 6*d*.

Abſtract of the poſſeſſions of the priory of Laund, in the county of Leiceſter, when it was diſſolved[1].

	£.	s.	d.
The manor of Friſby ſuper Wreke, with rents in Wartnaby and Grymſton.
Rents of aſſize,	3	14	7
Rents of tenants at will,	10	6	4
Farm of the manor, with the demeſne lands,	4	13	4
A water-mill,	3	0	0
Farm of the rectory,	6	13	4
Lands and tenements purchaſed by —— Lancaſter, late prior there,	7	12	5
Sale of wood,	None.
Perquiſites of courts,	0	3	8
Sum of the receipt,	36	3	8
Eaſt Norton.
Rents of tenants at the will of the lord,	4	1	8
Rents of lands purchaſed by —— Lancaſter, late prior there,	3	4	0
Divers farms,	8	13	4
Sale of wood,	None.
Perquiſites of courts,	0	7	2
Sum of the receipt,	16	6	2
Halſted, within the pariſh of Tilton, with the tithes of grain there:
Rents of tenants at the will of the lord,	11	11	6
Rents of lands and tenements purchaſed by —— Lancaſter, late prior there,	1	10	0
Rents of a common bake-houſe,	0	3	4
Divers farms,	8	8	6
Farm of two mills,	1	10	0
Rents called Paſture Sylver,	1	14	10½
Farm of the tithes of all the grain in Tylton and Halſted,	20	0	0
Rents of the tenants of the tithe of hay in Halſted,	0	13	5
Tithe of hay in Tylton,	0	10	0
Sale of wood,	None.
Perquiſites of courts, with rents recovered,	0	4	8
Sum of the receipt,	46	4	3½
Halloughton, Holwell, and Welham, with the rectory there:
Rents of aſſize,	0	7	5½
Rents of tenants at the will of the lord,	1	2	0
Divers farms,	4	5	6
Farm of the rectory of Welham,	8	13	4
Sale of wood,	None.
Perquiſites of courts,	None.
Sum of the receipt,	14	8	3½
Skevyngton, and Baddeſley (co. Warwick).
Rents of aſſize,	0	1	6
Rents of tenants at the will of the lord,	6	7	2
Divers farms,	4	19	10
Abkettleby rectory,	10	0	0
Small rents in Dalby Magna, Newton Burdett, Aſhby Leger, and Withcock,	2	15	0
Kirkby Belers, Grimſton, Somerby, Saxby, Wymſolde, Olveſton, and Withcock, with divers ſmall rents and farms in the above places, amounting to	10	2	6
Belton.
Rents there,	1	10	0
Tithes of corn,	6	10	0
Glaſton.
Penſion,	0	6	8
Colſton Baſſett.
Rents of tenants at the will of the lord,	2	16	4
Farm of the rectory,	16	0	0
Tithe hay,	0	15	0
Sale of wood,	None.
Perquiſites of courts,	None.
Sum of the receipt,	19	11	4
Rents of aſſize in Sutton, in the pariſh of Weſton, and in Flete,	2	5	10
Divers farms in Sutton, Marneham, and Skegby,	4	4	8
Windmill in Weſton,	1	6	8
Tithes in Sutton,	5	13	4
Sale of wood,	None.
Perquiſites of court,	None.
Sum of receipt	13	10	6
Rents of aſſize in Ardyngworth, Weldon Magna, and Bowden Parva,	0	18	1
Rents of tenants at will in Weſton,	1	18	6
Divers farms in Weſton and Blatherwick,	2	6	8
Tithes of the rectory of Weſton,	6	6	8
Tithes in Weldon Magna and Parva,	3	13	4
Penſion from the rector of Bowden Magna,	0	13	4
The ſame from Arthingworth,	1	6	8
The ſame from the rector of Blatherwick,	1	13	4
Sale of wood,	None.
Perquiſites of courts,	None.
Sum of the receipt,	18	16	7
Chaſtelton, in the county of Oxford.
Rents of tenants at will,	8	11	6
Rectory of Oadby,	10	0	0
Aſhby Folvile rectory,	11	0	0
Tithes in Maresfield,	2	13	4
Portion of tithes in Enderby,	1	6	8
Rectory of Aſhby Legers,	10	13	4
Rectory of Haderſegge in Derbyſhire,	11	6	8
Rectory of Patyngham in Staffordſhire,	10	0	0
Rectory of Rotherſton in Cheſhire, viz.
Rents of tenants at will,	0	9	10½
Divers farms and tithes,	80	1	11
Sale of wood,	0	13	4
Manor of Launde, with the ſite and demeſne lands,	93	7	8
Site of the manor of Lodyngton, with the demeſne lands,	28	6	8
Rents and farms in Lodyngton,	32	11	11½
Rents in Lodyngton, called Paſture Silver,	8	0	0
Sale of wood,	None.
Perquiſites of court,	None.
Sum of Receipt	327	12	0

At the time of the diſſolution there remained in the priory of Laund 114 fodder of lead[2].

We are not to expect at this ſmall priory ſo magnificent a collection of books, as has been particularized at Leiceſter Abbey[3] on the authority of a genuine Catalogue. The library at Laund, however, was undoubtedly enriched with many valuable MSS. though amongſt them can now be aſcertained only the three following, which were noticed by Leland[4]:

"Plinius Secundus de Re Medicâ.
Chronicon Iſidori.
Cleopatra de Genitura[5]."

---

[1] From the account of the Crown's Receiver in the Augmentation-office for the 33d year of Hen. VIII.

[2] See vol. II. p. 759.

[3] A great many Rolls were lodged in Leiceſter Abbey and in the priory of Kenilworth till the reign of king Henry III. Madox, Hiſtory of the Exchequer, p. 709. Tanner, Preface to Notitia Monaſtica, p. 31.

[4] Collectanea, vol. III. p. 44.

[5] "A commiſſion was granted to Leland, in 1543, to peruſe and ſearch all the libraries of the monaſteries and colleges throughout the whole realm, that were then diſſolved and broken up; that, as much as might be, all antient monuments of the hiſtories of Leland[1] alſo ſays, "Almoſte half a mile or I cam to Launde I paſſed by Maſter Smithes howſe, made freich by Mr. Radcliffe that married Smithes daughter. From Borow Hilles to Laund a v mile. The ſoile directo itinere betwyxt Trent South ripe and Launde is baren of wood, but plentiful of corne and paſture; eſpecially about Launde quarters. But the ſoyle about Launde is woody, and the Foreſt of Ly, of ſum caulled Lyfeld, joynithe to Launde by Eſte. And the ſoile of Owſen Abbay ii miles by Eſt North Eſte from Launde is alſo veri wooddy. The ground a little beyond Launde toward Pipewell is not wooddy. To Haledon a preaty townlet about a IIII miles. To Melburne village a mile. And almoſt a mile to a bridge, where I paſſed over Wyland river, ther in great ſtreame. Thens to Pipwell abbay abowt a iii miles. The bridg and water of Weland ther dividith Leyreceſtreſhire from Northampton. From Medbourne to within a mile of Pipwell is mervelous goodly meadow."

PRIORS of LAUNDE[2]:

1125. John.

1189. Wakeline.

1200. Adam.

1230. Obiit Martinus abbas XI eleemoſynæ, cui ſucceſſit Gaufridus abbas de Launda[3].

1231. Gaufrid; removed by bp. Groſſeteſte[4] 1236.

1237. Brother Richard de Martivaux was elected prior in the room of Reginald; licence being obtained from Richard Baſſet of Weldon, patron of this houſe; and confirmed 5 id. Julii[5].

1248. Robert de Martival; he died 1252[6].

The prior of Laund was ſummoned to the aſſembly called to meet at London in the Octaves of St. Hilary by Simon earl of Leiceſter, who then held king Henry III. as his priſoner after the battle of Eveſham, and made uſe of his authority, dated at Worceſter, 14 Dec. 1264[7].

1269. Reginald.

1272. Richard de Martival.

1300. John of Kirkby elected; leave being firſt obtained from ſir Richard Baſſet, knt. the patron[8].

1306. John de Burgo.

1339. The king being informed of the death of the prior of Laund, they had licence to elect; and 12 Nov. the king conſented to the election of Henry de Braunſeton, prior, by virtue of the wardſhip and heirſhip of Richard Baſſet, deceaſed. Letter directed to H.[9] biſhop of Lincoln, 3 Dec.

1384. Thomas de Lichefelde.

Walter de Baldock; executed 1402.

1408. Thomas Colman.

1458. Thomas Myles occurs.

1464. Thomas Fryſſeby.

1513. John Lancaſter; who continued prior here at the diſſolution; and, with five others of his houſe, William Stokerſton, ſub-prior, John Lodyngton, cellarer, Thomas Metburn, brothers Robert Lydyngton of this land, and the places, and eminent perſons of it, together with the writings and books of learned men, might be preſerved: a matter much redounding to that king's honour and renown; that he had ſuch a regard to antiquity, and ſuch a care of reſcuing remarkable Engliſh events and occurrences from oblivion. But great pity it was, and a moſt irreparable loſs, that, notwithſtanding this proviſion, moſt of the antient MS Hiſtories and Writings of Learned Britiſh and Saxon Authors were loſt. Libraries were ſold by mercenary men for any thing they could get in that confuſion and devaſtation of religious houſes." Strype's Memorials, vol. I. p. 385.—On this ſubject let us hear Dr. Fuller: "The Engliſh monks were bookiſh of themſelves, and much inclined to hoard up monuments of learning. Britain (we know) is ſtyled another world; and in this contradiſtinction (though incomparably leſs in quantity) acquits itſelf well in proportion of famous writers, producing almoſt as many claſſical ſchool-men for her natives, as all Europe beſides. Other excellent books of foreign authors were brought hither, purchaſed at dear rates; if we conſider that the preſs (which now runs ſo incredibly faſt) was in that age in her infancy, newly able to go alone, there being then few printed books in compariſon of the many manuſcripts. Theſe, if carefully collected and methodically compiled, would have amounted to a library, exceeding that of Ptolomy's for plenty; or many Vaticans, for choiceneſs and rarity. Yea, had they been tranſplanted beyond the ſeas, ſent over, and ſold entire to ſuch who knew their value, and would preſerve them, England's loſs had been Europe's gain, and the detriment the leſs to learning in general. Yea, many years after, the Engliſh might have re-purchaſed for pounds what their grandfathers ſold for fewer pence into foreign parts. But, alas! thoſe abbeys were now ſold to ſuch chapmen, in whom it was queſtionable whether their ignorance or avarice were greater, and they made havock and deſtruction of all. As brokers in Long-lane, when they buy an old ſuit, buy the linings together with the out-ſide, ſo it was conceived meet, that ſuch as purchaſed the buildings of monaſteries ſhould, in the ſame grant, have the libraries (the ſtuffing thereof) conveyed unto them. And now theſe ignorant owners, ſo long as they might keep a Leger-book or Terrier, by direction thereof to find ſuch ſtraggling acres as belonged to them, they cared not to preſerve any other monuments. The covers of books, with curious braſs boſſes and claſps, intended to protect, proved to betray them, being the baits of covetouſneſs. And ſo many excellent authors, ſtripped out of their caſes, were left naked to be burnt or thrown away. Thus Eſop's cock, caſually lighting on a pearl, preferred a grain before it; yet he left it as he found it; and as he reaped no profit by the pearl, it received no damage by him. Whereas theſe cruel cormorants, with their barbarous beaks and greedy claws, rent, tore, and tattered theſe ineſtimable pieces of Antiquity. Who would think that the Fathers ſhould be condemned to ſuch ſervile employment as to be ſcavengers to make clean the fouleſt ſink in men's bodies? Yea, which is worſe, many an antient manuſcript Bible cut in pieces to cover filthy pamphlets; ſo that a caſe of diamond hath been made to keep dirt within it; yea, the 'Wiſemen of Gotham' bound up in the 'Wiſdom of Solomon.' But hear how John Bale, a man ſufficiently averſe from the leaſt ſhadow of popery, hating all monkery with a perfect hatred, complained hereof to king Edward the Sixth. "Covetouſneſs was at that time ſo buſy about private commodity, that public wealth, in that moſt neceſſary and of reſpect, was not any where regarded. A number of them, which purchaſed thoſe ſuperſtitious manſions, reſerved of thoſe library-books, ſome to ſerve their jacks, ſome to ſcour their candleſticks, and ſome to rub their boots: ſome they ſold to the grocers and ſoap-ſellers, and ſome they ſent over ſea to the book-binders, not in ſmall number, but at times whole ſhips full. Yea, the univerſities of this realme are not all clear in this deteſtable fact. But curſed is that belly which ſeeketh to be fed with ſo ungodly gains, and ſo deeply ſhameth his natural country. I know a merchant-man (which ſhall at this time be nameleſs) that bought the contents of two noble libraries for forty ſhillings price; a ſhame it is to be ſpoken. This ſtuff hath he occupied inſtead of grey paper by the ſpace of more than theſe ten years, and yet he hath ſtore enough for as many years to come. A prodigious example is this, and to be abhorred of all men which love their nations as they ſhould do. Yea, what may bring our realm to more ſhame and rebuke, than to have it noiſed abroad that we are deſpiſers of learning? I judge this to be true, and utter it with heavineſs, that neither the Britains, under the Romans and Saxons, nor yet the Engliſh people, under the Danes and Normans, had ever ſuch damage of their learned monuments as we have ſeen in our time. Our poſterity may well curſe this wicked fact of our age, this unreaſonable ſpoil of England's moſt noble antiquities." (Declaration upon Leland's Journal, 1549.)—What ſoul can be ſo frozen as not to melt into anger hereat? What heart, having the leaſt ſpark of ingenuity, is not hot at this indignity offered to Literature? I deny not but that in this heap of books there was much rubbiſh. Legions of lying legends, good for nothing but fuel, whoſe keeping would have cauſed the loſs of much precious time in reading them. I confeſs alſo there were many volumes full fraught with ſuperſtition, which, notwithſtanding, might be uſeful to learned men; except any will deny apothecaries the privilege of keeping poiſon in their ſhops, when they can make antidotes of them. But beſides theſe, what beautiful Bibles! rare Fathers! ſubtle Schoolmen! uſeful Hiſtorians, antient, middle, modern! what painful Comments were here amongſt them! what monuments of Mathematicks! all maſſacred together! ſeeing every book with a Croſs was condemned for Popiſh; with Circles, for Conjuring. Yea, I may ſay, that then holy Divinity was prophaned; Phyſick itſelf hurt; and a treſpaſs, yea, a riot committed on the Law itſelf: and, more particularly, the hiſtory of former times then and there received a dangerous wound, whereof it halts at this day; and, without hope of a perfect cure, muſt go a cripple to the grave.—Some back-friends of Learning there be that take it ill that we have jogged them in this diſcourſe; and therefore we will let them alone to be ſettled quietly on the lees of their own ignorance, praying to God, that never good library may lie at the mercy of their diſpoſal; leſt, having the ſame advantage, they play the like prank, to the prejudice of Learning and Religion." Church Hiſtory, B. VI. p. 334.

---

[1] Itin. vol. V. fol. 93, 94.

[2] Communicated by Browne Willis, eſq. to Mr. Tanner, and publiſhed in the Notitia, ad finem.

[3] Ann. Waverley, 1230.

[4] "R. Lincoln' epiſcopus, in viſitatione ſuâ, amovit abbates de Leyceſtre, de Oſolfeſtonâ, &c. & priorem de la Lande, &c." Chron. de Dunſtaple, ann. MCCXXXVI.

[5] Pat. 13 Edw. II.

[6] "Eodem anno [MCCLII.] mortuus eſt Robertus de Martivals, prior de Landâ, apud Leyceſtre, juſticiariis itinerantibus tunc ibidem ſedentibus." Chron. de Dunſtaple.

[7] Clauſ. 49 Hen. III. m. 11; Rymer, vol. I. p. 803, 804.

[8] Reg. Dalderby, ann. 1.

[9] Henry Burgherſh was biſhop 1320—1343.

and Ralph Boſton, ſubſcribed to the king's ſupremacy, Sept. 12, 1534[1].

Mr. Burton informs us, that the laſt prior of Laund, with ſome of his convent, were attainted of treaſon, for denying the king's ſupremacy, and actually put to death[2]; and this he again repeats under Whadborough, adding expreſsly that "the prior of Laund, with certain of his convent, being attainted of treaſon, the priory, with all the manors, lands, and tenements thereto belonging, and all their goods and chattels, were forfeited to the king." Yet, notwithſtanding this poſitive aſſertion, we find by Dr. Willis that, in 1553, there remained in charge £1. in fees, and £17. in annuities; beſides the following penſions, viz.

To John Lancaſter, laſt prior, . .	£60	0	0
— William Wrothe	6	0	0
— Hugh Kelly	5	6	8
— William Bartonne	5	6	8
— Robert Barret, ...	5	0	0

"We may obſerve," ſays Fuller, "that the greateſt abbeys (founded in cities) were of the leaſt profit, becauſe ſo ſtreight-laced with ſtreets and houſes round about them that they could not grow to any extraordinary bulk for ground continued thereunto; ſo that the ſites were but ſites, as in St. Alban's, St. Edmundſbury, Hyde, &c. Whereas monaſteries in country towns, let looſe at more liberty to dilate themſelves, had generally a large manor and ample demeſnes annexed unto them. There were other abbeys, though not ſo high in dignity, yet richer in endowments, than many of the parliamentary barons. Thoſe had more lands, at leaſt were more highly valued, though not ſo honourable a tenure, as holding of meſne lands in frank almonage; and probably the parliamentary barons had more old rents, though thoſe (as late foundations) greater incomes by improved demeſnes[3]." This was certainly the caſe with the priory of Laund; which, though in itſelf comparatively ſmall, had extended its fair demeſnes to nearly all the ſurrounding villages, and obtained beſides ſeveral churches and manors in other counties.

In Leiceſterſhire, this priory had the impropriate rectories of Abkettleby[4], Aſhby Folvile[5], Friſby[6], Lodington[7], Oadby[8], Tilton[9], and Welham[10]; with the advowſon of Peatling Parva, Rotherby, Shouldby, Staunton[11], Witherley[12], and a moiety of Withcote; the chapels of Holt, Holwell, and Wartnaby, and a moiety of Grimſton; with divers lands and rents in Halſted, Mardefeld, Skeffington, and Whadborow; all which will appear under thoſe ſeveral lordſhips.

In Cheſhire, they obtained the appropriation of Royſthorne, not many years before their diſſolution, by the bounty of Dr. William Smythe, biſhop of Lincoln, who gave £350. to John the then prior and to the convent of Laund, to have this parſonage bought and appropriated to their houſe; which purchaſe was accordingly made by the ſaid prior, &c.; who, in conſideration thereof, gave to the mayor and citizens of Cheſter, under confirmation of their common ſeal, an annuity of £10.[13] for the endowment of a ſchool at Farnworth in Lancaſhire, the biſhop's native town[14]. This appears by the copy of an indenture tripartite, made July 20, 1507, between William Smythe[15] biſhop of Lincoln, and the dean and chapter of Lincoln, of the one part; John the prior and the convent of Laund, in the county of Leiceſter, of the ſecond part; and the mayor and citizens of Cheſter, of the third part; ſetting forth, that, foraſmuch as the ſaid prior and convent had received of the ſaid biſhop a gift of £350. towards their great charges in procuring the appropriation of the parochial church of Royſthorne, to their monaſtery; they agreed to pay an annual rent of £10. for ever to the ſaid mayor and citizens, who were to give the ſame to a ſufficient and honeſt prieſt, to be nominated by them, being a maſter or bachelor of arts, or a maſter of grammar at the leaſt, teaching grammar freely, in a free-ſchool at Farnworth, for ever.

---

[1] Rymer, vol. XIV. p. 504.

[2] "This, doubtleſs, is an overſight in Mr. Burton; as the proof, a penſion ſettled on John Lancaſter, the laſt prior, cannot be controverted; and he ſeems to have been fortunate in ſecuring ſo large a ſtipend as £60. a year, after having clandeſtinely ſecured to his own benefit ſo large a ſhare of the ſtock and valuables (ſee p. 318). But probably Cromwell was determined, at all events, to get poſſeſſion of the priory of Laund; and might therefore cloſe with the rapacious prior to induce him to a ſurrendry in legal form. If there was any member of this religious houſe who, in the reign of Henry VII. ſuffered for treaſonable practices, it might have been a monk who had holden the office of ſubprior. But qu. the evidence of any ſuch excluſion?" S.D.

[3] Church Hiſtory Book VI. pp. 295. 370.

[4] Appropriated by Pat. 20 Ric. II. p. 3. m. 23. For particulars, ſee vol. II. p. 16.

[5] Inq. ad quod dampnum, 13 Ric. II. n. 117. & Pat. 13 Ric. II. p. 1. m. 16. See the particulars above, p. 31.

[6] Eccleſiæ de Friſeby patronus prior de Landâ, habens eam in proprios uſus vicarii a fundatione domûs. Rot. 5 Hen. III.

[7] Eccleſiæ de Lodington patronus prior de Landâ, habens eam in proprios uſus ab antiquo. Ibid.

[8] See Plac. Aſſiſ. in com. Leic. 12 Edw. I. Rot. II. concerning the advowſon of this church; which was regularly appropriated by Pat. 24 Hen. VI. p. 1, m. 27.

[9] Eccleſia de Tilton patronus prior de Landâ, habens eam in proprios uſus; & habet capellas Watheberge & Merdefeude. Rot. 5 Hen. III.

[10] Eccleſiæ de Welham patronus prior de Landâ; habens eam in proprios uſus ab antiquo. Ibid.

[11] Stoney Staunton in this county was in the patronage of the Baſſets; but I do not find the connexion with this priory.

[12] Pro eccleſiâ de Wardeley (Rutland) & Haverſeg appropriandis, Pat. 21 Ric. II. p. 3. m. 32.

[13] "By this inſtrument the annuity ſeems to have been ſettled generally on the eſtates of Laund; but was and is actually paid out of the tithes of Royſthorn, now the property of Chriſt Church, Oxford." R. C.

[14] "Not literally born in Farnworth; but within that chapelry; at Widnes (in old MSS. Widdowes).—Farnworth is a large village, with a chapel that has a tower and bells, &c. like a pariſh church." R. C.

[15] William Smith, D. D. was born at Widnes, in the dioceſe of Cheſter; educated either at Oriel or Lincoln College, or ſucceſſively at both, in the univerſity of Oxford. He was afterwards rector[*] of Cheſhunt, Herts; dean of St. Stephen's College, Weſtminſter; and a member of the privy council. He is ſaid by Le Neve to have been archdeacon of Surrey, but this is a miſtake; he never held that preferment. The cuſtody of the temporalities of Lichfield were granted to him in 1491; being then, it is preſumed, deſigned to be the new biſhop; and he actually obtained that preferment in 1492, being elected to that ſee before 10 July, 1492, though not conſecrated till January 1492-3. At Lichfield he built an hoſpital called St. John the Baptiſt's Hoſpital, conſiſting of a maſter or warden (who is to be a prieſt), a ſchool-maſter, or uſher, a chaplain, and 13 poor perſons; and endowed it with the hoſpital of Denhall in Wirhall, Cheſhire, and the lands thereto belonging; and alſo with an eſtate at Farnworth. Being by papal proviſion (8 id. Nov. 1495,) tranſlated to the ſee of Lincoln, he began, in 1509, the foundation of Brazenoſe College in Oxford, of which univerſity he had been chancellor; but, before he had finiſhed it, departed this life, Jan. 2, 1513, and was buried in his cathedral under a grave-ſtone with his effigies on it in braſs, near the great Weſt door; where, on removal of his corpſe, and opening his ſtone coffin, his body was found wrapt up in ſear-cloaths, with a ring on his right hand, though long before that his grave-ſtone had been robbed of its brazen ornaments, and the epitaph quite aboliſhed, which was as follows:

"Sub marmore iſto tenet hic tumulus oſſa venerabilis in Chriſto patris, et domini domini Willielmi Smith, quondam Coventrenſis et Lichfeildenſis, ac deinde Lincolnienſis preſulis, qui obiit ſecundo die menſis Januarii,
anno Domini MCCCCCXIII, cujus anime propitietur Deus,
qui pius et miſericors peccata remittit. Eccleſiaſtic. ii.
Ceſtrenſis preſul, poſt Lincolnienſis, amator
Cleri, nam multos cis mare tranſque aluit:
Quique utriuſque[†] fuit prefectus principis, aule;
Fundavitque duas perpetuando ſcolas:
Aulaque ſumptu hujus renovata eſt ænea; Chriſte,
Hic ſitus eſt, anime parce benigne ſue."

Dr. Stukeley has engraved his ſlab and figure from a drawing in the Hatton Collection; Itin. Cur. vol. I. pl. XVI.

He was a great favourite with the king, and alſo counſellor to prince Arthur, and preſident of Wales, being the firſt of that office, which he held from 17 Hen. VII.[‡] to his death, 4 Hen. VIII. His will, made Dec. 26, 1513, was executed 30 January the ſame year. In his life-time he gave to Oriel College 300*l.* to purchaſe lands for the maintenance of one fellow, to be choſen out of the dioceſe of Lichfield and Coventry. He gave alſo two manors, one in Staffordſhire, the other in Oxfordſhire, to Lincoln College, intending for that college what he performed in Brazenoſe Hall, had the then rector and fellows fully conceded to his [†] "Preſident of the court of both princes; i. e. preſident of Wales to Arthur and to Henry." R. C.

[*] "There was at that time at Cheſhunt both a rector and vicar. Newcourt there ſtyles him "LL. B." Willis, Cath. II. 390, ſtyles him "S. T. P." But we find no antient authority to determine in what faculty he was doctor." R. C.

[‡] "17 Hen. VII." is the date aſſigned to Smyth's appointment as preſident of Wales by all our writers without exception; yet I believe "7 Hen. VII." is nearer the truth than "17," as his own regiſter at Lincoln, under the year 1500, (i. e. 15 or 16 Hen. VII.) ſays he had been preſident nonnullis retroactis annis; but the appointment itſelf does not appear: however, "7 Hen. VII." is too early. He was at Bewdley and Ludlow almoſt conſtantly in April 1494; and afterwards, i. e. from the latter part of 9 Hen. VII. I take it, he was appointed twice; firſt, about 1501, which commiſſion does not appear; and then, 17 Hen. VII. (1501), ſome new regulations having been found neceſſary. He was not biſhop in 7 Hen. VII. or only biſhop elect." R. C.

In a Collection, by Mr. Randle Holme, of deeds relative to the county of Cheſter, it appears that an award was made in 1530 by ſir Peter Dutton, knt. George Findrin, eſq. Thomas Denſill, and William Whorwod, gent. between John Lancaſter, prior of the monaſtery of St. John Baptiſt in the county of Leiceſter on the one part, and William Venables of Kinderton, within the county palatine of Cheſter, eſq. of the other part; of and for the right, title, uſe, intereſt, and poſſeſſion, of one acre of land in Kinderton aforeſaid, called le Cock's acre, and of the advowſon of the church of Roſthorne, which the prior claimed; were bound to refer themſelves to the ſaid arbitrators by ſeveral obligations, dated 10 Nov. 22 Henry VIII. in £1000. who awarded that the prior ſhould releaſe the ſaid William Venables of the bond of peace and appearance daily in the Star-chamber at Weſtminſter, and all other courts of record, and alſo his ſervants, &c.; that the prior ſhould enjoy the ſaid acre and the advowſon of Roſthorne church, &c.; and that the ſaid William and his wife, and their heirs, ſhould make aſſurance thereof before Michaelmas 1539, with liberty to incloſe the ſame, &c.; and the prior to pay to the ſaid William 100 marks.

Nov. 21, an order was made againſt William Venables, eſq. in the Star-chamber, on the complaint of the prior of Laund; but it appeared that the ſaid William had releaſed his right in the advowſon, &c. to the prior, and levied a fine thereof.

The king gave to the prior the church of Roſthorne; provided that the vicarage ſhould be competently endowed, and that a ſufficient ſum of money, at the diſcretion of the ordinary, ſhould be diſtributed among the poor of the pariſh, by the prior and convent, and their ſucceſſors, according to the form of the ſtatute. Teſte rege, &c. apud Weſtm', 24 Feb. 22 Hen. VIII.

31 Henry VIII. the prior ſurrendered the ſame to the king; who, 38 Henry VIII, amongſt other things, appropriated it to Chriſt Church in Oxford, by the name of the rectory and church of Roſthorne, in the county of Cheſter, with the rights and appurtenances to the ſame prior belonging [1].

In Derbyſhire, the prior and convent of Laund had the impropriate rectory of Hatherſage [2].

In Nottinghamſhire, they held, under the grant of king Henry II, the church of Arnall, or Ernehale; from which an annual penſion of four marks was confirmed to them by archbiſhop Godfrey [3]. They had alſo the church of Colſton Baſſet, with the vicarage, of the gift of Richard Baſſet, their founder [4]; but this church was afterwards appropriated to the collegiate church of the Newark at Leiceſter. It is probable that they had alſo the church of Fladborough [5]. The prior and convent of Laund were certified to hold the town or village of Salterford in pure alms [6]; and had ~~common of paſture there~~ [7]. They poſſeſſed alſo divers farms in Sutton, Marnham, and Skegby.

In Northamptonſhire, they had the impropriate rectory and the advowſon of the vicarage of Aſhby Legers, otherwiſe Aſhby juxta Daventry, which they held in proprios uſus from the foundation of the priory [8]; the advowſons of Arthingworth [9]; Blatherwick [10]; Little Bowden [11]; Brington [12]; Piteſleigh [13]; Weſton Baſſet with Sutton chapel [14]; and a moiety of Weldon [15]. The priory had a penſion of two marks from the church of Arthingworth; and in the townſhips of Sutton and Weſton held three ploughlands, but no mention is made by what ſervice [16].—John Yeoman was preſented, by George Swillington and John Barrett, July 25, 1547, to the vicarage of Weſton, vacant by the death of Thomas Young, by propoſal *; and for the particulars of which we refer to Mr. Gutch's hiſtory of the ſeveral above-mentioned colleges, pp. 125. 239. 243. 353. 374. 594. He gave ſome lands, called Baſſet's Fee †, co. Oxford, to Queen's and All Souls' Colleges; and lands in Stow Park, co. Lincoln, to the dean and chapter of Lincoln; and bequeathed ſeveral ornaments to his college chapel of Brazenoſe ‡, here exhibited from the inventory in the will in the Prerogative-office: "Imprimis, a dorſe and redorſe of crymſyn velvet, with flowres of golde; in length, two yards three quarters; in depth, one yard and one quarter. Item, a dorſe and redorſe of panyd velvett, ſad tawny and marble colour; in length two yards, in depyth one yard and one quarter. Item, two dorſes and redorſes of panyd velvet, ſad tawny and light tawny; in length two yards and three quarters, in depyth one yard one quarter. Item, two paire of curteyns for aulters ends, of red tartaryn. Item, a paire of curteyns of grene tartaryn. Item, two cloths of diaper, in length the peice three ells; in bredth one ell. Item, two cloths of diaper, in length the piece three ells, in bredth one ell. Item, a playn cloth, in length two ells one quarter, in brede one yerde. Item, another plain cloth, in length three ells, in brede one yerde. Item, two courſe playn cloths, in length the piece three ells. Item, a coffen for a corporas, of bords covered with black velvet; and thereon an image of Chriſt made with gold, ſilke, and perles; and within that corporas caſe of clothe of golde. Item, another coffyn like the ſame, with images of Mary and Gabriel, and a caſe for a corporas in the ſame of black velvet. Item, a caas, with a corporas, the one ſide velvett powdred with gold, and the other ſide ruſſet damaſk. Item, a corporas caas, the one ſide clothe of golde, and the other ſide black velvett. Item, a ſuete of veſtment of crymſyn velvett, with three copes of the ſame, powdred with flowres of golde, lined with grene bokeram. Item, a ſuete of veſtments of cloth of tiſſue, with aparel for the ſame, lined with blew bokeram. Item, a cope of crymſyn velvet upon velvet. Item, a ſuete of veſtments of tynſel ſilk. Item, two copes of the ſame. Item, a veſtment of velvet, ſad tawny; the orfrays of light tawny. Item, a veſtment of blewe damaſke, the orfrays of grene damaſke, powdred with flowres of golde, lyned with grene bokeram. Item, a Maſſe-booke, ſecundo folio, Chorus. Item, a Maſſe-booke imprinted, ſecundo folio, ad te levavi. Item, Antiphonar', ſecundo folio, Sacerdos. Item, a Antiphonar, ſecundo folio, Juſticiam. Item, a Antiphonar, in ſecundo folio, Dicne. Item, a Antiphonar, in ſecundo folio, Nari. Item, a Antiphonar, with a legend in folio, Per omnia. Item, a grayle, ſecundo folio, Tot. Item, a grayle, ſecundo folio, Sim. Item, a Proceſſional, ſecundo folio, Sequar. Item, a Proceſſional, ſecundo folio, Juſtum. Item, a Proceſſional, ſecundo folio, Excita. Item, a paire of organs, late bought at London." Prob. 30 January, 1513. His arms were the ſame as thoſe which his college uſe; Sable, a chevron Argent between three roſes Gules. (Plate XLV. fig. 23.) See Godwin, de Præſulibus, ed. Richardſon, pp. 297. 323.

---

[1] Sir Thomas Venables brought his Quare impedit againſt the prior of Laund for the advowſon of the church of Roſthorne; but the ſuit was ſtayed in the Chancery. He pleads the privileges of the county of Cheſter, that none might be ſued out of the ſaid county palatine, &c. except in caſe of error, or foreign plea, or treaſon; which privileges were ratified by king Henry VII. and other his Majeſty's progenitors, and alſo by the queen's majeſty, by her letters patent, under the great ſeal of England.—Sir Thomas Weſton bought the preſentation of the advowſon of Roſthorne of Mr. Hugh Venables and Jo. Troutbeck his father-in-law, for 40 marks; and was parſon there for the ſpace of 12 years in the reign of Edward IV. Harl. MSS. 2077.

[2] Appropriated, together with Wardley, by Pat. 21 Ric. II.

[3] Reg. John Romaue, archbiſhop of York, 1285—1296.

[4] Thoroton, Nottinghamſhire, p. 82. See alſo Plac. de Banco, 27 Hen. III. Rot. 5 de commun. paſtur. in Coleton & Cart. 35 Hen. III. m. 2.

[5] See p. 303.

[6] Ib. p. 296. & Lib. Feodorum in Scaccario, penès Remembratorem Regis.

[7] Plac. de Banco 27 Hen. III. Rot. 5. Cart. 35 Hen. III. m. 2.

[8] See Bridges, Northamptonſhire, vol. I. p. 17.

[9] Ibid. vol. II. p. 3.

[10] Ibid. vol. II. p. 278.

[11] The prior and convent were patrons here in 1228, in which year they preſented John de Rowell, clerk, to this rectory; "ſalvâ vicariâ Henrici capellani, qui totam ipſam eccleſiam nomine vicarie ſue tenebit quoad vixerit, reddendo predicto Johanni & ſucceſſoribus ſuis 20 ſolidos annuatim nomine penſionis;" 3 non. Octobris, anno 29° Hugonis Wells. See Bridges, vol. II. p. 6.

[12] See p. 301.

[13] Confirmed by the charters of king Henry I; but not noticed in Bridges, vol. II. p. 124.

[14] Bridges, vol. II. p. 359.

[15] Ibid. p. 355.

[16] Bridges, MSS. vol. P. f. 428; è Libro Cartarum MS. vocat. Nomina Villarum, penès comitem de Cardigan, 1718.

* "This "intention" to Lincoln College, ſo far as I can diſcover, is a tale not older than A. Wood." R. C.

† "He gave Baſſet's fee to Brazenoſe, and was not a benefactor to Queen's or All Souls College, that I ever heard." R. C.

‡ "Of this donation I never heard; but he was a benefactor to the cathedral." R. C.

virtue of a grant pro hâc vice from the prior and convent of Laund [1].

In Rutland, they had the churches of Glaſton [2] and Wardley [3], and the chapel at Belton; at which latter place, a tenement, with certain lands, of the annual rent of 20*s.* was demiſed to Thomas Drake; the tithes of a meadow, called Eaſt Micklengs, to Thomas Woodhouſe, alias Webſter, at the annual rent of £6. 10*s.*; and another tenement, with lands of the annual value of 10*s.* belonging to this priory, was demiſed to the ſaid Thomas Woodhouſe for 61 years, by deed, dated 22 May, 30 Henry VIII [4]; all which were granted by Edward VI, May 25, 1547, to Gregory lord Cromwell and Elizabeth his wife, for their joint lives.

In a valuation of the archdeaconries of Northampton and Rutland, the property of the prior of Laund in thoſe counties is thus ſtated:

Bona prioris de Landa.	Decanat'.
Eccleſia de Weldon	Weldon	x marc'.
——— Weldon		xiii marc'.
Eccleſia de Aſshbey Sc̄i Leodegari,	Daventry,	xv marc'.
Penſio prioris de Ware in eadem,		ii marc'.
Penſio in Arthyngworth,	Rothwell,	ii marc'.
Penſio in eccleſiâ de Glaſton,	Rotel,	viš. viiid̄.
Penſio in eccleſiâ de Wardele & Belton,		xiiiš. iiiid̄.
	Decanat.	Mediet' decime.
Item, habet in Aſsheby Ledgers,	Daventry,	xivd̄.
In Arthyngworth,	Rothwell,	xlviiiš.
In Weſton,	Weldon,	viiiš. vid̄.
Item, habet in decanatu de Rotel.		xxxš. xid̄. ob.

Summa, xxxiiil. viiiš. ixd̄. ob.

Inde decima, xxxiiiš. vd̄. ob. [5]

In Oxfordſhire, they had divers rents at Chaſtleton.

In Staffordſhire, they had the church of Patingham; the free chapel, or curacy, of Patteſhull [6]; and perhaps, at an early period, the church of Walſall [7].

In Warwickſhire, ſome rents of aſſize at Baddeſley.

In the account of William Laurence, collector of penſions, for one year ending at Michaelmas 1539, we find the following particulars:

"Com. Leic'. De XXXIII lī. de firm' manerii, cum rectoriâ de Melton Mowbraye, de viſ' franc' cum terris vocat' Lytle Spynney & Greate Spynney, except' vicar' de Melton, ſic dim' Wilt̄o Gonſon arm' per indentur' dat' XVII° die Aprilis, anno regni regis Henrici VIII. XXIII°; habend' à feſto Inventionis Sc̄e Crucis prox' ſequent' uſque finem term' LV annor'; reddend' indè annuatim ad feſt' Sc̄i Mich̄is omnia alia onera, prout in eâdem indenturâ pleniùs continetur.

Scit' nuper monaſterii de Launde, cum terris dominicalibus.

Computus Wilt̄i Wryght, ballivi ac collectoris redd' ibidem, per Hen' Dowes deput' ſuum, pro uno anno integro finit' ad feſtum Sc̄i Mich̄is Archangeli, anno regni regis Henrici VIII. XXXI°.

Arreragia.

Null'; quia primus computus ipſius nunc computatur. Summa, null'.

Firm' terrarum dominicalium.

Et redd' de XXš. de firm' ſcit', cum gardin', pomar', ſtagn', columbar', ac omnibus domibus & ceteris edificiis infra precinct' dc̄i nuper mon' per ann'. Et de XIIIš. IIIId̄. de firm' molend' aquatic' ibidem, cum clauſo vocato Lanterne-yerd, per annum. Et de LXXVII lī. VIIš. IIIId̄. de firmâ diverſarum paſturarum ſparſim inter ibidem; videlicet, unam paſturam vocat' le Whadborowe, aliam paſturam voc' le Newe-cloſe, aliam paſturam voc' Mylfeld, aliam paſturam voc' More-cloſe, aliam paſturam voc' Rough-cloſe, aliam paſturam voc' Milwong, aliam paſturam voc' Burfeld, aliam paſturam voc' Eſtfeld, aliam paſturam voc' Butler's Cloſe, aliam paſturam voc' Thomas Taylor's Cloſe, aliam paſturam voc' Burton's Cloſe, ac aliam paſturam voc' Horſe-cloſe, ac dimiſſ' diverſis perſonis per annum. Summa, LXXIX lī. VIIId̄.

Firm' minut'.

Et de XLš. de firm' unius ten' ibidem dimiſſ' Rob̄to Bayerd per indenturam, per annum; & de IIIId̄. de firm' unius cotagii dimiſſ' Joanne Yeman, vidue, per indenturam, per annum. Summa, XLš. IIIId̄.

Firma ſcit' manerii de Lodyngton.

Et de XLš. de firmâ, ſcit' manerii ibidem, cum pomario, columbare, domibus, & edificiis infra precinct' ejuſdem, per annum. Summa, XLš.

Redd' aſſiſ'.

Et de XVII lī. XVš. VIIId̄. de redd' tenent' ad voluntatem per annum; & de XXIXš. Xd̄. ob̄. de redd' voc' Paſture-ſilver, per annum. Summa, XIX lī. Vš. VId̄. ob̄.

Firma terrarum dominicalium de Lodyngton.

Et de XXIII lī. de firmâ terrarum diverſarum ibidem; videlicet, Stiltons, le Conyngry, cum le Lodge, paſturâ vocat' Lees, le Appletree-cloſe, Great Calborowe, cum CXX acris terre arabilis in communibus campis ſic dimiſſis hoc anno. Et de LXVIš. VIIId̄. de firmâ XL carectat' feni annuatim percipiend' in communibus campis. Summa, XXVI lī. VIš. VIIId̄. q̄.

Firme minute.

Et de XIIII lī. XVIš. IIId̄. ob̄. de firmis minutis, dimiſſ' diverſis perſonis per annum. Summa, XIIII lī. XVIš. IIId̄. ob̄.

Rectoria de Lodington.

Et de VIII lī. de firmâ rectorie ibidem ſic dimiſſe hoc anno. Summa, VIII lī.

Venditio boſci.

De aliquo proficuo proveniente pro decimis de boſcis aut ſubboſcis ibidem venditis hoc anno, non redditur; quòd nullus hujuſmodi boſci aut ſubboſci ibidem venditus fuerat per tempus hujus computi, per ſacramentum computatoris. Summa, null'.

Perquiſ' cur',

Et de Vš. de perquiſ' cur' anno tent' prout per vitulas curie ſuper tunc computum oſtend' & examinat'. Summa Vš.

Firma terrarum ſpectantium nuper monaſterio Sc̄i Jacobi.

Et de XLVIš. VIIId̄. de firmâ terrarum in Whadborowe ſpectantium nuper monaſterio Sc̄i Jacobi juxta Northamptoniam per ann'. Summa, XLVIš. VIIId̄.

Summa totalis receptûs, CLIV lī. XIIII d̄.

Ex quibus,

Feoda.

Idem computat in feoda computatoris cauſâ exercendi officii ſui hoc anno, per literas patentes ſibi conceſſ', per ann' XXVI lī. VIIId̄. Summa, XXVIš. VIIId̄.

Penſiones.

Et in annuali penſione ſolutâ vicario de Tylton pro decimis in Whadborough per annum, Xš. Et in allocatione redditûs ſcitûs dicti nuper monaſterii, eò quòd remanet in manibus domini hoc anno XXš. Et in allocatione VI vaccarum, XL ovium, unius equi, depaſcendarum infra terras dominicales de Launde, XXIIIIš. cum XII carect' boſci, XVIš. conceſſ' Joanne Yeman, videlt, per literas patentes ſub ſigillo conventûs, ad terminum vite ſue, XLš. abſque aliquo indè reddendo. Summa, III lī. Xš.

Expenſus neceſſarii.

Et in expenſis ſeneſcalli ad curiam tentam apud Lod̄inton hoc anno, IIIš. IIIId̄. Et in expenſis computatoris venientis verſùs Lond' ad reddendum computum ſuum, IIIš. IIIId̄. Summa, VIš. VIIId̄.

Reparationes.

Et in reparationibus factis hoc anno per mandatum Henrici Polſted, adtunc ſuperviſoris Thome nuper comitis Eſſexie, XXIIIš. IId̄. Summa, XXIIIš. IId̄.

Liberi denarii.

Et in denariis ſolutis Franciſco Cave, adtunc generali receptori dicti nuper comitis, ad diverſas vices, ex recognitione ipſius Franciſci, XXXIV lī. XVIIIš. Xd̄. ob̄. Summa, XXXIV lī. XVIIIš. Xd̄. ob̄.

Summa omnium allocationum & liberationum predictarum, XLI lī. Vš. IIIId̄. ob̄.

Et debetur CXII lī. XVš. IXd̄. ob̄.

---

[1] Reg. Eccl. Petriburg.

[2] Wright's Rutland, p. 65.

[3] Appropriated by Pat. 21 Ric. II; and ſee Wright's Rutland, p. 133.

[4] Wright's Rutland, p. 23; and Stevens's Monaſticon, vol. II. p. 138.

[5] Bridges, MSS. vol. K. fol. 455.

[6] Pat. 18 Edw. III. p. 1. m. 22. pro eccleſiâ de Patingham, cum capellâ de Pateſhull.

[7] See p. 301.

Reſpect'.

Reſpect'.

Et r. c lī. de exitibus predictorum maneriorum hujus anni, eò quòd Johannes Lancaſter, dudum prior prioratûs de Laund, unde eadem maneria ſunt parcelle, recipiſſet in fraudem pre manibus, ſcilt, tempore ſurſum-redditûs dicti nuper prioratûs, & antequàm dicta maneria ad manus dicti nuper comitis devenerunt, eaſdem c lī. de diverſis firmariis ibidem, de exitibus eorundem maneriorum debit' poſt dictum ſurſum-redditum; quos quidem redditus đnus rex nunc per literas ſuas patentes, datas apud Weſtmonaſterium, x° die Aprilis, anno regni ſui xxxi°, conceſſit dicto nuper comiti, habendum ſibi tempore ſurſum-redditûs predicti, eademque neque fraude per dictum nuper comitem ſuperindè prope examinata & reperta. Idem dudum prior poſtea, ſimul cum Willielmo Buſſhop, tenebatur dicto nuper comiti per billam datam iiii° die Junii, anno xxxii° đni regis nunc, ad reſolvendum dictum c lī. dicto nuper comiti; quod quidem debitum devenit ad manus đni regis, ratione attincture dicti nuper comitis; & que quidem billa deliberata fuit per indenturam inter[1] . . . . nuper comitis Willielmo Whorwood, generali attornato đni regis, ad uſum ipſius đni regis, prout auditori conſtat. Summa, c lī.

Et debetur xii lī. xv s̄. ix đ. ob̄. que liberavit Joh̄i Byther, arm', receptori generali đni regis ibidem, ex recognitione ſuâ[2]."

The ſite of the priory of Laund, with the manor, buildings, and lands thereto belonging, became, as has been already ſtated, by grant from king Henry VIII. the property of a perſon of ſo much note in his day, that ſome memoirs of him may be acceptable.

Thomas Cromwell was the ſon of ——— Cromwell[3], a blackſmith, at Putney, near London, and in his latter days a brewer; after whoſe deceaſe, his mother was married to a ſheerman in London.

"Putney, the place made bleſſed by my birth,
Whoſe meaneſt cottage ſimply did me ſhrowd,
To me as deareſt of the Engliſh earth;
So of my bringing that poor village proud,
Though in a time when never leſs the dearth
Of happie wits, yet mine ſo well allow'd,
That with the beſt ſhe boldlie durſt prefer
Me, that my breath acknowledged from her[4]."

His honeſt parents gave him a good and ſtrong conſtitution; which, accompanied with excellent endowments of mind, and an uncommon induſtry, raiſed him to that high pitch of honour to which he afterwards arrived. What education he had was in a private ſchool: and all the learning he attained to was (according to the ſtandard of thoſe times) only reading and writing, and a little Latin. When he grew up, having a very great inclination for travelling, he went into foreign countries; though at whoſe expence is not known; and by that means had an opportunity of ſeeing the world, of gaining experience, and of learning ſeveral languages, which proved of great ſervice to him afterwards. Coming to Antwerp, where was then a conſiderable Engliſh factory, he was by them retained to be their clerk or ſecretary. But that office being too great a confinement to his roving and aſpiring mind, he embraced an opportunity that offered, in 1510, of taking a journey to Rome[5]. Whilſt he remained in Italy, he ſerved for ſome time as a ſoldier under the duke of Bourbon, and was at the ſacking of Rome; and at Bologna, aſſiſted John Ruſſel, eſq. afterwards earl of Bedford, in making his eſcape, when he had like to be betrayed into the hands of the French, being ſecretly in thoſe parts about our king's affairs. An inſtance we have, moreover, at this time, of Cromwell's great induſtry, and of his improving every moment; namely, that, in his journey to and from Rome, he learned by heart the New Teſtament of Eraſmus's tranſlation[6]. As a private ſchool had civilized his parts; ſo travel and employment improved them. His neceſſity when at home made him a ſoldier abroad; and his obſervations abroad made him a man at home. The experience of travel enlarged his ſoul, and the hardſhip of war knitted and conſolidated it.

After his return from his travels, he was taken into the family and ſervice of the famous Cardinal Wolſey; who, obſerving his great parts and diligence, made him his ſolicitor, and often employed him in buſineſs of great importance. Among other things, he had the chief hand in the foundation of the two colleges begun at Oxford and Ipſwich by that magnificent prelate; and in ſuppreſſing, in 1525, ſome ſmall monaſteries for the endowment of them. Upon his maſter the Cardinal's diſgrace, in 1529, he uſed his utmoſt endeavours and intereſt to have him reſtored to the king's favour: and when Articles of high-treaſon againſt him were ſent down to the Houſe of Commons, of which Cromwell was then a member, he defended his maſter (whom Gardiner, though more obliged to him, had baſely forſaken) with ſo much wit and eloquence, that no treaſon could be laid to his charge[7]; which honeſt beginning procured Cromwell great reputation, and made his parts and abilities to be much taken notice of. His hard fortune at Cambray was the occaſion of his good one in England; his promiſing looks commended him to Cardinal Wolſey for ſervice, as they had done to Freſcobald the Italian merchant, at Lucca, for relief; and his gratitude to both recommended him to poſterity; the merchant he paid in his own coin, but with Engliſh generoſity; Wolſey he defends in parliament from an attainder; and, though he could not keep his patron from falling, yet he raiſed himſelf by ſpeaking in his defence; for, his maſter brought him firſt to ſerve his country in parliament (that great ſchool of experience), and then his king at court, where, defending his maſter's great actions, he made it evident he could perform greater.

When the Cardinal's houſehold came to be diſſolved, Cromwell was taken into the king's ſervice, upon the recommendation of ſir Chriſtopher Hales, afterwards maſter of the Rolls, and ſir John Ruſſel, knt. as the fitteſt perſon to manage the diſputes the king then had with the pope: though ſome endeavoured, to hinder his promotion, to prejudice his majeſty againſt him, on account of his rude behaviour in defacing the ſmall monaſteries that were diſſolved for endowing Wolſey's colleges. But he diſcovering to the king ſome particulars that were very acceptable to him, he took him into the higheſt degree of favour. Soon after, he was ſent to the Convocation, then ſitting, to acquaint the clergy that they were all fallen into a præmunire. In 1531 he was knighted; made maſter of the king's jewel-houſe[1], with a ſalary of £50. a year; and conſtituted a privy counſellor. The next year, he was made clerk of the hanaper[2], an office of good profit and repute in Chancery; and, before the end of the ſame year, chancellor of the Exchequer[3]. In 1533, he was appointed principal ſecretary of ſtate; and, in April that year, againſt the ſolemnity of the coronation of Anne Bullein, the king ſent writings to all ſheriffs, to certify the names of men of forty pounds lands, to receive the order of knighthood, or elſe to make fine for the ſame; the aſſeſſment of which was appointed to Cromwell, who ſo uſed the matter, that a great ſum of money was levied to the king's uſe by thoſe fines.

---

[1] The original is here imperfect.

[2] Rot. Harl. I. 15.

[3] "On the authority of Fox and Stowe, it is generally ſtated that the father of Cromwell became a brewer, after having followed the more ordinary occupation of a blackſmith. By the Addenda to Lambeth Hiſtory, pp. 429, 430, it appears that there was reſident in Stockwell a perſon of the name of Cromwell, and that he is ſtyled a brewer; but no relationſhip can be traced between this Cromwell and the ill-fated miniſter of the tyrant Henry. John Cromwell, by his will, in which he is ſtyled a brewer, gave 1*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* to the church of Lambeth; and, from donations in his life-time, it may be inferred that his perſonal ſubſtance was conſiderable." S. D.

[4] Michael Drayton, in the Legend of Great Cornwall.

[5] That opportunity was as follows. There being at that time a famous gild of our Lady in the church of St. Botulph, at Boſton in Lincolnſhire, to which ſeveral popes had granted very large indulgences or pardons, which were then highly valued, and held in the higheſt veneration, and very much reſorted to; the brethren and ſiſters of that gild were very deſirous of having thoſe indulgences renewed and confirmed by the then pope Julius II. They diſpatched therefore two perſons to Rome with a conſiderable ſum of money, to obtain the deſired confirmation: which perſons, taking Antwerp in their way, became acquainted there with Thomas Cromwell; and obſerving that he was as perfectly qualified for procuring eaſily what they wanted from the court of Rome, as they were themſelves unqualified for it, they perſuaded him to go along with them. Accordingly he was of very great ſervice to them: for, being informed that pope Julius was a great lover of delicacies and dainty diſhes, he preſented him with fine diſhes of jelly, made after the Engliſh faſhion, then unknown at Rome; wherewith the pope was ſo delighted, that he very readily granted Cromwell and his companions what they came about. See this whole matter related at full length, in J. Fox's Acts and Monuments, edit. 1583, p. 1178.

[6] This circumſtance reſts on the authority of Fox's Acts and Monuments, p. 1178.

[7] Strype ſays, "After the fall of Cardinal Wolſey, being choſen a burgeſs for the parliament, he manifeſted his affection and gratitude to his old maſter, by doing him all the good ſervice he could, in that convention; and that by his witty arguments he ſtifled that bill which was there brought in to attaint him of high treaſon; anſwering whatſoever was there at any time laid to his charge, or objected againſt him."

In 1534, in purſuance of the act wherein the parliament had given him the Supremacy, the king firſt took the corporal oaths, ſubſcriptions and ſeals of the biſhops of the realm, unto the ſaid ſupremacy; and, next, addreſſed letters to every biſhop in his reſpective dioceſe, dated June 9, requiring them, 1. In their proper perſons, every Sunday and high feſtival throughout the year, to preach the ſincere word of God; and to declare, that this ſtyle and title of Supreme Head belonged to the crown and dignity of this realm. 2dly, That they ſhould give monition to all abbots, priors, deans, archdeacons, provoſts, parſons, vicars, curates, and all other eccleſiaſtical perſons, to teach and publiſh the ſaid ſtyle and title every Sunday and high feſtival, in their reſpective houſes, churches, and pariſhes; 3dly, to command all ſchoolmaſters to inſtruct and teach the ſame unto the children committed unto them. 4thly, To cauſe all prayers, rubricks, canons of maſs-books, &c. wherein the biſhop of Rome is named, or his preſumptuous and proud pomp mentioned, to be utterly aboliſhed and razed out; and his very name and memory to be never more remembered, except to his contumely and reproach (for in theſe words the king's letter runs.) 5thly, To leave out in the general ſentence all ſuch articles as tend to the glory and advancement of the biſhop of Rome. Upon which order it ſoon was laid wholly aſide.

In June 1535, as the biſhops had all ſubſcribed to the king's ſupremacy the laſt year, they were required to publiſh and declare as much in their own cathedral churches, and to ſet forth the king's title of Supreme Head under God of the Church of England; and to ſee the people in their reſpective dioceſes effectually inſtructed in this point by the clergy in their pariſhes; which, with a declaration to be read to the people, were ſent by Cromwell to all the archbiſhops and biſhops. And they, perceiving well how bent the king was upon this matter, wrote their letters of anſwer to Cromwell[4], ſignifying their reſpective receipts of the king's and his letters in this behalf, together with their promiſe of yielding obedience thereto, and accounts of their ſo doing. But Cranmer archbiſhop of Canterbury, and Shaxton biſhop of Saliſbury, took great joy hereat, as appeared by their letters. The latter, in his letter to Cromwell, dated June the 4th, from Mortlake, ſhewed "how he rejoyced that the king had writ ſo earneſtly to his biſhops in this cauſe; and that he concluded, that God had made uſe of his wiſdom to ſtir up the prince thereunto; thanking God for it, and beſeeching him to go on ſtill from one thing to another, till the uſurped power of that man of Rome were clean aboliſhed and put out of the hearts of the king's ſubjects; and that he, for his own part, would apply with all diligence to this ſo godly a commandment. Robert biſhop of Chicheſter, June 13, preached at his cathedral; and there declared openly the king's commandment concerning the uniting of the Supreme Head of the Church of England unto the Imperial Crown of this realm; and alſo the aboliſhing and ſecluding the enormities and abuſes of the biſhop of Rome's authority, uſurped within the ſame. He likewiſe ſent forth his ſuffragan to preach and publiſh the ſame within the populous towns of his dioceſe; and took effectual care, by the 28th of June, that all abbots, priors, deans, archdeacons, provoſts, parſons, vicars, and curates, in his dioceſe, had commandment to publiſh the ſame in their churches every Sunday and ſolemn feaſt; and intended to ſee and cauſe them to do their duty in that behalf. And all this he ſignified to the ſecretary in a letter, dated June the 28th, from Selſey; and prayed him, that by reaſon of his great age, being now 90 years and upwards, he would move the king, that his farther doing in theſe premiſſes by other ſufficient perſons might ſuffice for his diſcharge. John biſhop of Lincoln alſo ſet forth the king's title, dignity, and ſtyle of Supreme Head; and cauſed the ſame to be declared through his dioceſe; and the declaration to this purpoſe, which Cromwell had ſent: copies whereof, to be diſperſed to every curate in his dioceſe, he cauſed his clerks to write out as many and as faſt as they could. But his dioceſe being ſo large, he cauſed 2000 to be printed. And of all this he certified the ſecretary, from Woburne, June 25; but praying that he might know his pleaſure and approbation, whether he ſhould in that manner ſend them forth.

It does not appear to whom the following letter from Cromwell was addreſſed, againſt a peſtilent faction in a certain town, and ordering two prieſts to be ſent as priſoners; nor to what town it relates.

"After my right harty commendations. The king's highneſs being informed that there be two preſts in that towne: th' one called ſir William Minſtorley, which is now in warde; th' other called ſir William Richardſon, otherwiſe good ſir William; hath commanded me to ſignifie unto you that like as his pleaſure is, that, upon the receipt hereof, you ſhall ſend both the ſame preſts hither as priſoners in aſſured cuſtodye: Soo his grace cannot a little mervayl to here of the papiſticall faction that is mayntained in that towne, and by you chiefly that is of his grace's counſail. Surely his majeſtie thinketh that you have little reſpecte either to him, to his lawes, or to the good ordre of that towne, which ſo little regards him in a matur of ſo great weight, which alſo his highneſs hath ſo much to heart; and willed me plainly to intimate unto you all and every of you, that in caſe he ſhall perceyve from hensforth any ſuch abuſes ſuffered or winked at, as has been hitherto in maner in contempt of his moſt royall eſtates mayntained, his highneſs woll put others in the beſt of your romes that ſhall ſo offende him, by whom he wil be better ſerved. It is thought againſt all reaſon that the prayers of women and their fond flatterings ſhould move any of you to do that thing that ſhould in any wiſe diſpleaſe your prince and ſouveraign lord, or offend his juſt lawes; and if you ſhall think any extremytie in this writing, you muſt thanke yourſelves that have ſo procured it; for neither of yourſelfs have you regarded theſe maturs, nor anſwered to many my letters written for like purpoſes and upon like occaſions; wherein thoughe I have not made any accuſation, yet, being in the place for thoſe things that I am, I have thought you did me therein too much injury, and ſuche as I am aſſured his highneſs, knowing it, would not have taken in good parte. But this matur needeth no aggravation; nor have I done any thing in it more thenne hath been by his majeſty thought mete; per caſe not ſo much. And thus fare you hartely well. From Sutton, the 17th of July. Your lordſhippis aſſuryd THOMAS CRUMWELL[5]."

The firſt act of the king's ſupremacy was his naming Cromwell vicar-general, and general-viſitor of all the monaſteries and other privileged places[1]; and, Oct. 8, 1535, being then ſtyled "Thomas Cromwell, eſq." he was appointed maſter of the Rolls[2].

---

[1] Pat. 23 Hen. VIII. p. 2.

[2] Pat. 24 Hen. VIII. p. 1.

[3] Ibid. p. 2.

[4] Thoſe of the biſhops of Saliſbury, Chicheſter, Lincoln, and Durham, are preſerved by Strype, Appendix, N° XLIX.—LII.

[5] Cotton MSS. Cleopatra E. IV. f. 44.

Shortly after this, the long parliament[3], then ſitting at Weſtminſter, originally deſigned to ſwallow up thoſe vaſt poſſeſſions, which, through the bounty of divers pious kings, and many other devout people of this nation, had been beſtowed on the monaſteries, wherein Cromwell had been the principal contriver; it was thought fit to ſend viſitors into all parts, for making inquiſition into the demeanor of the votaries then profeſſed in any of thoſe religious houſes; to the end that, by repreſenting them more looſe in their lives than the ſtrictneſs of their rule required, the leſs regret might be had, not only to their ejection, but to the utter ſuppreſſion of their orders. "As an introduction to the diſſolution of all abbeys," ſays Fuller, "ſpies were ſent forth to make ſtrict diſcovery of men's behaviours therein. Cromwell, ſcout-maſter general in this deſign, ſtayed at the court, whilſt his ſubordinate emiſſaries (men of as prying eyes, as afterwards they proved of gripple hands) ſent unto him all their intelligence." His conſcience inclined him to the Church's reformation; his intereſt complied with the king's. He unlocked the ſecrets of monaſteries by his ſpies, and put the king upon deſtroying them by his power. The principal commiſſioners[4] were, Thomas Legh, Richard Layton, and William Peters, doctors of the law, and Dr. John London[5] dean of Wallingford; and the firſt viſitation was made in October 1535 by Legh and Layton; whoſe proceedings are preſerved, in their own words, under the title of "Compertum Compertorum per Doctorem Legh & Doctorem Layton in Viſitatione Regiâ Provinciæ Eboracenſis & Epiſcopatu Coventriæ & Lichf. cum aliis[6]." Theſe commiſſioners, who well underſtood the meſſage they went on, and would not come back without a ſatisfactory anſwer to him that ſent them, knowing themſelves were likely to be no loſers thereby, put forth all who were willing to depart, and all who were under the age of twenty-four years; ſhutting up thoſe who remained, that they ſhould not go out of their places; which being done, they took the relicks and chiefeſt of the jewels, in every houſe, to the king's uſe. By their letters to Cromwell, it appears that in moſt houſes they found monſtrous diſorders; and that many fell down on their knees, and prayed they might be diſcharged, ſince they had been forced to make vows againſt their wills. With theſe the viſitors diſpenſed, and ſet them at liberty. They found great factions in the houſes, and barbarous cruelties exerciſed by one faction againſt another, as either of them prevailed. In many places, when they gave them the king's injunctions, many cried out that the ſeverity of them was intolerable, and they deſired rather to be ſuppreſſed than ſo reformed. They were all extremely addicted to idolatry and ſuperſtition. In ſome they found the inſtruments and other tools for multiplying and coining. But for the lewdneſs of the confeſſors of nunneries, and the great corruption of that ſtate, whole houſes being found almoſt all with child; for the diſſoluteneſs of abbots, and the other monks and friars, not only with whores, but married women; and for their unnatural luſts and other brutal practices; theſe are not fit to be ſpoken of, much leſs enlarged on, in a work of this nature.

The rents of the houſes ſeized on roſe to about £32,000.; the goods, plate, jewels, and other moveables, were valued at £100,000.; and it is generally ſaid, and not improbably, that the commiſſioners were as careful to enrich themſelves as to increaſe the king's revenue. The churches and cloiſters were for the moſt part pulled down; and the lead, bells, and other materials ſold.

July 2, 1536, Cromwell was made lord keeper of the king's privy ſeal[7]; on the 9th of the ſame month, was advanced to the dignity of a baron of this realm, by the name of lord Cromwell of Okeham[8]; and on the 18th, being the laſt day of the parliament, took his place amongſt the lords in the upper houſe, as the king's vicegerent; and the ſame day received the honour of knighthood.

Being therefore arrived to this exalted pitch of truſt, that which we ſhall next obſerve is, that the pope's ſupremacy, being here by authority of parliament aboliſhed, and directly declared to be in the king, divers buſineſſes thereupon happening, which could not be diſpatched without his highneſs's conſent, himſelf being not able to undergo the burthen thereof, conferred that authority on this lord Cromwell, making him vicegerent over all the ſpiritualities under himſelf: not that he thought a layman more fit for it than one of the clergy; but becauſe, under colour thereof, he had reſolved to put in execution ſome deſigns wherein the clergy, in probability, would have moved but ſlowly. Whereupon he became preſident in the ſynod of that year; and ſat in ſtate above all the biſhops; "deformi ſatis ſpectaculo (ſaith Godwin[9]) indocto laico cœtui præſidente ſacratorum antiſtitum, omnium, quos ante hæc tempora Anglia unquam habuiſſet, doctiſſimorum." By the authority of this ſynod, injunctions were iſſued by the lord Cromwell, in the king's name, for abrogating a number of holy-days, and eſpecially ſuch as fell in harveſt-time; the keeping of which was prejudicial to the gathering in the corn, hay, and fruits of the earth. The ſum of them was, "That the dedication of churches ſhould be kept on the firſt Sunday in October for ever. That the feaſt of the patron of every church, commonly called the Church Holy-day, ſhould not be henceforth kept as a holy-day, except it be ſuch a holy-day as is to be univerſally kept. That all holy-days that happen in harveſt-time, that is, from the firſt of July to the 29th of September, were not to be kept holy-days; but people were to do their ordinary work, except the feaſts of the Apoſtles, of the Bleſſed Virgin, St. George, and ſuch feaſts wherein the king's judges at Weſtminſter did not uſe to ſit in judgement. And what days they were, were afterwards mentioned in the injunctions. The four offering days to be, the Nativity of our Lord, Eaſter-day, the Nativity of St. John Baptiſt, and of Michael the Archangel." And in September the ſame year, were ſent out, under the king's ſpiritual ſeal, by Cromwell his vicegerent, certain other injunctions[10] to the prelates and clergy of the realm; charging all eccleſiaſtical incumbents to declare that the pope's uſurped power had no ground in the law of God; and ſtrictly enjoining them to preach, and to teach their pariſhioners the Pater Noſter, Ave, Creed, Commandments, and Articles of Faith, with other Articles, in the Engliſh tongue.

---

[1] This is commonly confounded with his ſubſequent dignity of lord vicegerent in eccleſiaſtical matters; but they were two different places, and held by different commiſſions. By the one he had no authority over the biſhops, nor had he any precedence; but the other, as it gave him the precedence next the royal family, ſo it cloathed him with a complete delegation of the king's whole power in eccleſiaſtical affairs. For two years he was only vicar-general. In the Prerogative Office there is a ſubaltern commiſſion granted to Dr. (after Secretary) Petre, Jan. 13, in the 27th year of the king's reign; by which it appears that Cromwell's commiſſion was at firſt conceived in very general words, for he is called the king's vicegerent in eccleſiaſtical cauſes, his vicar-general, and official-principal. But, becauſe he could not himſelf attend upon all theſe affairs, Dr. Petre was deputed under him, for receiving the probates of wills. It likewiſe appears, that all wills, where the eſtate was £200. or above, were no more to be tried or proved in the biſhops courts, but in the vicar-general's court. Yet, though he was called vicegerent in that commiſſion, he was ſpoken of, and writ to, by the name of vicar-general; but, after the ſecond commiſſion, in July 1536, he was always deſigned lord vicegerent.

[2] Pat. 26 Hen. VIII. p. 2. He was ſucceeded in that office, July 12, 1537, by Chriſtopher Hatton, eſq.

[3] Begun 3 Nov. 21 Henry VIII; and held, by prorogation, till the 27th of that king's reign.

[4] Many others were alſo empowered to viſit; for letters are preſerved from Robert Southwell, Ellice Price, John Ap-price, Richard Southwell, John Gage, Richard Bellaſis, Walter Hendle, and ſeveral others, to Cromwell, giving him an account of the progreſs they made in their ſeveral provinces.

[5] Of the three former, ſays Fuller, I can ſay nothing; but find the latter (though employed to correct others) no great ſaint himſelf: for afterwards he was publicly convicted of perjury, and adjudged to ride with his face to the horſe-tail at Windſor and Oakingham with papers about his head; which was done accordingly.

[6] Firſt publiſhed in 1789, with a Commentary, by the Rev. Dr. Pegge, and biographical memorials of Legh and Layton.

[7] Pat. 28 Hen. VIII. p. 1. [8] Ibid. [9] Annals, A.D. 1536.

[10] Theſe may be ſeen at large in Fox's Acts; and in Biſhop Burnet's Hiſtory of the Reformation., vol. I. Coll. N° 7.

In 1536, the lord Cromwell was elected chancellor of the univerſity of Cambridge[1]; ſoon after which followed a general viſitation of that learned ſeminary; whereupon the ſeveral colleges delivered up to him their charters and other inſtruments[2]. On this occaſion Dr. Fuller obſerves, "I find not any particular favour conferred, or benefaction beſtowed by him on the Univerſity. But this great good he did, that his greatneſs kept others from doing Cambridge any harm[3]. Many hungry courtiers had hopes to catch fiſh (and fiſh it would be whatever came to their nets) on this turning of the tide, the Alteration of Religion. How eaſy was it for Covetouſneſs, in thoſe tickliſh times, to quarrel the College lands into ſuperſtition! Sacrilege ſtood ready to knock at their gates: and, alas! it was paſt their porter's power to forbid it entrance, had not the lord Cromwell vigorouſly aſſiſted the Univerſity on all occaſions."

Aug. 26, 1537, the lord Cromwell was created knight of the Garter; and about this time was conſtituted chief juſtice itinerant of all the foreſts beyond Trent. In this year alſo there was a new viſitation appointed for all the monaſteries of England; and the viſitors were ordered to examine all things that related either to their converſation, to their affection to the king and the ſupremacy, or to their ſuperſtition, in their ſeveral houſes; to diſcover what cheats and impoſtures there were, either in their images, relicks, or other miraculous things, by which they had drawn people to their houſes on pilgrimages, and gotten from them any great preſents; alſo to try how they were affected during the late commotions, and to diſcover every thing that was amiſs in them, and report it to the lord vicegerent. Yet, in the records of this year, we find but one original ſurrender of any religious houſe; the abbey of Furneſs in Lancaſhire, valued at £960. with 30 monks, reſigning up that houſe to the king on April 9. Two other ſurrenders are enrolled that year; the one of Bermondſey in Surrey, the other of Biſham in Berks. In the following year, they made a quicker progreſs, and found ſtrange enormities in the greater houſes; it ſeems all the houſes under £200. of rent were not yet ſuppreſſed, as we find many within that value afterwards reſigning their houſes: and yet even then they made no great haſte; for there are but 21 ſurrenders all this year, either in the Rolls or Augmentation Office. And now, not only ſmall abbeys, but greater ones, were ſurrendered to the king. The prior of Great Malvern in Worceſterſhire offered to reſign; and was recommended by biſhop Latimer to Cromwell, with an earneſt deſire that his houſe might ſtand, not in monkery, but ſo as to be converted to preaching, ſtudy, and prayer. And the good prior was willing to compound for his houſe by a preſent of 500 marks to the king, and of 200 to Cromwell. He is commended for being an old worthy man, a good houſe-keeper, and one that daily fed many poor people. To this Latimer adds, "Alas, my good lord! ſhall we not ſee two or three in every ſhire changed to ſuch remedy?" But the reſolution was taken once to extirpate all. And therefore, though the viſitors interceded earneſtly for one nunnery in Oxfordſhire, Godſtow, where there was great ſtrictneſs of life, and to which moſt of the young gentlewomen of the county were ſent to be bred; ſo that the gentry of the country deſired the king would ſpare the houſe; yet all was ineffectual. And thus they went on procuring daily more ſurrenders. In this year there were 159 reſignations enrolled; of which the originals of 155 do yet remain.

The abbot of Reading had ſo got into Cromwell's good opinion, that in ſome differences between him and Shaxton biſhop of Saliſbury, who was Cromwell's creature, he had the better of the biſhop. Upon which Shaxton, who was a proud ill-natured man, wrote an high expoſtulating letter to Cromwell, "complaining of an injunction he had granted againſt him at the abbot's deſire. He alſo ſhewed, that in ſome conteſts between him and his reſidentiaries, and between him and the mayor of Saliſbury, Cromwell was always againſt him. He likewiſe challenged him for not anſwering his letters. He tells him, God will judge him for abuſing his power as he did: he prays God to have pity on him, and to turn his heart; with a great deal more provoking language." He alſo adds many inſolent praiſes of himſelf; and his whole letter is an extravagant piece of vanity and inſolence. To this Cromwell wrote an anſwer, that ſhews him to have been indeed a very great man; and the Reader will ſee from it how modeſtly and diſcretely he carried his greatneſs.

"My Lord, after hearty commendations, I cannot but both much marvel that you, whom I have taken as mine truſty friend, ſhould judge me, as I perceive by your letters you do, and alſo be glad that ye ſo frankly utter your ſtomach to me. I would thank you for your plain writing and free monitions; ſaving that you ſeem fuller of ſuſpicion than it becometh a prelate of your ſort to be: and (to ſay that maketh me more ſorry) much worſe perſuaded of me than I thought any of your learning and judgment could have been. I took a matter out of your hands to mine. If upon conſiderations mine office bind me to do ſo, what cauſe have ye to complain? If I had done this, either upon affection, or intending prejudice to your eſtimation, you might have expoſtulated with me; and yet, if ye then had done it after a gentler ſort, I ſhould both ſooner have amended that I did amiſs, and alſo have had better cauſe to judge your writing to me to be of a friendly heart towards me. If ye be offended with my ſharp letters, how can your teſty words (I had almoſt given them another name) delight me? I required you to uſe no extremity in your office: durus eſt hic ſermo, ye call it; and when ye have done, ye begin again, even as though all being ſaid, all were ſtill behind. If ye have uſed none extremity, I am, I enſure you, as glad of it as I ought to be: and though ye do not, yet upon a complaint my office bindeth me to ſuccour him that ſaith he is over-matched, and is compelled to ſuſtain wrong. I was thus informed, and by perſons to whom I gave more credit than I intend to do hereafter, if they have abuſed me, as ye would make me believe they have. They thus complaining, could I do leſs than grant unto them ſuch remedies as the king's highneſs and his laws give indifferently to all his ſubjects? Might I not alſo ſomewhat gather, that ye proceeded the ſorer againſt the reader, Roger London, when I had ſeen how much you deſired the preferment of your ſervant to that revenue? My Lord, you had ſhewed yourſelf of much more patience, I will not ſay of much more prudence, if you had contented yourſelf with their lawful appeal, and my lawful injunctions; and rather have written ſomewhat fully to inſtruct us in this matter, than thus to deſire to conquer me by ſhrewd words, to vanquiſh me by ſharp threp of Scripture, which as I know to uſe travel, ſo I truſt to God as great a clerk as ye be, is done already. Thus out of their place it becometh me not, neither yet am I wont to vaunt myſelf of well-doing. I know who worketh all that is well wrought by me; and whereas he is the whole doer, I intend not to offer him this wrong, to labour, and I to take the thanks; yet as I do not ceaſe to give thanks, that it hath pleaſed his goodneſs to uſe me as an inſtrument, and to work ſomewhat by me, ſo I truſt I am as ready to ſerve him in my calling, to my little power, as ye are preſt to write worſe of me than ye ought to think. My prayer is, That God give me no longer life than I ſhall be glad to uſe mine office in ædificationem, and not in deſtructionem, as ye bear me in hand I do. God, ye ſay, will judge ſuch uſing of authority; meaning flatly, that I do abuſe ſuch power as hath pleaſed God and the king's highneſs to ſet me in. God, I ſay, will judge ſuch judges as ye are, and charge all ſuch thoughts as ye miſuſe. Ye do not ſo well as I would ye ſhould do, if ye ſo think of me as your letters make me think ye do. The crime that ye charge me withal is greater than I may or ought to bear; untruer, I truſt, than they that would faineſt ſhall be able to prove. It is a ſtrange thing, you ſay, that I neither would write, nor ſend you word by mouth, what ye ſhould do with the popiſh monks of Abington; and that the abbot of Redding could get ſtraightway my letters to inhibit your juſt doings. That was not my mind which I wrote. I did not intend to lett your juſt doings, but rather to require you to do juſtly; neither was I ſwift in granting my letters to him; albeit, I am much readier to help him that complains of wrong, than preſt to further on him that deſireth puniſhment of a perſon whom I am not ſure hath offended. I made you no anſwer; a ſtrange thing!. My Lord, I thought ye had better known my buſineſs, than for ſuch a matter to eſteem me not your friend. You might have better judged that I was too much cumbred with other affairs; that thoſe which ſued for the abbot could better eſpy their time than you could. Some men will think it rather utter diſpleaſure conceived before, than that ye have any urgent occaſion here to miſjudge my mind towards you. As concerning your manor, you muſt uſe your priviledges as things lent unto you, ſo long as ye ſhall occupy them well, that is, according to the mind and pleaſure of them that gave you them. I took neither the monk's cauſe nor any other into my hands to be a bearer of any ſuch whom their upright dealings is not able to bear. No; you know, I think, that I love ſuch readers of Scripture as little as ye do: would God, men of your ſort were as diligent to ſee that in all their dioceſes good were made, as I am glad to remove things when I know them! If ye had taken even then but half the pains to ſend up ſuch things againſt him as ye now ſend, neither you ſhould have had cauſe, no nor occaſion, thus eaſily to divine of my good or evil will towards you, nor I have been cumbred with this anſwer. My Lord, I pray you, while I am your friend, take me to be ſo; for, if I were not, or if I knew any cauſe why I ought not, I would not be afraid to ſhew what had alienated my mind from you; ſo you ſhould well perceive that my diſpleaſure ſhould laſt no longer than there were cauſe. I paſs over your Nemo læditur niſi à ſeipſo. I pray with you this firſt part, Our Lord have pity upon me; the other part is not in my prayers, That God ſhould turn my heart; for he is my judge. I may err in my doings for want of knowledge; but I willingly bear no miſdoers; I willingly hurt none whom honeſty and the king's laws do not refuſe. Undo not you yourſelf, I intend nothing leſs than to work you any diſpleaſure. If hitherto I have ſhewed you any pleaſure, I am glad of it: I ſhewed it to your qualities, and not to you; if they tarry with you, my good will cannot depart from you, except your prayer be heard, that is, My heart be turned. I aſſure you I am right glad ye are to the place ye are in, and will do what ſhall lie in me in aid you in your office, to maintain your reputation, to give you credit among your flock and elſewhere, as long as I ſhall ſee you faithful to your duty, according to your calling. I will not become your good lord, as your deſire is; I am and have been your friend, and take you to be mine. Caſt out vain ſuſpicion; let raſh judgment rule men of leſs wit and diſcretion; wilfulneſs becometh all men better than a biſhop, which ſhould always teach us to lack gladly our own will, becauſe you may not have your own will. Here is Chriſtus pauperes facit & ditat, cum Dominus dedit & Dominus abſtulit, to what purpoſe? Sit nomen Domini benedictum, can never lack his place, it becometh always in ſeaſon; or elſe, as great a divine as ye are, I would ſay, it were not the beſt placed here; except thou wiſt better, you had rather loſe all than any part of your will. I pray you teach patience better in your deeds, or elſe ſpeak as little of it as ye can. My Lord, you might have provoked another in my place that would have uſed leſs patience with you, finding ſo little in you; but I can take your writings, and this heat of your ſtomach, even as well as I can, I truſt, beware of flatterers. As for the abbot of Redding and his monk, if I find them as ye ſay they are, I will order them as I ſhall think good. Ye ſhall do well to do your duty; if you ſo do, ye have no cauſe to miſtruſt my friendſhip; if ye do not, I muſt tell it you, and that ſomewhat after the plaineſt ſort, To take a cauſe out of your hands into mine, I do but mine office: you meddle further than your office will bear you, thus roughly to handle me for uſing of mine. If ye do ſo no more, I let paſs all that is paſt, and offer you ſuch kindneſs as ye ſhall lawfully deſire at my hands. Thus fare you well."

---

[1] There is ſome ambiguity about the date of this preferment: Dr. Fiſher, biſhop of Rocheſter, reſigned the chancellorſhip in 1514 in favour of Dr. Wolſey, then biſhop of Lincoln; on whoſe death, in 1530, Cromwell is ſtated, in Carter's "Hiſtory of the Univerſity," to have ſucceeded to that office; but Mr. Smyth, in his MS notes, obſerves, that in 1530 Cromwell was not conſiderable enough to be ſucceſſor to the Cardinal. Le Neve places his election in 1533, when he was only of the privy council, and maſter of the jewel-houſe. The fact is, on Fiſher's reſignation, biſhop Wolſey was choſen; but, upon his refuſal of it, the univerſity elected biſhop Fiſher perpetual chancellor, or for the term of his life. See Baker's Preface to Fiſher's Sermon on the funeral of Lady Margaret, p. 9.

[2] Fuller's Hiſtory of the Univerſity of Cambridge, ed. 1655, p. 108, &c.

[3] The Univerſity of Cambridge made him chancellor, to ſave itſelf, in an age wherein covetouſneſs could quarrel a college, as well as an abbey, into ſuperſtition. He reforms the Univerſity, in order to the reformation of the Church; enjoining the ſtudy of the Scriptures and tongues, inſtead of ſchool-divinity and barbariſm; recommending Ariſtotle, Agricola, and Melancthon, to their reading; and the doctrine which is in ſpirit and in truth to their faith.

In September 1538, Cromwell ſent forth injunctions to all biſhops and curates, throughout the realm, charging them to place in every pariſh-church the Bible of the largeſt volume, printed in Engliſh[1], for all men to read in; and alſo for the obſerving of the injunctions before given. To which were added, that ſermons ſhould be made quarterly at leaſt; wherein the preachers were to inſtruct their people againſt the ordinary ſuperſtitions, of wandering on pilgrimages, offering candles and tapers to relicks, kiſſing or licking of them, and the like. That, if any prieſt had extolled theſe things, he ſhould now recant and reprove the ſame; ſhewing that he did ſo upon no ground of Scripture, but led by common error and abuſe; that none ſhould ſtop the reading or preaching of the Word of God; that a Regiſter[2] ſhould be kept in every pariſh; that the former injunctions be read every quarter of a year; that no man ſhould detain his tithes, upon pretence of his curates not doing their duty; none to alter the order and manner of any faſting-day, that is commanded or indicted by the church, excepting the commemoration of Thomas Becket, which ſhall be clean omitted; the knowling of Aves after ſervice, brought in by pretence of the biſhop of Rome's pardons, henceforth to be left, that the people ſhould not truſt to have pardon by ſaying their Aves between the ſaid knowling; to omit ſaying in proceſſions their Ora pro nobis to ſo many ſaints; whereby they had no time to ſing the good ſuffrages,

---

[1] In 1535, orders were authorized by the king (with the conſent of convocation) for the tranſlating of the Bible into Engliſh with all expedition; which performance took up three years before it was finiſhed. Grafton printed 1500 copies of this Bible at his own charge; and Cromwell preſented it to the king, and procured his warrant, allowing all his ſubjects, in all his dominions, to read it without controul or hazard. For which the Archbiſhop wrote Cromwell a letter of moſt hearty thanks, dated the 13th of Auguſt; who did now rejoice "that he ſaw this day of Reformation, which he concluded was now riſen in England, ſince the light of God's Word did ſhine over it without any cloud."

[2] "That you, and every parſon, vicar, or curate, within this dioceſe, ſhall for every church keep one Book or Regiſter, wherein he ſhall write the day and year of every wedding, chriſtning, and burying, made within your pariſh for your time; and ſo every man ſucceeding you likewiſe; and alſo there inſert every perſon's name that ſhall be ſo wedded, chriſtned, and buried; and for the ſafe keeping of the ſame book, the pariſh ſhall be bound to provide, of their common charges, one ſure coffer with two locks and keys, whereof the one to remain with you, and the other with the wardens of every ſuch pariſh wherein the ſaid book ſhall be laid up; which book ye ſhall every Sunday take forth, and in the preſence of the ſaid wardens, or one of them, write and record in the ſame all the weddings, chriſtnings, and buryings, made the whole week before; and that done, to lay up the book in the ſaid coffer as afore: And for every time that the ſame ſhall be omitted, the party that ſhall be in the fault thereof ſhall forfeit to the ſaid church 3*s.* 4*d*, to be employed on the reparation of the ſaid church."

Parce nobis, Domine; Libera nos, Domine; which were more neceſſary and effectual to be ſaid. Theſe laſt injunctions were given out by occaſion of the negligent obſervation of the former, which the clergy took little heed to; which when the king underſtood, and being reſolvedly now determined to purge out many abuſes in the church, and rectify divers errors in doctrine, then generally entertained, he gave command to the lord Cromwell, to make in his name a ſet of new injunctions; and a copy of them he ſent to every reſpective biſhop to be duly executed, and to give a ſtrait order to their clergy to obſerve them. The letter to archbiſhop Cranmer relating to it was this:

"After my right harty commendations unto your lordſhip. Whereas the king's highneſs, being informed as well of the negligent obſervation of the former injunctions, exhibited to the clergy of that dioceſe, as alſo of the further continuance of ſuperſtition and idolatry in the ſame, and minding, like as to his office moſt appertaineth, the expurgation of untrue religion, and the aboliſhment of all abuſes crept into the ſame; hath willed and commanded me to put forth, by his grace's authority, to all his clergy and ſubjects within this realm, certain other injunctions to be kept and obſerved of the ſame, upon their further peril. Theſe ſhall be therefore as well to advertiſe your lordſhip, as alſo of the king's highneſs behalf, to charge and command the ſame; that calling before you, or your commiſſaries, at days and places convenient, the whole clergy of that dioceſe, ye do exhibit and put forth on the king's highneſs behalf, and by his grace's authority, theſe injunctions, whereof ye ſhall receive a copy herewith; and may ſend, whereas they be printed, for as many more as will ſerve to give every curate within that dioceſe; ſtraitly charging every of the ſame inviolably to obſerve the ſaid injunctions, upon the pains therein expreſſed. In default whereof, they may look for no like indulgence as they have had hitherto by violation of the other, but earneſt coherſion and ſeverity to be extended towards them for both contempts together. And that ye fail not this the king's highneſs pleaſure and commandment effectually to put forth, execute, and accompliſh, without any diſſimulation, negligence, or remiſs handling, as ye intend to anſwer to the king's majeſty for the contrary thereof at your peril. And thus moſt hartily fare you well. From London, the laſt of September. Your lordſhip's friend, THOMAS CRUMWEL."

The injunctions end thus: "All which and ſingular injunctions I miniſter unto you, and to your pariſhioners, by the king's highneſs authority, to be committed in this part; which I charge and command you, by the ſame authority, to obſerve and keep, upon pain of deprivation, ſequeſtration of your fruits, or ſuch other coertion as to the king, or his vicegerent for the time being, ſhall be ſeen convenient."

In the November following the king iſſued out his letters to the biſhops, directing them how to inſtruct the people. Theſe inſtructions (which were to be obſerved upon pain of deprivation) were five: 1. That the biſhop ſhould every holy-day read and declare plainly and diſtinctly the Articles, and in no wiſe vary a word, to make the ſame doubtful to the people. 2. Each to travel from place to place in his dioceſe, and make a collation to the people; and to ſet forth plainly the text of Scripture; and to declare that obedience that is due by God's law to the prince; and to command and preſs the honeſt ceremonies of the church; yet tempering his diſcourſe ſo, that the people might not put over-much affiance in them. 3. To uſe no word in their private converſation to the contrary of this the king's commandment; nor to keep any in his houſe that ſhall ſpeak in theſe matters of the ceremonies contentiouſly or contemptuouſly: and if there ſhould be any ſuch toward them, to ſend them up to the king and his council to be puniſhed. 4. To give ſtrait commandment to all parſons, vicars, and curates, and governors of religious houſes and colleges, that they do as was commanded the biſhops in the indifferent praiſe of ceremonies, and avoiding contentions, and contentious and contemptuous communication; and that none ſhould preach out of their own church. 5. To make ſecret enquiry for ſuch prieſts as have of late married themſelves, and ſince uſed and exerciſed the office of prieſthood, and to ſignify it to the council. Theſe inſtructions were ſent by the lord Cromwell to all the biſhops, incloſed to each in a letter of his own. That to George[1] biſhop of Landaff was in theſe terms:

"After my right hearty commendations to your lordſhip, ye ſhall herewith receive the king's highneſs letter addreſſed unto you, to put you in remembrance of his highneſs travails, and your duty touching order to be taking for preaching. To the intent the people may be taught the truth, and yet not charged at the beginning with over many novelties; the publication whereof, unleſs the ſame be tempered and qualified with much wiſdom, doth rather breed contention, diviſion, and contrariety in opinion, in the unlearned multitude, than edify, or remove from them and out of their hearts, ſuch abuſes, as by the corrupt and unſavoury teaching of the biſhop of Rome and his diſciples have crept into the ſame. The effect of which letter, albeit I doubt not, but as well for the honeſty of the matters as for your own diſcharge, you will ſo conſider, and put in execution, as ſhall be to his grace's ſatisfaction on that behalf. Yet, foraſmuch as it hath pleaſed his majeſty to appoint and conſtitute me, in the room and place of his ſupreme and principal officer and miniſter, in all matters that may any thing touch his clergy, or their doings; I thought it alſo my part, for the exoneration of my duty towards his highneſs, and the rather to anſwer his grace's expectation, opinion, and truſt, conceived in me, and in that among others eſpecially committed for my fidelity, to deſire and pray you, in ſuch ſubſtantial ſort and manner, to travail in the execution of the contents of his grace's ſaid letters; namely, for avoiding of contrariety of preaching, of the pronunciation of novelties, without wiſe and diſcreet qualifications, and the repreſſion of the temerity of thoſe that, either privily or apertly, directly or indirectly, would advance the pretended authority of the biſhop of Rome; as I be not, for my diſcharge, both enforced to complain further, and to declare what I have now written for that purpoſe, and ſo to charge you with your own fault, and to deviſe ſuch remedy for the ſame as ſhall appertain; deſiring your lordſhip to accept herein my meaning, tending only to an honeſt, friendly, and Chriſtian reformation, for the avoiding of further inconveniences; and to think none unkindneſs, though in this matter, wherein it is almoſt more than time to ſpeak (I write frankly), compelled and enforced thereunto, both in reſpect for my private duty, and otherwiſe for my diſcharge. Foraſmuch as it pleaſeth his majeſty to uſe me in the lieu of a counſillor, whoſe office is an eye to the prince, to foreſee, and in time to provide remedy for ſuch abuſes, enormities, and inconveniences, as might elſe, with a little ſufferance, ingender more evil in the publick weal than could after be redubbed with much labour, ſtudy, diligence, and travail. And thus moſt heartily fare you well. From the Rouls, the 7th of January. Your loving friend, THOMAS CRUMWEL."

In the great work for diſſolution of the religious houſes, though divers of the viſitors petitioned that ſome might be ſpared, as well for the virtue of the perſons in them, as for the benefit of the country (the poor receiving thence much releif, and the richer ſort good education for their children), and though that worthy man Latimer (then biſhop of Worceſter) wiſhed that two or three might be left in every ſhire for pious uſes[2], yet did this Cromwell (by the king's permiſſion) invade all; and, what betwixt threats, gifts, perſuaſions, promiſes, and whatſoever might make a man obnoxious, at length obtained from the abbots, priors, abbeſſes, and their convents, of all thoſe greater monaſteries, which the act of parliament of 27 Henry VIII. had not ſuppreſſed, formal ſurrenders, under their public ſeals.

About this time the lord Cromwell was made conſtable of Cariſbrooke caſtle in the Iſle of Wight[3].

---

[1] George Athequa, or Attica, a Spaniard, chaplain to queen Catharine, who brought him out of Spain.

[2] See before, p. 315. [3] See p. 318.

Sir James Worſley, by his will, dated Oct. 5, 1538, bequeathed to king Henry VIII. his beſt gold chain; and to the king's favourite, Thomas lord Cromwell, then lord privy ſeal, his largeſt ſtanding cup[1]; and ſoon after, when Richard Worſley, eſq. (the ſon of ſir James) had the honour of entertaining the king at his ſeat at Appuldercombe, lord Cromwell attended as conſtable of Cariſbrooke caſtle.

Whilſt the commiſſioners who were employed in the viſitation of the different monaſtaries took care to ſecure to themſelves ſome choice morſels of the plunder; we need not be ſurprized that ſo rich and ſo delightful a ſpot as the priory of Laund ſhould be a temptation even to the Vicar General. Accordingly we find that he had his eye upon it before the ſurrender; as appears by the following letter, addreſſed to his friend Francis Cave, Dec. 22, 1538, by the owner of the neighbouring lordſhip of Withcote, who thus deſcribes the prior's ſmuggling away a conſiderable part of the ſtock and valuables[2]:

"My heartie recomendac̄ons to you premyſſed, this is to advertiſe you, that uppon Wenyday laſt I receyvyd your letter; and ſyns the receypte thereof I have indevored myſelf to the beſt of my power accordyng to theffecte therof. And as concerning the priory of Lawnd, I have cauſed too honeſt perſons to viewe the demeynes of the ſame. And wheras the ſaid demeynes, with Whatboro felde, were wont and accuſtemyd to kepe this tyme of the yere too thouſand ſheepe, or very nere, ther be at this daye ſcant fyve hundrede ſheepe; of the wyche I ſuppoſe the one half of them be not the prior's. And wheras the ſaid prior was accuſtymed to kepe uppon his comynes in Loddyngton feld fyve hundred ſheepe, there is at this daye not one ſheepe. And wheras the ſaid prior was accuſtomed to have uppon his comyns in Fryſby feld a flocke of ſheepe, there is at this day none. And as concerning beys, all fate beys, except a very fewe for the houſe, be ſold; and much of the ſtuf of houſehold is conveyed away (wiche ſheepe, beyſe, and howſhold ſtuf, was ſold and conveyed before the laſt goyng of the prior to London, and in the tyme of his beyng ther): but ſyns hys comyng home I can not lerne that he hath made aweye any catall, except certayn of the beſt milche kye he hade, and one bull, wiche I am informyd he cawſed to be conveyed, the firſt nyght that he came from London, to Loddington. And as concernyng the plate, the prior told me that he hade made hit away a good whyll agoo, to the intent to have redemyd his howſe if it wold have been, except the juells and plate of chirche, wiche I am informyd remayns ſtyll. And as for his horſes, he told me that he had gyven to dyvers of hys ſervaunts every of them a geldyng, ſo that I thinke there remayne but a fewe good. And as concerning lecis, I thyncke there be non letten out of the demeynes, except hit be tythes, wiche I think were grauntyd but uppon condic̄ons; as I ſuppoſe the partyes, if thei be well examyned, will confeſſe. And as concerning Loddington, I underſtand there be dyvers lecis granted of certayn clouſes and of the mylls ther, wiche I thinck were lykewyſe letten but uppon condic̄ons, wiche leaſes were grauntyd before the prior's going to London; but, as I am informyd, thei were not all delyvered tyll the prior's comyng whom agayne. Syns the prior's return from London, I thyncke, there were no leycis ſealed. Notwithſtanding I have perfect knowledge that the prior hathe bene ſore in hand with his brether, ſyns his comyng whom, to have a leace ſealyd of all his purcheſed land in Alſtyd and other townes adjoining for on of his kynneſmen; wherunto his brether wyll not agree as yet, becawſe hit is unreſonable, as his brether report. This is all that I can ſeye at this tyme; but as I here, ſo ſhall I certyfy you: I truſt I ſhall learn more agaynſt the kyng's commyſſioners comyng. As knoyethe the Lorde, who kepe you. From Withcoke, the xxii day of December, by your loving brother, JOHN SMYTHE[3]."

The lord Cromwell, it has been obſerved, was a principal inſtrument in keeping down the clergy; whom, in regard to their oaths to the pope, he uſually termed the king's half ſubjects: and, as to the expulſion of the monks, he ſaid, "It was no more than a reſtoring them to their firſt inſtitution, being lay and labouring perſons." Nor did it move him, that ſo much ſtrictneſs and auſterity was enjoined them in their reſpective orders, ſince, he ſaid, "they might keep it in any condition." In recompence, therefore, of his high ſervices, he ſoon obtained a grant from the king of the manors of North Elmeham and Beteley in Norfolk[4]: the monaſteries of Lewes and Michelham in Suſſex, and divers lands in various counties[5]; the priory of Muttenden[6] in Kent[7]; the caſtle and lord-James near Northampton[8]; the priory of St. Oſithes ſhip of Okeham, with a large portion of lands and manors in the ſeveral counties of Leiceſter, Rutland, Northampton, &c. including the houſe and ſite of the monaſtery of Laund, the church, cemetery, bells, houſes, orchards, gardens, and all other its appurtenances, whether in Laund or Lodington; the incloſure called Whadborough, in the pariſhes of Lodington and Tilton, late the property of the monaſtery of St. in Eſſex, with all the houſes, buildings, church, and other appurtenances thereunto belonging; with the manors and lordſhip of Chich, St. Oſithes, Barnton, Coketwyke, Wigburgh, Erle's Hall, Weſtwyke, Howyke, Lewyke, Wyerſhall, alias Withſton Hall, Cannon Hall, alias Can Hall, Abbot's Hall, Coſt Hall, alias Coſted Hall, Mile-end Hall, Broke Hall, and Birch Hall, with Horſey, and all and ſingular their members, parcel of the poſſeſſions of that monaſtery; the manor of Chalwedon, co. Eſſex, parcel of the poſſeſſions of the new hoſpital of our Bleſſed Lady without Biſhopſgate in London; the manors of Tolleſbury, High Hall, Abbeſs Hall, and Hockley, in Eſſex, parcel of the poſſeſſions of the monaſtery of Berking; the manor of Gorewell in Tolleſbury aforeſaid, parcel of the poſſeſſions of the monaſtery of Byleigh; the manors of Wileghe, Brightingſey, alias Brykelſey, Picheſaye, Mondone, and Grynſtede, parcel of the poſſeſſions of the monaſtery of St. John at Colcheſter; the manors of Dedham and Langham in that county, with the manor of Stratford juxta Higham, Suffolk, which three manors the king had by the grant of Charles duke of Suffolk. He obtained alſo a grant of the ſite and circuit of the Grey Friers in Yarmouth, within the county of Norfolk, with all the houſes and buildings thereto belonging; as alſo a multitude of other lands and advowſons of churches, which belong to ſome one or other of the then ſuppreſſed religious houſes[9]; which grant bears date April 10, 1540. On the 12th, a ſeſſion of parliament was held; and the Journal ſhews, that neither the abbot of Weſtminſter nor any other abbot was preſent. After the lord chancellor had opened the reaſons for the king's meeting them at that time, as they related to the civil government; Cromwell, lord-vicegerent, ſpake next in the king's name, and ſaid, "There was nothing which the king ſo much deſired as a firm union among all his ſubjects, in which he placed his chief ſecurity ;" and concluded with an high commendation of the king, " whoſe due praiſes," he ſaid, " a man of far greater eloquence than himſelf was, could not fully ſet forth." On the 14th of April[1] the king created him earl of Eſſex[2], and lord high chamberlain of England[3]; and no ſooner had he attained theſe high dignities for himſelf, but, foreſeeing the alteration of affairs, and deſirous to ſupport the dignity of the ſtem which was to ſpring from his enobled root, he ſecured a barony for his ſon Gregory, not forfeitable by the attainder of his father[4]. But, as his riſe was ſomewhat haſty, ſo was his fall very ſudden: for, having been the chief adviſer of king Henry's marriage with the lady Anne, daughter to the duke of Cleves, with whom, after he had lodged the firſt night, he fell in diſlike, neither her beauty nor converſation being pleaſing to him; and, though he outwardly ſhewed fair reſpect to her, he not only reſolved on a divorce from her, but to ruin Cromwell, who had been the chief agent in order to thoſe his unhappy nuptials; whereunto the odium contracted towards him from all the nobility, by reaſon of his ſo great advancement from ſo low birth, did not a little contribute; beſides the hatred of all the Romiſh party, in regard he had ſo earneſtly operated in the diſſolution of the monaſteries, eſpecially of Stephen Gardner, then biſhop of Wincheſter; nay, of the very Reformers themſelves; who found that he could not protect them from burning: and laſtly, from the generality of the people; for that, beſides a ſubſidy of 4*s.* in the pound, which the clergy gave, he had, in that very parliament, been inſtrumental in getting (not without much reluctation) one tenth and four fifteenths from the laity. Of all which the king taking advantage (having, beſides, divers articles brought againſt him) gave way to his enemies' accuſations, which could not but be much material; it being impoſſible that any man, who had acted ſo much in great and public affairs, ſhould not, in divers kinds, miſtake, forget, and err, ſo far as to incur the note of a criminal, upon ſevere inquiſition made againſt him; and therefore cauſed him to be arreſted, at the council-table, by the duke of Norfolk, when he leaſt ſuſpected it, and committed to the Tower June 10, 1540.

---

[1] Sir Richard Worſley's Hiſtory of the Iſle of Wight, pp. 93, 94.

[2] Cotton MSS. Cleopatra E. IV. fol. 216.

[3] See his hand-writing, Plate XLVI.

[4] Originalia 28 Hen. VIII. Rot. 10.

[5] Ibid. 29 Hen. VIII. Rot. 53. & 88.—Among others, an eſtate in Melton Mowbray, with the advowſon of the rectory, whereon was founded a ſmall priory, or hoſpital, cell to Lewes abbey. Tanner, Notit. Monaſt. p. 243. See before, vol. II. p. 147.

[4] The priory of Muttenden, or Modenden, in the pariſh of Hedcom, was granted, 30 Hen. VIII, to Thomas lord Cromwell, and, after his attainder, to ſir Anthony Aucher; ſee Tanner, Notitia Monaſtica, edit. by Naſmith, Kent, XLII. Of the eſtates poſſeſſed in Kent by Cromwell, at the time of his attainder, ſee "The Kentiſh Traveller's Companion," the third edition, 1790, pp. 75, 76; and it is there particularly noticed, that theſe eſtates were diſgavelled by the Statute of 31 Hen. VIII, and this on the authorities of Harris and Haſted, who have given the names of the different perſons who wiſhed to have their property exempted from the fundamental rule of the gavel-kind law, the right of all the ſons to inherit equal portions of the fathers' lands.

[7] Originalia 30 Hen VIII. Rot. 47.

[8] 2 Pars Original. 30 Hen. VIII. pars 2 Rot. 224. Paſch. Rec. 31 Hen. VIII. Rot. 22. de literis regis patentibus, de manerio de Okeham, & aliis, in comitatibus Rutlandiæ, Northamptoniæ, & Leiceſtriæ, conceſſis Thomæ domino Crumwell.

[9] 1 Pars Original. 31 Hen. VIII. Rot. 155.

As to the crimes objected againſt him, they chiefly ſeemed to be an uſurpation of power, to ſet at liberty certain perſons not capable of it; alſo his granting licences, and making certain commiſſions in high affairs, without the king's knowledge; in which, though he might in his diſcretion find due motives, yet, proceeding not warily enough therein, he fell into the danger of the law. Moreover, he was accuſed for an heretick, and a favourer of ſuch. Of enemies, it is certain, he had not a few, for the reaſons already inſtanced: yet, it ſeems Cranmer (at that time archbiſhop of Canterbury) adventured boldly in order to the ſaving of his life, as by an original letter of his, to the king, appeareth; where he ſaith, " That though he heard in his grace's councill that he was a traytor, yet (ſaith he) who cannot but be ſorrowful and amazed that he ſhould be a traytor againſt your majeſty? he that was ſo advanced by your majeſty; he whoſe ſurety was only by your majeſty; he who loved your majeſty (as I ever thought) no leſs than God; he who ſtudied alwayes to ſet forwards whatſoever was your majeſties will and pleaſure; he who cared for no man's diſpleaſure to ſerve your majeſty; he that was ſuch a ſervant (in my judgment) in wiſdome, diligence, faithfulneſs, and experience, as no prince in this realm ever had; he that was ſo vigilant to preſerve your majeſty from all treaſons, that few could be ſo ſecretly conceived, but he detected the ſame in the beginning? If the noble princes of memory, king John, Henry the Third, and Richard the Second, had had ſuch a councellor about them, I ſuppoſe they ſhould never have been ſo trayterouſly abandoned and overthrown as thoſe good princes were." And after this he ſays again; " I loved him as my friend, for ſo I took him to be; but I chiefly loved him for the love which I thought I ſawe him ever beare towards your grace, ſingularly above all other. But now, if he be a traytor, I am ſorry that ever I loved him or truſted him; and I am very glad that his treaſon is diſcovered in time. But yet again I am very ſorrowful; for who ſhall your grace truſt hereafter, if you might not truſt him? Alas! I bewaile and lament your grace's chance herein; I wot not whom your grace may truſt; but I pray God continually, night and day, to ſend ſuch a counſellor in his place whom your grace may truſt; and who, for all his qualities, can and will ſerve your grace like to him; and that will have ſo much ſollicitude and care to preſerve your grace from all dangers, as I ever thought he had." This ſhews both the firmneſs of Cranmer's friendſhip to him, and that he had a great ſoul, not turned by the changes of men's fortunes to like or diſlike them, as they ſtood or declined from their greatneſs. And had not the king's kindneſs for Cranmer been deeply rooted, this letter had ruined him. For he was the moſt impatient of contradiction, in ſuch caſes, that could be.

Having noticed the archbiſhop's letter to the king on his behalf, let us ſtate what he himſelf wrote to the king after he was ſent to the Tower.

" Moſt gracious Kyng, and moſt mercifull Soverayng, your moſt humble, moſt obeyſant, and moſt bounden ſubject, and moſt lamentable ſervant and priſoner, proſtrate at the feet of your moſt excellent majeſty, have herd your pleſure, by the mouth of your comptroller; which was, that I ſhould wrytte to your moſt excellent highneſs ſuch thynges as I thought mete to be wryttyn conſernyng my moſt miſerable ſtate and condition; for the which your moſt habundant goodneſs, benignyte, and licens, the immortalle God, three and on, reward your mageſtye.

" And now, moſt gracyous prince, to the matyer:

" Fyrſt, wher I have bene accuſyd to your mageſtye of treaſon. To that I ſay, I never in alle my lyfe thought wyllingly to do that thyng that myght or ſholde diſpleaſe your majeſty; and much leſs to do or ſay that thing, which of itſelf is ſo high and abhominable offence; as God knowyth, who I doubt not ſhall reveale the trewthe to your highnes. Myne accuſers your grace knowyth; God forgive them: for, as I ever have had love to your honour, perſon, lyfe, proſperitye, helthe, welthe, joy, and comfort; and alſo your moſt dere and moſt entyerly beloved ſone, the prynce his grace, and your proceedyngs, God ſo helpe me in this myne adverſitie, and conffound me yf ever I thought the contrary. What labours, payns, and travailes I have takin, according to my moſt bounden deutye, God alſo knowyth. For, yf it were in my power (as it is Godd's) to make your mageſtye to lyve ever young and proſperous, God knowyth I woolde. If it hadde bene or were in my power to make yow ſo ryche, as ye myght enrych alle men, God helpe me, as I wolde do hit. If it had bene, or were in my power to make your mageſty ſo puyſſant, as alle the world ſholde be compellyd to obey yow, Chriſt he knowyth I wolde; for ſo am I of alle othyr moſt bounde: for your mageſtye hath bene the moſt bountiful prynce to me that ever was kyng to his ſubject: ye, and more like a dere father (your mageſtye not offendyd) then a maſter. Such hath bene your moſt grave and godly counſayle towards me, at ſundry tymes. In that I have offendid I ax your mercy. Should I now, for ſuch exceeding goodneſs, benygnyte, liberalitie, and bounty, be your traytor; nay, then the greateſt paynes were too little for me. Should any faccyon, or any affeccyon to any point make me a traytor to your mageſtie, then alle the devylls in hell confound me, and the vengeance of God light upon me, yf I ſholde once have thought yt, moſt gracious ſoverayn lord. To my remembrance I never ſpake with the Chancelour of the Augmentacyons and Throgmorton togethyr at one tyme: but yf I dyde, I am ſure I ſpake never of any ſuch matyer: and your grace knowyth what manner of man Throgmorton hath evyr bene towards your grace and your proceedyngs. And what Mr. Chancelour hath bene towards me, God and he beſt knowyth; I will ne can accuſe hym. What I have bene towards hym, your mageſtye right well knowyth. I wolde in Chriſte I had obeyed your often moſt gracious grave counſaylcs and advertyſements, then hit had not bene with me as now hit is. Yet our Lord, yf hit be his wylle, can do with me as he dyd with Suſan, who was falſly accuſed: unto the whyche God I have only commytted my ſowle; my body and goods at your mageſtyes pleaſure, in whoſe mercye and pyetie I do holly repoſe me; for othyr hope then in God and your mageſtye I have not.

---

[1] Till May 9, 1539, he ranked in the houſe of peers according to the date of his creation as a baron; but on the 10th, he took precedence of the two archbiſhops as " vicegerens domini regis in ſpiritualitatibus." April 12, 1540, he is ſtyled " Thomas D's Cromwell, eques ſacri ordinis Garterii, cuſtos privati ſigilli domini regis, et ſue Majeſtatis vicem-gerens, vicarius generalis, & officialis principalis ad cauſas eccleſiaſticas;" April 17, " D's Crumwell, vicem-gerens domini regis in ſpiritualibus;" and on the 19th, " Vice-gerens Regius, Thomas Eſſex' comes."

[2] Pat. 31 Hen. VIII. p. 5. And ſee Stow, p. 579; and Herbert's Hiſtory of Henry VIII. p. 456.

[3] This ſhews that the true cauſes of Cromwell's fall muſt be found in ſome other thing than his making up the king's marriage; who had never thus raiſed his title, if he had intended ſo ſoon to pull him down. Henry Bourchier, the laſt earl of Eſſex of that ſurname, broke his neck, March 12, 1539, by a fall from a young unruly horſe; leaving only one daughter: and the 19th of the ſame month died John de Vere earl of Oxford, lord chamberlain. But Cromwell's aſpiring after, or even accepting of, theſe two great honours, procured him a great deal of envy and ill-will.

[4] See the remarks on this head in p. 323.

"Sir, as to your common welthe, I have aftyr my wytte, power, and knowledge, travayled therein; havyng had no reſpect to perſons (yowr mageſtye only except) and my dewtye to the ſame: but, that I have done any injuſtice or wrong, wyllfully, I truſt God ſhall bere my wytnes, and the world not able juſtly to accuſe me. And yet I have not done my dewtye in alle thynges, as I was bounden, wherefore I aſke mercy. Yf I have herde of any combynacyons, convencyons, or ſuch as were offenders of your laws, I have, though not as I ſholde have done, for the moſt part revealed them, and alſo cauſyd them to be puniſhed; not of males, as God ſhall judge me. Nevertheles, ſir, I have medelyd in ſo many matyers under your highnes, that I am not able to anſwer them all. But one thyng I am well aſſured of, that willingly and wyttingly I have not had wille to offend your highneſs: but hard it is for me, or any other, medelyng, as I have done, to live under yowr grace, and yowr laws, but we muſt daylie offend; and where I have offendyd, I moſt humbly aſke mercy and pardon, at your grace's wyll and pleaſure.

"Amongſt other thynges, moſt gracyous ſoverayn, Mr. Comptroller ſhewed me, that yowr grace ſhewed hym, that within this fourteen dayes ye commytted a matyer of grete ſecreſye, which I did revele contrary to yowr expectation. Sir! I do remember well the matyer, which I never revelyd to any creture: but this I dyd, ſir, after your grace had openyd the matyer, fyrſt to me in yowr chamber, and declared yowr lamentable fate; declaryng the thynges which yowr highnes myſlyked in the quene; at whych tyme I ſhewyd your grace that ſhe often deſyred to ſpeke wyth me, but I durſt not; and ye ſayd, why ſholde I not? allegyng, that I might do much good in goyng to her, and to be playn with her in declaryng my mynde: I thereupon, takyng oportunitye, not being a lyttil greivyd, ſpake privylie with her lord chamberlayn, for the whych I aſke your grace mercy; deſyring him (not namyng yowr grace to hym) to fynde ſome meane that the quene might be induced to order your grace pleſantly in her behaviour towards you; thynking thereby for to have had ſome faultes amendyd to your mageſtyes content. And after that, by generalle wordes, the ſayd lord chamberlayne, and other of the queens counſayle, being with me, in my chamber at Weſtminſter, for lycens for the departure of the ſtrange maydens; I then required them to counſayl their mayſtres, to uſe all pleaſantnes to your highnes: the whych things undoubtedly weren both ſpokyn before your mageſtye told the ſecrete matyer unto me, only of purpoſe that ſhe myght have by love inducyd to ſuch pleſant and honorable facyons as myght have bene to yowr graces comforte; whych, above all things, as God knoweth, I dyd moſt covyt and deſire: But that I openyd my mouth to any creature, aftyr your mageſtye committyd the ſecreſye thereof to me, othyr then only to my lord Admirall, whych I dyde by your graces commandement, which was upon Sunday laſt in the mornyng, whom I then fownd as wylling and glad to ſeke remedye for your comfort and conſolacyon; and ſaw by hym that he did as much lament yowr highnes fate as ever dyd man; and was wonderfully grevyd to ſee yowr highnes ſo troubelyd, wyſhing gretely your comfort: for the attayning whereof he ſayd (your honour ſalvyd) he would ſpend the beſt bloud in hys belye: and yf I wolde not do the lyke, ye and wyllingly dye for your comfort, I wolde I were in hell; and I woolde I ſholde receive a thouſand dethis.

"Sir, this is all that I have done in that matyer; and yf I have offendyd your mageſtie therein, proſtrate at yowr highnes fete I moſt lowly aſke mercy and pardon of your highneſs. Sir, this was alſo layd unto my chardge at myne examynation, that I had retayned contrary to your laws. Sir, what expoſycioun may be made upon retaynowrs, I know not: but thys wyll I ſay, that yf ever I retayned any man, but ſuch only as were my houſhold ſervants, but ageynſt my will, God confound me. But, moſt gracyous ſoverayn, I have bene ſo callyd on, and ſewyd to by them, that ſayd they were my friendes; that, conſtrayned thereto, I retayned their children and frendys, not as retayners: for their fathers and parents did promyſe me to fynde them, and ſo took I them, not as retayners, to my grete chardge, and for none evyll, as God beſt knowyth, interpret to the contrary who wylle; moſt humbly beſechyng your mageſtye off pardon, yf I have offendyd therein.

"Sir, I acknowledge myſelf to have been a moſt miſerable and wretchyd ſinner; and that I have not towards God and your higneſs behavyd myſelf as I ought and ſholde have done; for the whych myne offence to God, whyles I lyve, I ſhall continually kall for his mercy. And for myne offencys to your grace, which God knowyth were never thought treaſon to your highnes, your realme, or poſteritye, ſo God helpe, either in word or dede. Nevertheles, proſtrate at your mageſties feet, in what thyng ſoever I have offendyd, I appel to your highnes for mercy, grace, and pardon, in ſuch wyſe as ſhall be your pleaſure; beſechyng the Almyghty Maker and Redeemer of the world to ſend your mageſtye continual and long helthe, welthe, and proſperitye, with Neſtor's yeares to reigne: and your dere ſon the princes grace to proſper, reigne, and continue long after you. And they that wolde contrary, ſhort liffe, ſhame and confuſion. Wryten with the quaking hand, and moſt ſorrowfull heart, of your moſt ſorrowfull ſubject, and moſt humble ſervant and pryſoner, this Saturday, at your Tower of London.

THOMAS CROMWELLE."

A bill of attainder[1] againſt him was brought into the Houſe of Peers June 17, and paſſed that houſe the 19th; but, not being approved by the Commons, a new bill was ſent from them on the 29th, paſſed through with circumſtances of peculiar haſte[2], and aſſented to the ſame day by the king, as appears by a letter written by Cromwell to his majeſty, on being required to ſend him a full account under his hand of the buſineſs of his marriage; which account he ſent, concluding it with theſe abject words: "I, a moſt woful priſoner, ready to take the death when it ſhall pleaſe God and your majeſty; and yet the frail fleſh inciteth me continually to call to your grace for mercy and grace for mine offences. And thus Chriſt ſave, preſerve, and keep you. Written at the Tower, this Wedneſday the laſt of June, with the heavy heart and trembling hand of your highneſs moſt heavy and moſt miſerable priſoner and poor ſlave, Thomas Cromwell." And a little below that, "Moſt gracious Prince, I cry for mercy, mercy, mercy [1]."

---

[1] Burnet, Coll. N° 16.

[2] "Item Billa attincture Thome Cromwell, comitis Eſſex, de crimine hereſis & leſe majeſtatis, per Communes de novo conceptâ, & aſſenſi & ſimul cum proviſione eidem annexa. Que quidem Billa primo, ſecundo & tertio, lecta eſt; & proviſio ejuſdem concernens decanatum Wellenſem ter perlecta eſt, & communi omnium procerum conſenſu, nemine diſcrepante, expedita; & ſimul cum eâ referebatur Billa Attincturæ, quæ prius miſſa erat in Domum Communem." Journals of the Houſe of Peers, vol. I. p. 149.

After having been ſix weeks a priſoner, he was brought to his execution. He had uſed all the endeavours he could for his own preſervation. Once he wrote to the king in ſuch melting terms, that he made the letter to be thrice read, and ſeemed touched with it. But the charms of Katherine Howard, and the endeavours of the duke of Norfolk and the biſhop of Wincheſter, at length prevailing, a warrant was ſent to cut off his head, on the 28th of July, at Tower Hill.

When brought to the ſcaffold, his kindneſs to his ſon made him very cautious in what he ſaid. But let the reader judge: "I am come hither to die, and not to purge myſelfe, as may happen ſome thinke that I will; for, if I ſhould ſo doo, I were a verie wretch and a miſer. I am by the law condemned to die, and thanke my Lord God that hath appointed me this death for mine offenſe. For, ſince the time that I came to yeares of diſcretion, I have lived a ſinner, and offended my Lord God; for the which I aſke him hartilie forgiveneſſe. And it is not unknowne to manie of you, that I have beene a great traveller in the world; and, being but of baſe degree, I was called to high eſtate; and, ſince the time I came thereunto, I have offended my prince; for the whiche I aſke him hartilie forgiveneſs, and beſeech you all to praie to God with me, that he will forgive me. O Father, forgive me! O Sonne, forgive me! O Holie Ghoſt, forgive me! O Three Perſons and One God, forgive me! And now I praie you that be here to beare me record I die in the Catholike faith, not doubting in anie article of my faith, no, nor doubting in anie Sacrament of the Church. Manie have ſlandered me, and reported that I have beene a bearer of ſuch as have mainteined evill opinions; which is untrue. But I confeſſe, that like as God by his holie ſpirit dooth inſtruct us in the truth; ſo the divell is readie to ſeduce us, and I have beene ſeduced. But beare me witneſſe that I die in the Catholike faith of the Holie Church. And I hartilie deſire you to praie for the king's grace, that he may long live with you in health and proſperitie; and, after him, that his ſonne prince Edward, that goodlie impe, may long reigne over you. And, once againe, I deſier you to praie for me, that, ſo long as life remaineth in this fleſh, I waver nothing in my faith." And ſo making his prayer, and having given the ſign, the executioner cut off his head very barbarouſly.

"The general terms," Dr. Fuller obſerves, "wherein this ſpeech is couched, hath given occaſion for wiſe men to give contrary cenſures thereof [2]."

Many lamented this great man's fall; but more rejoiced, eſpecially ſuch as had been religious men, or favoured religious perſons; of the clergy he was much hated, for that he was an enemy to Popery, and could never endure the ſnuffing pride of the prelates. Thankful he was, and liberal, never forgetting former benefits. Careful he was of his ſervants, for whom he had provided a competency of living, notwithſtanding his ſudden fall. Faithful and forward he was to do his friends good; and, among them, More and Fiſher, if we may believe their own letters; of which ſome part:

"Right worſhipfull; after my mooſt hartie commendations; it may pleaſe you to underſtand that I have perceived by the relation of my ſon Rooper (for which I beſeech Almighty God reward you!) your moſt charitable labour taken for me towards the king's graciouſe highneſſe, in the procuring, at his mooſt graciouſe hand, the reliefe and comfort of this wofull hevineſſe in which my harte ſtandeth," &c. Concluding in theſe words: "And thus, good maſter Cromwell, I make an end of my long troublouſe proceſſe; beſeeching the Bleſſed Trinity, for the great goodneſſe ye ſhew me, and the great comfort ye do me both bodelie and ghoſtlie, to proſpere you, and in heauen reward you. At Chelſcith, the 5 March, by Your deeply bounden, THO. MORE, knight."

Biſhop Fiſher acknowledgeth the like kindneſs from him in many of his letters; and howſoever theſe two famous ſcholars, after ſome hard impriſonment, loſt both their lives; yet was he not wanting by his beſt endeavors, and his all-potency with the king, to have ſaved their necks from the ſtroke of the axe: which we may verily believe, when we conſider that king Henry's command was a law; of which Cromwell had a trial, being convicted and executed without trial.

The following ſervices done by the lord Cromwell to king Henry VIII. within a few years after his firſt coming into the favour and ſervice of the ſaid king, are copied out of the original, written with his own hand, and now remaining in the Treaſury of the Exchequer [3].

"Imprimis, the king purchaſed Hampton-court. —Item, the king purchaſed the manor of Moye.—Item, the king purchaſede Saint Jameſes in the fields, and all the grounds whereof the new park of Weſtminſter is made.—Item, his higneſſe has purchaſed all the old tenements in Weſtminſtre, whereas now is the new garden, the teneſplaies, and cock-fights.—Item, his highneſſe hath purchaſed the manore of Piſowe, of the lord Scroope.—Item, his highneſſe hath purchaſed the manor of Weſton Baldock.—Item, his highneſſe has purchaſed the manore and parke of Coppedhall.—Item, his majeſtie hath purchaſed lands to a great value of the earl of Northumberland.—Item, his majeſtie hath purchaſed certain lands of Thomas Robarts, the auditor, lying beſides Waltham. —Item, his highneſſe hath purchaſed of the lord Audley the manors of Lanamuerye and Keymes in Walles.—Item, his highneſſe hath purchaſed the mannor and other lands in Chobham, whereof a park is made, of the abbot of Chertſey.—Item, his highneſſe hath purchaſed the manor of Alderbrooke, in the forreſt of Waltham, of one Monoke.—Item, the king hath purchaſed the mannor of Edmonton, in the county of Middleſex.—Item, his highnes hath repaired the Tower of London, to his great charges.—Item, his highneſſe hath newly made the ſhip called the Mary Roſe, the Peter, the Pomgranete, the Lyon, the Katherine galley, the Barke, the Minione, the Sweepſtake.—Item, his highneſſe hath purchaſed the manor of Cogeſhall and Eſtorford of maſter Southwell.—Item, his highneſſe hath purchaſed the woods beſides Porteſmouthe, in Hampſhire, ſufficient for new-making of Henry Grace-a-dieu, and the great galley.—Item, his highneſſe hath bought and made within the Tower of new bowes for a M l.—Item, his highneſſe, with a great and chargeable traine, paſſed the ſeas in his own perſon to Callis and Bullen.—Item, his highneſſe hath newly builded the place at Weſtminſtre, with all the teneſplaies and cockfights, and walled-in the park there with a ſumptuous wall. —Item, he hath new-builded Saint Jameſes in the fields, a magnificent and goodly houſe.—Item, his highneſs hath purchaſed the manors of Dunnington, Ewelme, Hookenorton, and others, of the duke of Suffolke.—Item, his highneſſe hath made a great deale of new ordenance of braſſe here in England. —Item, his highneſs hath newly edified a great part of the walls of Calles.—Item, his highneſſe hath made a great quantitie of new ordenance within the town of Calles.—Item, his highneſſe hath moſt coſtly warres in Scotland.—Item, he hath moſt coſtly warres in Ireland. Item, he hath been at a moſt coſtly charge for the coronation of queen Anne.—Item, his highneſſe hath maintained the great and ſumptuous houſe of the lady Katherine dowager."

As for the lord Cromwell's character, it is no wonder that, between Papiſts and Proteſtants, it ſhould be ſo various. The firſt repreſent him a crafty, cruel, ambitious, and covetous man; and a heretic [4]. The latter aſſure us, that he was a perſon of great wit, and excellent parts, joined to extraordinary diligence and induſtry[1]: that his apprehenſion was quick and clear; his judgement methodical and ſolid; his memory ſtrong and rational; his tongue fluent and pertinent; his preſence ſtately and obliging; his heart large and noble; his temper patient and cautious; his correſpondence well laid and conſtant; his converſation inſinuating and cloſe; none more dextrous in finding out the deſigns of men and courts; and none more reſerved in keeping a ſecret. Though he was raiſed from the meaneſt condition to a high pitch of honour, he carried his greatneſs with wonderful temper; being noted in the exerciſe of his places of judicature to have uſed much moderation, and in his greateſt pomp to have taken notice of, and been thankful to, mean perſons of his old acquaintance[2]. In his whole behaviour he was courteous and affable to all; a favourer in particular of the poor in their ſuits; ready to relieve ſuch as were in danger of being oppreſſed by their mighty adverſaries; and always hoſpitable and bountiful. He was one of the chief inſtruments in the Reformation of Religion; and though he could not prevent the promulgation, he ſtopped the execution, as far as he could, of the bloody act of the Six Articles. But, when the king's command preſſed him cloſe, he was not firm enough to hazard his own intereſt or perſon, as was manifeſt from his concurring in the condemnation and cruel burning of John Lambert.

---

[1] Burnet, Coll. N° 17.

[2] Fox, in his marginal note on this ſpeech, p. 515, calls it "A true Chriſtian confeſſion of the lord Cromwell at his death." Lord Herbert, in the Index of his Hiſtory, under C, "Cromwell died a Roman Catholick, notwithſtanding he had been ſuch a deſtroyer of the church."

[3] Weever's Funeral Monuments, edit. 1767, p. 283.

[4] "Fuit Thomas Cromuelus homo vafer, crudelis, ambitioſus & avarus, hæreſi etiam deditus." Sanders, p. 91.

As he was good abroad, ſo was he alſo at home; calling upon his ſervants yearly to give him an account of what they had got under him, and what they deſired of him; warning them to improve their opportunities, becauſe, he ſaid, he was too great to ſtand long; providing for them as carefully, as for his own ſon, by his purſe and credit, that they might live as handſomely when he was dead as they did when he was alive. In a word, we are aſſured, that for piety towards God, fidelity to the king, prudence in the management of affairs, gratitude to his benefactors, dutifulneſs, charity, and benevolence, there was not any one of them ſuperior to him in England.

Dr. Fuller, in his "Worthies," under Surrey, mentions Thomas Cromwell; "of whom I have given meaſure preſſed down and running over, in my Church Hiſtory;" ſome parts of which ſhall be copied:

"On him the king had conferred honours ſo many and ſo ſuddenly, that one may ſay, the crudities thereof lay unconcocted in his ſoul, ſo that he could not have time to digeſt one dignity before another was poured upon him. Not to ſpeak of his maſterſhip of the jewel-houſe, he was made baron, maſter of the Rolls, the king's vicar-general in ſpiritual matters, lord privy ſeal, knight of the Garter, earl of Eſſex, lord great chamberlain of England. And all theſe honours were conferred upon him in the compaſs of five years, moſt of them poſſeſſed by him not five months; I may add, and all taken from him in leſs than five minutes, with his life on the ſcaffold[3]. This was the cauſe why he was envied of the nobility and gentry, being by birth ſo much beneath all; by preferment ſo high above moſt of them. Beſides, many of his advancements were interpreted not ſo much honours to him as injuries to others, as being either in uſe improper, or in equity unfit, or in right unjuſt, or in conſcience unlawful, for him to accept. His maſterſhip of the Rolls, ſuch who were bred lawyers conceived it fitter for men of their profeſſion. As for the earldom of Eſſex conferred upon him, though the title lately became void by the death of Henry Bourchier, the laſt earl, without iſſue male (and ſo in the ſtrictneſs of right in the king's free diſpoſal), yet, becauſe he left Anne a ſole daughter behind him, Cromwell's invading of that honour bred no good blood towards him amongſt the kindred of that orphan, who were honourable and numerous. His lord great chamberlainſhip of England, being an office for many years hereditary in the antient and honourable houſe of Oxford, incenſed all of that family when beholding him poſſeſſed thereof. His knighthood of the Garter, which cuſtom had appropriated to ſuch who by three degrees at leaſt could prove their genteel deſcent, being beſtowed on him, did but enrage his competitors thereof, more honourably extracted. As for his being the king's vicar-general in ſpiritual matters, all the clergy did rage thereat, grudging much that king Henry the ſubſtance, and more, that Cromwell his ſhadow, ſhould aſſume ſo high a title to himſelf. Beſides, Cromwell's name was odious unto them, on the account of abbeys diſſolved; and no wonder, if this Sampſon, plucking down the pillars of the Popiſh church, had the reſt of the ſtructure falling upon him. Theſe rejoiced when the duke of Norfolk arreſted him for treaſon at the council-table, whence he was ſent priſoner to the Tower. And now, to ſpeak impartially of him though in priſon: If we reflect on his parts and endowments, it is wonderful to ſee how one quality in him befriended another. Great ſcholar he was none (the Latin Teſtament gotten by heart being the maſter-piece of his learning), nor any ſtudied lawyer (never long living, if admitted in the inns of Court); nor experienced ſoldier (though neceſſity caſt him on that calling when the duke of Bourbon beſieged Rome); nor courtier in his youth (till bred in the court, as I may call it, of Cardinal Wolſey's houſe): and yet, that of the lawyer in him ſo helped the ſcholar; that of the ſoldier, the lawyer; that of the courtier, the ſoldier; and that of the traveller ſo perfected all the reſt (being no ſtranger to Germany, well acquainted with France, moſt familiar with Italy), that the reſult of all together made him for endowments eminent, not to ſay admirable. It was laid to his charge; firſt, that he had exceeded his commiſſion, in acting many things of high conſequence, without acquainting the king therewith; dealing therein, though perchance wiſely for the ſtate, not warily for himſelf. Indeed, it is impoſſible for ſuch officers, managing not only multitudes, but multiplicity of matters, but that in ſome things they muſt miſtake. As 'in many words there wanteth not iniquity[4];' ſo in the actors of many affairs faults are ſoon found out. He was alſo accuſed to ſet at liberty certain perſons not capable of it; for granting licences and commiſſions deſtructive to the king's authority; for being guilty of hereſy himſelf, and favouring it in others. Traiterous ſpeeches were alſo charged upon him, ſpoken two years before in the church of St. Peter's in the Poor[5] in Broad-ſtreet; the avouchers thereof

---

[1] Stow's Annals, p. 580, 581.

[2] This is repreſented in a very agreeable and advantageous light by Shakeſpeare, under the character of Goodman Seely, and his wife Joan: but more truly by J. Fox, in the account he gives of a poor woman that kept a victualling houſe at Hounſlow; to whom Cromwell owing 40*s.* before he arrived to his greatneſs, he not only repaid her that ſum, but alſo gave her a yearly penſion of £4. and a livery every year while ſhe lived. He likewiſe takes notice of his generoſity to the ſon of a poor man, who had given him many a meal's meat in his youth. His gratitude was alſo very remarkable in the caſe of Francis Freſcobald (or Friſkibal, as Skakeſpeare calls him.) This Freſcobald was an eminent Florentine merchant, who handſomely relieved Cromwell, in Italy, when he was reduced to the utmoſt diſtreſs and poverty, after the defeat of the French army at Caſtiglione: he not only furniſhed him with clothes and a horſe, but alſo with 16 ducats of gold, to carry him back to England. Freſcobald being afterwards reduced to poverty, or, as Shakeſpeare expreſſes it,

Fortune that turns her too unconſtant wheel,
Having turn'd his wealth and riches in the ſea, he came over to England, where he had had conſiderable dealings, to endeavour to recover £15,000 ducats that were due to him from ſeveral perſons. The lord Cromwell, finding him out, aſſiſted him in recovering his dues, and not only repaid him the 16 ducats above-mentioned, but alſo made him a preſent of 1600 more.

[3] Camden's Britannia, in Eſſex, p. 454.

[4] Prov. x. 19.

[5] "The mention of St. Peter's in Broad-ſtreet mindeth me of a paſſage, not unworthy to be recited, of an injury offered by this lord Cromwell to many poor men in the ſame pariſh. And, becauſe every one is beſt able to tell his own tale, take it in the words of John Stow, being himſelf deeply concerned therein; 'The lord Cromwell having finiſhed his houſe in Throgmorton-ſtreet in London, and having ſome reaſonable plot of ground left for a garden, cauſed the pales of the gardens adjoining to the North part thereof on a ſudden to be taken down, two and twenty feet to be meaſured forth-right into the North of every

THOMAS CROMWELL EARL of ESSEX.

Engraved by James Baſire.

From Houbraken's Illustrious Heads; compared with the Original at Parnham.

GREGORY LORD CROMWELL.

Engraved by James Baſire.

From the Original in the Collection of Sir William Oglander at Parnham.

thereof pretending that, as hitherto they had concealed them for love of themſelves (fearing Cromwell's greatneſs): ſo now, for the love of the king, they revealed the ſame. Indeed, on the firſt manifeſting of the king's diſpleaſure againſt him, the foes of Cromwell had all their mouths open, and his friends their mouths ſhut up. As for the paſſionate expreſſions of Cromwell; a knight[1], aged well-nigh eighty, whoſe mother was daughter to the lord Cromwell's ſon, hath informed me, That the principal paſſage, whereon the lord's enemies moſt inſiſted, was this; it being told the lord Cromwell that one accuſed him for want of fidelity to the king; Cromwell returned in paſſion, 'Were he here now, I would ſtrike my dagger into his heart;' meaning into the heart of the falſe accuſer; and therein guilty of want of charity to his fellow ſubject, not of loyalty to his ſovereign. But ſeeing the words were a meaſuring caſt as uttered (though not as intended) to whom they ſhould relate, the pick-thank repeater avowed them uttered againſt the king himſelf. So dangerous are dubious words and ambiguous expreſſions, when prevalent power is to conſtrue, and interpret the meaning thereof.

"The lord Cromwell in the main will appear a worthy perſon, and a great inſtrument of God's glory in the reforming of Religion, and remarkable for many perſonal eminences. Commonly when men are (as in a moment) mounted from meanneſs to much wealth and honour, firſt they forget themſelves, and then all their old friends and acquaintance; whereas, on the contrary, here gratitude grew with his greatneſs, and the lord Cromwell conferred many a courteſy on the children from whoſe fathers Maſter Cromwell had formerly received favours. As he was a good ſervant to his maſter, ſo was he a good maſter to his ſervants; and, fore-ſeeing his own fall (which he might have foretold, without the Spirit of Prophecy, ſome half a year before), he furniſhed his men, which had no other livelihood to ſubſiſt by, with leaſes, penſions, and annuities, whereby after his death they had a comfortable maintenance. One ſo faithful to his ſervants cannot be ſuſpected for an infidel in not providing for his family, or his own children. It was not therefore his ambition, but Providence, that on the ſame day wherein he was created earl of Eſſex, he procured Gregory his ſon (which otherwiſe had been then but a lord by courteſy) to be actually made baron Cromwell of Oakham[2]; which honour, becauſe inherent in the ſon, was not forfeited on his father's attainture, but deſcends at this day on his poſterity. We will conclude his ſtory with this remarkable inſtance of his humility. Formerly there flouriſhed a notable family of the Cromwells[3] at Tatteſhall in Lincolnſhire, eſpecially ſince ſir Ralph Cromwell married the younger ſiſter and coheir of William the laſt lord Deincourt. Now there wanted not ſome flattering heralds (excellent chemiſts in pedigrees to extract any thing from any thing) who would have entitled this lord Cromwell to the arms of that antient family, extinct (in the iſſue male thereof) about the end of king Henry VI. His anſwer unto them was, "That he would not wear another man's coat, for fear the right owner thereof ſhould pluck it off over his ears;" and preferred rather to take a new coat (viz. Azure, Or, a feſs inter three lions rampant, Or, a roſe Gules, betwixt two choughs proper, Plate XLV. fig. 24), being ſomewhat of the fulleſt; the epidemical diſeaſe of all arms given in the reign of Henry the Eighth." He was buried in the antient chapel of St. Peter ad Vincula, within the Tower of London[4]. His portrait and hand-writing are given in Plate XLVI.

Gregory, ſon of the earl of Eſſex, though already a baron, was, by a new patent, Dec. 18, 1540, created baron Cromwell of Okeham[5]. He firſt took his ſeat in the Houſe of Peers Jan. 16, 1540-41[6]; and in the next month obtained the following grant[7]:

"To the kynge our ſovereigne lord.

"Pleaſythe it your highnes, of your moſt and abundant grace, to grant your gracyous lres patents, under your greate ſeale of Ingland, in due fourme, to be made, accordynge to the tenor hereafter enſuynge.

"HENRY R.[8]

"Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. ſalutem. Sciatis, quòd nos, de gratiâ noſtrâ ſpeciali, ac ex certâ ſcientiâ & mero motu noſtris, dedimus & conceſſimus, ac per preſentes damus & concedimus, Gregorio Grumwell domino Crumwell totam domum ac ſcitum nuper monaſterii ſive prioratûs de Launde, in com' noſtro Leic'; ac eccleſiam, cimeterium, campanile, domos, edificia, orrea, ſtabula, columbaria, pomaria, gardina, terras, & ſolum, infra ſcitum, ſeptim, circuitum, & precinctum, predicti nuper monaſterii ſive prioratûs de Launde, ſcituat', jacent', & exiſtent', in Launde & Lodyngton, ſeu in eorum altero ſive utroque, in predicto com' noſtro Leic'; ac etiam omnia illa terras & tenementa, prata, paſcua, paſturas, & ſubboſcos ſubſcripta, eidem nuper monaſterio ſive prioratui de Launde pertin' ſive ſpectant'; videlicet, totam illam clauſuram, terram, & paſturam, eidem pertin', vocat' Whadborowgh, aliàs Wateborowgh, jacent' & exiſtent' infra parochias de Lodyngton & Tylton, ſeu infra eorum alteram ſive utramque, in dicto com' noſtro Leic'; ac omnia illa terras, tenementa, clauſuras, prata, paſcua, paſturas, ſubboſcos, & cetera hereditamenta noſtra, cum pertin', in Launde & Lodyngton predictis, ſeu in earum alterâ, ſive utrâque, vocat' Le Newcloſe, Le Myllefelde, Le Myllewonge, Shepecote-yarde, Le Morecloſe, Le Roughe-cloſe, Burfytt-cloſe, aliàs Le Burfeeld, Eſtefeld, Horſſe-cloſe, Thomas Taylor's Cloſe, Le Pryour's Cloſe, Launde-parke, Reddyſyke, & Weſt-wood, hactenùs cognita ſive reputata ut pars, parcelle, vel membra poſſeſſionum ſive hereditamentorum predicti nuper monaſterii ſive prioratûs de Launde; necnon omnia illa terras, tenementa, & ſolum noſtra, cum ſuis pertinentiis, jacentia, exiſtentia, ſive incluſa, infra predictam clauſuram ſive paſturam, vocat' Whadborowghe, nuper monaſterii Sc̄i Jacobi juxta villam Northampton', in com' Northampton', dudum diſſoluti, nuper pertin' ſive ſpectant'; necnon unum molendinum aquaticum, cum ſuis pertinentiis, in Launde predictâ, predicte domui ſive ſcitui predicti nuper monaſterii ſive prioratui de Launde propè adjacens. Et ulteriùs, every man's ground, a line there to be drawn, a trench to be caſt, a foundation laid, and an high brick-wall to be builded. My father had a garden there, and there was a houſe ſtanding cloſe to his South pale; this houſe they looſed from the ground, and bare upon rollers into my father's garden two and twenty feet ere my father heard thereof: no warning was given him, nor other anſwer (when he ſpake to the ſurveyors of that work), but that their maſter, ſir Thomas, commanded them ſo to do. No man durſt go to argue the matter, but each man loſt his land; and my father paid his whole rent, which was 6*s*. 8*d*. the year, for that half which was left. Thus much of mine own knowledge have I thought good to note, that the ſudden riſing of ſome men cauſeth them to forget themſelves.' I am moved the rather to believe our author herein, becauſe elſewhere he alloweth this lord his deſerved praiſe for his virtues, and eſpecially his hoſpitality, affirming, he had often ſeen at the lord Cromwell's gate above 200 perſons ſerved twice every day with meat and drink ſufficient."

[1] Sir Robert Strode, of Parham in Dorſetſhire. See Hutchins, vol. I. p. 446, 2d edition.

[2] As his name does not appear on the Journals during his father's life, he was probably a minor when created Baron Cromwell of Oakham; which will account for his name not being entered on the Journals.

[3] A ſeal of a lady of this family, Matilda, lady Cromwell of Tatteſhall, is given in Plate XLV. fig. 25. From the following deed (Cart. Ant. Harl. in Muſ Brit. 49. A. 44): "Noverint univerſi per preſentes me Matildem de Cromwell, dominam de Tateſhale, conceſſiſſe & dediſſe dilecte filie mee domine Joanne de Cromwell, nuper uxori dilecti filii mei Radulphi de Cromwell, nuper domini de Cromwell, militis, omnimoda redditus & proficua doti mee infra dominium de Halum ſpectantia, à die confectionis preſentium uſque finem & terminum duorum annorum proximè ſequentium plenariè completorum, in ſubſidium ſolutionis debiti dicti filii mei, reſervatâ omninò mihi dicte Matilde advocatione eccleſie de Halum cùm acciderit; proviſo ſemper, quòd omnimoda talliagia forinſeca, ſolutiones, & reparationes, dicte doti mee dictis duobus annis qualitèrcunque incumbentia, per dictam dominam Joannam ſupportentur & perficiantur. In cujus rei teſtimonium, huic preſenti ſcripto ſigillum meum apposui. Data apud Tateſhale, in craſtino feſti Sancti Martini epiſcopi, menſe Novembris, anno regni regis Henrici Quinti poſt Conqueſtum Anglie quarto."

[4] Newcourt, Reportorium, vol. I. p. 529.

[5] Pat. 32 Hen. VIII. p. 7.

[6] Journals, vol. I. p. 166.

[7] 2 Pars Original. 32 Hen. VIII. Rot. 76.

[8] See a fac-ſimile of the king's hand-writing, from the original deed in my poſſeſſion, in Plate XLVI.

de uberiori gratiâ noſtrâ, dedimus & conceſſimus, ac per preſentes damus & concedimus, prefato Gregorio Crumwell domino Crumwell totum illud manerium noſtrum de Lodyngton, cum omnibus ſuis membris & pertinentiis, in dicto com' noſtro Leic', parcella poſſeſſionum ſive hereditamentorum predicti nuper monaſterii ſive prioratûs de Launde predictâ; ac omnia & ſingula illa meſſuagia, cotagia, terras, tenementa, molendina, columbaria, prata, paſcua, paſturas, ſubboſcos, piſcarias, aquas, communia, vias, hariett', eſcaet', bona, & catalla, waviata, extrahur', feoda militum, reverſiones, & ſervicia, redditus & firmas, ſuper quibuſcunque dimiſſionibus reſervat'; ac etiam omnia & ſingula hereditamenta noſtra quecunque in Launde & Lodyngton predictis, ſeu alibi in dicto com' noſtro Leic', cum ſuis membris, commoditatibus, proficuis, & pertinentiis, quê habentur, cognoſcuntur, ſive reputantur, ut pars, parcelle, vel membra predicti manerii de Lodyngton, aut eidem manerio pertinent', ſeu aliquo modo ſpectant'; exceptis & omninò reſervatis nobis, heredibus & ſucceſſoribus noſtris, omnibus & omnimodis groſſis arboribus, necnon meremio, de, in, & ſuper premiſſa creſcentibus ſive exiſtentibus, aut de, in, & ſuper aliquam indè parcellam. Ac etiam damus & concedimus prefato Gregorio Crumwell domino Crumwell viſum franciplegii, & omne id quod ad viſum franciplegii pertinet, ſeu pertinere debeat aut poſſit, infra manerium predictum tenend'; necnon rectoriam noſtram de Lodyngton predictâ, ac advocationem, nominationem, preſentationem, & jus patronatûs vicarie eccleſie de Lodyngton predictâ; ac omnia domos, edificia, orrea, terras, tenementa, prata, paſcua, paſturas, ſubboſcos, redditus, reverſiones, ſervicia, decimas, oblationes, obventiones, fructus, proficua, commoditates, & emolumenta quecunque, predicte rectorie pertinentia, ſive quoquo modo ſpectantia; ac etiam omnes & ſingulas decimas & fructus provenientes, creſcentes, ſive emergentes, de, in, & ſuper molendinum predictum, ac de, in, & ſuper predicta terras, tenementa, prata, paſcua, paſturas, & ſubboſcos, vocat' Whadborowgh Newcloſe, Le Myllefeld, Le Myllewong, Shepecote-yarde, Le Morecloſe, Le Roughe-cloſe, Burfytt-cloſe, Eſtefeeld, Horſſe-cloſe, Thomas Taylor's Cloſe, Le Pryour's Cloſe, Launde-park, Reddyſyke, & Weſtewoode, predict'; que quidem domus & ſcitus predicti nuper monaſterii ſive prioratûs de Launde, ac predicta manerium, terre, tenementa, ac cetera premiſſa, ſuperiùs data & conceſſa, nuper fuerunt Thome nuper comitis Eſſexie, qui de altâ proditione ac diverſis heredibus, auctoritate parliamenti, jamdudum attinctus fuit & exiſtit, atque ad manus noſtras, ratione attinctûs illius, devenerunt, ſeu devenire debuerunt ſeu debent, ac in manibus noſtris jam exiſtunt, ſeu exiſtere debent. Habendum, tenendum, & gaudendum, dicta domus & ſcitum predicti nuper monaſterii ſive prioratûs de Launde predicta, ac omnia & ſingula predicta manerium, meſſuagia, cotagia, terras, tenementa, prata, paſcua, paſturas, ſubboſcos, rectoriam, advocationem, decimas, redditus, reverſiones, ſervicia, ac cetera omnia & ſingula premiſſa, cum ſuis pertinentiis, exceptis pre-exceptis, prefato Gregorio Crumwell domino Crumwell, & heredibus maſculis de corpore ipſius Gregorii inter eundem Gregorium & dominam Elizabetham uxorem ejuſdem Gregorii legitimè procreatis, & procreandis; tenendum de nobis, heredibus & ſucceſſoribus noſtris, in capite, per ſervicium unius feodi militis, ac reddendo & ſolvendo annuatim nobis, heredibus & ſucceſſoribus noſtris, pro predictis domo & ſcitu predicti nuper monaſterii ſive prioratûs de Launde, ac pro omnibus predictis manerio, terris, tenementis, rectoriâ, & ceteris premiſſis, cum ſuis pertinentiis univerſis, centum & quatuor libras, octodecim ſolidos, & octo denarios, ad manus generalis receptoris noſtri terre dicti nuper comitis Eſſexie, ſive ad manus theſaurarii camere noſtre pro tempore exiſtentis, ad uſum noſtrum, ad feſta Paſche & Sc̄i Michaelis Archangeli, equis portionibus, ſingulis annis ſolvendo, pro omnibus aliis redditibus, ſerviciis, exactionibus, & demandis quibuſcunque. Et ulteriùs, de uberiori gratiâ noſtrâ, dedimus & conceſſimus, ac per preſentes damus & concedimus, pro nobis & heredibus noſtris, prefato Gregorio Crumwell domino Crumwell omnia & ſingula exitus, proficua, redditus, firmas, reverſiones, & emolumenta quecunque, predictorum domûs, ſcitûs, manerii, terrarum, tenementorum, & omnium & ſingulorum ceterorum premiſſorum, cum ſuis pertinentiis, à feſto Sc̄i Michaelis Archangeli ultimò preterito hucuſque provenientia ſive creſcentia; habenda, tenenda, & percipienda, tam per manus ipſius Gregorii Crumwell domini Crumwell proprias, quàm per manus eſcaetorum, vicecomitum, firmariorum, tenentium, occupatorum, receptorum, & aliorum miniſtrorum noſtrorum quorumcunque, eorundem nuper domûs, ſcitûs, manerii, terrarum, tenementorum, ac ceterorum premiſſorum, ſeu eorum alicujus aut aliquorum, dicto Gregorio Crumwell domino Crumwell, de dono noſtro ſpeciali, abſque compoſitione, ſeu aliquo alio nobis, heredibus vel ſucceſſoribus noſtris, proindè reddend', ſolvend', ſeu faciend'; eò quòd expreſſa mentio, &c. In cujus rei, &c."

Indorſed, "The demeane of the late monaſterie of Launde, and the manor of Lodington adjoining to the ſame demeane, to the Lord Cromwell and the heyrs males betwene hym and the Lady Elizabethe his wyfe lawfully begotyn; paying therefore yearely ciiiilī. xviiis̄. viiiđ. over and beſyde a clī. wyche the king's grace hath gyven unto hym. And the great woods and tymber be reſervyd for the kynge. Expedit. apud Weſtm', octavo die Februarii, anno regni regis Henrici Octavi xxxxii°; per Taverner. Subſcribed by Mr. Polard."

At Michaelmas 1541, the following account of Gregory lord Cromwell was regularly paſſed:

"Manerium ſive nuper monaſterium de Laund.

Manerium de Lodington, ſpectans monaſt' de Laund.

Computus Gregorii đni Cromwell, liberi tenentis ibidem, pro uno anno integro finito ad feſtum Sancti Mich' Arch̄li, a° regni regis Henrici Octavi xxxiii°.

Arreragia.

Idem computator oneratur de clī. de arreragiis ultimi computi anni proximè precedentis, ut patet in pede ejuſdem. Summa, clī.

Firma terrarum dominicalium de Laund; firma minut'; firma ſcilicet manerii de Lodyngton; redditus aſſiſe; firma terrarum dominicalium de Lodyngton; firma minutarum rectorie de Lodyngton; firme ſpectantes ad nuper monaſterium Sancti Andree juxta Northampton; & perquiſitiones curie.

De aliquibus denariorum ſummis hoc anno provenientibus de exitibus & revenc' ibidem, non receptis, eò quod conceditur prefato Gregorio đno Crumwell, & heredibus maſculis de corpore ipſius Gregorii inter ejuſdem Gregorium & dominam Elizabetham uxorem ejuſdem Gregorii legitimè procreatis & procreandis; tenend' de đno rege, heredibus & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, in capite, per ſervitium unius feodi militis, ac reddendi & ſolvendi annuatim eidem đno regi, heredibus & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, pro omnibus premiſſis, ciiiilī. xviiis̄. viiiđ. inferius onerat', prout in literis dicti đni regis patentibus, datis apud Weſtmonaſterium, x° die Februarii, anno regni regis Henrici Octavi xxxii°, prout in eiſdem literis patentibus plenius continetur.

Et redd' de ciiiilī. xviiis̄. viiiđ. de redd' ſuperius prefato domino regi ibidem annuatim reſervatis, ſolvendis ad manus generalis receptoris terrarum dicti nuper comitis Eſſex, ſive ad manus theſaurarii camere regie pro tempore exiſtentis, ad feſta Paſche & Sancti Michaelis Archangeli, equis portionibus, prout in dictis literis patentibus plenius continetur.

Summa, ciiiilī. xviiis̄. viiiđ.

Summa totalis oneris, cum arreragiis, cciiiilī. xviiis̄. viiiđ. De quibus liberavit Joh̄i Byther, receptori generali đno regis ibidem de exitibus predictis, ex recogniſatione ejuſdem receptoris, ciiiilī. xviiis̄. viiiđ. Et deb' clī. Qui exoneratur hìc, eò quod oneratur in computo dicti Johannis Byther, receptoris generalis ibidem hujûs anni, in titulo "Recepta Forinſeca[1]."

In the account of William Laurence, for the ſame period, among other entries it is thus ſtated:

Com' Leic'. Nec rec' de xxxiiilī. de firm' manerii cum rectoriâ de Melton Mowbraye, cum ſuis pertinentiis, eò quòd conceditur đne Anne de Cleve per literas đni regis patentes, dat' apud Weſtm', xx° die Januarii, anno regni xxxi°.

---

[1] Ex Rotulo Harl. B. 20.

Gregory lord Cromwell married Elizabeth, daughter of ſir John Seymour, of Wolſhall, Wilts, ſiſter to Edward duke of Somerſet, and widow of ſir Anthony Oughtred, knight; and died in 1551, ſeiſed of the ſite of the late diſſolved monaſtery of Laund, and of the manor of Blaſton, held of the king in capite, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee[1]. He was buried in the chapel of Laund, where his monument ſtill remains.

He left iſſue three ſons, Henry, Edward, and Thomas; and two daughters, Frances, married to Edward Stroude, eſq. of Devonſhire; and Catharine, to ſir John Stroude, of Parnham in Dorſetſhire.

June 12, 1586, on a diſpute in the court of Exchequer, between the College of All Souls and Henry lord Cromwell, then tenant in capite of the ſite of the priory of Laund, concerning tithes, a commiſſion was iſſued to ſir John Harrington, knt. Thomas Aſhby, eſq. John Chippendale, D. C. L. and Roger Smith, eſq. to aſcertain by a jury the true plott of the cloſe called Whadborough, with all its boundaries[2].

Henry lord Cromwell married Mary, eldeſt daughter of John Paulett, marquis of Wincheſter; and, by his teſtament, dated 15 Nov. 1592, bequeathed his body to be buried in the chapel of this priory by the tomb of his father (where alſo Mary his wife lay interred); and died Nov. 20, for the probate thereof bears date 16 Dec. next following; leaving two ſons, Edward, his ſon and heir, and ſir Gregory Cromwell, knight; as alſo one daughter, Catharine, married to ſir Lionel Talmache, knight.

Which Edward, being ſummoned to the parliament begun 19 Feb. 35 Elizabeth, had admittance into the houſe upon the 27th of the ſame month; and in 40 Eliz. was in that adventure to ſea, with Robert earl of Eſſex, againſt the Spaniards; alſo in 43 Eliz. in that inſurrection with him, which coſt the earl his head; and having married Frances, daughter to William Rugge, of . . . . . . co. Norfolk, died in Ireland, and was there buried in the Abbey church at Down Patrick; leaving iſſue by her Thomas, his ſon and heir; and three daughters; Elizabeth, married to ſir John Skelton, knt.; Frances, to ſir John Wingfeild, of Tickencote, co. Rutland, knt.; and Anne, to ſir Edward Wingfeild, of Poore's Court, in Ireland, knt.

Which Thomas was created viſcount of Lecale and earl of Ardglaſs in the kingdom of Ireland (having a fair eſtate in that realm); and by Elizabeth his wife, daughter and heir to Robert Meverell, of Throwley, co. Stafford, eſq. had iſſue three ſons; Wingfeild, his ſon and heir; Vere-Eſſex, and Oliver; as alſo three daughters, Frances and Jane, who died young; and Mary, married to William Fitzherbert, of Tiſſington, co. Derby, eſq.

The following petition from this Nobleman was preſented to the Houſe of Peers, Nov. 6, 1645:

"To the right honourable the Lords aſſembled in Parliament; . . . . Baron of Ouckham, humbly ſheweth, That he, not truly underſtanding the juſtneſs of the cauſe this State hath in handling till of late, did, through ſome plauſible perſuaſions of his Majeſty, continue with him; until, by true information of ſome friends, I found that his Majeſty was not only miſled, but his deafneſs to thoſe he ought to hear beſt was liker to increaſe, than by wholeſome and well-grounded propoſitions from hence receive an opening and enlargement of that organ; upon which, your Lordſhips humble ſervant and ſuppliant, ambitious to redeem himſelf in the good opinion of your Lordſhips, and alſo of the honourable Houſe of Commons; and, ſecondly, to preſerve his honour and reputation with thoſe that ſtood for Religion and the Liberty of the Subject; did (upon ſerious deliberation) bethink himſelf to lay hold upon your Lordſhips' Declaration, and the articles of Prince Rupert and General Fairfax, and reſolved to become a new man, and to be faithful in the cauſe now depending here, either by oath or otherwiſe; which I humbly deſire may be received for ſuch a truth as not to be ſuſpected or denied; and, in regard of my high poverty, I may not be reſtrained to any chargeable priſon, or other reſtraint; but, if at all, to my chamber, or ſome public miniſter of ſtate's houſe, as the ſheriff or ſome alderman of this city; not being in any preſent capacity any ways able to ſubſiſt, having not had £50. of his own eſtate theſe four years, either in England or Ireland. And he ſhall ever pray, &c. CROMWELL."

This petition was ſent to the Houſe of Commons for conſideration, Nov. 17, and by them referred to a committee Dec. 22[3].

On this petition it was ordered, "That the lord Cromwell ſhall ſtand committed to the ſafe cuſtody of the gentleman uſher attending this Houſe, there to remain till the further pleaſure of this Houſe be ſignified, for deſerting the Parliament contrary to his duty[4]."

By Elizabeth his wife, daughter and heir to Robert Meverell, of Throwley, co. Stafford, eſq. he had three daughters; Frances and Jane, that died young; and Mary, who married William Fitzherbert, of Tiſſington, co. Derby, eſq.; alſo three ſons, 1. Wingfeild; 2. Vere-Eſſex; and 3. Oliver. Of theſe, Wingfeild Cromwell, as eldeſt ſon and heir, ſucceeded him; which Wingfeild, who married Mary, daughter of ſir William Ruſſel, of Shenſham, co. Warwick, knt. died Oct. 3, 1668, leaving iſſue Thomas Cromwell, viſcount Lecale and earl of Ardglaſs in Ireland, and baron Cromwell in England. He married a daughter of Dr. Michael Boyle, archbiſhop of Dublin, and chancellor of Ireland; but, departing this life, at his lodgings at London, in April 1682, without iſſue, his uncle Vere-Eſſex aforeſaid ſucceeded in all thoſe honours, having married Catharine, daughter to James Hamilton, widow of Richard Price, eſq.; and, dying in 1687, Elizabeth, his ſole daughter and heir by that lady, enjoyed the right of the barony of Cromwell, and at the funeral of queen Mary attended in the proceſſion as baroneſs Cromwell. In December 1703, ſhe married Edward Southwell, eſq. one of the clerks of the council to her majeſty, and principal ſecretary of ſtate for the kingdom of Ireland. She died at London March 30, 1709; and left iſſue three ſons, Edward, born in Dublin June 17, 1705; Robert and Thomas, born in London, which two laſt did not long ſurvive their mother.

The ſite of this priory was granted in capite by king James I. in 1603, to ſir William Smith[5], knight[6].

William Skeffington died 19 Dec. 1604, ſeiſed of ſix meſſuages, 301 acres, &c. in Skeffington, parcel of the priory of Laund, held in capite by 100th part of a knight's fee, and 15*s*. 1½*d*.[7]

An act of parliament was paſſed, in 1606, for the aſſurance of certain lands, late ſir John Skynner's, knight, to ſir William Smith, and ſir Michael Hickes, knights[8]; and in 1607 another act, for confirmation of certain lands to the Warden and College of The Souls of all faithful People deceaſed, of Oxon, and of other lands to ſir William Smith, knight[9].

In or before 1611, the ſite of Laund priory was purchaſed by William Halford[10], eſq. of Welham; who in that year was cited to ſhew cauſe why this manor ſhould not be ſeized to the Queen's uſe, as lands held of the Crown could not be alienated without the conſent of the Sovereign; and in 1653 it was the inheritance of John Halford, a younger ſon[11].

---

[1] Eſch. 5 Edw. VI.

[2] See hereafter, under Whadborough.

[3] Journals of the Lords, vol. VII. p. 680.

[4] Journals of the Commons, vol. IV. pp. 357. 382.

[5] Mrs. Joanna Smith, of London, widow, by will, dated April 21, 1601, gave £400. to purchaſe 40 marks per annum, for ever; of which ſhe ordered 20 be given in bread annually to the poor of the pariſh of Bocking in Eſſex, and 20 to the poor of Coggeſhall, at 5*s*. per Sunday; and ſir William Smith, her ſon, ſettled Laund priory in Leiceſterſhire on truſtees for the payment of it. Britannia Antiqua & Nova, vol. I. p. 713; Morant's Eſſex, vol II. p. 388.

[6] 4 Pars Original. 1 Jac. I. Rot. 124. Smith, William, conc. Leic. 4 Pars Orig. Jac. I. Rot. 124.

[7] Inq. at Leiceſter, 25 Jan. 1604-5; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. IV. (Harl. MSS. 759.) p. 796.

[8] Journals of the Lords, vol. II. p. 425; of the Commons, vol. I. p. 305.

[9] Journals of the Lords, vol. II. p. 568; of the Commons, vol. I. p. 373.

[10] "De Willielmo Halford, occaſion' ad oſtendend' quare ſitus nuper monaſterii de Launde in manibus regis ſeiſiri non debet." Mich. Rec. 9 Jac. I. Rot. 55

[11] Sir Thomas Cave, MS. on the authority of Thomas Staveley, eſq.

This lordſhip ſoon afterwards was purchaſed by ſir Clement Clerke, third ſon of George Clerke, eſq. of Willoughby in Warwickſhire; whoſe ſon ſir Clement was created a baronet June 18, 1661. He married Catharine, daughter and heir of George Talbot[1], of Ridge in Shropſhire, eſq. by whom he had four ſons; 1. ſir Talbot, his ſucceſſor; 2. Clement, who was deputy-governor of the Iſle of Wight, and died unmarried; 3. George, who married Dorothy, daughter of ——— Pearſe, of Oakfield in Berks, eſq. by whom he had one ſon, ſir Talbot, hereafter mentioned; and one daughter, Dorothy, married to Philip Jennings, of Huddleſton in Shropſhire, eſq. ſon to counſellor Jennings, and nephew to ſir John Jennings, knight and admiral, governor of Greenwich Hoſpital. The fourth ſon of ſir Clement was Thomas, who died a batchelor.

On a ſale of fee-farm rents in 1672, under an act of parliament and a commiſſion from king Charles II, ſir Joſeph Sheldon purchaſed, inter alia, a fee-farm rent of £10. 18*s.* 8*d.* iſſuing out of a paſture called Laund Park and Weſt Wood, which had been granted by king James I. in 1604 to John lord Harrington, and then lately payable by Edward viſcount Campden and ſir William Turner;—£35. for the ſite of Laund priory, then lately payable by ſir Clement Clerke;—and £34. from a paſture called Whadborough[2], in Lodington and Tilton, then lately payable by John Faringdon and others;—with all their ſeveral eſtates, right, title, royalties, privileges, immunities, and advantages[3].

Sir Talbot Clerke, eldeſt ſon of the firſt baronet, who ſucceeded his father in title and eſtate, married Hannah, daughter of —— ——; and died in 1708, leaving three ſons, ſir Clement, ſir Talbot, and ſir Thomas, who were all ſucceſſively baronets.

Sir Clement, the eldeſt ſon, died unmarried; whereupon the title and eſtate came to his brother, Sir Talbot Clerke, baronet, who married Barbara, daughter and coheir of Thomas Gladwin, of Durrent-hall, in Cheſterfield, co. Derby, eſq. by whom he had one ſon, ſir Talbot, and one daughter; and, dying Feb. 16, 1723, at Durrent-hall, was buried at Cheſterfield. His lady, ſurviving him, married John Monk Morgan, of Monmouthſhire, eſq.

Sir Talbot Clerke, baronet, who ſucceeded his father in dignity and eſtate, died Nov. 20, 1732, aged about 13; whereupon the title and eſtate came to his couſin, ſir Talbot Clerke, only ſon of George, third ſon of ſir Clement Clerke, the firſt baronet. Which ſir Talbot Clerke married Lucy, daughter of the rev. Mr. Rogers, of Painſwick in Glouceſterſhire; but dying in 1758, without iſſue male[4], the title became extinct.

Arms of Clerke: Argent, on a bend Gules between three pellets, as many ſwans Proper, with the arms of the duke of Orleans, on a canton ſiniſter, as an augmentation given to this family for their taking him priſoner at the battle of Spurrs, temp. Hen. VIII; viz. Azure, a demi-ram, mounting, Argent, armed Or, between two fleurs de lis of the laſt, over all a batune dexterways as the ſecond in the canton; Plate XLV. 16.

On the South wall of the chancel at Tame, co. Oxford, under an arch, is a braſs figure of a man in armour; on his tabard a bend charged with three ſwans between two pellets.

On a ſcroll, Sancta Trinitas unus de' miſerere nobis.

"Here lyeth ſir John Clerk, of North Welton, knyght, wyche toke
Loups of Orleans duk of longuevile and marquis of Rotuelen pyſon^{r} at the jorney of Bomy by Terouain the xvi day of Auguſt, in the v^{e} yere of the reigne of ye noble and victorious kyng henry the viii.
wyche John deceſſyd the vth day of Apll, a^{o} Dni 1539, whoſe ſoule God pdon."

On the front of the altar-tomb the arms of Clerke twice. Thoſe of the duke of Orleans do not appear.

After the death of ſir Talbot Clerke, the manor-houſe and ſite of the priory of Launde, together with the royalty, the liberty of free-warren, the woods called Laund Park, and The Weſt Woods, were ſold, in 1763, by Mrs. Dorothy Jennings, to John Simpſon[5], eſq. of the borough of Leiceſter, (ſon and heir of John Simpſon, eſq. receiver-general for the county,) the preſent owner; who married Jane daughter of John Finch, of Dudley, eſq. and ſole heireſs of her brother John Finch, eſq. of the ſaid place. Mr. Simpſon ſerved the office of high-ſheriff in 1775.

For an excellent view of this pleaſing reſidence, which Mr. Simpſon has ſo much modernized that but little of the antient ſtructure is perceptible externally, I am indebted to the worthy owner. Another view, including the chapel, is alſo given from a ſketch by Mr. Schnebbelie; and in both a very fine piece of water is particularly ſhewn, which has a pleaſing effect when approaching this place from Withcote. See Plates XLIV. XLV.

The lordſhip of Laund contains about 1400 acres; and is beautifully diverſified with hills and dales, and well wooded. It is chiefly in paſturage, and generally eſteemed healthy. Three or four farm-houſes ſtand diſperſed in the liberty; and are occupied by graziers, tenants to Mr. Simpſon, by whom a large quantity of Stilton cheeſe is made[6].

The original CHAPEL of the Priory, (ſee Plate XLV.)

dedicated to St. John the Baptiſt, ſtill remains; but is now the private property of Mr. Simpſon.

This chapel, the Weſt end of which adjoins the North ſide of the houſe, conſiſts of a nave, and a chancel raiſed by two ſteps, and ſeparated from the nave by old oak baluſtrades with arch-work between them.

The Weſt end of the nave is ſeparated from the other part by an old heavy open-work ſkreen, in which is a door of the ſame. This forms an irregular ſemi-octagon room; above which probably hung the bells.

At the fartheſt end of this room now ſtands the antient font, which is octagon, with a capacious baſe with an horizontal bottom, placed upon a ſmaller octagon baſe raiſed upon a ſtep (ſee Pl. XLVI. fig. 1).

There is now only one ſmall entrance-door towards the North. This probably once had a communication immediately from the priory; but modern maſonry has now hid all appearance of any door-way at this end.

Within the North wall remain the ſmall ornamental ſpandrils of four pointed arches. They project only two or three inches from the wall; and are ſlightly ſketched in fig. 2.

The roof is covered with ſlate; and within appears very curious, being painted blue and white, with mouldings forming, with the main and ſide beams, a kind of fret-work, on every joint of which is, or has been, ſome kind of ornament[7]; on one, a man in a very indecent poſture; on another, at a diſtance, a woman ſtill more ſo.

On many of the joints, are a cinquefoil; on ſeveral others, the monogram[8], fig. 3; on ſome Evangeliſts; on others, demi-angels with wings expanded, and holding ſhields againſt their breaſts; on ſome of which, are the arms noticed in p. 327.

Mr. Wyrley, who in 1595 viſited the chapel of "Laundon abbey," as he terms it, deſcribes eight impalements of arms here, only five of which are noticed by Mr. Burton; and even the deſcription of Mr. Wyrley is imperfect, as there are nine on the monument of Chaworth; all which will be found in p. 328.

---

[1] Elder brother to William, great grandfather to the preſent earl Talbot.

[2] Of Whadborough, now the property of All Souls College, Oxford; ſee hereafter, p. 336. The Lady Wood, in this neighbourhood, is in the pariſh of Knoſſington, and belongs to Mrs. Middleton, widow of the late Rev. Robert Middleton.

[3] See vol. II. p. 443.

[4] A daughter of ſir Talbot Clerke was married, June 4, 1741, to Dr. Coxe, a phyſician at Richmond in Surrey.

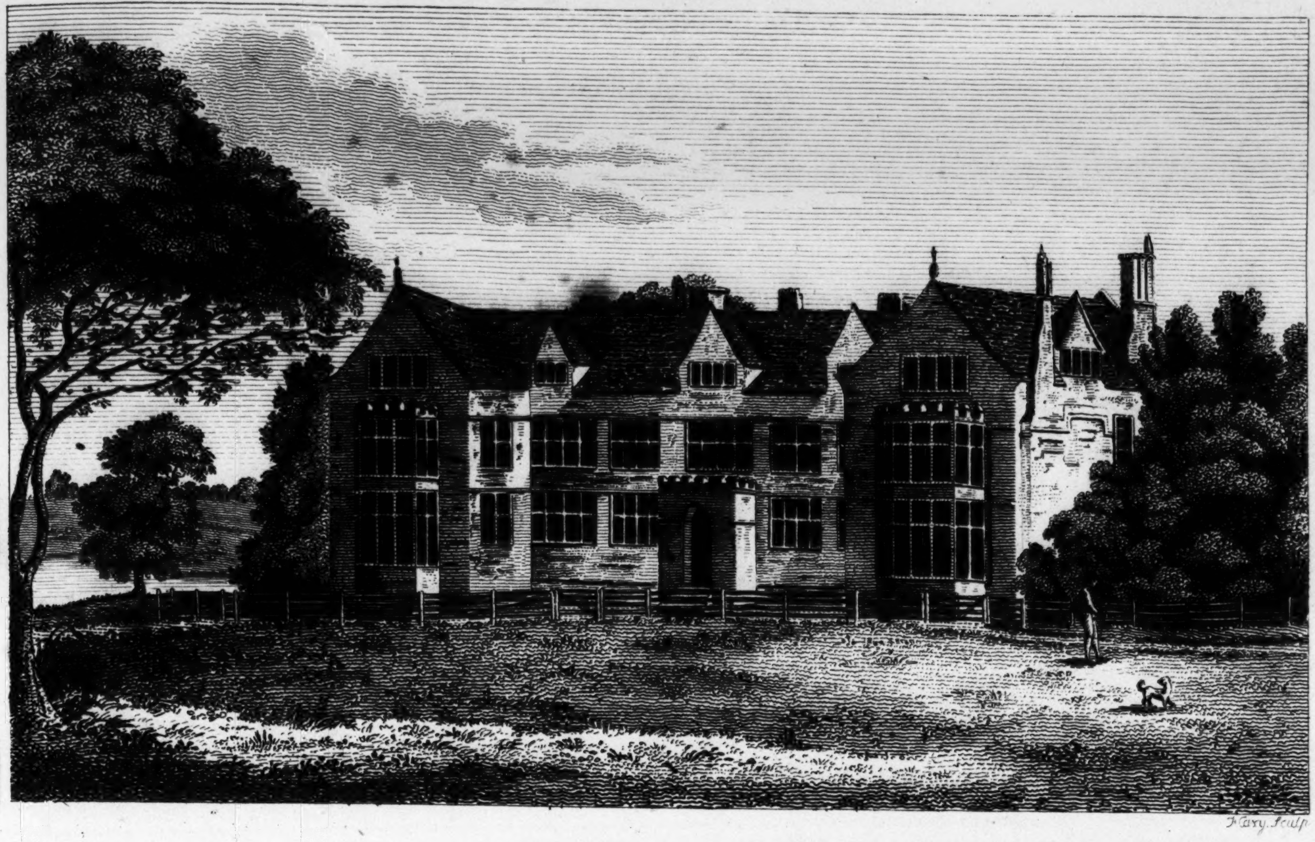
[5] Arms: Per bend nebulé, Or and Sable, a lion rampant counterchanged. On an eſcocheon of pretence, Argent, a chevron between three griffins paſſant. Creſt, on a mural coronet Argent, a demi-lion rampant guardant per pale undée Or and Sable, holding in his paw a ſword erect of the firſt, hilted of the ſecond; ſee Plate XLIV.

[6] Of this famous cheeſe ſee before, under Little Dalby, vol. II. p. 160; and under Quenby, vol. III. p. 297.

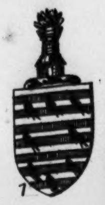
[7] Some of the figures are painted red, white, and blue; and others are gilt.

[8] Theſe monograms are made of lead, 4½ inches long, and about two broad, and many of them gilt.

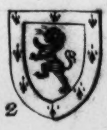
LAUND, S.W.



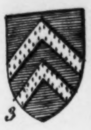
Cary sculp.



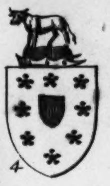
1



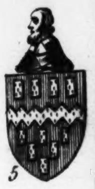
2



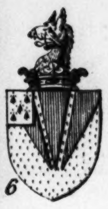
3



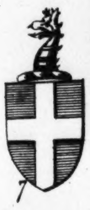
4



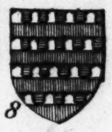
5



6

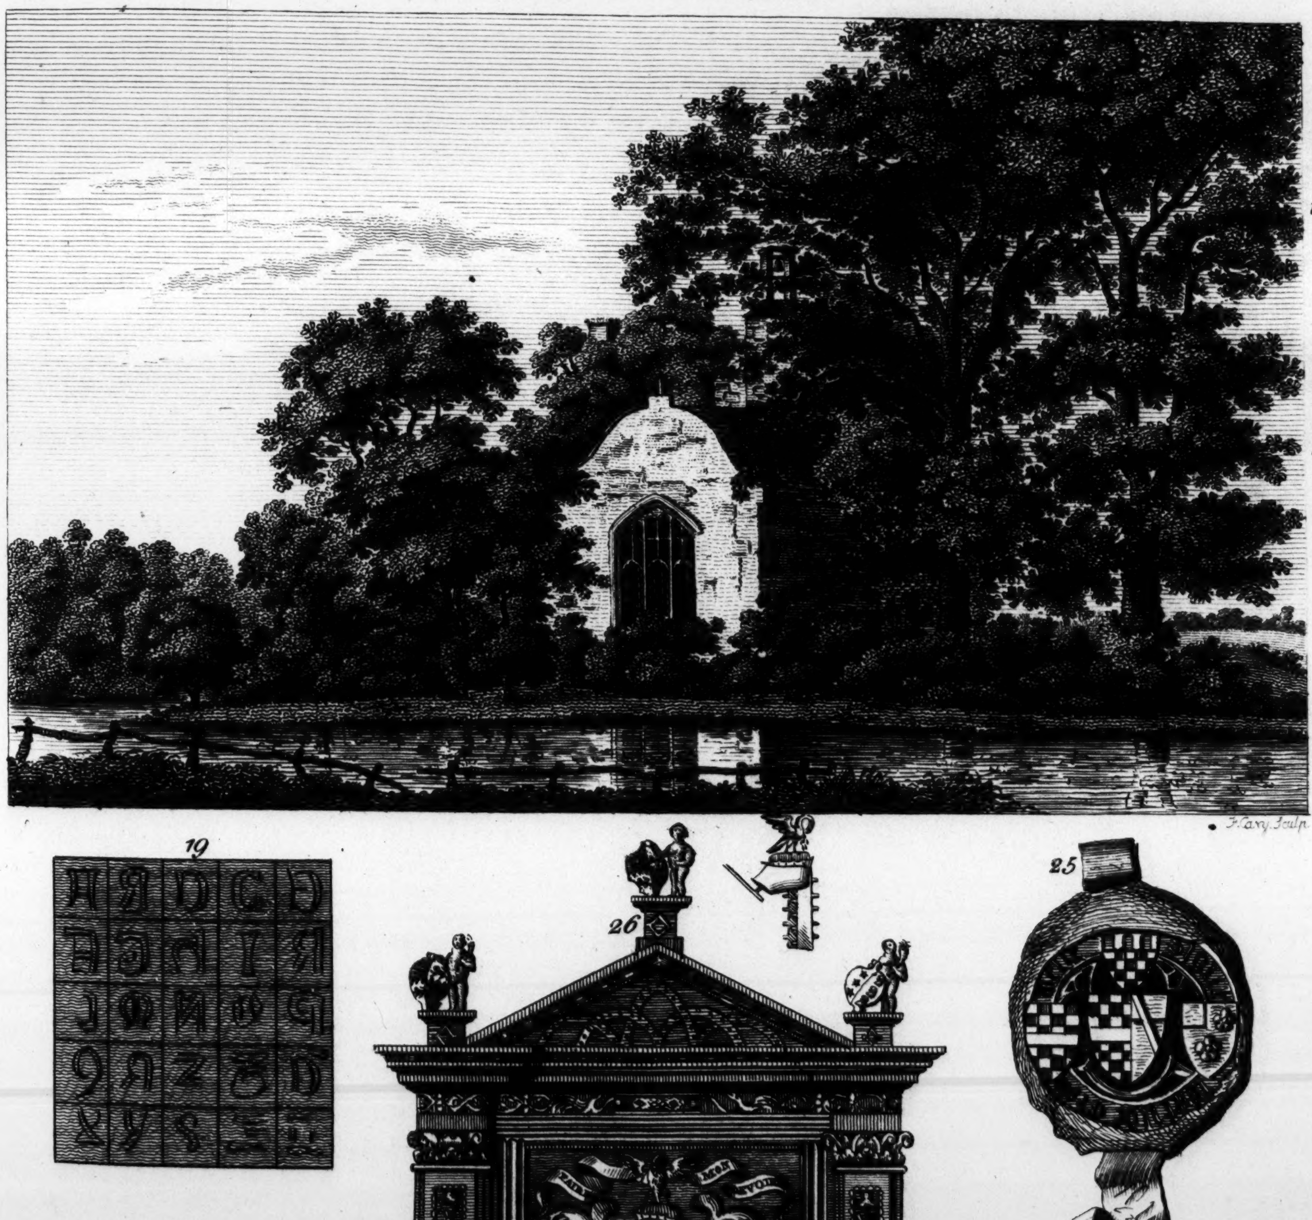


7

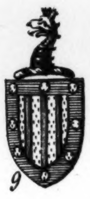


8

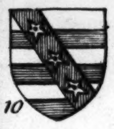
THE CHAPEL, N.E.



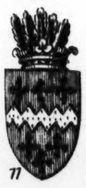
Cary sculp.



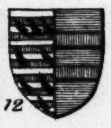
9



10

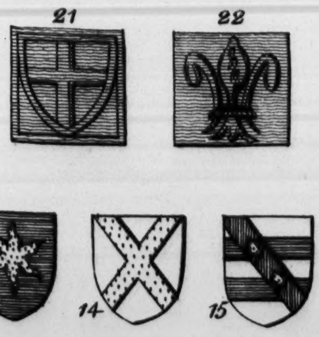


11

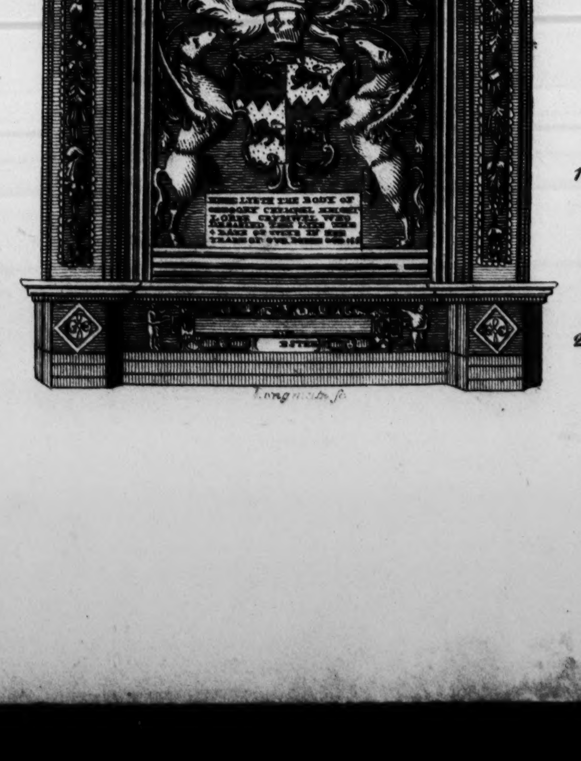


12

19

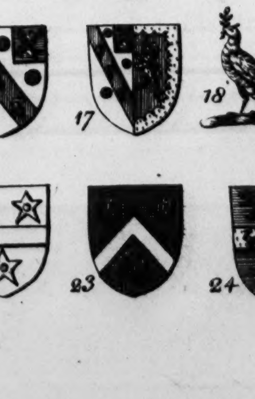


26



Longmate sc.

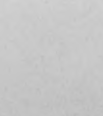
25



21

22

16



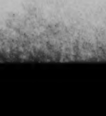
17

18

13

14

15



20

23

24

Fig. 1.

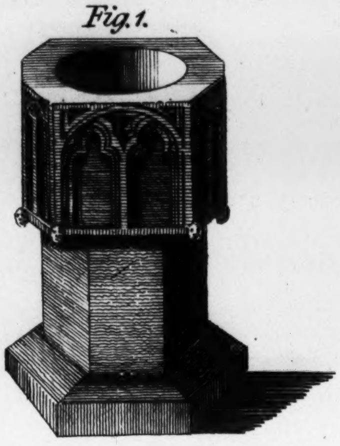


Fig. 4.

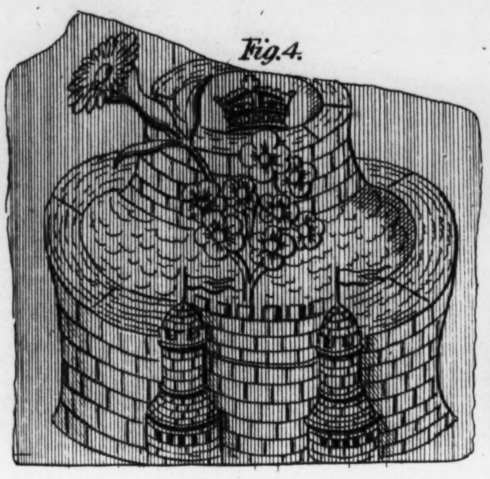

Fig. 3.

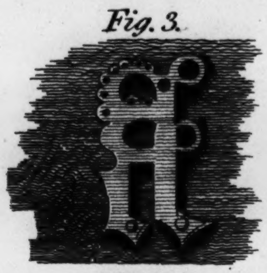

Fig. 2.

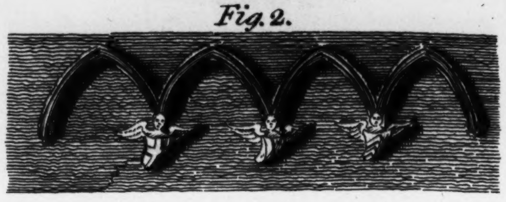
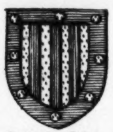


Rex Omnibus

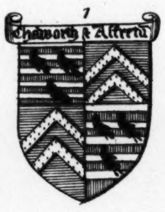


Seal of the Priory

Thomas Crumwell

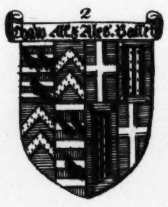
John Smyth

1



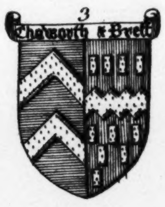
Chaworth & Alfreton

2



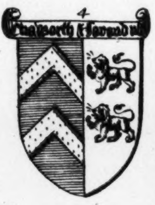
Chaw. Alf. & Ales. Basset

3



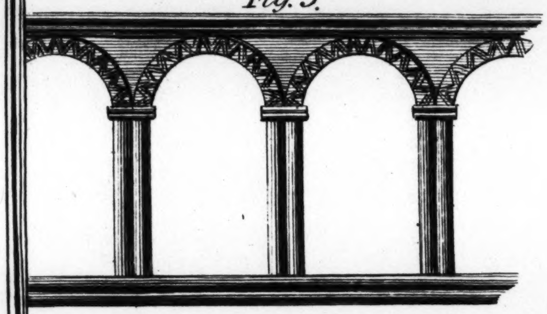
Chaworth & Brett

4

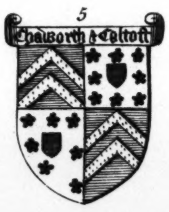


Chaworth & Haryngdon

Fig. 5.

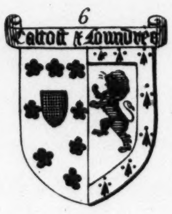


5



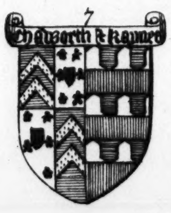
Chaworth & Caltoft

6



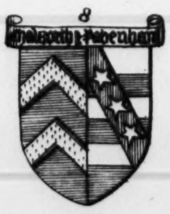
Caltoft & Loundres

7



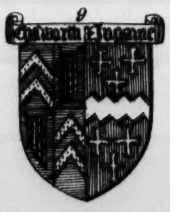
Chaworth & Kaynes

8



Chaworth & Pabenham

9



Chaworth & Engayne

Fig. 6.

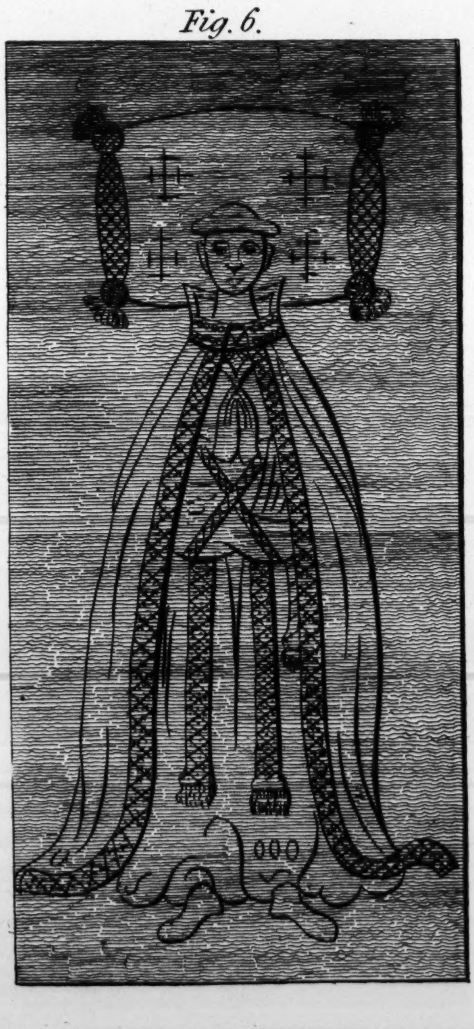


Fig. 7.

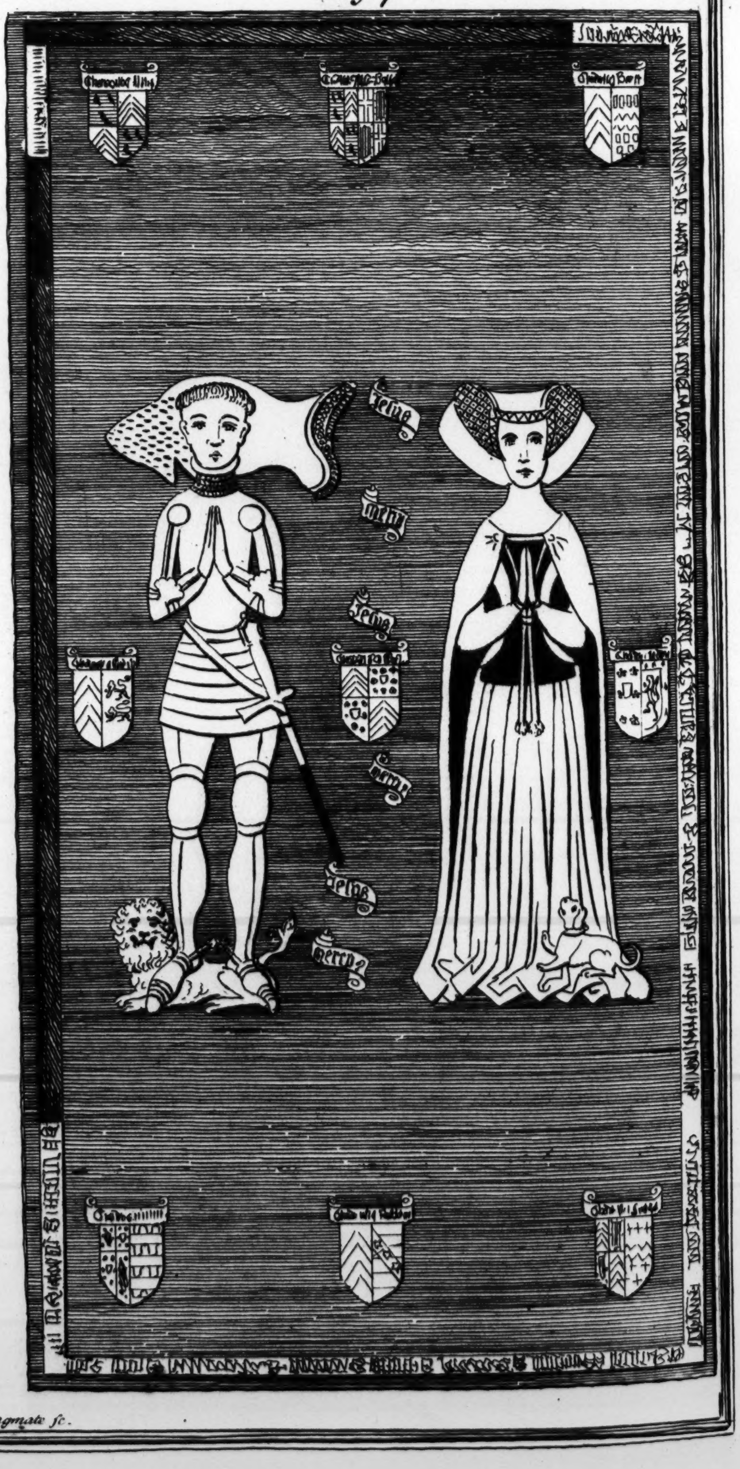

Longmate sc.

From the roof of the chapel, and on the ſhields held by the demi-angels, Mr. Tailby in 1799 here blazoned the arms of Chaworth impaling Alſreton, and alſo each of them ſingle; together with the following coats not noticed either by Wyrley or Burton:

On the roof, not painted, but carved on the main beam, immediately over the Chaworth monument, are, Quarterly, 1. and 4. Chaworth; 2. and 3. Caltoſt; correſponding with arms on the ſtone below.

The following coats are alſo ſtill preſerved:

Chaworth, impaling, Azure, two bars Gules, fig. 12.

Azure, a ſtar wavy Or; fig. 13.

Argent, a ſaltire Or; fig. 14.

Argent, two bars Azure; on a bend Gules, two ſtars of ſix points Or; fig. 15.

Clerke ſingle; fig. 16; and again, impaling, Gules, a lion rampant within a bordure invecked Or; fig. 17.

A creſt; on a wreath Argent and Gules a dove of the laſt, wings, legs, and olive-branch in its mouth, Or; fig. 18.

The North ſide of the chapel has no windows.

In the firſt window on the South ſide ſeven well-executed figures remain; many others are gone.

In the ſecond window, eight figures.

In the third window, ſeven figures; and in the middle loweſt compartment is a handſome female figure, crowned, and holding a croſs; in the back part are two portcullis's, and above her head part of a dove, Or, and crowned the ſame. This originally fine figure has been broken and miſplaced, and patched up by bungling glaziers.

In the upper part of the fourth or Eaſt window are a male and female figure, both crowned; below are ſix other handſome figures. That in the right compartment is a perſon teaching a child to read; the ſecond and third appear to be males; the fourth an angel; the fifth and ſixth females.

In the bottom compartments three large figures; that on the right-hand holding a ſhield; and under his feet, Quarterly, 1. and 4, Chaworth; 2 and 3, Caltoſt; as before.

The middle figure holds a croſs ornamented, having under it a plume of feathers Argent, iſſuing from a crown Or (only two of the feathers remain, and part of the crown); below which is a ſmall crown-like bouquet of flowers, placed againſt a tower upon another tower, Argent, maſoned Proper, Plate XLVI. fig. 4; below which, in a rich collar, is a fine fleur de lis on a rich collar Or.

The third figure has the appearance of an angel holding a croſs, or croſier, with a fragment of a label now illegible; below this figure have been arms, but a bordure Azure bezanty now only remains.

There appear to have been more labels under the figures, of which now only a few detached letters remain.

The whole of the painted glaſs is fine, and had, without doubt, originally an elegant appearance; but the frequent annihilations, miſplacings, and loſſes it has undergone, have in a great degree taken away the beautiful effect it certainly once had; and it now throws a kind of gloom over the curious obſerver's mind, mixed with a heart-felt regret for its fate.

There are a great many curious glazed paving-tiles in the chapel floor; with arms correſponding to the painted glaſs in the windows and on the cieling.

On one of theſe is an alphabet reverſed, Plate XLV. fig. 19; on another a croſs, fig. 21; and on a third a fleur de lis, fig. 22.

A ſeat remains under a canopy at the South-weſt corner of the chapel; ſuppoſed to be that of the ſub-prior.

The pews are in general of old oak, and tolerably decent. The pulpit is alſo of oak, curiouſly and neatly carved, with arch-work correſponding with the rails of the altar, which are faſt going to decay; ſee a ſlight memoriter ſketch of the rails, Pl. XLVI. fig. 5.

In the king's books Launde is placed amongſt "the livings not in charge."

In the time of ſir Talbot Clerke, the rev. Mr. Healey, the preſent vicar of Lodington, was the officiating miniſter at this chapel.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

In this chapel are two diſtinct vaults; in one of which are depoſited the body and family of Gregory lord Cromwell; for whom there is ſtill againſt the North wall within the altar-rails a mural monument; a pediment and entablature ſupported by Compoſite pilaſters; the pannels decorated with fruit, &c. (Plate XLV. fig. 26.) The ſpace between the pilaſters and dado is filled with the arms of the lord Cromwell, Quarterly; per feſs indented Azure, and Or, four lions paſſant counterchanged, ſupported by two flying horſes; over the ſhield a helmet and mantle, ornamented with a cap of maintenance; on which is the creſt, a pelican Or, with wings diſplayed, vulned Gules; and, in a label, FAIRE MON DEVOIR.

Under the arms is this inſcription:

"HERE . LYETH . THE . BODY . OF .
GREGORY . CRVMWEL . KNYGHT .
LORDE . CRVMWEL . WHO .
DEPARTED . THIS . LYFE . THE .
4 . DAYE . OF . IVLYE . IN . THE .
YEARE . OF . OVR . LORDE . GOD . 1551."

In the dado two boys hold a label, with lines drawn for an inſcription, all of which is gone; below is the word ESTRE only.

Above the arms, in the front of the tomb, is E. C. On the right hand pedeſtal, G. C. On the left, E. C.

Above the monument to the right-hand view ſtands a boy, holding in his left hand a ſhield of arms, three roſes in pale, ..., impaling three lions' heads . . . . .; in his right a cornucopia.

Another boy in the middle holds in his left hand a ſhield, on which are the arms of Cromwell, as on the monument; and in his right ſomething like a cat, with a gilt collar, which appears to ſit upon a ſkull. The boy on the left hand holds in his left hand a torch, and in his right a ſhield alſo of the arms of Cromwell.

Above the middle boy projects, ſome diſtance from the wall, an iron ſpike, on which hangs a large iron helmet, ſurmounted by a pelican vulning herſelf; and a ſmall penon falls alſo from the ſpike.

In the other vault are interred the family of Clerke; the laſt of whom was ſir Talbot Clerke, bart. but there is no monument for any of them.

Stones remaining in the floor.

Beginning in the ſemi-octagon (almoſt dark) room beforementioned, at the Weſt end.

1. Near the font is a blue ſtone, with two figures, a croſs, four ſhields of arms, and inſcription round the figures upon them, and illegible inſcriptions round the ledges.

2, and 3, white ſtones, collateral gures; but, the braſſes being all gone, nothing can be ſaid of them.

4. As you enter the nave from the above room is a large white ſtone, or alabaſter, with the traces of one of the priors of this houſe[1], in his habit; his hands joined, his head upon a taſſeled cuſhion, at each corner of which is a croſs croſſlet (ſee Plate XLVI. fig. 6).

The inſcription, as far as can be made out, is,

"Orate pro anima Hum. (or Will.) G . . .
. . . die menſis Octobris, anno Dñi milleſimo-quatuorcenteſimo octingeſimo ii°. . . . . cuius anime propitietur Deus. Amen."

5. At the foot of the laſt a blue ſtone, on which are traces of a figure in armour, with helmet, creſt, and mantle; a large croſs above his head, eight ſhields of arms, and illegible inſcription round the ledge, all deeply ſunk in the ſtone; but the braſſes torn off.

6. At the foot of the laſt is a very large black ſtone, 3 yards long, and 4 feet 6 inches broad; fig. 7. Moſt of the braſs remains; exhibiting a man in complete armour, his hands joined, his feet reſting on a lion, and his head on his helmet; a woman with her hands joined, and at her feet a ſpaniel, with a collar bezanty.

The words within hooks are now loſt; but the whole epitaph is here given from a copy taken in 1582[2]:

---

[1] The prior who died neareſt this time was Thomas Fryſſeby.

[2] Harl. MSS. 2134. fol. 233; deſumpta ex libro antiquo menbranis foliis ſcripto, menſe Martii 1582.

[" Hic jacet Thomas Chaworth[1] miles, filius et heres Willielmi Chaworth et Alicie uxoris ejus, filie et heredis Johannis Caltoft militis, et conſanguinee] et heredis Johannis Brett militis; videlicet, filie Katerine ſororis predicti Joannis Bret. Qui quidem Thomas obiit decimo die Februarii, anno d̄ni milleſimo cccclviii. Et hic ſimul jacet Iſabella uxor predicti Thome Chaworth. filia et una heredum Thome Ailesbury militis, filii et heredis Johannis Ailesbury militis, filii et heredis Thome Aylesbury et Johanne uxoris ejus, filie Radulphi d̄ni Baſſet de Weldon. Et predicta Iſabella eſt etiam filia Katherine nuper uxoris predicti Thome Ailesbury militis, filie et heredis Laurentii Pabenham mi[litis et Elizabethe uxoris ejus, unius filiarum et heredum Johannis domini d'Engayne. Que quidem Iſabella obiit viceſimo ſexto die Novembris, anno d̄ni milleſimo cccclviii. Quorum animabus] propitietur Deus. Amen."

Great part of the braſs round the ledge, containing this inſcription, remains; though the writing is ſcarcely legible; for, inſtead of the uſual method of cutting the letters out, as they are on the ſupplicatory ſcrolls and thoſe over the arms, the braſs which forms the letters is left plain and unengraved, and the vacant parts only ſlightly etched in ſmall points.

Of the nine coats of arms, and the ſcrolls originally over them, more than half are loſt; but, from thoſe which remain, with the aſſiſtance of Wyrley's MS. and Mr. Tailby's drawings, they may thus be blazoned:

1. Chaworth ⁊ Alfretū: Quarterly, 1 and 4, Barry of ten, Argent and Gules, three martlets Sable; 2. and 3. Azure, two chevrons Or. [Of theſe arms the firſt part remains; but the ſcroll is gone.]

2. Chaw. Alf. Ales Baſſet. Quarterly, 1. and 4. Chaworth; 2. Alfreton; impaling, Quarterly, 1. and 4. Azure, a croſs Argent, Aylesbury[2]; 2. and 3. Or, three pales Gules, within a bordure Argent bezanté, Baſſet of Weldon. [Theſe arms and ſcroll remain perfect.]

3. Chaworth ⁊ Brett. Azure, two chevrons Or; impaling, Gules, a feſs dancetté, between ten[3] billets Or; four in chief; three, two, and one, in baſe. [The arms and ſcroll are gone.]

4. Chaworth ⁊ Farandulf. Azure, two chevrons Or; impaling .... two lions paſſant .... Farandulf. [The arms and ſcroll are gone.]

5. Chaworth ⁊ Caltoft. Quarterly, 1. and 4. Chaworth; 2. and 3. Argent, an eſcocheon within an orle of cinquefoils Sable, Caltoft. [Theſe arms and ſcroll remain.]

6. Caltoft ⁊ Loundres. Caltoft; impaling, Argent, a lion rampant Azure, within a bordure Ermine, Loundres. [The arms and ſcroll are gone.]

7. Chaworth ⁊ Kaynes. Quarterly, Chaworth and Caltoft; impaling, Barry of ſix, Vaire and Gules, Kaynes. [Theſe arms remain; but the ſcroll is gone.]

8. Chaworth ⁊ Pabenham. Chaworth; impaling, Barry of ſix, Argent and Azure; on a bend Gules, three mullets Argent; Pabenham. [The arms are gone; but the ſcroll remains.]

9. Chaworth ⁊ Ingaine. Quarterly, Chaworth and Baſſet of Weldon; impaling, a feſs dancetté between ſix croſſes botonée Argent, Engaine. [The arms remain; but the ſcroll is gone.]

On the body of the ſtone are ſeveral ſlips of braſs with Jesu mercy upon them; though many of theſe, which were plentifully diſperſed over the ſurface of the ſtone, are torn off.

The original burial-ground[4], ſtill decently preſerved, and planted as an ornamental ſhrubbery, is occaſionally uſed for the interment of the tenants of the lordſhip and the domeſtics of the manor-houſe.

---

[1] In the Britiſh Muſeum (Harl. MSS. 2134.) is preſerved " Præclaræ Familiæ de Chaworth, antiquitùs à Cadurcis nuncupatæ Anglicas inter familias neutiquam poſtremæ, vera delineatio. Cujus primordia ſi inquirantur, ex Britanniâ Armoricanâ multis dehinc ſeculis repetenda ſunt. Sed qui ex illis cum Gulielmo primo rege Normannico Angliam ingreſſus eſt anno 1066, qualem reliquit poſteritatem, hinc cernere licet, &c. Labore & induſtriâ Will'mi Flower armigeri, aliàs Norroy regis armorum partium regni Angliæ borealium, & Roberti Glover, aliàs Somerſet' Heraldi armorum, ſub nominum ſuorum teſtimonio hìc in fronte propriis manibus ſubſcriptorum, anno Salutis à Chriſto MDLXXXI. Ipſorum Cadurcorum genealogia, qui primis temporibus barrulos minores argenteos rubeique coloris, cum merulis atris in clypei circuitu gerebant. [Plate XLV. fig. 1.] Deindè, ex merulis demptis aliquibus, poſteriorum inſignis ex tribus tantùm conſtabat. Poſtea verò, ductâ herede baronum ab Alfretoniâ, poſtpoſitis prioribus (prout retroactis ſæculis mos erat), illorum arma pro ſuis uſurpabant; ſcilicet, trabes tigna, ſive capitalia aurea duo in cœleſtino clypeo. Et, pro criſtâ, plumarum acervum ingens in ſummitate caſtelli argentei, ſupra galeam conſpicitur." P. 184. b.

" Loundres, barones & Ogmeriâ & Redweli à Londoniis cognominati, gerentibus inſignibus cœruleis leonem rapacem aureum fimbriâ herminea undeque cinctum. Arma quidem ab eiſdem quondam utebatur intraſcriptus Hamorus filius Roberti non multùm diſſimilia. [Fig. 2.]

" Alfreton, barones ab Alfretoniâ & Nortoniâ. In quorum inſignibus aſorii ſive cœleſtini coloris duo tigna ſive ſigna aurea, quæ ab Armoriſtis capitalia appellantur, cernuntur. Illas hodierni Cadurci, rejectis propriis armis, ex barulis minoribus & merulis confectis, uſque nunc pro ſuis gentilitiis oſtentare ſolebant." P. 194. b. [Fig. 3.]

" Stemma nobilum equitum quibus cognomen Caltoft, Lincolnienſis comitatûs. Qui, in clypeo majori argenteo, minorem quidem quinque foliorum floribus ſabulini ſive nigri coloris circumcinctis oſtentant. Galeæ verò, quæ ducali petaſo honorario tegitur, ſupereminet ejuſdem ſabulini coloris taurus deauratis cornubus." [Fig. 4.]—" Johannes de Caltoft obiit in partibus tranſmarinis die Mercurii proximâ poſt feſtum Sancti Johannis Baptiſte, anno 25 Edw. III. Et Alicia filia & heres ejus eſt ætatis octo annorum " Eſch. 27 Edw. III.—" Alicia filia & heres parentum nupta Will'o Chaworth militi." P. 196. b. 197.

" Equites nobiles cognominati Le Brette. Quorum armorum campus rubeus eſt billettis aureis ſeminatus, cum faſce ſive ſectione tortuoſâ acutâ aureâ. Tymbratur verò galea humano capite ad ſenectutem vergente." P. 197. b. [Fig. 5.]

" Barones de Drayton, quibus cognomen Baſſet. In quorum inſignibus gentilitiis auro coruſcantibus tres pilæ rubeæ concurrunt in cono, quartaque pars ſcuti dextralis tota eſt herminea. Galea coronâ redimita aureâ capite aprino cœruleo inſuper condecoratur. Tam ab ipſius nominis identitate, quàm armorum ſimilitudine, à baronibus de Welledon propagatos fuiſſe exiſtimabantur." P. 198. b. [Fig. 6.]

" Ayleſburiorum nobilium equitum ſtemma. Quorum ſunt inſignia crux plana argentea in cœleſtino ſive aſorio clypeo. Poſteriores hujus ſtirpis galeæ ſuprà addidère draconis caput aureum cum rubeis barrulis. Sed illud Baſſetorum inſigne de Welledon inſigne fuiſſe dignoſcitur." P. 201. [Fig. 7.]—Sir John Ayleſbury, of Middleton Kaynes, Bucks, died 10 Hen. IV.—Thomas Ayleſbury his ſon died 6 Hen. V; and Catharine his wife (daughter of ſir Laurence Pabenham, knt.) died 17 July, 14 Hen. VI.

" Kainorum familia antiquiſſima, ex baronatûs dignitate olim indè aliquibus collecta, multùm celeberrima. Pellis ſive ſubſultura varia cum barrulis tribus rubeis gentile & peculiare illis ſcutum fuit." P. 202. b. [Fig. 8.]

" Baſſettorum baronum à Welledon in comitatu Northamptoniæ ſucceſſiones genealogicæ; à quibus barones de Drayton ejuſdem cognominis olim defluxiſſe inauguramus, eadem penè cum eiſdem inſignia gerentes; videlicet, in aureo clypeo tres pali rubei à ſummo ad imum ſcuti perpendicularitèr ducti, cum fimbriâ ſive bordurâ aſoriâ talentatâ. Et in ſummitate galeæ draconis caput aureum, ſuperadditis tribus barulis rubeis, pro ornamento locatur. [Fig. 9.] Duo erant fratres, ſcil. Galfridus Ridell, & Ricardus Baſſet pater Radulphi Baſſet de Weldon. Obiit autem predictus Galfridus ſine exitu; & deſcendit hereditas ad dictum Ricardum fratrem ſuum, & indè ad Rad'um Baſſet." P. 264.

" Nobiles ingenui a Pabenham ſic genus ſuum ducunt; & generis inſignia habent; arma barrata argentei cœleſtinique coloris, cum bendâ rubeâ, tribus maculis ſive molettis ex argento perforatis valdè conſpicua." P. 207. b. [Fig. 10.]

" Engainorum nobiliſſimum baronum genus. In quorum armis rubeis crucibus cruciatis ſparsìm repletis trabs ſive faſcia tortuoſa acuta cernitur. Et ulteriùs auctiarii loco pro criſtâ è coronâ rubeâ plumarum deauratarum decentem apicem demonſtrârunt." P. 209. [Fig. 11.]

[2] Sir John de Ayleſbury died in 1409, ſeiſed of the advowſon of the priory of Laund. Eſch. 11 Hen. IV. Nº 9. Leic. And ſee under Thorpe Langton, vol. II. p. 669.

[3] Wyrley's MS. gives but ſix billets.

[4] " Two or three years ago were dug up, in a back-yard behind the chapel, two large ſtone coffins, cut out in proper form to admit the head and ſhoulders, with holes drilled or pierced through their bottoms. They were broken by the froſt of the winter of 1798." J. T.

LODINGTON,

or (as it is more frequently written) Loddington, is a ſmall village, ſituate on a gentle riſe, North of a ſmall ſtreamlet which riſes in the lordſhip, and quickly after joins the brook which divides the counties of Leiceſter and Rutland. It is bounded by Eaſt Norton, Tugby, Skeffington, Tilton, Laund, the Foreſt of Liefield and Belton in Rutlandſhire, and a very ſmall portion of Allexton; is about four miles North of Hallaton, 11 and a half from Harborough, and 14 from Leiceſter; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote.

In the reign of Edward the Confeſſor, Ludintone employed twelve ploughs, and was returned at five ſhillings; and at the time of the general ſurvey was worth twenty ſhillings, being then the property of Robert de Buci, who held twelve ploughlands under the king. One plough was employed in the demeſne; and five ſocmen, with three villans and three bordars, had a plough and a half. Gerard held a moiety of the land, and had one plough in demeſne; and four ſocmen and four villans, with four bordars, had two ploughs and a half. There were twenty acres of meadow; a wood half a mile long, and four furlongs broad; and a mill of ſixteen pence value[1].

The whole of this townſhip, as we have already ſeen under Laund, was, about the middle of the reign of king Stephen, beſtowed on that priory by Richard Baſſet and Maud Ridell his wife; and confirmed to them by king Henry the Second; and alſo by king Henry III. who gave to the prior and convent liberty of free-warren here[2].

In the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about the year 1240, Lodington is deſcribed as conſiſting of one ploughland.

In the Itinerary of 1280, Lodington, Allexton, Norton, and Laund, anſwered collectively as one vill.

In 1303, the prior of Laund held one quarter of a knight's fee in Lodington and Eaſt Norton of Robert de Tateſhale, deceaſed[3].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Lodington cum Laund was rated at 2*l.* 13*s.*; and, in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum, but an abatement was then made of 8*s.* 4*d.*

In 1564, there were 22 families in Lodington.

"On the diſſolution of the priory of Laund, this lordſhip became the property of Thomas lord Cromwell; whoſe grandſon Edward lord Cromwell[4], as I have heard, exchanged this manor and other lands with Charles Blount lord Mountjoy, earl of Devonſhire, and lord deputy of Ireland; who granted this manor to his natural ſon Mountjoy Blount, Baron Mountjoy of Mountjoy Fort in Ireland, and baron Mountjoy of Thurveſton in Derbyſhire, and now (1641) earl of Newport[5]."

In 1609, ſir Edward Blount, ſir William Godolphin, with Henry Berkley, Joſeph Earth, and John Wakeman, held the manor of Lodington, and the impropriation of the rectory, in capite.

In 1655, there was collected in Lodington, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 14*s.*

No freeholder is noticed here in the book of 1630.

From the family of Mountjoy this manor came by purchaſe into the poſſeſſion of ſir John Pretyman[6], of Driffield, co. Glouceſter (who had been knighted at Whitehall, previous to the coronation, July 23, 1603), and Mary his wife, daughter of ſir John Bourchier, of Bentley, in Yorkſhire, knight.

Sir John Pretyman, married, ſecondly, Elizabeth, daughter and ſole heir of George Turpin, eſq. of Knaptoft; by whom he had Mary, the firſt lady of Richard lord Willoughby de Broke[7]; and it was found by inquiſition that he died in 1638 ſeiſed of the manor and lands of Lodington, of the yearly value of £889[8].

Sir George Pretyman, of Lodington, knight, was created a baronet of Nova Scotia about 1633. He married a daughter of ſir Iſaac Sedley, bart. (who had before been the wife of ſir Charles Houghton, of Shelton in Norfolk). His brother William was owner of Driffield in 1655.

Sir John Pretyman, ſon and ſucceſſor to his father, had two ſons, by Margaret his wife; Robert, born 1654; Matthew, born 1656; and three daughters; of whom Elizabeth, the third, was married, firſt, to ſir Thomas Burton, of Stokerſton, bart. who died in 1659[9]; ſecondly, to ſir William Halford, of Welham, knight[10].

Sir John Pretyman, at the Reſtoration, was elected a repreſentative in parliament for the borough of Leiceſter; and, a double return[11] having been made, was confirmed member, by a reſolution of the Houſe of Commons, July 17, 1661[12]. A petition from him to the Houſe, Oct. 23, 1667, was referred to the Committee of privileges and elections[13].

Dec. 2, 1669, he complained to the Houſe of the arreſt of Robert Humes, his menial ſervant[14]; and, on a regular hearing, Dec. 4, it being ſtated, "that Mr. Humes had been theretofore a merchant, but had left off trade about five years; and that, in Auguſt 1669, he had been entertained as a ſervant to ſir John Pretyman at £12. a year wages, and was employed in recovering his rents;" he was diſcharged out of priſon. Dec. 4, 1669, a petition of dame Theodoſia Pretyman was alſo read, and referred to a Committee; and on the 7th the marſhal of the King's bench was directed to let the ſaid Lady have liberty, with a keeper, to attend the Committee[15].

March 21, 1669-70, two petitions againſt ſir John Pretyman were preſented to the Houſe, one from dame Theodoſia Pretyman, the other from Elizabeth Humes[16]; on which the Committee reported, "that the Houſe had been ill dealt with, by ſir John's protecting Humes as his menial ſervant, by concealing the truth of the caſe; and that Humes was releaſed out of priſon, from actions depending againſt him, by the miſcarriage of ſir John Pretyman, as his menial ſervant, when in truth he was not." And, after ſir John Pretyman had withdrawn, it was reſolved, that ſir John ſhould be ſuſpended his ſitting in the Houſe, and from all privileges as a member, till he ſhould produce Robert Humes; and that he ſhould receive from the Speaker that ſentence on his knees; but, on ſending for him to the Speaker's chamber, he was not to be found. On his petitioning the Houſe Nov. 11, he was ordered to attend on the 14th, when he received the ſentence on his knees; and on the 23d, the Houſe being ſatisfied that he had uſed his endeavours to find Humes, he was reſtored to his privileges[1].

---

[1] "Idem [Robertus de Buci] tenet de Rege 2 carucatas terre in Lodintone. Tempore Regis Edwardi erant ibi 12 carucæ. In dominico eſt una; & 5 ſochmanni, cum 3 villanis & 3 bordariis, habent 1 carucam & dimidiam. Ibi molinum de 16 denariis. De hâc terrâ tenet Gerardus medietatem; & ibi habet 1 carucam in dominico; & 3 ſochmanni & 4 villani, cum 4 bordariis, habent 2 carucas & dimidiam. Ibi 20 acræ prati. Silva dimidiæ leuvæ longitudinis, & 4 quarentenarum latitudinis. Valuit 5 ſolidos; modò 20 ſolidos." Domeſday, fol. 234. b. 1.

[2] Pat. 32 Hen. III.

[3] Eſch. 31 Edw. I. N° 30. Leic.

[4] Pat. 31 Hen. VIII.

[5] Burton, MS.

[6] Sir Richard Atkins, p. 405, notices an inſcription in the chancel of the old church at Driffield, ſince pulled down, for ſir John Pretyman, knight, lord of that manor, who died in 1638, and for his lady.

[7] See before, p. 12.

[8] Eſch. 13 Car. I.

[9] See vol. II. p. 823.

[10] Ibid. p. 863.

[11] By one indenture, John Grey, eſq. and ſir William Hartopp, knt. were returned; by the other, ſir William Hartopp, knt. and ſir John Pretyman. Journals of the Houſe of Commons, vol. VIII. p. 254.

[12] Ibid. p. 304.

[13] Ibid. vol. IX. p. 6.

[14] Ibid. p. 114.

[15] Ibid. p. 116, 117. 118.

[16] Ibid. pp. 144. 150. 155. 156.

By an act of parliament paſſed in 1670, the eſtates of ſir John Pretyman were veſted in trustees, to be ſold, for the payment of £19,864. a crown-debt; the reſidue to be paid into the hands of John Morris and Robert Clayton, both of London[2]; and, Feb. 20, 1670-1, ſir John complained to the Houſe, by petition, that ſir Edward Hungerford and Mr. Clayton had diſpoſed of his lands at an under value; which, on examination before a Committee, he could not prove[3].

April 14, 1675, a complaint being made in the Houſe of Commons, that ſir John Pretyman, a member of that houſe, was detained priſoner in the King's Bench, the marſhal was directed to bring him to the Houſe, with the cauſe of his detention[4]. He died in or about the year 1676.

Charles Morris, eſq. ſon of the before-mentioned John Morris (who was an upholſterer in London, and the purchaſer of the eſtate at Lodington) married, about 1670, Suſanna, ſecond daughter of ſir Edmund Bacon, of Redgrave, Suffolk.

Edmund Morris, eſq. was choſen to repreſent this county in parliament, with lord William Manners, in 1722; when the freeholders who polled from this pariſh were, Edmund Morris, eſq. Charles Morris, clerk, and Everard Fletcher.

Edmund Morris, eſq. ſon of the laſt, ſerved the office of high ſheriff for the county in 1746.

In 1775, we find in the liſt of freeholders only the names of the Rev. Samuel-Henry Healey, and Charles Morris, eſq. who, in 1779 was high-ſheriff for the county; and at one of the earlieſt meetings at the caſtle of Leiceſter, to take the ſenſe of the county reſpecting a navigation to Leiceſter, ſhewed himſelf a warm and powerful advocate in its favour, in a ſpeech received with great deference and applauſe.

He was univerſally eſteemed as a worthy, upright, impartial, and active magiſtrate for the county of Leiceſter, till a paralytic ſtroke (under which for ſome years he languiſhed) deprived the neighbourhood of his uſeful aſſiſtance in June 1798, at the age of 71.

Nor is his worthy lady, who ſurvives him, leſs eſteemed for her benevolence to the poor, her kind attention to the ſick and afflicted; for, joined to a goodneſs of heart and willingneſs in adminiſtering to the neceſſitous diſeaſed, Mrs. Morris poſſeſſes a ſkill in medicine ſuperior to many who make that art their profeſſion; and the many cures ſhe has gratuitouſly performed in this and the neighbouring villages, juſtly confer upon her a title far ſuperior to any faſhionable or family diſtinction—even that of the good Samaritan of Lodington and its vicinity.

The preſent lord of the manor is Campbell Morris, eſq. major in the Inniſkilling regiment of dragoons, and only ſon of the late worthy owner.

The number of houſes is 33; and of inhabitants about 133.

Lodington Hall is a handſome modernized houſe; and Mr. Throſby, who has given a view of it, ſays, "This place is ſeated low; but enriched with bold eminences, woods, and water, the former in almoſt every direction. It is ſheltered from the Northern winds by lofty trees. In the South, the grounds are large, diverſified with hill and dale, affording to fine cattle luxuriant paſturage. From the eminence on which I took the drawing, you look down upon the houſe at a conſiderable diſtance, over an extending ſheet of water formed like a canal. The building is plain, and not lofty; but, in the ſummer particularly, this abode muſt be deſirable; the tranſition from hill to valley, from valley to water, and from water to the ſhady groves and woods, is eaſy and pleaſurable."

Lodington is one of the fineſt lordſhips of old incloſure in the county; and contains about 2000 acres; and a famous wood called Reddiſh-wood.

In the North-eaſt corner of the lordſhip, in a field about a mile from the manſion-houſe (called The Conduit cloſe), is a remarkable building, conſiſting of a ſtone roof, which covers two wells, one a ſquare, and the other round; the water ſtands about two feet deep in each, and is remarkably clear and pure[5]. Hence the water was conveyed to the priory of Laund by leaden pipes, at the diſtance of a mile, through woodlands. It is ſituate about two miles from Houback or Houbank Hill in Tilton lordſhip, a place where there is ſuppoſed to have been a Roman ſtation[6]; ſeveral entrenchments being ſtill perfectly viſible to the South; and two ſmall entrenchments, about half a mile from it, upon hills facing the South, that command the country for many miles. Many coins alſo have been dug up here of the Roman emperors, ſeveral of which are now in the poſſeſſion of Mr. Morris.

A plantation, near the church, ſtands upon ſwampy ground, occaſioned by a ſpring which overflows. This ſpring has ſtrong petrifying powers; whatever falls therein, ſuch as moſs, graſs, ſprigs of trees, &c. are found petrified, lying in all directions in the trenches about this plantation. The water has been found uſeful for diſorders in the eyes.

The pariſh-clerk of Lodington is a female; but the duty is performed in part by her ſon, Thomas Friſby.

The Regiſter begins about 1650.

Robert Prettiman was buried anno 1654.

Matthew, the ſon of John and Margaret Prettyman, was buried 1656.

Baptiſms, 1672—1677, 20——1786—1790, 14.
Burials, ———————— 14——————————— 16.

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 48.

The CHURCH, (ſee Plate XLVII.)

which ſtands about 300 yards Weſt and South-weſt of the preſent remaining village (tradition ſays it once was in the middle of the town), is dedicated to St. Michael (but the wake or feaſt is kept the Sunday after St. Dennis); and conſiſts of a tower, in which are three bells; a nave, chancel, North and South aile, all covered with lead; a South porch; North doorway into the North aile; and South door-way into the chancel.

The ailes are each of them ſeparated from the nave by three pointed arches; over which are as many cleſtory windows.

At the Weſt end of the nave, adjoining the ſteeple, is a large pew of deal for the choir, raiſed upon four ſteps, and painted in front in imitation of mahogany.

The ſteeple was formerly ſeparated from the nave by a pointed arch, which is now ſtopped up, on which is painted "John Green, churchwarden 1789," (the time when the above pew was erected); above which are the Royal Arms.

In the nave are only two more pews; the reſt are old open ſeats.

Mr. Burton notices theſe arms at Lodington:

1. Azure, two chevrons Or, Chaworth[7]; impaling, Barry of ſix Vaire, Or and Azure, Kaynes.

2. Quarterly; 1. and 4. Azure, a croſs Argent, Ayleſbury; 2. and 3, Or, three pales Gules, a bordure Azure bezanty, Baſſ t of Weldon.

3. Quarterly; 1. Chaworth; 2. Ayleſbury; 3. Baſſet of Weldon; 4. Argent, an eſcocheon, and an orle of

---

[1] Journals of the Houſe of Commons, vol. IX. pp. 162, 163. 169.

[2] Ibid. pp. 155. 157.

[3] Ibid. pp. 205. 228.

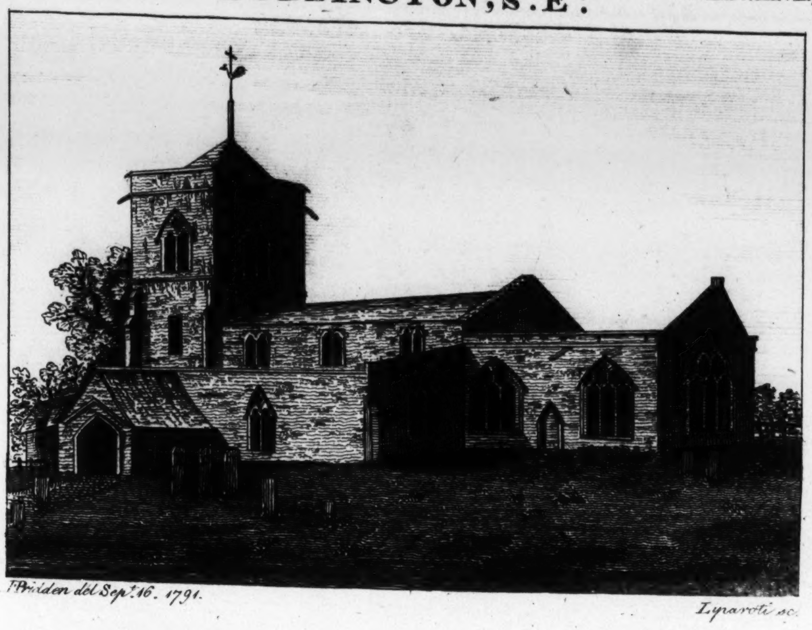
[4] Ibid. p. 316.

[5] "The conduit above-mentioned is now open; the walls, conſiſting of fine well-wrought ſquare ſtones, the mortar or cement being ſo very ſtrong, were with much difficulty taken down laſt winter, by order of the preſent owner C mpbell Morris, eſq. and the ſtone fetched to the park-walls for their reparation. Part of the old lead-pipes which conducted the water to Laund Abbey, have, at different times, been found in the woods when felling of timber; ſometimes paſſing over, and ſometimes under, the roots of the oaks." J. T.

[6] Of which, ſee p 333; and more fully hereafter, under Tilton.

[7] Theſe arms were originally thoſe of Alfreton; but were afterwards aſſumed by Chaworth; ſee p. 328.

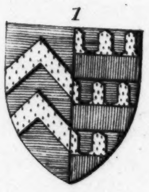
LODDINGTON, S.E.



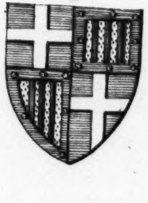
J. Pridden del. Sep^t. 16. 1791.

Liparoti sc.

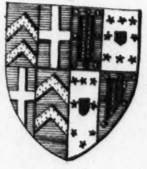
1



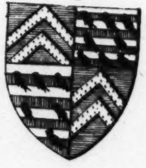
2



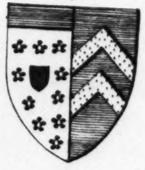
3



4



5



6

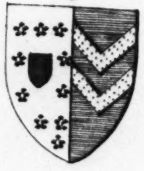


Fig. 8.

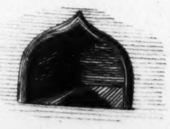

Fig. 10.

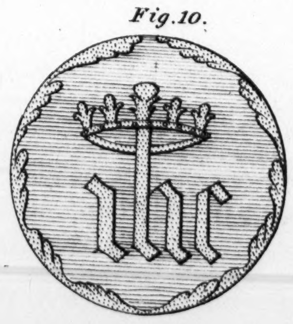

Fig. 7.

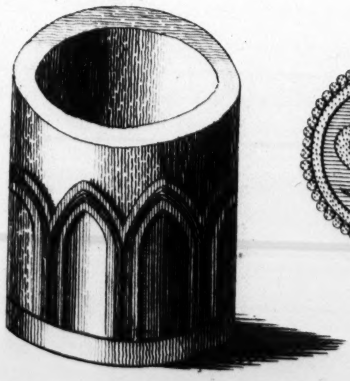

Fig. 11.

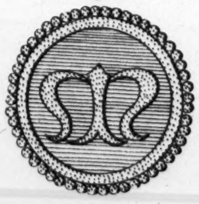

Fig. 9.

cinquefoils Sable; Caltoft.

4. Quarterly; Alfreton and Chaworth antient.

In the South window of the chancel neareſt the Eaſt end are theſe arms: Argent, an eſcocheon, between 10 cinquefoils in orle, pierced Sable, a chief Azure, Caltoft; impaling, Azure, two chevrons Or, Chaworth. The ſame coat repeated, except the chief being wanting, and the chevrons reverſed (fig. 5, 6.) This probably happened through the ignorance of ſome glazier who was employed to repair this window; yet this conjecture we cannot entirely reconcile with the preſent appearance of the coat. Below, in the middle compartment of the ſame window, is a mitred head, with a croſier, the features quite decayed by time; it is ſurrounded by a great number of cyphers, ſuch as fig. 9. ſimilar to ſeveral in the windows of Laund chapel; and in the other two compartments are many more of the ſame form.

The very uppermoſt pane of the middle compartment of the Eaſt window has ihc, within a wreath of leaves, crowned (fig. 10.); and juſt below is the cypher (M) (fig. 11.) with ſome other cyphers, which cannot diſtinctly be made out.

The font, placed againſt the Weſternmoſt pillar between the nave and South aile, is antient, low, and circular, with a capacious baſon, and ornamented with arch-work (ſee fig. 7.)

The chancel is ſeparated from the nave by an old Gothic wooden ſkreen; on one of the pannels is the following bequeſt: "Richard Oliver, of Norton, gent. did in his laſt will give ten pounds to this church and poor; the increaſe thereof to be diſtributed by the pious care of the miniſter and churchwarden and other honeſt men; 1721." On another, is "Καὶ πρὸς ταῦτα τίς ἱκανός. 1721."

On the other pannels are ſuitable texts of Scripture.

There are the remains of a ſmall piſcina with a pointed arch on the South ſide of the altar (fig. 8.); and a ſquare locker on the North ſide.

It appears by the largeneſs of the body of the church and chancel, as well as by the tradition before noticed, that the village has been conſiderably larger than at preſent; and, to make more room, there now remains a ſtone ſeat in the wall, running all the way from the Eaſt end of the South aile to the door which enters the aile from the porch; and the ſame in the wall of the North aile, from the Eaſt end thereof to the North entrance door from the church-yard.

In the Matriculus of 1220[1], Lodington is deſcribed to be under the patronage of the prior of Laund, who held the ſame in proprios uſus.

In 1344, the procurations were, 7*s.* 6½*d.*; the rectory was taxed at ten marks, and paid 2*s.* for Peter-pence.

Lodington is not noticed in the roll of 1534-5; and in 1564 it is ſtyled a curacy only.

In 1641, Mr. Burton ſays, "This church is not preſentative; the curate and ſtipend being appointed and allowed by the Earl of Newport[2]."

"Nov. 21°, 1646. By virtue of an order of both houſes of parliament of the ſecond of May laſt, it is ordered that the yearly ſum of fifty pounds be paid out of the profits of the impropriate rectory of Lodington, in the county of Leiceſter, ſequeſtered from the earl of Newport, delinquent, to and for maintenance of ſuch miniſter as this committee ſhall approve of, to officiate the cure of the pariſh-church of Lodington aforeſaid, the vicarage whereof is worth but £60. per annum; and the ſequeſtrators of the premiſſes are required to pay the ſame accordingly, at ſuch times and ſeaſons of the year as the ſaid profits are due and payable[3]."

In 1650, the incumbent was returned as "no preacher."

In the king's books, it is deſcribed as "a curacy, not in charge;" and the clear yearly value £70.

The epiſcopal procurations are, 1*s.* 8*d.*; and a penſion of 2*s.* is payable to the biſhop of Lincoln at Michaelmas.

VICARS.	PATRONS.
Reginald chaplain of Lawton, 1235.	Prior and Convent of Laund.
John de Lodenton, 1237.
William de Normanton, 1244.
Richard de Bulm', 1273.
Edmund Waſhinton, curate from 1554 to 1624.
The vicar (name unknown) was ſequeſtered 1643.
John Hall, inducted 1657.	Sir John Pretyman, bart.
William Wade, Sept. 25, 1667.
Nathanael Barry, Nov. 15, 1669—1702.
James Morris, June 6, 1702.	Edmund Morris, eſq.
William Penſon, Jan. 31, 1707—1742.
Nathanael North, Oct. 8, 1742; died 1745.
John Smith, June 7, 1745.
Samuel-Henry Healey, B.A. Jan. 8, 1756; the preſent rector.	Edmund Morris, eſq.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

In the chancel is a vault for the family of Morris; but no ſepulchral inſcription for any of them.

On two ſmall ſtones in the floor;

"Welch Frazier[4] died July the 3d, 1750."

"George Price[4] died January the 11th, 1723-4."

On flat ſtones in the nave:

1. "Nathaniel Barry,
hujus eccleſiæ parochialis vicarius ann. 33;
Exutus morte Aprilis 27,
ætatis ſuæ 72, et Salutis 1702."

2. "Hic jacet Reverend^{s} Dom^{s} Guliel. Penſon, ob. 27 Septemb. anno Dñi 1742, ætatis 51.
Anima ſemper vivit."

3. "Here lie the remains of Mrs. Anne Penſon, relict of the Reverend Mr. William Penſon, who departed this life Feb. 18, 1770, aged 75 years."

In the North aile:

1. "Sacred to the remains of the Rev. Mr. Nathaniel North, who died March 20, 1745, aged 28."

2. "In memory of Charles North,
ſon of Nathanael North and Jane his wife, who died Aug. 30, 1745, aged 5 months.
Alſo of Jane, relict of Nathanael North, who died Nov. 26, 1794, aged 84."

3. "In memory of Everard King, who departed this life May 12, 1766, aged 69 years.
In memory of Jane, the wife of Everard King, who died June 24, 1774, ætatis 79."

4. "Here lieth the body of Everard Fletcher, who departed this life Oct. 20, 1757,
in the 93d year of his age."

---

[1] See the Introductory Volume, p. lix.

[2] MS. Burton, 1641.

[3] From the original minute-books of the Committee of Sequeſtrators, preſerved in the Bodleian Library.

[4] Both Frazier and Price were ſervants in Mr. Morris's family.

5. "Here alſo lieth the body of Elizabeth,
the wife of Everard Fletcher,
who departed this life Sept. 18, 1710,
in the 55th year of her age."

There are many other inſcriptions in the nave, but not now legible:

On a flat ſtone in the North aile:

"Sacred to the memory of Thomas Bloor[1], ſurgeon;
obiit June 28, 1783, aged 33."

In the upper part of the North-eaſt angle, between the South aile and nave, is a black ſtone inſcribed in letters of gold:

"In the hope of a joyful reſurrection, reſts here the body of ELIZABETH, relict of JOHN LE'STER[2], who departed this life
March 13, 1792, aged 83.
Alſo the body of
HANNAH, wife of JOHN EXTON, eldeſt daughter of
JOHN and ELIZABETH LE'STER, who departed this life
July 8, 1776,
in the 37th year of her age."

On a flat white ſtone below, in the floor, the letters "E. L." only, initials of the above Elizabeth Leſter.

In the church-yard:

{Richard Burbidge died March 7, 1745, aged 76.
{Sarah, wife of Richard Burbidge, died April 1, 1758, aged 82.
{Thomas Burbidge died July 31, 1786, aged 82.
{Mary Burbidge died Nov. 7, 1789, aged 77.
{James Brown died June 25, 1763, aged 67.
{Alice Brown died Nov. 5, 1766, aged 82.
Thomas Reeve died June 9, 1784, aged 72.
John Reeve died Dec. 26, 1762, aged 52.
{Robert Green died May 22, 1771, aged 65.
{Elizabeth Green died Nov. 4, 1779, aged 68.
Elizabeth, wife of Matthew Green, died Feb. 16, 1786, aged 28.
John Gibbons died Dec. 6, 1775, aged 64.
{Thomas Hill died Aug. 15, 1770, aged 75.
{Suſanna Hill died March 8, 1780, aged 81.
George Jenkinſon died Dec. 21, 1766, aged 75.

WHADBOROUGH,

in antient writings called Wetberge, Whatberg, Whatbergh, and Whatburrough, is a hamlet, conſiſting of about 500 acres, on the Eaſt ſide of Leiceſterſhire, near Rutland. It is bounded by Owſton, Withcote, Laund, Tilton, and Halſtead; and is partly in the pariſh of Lodington, but principally in that of Tilton. The lordſhip pays to the church and poor at Tilton; but does its own highway duty. It contains only three houſes liable to the tax upon windows.

Wetberge contains three ploughlands, which, in the Confeſſor's time, were valued at ten ſhillings, and at the ſurvey were worth forty ſhillings. They were then held by the king. Half a plough was employed in the royal demeſne; and three villans, with one ſocman and 11 bordars, had four ploughs. Here was a meadow one furlong ſquare; and a wood five furlongs long, and three wide. To Wetberge belongs one ploughland and a half in Burgh[3]; and there is one plough, with one villan[4].

In 1461, Everard Digby, attainted of high treaſon, was ſeiſed of one toft and two virgates of land in Whatborough[5].

"This manor did antiently belong to the priory of Alberbury, co. Salop, which was belonging to the monaſtery of Grandimont[6] in Normandy, as appeareth by an old roll of the aſſeſſment of the knights fees for the making prince Edward, the king's eldeſt ſon, a knight, made 20 Edward III. in theſe words; viz. 'Prior Grandimontis de Alberbury pro dimidio feodi in Whatbergh, de honore Huntingdon', xx s̄.;' which priory of Alberbury was founded (as is to be ſeen by the Regiſter[7] of the houſe, and by Leland), by Guarine de Stetz, in the time of king Henry I. (from whom lineally deſcended the barons Fitzwarine), and was ſuppreſſed amongſt the Priories Aliens by king Henry V; all the which members, granges, manors, lands, tenements, and other hereditaments, with the appurtenances thereunto belonging, together with this manor of Whadborough, was granted by king Henry VI. to that fair and goodly college of All Souls in Oxford, built by Henry Chichley, archbiſhop of Canterbury, in 1437, 16 Henry VI; which king Henry VI. gave alſo to the ſaid college three other priories aliens; viz. the priory of Rumney in Kent; the priory of Wedon Pinkeney in Northamptonſhire; and the priory of Llan Guenith in South Wales. This manor of Whadburrough did entirely belong to this college by the ſpace of 100 years; in which time the prior and convent of Laund near adjoining to the manor (as I am informed by . . . . a gentleman of the ſame college) became tenants thereof; yielding and paying a yearly rent unto the college, by deeds yet extant amongſt their evidences, until the reign of king Henry VIII; when as the prior of Laund, with certain of his convent, being attainted of treaſon, the priory of Laund, with all the manors, lands, and tenements thereto belonging, and all their goods and chattels, were forfeited to the king; who paſſed the ſame to Thomas lord Cromwell, and the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten; in which conveyance (whether by error or covin) this manor of Whatburrough was granted, not as a chattel, but as part of the demeſne of the priory of Laund; by occaſion whereof the ſaid lord Cromwell and his heirs detained the ſaid manor from the college for many years, until about the ſixth year of the reign of king James, by compoſition betwixt the college and the lord Cromwell, confirmed by act of parliament, the college was reſtored to a part thereof, called Whatburrough Cloſe, the college relinquiſhing and releaſing their right and title to another part next abutting upon Laund, called New Incloſure, late in the poſſeſſion of the heirs of ſir William-Smith, knight, deceaſed, purchaſer thereof from the lord Cromwell; a third part was granted to William Nicols, brother and heir of ſir Auguſtine Nicols, knight, who was impleaded by the College for the ſame, but recovered a verdict; when it was found (as I have heard) to be of the manor of Halſted, and not of Whatburrough. This manor is in the pariſh of Tilton; and had a chapel within it[1]."

---

[1] Killed, by a fall from his horſe, near Belton in Rutland.

[2] Mother of Hannah, wife of John Exton, and of the preſent Mrs. Morris, relict of Charles Morris, eſq.

[3] This probably is the Burgneſs, or Burgſeit, noticed in p. 233.

[4] "In Wetberge ſunt 3 carucatæ terræ. In dominico eſt dimidia carucæ; & 3 villani, cum 1 ſochmanno & 11 bordariis, habent 4 carucas. Pratum una quarentena longitudinis, & 3 quarentenarum latitudinis. Valuit 10 ſolidos; modò 20 ſolidos. Ad Wetbergam pertinet 1 carucata terræ & dimidia in Burgo; & ibi eſt 1 caruca cum 1 villano." Domeſday, fol. 230. b. col. 1. [illegible]

[5] Eſch. 1 Edw. IV. N° 7. Leic.

[6] The abbey of Grandimont, ſituate in the Haute Marche, in the province of Limoiſin, and dioceſe of Limoges, in Normandy, is the chief or head abbey of an order of that name. This order, which varied ſomewhat from that of St. Benedict, was inſtituted about 1076 by St. Stephen de Thiern, or Tiers, a gentleman of Auvergne, ſurnamed de Maret, becauſe it was on a mountain of that name that he firſt ſettled this convent, which after his death was tranſlated to Grandimont by his monks. This order was governed by priors till 1318, when William Belliceri was appointed abbot. The priory of Alberbury was their principal cell in England. Alien Priories, vol. II. p. 96; Dugdale, Monaſticon, vol. I. p. 606.

[7] Regiſt. Monaſt. de Alberbury; Leland, Collectanea, vol. I. p. 261; in vitâ Fulconis filii Guarini.

In Trinity Term, 1586, we find the following record in the Court of Exchequer:

"Termino Sc̄e Trin', anno xxviii regine Elizab', Sab̄b̄i, xi° die Junii.

Between All Souls college, Oxford, plaintiffs, and Henry lord Cromwell, defendant.

Leic'. Foraſmuch as, upon the deliberate hearing of the matter in queſtion between the ſaid parties the laſt Eaſter term, touching and concerning the tithe of the manor of Whadborough, alias Whatburge, in the county of Leiceſter, it plainly appeared, by very good evidence ſhewed forth, and witneſſes examined on the behalf of the ſaid plaintiffs, that they are ſeiſed, in the right of the ſaid College, of and in lands and tenths in Whadborough, by the name of The Manor of Whadborough; and that the ſame, or a great part thereof, doth lie in a cloſe now called Whadborough Paſture, and in the tenure of the ſaid defendant, or his aſſigns. And, foraſmuch alſo as the ſaid defendant affirmed the ſaid cloſe to be parcel of the poſſeſſions of the late monaſtery of Laund; and that, if the ſaid plaintiffs had any lands in Whadborough, the ſame did lie without the ſaid cloſe; and ſhewed ſome evidence, to prove where ſome lands, ſometime belonging to thoſe from whom the College claimeth, do lie without the ſaid cloſe, and did abut and bound the ſame, which meres and boundaries are unto the ſaid plaintiffs unknown; ſo that there is as yet ſome uncertainty where all the demeſne lands in Whadborough belonging to the ſaid College do lie; which this Court hath thought good to reduce to ſome better certainty, before they take a final order in the ſame: It is therefore this preſent day ordered, that a commiſſion ſhall be awarded unto ſir John Harrington, knight, Thomas Aſhby, eſq. John Chippendale, doctor of the civil law, and Roger Smith, eſq. authorizing them, four, three, or two of them, thereby to meet and aſſemble together, the 15th day of Auguſt next, at the ſaid cloſe or paſture called Whadborough, or in any other place to their diſcretions convenient, and there to call before them twelve ſubſtantial, honeſt, and indifferent men, ſuch as ſhall be dwelling near Whadborough aforeſaid, and moſt like to know the ſame; and by their oaths, as alſo by view, perambulation, examination of witneſſes, or otherwiſe, as by their diſcretions ſhall be thought convenient, to enquire of and upon the articles unto the ſaid commiſſion annexed, and upon every part thereof; and alſo ſhall truly plott and ſet down the cloſe called Whadborough, and to what lands it adjoineth on every part, and all the boundaries, meres, and places mentioned in the ſaid articles, and where and how far and to what places the ſame meres and boundaries do extend, and how far they and every of them are diſtant from the ſaid cloſe; and farther to enquire of ſuch other circumſtance as be requiſite for ſearching forth the truth of the premiſſes; and what ſhall be proved touching the premiſſes the ſaid commiſſioners to certify into this Court, as well under their hands and ſeals, as under the hands and ſeals of the ſaid twelve men, in eight days of Michaelmas next. And it is likewiſe ordered, that the warden and fellows of the ſaid College, their attorneys or ſolicitors, and every or any of them, and every other perſon or perſons for the ſaid College, may, at all times hereafter, till the return of the ſaid commiſſion, enter into and come upon the ſaid cloſe called Whadborough Paſture, and every part and parcel thereof, and into and upon all other the lands and grounds, where any of the ſaid meres, boundaries, or places mentioned in the ſaid articles be; and there to do any act, thing, or things, whereby they may the better ſeek and find out the lands in queſtion, or any the meres and boundaries in the articles mentioned, without hurting any cattle there, or any hurtful breaking the incloſures."

The following articles[2] relative to this hamlet were communicated by the Rev. E. Williams, of Eaton near Shrewſbury, and fellow of All Souls College:

1. Henricus rex Anglie, dux Normannie & Aquitanie, & comes Andegavie, epiſcopo Lincolnienſi, & juſtitiariis, & vicecomitibus, & miniſtris & omnibus fidelibus ſuis de Legreceſtreſcire, ſalutem. Sciatis me dediſſe & conceſſiſſe Fulconi filio Guarini, & heredibus ſuis, ad tenendum de me & heredibus meis, Watebergam, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, que ſolebat reddere per annum regi Henrico avo meo x lī. Quare volo & precipio, quòd ea teneat per ſervicium corporis ſui, ipſe & heredes ſui, &c. tenend' de me & de heredibus meis, in feodo & hereditate, benè & in pace, & liberè, & quietè, & honorificè. Teſtibus, T. Canc', & Ric̄o de Hum' Coneſt', & Joh̄e de Baillioliâ. Apud Doveram, in tranſitu regis.

2. Omnibus ſancte matris eccleſie fidelibus ad quos preſens ſcriptum pervenerit, Fulco filius Warini ſalutem in Dño. Noverit univerſitas veſtra me, pro ſalute anime mee, & Matilde uxoris mee, & Fulconis patris mei, & Hawiſie matris mee, & omnium anteceſſorum & ſucceſſorum meorum, fundâſſe & conſtruxiſſe, in honorem Dei & glorioſe Virginis Marie, domum quandam fratrum Grandimontenſis[3] ordinis in territorio de Albeſbur' ſuper Sabrinam; quibus fratribus ibidem Deo ſervituris dedi & conceſſi, & hâc preſenti cartâ meâ confirmavi, de aſſenſu Fulconis filii & heredis mei, locum, cum pertinentiis, ubi domus predicta ſita eſt, &c. &c. &c. [granting them various lands in Shropſhire]. Dedi preterea & conceſſi fratribus dicti loci totum dominicum meum & totam terram de Wateb̃ge in com' Leiceſtr', cum omnibus pertinentiis ad ipſum dominicum & terram quolibet modo pertinentibus, abſque ullo impedimento mei, vel retenemento mei vel ſucceſſorum meorum, &c. in puram & perpetuam eleemoſinam, &c. Et, ut hec mea donatio & eleemoſina futuris temporibus rata & inconcuſſa permaneat, ſigilli mei appoſitione preſentem cartam confirmavi & etiam roboravi. Hiis teſtibus; Wiłło filio Warini, Henrico de Traci, Rađo de Hodenet, W° capellano de Draton, Aldulpho de Braci, Mattheo Morelli, Hugone de Hoe, Rog̃o de Preſtone, Rađo clerico, & multis aliis.

3. Fulco filius Guarini omnibus hominibus ſuis Francis & Anglis, ſalutem. Sciatis me conceſſiſſe & dediſſe eccleſie Sancti Johannis Baptiſte de Landâ, & canonicis ibidem Deo ſervientibus & ſervituris, in perpetuam eleemoſinam, Burgneſs[4], & terram arabilem in circuitu, ſicut excoli & claudi ſepe ſolebat; inſuper communiam paſture pro omnibus averiis & beſtiis ſuis de Landâ in omnibus terris meis de Whatb̃ge, & in omnibus warectis & aſſartis meis ibidem, poſt blada & fena aſportata; aſſenſu & conſilio uxoris mee Eve, & Fulconis filii & heredis mei, pro ſalute đni mei regis Henrici & heredum ſuorum, & pro animabus anteceſſorum ſuorum, & pro ſalute meâ & carorum meorum, & pro animabus anteceſſorum meorum; &, ſervatoriâ in terrâ meâ firmatâ exceptâ, ſuperiori predicte eccleſie concedo & confirmo. Quare volo & firmitèr precipio, ut prefata eccleſia hanc predictam eleemoſinam liberè & quietè teneat, excepto omni ſeculari ſervicio. Teſtibus; Odone abbate de Oſelveſton, & canonicis ſuis Rogero & Edwardo; & G. preſbytero de Wicot; & Anſchetillo capellano, & đnâ Evâ, & Fulcone, & Radulpho, & Alano, filiis ejus; & Joh̄e de Graiâ, & Gualtero fratre ſuo; Gulielmo de Conſtantino; & multis aliis.

4. Omnibus Chriſti fidelibus hoc preſens ſcriptum viſuris vel audituris, Fulco filius Warini militis, & đnus de Wateberew, ſalutem in Dño ſempiternam. Noverit univerſitas veſtra me dediſſe & conceſſiſſe, & hâc preſenti cartâ meâ confirmâſſe, Wiłło Firney, heredibus & aſſignatis ſuis, illam libertatem ſuccedendi & cariandi boſcum & ſubboſcum, cujuſcunque generis fuerit, ubicunque, quandocunque, & quotieſcunque vo-

---

[1] Burton, MS.

[2] Ex autographis in cartophylacio Collegii Omnium Animarum Oxon.

[3] A priory in France; to which that of Alberbury in Shropſhire was a cell.

[4] This name, in other deeds called Burgſeit, is certainly deſcriptive of the ſpot now called Houtback Hill; ſee p. 330.

luerint, ſecundùm conſuetudinem manerii de Wateberew predicti ab antiquo per anteceſſores meos conceſſ' omnibus tenentibus tam liberis quàm aliis. Ac etiam litetereà dedi, conceſſi, & confirmavi, prefato Wiłło, heredibus & aſſignatis ſuis, annualem paſturam iv magnorum animalium in meis propriis paſturis manerii de Wateberew predict'; habend' & tenend' predictas libertates ſuccedendi & cariandi boſcum & ſubboſcum, cujuſcunque generis fuerit, ubicunque, quandocunque, & quotieſcunque voluerint, & annuatim predictam paſturam iv magnorum animalium, ut predictum eſt, prefato Wiłło, heredibus & aſſignatis ſuis. Et ego verò predictus Fulco, & heredes vel aſſignati mei, predictas libertates ſuccedendi & cariandi boſcum & ſubboſcum, cujuſcunque generis fuerit, ubicunque, quandocunque, & quotieſcunque voluerint, ut predictum eſt, & annualem predictam paſturam iv magnorum animalium in meis paſturis manerii mei de Wateberew, ut predictum eſt, prefato Wiłło, heredibus & aſſignatis ſuis, contra omnes homines & feminas warantizabimus, & in perpetuum defendemus. Et, ut hec mea donatio, conceſſio, & preſentis carte mee confirmatio rata & inconcuſſa permaneat, eam ſigilli mei munimine roboravi. Hiis teſtibus; đno Joħe Diggebi de Tilton milite, đno Edwardo abbate de Oſolveſton, Ric̄o vicario de eâdem, Ric̄o clerico de Whateberew predictâ, Joħe le Mar' de eâdem, Wiłło le May de Halſted, Rog̃o Bacun de Wythecot, & multis aliis.

5. Eva uxor Fulconis filii Warini dilecto filio noſtro, & omnibus amicis ſuis & hominibus ſuis tam futuris quàm preſentibus, & omnibus filiis ſancte eccleſie, ſalutem. Sciatis me dediſſe & conceſſiſſe Deo & Sc̄o Nicholao [1] de Watebr', & Sc̄o Johanni Baptiſte de Landâ, & canonicis ibidem Deo ſervientibus, unam manſuram in Wateb' juxta capellam à parte Orientali, duas perticas habentem in longitudine, & i perticam & dimidiam in latitudine, in perpetuam eleemoſinam, liberam & quietam ab omni ſeculari ſervicio, pro animabus patris & matris mee, & ſponſi mei Fulconis, & anteceſſorum meorum & amicorum. Inſuper concedo predictis canonicis communem paſturam propriis beſtiis ſuis, idem de dominico ſuo, & ſabulum in boſco meo ad neceſſaria domûs ſue. Unde precor, quatenùs pro Dei amore & omnium noſtrorum ſalute, donationem ratam habeatis & manuteneatis, nec in aliquo vexari permittatis. Teſte preſenti cartâ & ſigilli mei impoſitione, & teſtibus ſubſcriptis; Rađo filio Fulconis, & Alano & Ric̄o Clerico & Wiłło fratribus ejus, Rob̄to preſbytero, Rob̄to perſonâ de Skeftington, Hamelino nepote prioris, Rob̄to Torel, Wiłło Diſpenſario, & aliis multis; [in a different hand] videlicet, Ceciliâ ſponſâ Euſtachii, Edelinâ, Emmâ, Adâ, Mariâ, Gunkarâ, & aliis.

6. Sciant preſentes & futuri, quòd ego Fulco, filius Fulconis filii Warini, concedo, & hâc cartâ meâ confirmo, eccleſie Sancti Johannis Baptiſte de Landâ, & canonicis ibidem Deo ſervientibus, donationem patris mei de Burgſeit, ſicut carta ipſius teſtatur; & donationem matris mee ante curiam eccleſie; & inſuper dedi, pro animâ meâ, v perticatas in latum infra boſcum meum à boſco canonicorum uſque ad quareram, & abindè ſicut rivulus currit in Holebroc [2], & ipſam quareram, & mortuum boſcum de boſco meo, & ſabulum ad omnia neceſſaria ſua; & toſtum in Whatb̄ge quod fuit Henrici Citharede; & ab Orientali parte capelle de Wateb̄ge, & in dominico, communem paſturam. Quare volo & firmiter precipio, quatenùs predicti canonici hanc donationem meam liberè & quietè ab omni ſeculari ſervicio & exactione in liberam & puram & perpetuam eleemoſinam teneant. Conceſſionem illam conſenſu & conceſſione Fulconis filii noſtri feci, pro ſalute meâ & omnium anteceſſorum deſunctorum. Hiis teſtibus; Fulcone filio meo, abbate de Oſolveſton, Alano & Ricardo Warin fratribus noſtris, Ham' de Lus̄nâ, Gerardo de Gruneſt', Roberto capellano, Hamelin janitore, Bretun' & Ric' fil' Scolin, & multis aliis.

7. Fulco filius Fulconis filii Guarini omnibus hominibus ſuis Francis & Anglis, & omnibus ſc̄e matris eccleſie fidelibus, ſalutem. Sciatis me dediſſe & conceſſiſſe, & hâc meâ cartâ confirmâſſe, eccleſie Sc̄i Joħis Baptiſte de Landâ, & canonicis ibidem Deo ſervientibus, donationem patris mei de Burgſeit, ſicut carta patris mei teſtatur, & donationem matris mee, in curiâ eccleſie; & inſuper addidi, de dono meo, v perticatas in latum infra boſcum meum à boſco canonicorum uſque ad quareram, & abindè ſicut rivulus currit in Holebroc, & quareram; aſſenſu & conſilio & petitione mee & amicorum meorum, pro ſalute meâ & carorum meorum, & animabus anteceſſorum meorum. Quare volo & precipio, quatenùs predicti canonici preſcriptam donationem liberè & quietè ab omni ſeculari ſervicio, in perpetuam eleemoſinam teneant. Teſtibus; abbate de Oſolveſton, Roberto capellano de Wateberuge, Alano filio Fulconis filii Warini, Roberto nepote abbatis de Oſolveſton, Edwardo Armigero, Fulcone & Hugone de Cnoſton, Willielmo de Landâ, Norand' fratre ſuo, Bretun' & Ric' fil' Scolin.

8. Henricus, Dei gratiâ, rex Anglie, dominus Hibernie, dux Normannie & Aquitanie, & comes Andegavie, archiepiſcopis, epiſcopis, &c. ſalutem. Sciatis nos, intuitu Dei, & pro ſalute anime noſtre, & animarum anteceſſorum & heredum noſtrorum, conceſſiſſe, & hâc cartâ noſtrâ confirmâſſe, pro nobis & heredibus noſtris, fratribus Grandiſmontis ordinis de Alberburi ſuper Sabrinam, locum illum ubi fundata eſt domus eorum apud Alberbury, quem habent de dono Fulconis filii Warini, &c. [confirming the grant of lands in Shropſhire]; & totam terram de Wateberg, cum molendino, & boſco, & aliis pertinentiis ſuis; que omnia predicti fratres habent de dono & conceſſione dicti Fulconis filii Warini. Quare volumus, &c. quòd predicti fratres habeant & teneant omnia predicta, ſicut predictum eſt, & ſicut carta predicti Fulconis quam indè habent rationabilitèr teſtatur. Hiis teſtibus; R. Mareſcallo com' Pemb', S. de Segrave juſtitiario ñro, Walt̄o de Lucy, Wiłło de Stutevill, Walt̄o de Clifford, Wiłło de Cantilupo ſeniore, Thomâ Corbeth, Godfrido de Craucumbe, Petro de Malo-lacu, & aliis. Dat', per manus venerabilis patris Rađi Cyceſtr' epiſcopi, cancellarii noſtri, apud Hereford, xii° die Dec', anno regni noſtri xvii° [3].

9. Hec eſt conventio facta die Hokeday, anno regni regis Henrici filii regis Johannis 31°, inter Ricardum de Albomonaſterio, rectorem eccleſie de Cuike, Linc' diœceſeos, perpetuum firmarium manerii de Whatberg, cum pertin', de conſenſu & aſſenſu fratris Petri London', tunc cuſtodis domûs de Alberbury ordinis Grandimontenſis, & fratrum ejuſdem loci, ex primâ parte, & priorem & conventum de Landâ ex alterâ; videlt, quòd predictus perpetuus firmarius conceſſit priori & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, & eccleſie ſue in perpetuum, totam terram illam, cum libero ingreſſu & egreſſu ſuis, in territorio de Whatberg, que jacet inter diviſas de Halſtede & de Landâ, ſicut ſe extendit à rivulo qui currit de morâ prioris uſque in ſtagnum Salveie, & ab illo rivulo uſque ad Redegate, & ab Redegate uſque ad ſiketum qui deſcendit uſque ad quareram, & ſic in Holbroke, & ſic ab iſtis diviſis per dictam totam terram versùs Landam & boſcum prioris predicti & predictas diviſas; habend' & tenend' predicto priori & ſucceſſoribus ſuis de Landâ in perpetuum; ſalvâ dicto Ricardo communiâ paſture in predictâ terrâ poſt bladum & fenum aſportata, preterquàm in clauſo ab eodem priùs facto versùs curiam hoſpitalis, in quo non habent jus nec clameum. Intereà prior conceſſit, pro ſe & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, predicto Ricardo, quòd poſſit ſibi appropriare, pro voluntate ſuâ, ſine impedimento predicti prioris vel ſucceſſorum ſuorum, prout magìs viderit ſibi expedire, de omnibus terris ſuis & boſcis à rivulo qui deſcendit â morâ dicti prioris uſque in ſtagnum Salveie, & ſic versùs Whatberg; ſalvâ dicto priori & ſucceſſoribus ſuis communiâ paſture in omnibus terris de Whatberg, & aſſart' fact' & faciend' in eâdem poſt bladum & fenum aſportatum, & plenariâ decimâ tam bladi quàm feni de omnibus predictis terris & aſſartis. Et idem prior, pro ſe & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, relaxat dicto Ric̄o mortuum boſcum in boſco de Whatbergh. Con-

---

[1] Whatberg chapel was dedicated to St. Nicholas.

[2] The name of Brockburrow, ſtill retained among the grounds of Whadborough, points out the ſituation of this brook.

[3] Dugdale, Mon. Angl. vol. I. p. 605; ex Cart. 17 Hen. III. m. 14. Vide Brevia Regis, 16 Edw. III. p. 2.

ceſſit etiam dictus prior dicto Ric̃o duas acras terre ad includendum versùs Salveiam, à ſiketo qui vocatur Cumanneſwodeſyke [1], & currit ad magnam ripam ſtagni de Salveiâ versùs Aquilonem, ubi in illo ſiketto ſibi magis viderit expedire, ad faciendam bercheriam. Prætereà proviſum eſt, de conſenſu & aſſenſu predicti Petri tunc cuſtodis domûs de Alberbury ordinis Grandimontenſis, & fratrum ejuſdem loci, pro ſe & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, & predicto Ricardo de Albomonaſterio, ex unâ parte, & priore & conventu de Landâ, pro ſe & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, ex alterâ; videlt, quòd tota terra que jacet à ſiketto qui deſcendit per iſtas diviſas, ſcilt, de morâ prioris uſque in ſtagnum Salveie, & à rivulo qui currit de morâ predictâ uſque ad Redegate, & à Redegate uſque ad ſiketum qui deſcendit uſque ad quareram, & ſic in Holbroke, jacebit & erit communia paſture tam dicti prioris & ſucceſſorum ſuorum, quàm dicti Ricardi; in quâ terrâ dicti prior & ſucceſſores ſui habuerint quareram & ſablonariam, ac omnia neceſſaria ſua, ad voluntatem ſuam, cum libero ingreſſu & egreſſu ſibi & ſuis extra bladum & pratum; ita quòd nec dictus Ricardus, nec aliqui alii auctoritate ſuâ, poſſint aliquod appropriare de eâdem terrâ inter predictos rivulos & predictas diviſas, ſine aſſenſu dicti prioris & ſucceſſorum ſuorum, niſi quòd predictus prior, vel ſucceſſores ſui, aſſartaverint, vel pratum indè fecerint in predictâ terrâ, que ſe extendit à morâ prioris uſque ad Redgate, & à Redgate uſque ad quareram, & ſic in Holbroke, & clauſum priùs factum ante dictum diem de Hokeday per predictum priorem. Et quando predictus prior, vel ſucceſſores ſui, predictam terram extra clauſum eorum infra predictas diviſas aſſartaverint, tunc, & non ante, licebit eiſdem priori & ſucceſſoribus ſuis facere pratum ſubtùs Louſbywode; & tunc licebit predicto Ricardo, tantum terre ſibi appropriare, ſine impedimento & gravamine, prout magis ſibi viderit expedire, inter iſtas diviſas; ſcilt, à rivulo qui currit à morâ Wows uſque in ſtagnum Salveie, & ab illâ morâ uſque ad Redgate, & à Redgate uſque ad rivulum qui currit per quareram, & ſic in Holbroke; ſalvâ priori & ſucceſſoribus ſuis communiâ paſture poſt bladum & pratum aſportata; & plenariâ decimâ tam bladi quàm feni in predictis terris. Et, ad majorem hujus rei ſecuritatem, huic ſcripto in modum chirographi confecto utraque pars ſigillum ſuum alternatìm appoſuit. Hiis teſtibus; Ric̃o de Norton, Joh̃e de Skeffyngton, Will̃o de la Hay, Hugone Wythynt de Norton, Joh̃e de Kaythorp, Joh̃e de Halſtede, Joh̃e le May, Rad̃o de Albomonaſterio, & aliis.

10. Hec eſt conventio inter Willielmum priorem de Grandimonte & ejuſdem loci conventum ex unâ parte, & Robertum [2] priorem de Landâ & ejuſdem loci conventum ex alterâ parte, facta; videlt, quòd predicti prior & conventus de Landâ remiſerunt & quietum-clamaverunt, de ſe & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, & eccleſiâ ſuâ predictis, priori & conventui de Grandimonte, & cuſtodi & fratribus de Alberbur' ordinis Grandimontenſis, totum jus & clameum quod habuerunt capiendi aliquem mortuum boſcum, vel ſubboſcum, in boſco ſuo de Watteberugh in perpetuum. Et prætereà, ut prior & conventus conceſſerunt, pro ſe & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, & eccleſiâ ſuâ predictâ, quantum ad ipſos pertinet, quòd predicti prior & conventus de Grandimonte, & cuſtos & fratres de Alberbury, & ſucceſſores ſui, de cetero poſſent fruſſire, aſſartire, & excoli facere, ſine impedimento vel contradictione prioris & conventûs de Landâ, vel ſucceſſorum ſuorum, totam terram que jacet infra bundas & diviſas ſubſcriptas; ſcilt, incipiendo à rivulo qui deſcendit à morâ ipſorum prioris & conventûs uſque ad ſtagnum de Salveyâ, & ſic versùs Wattebr'; ſalvâ eiſdem priori & conventui, & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, communiâ paſture in eodem loco poſt blada & fena aſportata, & ſalvis eiſdem priori & conventui, & eorum ſucceſſoribus, & eccleſie ſue predicte, decimationibus ſuis provenientibus de terris & pratis diverſis, tam bladi quàm feni, in perpetuum. Conceſſerunt & iidem prior & conventus, pro ſe & ſucceſſoribus ſuis predictis, & eccleſiâ ſuâ predictâ, quantum ad eos pertinet, quòd dicti prior & conventus de Grandimonte, & cuſtos & fratres dicte domûs de Alberbur', & ſucceſſores ſui, poſſint includere duas acras terre intra ſyketum qui vocatur Eimanneſwodeſyke & Salveyam, & illas in defenſum ponere & tenere in perpetuum, ad faciendum in eis quandam bercheriam. Et, pro hâc dimiſſione, conceſſione, & quietâ clamatione, predicti prior & conventus de Alberbur' conceſſerunt predictis priori & conventui de Landâ, & eccleſie ſue, totam terram que jacet inter diviſas de Halſtede & de Landâ; ſicut ſe extendit uſque ad rivulum qui currit de morâ ipſorum prioris & conventûs uſque ad Redegate, & de Redegate uſque ſiketum qui deſcendit uſque ad quareram, & ſic in Holbroc, & ſic ab illis diviſis totam terram versùs Landam, & versùs boſcum eorundem prioris & conventûs, per predictas diviſas; & illam terram remiſerunt & quietum-clamaverunt, de ſe & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, & predictis fratribus, predictis priori & conventui, & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, & eccleſie ſue predicte, in perpetuum; & benè licebit eiſdem priori & conventui, & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, predictam terram inter illas diviſas fruſſire, aſſartare, excolere, & pratum indè facere, pro voluntate ſuâ, preterquam illam peciam terre que jacet ſubtùs Louſebywode, inter moram eorundem prioris & conventûs & Redegate, de quâ non poſſunt facere pratum quouſque aſſartaverint & excoluerint totam terram intra predictas diviſas; ſalvâ tamen eiſdem priori & conventui, tum cuſtodi & predictis fratribus, & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, communiâ paſture ad omnimoda averia ſua ubique in predictâ terrâ, quamdiu terra illa jacebit inculta, preterquam in illo clauſo quod iidem prior & conventus ante finem iſtum fecerant versùs curiam hoſpitalis de Landâ, in quo clauſo nullam habuerunt communiam. Et, cùm predicti prior & conventus, vel ſucceſſores ſui, predictam terram aſſartaverint, fruſſierint, vel excoluerint, vel pratum indè fecerint, ut predictum eſt, tunc iidem prior & conventus, & cuſtos & fratres de Alberbur', vel ſucceſſores ſui, non habebunt in ea que culta fuerint, nec in prato, communiam, niſi poſt blada & fena aſportata, & in warectis tunc. Prætereà, predictus prior, & predicti cuſtos & fratres de Alberbur', conceſſerunt, pro ſe & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, & eccleſiis eorum, quòd tota terra que jacet à ſiketo qui deſcendit à Redegate uſque in ſtagnum Salveye ex unâ parte, & tota terra que jacet à ſiketo qui deſcendit à Redegate uſque ad quareram prioris, & ſic in Holebroc, ex alterâ parte, de cetero jacebit ad communiam paſture ipſorum; in quâ terrâ iidem prior & conventus, & ſucceſſores ſui, habuerint quareriam & ſablonariam ad omnia neceſſaria ſua pro voluntate ſuâ, cum libero introïtu & exitu extra bladum & pratum; ita tamen quòd benè licebit predictis priori & conventui de Grandimonte, & cuſtodi & predictis fratribus, & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, tantum aſſartire de eâdem communiâ quantum jacet inter ſiketum qui deſcendit ad quareram prioris, & ſic in Holebroc, ex unâ parte, & ſiketum qui deſcendit à Redegate uſque ad Salveyam ex alterâ parte, ubicunque eis placuerit, exceptis predictis quareris & ſablonariis, quantum predicti prior & conventus de Landâ, vel ſucceſſores ſui, aſſartaverint, fruſſierint, vel excoluerint, de predictâ terrâ que eiſdem priori & conventui de Landâ, & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, remanet, inter rivulum qui deſcendit à Redegate uſque ad quareram prioris, & ſic in Holbroc, & diviſas de Halſtede & Burgſeit, in longitudine; ſalvis tamen eiſdem priori & conventui & ſucceſſoribus ſuis, decimis ſuis provenientibus de predictâ terrâ quam ita excoluerint, & de pratis que fecerint, & ſimilitèr communia ſua, poſt blada & fena aſportata, & in warectis, ad omnia averia ſua. In cujus rei teſtimonium, altera pars ſcripto alterius ſigillum ſuum appoſuit. Hiis teſtibus; Gilberto de Grenvill, Ric̃o de Martevall, Petro de Conc', Gilb̃to de Houby, Rad̃o de Martevall, Fulcone de Martivall, Ric̃o de Norton, Rad̃o de Queneby, Will̃o de Queneby, & aliis.

11. Univerſis ſancte matris eccleſie filiis ad quos preſens ſcriptum pervenerit, frater Galfridus prior domûs de Albeſbur' & ejuſdem loci conventûs ſalutem in Dño. Noverit univerſitas veſtra nos, dilectorum in Chriſto venerabilis patris noſtri prioris de Grandimonte & conventûs & totius capituli noſtri de Albeſbur' aſſenſu interveniente, dediſſe, & hâc preſenti cartâ confirmâſſe, Deo & eccleſie Sancti Johannis Baptiſte de Landâ, & canonicis ibidem Deo ſervientibus, totam terram illam, cum libero ingreſſu & egreſſu, ubi &

---

[1] This name wants decyphering. In a ſubſequent deed it ſeems more like Eimanneſwodeſyke.

[2] Robert de Martival.

ſuis, que jacet inter diviſas de la Burgh & de Landâ, ſicut ſe extendit à rivulo qui currit verſùs Salveiam, & ab illo rivulo uſque ad Redgate, & à Redgate uſque ſiketum qui deſcendit uſque ad quareram, & ſic ad Holbroke, & ab Holbroke per iſtas diviſas predictas uſque ad boſcum prioris de Landâ; habend' & tenend' predictis canonicis & ſucceſſoribus eorum liberè & quietè, integrè & pacificè, in puram & perpetuam eleemoſinam; liceat autem nobis liberè proſternere, & pro voluntate noſtrâ vendere, medietatem, & non plus. Et nos & ſucceſſores noſtri predictis canonicis & ſucceſſoribus eorum predictam terram, ſicut predictum eſt, contra omnes homines & feminas warantizabimus. Et, ad majorem hujùs rei ſecuritatem, preſentem cartam ſigilli noſtri impreſſione roboravimus. Hiis teſtibus; Wiłło de Martiwaſt, Wiłło de Folvyll, Roƀto de Digby de Norton, Joħe de Schevington, Roberto filio perſone de Schefinton, Herƀto de Caythorp, Ric̃o de Martiwaſt, & aliis.

12. Anno ab Incarnatione Domini MCCLV°, facta eſt talis conventio inter Petrum abbatem de Oſolveſton, Lincolnie diœceſeos, & ejuſdem loci conventum, ex unâ parte, & fratres Petrum priorem Grandiſmontis ordinis in Angliâ & Johannem correctorem domûs de Alberbur', Hereford' diœc', ex alterâ; videlt, quòd iidem fratres Petrus & Joħes corrector tradiderunt & conceſſerunt abbati & conventui de Oſolveſton totum manerium ſuum de Wateƀge, in com' Leic', cum capitali meſſuagio, & omnibus edificiis & liberis redditibus in toto ſervicio liberè tenentium, wardis, eſcaetis, releviis, & omnibus aliis pertinentiis, cum toto dominico ejuſdem manerii, & cum omnibus villanis, & ſequelis & catallis eorum, & edificiis, &c.; ſalvis tamen pertinentiis prioris & conventûs de Landâ, prout in ſcriptis inter dictos fratres & dictos priorem & conventum confectis pleniùs continetur; tenend' & habend', &c. perpetuò & integrè, liberè & quietè, &c. reddendo indè annuatim, &c. XXIIII libras argenti pro omni ſervicio, &c. Et ſciendum eſt, quòd nominati fratres & ſucceſſores ſui, aut eorum aſſignati, ad cuſtum ſuum, & expenſas uſque ad capitale meſſuagium de Wateƀge quolibet anno venient pro firmâ ſuâ, ad nominatos terminos recipiend'; ſed cùm ad eundem locum pervenerint, & quamdiù ibidem moram fecerint occaſione ſolutionis firme ſue predicti abbatis & conventûs, ſibi & equis ſuis & ſervientibus neceſſaria miniſtrabunt; &, ſi ita contigerit, quòd occaſione ſolutionis ſue poſt peraſſignatos terminos moram ibidem fecerint, & cauſâ hujuſmodi dampna ſuſtinuerint, dicti abbas & conventus ſua dampna eis pleniùs revellebunt; & pro unaquaque die quâ dicti fratres, aut eorum aſſignati, poſt preteritos terminos ſolutionis firme ſue expectaverint, dicti abbas & conventus unam marcam pro penâ ſive calumpniâ perſolvent fratribus antedictis. Prettereà ſciendum eſt, quòd, cùm dicti abbas & conventus dictum manerium de Wateƀge & totum dominicum, ſicut ſuperiùs expreſſum, liberum & quietum ſine alicujus calumpniâ de manu dictorum fratrum receperint & habuerint, quòd de cetero dicti fratres & ſucceſſores ſui ſolum & manerium, ſecundùm tenorem cartarum đni Fulconis filii Warini fundatoris ſui, dicto abbati & conventui warantizabunt & defendent; &, ſi ita fuerit quòd dicti abbas & conventus per defectum warantizationis & defenſionis dampnum aliquod habeant, fratres predicti & eorum ſucceſſores, per viſum & teſtimonium proborum virorum, dictis abbati & conventui in ſuâ firmâ collocabunt; ſanè, ſi ita evenerit, quòd aliquis in poſterum ſuper fundo terre & dominici occaſione dictorum fratrum calumpniam oppoſuerit, dicti fratres, aut eorum aſſignati, ad defenſionem dicti manerii, cum pertin', uſque ad manerium de Wateƀge, ad cuſtum ſuum & expenſas venient; ita tamen quòd talis dies ſibi aſſignetur quòd poſſint commodè intereſſe; ſed quamdiù ibi moram fecerint, aut in defenſione rei ſeu proſecutione negotii laboraverint quocunque loco ſive propinquior vel remotior ſit, dicti abbas & conventus eis & equis ſuis & ſervientibus neceſſaria miniſtrabunt; & ſi ita ſit quòd ad cartam deducendam computatores aut cauſidici neceſſarii fuerint, aut alias expenſas fieri contigerit, abbas & conventus totali in hâc parte neceſſaria miniſtrabunt. Si verò occaſione abbatis & conventûs, ſeu eccleſie ſue, dictum manerium de Wateƀge, aut pertinentie, in manibus regis aut potentis alicujus captùm fuerit aut retentum, ſeu occaſione ſuâ aliquis in premiſſis eis gravamen intulerit, vel calumpniam oppoſuerit, prenominati fratres in tali articulo dictum manerium aut pertinentias warantizare & defendere minimè tenebunt; verùm, ſi dicti abbas & conventus, vel ſucceſſores ſui, quolibet placito vel cauſâ involuti fuerint, licèt ad effectum non deduxerint, ipſi nihilominùs, tam de plenâ redditûs ſolutione, quàm de expenſarum & dampnorum & pene (ſi commiſſa ſit) reſtauratione ad terminos aſſignatos antedictis fratribus, vel ſuis aſſignatis, reſpondebunt, cauſâ aliquâ non obſtante. Prettereà, ſi dicti abbas & conventus aliquando firmam pretaxatam & penam ſuperiùs expreſſam, & dampna & deperdita, ad terminos nominatos antedictis fratribus vel ſuis aſſignatis reddere recuſaverint, occaſiones inutiles opponentes, ſeu ſi ipſos fratres occaſione hujuſmodi in cauſam traxerint, dicti fratres & ſui ſucceſſores ad ſuum manerium & dominium, cum pertinentiis, liberum habebunt recurſum, & tanquam ſuum proprium ſeiſire & retinere poterint, in quocunque ſtatu ſit, abbati & conventui nullam injuriam facientes; abbas verò & conventus predicti ſemper dictam firmam & redditum ad terminos ſuperiùs expreſſos, & in loco prenominato, & penam (ſi commiſſa ſit) & dampna, per manum ſuam propriam predictis fratribus reddere tenebuntur. Renunciaverit autem utraque pars in hoc facto omnem cavillationem, impetrationem, ſeu regiam prohibitionem, necnon & omne ſubterfugium & auxilium utriuſque fori tam canonici tam civilis. Et, ad majorem hujorum iſtarum conventionum obſervationem & ſecuritatem, utraque pars preſentibus ſcriptis in modum chirographi confectis alternatìm ſua ſigilla appoſuerunt in teſtimonium perpetuum veritatis. Act' anno regni regis Henrici filii regis Johannis XII°. Hiis teſtibus; Roƀto de Stocton, Ric̃o de Horton, Joħe de Kenytorp, Thomâ de Norton, Hugone de Norton, Walt̃o filio Ric̃i de Horton, & pluribus aliis.

The whole of Whadborough lordſhip, is the property of All Souls College; and is let, upon renewable leaſes, to Colonel Cheſelden of Somerby, Thomas Cave, eſq. of Barrow, and Mr. Benjamin-Clarke Raworth [1], late of Knoſſington.

Money raiſed for the poor of Laund,	£.	s.	d.
within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	4	9	10
Expended in county rates, &c.	2	16	0
———— on the poor, —	1	13	10
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	1	0	0
Expended in litigations, —	0	5	3
Money raiſed for 1783, —	7	16	3
———————— 1784, —	6	18	5
———————— 1785, —	8	10	10
Medium of theſe three years,	7	15	2
——— of county expences, —	0	0	0
——— expences not relating to the poor;	0	0	0
——— of nett annual expences,	7	15	2
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	0	5	10
——— of entertainments at meetings,	0	0	0
——— of law expences, —	0	0	0
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0

	£.	s.	d.
At Lodington.	35	19	0
———	8	16	6
———	26	15	9
———	3	4	3
———	0	0	0
———	22	16	10
———	46	12	11
———	25	16	0
———	31	15	3
———	7	2	7
———	1	13	4
———	22	19	4
———	2	17	1
———	0	10	6
———	12	15	7
———	0	0	0

---

[1] The part held by Mr. Raworth, conſiſting of 10 cloſes, together with about 255 acres, in the ſeveral occupations of Mr. Croſs and Mr. A. Beaumont, was advertized for ſale in July 1799. The names of the different cloſes in this part are, Ram-mead, Long-mead, Oat and Groat Mead, Meadow, Paſture, Great Hill, The New Brook, and Whadman's.

LOSEBY[1],

antiently called Glouesby and Loweſby, is a conſiderable pariſh, including the large hamlet of Cold Newton, in a ſecluded ſituation, about ten miles from Leiceſter; bounded by Tilton, South Mareſield, Twyford, and Newton; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, within the deanry of Goſcote. "The lordſhip is of a large circuit, and exceeding good ſoil, having the name of one of the chiefeſt in theſe parts[2]."

In the time of the Confeſſor, Loſeby employed ſix ploughs. It was then valued at forty ſhillings; and remained of the ſame value at the general ſurvey, when it was held under the counteſs Judith by Hugo Burdet, a companion of the Conqueror, and the head of a family which from that time to the preſent has continued in high reputation, both in Leiceſterſhire, and the neighbouring counties of Warwick and Derby[3]. Two ploughs were then in the demeſne; and ſeven ſocmen, with a prieſt, and ſix villans and five bordars, had five ploughs. There were twenty-four acres of meadow, a wood one furlong long, and one broad, and a mill of two ſhillings value[4].

"The family of Burdet (as appeareth by Ordericus Vitalis, a Norman monk, who lived in the time of king William the Conqueror, William Rufus, and Henry the Firſt,) was of great antiquity in Normandy. And in an Appendix to the ſaid Hiſtory of Ordericus Vitalis, it is evident, that one of this family accompanied William duke of Normandy at the time of the conqueſt of England, and, here reſiding, was the propagator of this antient family; which, ſettling early in this county, ſpread itſelf into many branches. They bare, Azure, two bars Or (Plate XLVIII. fig. 9.); which I have ſeen in a ſeal affixed to a deed made about the end of the reign of king Henry II.

"Of this houſe was Robert Burdet, witneſs to a deed of Geoffrey de Wirce[5] in 1077; and in the ſame year to a charter for the monaſtery of Angiers in France. He is probably the ſame perſon whom, under the name of ſir Robert Burdet, knight, a great ſoldier, the ſaid Ordericus reporteth about the year 1100, at the requeſt of Oderic, archbiſhop of Terracon in Spain (the city of Terracon being then almoſt poſſeſſed with the Saracens, miſerably waſted, and likely almoſt utterly to be overthrown), to have come into Spain with a great army to the ſuccour and reſcue of the ſaid city, and within a ſhort ſpace after diſcomfited the enemies, driving them out of the country, and reſtoring the city to her former ſtate; who after, about the year 1125, for this and divers other victories gotten from the Pagans, was by pope Honorius II. created earl of Terracon[6]."

Hugo Burdet, the companion of the Conqueror, was the immediate progenitor of William Burdet, who was owner of Loſeby in the reign of Henry I; and occurs as a witneſs to the following deed:

"Comes David, frater regis Scotie, omnibus hominibus ſuis de honore de Huntendon notum facit de conceſſione eccleſie de Clerk, donationem quam Alicia filia Rogeri filii Roberti eis fecit, de parte ſuâ hereditatum in Tothm' de parte quam empſerat de Letitiâ ſorore ſuâ. Teſtibus; Rob̄to de Baling ſeneſcallo meo; Rob̄to Baſſet, Rob̄to de Mortuo-mari, Reg' de Acti, Simone de Sc̄o Licio, Wil̄lo Burdet, Galf̄ro de Watervyle, Ric̄o filio Wil̄li[7]."

He was a conſiderable benefactor to the hoſpital of Burton Lazars; and was ſucceeded at Loſeby by a ſon Hugo, and grandſon William.

In the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about 1240, the following entry occurs: "De uno feodo & d̄io quod Wil̄ls Burdet tenet in Louſeby, & in Rereſby, & in Sixteneby, & in Brokeſby, & in Aleby, 3 m̄r'."

In 1159, this William Burdet, having obtained from Robert Boſſu earl of Leiceſter a grant of the lordſhip of Aucote in Warwickſhire, gave the ſame to the monks of Great Malvern in Warwickſhire, on condition that they ſhould ſend two of their convent to ſerve in the church at Aucote from the feaſt of St. Michael till that time twelvemonth; and the next year following to and unto them two more: and moreover, that afterwards, ſo ſoon as the building of the monaſtery there could be compleated, according to the capacity thereof, more monks to be received therein, by the advice of the abbot of Weſtminſter, and other religious perſons of theſe parts; and the prior to be conſtituted always by the prior of Malverne before ſpecified. Unto which agreement ſo made, betwixt the ſaid William Burdet, and Roger then prior of Malverne, in the preſence of Laurence, the beforementioned abbot of Weſtminſter, as alſo of Robert, abbot of St. Albans, and Gregory, abbot of Malmeſbury, Robert earl of Leiceſter, and Laurence prior of Coventry, amongſt others, were witneſſes[8].

"In the latter end of the reign of king Henry II. ſir William Burdet undertook a voyage to the Holy Land; whither the king and the king of France intended to have gone with an army royal to the aſſiſtance of Guy de Luſignania king of Jeruſalem, who was then taken priſoner by Saladine ſouldan of Ægypt, who had taken Jeruſalem and all the Holy Land 1187; to which end many articles were drawn; and the Chriſtians throughout the land were aſſeſſed, and appointed to levy £70,000. and the Jews £60,000. towards the expedition of the ſaid voyage; which, by a diſagreement which happened between the two kings, was fruſtrated, and did not proceed[9]. But the ſaid ſir William Burdet held on his journey to the Holy Land; where having ſpent certain years' ſervice in thoſe holy wars, perceiving no happy iſſue like to enſue, by reaſon of the great diſcord and diſſention which happened between Richard I. king of England, and Philip II. king of France, and other Chriſtian princes there preſent, bandying one againſt the other; as alſo by that unfortunate end of Frederick Barbaroſſa the emperor, who, having made his peace with pope Alexander III. came with a great army to the aſſiſtance of Jeruſalem; and, entering into Cilicia, had taken many cities, and ſlain many Saracens and Pagans; and from thence entering into Armenia, and there coming to a clear and ſwift river, went into the ſame to cool his heat and waſh himſelf, and was there drowned 1189; uſing this ſhort prayer at his laſt breath; 'O Omnipotens Deus, qui me miſerum peccatorem per aquam regeneraſti, te rogo, ut me jam per aquas tractum ad te in vitam æternam ſuſcipias[10];'

---

[1] This name gave riſe to a ruſtic proverb of the country: When a man ſells a thing for leſs than he hoped to get for it; he ſays, "I muſt e'en be content to go home by Loſeby [it]."

[2] Burton, p. 183.

[3] Marrying the heireſs of Camville in 1333, they afterwards reſided at Arrow, co. Warwick. Bramcote, in Cornwall, came into the family, temp. Hen. VI. by a marriage with the couſin and heir of Henry Bruyn. They had no property in Derbyſhire till 1602, when Thomas Burdet, eſq. afterwards the firſt baronet, married the heir of Frauncys of Formarke; ſince whoſe time, that ſeat has been the chief reſidence of the family, and they have been poſſeſſed of a good eſtate in that county.

[4] "Hugo Burdet tenet de Comitiſſâ 9 carucatas terræ in Gloweſbi. Ibi 6 carucæ fuerunt. Nunc in dominico 1 caruca; & 7 ſochmanni, cum 1 preſbytero & 6 villanis & 5 bordariis, habent 5 carucas. Ibi molinum de 2 ſolidis, & 24 acræ prati. Silva 1 quarentenæ longitudinis, & 1 latitudinis. Valuit, & valet, 40 ſolidos." Domeſday, fol. 236. b. 1.

[5] Printed in the Appendix to Melton Mowbray, vol. II. p. 125.

[6] Ordericus Vitalis, Hiſt. fol. 891. 1023. Burton, MS.

[7] Ex libro cartarum Thomæ Cotton, p. 105. a.

[8] Dugdale's Warwickſhire, ed. Thomas, vol. II. p. 1129: and ſee Madox, Formulare Anglicanum, N° CCCIX; and Dugdale, Mon. Ang. vol. I. p. 367.

[9] Roger Hoveden; Walter de Coventre, Memoriale.

[10] Otho Friſingenſis, abbas Urſpergenſis; Cuſpinianus in vitâ ipſius. Hieron. Henninges, 2, 3 regni, in 3 monarch. pars prior. 45.

and, ſeeing hereby that the forces of Saladine daily increaſed, and not likely to be oppoſed, returned back from thence; and not long after built a priory at Aucote [1] near Tamworth, in the county of Warwick [2]."

He left two ſons, Hugo and Richard; and Hugo had one ſon, William, who, dying without iſſue, gave to the maſter and brethren of the hoſpital of St. Lazarus at Burton, for the benefit of his own ſoul, and that of Alice his wife, &c. all his lands at Newton juxta Loſeby, whether in poſſeſſion or reverſion; including his capital manſion; and four virgates of demeſne land, and their appurtenances, and all his wood called Swineland; together with Robert the bailiff (præpoſitum); Richard de la Lane, William de Barkeby, and Agnes widow of Geoffrey Herte, his cuſtomary tenants, with all their ſequelæ and chattels, and four virgates of land occupied by them in villanage; alſo all rents, homages, ſuits, and ſervices, of his free tenants in Newton, with wards, reliefs, marriages, eſcheats, and all meadows, cloſes, paſtures, roads, waters, banks, and every other privilege which he or his heirs enjoyed, or might thereafter enjoy, within the ſaid lordſhip. By another charter he confirmed to them all the gifts of his grandfather, reſerving the patronage of the church of Haſelbeche; and added the hoſpital of Tilton, a carucate of land in Newton, and the churches of Loſeby and Galby, with their appurtenances.

To the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter he alſo gave a ſmall annual rent:

"Habemus ibidem 11s̃. per annum, exeunt' de unâ virgatâ terre, ex dono Wiłłi Burdet; pro quibus quidem 11s̃. Wiłłs Aſsheby, armiger, frater de capitulo ñro, dedit nobis 1 meſſuagium & 11 virgatas terre, cum pertinentiis ſuis, in Ilſton [3]."

To one of theſe Williams belongs the following deed:

"Willielmus Burdet omnibus hominibus ſuis & amicis, Francis & Anglis, ſalutem. Sciatis me dediſſe Elie filio Galfridi Ponelayam, cum pertinentiis ſuis, &c. Hiis teſtibus; Roberto filio Galfridi Salvagii, Rad̄o cognato, Rogero filio Theobaldi, Roberto Lumbardo, Roberto filio Oſberti, Gaufrido de Folevile, Rad̄o de Folevile, Ric̄o de Brandeſtonâ; Henrico de Almeto, Fulcone nepote meo, & aliis [4]."

The following article includes them both:

"Oſbertus filius Roberti dicit, quòd anteceſſores ſui tenuerunt unam bovatam terre, cum pertinentiis, in Athelington, de anteceſſoribus Gulielmi Burdet, filii Hugonis Burdet, filii Gulielmi Burdet, &c." [5]

Richard Burdet, who ſucceeded to Loſeby as heir to his nephew William, died in 1223; leaving a ſon William [6]; who occurs that year as a witneſs to a deed:

1225-6 "Conventio, anno 10° Henrici filii Johannis inter d̄num Hugonem de Ringeſdon ex parte unâ, & fratres Sc̄i Lazari de Burton ex parte alterâ. Teſtibus; Wiłło Mauncell tunc vicecomite Leic' & Warw', d̄no Wiłło Burdet, Rad̄o Camerario, Rob̄to de Folvile, Rad̄o de Ringeſdon, Wiłło de Kyleby, Wiłło Brantiſthorp [7]."

In the records of the ſame king's reign we alſo find this article: "Juratores preſentant, quòd Galfridus Alber captus fuit pro quodam bidente furato, & ductus ad curiam Willielmi Burdet in Louſeby, & ſuſpenſus in eâdem curiâ per judicium ejuſdem curie. Et poſtea venit idem Willielmus; & queſitum eſt quo warranto clamat habere furcas & juratores. Hoc iidem teſtantur; ideò loquendum, &c." [8]

This laſt William had four ſons; 1. Richard Burdet, of Loſeby and Newton Burdet, who died in 1278; 2. Hugh; 3. Robert; and 4. William, of Shepey and Coſby, of whom hereafter.

In the Itinerary of 1280, Loſeby, Newton, and South Croxton, anſwered collectively as one vill.

Richard Burdet had a ſon William, who, July 12, 1298, confirmed all the preceding grants of his anceſtors; and added, after the death of his ſon Robert, the churche of Haſelbeche [9], with all its appurtenances [10]. And in 1301, William Burdet, lord of this manor, obtained the king's charter for a weekly market on Wedneſdays; and two fairs, one on the feaſt of St. Philip and St. James and two days after, and the other on the feaſt of St. Michael and three days after; with liberty of free-warren in his demeſne lands here. "Hiis teſtibus; Johanne de Warennâ com' Surrie, Guidone de Bellocampo com' Warw', Hugone le Diſpenſer, Hugone le Uter, Joh' de Segrave, Joh' Bottetourt, Waltero de Bellocampo, ſeneſcallo hoſpitii noſtri, & aliis. Dat' per manum noſtram, apud Glaſton, xxiii die Auguſti [11]."

This ſir William Burdet was ſlain at Dundee in Scotland; and it was found in 1308 that he held the manor of Loſeby of the king, by the ſervice of one knight's fee and an half, by reaſon of the land of Robert de Brus being in the king's hand; and John Burdet, his ſon and heir, was then aged 18 [12]."

In 1314, Maud (who was the wife of Reginald de Vickereſon, who, for a felony which he had committed, abjured the kingdom), held at her deceaſe one meſſuage, and one virgate and an half of land, with the appurtenances, in Loſeby, of Avice wife of John de Overton, by payment of 11*s.* a year in lieu of all ſervices [13].

In 1316, it was found that William Burdet had held, of Robert Brus, one knight's fee in Louſeby, which was then ſeized into the king's hands [14].

In 1338, Edward Burdet (not mentioned in the Pedigree, but perhaps a brother of the laſt William), at his death, held two parts of the manor of Louſeby, of Edward duke of Cornwall, by divers ſervices; and John Burdet his brother was his next heir [15].

In 1346 (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon), John Burdet was aſſeſſed 13*s.* 4*d.* for a third part of one knight's fee in Loſeby, and William Marmion 10*s.* for a quarter of one knight's fee in Loſeby and Cold Newton; all parcel of the fees of Cheſter and Huntingdon [16].

John Burdet dying without iſſue male, the lordſhip of Loſeby was brought by his daughter in marriage to Richard de Aſhby, who was living in 1391; and whoſe ſon Thomas died ſeiſed of it in 1428 [17]; leaving another Thomas, who died in 1488, and whoſe ſeal, with the family arms [18], is given in Plate XLVIII. fig. 1.

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Loſeby was rated at 1*l.* 15*s.* 0*d.*; and in the ſubſidy of 1445 at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 8*s.* 4*d.*—Cold Newton was rated at 1*l.* 9*s.* 3½*d.*; and 4*s.* 3½*d.* abated.

---

[1] The agreement for founding this priory was entered into at leaſt 30 years earlier, as appears by an authentic deed already referred to; but it is probable that, after his return from the Holy Land, he might himſelf have embraced the monaſtic life; and this ſuppoſition is eaſily reconcileable with the following ſtatement of ſir William Dugdale: "The occaſion whereupon this little monaſtery was founded is ſaid to be this; That the ſaid William Burdet, being both a valiant and devout man, made a journey to the Holy Land for ſubduing of the infidels in thoſe parts; and that his ſteward, whilſt he was thus abſent, ſolicited the chaſtity of his lady, who reſiſted thoſe his uncivil attempts with much ſcorn. whereupon he grew ſo full of envy towards her, that, ſo ſoon as he had advertiſement of his maſter's arrival again in England, he went to meet him; and, to ſhadow his own foul crime, complained to him of her looſeneſs with others: which falſe accuſation ſo enraged her huſband, that when he came home, and that ſhe approached to receive him with joyful embraces, he forthwith mortally ſtabbed her; and that, to expiate the ſame unhappy act, after he underſtood the truth, he built this monaſtery. Of this ſtory though I have nothing but by tradition, yet that he was the founder hereof is moſt certain, from what I have before expreſſed; and doubtleſs that monument, ſituate in an arch of the wall, on the North ſide of the church here at Aucote, is for him; which is only a plain freeſtone, covering the coffin wherein his body reſteth, curiouſly emboſſed with the ſculpture of a large croſs."

[2] Burton, MS.

[3] Charyte's Rentale, fol. xc.

[4] See the ſeal, Plate XLVIII. fig. 31.

[5] Plac. & Aſſiſ. capt. apud Linc. an. 4 regis Johannis.

[6] Eſch. 29 Edw. I. N° 47. Leic.

[7] Ex lib. MS. Rob. Coke, nuper R. Brooke, York herald, p. 212.

[8] Placita Coronæ temp. Hen. III. Rot. 31. in Recept. Scaccarii.

[9] William Burdet preſented to Haſelbeche in 1220; Richard de Sutton and Iſabella his wife, in 1288; and in 1319 John de Hanlo and Maud his wife poſſeſſed the advowſon, which they had then recovered by law againſt Roger de Lyle and the maſter of Burton Lazars. Bridges, vol. II. p. 37.

[10] See their ſeveral deeds in the Appendix to vol. II. pp. 128, 129.

[11] Cart. 29 Edw. I. N° 1.

[12] Eſch. 2 Edw. II. N° 47. Leic.

[13] Eſch. 8 Edw. II. N° 3. Leic.

[14] Eſch. 10 Edw. II. N° 67. Leic.

[15] Eſch. 12 Edw. III. N° 7. Leic.

[16] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[17] Eſch. 6 Hen. VI.

[18] The arms of the Loſeby and Quenby Aſhbys are totally different; ſo that they do not ſeem to derive from the ſame common anceſtor; yet it is unlikely that two different families of the ſame name ſhould ſettle cloſe together.

In 1502, William Aſhby died ſeiſed of certain lands, tenements, and rents, in Loſeby, Coſby, and Littlethorp, held of the king as of his honour of Huntingdon, but by what ſervice is unknown[1].

William Aſhby[2], eſq. ſon of the laſt, was appointed by the king's writ, Jan. 30, 1534-5, to take the eccleſiaſtical ſurvey of this county. He died in 1544.

In 1545, George Aſhby died ſeiſed of certain lands in Loſeby, held of the Prince, as of the honour of Huntingdon[3].

In 1564, there were four families in Loſeby.

29 Jan. 1583, it was found that Francis Cave, eſq. died ſeiſed of one cloſe of paſture, called Streat-hill, aliàs Street-hill, late parcel of the manor of Loſeby[4].

Mr. Wyrley, in his Church Notes, 1595, ſays, "Loſebie, vel Lowesbie, antiqua Burdetorum familiæ ſedes, per cujus filiam ad Aſhebeios devenit, & ad preſentem hanc diem feliciter remanſiſſet, juxta rivuli caput locatur, qui ſtatim Wrekum petit. Newton viculus adjacet in eadem parochiâ." At Loſeby he noticed the following arms, fig. 3—7.

Azure, a lion rampant between ten fleurs de lis Or, armed and langued Gules. Beaumont.

France and England Quarterly.

Argent, a cinquefoil Azure.

Gules, ſeven maſcles voided and conjoined Or, 3. 3. 1. Quincy earl of Winton.

Gules, ten bezants Or, a canton Ermine. Eudo de la Zouch of Lubbeſthorpe.

He found there alſo the arms of Langton; fig. 16.

On the death of Thomas Aſhby in 1604, this lordſhip became the property of his firſt couſin George Aſhby of Quenby; moſt probably in conſequence of ſome contract entered into in the life-time of the former owner.

In a ſubſequent part of Mr. Wyrley's notes it is ſtated, that "Loſeby was ſold to W. Paramour; and he ſold it to the earl of Exeter that now is, 1609."

Mr. Burton, however, in his printed Hiſtory in 1622, ſays, "Loſeby is now the inheritance of George Aſhby, of Quenby, eſq. a gentleman well qualified, and well deſerving; who beareth, Azure, a chevron Ermine, between three leopards' heads Or;" fig. 8.

In his interleaved copy of 1641, Mr. Burton ſays, "It is now the inheritance of the earl of Caernarvon, excepting one great cloſe, called Street-hill, of the yearly value of £150. whereof ſir Richard Roberts, knight, is now ſeiſed in fee[5].

In 1655, there was collected in Loſeby, Newton, and Skeffington, for the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 17*s.* 7*d.*

This lordſhip was ſoon after purchaſed by Richard Woollaſton, eſq. (a younger branch of the family of Woollaſton[6], of Shenton in this county); who had been gun-founder to Oliver Cromwell[7]; acquired conſiderable property; and was afterwards maſter of the ordnance to king William, in whoſe reign he died.

His eldeſt ſon Joſiah, who had married Elizabeth, ſiſter to ſir Edward Lawrence, of St. Ives in Huntingdonſhire, died, before his father, Feb. 5, 1689; leaving a ſon Iſaac, to whom the grandfather gave his large eſtates at Loſeby, &c. and of whom hereafter.

To John Woollaſton, eſq. his ſecond ſon, and his heirs, Mr. Richard Woollaſton gave his Hertfordſhire and Hampſhire eſtates, ſubject to the payment of the noble legacy already noticed under South Croxton, ariſing out of two farm-houſes, and divers lands, meadows, paſtures, and marſh-lands, at Canuden and Lachenden in Eſſex, for cloathing poor perſons in the pariſhes of Wormley, Herts; Whitchurch, Hants; and Loweſby, Newton Burdett, Billeſdon, Bareſby, and South Croxton, in Leiceſterſhire.

Mr. John Woollaſton had iſſue. 1. Richard; 2. John; and 3. Jonathan. Richard Woollaſton, eſq. was a repreſentative in parliament for Whitchurch from 1695 to 1708; but, being extravagant, ran through the eſtates which he inherited at Wormley and Whitchurch. He had three ſons; one a clergyman; and three daughters, two of whom Mr. Woollaſton of Bayford maintained there for ſeveral years; the other married well, and ſome of her family are ſtill living.

Mr. Jonathan Woollaſton married Rebecca Mayo, of Bayford Place, co. Herts; and left iſſue, Iſrael Woollaſton, eſq. who married Sarah, daughter of Daniel Waldo, a Hamburgh merchant of the city of London (by Anne Mercer, to whom he was married in May 1707). Iſrael died at Low Leyton, in Eſſex, March 20, 1765, without ſurviving iſſue; and his widow, ſtill living in her 92d year[8], has very kindly communicated this account of the Woollaſton family, together with the following inſcription for her huſband and herſelf on an elegant monument in Bayford church.

"To the memory of Iſrael Woollaſton and Sarah his wife. He was only ſon of Jonathan Woollaſton, eſq. by Rebecca his wife, who was daughter of Iſrael Mayo, late of Bayford Place, eſq. He died the 20th of March, in the year of our Lord 1765, aged 64, and is here interred (beneath the window). Alſo near this grave lies buried Martha, who died a child, and was daughter to Iſrael Woollaſton by Sarah his wife. She died . . . .[9]

"His death was very eaſy; he was ſenſible to the laſt, and ſeemed quite compoſed. A few hours before his death, he uſed theſe words, The eternal path is hard to tread; aſked ſeveral times when it would be ſix o'clock; and expired a few minutes after that hour."

The following extract is taken from his will:

"Item, inaſmuch as by deed dated June 28, 1720, made and entered into by Mrs. Rebecca Woollaſton, my late mother, and others, the nomination of a maſter and uſhers, and other powers relating to a free-ſchool at Kingſwood in the county of Wilts, (for the endowment whereof certain meſſuages and land at Stone, in the county of Glouceſter, have been purchaſed and ſettled), being the gift of my great grandfather John Mayo, eſq. are now veſted in me and my heirs: Now I hereby give all and every ſuch nomination, right, and power, to my ſaid couſin, wife of the ſaid Mr. Lord, and daughter of the ſaid Mr. Rant, who was ſon of Mrs. Elizabeth Rant, ſiſter of my late mother."

In Mrs. Lord the direction of the Kingſwood charity ſtill continues; and the churchwarden and miniſter for the time being are authorized to make the appointment, without diſtinction whether the parties are of the Church of England or Diſſenters.

His grandfather's picture, ſet in gold, he gave to Mrs. Eborne, ſir Iſaac Woollaſton's niece.

Iſaac Woollaſton, eſq. who ſucceeded to the eſtate at Loſeby, married Sarah Lawrence (who died 1707); and had iſſue, 1. Anne, who died an infant; 2. Joſiah; 3. Iſaac (of whom hereafter); 4. Mary; 5. Elizabeth, who died unmarried; 6. a daughter, married . . . . . Huſon, and died ſ. p.; 7. Rebecca, died unmarried; 8. Anne, marr[illegible] . . . . Guyre, a hoſier in Leiceſter.

In 1720, t[illegible]emorable South Sea year, the owner of Loſeby found it convenient to ſell, and accordingly contracted to do ſo, and received a large ſum in earneſt; but the purchaſer, experiencing a reverſe of fortune, could never complete the bargain, but loſt the ſum depoſited, which enabled the owner to continue in poſſeſſion. On this occaſion, Joſiah[1] the eldeſt ſon (for the conſideration of £8000. which he ſoon ran through) had joined with his father in the ſale; but the father, in conſequence of the above circumſtance, retained the eſtate in his own hands; and at his death, in January 1736-7, bequeathed it to his younger ſon Iſaac; who on the death of his uncle, ſir Edward Lawrence[2], ſucceeded to the title of baronet, May 2, 1749. He married Sarah Rowland Marche, daughter of —— Marche, of the Iſle of Wight, and widow of —— Gatwood, eſq. of Cambridge; and died Oct. 13, 1750, leaving two daughters, Sarah and Anne; and his lady pregnant; who was ſoon after delivered of a ſon, ſir Iſaac Lawrence Woollaſton, bart. and dying Oct. 13, 1753, at the age of 38, was buried, with her huſband, in the family-vault at Loſeby[3].

---

[1] Eſch. 18 Hen. VII.

[2] In 1524, William Aſhby was admitted into the office of Clerk of the Extracts in the Court of Exchequer by Thomas earl of Surrey, lord high-treaſurer of England. Hil. Rec. 15 Hen. VIII. Rot. 47.—And in 1542, an Arthur Aſſeby was admitted to the office of "Cuſtos Forinſecorum Extractorum Scaccarii," on the attainder of Thomas Aſſeby. Hil. Rec. 33 Hen. VIII. Rot. 5.

[3] Eſch. 36 Hen. VIII.

[4] Eſch. 26 Eliz.

[5] Burton MS.

[6] I have not been able to trace the connexion between the Loſeby and Shenton families. They ſeem uniformly to have obſerved this difference in the ſpelling of their names.

[7] Mr. Richard Woollaſton was a captain in the army of the parliament in 1643; a major in 1645; and in 1653 was appointed one of the judges of the Admiralty under the Commonwealth. See the Journals of the Houſe of Commons, vol. III. p. 429; vol. IV. pp. 116. 251; vol. V. p. 21; vol. VI. p. 289.—Sir John Woollaſton, citizen and goldſmith, lord-mayor in 1644, was ſon of Edward Woollaſton of Burton in Staffordſhire, ſon of William Woollaſton of the ſame place.

[8] Mrs. Woollaſton was born in April 1708.

[9] This date at preſent is blank; and may it long remain ſo!

Their ſon, the young baronet, died alſo Dec. 21, 1756; upon which the title ceaſed; and the family eſtates and repreſentation devolved upon his two ſiſters: Sarah, married to Taylor White, of Walling Wells, co. Nottingham, eſq. (ſon to Taylor White, eſq. counſellor at law, late treaſurer of the Foundling Hoſpital, and nephew and heir to John White, eſq. many years member for Eaſt Retford, and F. R. S.) by whom ſhe has iſſue three ſons and four daughters; 1. Thomas; 2. Taylor; 3. Iſaac; and four daughters, Lycia, Sarah, Elizabeth, and Frances. — Anne, married Auguſt 13, 1772, Thomas Fowke[4], eſq. afterwards knighted; by whom ſhe had iſſue one ſon, Auguſtus-Frederick, and one daughter Henry-Anne[5], ſo named after the duke and ducheſs of Cumberland.

In 1777 an act of parliament was paſſed for the diviſion of the eſtates of ſir Iſaac Woollaſton between his two daughters and coheireſſes; which ſets forth, that the huſband of the coheireſs who was to have the impropriate rectory as his ſhare was to pay £13. a year to the vicar. On the partition under this act, Loſeby Hall came to lady Fowke, who ſtill reſides there. Mrs. White took the Lawrence eſtates at St. Ive's; and ſome conſiderable eſtates in the Iſle of Ely, &c. were ſold to Lord Chancellor Hardwicke.

Some time before 1720 a purchaſe was made at Loſeby by George Aſhby the younger, eſq. of Stone-pit Cloſes; which in that year were on leaſe to Daniel Warner[6] at a rent of £35; and are now the property of the Rev. George Aſhby, rector of Barrow in Suffolk.

A cottage and cloſe, called Church Cloſe Meadow, in the tenure of Robert Peat, junior, containing 21 acres, 3 roods, 18 perches, is let for £23. 7*s*. 3½*d*. a year.

Loſeby at preſent contains only 7 dwellings and the hall-houſe, which is a tolerably good building. The parſonage is alſo a decent houſe; with a good garden and a comfortable glebe.

The neighbourhood abounds in hills and valleys covered with fine ſheep; and the grounds around the houſe are beautifully adorned with trees.

The CHURCH (ſee Plate XLVII.)

dedicated to All Saints, conſiſts of an embattled tower (in which are three bells). There was originally a ſpire upon the tower, which was taken down about 40 years ago, and the South and Weſt ſides of the tower rebuilt; which are plain, but ſtout and regular pieces of architecture.

Here is alſo a nave, an embattled chancel, and a North and South aile, each ſeparated by three pointed arches upon octagon pillars, with capitals of different orders[7]; over which are as many clereſtory windows.

Behind the pulpit the ſtone-ſteps of the rood-loft are very viſible.

There appear to have been two ſquare openings, one from each aile, in the angles between the ailes and the chancel, whereby the altar might be viewed. Theſe are now both ſtopped-up in the church, but remain open in the chancel. Such openings are frequently to be ſeen in old churches.

On the South ſide of the chancel, within the altar-rails, are three ſtone ſeats of equal height and ſize, with a ſingle ſlender circular pillar between each of them, detached from the back of the ſeats, ſo that behind they are open to each other. Their arches are plain and pointed. On the Eaſt ſide of them is a piſcina, now blocked up, arched the ſame as the ſeats.

There is a South porch and North door-way into the church; and one into the tower, now walled up.

Under the parapet walls of the North aile and the chancel, are a great variety of well-ſculptured figures in bold relief, a little diſtance from each other, conſiſting in fruits, flowers, animals, animals' heads, &c. and one in particular, on the North ſide the chancel, is a man in a very indecent ſituation and poſture. On the end of the chancel is a well-wrought croſs; and another on the end of the nave.

Within the church, over the North-door:
"James Clifford, John Palmer, Churchwardens, 1778."

~~9~~ Mr. Wyrley deſcribes theſe arms here, fig. 9—24.

9 Azure, two bars Or, Burdet.

10 Azure, ten bezants Or; Zouch of Lubbeſthorpe.

11 Azure, five bezants, Zouch; impaling Burdet.

12 Gules, a lion rampant queué fourché Or, collared Argent, Burgherſh.

13 Argent, a croſs Vert, Cendalle. [illegible]

14 Sable, a feſs between three cinquefoils Argent, Villiers antient.

A broken ſhield; at the top, Gules, one lion paſſant guardant . . . . . . (one or two lions gone); the whole within a border engrailed Azure, charged with martlets Or.

Azure, an eagle diſplayed, with two heads Or, debruiſed with a bend Sable, Langton.

Quarterly; 1. and 4. Argent, a lion rampant Sable, a chief Gules, Aſhby of Loſeby; 2. and 3. Burdet; impaling, Ermine, on a bend Azure, three roſes Or, Penroſe.

Quarterly, Aſhby and Burdet; impaling, Argent, a chevron engrailed between three croſſes patée fitché Sable, Findern.

Argent, ſemé of croſs Taus Sable, a lion rampant Gules; impaling, Argent, a chevron Azure between three ſtaples Sable, Illingworth. Creſt; a wivern, wings up, Gules.

---

[1] He died, at Loſeby, Nov. 12, 1757.

[2] Created a baronet Jan. 17, 1748-9; [illegible] remainder, in default of iſſue male, to his nephew Iſaac Woollaſton, eſq. of Loſeby.

[3] Lady Woollaſton died at Bayford-p[illegible]he houſe of her relation Mr. Iſrael Woollaſton, where ſhe had been ſome time on a viſit. She was quite well on the pre[illegible]g evening, and was to have ſet off early next morning for Loſeby Hall; but, before retiring to reſt, entreated Mrs. Woollaſton, in caſe of her being the longer liver, to accept the guardianſhip of her two daughters; which that lady agreed to, on condition that Mr. Taylor White were joined with her in the truſt. In leſs than an hour, the family were alarmed by the illneſs of lady Woollaſton, who almoſt immediately expired.

[4] Son of Thomas Fowke, eſq. (brigadier-general in Scotland in 1746; ſee Gent. Mag. XVI. 593; major-general, Oct. 10, 1747; governor of Gibraltar, from May 1753 to 1756, when he was a lieutenant-general; ib. XXVI. 395. 408.). Entering into the ſervice of his country at an early period of life, he was appointed in 1757 a cornet in the North Britiſh dragoons (Scotch Greys), and, although a very young officer, had the honour to bear the ſtandard of that regiment (ſtrapt round his body) on the 1ſt of Auguſt, 1759, at the memorable battle of Minden; but he ſoon quitted this regiment for a more active life, and was abroad during the reſidue of the war. In 1761 he was appointed captain in the 3d regiment of foot guards, and March 11, 1786, was promoted to a company in that regiment, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel in the army. He received the honour of knighthood in 1777, at an inſtallation of Knights of the Bath, at which ceremony he was proxy for ſir Henry Clinton, then abſent in America. He died at Loſeby Hall in December 1786; at which time he was equerry to the duke of Cumberland; a captain in the Leiceſterſhire militia; in the commiſſion of the peace, and one of the deputy-lieutenants of the county.

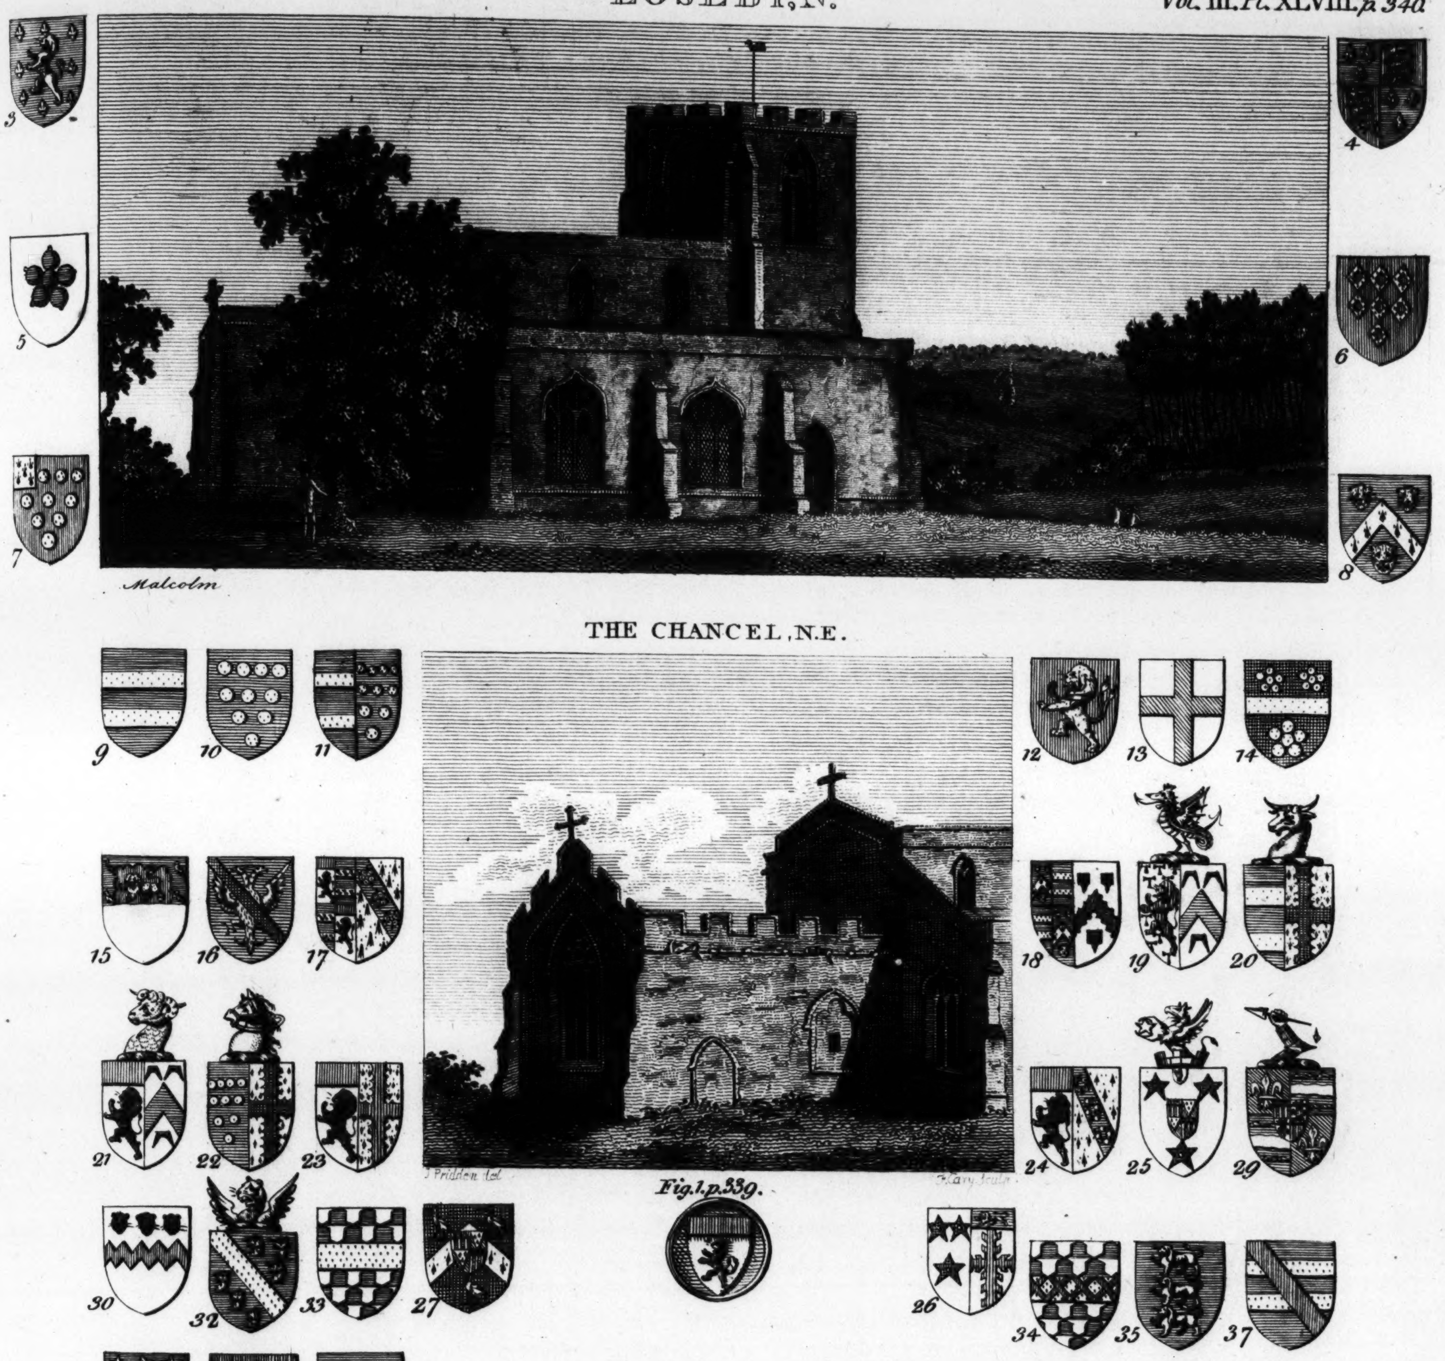
[5] Married, Dec. 27, 1798, to John-Dick Burnaby, eſq. captain of the firſt regiment of foot-guards.

[6] Great grandfather to the preſent Mr. William Warner, of Cranoe, who married the only ſiſter of Mr. John Tailby.

[7] One of the capitals is ornamented round with ſculptured Ammon's heads; and ſome of the entablatures are round, and ſome angular, with many mouldings.

LOSEBY, N.

Vol. III. Pl. XLVIII. p. 340



Malcolm

THE CHANCEL. N.E.

J. Pridden del.

Fig. 1. p. 339.

Fig. 2. p. 293.

Longmate sc.

3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18 19 20 21
22
23
24
25
29
30
32
33
27
26
34
35
37
38
39
40
36
31
28
41
42
43
44

Burdet; impaling, Ermine, a croſs engrailed Sable, Pollard. Creſt, a bull's head couped Sable, armed Or.

Aſhby of Loſeby; impaling, Illingworth. Creſt, a ram's head couped Argent, armed Or.

Zouch; impaling, Pollard. Creſt, a horſe's head Or, bridle Gules.

Aſhby; impaling, Pollard.

Aſhby; impaling, Ermine, on a bend Azure three chaplets Or.

On five atchievements, fig. 25—29.

Argent, three mullets Sable, round pierced of the field, Woollaſton, bart. In an eſcocheon of pretence, Quarterly, 1. and 4. Paly of ſix, Or and Azure; on a chief Gules, three talbots' heads eraſed Or, Marche; 2. and 3. Vert, a pile wavy Ermine. Creſt, out of a mural crown Or, a demi-griffin rampant Argent, holding a mullet. Motto, Mors mihi lucrum.

Woollaſton; impaling, Argent, a croſs raguly Gules, on a chief of the laſt a lion paſſant of the firſt, Lawrence; creſt as before.

Sable, a chevron Ermine between three ſtorks Argent; with pretence as before; Hatbye.

In a lozenge for lady Woollaſton, Quarterly, 1. and 4. Woollaſton; 2. and 3. Lawrence; with pretence, Quarterly, as before.

Quarterly; 1. and 4. Vert, a fleur de lis Argent, Fowke; 2. and 3. Azure, a feſs wavy between ſix dolphins naiant, embowed Argent, 3. and 3. On an eſcocheon, quarterly; 1. and 4. Woollaſton; 2. Lawrence; 3. Marche. Creſt, an arm embowed, in armour Sable, garniſhed Or, hand Proper, holding a broken ſpear headed by a pheon Or.

William Burdet gave the church of Loſeby to the Hoſpital of Burton Lazars; which was confirmed to them by king John, and ſoon after appropriated to the ſaid hoſpital [1]; and accordingly, in 1220 [2], Loſeby is deſcribed as then under the patronage of the brethren of St. Lazarus, who held the ſame to their own uſe; and had alſo a chapel at Newton, which was to be ſerved daily from the mother church.

In an antient roll of inſtitutions of Hugh Wells, biſhop of Lincoln, who began to preſide over that ſee in the year of our Lord 1209, in the 23d year of the ſaid biſhop, there is contained as follows:

"Louſbia. Alexander de Wetinton, capellanus, preſentabatur per magiſtrum & fratres domûs Sc̄i Lazari de Burton ad vicariam eccleſie de Louſebiâ, factâ priùs inquiſitione per d̄num archidiaconum Leiceſtrie; per quem, &c. ad eandem admiſſus eſt, cum onere & penâ vicarii, &c. Conſiſtit autem ipſa vicaria in omnibus minutis decimis ipſius parochie, & omnibus oblationibus & obventionibus, tam ad matricem eccleſiam quàm ad capellam de Newton provenientibus, & in terrâ eccleſie cum manſo. Salvo tamen dictis fratribus loco competenti ad decimas ſuas & ſervientes ſuos ibidem neceſſarios recipiendum. Et habebit vicarius capellanum ſocium in capellâ predictâ continuè miniſtrantem ſumptibus ipſius vicarii, qui de ſynodalibus tantum reſpondebit. Et predicti fratres hoſpitii archidiaconi & omnia alia onera dictas matricem eccleſiam & capellam contingentia ordinaria, debita, & conſueta, ſuſtinebunt. Et mandatum eſt archidiacono Leiceſtrie, ut, &c." [3]

The Survey of Pope Nicholas, in 1291, ſays, "vicarage 7 marks; rectory 22 marks."

In 1344, the procurations for Loſeby and Newton were, 7*s*. 6¼*d*.; and the rectory was taxed at 32 marks, and paid 2*s*. for Peter-pence.

In the ſurvey of eccleſiaſtical benefices, taken on a ſpecial commiſſion, in 1534-5, at the time when king Henry the Eighth was about taking the firſt fruits and tenths from the Pope, the vicarage of Loſeby is ſtated to conſiſt of certain cloſes and money (pecunia, not penſione), worth, communibus annis, £7. 1*s*. 5½*d*.

And in the return of the poſſeſſions of the monaſteries under the ſame commiſſion, among the outgoings of Burton Lazarus hoſpital, was paid to Gilbert Sturges, vicar of Loweſby, a penſion of £6. 13*s*. 4*d*. This return (no doubt) was taken from the hoſpital-books, or their report, where it is put down a penſion; becauſe the hoſpital, through their inclination to ſtraiten their vicars, endeavoured to have it ſo accounted. A penſion of 6*s*. 8*d*. was alſo paid to Thomas Dicons [4].

In April 1544, the following inquiſition was returned:

"Rex vicecomitibus, &c. ſalutem. Cùm per quandam inquiſitionem indentatam captam ſeptimo die Aprilis, anno regni noſtri xxxv, inter alia ſit compertum, quòd quoddam Hoſpitale quorundam magiſtri & confratrum de Burton Sancti Lazari Jeruſalem in Angliâ, &c. per progenitores ſive progenitorem noſtros quondam reges Anglie, ante tempus memorie, & à tempore cujus contrarii memoria hominum non exiſtit, &c.; & quòd predictum nuper Hoſpitale, die captionis inquiſitionis predicte, totalitèr extinctum & penitùs diſſolutum exſtitit, & adhuc exiſtit, & nullus confrater neque magiſter ibidem exiſtit; neque à xii die Aprilis, anno regni noſtri xxxi, exiſtit ſeu exiſtebat. Et quòd predicti nuper magiſter & confratres ejuſdem Hoſpitalis dicto xii die Aprilis, dicto anno regni noſtri xxxi, fuerunt ſeiſiti in feodo in jure dicti nuper Hoſpitalis, de & in maneriis de Burton, Melton Mowbray, & Newton Burdett, in comitatu Leiceſtrie; & de & in rectoriâ de Loweſby in comitatu predicto; ac de & in terris, glebis, terris, decimis, & ceteris oblationibus & obventionibus, eidem rectorie pertinentibus, tanquam eidem Hoſpitali appropriatis; & quòd predicta rectoria de Loweſby, cum ſuis pertinentiis, valet per annum in omnibus exitibus ultra repriſam xlī." [5]

May 4, 1544, the whole poſſeſſions of Burton Hoſpital (including the rectories of Loſeby, Feltham, Spondon, and Threckinham) were granted to John Dudley viſcount Liſle, in the following terms:

"Henricus Octavus, Dei gratiâ, Anglie, Francie, &c. omnibus ad quos, &c. ſalutem. Sciatis, quòd nos, in conſideratione boni, veri, fidelis, & acceptabilis conſilii & ſervicii nobis per predilectum conſiliarium noſtrum Johannem Dudley, prenobilis ordinis Garterii militem, vicecomitem Liſle, &c. dedimus & conceſſimus, ac per preſentes damus & concedimus, eidem Johanni Dudley, vicecomiti Liſle, totum nuper Hoſpitale de Burton Sancti Lazari, &c. cum ſuis juribus, membris, & pertinentiis univerſis, in comitatu noſtro Leiceſtrie, modò diſſolutum, ac in manibus noſtris jam exiſtens; necnon manerium noſtrum de Newton Burdett, ac rectoriam noſtram & eccleſiam noſtram de Loweſbie, cum eorum juribus, membris, & pertinentiis univerſis, in dicto comitatu noſtro Leiceſtrie, dicto nuper Hoſpitali de Burton Sancti Lazari, &c. dudum ſpectantia & pertinentia, ac parcellas poſſeſſionum indè exiſtentia; necnon advocationem, donationem, liberam diſpoſitionem, & jus patronatûs vicarie eccleſie parochialis de Loweſbye, in dicto comitatu noſtro Leiceſtrie, dicto nuper Hoſpitali de Burton Sancti Lazari dudum ſpectantia & pertinentia; ac etiam omnia & ſingula dominia, maneria, meſſuagia, rectorias, eccleſias, capellas, terras, tenementa, prata, &c.; penſiones, portiones, decimas, oblationes, advocationes, donationes, liberas diſpoſitiones, & jura patronatuum eccleſiarum & capellarum, ac aliorum beneficiorum eccleſiaſticorum quorumcunque; ac alia jura, proficua, &c. tam ſpiritualia quàm temporalia, cujuſcunque ſint generis, nature, vel ſpeciei, ſeu quibuſcunque nominibus ſciantur, cenſeantur, vel cognoſcantur, ſituata, jacentia, vel exiſtentia, in villis, campis, parochiis, & hamelettis de Burton Sancti Lazari, & in Loweſbie, Newton Burdett, &c.; adeò plenè & integrè, ac in tam amplis & conſimilibus modo & formâ, prout nuper magiſtri ſive gubernatores dicti nuper Hoſpitalis de Burton Sancti Lazari, in jure dictorum nuper Hoſpitalium, aliquo tempore ante ſeparales diſſolutiones eorundem nuper Hoſpitalium, aut antequàm nuper Hoſpitalia illa ad manus noſtras devenerunt, habuerunt, tenuerunt, vel gaviſi fuerunt, &c.; habend', tenend', & gaudend' predictum nuper Hoſpitale de Burton Sancti Lazari, ac omnia & ſingula predicta maneria, rectorias, advocationes, meſſuagia, & cetera

---

[1] Reg. Burton Lazars, in Bibl. Cotton.

[2] See the Introductory Volume, p. lx.

[3] A true copy, extracted from the Regiſtry of the dioceſe of Lincoln. John Bradley, Deputy Regiſtrar.

[4] From the Original in the Firſt Fruits Office.

[5] Eſch. 36 Hen. VIII.

omnia & ſingula premiſſa ſuperiùs expreſſa & ſpecificata, cum ſuis pertinentiis univerſis, prefato Johanni Dudley, militi, vicecomiti Liſle, heredibus & aſſignatis ſuis, in perpetuum; reddendo annuatim nobis, heredibus & ſucceſſoribus noſtris, de & pro predictâ rectoriâ de Loweſby, & ceteris premiſſis eidem rectorie ſpectantibus & pertinentibus, octodecim ſolidos & octo denarios. Et ulteriùs, de uberiori gratiâ noſtrâ, volumus, ac auctoritate regiâ quâ fungimur, per preſentes, pro nobis, heredibus & ſucceſſoribus noſtris, concedimus prefato Johanni Dudley, militi, vicecomiti Liſle, heredibus & aſſignatis ſuis, quòd idem Johannes Dudley, miles, vicecomes Liſle, heredes & aſſignati ſui, de cetero in perpetuum habebunt, tenebunt, & gaudebunt, ac in uſus ſuos proprios convertent, ac habere, tenere, gaudere, & in uſus ſuos proprios convertere valeant & poſſint, dictas eccleſias & rectorias de Loweſby, &c.; ac omnes & ſingulas terras, glebas, decimas garbarum & granorum, ac alias decimas & oblationes quaſcunque; necnon alia proficua & commoditates quecunque dictis rectoriis de Loweſby quoquo modo ſpectantia vel pertinentia; adeò plenè & integrè, ac in tam amplis modo & formâ, prout dictus ultimus magiſter ſive gubernator dicti nuper Hoſpitalis de Burton Sancti Lazari predicti, aut aliquis vel aliqui predeceſſorum, in jure nuper Hoſpitalis illius, aliquo tempore ante diſſolutionem ejuſdem nuper Hoſpitalis, aut antequàm nuper Hoſpitale illud ad manus noſtras devenit, predictas rectorias & eccleſias de Loweſby, &c. predicta terras, glebas, decimas garbarum & granorum, ac alias decimas & oblationes, ac proficua & commoditates quecunque, eiſdem rectoriis ſpectantia & pertinentia, habuerunt, tenuerunt, gaviſi fuerunt, &c. In cujus, &c. Teſte, &c. IIII° die Maii, anno regni noſtri XXXVI°."

After the attainder of the duke of Northumberland, the following grant was made by queen Mary:

"Regina omnibus ad quos, &c. ſalutem. Sciatis quòd nos, pro ſummâ CCCXXIIIlī. XIIIs̄ xd̄. legalis monete Anglie per dilectum ſubditum noſtrum Willielmum Fawnte ad uſum noſtrum perſolut', &c. damus & concedimus prefato Willielmo Fawnte & Henrico Chamberleyne totum illud manerium noſtrum de Newton Burdett, aliàs dictum manerium de Colde Newton, in comitatu noſtro Leiceſtrie, cum ſuis juribus, membris, & pertinentiis univerſis, nuper parcellam terrarum & poſſeſſionum Johannis nuper ducis Northumbrie, de altâ proditione attincti & convicti exiſtentis, ac quondam parcellam terrarum & poſſeſſionum nuper Hoſpitalis de Burton Sancti Lazari in dicto comitatu Leiceſtrie exiſtentis; ac etiam totam illam rectoriam & eccleſiam noſtram de Loweſbye, in dicto noſtro comitatu Leiceſtrie, cum ſuis juribus, membris, & pertinentiis univerſis; necnon advocationem, donationem, preſentationem, liberam diſpoſitionem, & jus patronatûs vicarie eccleſie de Loweſbye predictâ; ac etiam omnes & omnimodas decimas granorum, lane, feni, agnellorum, & alias decimas quaſcunque; ac oblationes, emolumenta, & proficua quecunque; ac omnia & ſingula terras, tenementa, & hereditamenta noſtra quecunque, vocat' Les Glebe Lands, predicte rectorie & eccleſie pertinentia ſive ſpectantia, cum eorum pertinentiis univerſis, ſituata, jacentia, & exiſtentia, provenientia, creſcentia, ſive renovantia, in villis, campis, ſeu parochiis de Newton Burdett & Loweſbye predictis; modò vel nuper in tenurâ ſive occupatione dicti Willielmi Fawnte, vel aſſignatorum ſuorum, ac nuper parcellam dictarum terrarum & poſſeſſionum dicti nuper ducis Northumbrie, & quondam parcellam terrarum & poſſeſſionum dicti nuper Hoſpitalis de Burton Sancti Lazari exiſtentia; habend', tenend', & gaudend', predicta manerium & rectoriam, decimas, oblationes, advocationes, ac cetera omnia & ſingula premiſſa, cum eorum pertinentiis univerſis, prefatis Willielmo Fawnte & Henrico Chamberleyn, ac heredibus & aſſignatis ſuis, in perpetuum, ad proprium opus & uſum ipſorum Willielmi & Henrici, ac heredum & aſſignatorum ſuorum, in perpetuum; tenend' predicta manerium & rectoriam, grangiam, & cetera premiſſa, de nobis & heredibus noſtris in capite, per ſervicium militare, videlt, per ſervicium viceſime partis unius feodi militis. Et ulteriùs volumus, &, pro conſideratione predictâ, concedimus prefatis Willielmo Fawnte & Henrico Chamberleyn, ac heredibus & aſſignatis ſuis, quòd nos, heredes & ſucceſſores noſtri, annuatim, & de tempore in tempus, acquietabimus, exonerabimus, aut indempnes conſervabimus, tam eoſdem Willielmum Fawnte & Henricum Chamberleyne, ac heredes & aſſignatos ſuos, quàm predicta manerium, rectoriam, grangiam, meſſuagia, terras, tenementa, & cetera premiſſa, cum eorum pertinentiis univerſis, versùs nos, heredes & ſucceſſores noſtros, & versùs alias perſonas quaſcunque & aliam perſonam quamcunque, de omnibus & ſingulis corrodiis, redditibus, feodis, annuitatibus, penſionibus, portionibus, & denariorum ſummis, & oneribus quibuſcunque annualibus, de predictis manerio, rectoriâ, grangiâ, meſſuagiis, terris, tenementis, & ceteris premiſſis, ſeu de aliquâ indè parcellâ, quoquo modo exeuntibus, ſeu ſolvendis, vel ſuperindè oneratis ſeu onerandis; preterquàm de ſerviciis nobis, heredibus & ſucceſſoribus noſtris, per preſentes reſervatis; ac preterquàm de quâdam annuali penſione ſex librarum, treſdecim ſolidorum, & quatuor denariorum, annuatim ſolutorum vicario de Loweſbye predictâ, extra predictam rectoriam de Loweſbye, & eidem vicario & ſucceſſoribus ſuis in dotatione aſſignat'. Ac etiam volumus, pro conſideratione predictâ, quòd iidem Willielmus & Henricus, ac heredes & aſſignati ſui, habeant, teneant, & gaudeant, ac in uſus ſuos proprios convertant, ac habere, tenere, & gaudere, ac in uſus ſuos proprios convertere, poſſint & valeant, predicta rectoriam, glebas, decimas, oblationes, obventiones, penſiones, portiones, & cetera ſpiritualia proficua predicta, cum eorum pertinentiis univerſis, adeò plenè, liberè, & integrè, ac in tam amplis & conſimilibus modo & formâ, prout predicti nuper magiſter & nuper confratres dicti nuper Hoſpitalis de Burton Sancti Lazari, aut aliquis vel aliqui predeceſſorum ſuorum, in jure nuper Hoſpitalis illius, aliquo tempore ante diſſolutionem ejuſdem nuper Hoſpitalis, vel antequàm nuper Hoſpitale illud ad manus prechariſſimi patris noſtri devenit, predicta rectoriam, glebas, decimas, oblationes, obventiones, & cetera ſpiritualia proficua predicta, aut aliquam indè parcellam, habuerunt, tenuerunt, vel gaviſi fuerunt, ac in uſus ſuos proprios convertebant, habuerunt, tenuerunt, vel graviſi fuerunt, &c. In cujus, &c. Teſte Reginâ, apud Weſtm', XIIII die Junii, anno regni ſui primo."

The extent and clear yearly value of the manors, lands, &c. of William Faunt the elder, deceaſed the 4th of September, 1559, deſcended to William Faunt his ſon, as by the office found.

Manor of Newton Burdett, alias Cold Newton, with the appurtenances; one grange, called Newton Grange, alias Le Spittell, alias Le Spittell Grange, alias Le Spittell Hills; the parſonage of the church of Loſeby; the advowſon of the vicarage of Loſeby; all tenths of corn, hay, lambs, wool, and other tenths, in Loſeby and Newton, late parcel of the poſſeſſions of John late duke of Northumberland, and before parcel of the late hoſpital of Burton St. Lazarus, holden of the queen's majeſty in chief, by the 20th part of a knight's fee, by year £15. 2*s*. 5¼*d*. in leaſe to Anthony Vincent and others, for 11 years, paying for rent the ſaid ſum, and to the vicar of Loſeby £6. 13*s*. 4*d*. &c. payable at Lady-day and Michaelmas[1].

In the livery of ſeiſen ſued out on William Faunt's coming of age, in 1567, the ſame penſion is entered.

By inquiſition taken at Tilton, July 4, 1587, before William Turpin, eſq. and other commiſſioners, it was found that Anthony Faunt, eſq. died May 11 laſt paſt, ſeiſed in fee of the manor of Newton Burdett, and of the rectory of Loſeby; alſo of the advowſon of the vicarage of Loſeby; with all the tithes and other profits growing and ariſing in Loſeby and Newton Burdet (aliàs Cold Newton); that they were held of the queen in capite, by the ſervice of a twentieth part of a knight's fee; and that William his ſon and heir was 13 years old on the 13th of Auguſt, 1586[2].

On the hearing of a cauſe in the Court of Wards,

---

[1] Chapter-houſe Survey Book, from the 1ſt to 10th Eliz. fol. 132.

[2] Eſch. 30 Eliz.

Feb. 4, 1591-2, between William Browne, eſq. and his wife, on the behalf of William Fawnte, ſon and heir of Anthony Fawnte, deceaſed, plaintiffs; and John Hunt and Francis Whiting, defendants; it appeared that Anthony Fawnte died ſeiſed of the rectory or parſonage appropriate of Loſeby, co. Leiceſter, parcel of the poſſeſſions of Burton St. Lazarus, in the ſaid county; and of all manner of tithes of corn, hay, wool, lamb, wood, and divers other kinds of tithes thereunto belonging, as well in Loſeby as in Cold Newton, then in her majeſty's hands, by reaſon of the minority of the ſaid ward. It appeared alſo, as well by the valuation of the ſaid vicarage in the Office of Firſt Fruits and Tenths, as by an antient leaſe made by the maſter and brethren of the late hoſpital of Burton St. Lazarus, of the tithes of hay, wool, lamb, and other tithes renewing in the pariſh of Loſeby, and by other good and material allegations and proofs on the behalf of the ſaid ward, it ſeemed to the Court, that the vicarage conſiſteth only of a houſe and a cloſe in Loſeby aforeſaid, and of a yearly penſion of £6. 13*s*. 4*d*. going out of the ſaid parſonage, valued in the whole at £7. 1*s*. 4*d*. and increaſed with other ſmall tithes by grant of compoſition, in augmentation of the living of the ſaid vicar, allowed to him and his ſucceſſors in the time of queen Mary, by William Fawnte, grandfather of the ward, then owner and proprietor of the parſonage: in which compoſition there is mention made of a former compoſition had between the ſaid maſter and brethren and the vicar of Loſeby, ſtating, that the ſaid vicar had only a dwelling-houſe and a cloſe, and £6. 13*s*. 4*d*. yearly penſion out of the ſaid parſonage, and no more; and that the defendants themſelves, by their ſeveral anſwers, confeſſed that the ſaid Anthony Fawnte was ſeiſed, and died ſeiſed, of and in the ſaid rectory, and received and had the tithes then in variance, viz. of wool, lamb, wood, &c. It was therefore, concerning the ſaid matters of tithes and tithing, that day ordered and decreed, on the part and behalf of the ſaid complainants, that they, their farmers and aſſigns, ſhall and may have and enjoy all and ſingular the ſaid tithes, now in variance, during the minority of the ſaid ward, as appertaining to the ſaid parſonage of Loſeby, as the father of the ſaid ward had and enjoyed the ſame.

In Hilary Term 1593-4, on an information by the queen's attorney-general againſt Richard Paramour, eſq. Balthazar Coply, and others, ſetting forth, that Anthony Fawnte, father of the ward, was ſeiſed of the rectory and parſonage of Loſeby, and of all manner of tithes of corn and hay, wool, lamb, wood, and of all manner of tithes and eccleſiaſtical duties whatſoever, renewing within Loſeby and Newton aforeſaid, and elſewhere in the pariſh of Loſeby; excepting all mortuaries, oblations, and offerings, and the tithes of calves and foals, ariſing only in Newton; and of the advowſon of the vicarage of Loſeby; the defendants ſet up another title, but could not ſupport it. Therefore it was decreed as in the former decree is ſtated.

Dec. 17, 1602, the rectory and tithes of Loſeby were re-granted to William Fawnte, the then grantee, for farther ſecuring his title, in the following terms:

"Regina omnibus ad quos, &c. ſalutem. Sciatis, quòd nos, pro & in conſideratione ſumme cxxlī. ixs̃. vid̄. per dilectum ſubditum noſtrum Willielmum Fawnte pre manibus benè & fidelitèr ſolut', &c. damus & concedimus prefato Willielmo Fawnte, heredibus & aſſignatis ſuis, totum illud manerium noſtrum in Newton, Newton Burdett, & in Colde Newton, ſeu earum aliquâ, in comitatu noſtro Leiceſtrie; ac etiam totam illam rectoriam & eccleſiam noſtram de Loweſby in comitatu noſtro Leiceſtrie, cum ſuis juribus, membris, & pertinentiis univerſis, quondam parcelle terrarum & poſſeſſionum nuper Hoſpitalis de Burton Sancti Lazari exiſtentes; necnon advocationem, donationem, preſentationem, liberam diſpoſitionem, & jus patronatûs vicarie eccleſie de Loweſbye predicta; ac etiam omnes & omnimodas decimas granorum, lane, feni, agnellorum, & alias decimas quaſcunque; ac oblationes, emolumenta, & proficua quecunque; ac omnia & ſingula terras, tenementa, & hereditamenta noſtra quecunque, vocat' Les Gleab Landes, predictis rectorie & eccleſie pertinentia ſive ſpectantia, cum eorum pertinentiis univerſis, ſituata, jacentia, & exiſtentia, provenientia, creſcentia, ſeu renovantia, in villis, campis, ſeu parochiis de Newton Burdett & Loweſbye predictis, ſeu earum aliquâ, nuper vel quondam in tenurâ ſive occupatione Willielmi Fawnte, vel aſſignatorum ſuorum, quondam parcelle terrarum & poſſeſſionum nuper Hoſpitalis de Burton Sancti Lazari in dicto comitatu Leiceſtrie exiſtentia; ac etiam omnia & ſingula meſſuagia, decimas garbarum, bladorum, granorum, & feni, lane, lini, canabi, & agnellorum; ac omnes alias decimas quaſcunque, tam majores quàm minores; necnon oblationes, &c.; que quidem rectoria & eccleſia de Loweſby predictâ, cum omnibus decimis granorum, feni, lane, & agnellorum, provenientium & creſcentium in villis & campis de Loweſby & Newton Burdett predictis, per particularia indè, extenduntur ad annuum valorem quatuordecim librarum; habend', tenend', & gaudend', predicta manerium, grangiam, rectoriam, decimas, meſſuagia, terras, & tenementa, prefato Willielmo Fawnte, heredibus & aſſignatis ſuis, ad ſolum & proprium opus & uſum ipſius Willielmi Fawnte, ac heredum & aſſignatorum ſuorum, in perpetuum: tenend' predicta maneria, grangiam, rectoriam, decimas, &c. de nobis, heredibus & ſucceſſoribus noſtris, in capite, per ſervicium militare, &c. Et ulteriùs, de ampliori gratiâ noſtrâ ſpeciali, ac ex certâ ſcientiâ, &c. concedimus prefato Willielmo Fawnte, heredibus & aſſignatis ſuis, quòd nos, heredes & ſucceſſores noſtri, in perpetuum, annuatim, & de tempore in tempus, exonerabimus, acquietabimus, & indempnes conſervabimus, tam prefatum Willielmum Fawnte, heredes & aſſignatos ſuos, quàm predicta maneria, grangiam, rectoriam, decimas, advocationes, meſſuagia, terras, &c. de & ab omnibus & omnimodis corrodiis, redditibus, feodis, annuitatibus, penſionibus, &c.; preterquàm de ſerviciis & tenuris ſuperiùs per premiſſa reſervatis; ac preterquàm de ſex libris, tredecim ſolidis, quatuor denariis, de predictâ rectoriâ de Loweſbye exeuntibus; ac vicariam de Loweſby, pro annuali penſione ſuâ annuatim ſolvendâ in perpetuum; ac preterquàm de undecim ſolidis, uno obolo, uno quadrante, de eâdem rectoriâ de Loweſby exeuntibus, & archidiacono Leiceſtrie pro procuratione & ſynodalibus annuatim ſolvendis. Et predictus Willielmus Fawnte, pro ſe, heredibus & aſſignatis ſuis, convenit & concedit ad & cum nobis, heredibus & ſucceſſoribus noſtris, quòd ipſe prefatus Willielmus Fawnte, heredes & aſſignati ſui, predictam annualem penſionem ſex librarum, tredecim ſolidorum, & quatuor denariorum, de predictâ rectoriâ de Loweſbye annuatim exeuntium, vicario de Loweſbye predicto & ſucceſſoribus ſuis pro tempore exiſtentibus, & predictos undecim ſolidos, unum obolum, & unum quadrantem, annuatim ſolvendos archidiacono Leiceſtrie pro tempore exiſtenti, annuatim ſolvent, ſeu ſolvi facient; & nos, heredes & ſucceſſores noſtros, in perpetuum, annuatim, & de tempore in tempus, exonerabunt, acquietabunt, & indempnes conſervabunt in perpetuum. In cujus, &c. Teſte Reginâ, apud Weſtm', XVII die Decembris."

William Chamberlaine (ſuppoſed to be the heir or repreſentative of Henry Chamberlaine, to whom, jointly with William Fawnte, the rectory had been granted by queen Mary), Rowland Kniveton, and George Aſhby, by bargain and ſale, Dec. 1, 1624, enrolled in Chancery, in conſideration of £600. paid by Thomas Lane, Thomas Jackſon, and William Gardener, conveyed to them all and all manner of tithes, of what nature, condition, or quality ſoever; and all diſmes, penſions, portions, oblations, emoluments, and profits whatſoever, coming, growing, renewing, ariſing, increaſing, iſſuing, or going out of any of the lands in Loſeby, in the county of Leiceſter, or being parcel of the demeſnes of the manor of Loſeby aforeſaid, then or late in the poſſeſſion or occupation of the ſaid Chamberlaine, Kniveton, and Aſhby, or either of them, or of their farmers or tenants, with their and every of their rights, members, and appurtenances; and all and ſingular glebe lands, tenements, profits, commodities, and hereditaments whatſoever, to the rectory and parſonage of Loſeby aforeſaid belonging, or in any wiſe appertaining, lying, or being amongſt any the demeſne lands of Loſeby aforeſaid, and conveyed or mentioned or intended to be conveyed, to the ſaid Chamberlaine, Kniveton, and Aſhby; and alſo all manner of tithes coming, growing, renewing, or increaſing of, in, or upon the ſaid glebe lands, tenements, and hereditaments, or any part thereof; and all other the tithes of the ſaid Chamberlaine, Kniveton, and Aſhby, and every of them, coming, growing, or renewing, in Loſeby aforeſaid, with their appurtenances, &c. to have, hold, perceive, receive, take, and enjoy, all the ſaid glebe lands, tithes, diſmes, penſions, portions, &c. to the ſaid Lane, Jackman, and Gardner, their heirs and aſſigns for ever.

Sir William Faunt, knt. proprietor of the rectory, ſued William Bent for tithe of wool and lambs there; on which occaſion the modus decimandi was diſputed [1].

In a cauſe heard in the Exchequer 1640, between John Waybred, clerk, plaintiff, and ſir William Faunt, knight, defendant; Walter Holbert, gent. on the part of the plaintiff, depoſed, that the pariſh of Loweſby is of great extent, and hath two lordſhips within it, viz. Loweſby and Newton; and that the lands, tenements, and hereditaments, in the ſaid lordſhips, were worth £2000. a year; and that ſir William Fawnte held in his own occupation as much thereof as was worth £.300 a year at leaſt. He believed that the tithe of hay in the ſaid pariſh was worth by the year £26. 13*s*. 4*d*. one year with another; and that the tithe of wool and lamb was worth £90. a year, one year with another, for that there yearly depaſtured and clipped in that pariſh, one year with another, 4000 ſheep, and 2000 lambs, that were there fallen and come to tithing; that Mr. Fowell, the laſt incumbent, told the deponent, that, by the ſpace of 23 years, he had but the ſum of £6. a year, paid at two times in the year by ſir William Faunte; and the houſe and croft, with the church-yard, and ſome ſmall tithes from Newton, at the rate of 2½*d*. for a cow, and 1*d*. for a ſtrapper, 1*d*. a mare and foal, tithe of pigs, chicken, apples, and ſuch like things, which were worth 6*s*. 8*d*. a year, or thereabouts; that all the offerings and ſmall tithes of the ſaid pariſh, which had been paid to the laſt vicar, were worth 13*s*. 4*d*. or thereabouts. John Andrews, John Duckett, and other witneſſes, depoſed to the ſame effect.

On the part of the defendant:

William Grey, aged 78, depoſed, that he had known the lordſhip or Loweſby and Cold Newton all the time of his remembrance, and the vicarage there; and had known Mr. Bradley, Mr. Holland, Mr. White, and Mr. Holland a ſecond time, and, he thinks, a Mr. Fiſher, all vicars there; and he had heard that the vicars aforeſaid have had 20 nobles (£6. 13*s*. 4*d*.) per annum; and ſmall tithes at Newton, as pigs, geeſe, eggs, chicken, apples, plumbs, and ſuch like fruits; but that he never knew any tithes paid out of the lordſhip of Loweſby.

Thomas Sturges, aged 78 years, depoſed, that he was born at Cold Newton, and had dwelt there all his time; that he knew Mr. Bradley, Mr. Holland, Mr. Browne, Mr. White, Mr. Whiting, Mr. Fiſher, Mr. Coleman, Mr. Lant, Mr. Morgan, and Mr. Fowell, all vicars of Loweſby; and he knows not of any tithes the ſaid vicars had there, but ſmall tithes, as pigs, geeſe, chicken, eggs, apples, and ſuch other ſmall tithes; and that Mr. White had 20 nobles yearly in money; two loads of hay; two cows' paſture; two loads of wood; and the vicarage-houſe and cloſe adjoining, and the church yard; that the defendant hath had and received tithe of lamb and wool of all Cold-Newton; till, within theſe two years laſt paſt, that ſome of the occupiers of lands there have paid their tithes to Mr. Waybred the then vicar.

Stafford Barlowe, aged 62, depoſed that he believed and had heard, that the vicarage of Loweſby was endowed with a vicarage-houſe, a homeſtead, and a yearly ſtipend of £6. 13*s*. 4*d*.; and that he had heard the ſame from ſir William Faunt the defendant, and from ſome who had been vicars there, namely, Mr. Fiſher and Mr. Lant. To the ſame effect were the depoſitions of George Beeby, William Beeby, John Burbage, and Richard Thornton.

Decree, 16 Car. I.

Upon this evidence, and upon the production of the act of endowment in the reign of king John, without any proof that it had ever been acted under, the then Court of Exchequer decreed, that the vicar was entitled to all the ſmall tithes within the pariſh of Loweſby. The following orders were, however, ſoon after made by the Court; which, in a manner, ſuſpended the effect of the decree; and there is no proof that it was ever carried into execution.

"Termino Paſche, anno xvi^{to} regis Caroli.
Sabbati, 9° die Maii.

Leic'. Whereas in the cauſe heretofore depending in this Court, by Engliſh Bill, between John Waybred, clerk, plaintiff, and ſir William Faunt, knt. deceaſed, defendant, touching the tithes and the arrearages of the ſmall tithes and church-lands belonging to the vicarage of Loſeby, in the county of Leiceſter, ſince the plaintiff's induction into the ſaid vicarage, until the 14th of October laſt paſt, this Court decreed the ſame for the ſaid plaintiff, and that a commiſſion ſhould iſſue forth of this Court to enquire of the ſaid tithes and church-lands; which commiſſion hath already iſſued forth, and is executed and returned, and divers values of the arrearages and church-lands are returned by the ſaid commiſſioners: Now, upon the motion of Mr. Lenthall, of counſel with the ſaid plaintiff, who prayed that the ſaid ſeveral values might be caſt up by an auditor; the Court doth order Mr. Auditor Brinley to caſt up the ſaid values of the arrearages of the ſaid tithes and church-lands, until the ſaid 14th of October laſt paſt, ſo returned by the ſaid commiſſioners; and to certify the Court thereof."

"Termino Sanctæ Trinitatis, anno xvi° regis Caroli.
Veneris, 19° die Junii.

"Leic'. Whereas in the cauſe heretofore depending in this Court, by Engliſh Bill, between John Weybred, clerk, vicar of Loſeby, plaintiff, and ſir William Faunt, William Chamberlaine, and others, defendants; it was, the 14th day of October in Michaelmas Term laſt, ordered and decreed by this Court, amongſt other things, that the plaintiff ſhould have a commiſſion to examine any perſon or perſons whatſoever concerning the arrearages of the ſmall tithes and church-lands belonging to the ſaid vicarage, ſince the time of the plaintiff's induction into the ſaid vicarage, until the ſaid 14th day of October, and of the beſt value of ſuch ſmall tithes and church-lands, and by reaſon the ſame have been detained from the plaintiff; which commiſſion being executed and returned into this Court, it was, by an order of this Court, made the 9th day of May laſt, ordered, that Mr. Auditor Brinley ſhould caſt up the rates of the ſaid arrearages of the ſaid ſmall tithes and church-lands, and by whom detained, and to certify this Court thereof; who accordingly made their certificate; and hereupon it was, the 16th day of May, the laſt Eaſter Term, ordered by this Court, that ſubpœnas ſhould be awarded, directed to all and every the ſaid perſons who by the ſaid commiſſion and certificate were found to have detained any of the ſaid tithes and church-lands, commanding them to pay to the ſaid plaintiff the arrearages of all ſuch ſmall tithes and church-lands ſo proved by the ſaid commiſſion and certificate; or elſe to ſhew cauſe to this Court, by the firſt Wedneſday of this term, wherefore they refuſe to pay the ſame. And whereas, upon reading of the ſaid Mr. Auditor's certificate, and hearing of Mr. Babington and Mr. Lenthall of counſel with the ſaid plaintiff, and of Mr. Gates and Mr. Cooke of counſel with the ſaid Mr. Chamberlaine, one of the ſaid defendants, and with divers others; it was, the 12th day of this inſtant June, ordered by this Court, that the ſaid defendants ſhould ſhew cauſe, as on this day, why the ſaid Auditor's certificate ſhould not be decreed againſt them, and all others claiming under them; and the ſaid plaintiff might exhibit his bill of complaint againſt the ſaid landholders that were not made defendants in the ſaid bill, if he ſhould ſo think convenient, as by the ſaid ſeveral orders more at large appeareth: Now, upon hearing Mr. Lane, the prince's attorney-general, and Mr. Lenthall of the plaintiff's counſel, and of Mr. Herbert, his majeſty's ſolicitor-general, and Mr. Cooke of counſel with the lady Dormer, and the ſaid Mr. Chamberlaine under-tenant to the ſaid lady Dormer, and with Mr. Faunte, who informed this Court that the ſaid lady Dormer was no party to the ſaid former ſuit, and that ſhe claimed the ſaid tithes in the ſaid defendant Chamberlaine's occupation by a particular title, and therefore ought not to be bound by the ſaid decree; and alſo that the ſaid Mr. Chamberlaine was never ſerved with proceſs ad audiendum judicium, ſo that he could not make any defence, and therefore ought not to be bound by the ſaid decree, claiming under another title than the reſt of the defendants did, and in that regard the ſervice of the other defendants was not ſufficient as againſt him: And whereas they further informed this Court, that the decree is de minutis decimis, and that the commiſſioners have certified wool and lamb to be ſmall tithes, and uſually paid to the vicar: It was alledged, on the behalf of Mr. Faunt, that hay is a predial tithe, and that wool and lamb are not ſmall tithes, in that place: And, upon hearing of the plaintiff's counſel to that point, and after long debate had, it is this day ordered by this Court, that the plaintiff may exhibit a Bill againſt the lady Dormer and Mr. Chamberlaine; but they are not to be bound by the ſaid decree, for the reaſons aforeſaid; and concerning the point of tithes, the Court will conſider what tithes be minutæ decimæ."

---

[1] Sir Henry Winch's Entries, p. 622.; and William Brown's Entering Clerk's Vade Mecum, p. 340.

"Veneris, 26° die Junii.

Leic'. Whereas, upon hearing of Mr. Lane the prince's attorney, Mr. Lenthall and Mr. Weſton, being of counſel with John Waybred, clerk, vicar of Loſeby, plaintiff, and of Mr. Gates, of counſel with Henry Faunte and George Faunte, eſqrs. executors of ſir William Faunte, knt. deceaſed, and others, defendants; whether the tithes of wool and lamb were ſuch ſmall tithes as the ſaid vicarage is endowed withal, according to the true intent and meaning of the endowment mentioned in the decree formerly made in this Court: it was, the 25th day of June inſtant, ordered by this Court, that the plaintiff ſhould have the poſſeſſion of the tithes of wool and lamb, and all other ſmall tithes of the inhabitants there, without the interruption of the ſaid Henry Faunte and George Faunte, and any other the land-holders there, and all and every other perſon or perſons claiming from, by, or under, the ſaid ſir William Faunte, Henry Faunte, George Faunte, and land-holders there, public notice being given of the ſaid order, as by the ſaid notice more at large appeareth: Now, for that Mr. Herbert, the king's majeſty's ſolicitor-general, of counſel with the lady Dormer, Mr. Chamberlaine her tenant, and alſo with the ſaid Mr. Henry and Mr. George Faunte, informed the Court, that the ſaid order was general, not excepting the lady Dormer and her tenants, and therefore deſired that that might be expreſſed, and that the right of the ſaid Mr. Faunt might not be bound by the ſaid decree and order, but that they might try it at law: It is thereupon this day ordered by the Court, that the ſaid lady Dormer and her tenants ſhall not be bound by the ſaid decree, nor the ſaid other defendants barred of their right, but that they may ſue at law; but, if they ſue, they are ordered to ſue in the office of pleas of this Court."

Mr. Burton, in 1642, ſays, "This church is now the inheritance of ſir William Faunt, of Foſton, knt.; who is alſo patron of the vicarage;" which in 1641 he alters to "George Faunt, eſq. the deſigned heir of the late ſir William Faunt;" and in 1650, Loſeby was returned as a place "all incloſed;" ſtipend, £6. 13*s*. 4*d*.; the incumbent "ſufficient."

Oct. 2, 1705, a conveyance was made, from Iſaac Woollaſton, eſq. John Browning, and William Maſſey, to Thomas Bennet, of New Cloſe, Spittle Cloſe, and Debdal Wong, together with all the tithes ariſing thereupon; and, as Mr. Woollaſton was the impropriator, it is ſuppoſed that he conveyed the tithes, and the other parties the lands.

Extract from a terrier of the vicarage of Loweſbye cum Cold Newton, in the county of Leiceſter, made April 13, 1708.

The lordſhip of Loweſby payeth no manner of tithes whatſoever; neither doth Newton hills, in the ſaid pariſh; the lordſhip of Cold Newton, whereof Mr. Marriot is now the landlord, and all other grounds in the ſaid lordſhip, do pay, and are liable to pay, all manner of vicarial tithes; which being at preſent compounded for, they therefore pay the ſum of £27. 9*s*. 9*d*. a year to the curate, which is allowed to him for ſerving the cure.

John Smith, curate.
Daniel Warner, }
Edward Petts, } churchwardens.

Jan. 23, 1717, a conveyance was made, from Thomas Bennet, John Symmonds, Anne, Mary, and Frances Freeman, to Joba Hunt, of the above-mentioned cloſes, with the tithes.

A bargain and ſale from Iſaac Woollaſton, eſq. to Thomas Marriot, eſq. March 20, 1740, of all tithes, great and ſmall, of the ſaid Marriot's lands in Newton, recites, that diſputes have ariſen between the father of the ſaid Iſaac Woollaſton and the ſaid Mr. Marriot, touching the ſmall tithes ariſing upon or in reſpect of the lordſhip of Newton, and the lands and tenements thereunto belonging, lying within the fields, precincts, territories, or hamlets, of Newton Burdet, in the ſaid pariſh of Loweſbye; and witneſſes, that, for putting an end to the ſaid diſputes, and alſo for and in conſideration of the ſum of £300. paid to the ſaid Iſaac Woollaſton by the ſaid Thomas Marriot, he the ſaid Thomas Marriot did grant, bargain, ſell, &c. to the ſaid Thomas Marriot all and ſingular the tithes of wool, lambs, calves, milk, geeſe, ducks, hens, eggs, and all other ſmall tithes whatſoever, coming, growing, renewing, or ariſing, for or in reſpect of the ſaid lordſhip of Newton, or lands or tenements thereunto belonging, lying in the town, fields, precincts, hamlets, or territories of Newton, or for or on account of any perſonal or ſmall tithes whatſoever, ariſing in reſpect of ſuch perſon or perſons who now are, or hereafter ſhall or may be, occupiers of the ſaid lordſhip of Newton, or any part or parts thereof; together with all oblations, obventions, &c. ariſing for or in reſpect of ſuch ſmall tithes, &c.[1]

In July, 1775, Mr. Carr gave notice in writing to all the occupiers, to pay him all ſmall tithes in kind; informed them, that he had diſcovered that he, as vicar, was entitled to them by endowment; upon which notice ſeveral of the principal occupiers, or their landlords, conſulted the impropriators, refuſing at the ſame time to pay their ſaid tithes; alledging they had never been uſed to pay any, but not pretending that they had paid them, or any compoſition for them, to the impropriator. After this, one Edwards, ſteward to ſir Thomas Fowke, told Mr. Carr that the impropriator had been accuſtomed to pay the vicar of Loweſby for the time being a ſtipend of £13. a year, for ſerving the church; to whom Mr. Carr anſwered, that he had found the endowment of the vicarage, and had diſcovered by it that he was entitled to all ſmall tithes of the whole pariſh; and, therefore, he had nothing to do with the £13. Upon which Mr. Edwards anſwered, that the impropriator would conteſt the vicar's being entitled to all ſmall tithes; and that, if he would not accept the £13. a year, he could very much reduce the value of the vicar's tithes, by plowing more than had been uſual: Mr. Carr ſtill refuſed to accept of the £13. and inſiſted on his title to the ſaid tithes by endowment; and in Trinity Term 1778, filed his bill of complaint in his Majeſty's Court of Exchequer, againſt Richard Raddle, George Henton, Robert Peat, William Curtis, William Chamberlain, William Pick, Robert Kirk, Avery Butlin, John Ayre, gent. Thomas Eaglefield, James Clifford, Anthony Chapman, Charles Illſon, William Friſby, John Pegg, and Thomas Percival, occupiers of divers lands and hereditaments in the pariſh of Loweſby; ſtating that (as vicar of the ſaid pariſh) he was entitled by endowment, preſcription, or uſage, to the tithes of wool and lamb, and all other ſmall tithes ariſing within the ſaid pariſh.

---

[1] At the aſſizes at Leiceſter, in 1751 or 2, when Thomas Marriot, eſq. had a ſuit with the heirs of ſir Iſaac Woollaſton, claiming in ſome ſhape the manor of Cold Newton; he in ſome meaſure ſucceeded; but it was generally ſuppoſed that the Woollaſtons miſcarried for want of being able to produce the proper papers, which were lodged with their other deeds, for a mortgage, with a London banker; and which, either for the banker's death or ſome other reaſon, could not be got at and exhibited in court. Sir Iſaac Woollaſton was then lately dead.—At that aſſize a great cauſe was tried between Vowe and Fenwick about Hallaton. On one ſide an eminent counſel, not of the circuit, was brought down on a great fee, as it was thought at that time, but did not carry his cauſe: however, it gave occaſion to a droll ſcene. Mr. Marriot was alſo waiting in court; and his leading counſel, regularly of that court, fell upon him in the ſharpeſt manner for having given a greater fee to the extraneous counſel than to him. Willing to ſecure every advantage, he had feed this great counſel; but, though a very miſerly man, deprecated the wrath of this furious lawyer in the moſt abject manner, holding out to him a handful of guineas, and deſiring him to ſatisfy himſelf. In vol. II. part II. p. 609, no mention is made of this trial of Vowe and Fenwick; yet it ſeems to have been of ſome conſequence, from a great counſel being brought down.

In June 1779, moſt of the other occupiers having given ſecurity to abide by the event of the ſuit, George Henton, Robert Peat, William Chamberlain, and Robert Kirk, four of the defendants, and all of whom were tenants to the impropriator, put in their anſwer; and Anthony Chapman a ſeparate anſwer to the very ſame effect, admitting Mr. Carr to be vicar, but alledging that as vicar he was not entitled to any ſmall tithes ariſing within the ſaid pariſh, but only to a yearly penſion of £6. 13*s.* 4*d.* payable by the impropriator or owner of the impropriate rectory, in lieu of all ſmall tithes ariſing within the ſaid pariſh; and that all tithes, great and ſmall, belonged to the impropriator.

In July 1781, the impropriator Thomas Fowke, and the ſaid George Henton, Robert Peate, William Chamberlain, and Robert Kirk, exhibited their croſs bill in the ſame Court (which was afterwards amended, purſuant to an order dated July 20, 1783), praying that the ſaid antient yearly penſion of 20 nobles might be eſtabliſhed to the vicar, in lieu of all ſmall tithes; and inſiſting that all tithes, great and ſmall, of the ſaid pariſh, belonged to him the impropriator, and that the appellant was only entitled to an antient penſion or ſalary of 20 nobles a year, in lieu of all ſmall tithes ariſing within the ſaid pariſh, and an additional yearly penſion or ſalary of 20 nobles ſettled upon the vicar by a former impropriator, one William Boothby, about the year 1679, upon the ſaid William Boothby's conveying the rectory and patronage of the vicarage of the ſaid pariſh to earl Ferrers; and that the ſaid antient 20 nobles, and the ſaid additional 20 nobles, were payable by the ſaid impropriator to the vicar.

In or about May 1782, Mr. Carr put in his anſwer to the ſaid croſs bill; and a commiſſion to examine witneſſes was afterwards held, between Mr. Carr, and the ſaid Henton, Peat, Chamberlain, and Kirk; the ſaid impropriator, ſir Thomas Fowke, being all the while preſent at the holding the ſaid commiſſion, and having the ſole management of it on the part of the defendants.

The cauſe came on to be heard in Trinity Term 1783; but the impropriator not having brought his croſs cauſe forward for hearing, the ſaid cauſe was put off, that the ſame and the croſs cauſe might be heard together. The impropriator, in purſuance of an order dated July 20, 1783, amended his croſs bill, leaving out of it the additional penſion or ſalary of 20 nobles, which was ſaid to be ſettled upon the vicar by the ſaid William Boothby, and only retaining the antient 20 nobles in lieu of all ſmall tithes. Both the ſaid cauſes being at iſſue, came on to be heard on November 7, 1783, and afterwards continued to be heard on the 13th, 14th, 17th, 18th, 21ſt, and 22d days of November. Early in the courſe of ſuch hearing, the Court diſmiſſed the impropriator's croſs bill, ſaying, That if the Reſpondents had ſtood any chance of an iſſue being directed, which they were then trying to obtain, they had deſtroyed it by the ambiguous wording of their croſs bill, for that a penſion in lieu of tithes was a contradiction. If it was a penſion, it was not in lieu of tithes; and if it was in lieu of tithes, it was not a penſion.

The Court, in Trinity Term 1784, gave judgement, directing that it ſhould be referred to a trial at law in a feigned action to be for that purpoſe brought, in the office of Pleas in that court, on the following iſſue, viz. Whether Mr. Carr, as vicar, was intitled to all the ſmall tithes ariſing within the ſaid pariſh, when the endowment ſays, conſiſtit autem ipſa vicaria in omnibus minutis decimis, and that the Appellant ſhould be plaintiff, George Henton, William Chamberlain, and Anthony Chapman, ſhould be defendants.

Mr. Carr would in this ſtate of the buſineſs have forthwith appealed from ſuch iſſue; but was adviſed, that (as the Barons had, in pronouncing their judgement, grounded their opinion upon matter not argued in Court, viz. That the ſaid decree of the 14th October, 1639, was not binding for want of the biſhop's being a party to it with the vicar), it would not be prudent to appeal till this point had been argued: Accordingly, in Eaſter Term 1785, he petitioned for and obtained a re-hearing for the purpoſe of having this point argued. In Hilary Term 1786, the Court declared, That as the impropriator was not a party to the ſuit, now his croſs bill was diſmiſſed, it was of no uſe to hear the cauſe, becauſe they could not make a decree for want of him being a party (the conteſt being between the Impropriator and Vicar only), they both claiming the ſmall tithes; and therefore ordered the Appellant to make him a party again, by adding him to his bill; to which the Appellant's counſel objected that he ſhould make himſelf a party again, by applying for a re-hearing of his croſs bill: the Appellant did (according to the order of the Court) amend his Bill, and made the Impropriator a party. The Impropriator, between Hilary and Eaſter Term 1786, put in his anſwer thereto, to the ſame effect as he had ſtated in his amended croſs bill, inſiſting that nothing was due to the Appellant as vicar of the ſaid pariſh, but the antient penſion of 20 nobles, or £6. 13*s.* 4*d.* in lieu of all ſmall tithes; and that all tithes, great and ſmall, belonged to him the Impropriator.

Upon this re-hearing, May 18, 1786, the Court was pleaſed to confirm their decree of June 28, 1784, by which the aforeſaid iſſue was directed to be tried; and they reſerved the conſideration of coſts, and all farther directions, until after the trial of the ſaid iſſue.

In March 1788, this long-conteſted cauſe came regularly before the Houſe of Peers; and the hearing laſted two days; when their Lordſhips confirmed the former decree of the Court of Exchequer in favour of the Impropriator.

The iſſue, Carr, v. Henton, was tried at Leiceſter in the ſummer aſſizes of 1789; when the jury found "That the plaintiff Edward Wills Carr, as vicar of the pariſh of Loweſby, in the county of Leiceſter, was not entitled to all the ſmall tithes ariſing within the ſaid pariſh of Loweſby in the ſaid county; but was entitled to receive in lieu thereof £6. 13*s.* 4*d.* of lawful money of Great Britain from the impropriator for the time being of the ſaid rectory of Loweſby."

In the king's books Loſeby is entered as a diſcharged living.

The epiſcopal procurations, for the rectory, 3*s.* 8*d.*; for the vicarage, 1*s.* 8*d.*

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
Barjonis, capellanus, 1209.	Robertus Burdet, perſona eccleſie de Loſeby.
Barjonis, qui fuit vicarius de Louſby, reſentatus ad eccleſiam prefatam de Louſby, 1219.	per præceptorem eleemoſinar' fratrum & pauperum Hoſpitalis Sc̄i Lazari.
Alexander de Taney, ſubdeacon, 1229.	Maſter and brethren of St. Lazarus of Burton.
Alexander Wetinton, 1230.
Henry de Bellafago, 1241.
William de Louſby, 1260.
Gilbert Sturges, 1534.

. . . . Bradley.	All theſe are noticed in the different depoſitions in the Court of Exchequer.
. . . . Holland (twice vicar).]
. . . . Browne.
. . . . White (twice vicar).
. . . . Whiting.
. . . . Fiſher.
. . . . Coleman.
. . . . Lant.
. . . . Morgan.
. . . . Fowell.
John Weybred[1], April 15, 1634; ejected 1645.	King Charles I.
Thomas Little, Feb. 18, 1664.	George Faunt, eſq.
John Smith, May 18, 1672.	John Faunt, eſq.
Oliver Owen, Dec. 12, 1672.	George Faunt, eſq.
Thomas Sawbridge, Nov. 12, 1679.	Thomas biſhop of Lincoln.
Thomas Smith[2], Aug. 14, 1700.	King William III. by lapſe.
Richard Marſden, Aug. 11, 1713.	Iſaac Woollaſton, eſq.
Samuel Buckler, June 5, 1719.
Samuel Rolleſton, Feb. 16, 1727.	James Woollaſton, eſq.
William Bareſby[3], May 30, 1738; died 1763.	Iſaac Woollaſton, eſq.
George Aſhby, B. D. ſequeſtrator, 1763.	Archdeacon Richard Grey.
William Brown, ſequeſtrator, 1774.
Edward Wills Carr[4], Jan. 14, 1775—1793.	King George III. for this turn, by lapſe.
William Brown[5], June 8, 1793.	Dame Anne Fowke, widow.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

The following inſcriptions are noticed by Wyrley:

1. ": : : : : Lubbeſthorpe : : : : Burdet de Loweſbie."

2. "Thomas Aſhbie et Elizabetha quondam uxor ejus; Thomas Aſhby obiit 1423.

3. Catharina quondam uxor Thome Aſhebie, filia Roberti Brett de Addington, et . . . . . fil. Jo. Mawſon.

4. Thomas Aſhby, dominus de Loweſby, obiit 1433[6].

5. Hic jacet Agnes quondam uxor Willi Aſhby, arm. domini de Loweſby, filia dñi Ricardi Illingworth, militis, capitalis baronis ſcaccarii domini regis; obiit 1492[7].

6. Hic jacet Willus Aſhby, dominns de Loweſbie, arm. qui obiit 1544; et Agnes uxor eius, filia Thome Poulteney[8] de Miſterton militis, obiit 1527."

In the nave, at the entrance into the chancel, is a flat large blue ſtone, with the effigies of a man and woman, with pinnacle-work above their heads; ſeveral ſhields of arms, and inſcription round the ledge, all ſunk in the ſtone; but, the braſſes being entirely gone, nothing can be learned to whom it belonged, though undoubtedly to one of thoſe mentioned by Wyrley; as do ſome others of alabaſter in the nave and South aile; but nothing remains on any of theſe to diſtinguiſh whoſe they were.

On an upright ſtone on the South ſide of the chancel:

"Beneath are depoſited the remains of Suſanna the wife of Thomas Eaglefield; in whom were united thoſe amiable qualifications which rendered her much reſpected in ſocial life,
and ſincerely regretted in death.
She left this mutable ſtate of exiſtence
the 15th day of April, 1795, aged 45 years."

In the nave, on flat ſtones:

1. "Here lies the body of Francis Holbeech, late of the Biſhop's Fee in Leiceſter, gent.
who departed this life Auguſt 17, 1738, aged 70."

2. "Beneath lie the remains of William Pick, of Street-hill;
who departed this life the 20th day of May, 1779,
in the 80th year of his age."

3. "To the memory of Amey Pick, relict of the late William Pick.
She departed this life May 5, 1797, aged 81."

4. "Sacred to the memory of John Wilkinſon, ſervant to ſir Thomas and Lady Fowke.
He departed this life the 11rh day of Auguſt, 1790;
aged 40 years."

5. "On a looſe ſtone in the church:

"Here lieth interred the body of Rebecca Scarborow, who departed this life the 1ſt day of April,
in the year of our Lord 1761, aged 75 years."

On a mural monument of white marble in the South aile, with arms and creſt of Woollaſton; fig. 30.

"M. S.
Ab hoc haud procul marmore
jacet depoſitum quod mortale fuit
Joſiæ Wollaſton, armigeri, (filii natu maximi Ricardi Wollaſton, arm.)
viri probatæ in principem fidei, in patriam benevolentiæ, in Deum pietatis, cœpit vivere añ. 1635, deſiit 5° Februarii 1689.
Juxta illum contumulantur oſſa Elizabethæ conjugis ſuæ caſtiſſimæ, religioſiſſimæ, natæ 24 Aug^{ti}, 1652, mortuæ Junii 17°, 1710;
et Rebeccæ eorum filiæ primogenitæ, virginis præſtanti formâ et omni virtute
ornatæ, cui natalis erat 16us
Januarii 1672, dies obitûs 9us Novembris, 1690.
Clauduntur etiam eodem ſepulcro cineres Saræ maritæ Iſaaci Wollaſton, arm. a vetuſtiſſimâ Laurentiorum Durotrigenſium familiâ ortæ, ſed integritate vitæ ac Divinæ Numinis reverentiâ multò magis conſpicuæ, et ob ſuaviſſimam morum facilitatem, quâ omnium ſibi favorem conciliavit, ſuis deſideratiſſimæ. Nata eſt anno 1673;
animam efflavit 24° Maii, 1707;
ut et Annæ (infantis) illorum filiæ."

At the bottom of the monument is a death's head, winged in a ſingular manner, ſomewhat like a bat.

In the church-yard:

An old ridged coffin-like ſtone lies a little diſtance South of the porch, nearly ſunk in the ground.

Charles Ilſton died April 10, 1791, in his 78th year.
Alice, his wife, June 22, 1779, aged 69.
James Wilſon, Dec. 31, 1771, aged 71.
Mary his wife, July 14, 1766, aged 58.
Henry Sykes, Nov. 13, 1763, aged 74.
John Wildbore, Nov. 7, 1781, aged 67.
Robert Peat, ſen. Jan. 11, 1783, aged 86.
Obedience Peat, Oct. 11, 1762, aged 55.

---

[1] Rymer, vol. XIX. p. 610. He was afterwards M. D.; and was alſo rector of Skeffington, where ſee ſome account of him.

[2] John Smith was curate in 1708.

[3] Vicar alſo of Radcliffe on the Wreke.

[4] He died June 30, 1793, æt. 54. See his epitaph at Aſhby Folvile, p. 33.

[5] The preſent rector of Burrow.

[6] On this tomb, Aſhby, Burdet, and the bezants.

[7] On this tomb were the four following coats: 1. A feſs; in chief three mullets. 2. Aſhby of Loſeby (ſee their Pedigree, under Quenby, p. 298); impaling two bendlets engrailed, and a feſs. 3. Zouch; impaling three pales. 4. Finden.

[8] Mr. Wyrley noticed here the arms of Poultney, Argent, a feſs dancetté Gules, three leopards faces in chief Sable; fig. 30.

NEWTON,

in old writings called Newton juxta Loſeby, Tylton Newton, Cold Newton, and, from the lords thereof, Newton Burdett and Newton Marmion, is a conſiderable hamlet, forming part of the pariſh of Loſeby; and is bounded by Bagrave, Hungerton, Quenby, Tilton, Billeſdon, and its own pariſh of Loſeby.

In the time of the Confeſſor, there were four ploughs in Niwetone, then valued at twelve ſhillings. At the Conqueror's ſurvey, it was worth twenty ſhillings, and was held by Alberic under Goisfrid de Wirce. One plough was in the demeſne; and five ſocmen, with two villans and two bordars, had three ploughs. There were ſixteen acres of meadow. This land had been given to Goisfrid in exchange[1] for the manor called Turchileſtone[2].

Hubert, one of the king's ſervants, who held four ploughlands of the king in Burrow, held half a ploughland in Newtone. He employed half a plough in the demeſne there, and two villans; and had two acres of meadow. This land had been worth two ſhillings in the reign of Edward the Confeſſor; and at the ſurvey was worth five ſhillings[3].

On the aid granted to king Henry III. in 1235, towards the marrying of his ſiſter with the emperor of the Romans, two marks were paid for one fee, which John de Newton held here under William de Beauchamp; and 22*s*. 8*d*. for another fee, which William Burdet held under Roger de Mowbray.

In the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about the year 1240, Newton Burdet is deſcribed as containing four ploughlands; and John Koldeclove had beſides three ploughlands and three oxgangs. It alſo mentions, "In Neuton 3 p̄tes unius feodi & 8 p̄s unius feodi quas Wiłłs Burdet tenet de Wiłłmo de Eſsheby, & ip̄e de Rog̃o de Moubray[4]."

Of the family of Burdet, who were early owners of this lordſhip, ſeveral particulars have already been given under Loſeby. A lineal deſcendant, ſir Nicholas Burdet, knt. chief butler of Normandy, and governor of the city of Evreux in the ſaid dutchy, was ſlain at the battle of Pointoiſe 1439. He had iſſue Thomas Burdet, who, when as king Edward the Fourth (in his abſence) had killed a fat white buck in his park at Arrow in Warwickſhire, which he greatly eſteemed, upon the firſt hearing of it, wiſhed the buck's head and horns in his belly that moved the king to kill it. Upon the miſconſtruction of which words, he was accuſed of treaſon, attainted, and beheaded 1447, and was buried in the Grey Friars[5] in London. Theſe words ſpoken and ſo wreſted were the colour of his death; but the true cauſe was the hard conceit and opinion which the king had of him, for that he had ever been a faithful friend and true counſellor to George duke of Clarence his brother, between whom there had been bitter enmity, and who not long before had been murdered in priſon. The like accident, though not with like ſucceſs, was occaſioned by the ſame king, upon a much like cauſe. For whereas Ralph lord Boteler and Sudley, lord high-treaſurer of England under king Henry VI, had lately built that ſtately and beautiful caſtle of Sudley, co. Glouceſter, from the very foundation, which was then accounted abſolutely the flower of all buildings in thoſe days, was held in jealouſy of the ſame king Edward IV. and by him ſuſpected to be in heart king Henry the Sixth his man, who then was ſtill living; whereupon he cauſed him to be attainted; and going up from his caſtle towards London, having got to the top of a hill a little off, he turned him, and looked down upon the caſtle, uſing theſe words, 'Ah, Sudley Caſtle! thou art the traitor, not I;' as Leland hath it in his Itinerary of Glouceſterſhire; who coming up, and rendering his appearance, made an honeſt declaration, and paſſed his caſtle of Sudley to the king (which was the ſole thing that he aimed at); and ſo the difference was compoſed. This Thomas Burdett married firſt Agnes, daughter of John Waldeif, by whom he had iſſue Richard; but from her he was divorced, by reaſon of the nearneſs of blood (as being his couſin germane) by ſentence out of the Eccleſiaſtical Court[6], granted by John Carpenter biſhop of Worceſter 1464. But Richard Burdet claiming as heir legitimate notwithſtanding, entered into the manor of Arrow; whereupon great ſuits followed[7]."

John Burdet, ſon of the aforeſaid Thomas, by his ſecond wife, was reſtored in blood, 2 Henry VII. and made knight 4 Henry VIII; who ſued for this manor of Arrow, and put up ſeveral bills into the parliament-houſe for the ſame; but not prevailing, through the means of Cardinal Wolſey (who was his bitter adverſary), ſurceaſed his claim.

By his laſt will, dated in 1528, and proved 12 May, 1530, he directs his body to be buried in the church of Polleſworth, between Anne his wife and Iſabel his ſiſter, in the Lady Chapel; mentions "Oſbourne, Elizabeth, Anne, my daughters; William, John, Hierome, my ſons. Thomas Burdet, my ſon,' (primogenitus ut videtur). "And as touching my wife, I wot not what I ſhould give her; for, falſely and unnaturally ſhe deceived me, and promiſed me £500. that I never had, which was to my undoing. Wherefore I commit that to the law of right and conſcience; for as of me ſhe hath ill deſerved any thank of goodneſs."

Of this ſir John is lineally deſcended ſir Thomas Burdet, knight and baronet, of Bramcote and Seckinton, in the county of Warwick, now living (1641); who married Jane, ſole daughter and heir of William Frauncis, eſq. and niece and heir of John Frauncis, of Formarke, eſq. co. Derby (by whom he had great lands and poſſeſſions); a lady of a fair and pleaſing countenance, graceful perſonage, and of many rare and equal parts, fitter to be remembered or expreſſed by a worthier pen than mine. She died March 20, 1637.

The genealogy (drawn by me out of records and evidences) I thought it not amiſs here to ſet down[8].

---

[1] See farther on this head under Thurcaſton.

[2] "Albericus tenet de G[oisfrido] in Niwetone 6 carucatas terræ. Ibi fuerunt 4 carucæ. In dominico eſt una; & 5 ſochmanni, cum 2 villanis & 2 bordariis, habent 3 carucas. Ibi 16 acræ prati. Valuit 12 ſolidos; modò 20 ſolidos. Hæc quoque terra eſt de commutatione Turchileſtone.." Domeſday, fol. 235. b. 2.

[3] "Idem [Hubertus] tenet dimidiam carucatam terræ in Niwetone. In dominico habet ibi dimidiam carucatam & 2 villanos, & 2 acras prati. Valuit 2 ſolidos; modò 5 ſolidos." Ibid fol. 236. b. 2.

[4] Vol. I. pp. xlix. l. liii.

[5] Strype's Stow, Book III. p. 133.

[6] "But now this kind of divorce, and many others that then were in uſe by the canon law, are not at this day in force, as it appeareth by Richard Parſons' caſe, Trin. 2 Jac. The caſe was, a man married the daughter of the ſiſter of his firſt wife, and was queſtioned for it in the Eccleſiaſtical Court, alledging the ſame to be againſt the canons; but it was reſolved by the Court of the Common Pleas, upon conſideration had of the ſtatute of 32 Hen. VIII. c. 38. that the ſaid marriage could not be impeached; for that by the act of parliament the ſame was declared to be good; for that the ſaid act doth declare, that all perſons may lawfully marry that be not prohibited by God's law to marry; that is to ſay, that be not prohibited by the Levitical degrees." Burton, MS.

[7] "This appeareth by the Book Caſe of 18 Edw. IV. fol. 29. where the book is miſprinted Robert Burdett for Richard."

[8] The pedigree in Mr. Burton's book is very imperfect; but the family have another, well proved, from the Conqueſt. S. Roper, MS.—This enlarged pedigree is here uſed; ſee p. 351.

In 1301, the maſter of the hoſpital of Burton St. Lazarus held one knight's fee, in Newton Burdett, of Roger de Mowbray, deceaſed [1].

May 26, 1312, king Edward II. granted to William Marmion, and his heirs, liberty of free-warren in all their demeſne lands at Newton and Galby [2].

In 1315, it was found that William Marmion held a moiety of one knight's fee in Cold Newton, and alſo the third part of the ſaid manor, of Guy de Beauchamp earl of Warwick, deceaſed, by the ſervice of a moiety of one knight's fee [3].

In 1361, John de Mowbray, lord of the Iſle of Axholme, was ſeiſed at his death of one knight's fee in Newton Burdet, which the maſter of Burton held [4].

In 1399, Thomas Mowbray, late duke of Norfolk, was ſeiſed of one knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Newton Burdet [5].

In 1346, William Marmion (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 10*s* for a quarter of one knight's fee in Cold Newton and Loſeby, parcel of the fees of Cheſter and Huntingdon [6].

In 1461, John Mowbray, duke of Norfolk, died ſeiſed of one knight's fee in Newton Burdet, which the maſter of the hoſpital of Burton Lazars held [7].

On an inquiſition taken at Harborough, Aug. 7, 1544, it was found that the lately diſſolved hoſpital of Burton Lazars poſſeſſed, inter alia, the manors of Newton Burdet, Melton Mowbray, and Burton Lazars [8].

"Mem. That Thomas Aſheby, of Quenby, hathe lying within the Spytell-feild of Tylton Newton theſe leys following. Imprimis, 3 leys turn up from Steincliff abutting into the Spytell-felde at the one end, and upon Steyncliff at the other end, lying between Mr. Everard Dygby and the Maſter of Burton, in the holding of William Friſby of Newton [9]. Item, the ſaid Thomas Aſheby hath, in the holding of the ſame William Friſby, a ley of Steyning, with an acre lying in the North field of the Spittle. Item, the ſaid Thomas Aſhby hath two half-rode leys by Eing dale ſide [10]."

In 1553, the manor of Newton Burdett was granted to Henry Chamberlaine and William Faunt, by queen Mary [11]; and in 1562 this manor, which had been ſeized into the queen's hands, was reſtored to John Hunt, gent. [12].

July 4, 1583, it was found that Anthony Faunt, eſq. died ſeiſed of the manor of Newton Burdet, alias Cold Newton; alſo of four meſſuages, two cottages, ſix tofts, 500 acres of land, 300 acres of meadow, 500 acres of paſture, and 100 acres of wood, in Newton aforeſaid [13].

Mr. Wyrley, in his Church Notes, 1595, ſpeaking of Loſeby, ſays, "Newton viculus adjacet in eâdem parochia; ſedes cognati & amici mei Johannis Hunt [14], qui campo cœruleo bandam inter ſex facies leonum de auro cum differentiâ portat [15]. It was the ſeat of one of the Marmions."

"George Aſhby, eſq. by charter dated 17 Dec. 1563, had granted to Thomas Aſhby, eſq. a meſſuage and two cottages in Newton Burdet, alias Cold Newton, alias Newton Marmion, with three tofts, three gardens, 50 acres of land, eight of meadow, and 10 acres of paſture, and their portion of the field there, then in the tenure of the ſaid Thomas Aſhby, to hold to him and his heirs and aſſigns; and obliged himſelf and heirs to warrant them. And the ſaid Thomas enfeoffs John Hunt in the ſame; and afterwards David Down levies an aſſize de novel diſſeiſine againſt John Hunt; whereupon John Hunt requeſted George Aſhby to warrant them, which he refuſed; denying that he granted the ſaid tenements in the form ſuggeſted. But the ſaid George was caſt [16]."

In 1607, it was found that ſir William Faunt, knt. held the manors of Foſton and Newton Burdet in capite; and in 1641 Mr. Burton deſcribes it as the inheritance of George Faunt, made heir to ſir William Faunt, of Foſton, knight [17].

"Termino Sancti Michis, anno 16° regis Caroli.

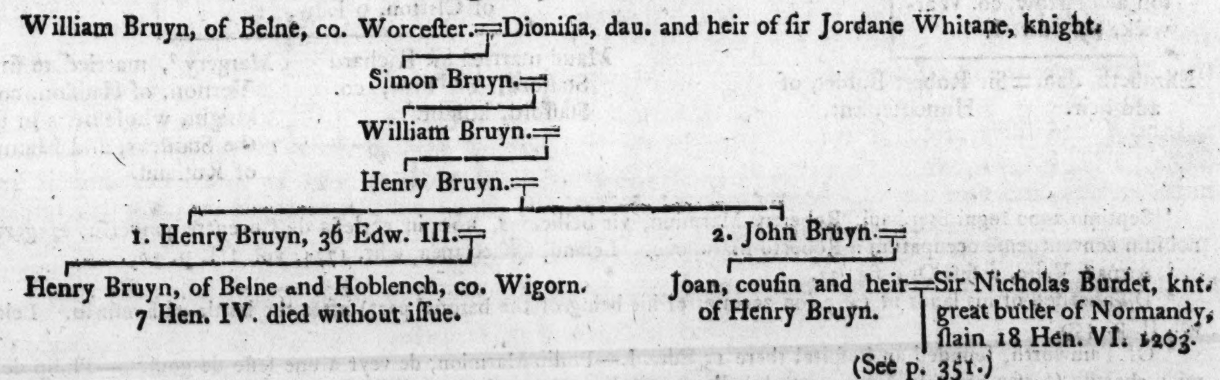
Martis, 2° die Decembris.

Leic'. Whereas, by order of the Lords Commiſſioners for depopulation, dated the 17th day of October, in the 13th year of his majeſty's reign, William Bent, of Billeſdon, in the county of Leiceſter, is mentioned to be returned by the commiſſion for depopulation in the ſame county, charged with depopulation, converſion, and continuance of houſes and lands in Cold Newton, in the ſame county; and that, by the conſent of the ſaid William Bent, the ſum of £40. was impoſed by the ſaid lords commiſſioners upon him for his fine or compoſitions for the ſaid depopulation, as by the ſaid order now ſhewed appeared: Now, for that the ſaid Court was this day informed, and that by the affidavit of the ſaid William Bent this day read is affirmed, that the ſaid William Bent did never aſſent unto, or make any ſuch compoſition, neither had any ſuch houſes or lands as in the ſaid order is mentioned; and therefore it was deſired that the proceſs made upon the ſaid charge of £40. may be ſuperſeded and ſtayed: It is this day ordered by the Court, that, upon ſecurity given by recognizance to abide ſuch order as this Court ſhall ſet down upon his plea to be pleaded to the ſaid debt, Superſedeas ſhall be awarded to the ſame proceſs as is deſired."

The lordſhip of Newton is now (1799) the property of Dame Anne Fowke; and contains 15 families.

The chapel is wholly deſecrated.

Pedigree of BRUYN.



William Bruyn, of Belne, co. Worceſter. = Dionisia, dau. and heir of ſir Jordane Whitane, knight.

Simon Bruyn. =

William Bruyn. =

Henry Bruyn. =

1. Henry Bruyn, 36 Edw. III. =

2. John Bruyn. =

Henry Bruyn, of Belne and Hoblench, co. Wigorn. 7 Hen. IV. died without iſſue.

Joan, couſin and heir of Henry Bruyn. = Sir Nicholas Burdet, knt. great butler of Normandy, ſlain 18 Hen. VI. 1203.

(See p. 351.)

---

[1] Eſch. 29 Edw. I. N° 47. Leic.
[2] Cart. 5 Edw. II. N° 7.
[3] Eſch. 9 Edw. II. N° 71. Leic.
[4] Eſch. 35 Edw. III. pars 2. N° 20.
[5] Eſch. 1 Hen. IV. N° 71. Leic.
[6] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.
[7] Eſch. 1 Edw. IV. N° 46. Leic.

[8] Inq. pro diſſolutione hoſpitii de Burton Lazars, 7 Aug. 35 Hen. VIII; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. V. (Harl. MSS. 760.) p. 1.

[9] To the note on the continuance of name of great families in much humbler ones, p. 288, note 15, might be added that William Friſby is here twice mentioned, if he was any thing more than bare tenant, the ſame being the name of a preſent tenant, who ſucceeded his father ſeveral years ago.

[10] From a memorandum at the beginning of the Regiſter of Burton Lazars, now in the Britiſh Muſeum.

[11] 4 Pars Original. 1 Mariæ, Rot. 22.
[12] Hil. Rec. 4 Eliz. Rot. 57.
[13] Eſch. 30 Eliz.

[14] John Hunt, of Newton, co. Leic. (Wright's Rutland, p. 83.) was grandfather of William Le Hunt, of Gray's Inn, eſq. called to the degree of ſerjeant at law in Trinity term 1688. His arms, Azure, a bird between ſix leopards' heads Or. Creſt, a leopard's head, between two wings expanged Or; fig. 32.

[15] See plate XLVIII. fig. 33.
[16] Coke's Entries, p. 692; Mich. 7 Jac. in com. Leic. Rot. 2205.
[17] Burton, MS.

Pedigree of MARMION.

Sir Robert Marmion [1], of Tamworth Caſtle, by the gift of the Conqueror; reſtored, in the reign of king Stephen, to the manor of Poleſworth, co. Warwick, their charters and eſtates. = Milicent.

Roger Marmion [2], baron of Tamworth, called Robert by Dugdale, ſlain 8 Stephen. = Maud de Beauchamp.

1. Geffrey Marmion, 4 Hen. II. = ...
2. Robert lord Marmion. =

Albreda, dau. and heir, married to ſir William Camvile.
Philippa, ſecond wife. = 1. Robert lord Marmion, gave Arrow, co. Warw. to his uncle Geoffrey; d. 2 H. III. = ... firſt wife.
2. Richard lord Marmion.

1. Robert Marmion, jun. pedoforeſtarian 1241; died about 1264. = Amicia, dau. of Jernegan Fitz-Hugh, of Tanfield, York.
2. William. = ...
William.
Robert Marmion, lord of Scrivelſby, co. Linc. died 26 Hen. III. = ...

William [3] Marmion. = Roſa, dau. to Roſe de Dover.
Iſabella, dau. and heir to Giles Fitz-Ralph, of Nether-Whitacre, co. Warwick. = 2. Robert, 14 E. II.
Katharine, dau. of ſir Tho. Moulton, knt. 2d wife. = Philip [4] lord Marmion, lord of Scrivelſby, died 20 Edw. I. = Joan, dau. and coheir of Hugo lord Kilpeck, of Kilpeck Caſtle, Hereford, firſt wife.

John lord Marmion, of Tanfield caſtle, died 16 Ed. II. =
John de Whitacre, died 3 Edw. III. = Amicia, dau. and coheir.
Hen. Hillary, 2d huſband. = Joan, dau. and coheir. = Sir Tho. Ludlow, firſt huſband.
1. Joan, dau. and coheir, married ſir Will. Morteyn, of Wollaton, Notts. died about 23 Edw. I. ſ. p.
2. Marcia, married Ralph Cromwell, of Cromwell, Notts. =

Iſabella, dau. and heir. = Sir Tho. Bermingham, of Nether-Whitacre, in right of his wife.
Edward Hillary, died 21 E. III.
John de Ludlow, died ſ. p.
3. Maud, dau. and coheir, married Ralph le Boteler.
Joan, dau. and heir, married Alexander de Frevile, lord of Tamworth in right of his wife, whoſe coheir in time carried the ſame to Thomas ſecond ſon of Will. lord Ferrers of Groby; from whom the Ferrers of Tamworth Caſtle, now extinct.

John lord Marmion, married Maud, dau. to . . . . lord Furnival, died 9 Edw. III. =
Margaret [5], dau. and heir, married ſir John Dymock, who had by her the manor of Scrivelſby in Lincolnſhire, and the championſhip of England, ſtill in Lewis Dymock, the heir male, 1799.

Robert, ſ. p.
1. Joan, ſiſter and coheir, marr. ſir John Bernake.
2. Avice, ſiſter and coheir, 2d wife. = John lord Grey, of Rotherfield.

1. Sir John Marmion, called after his mother, ſ. p. = Elizabeth.
2. Sir Robert. = Lora, ſecond dau. and coheir to Herbert St. Quintin [6].

Elizabeth, dau. and heir. = Henry lord Fitz-Hugh.

Pedigree of CAMVILE.

Arms: Azure, three lions paſſant in pale Argent, fig. 35.

Richard de Camvile, founder of the abbey of Combe, co. Warwick, temp. R. Stephen. =

William de Camvile. =

Sir William de Camvile, of Seckington, co. Warwick, 4. 16 Hen. III. = Albreda, dau. and heir of Geoffrey Marmion, brought Arrow to her huſband, by the gift of her nephew Robert lord Marmion.

2. William de Camvile, of Seckington and Arrow, co. Warwick, 25 H. III. = Iſeuda.
1. Geffrey de Camvile, of Clifton Camvile, co. Stafford.
3. Thomas, a prieſt, one of the king's juſtices, 13 Hen. III.

1. Thomas de Camvile, died 20 Henry III. vitâ patris. = Agnes.
2. William.
William de Camvile.

Thomas de Camvile, 6 Edw. I. = Elizabeth, 1 Edw. I.
Geffrey de Camvile lord Camvile, 6 Edw. I. died 2 Edw. II. = Maud, dau. and heir of ſir Guy de Bryan, knt. by Eve his wife, dau. and heir to Henry lord Tracy, baron of Barnſtable, Devon.

Sir Gerard de Camvile lord of the manors of Seckington and Arrow, co. Warwick, 29 Edw. I. = ...
Sir William de Camvile lord Camvile of Clifton, 9 Edw. II. = ...

Elizabeth, dau. and heir. = Sir Robert Burdet, of Huncote, knt.
Maud married Sir Richard Stafford, of Pipe, co. Stafford, knight.
Margery [7], married to ſir Richard Vernon, of Haddon, co. Derby, knight, whoſe heirs in time were the Stanleys, and Manners duke of Rutland.

---

[1] Septimo anno regni Stephani, Robertus Marmiun, vir bellicoſus, hoc in eccleſia de Coventre perverſus exegerat.—Cœnobium conventuenſe occupatum à Roberto Marmione. Leland, Collectanea, edit. 1774, vol. III. p. 305.

[2] Arms: Vaire, a feſs Or; fig. 33.

[3] Diſinherited of his lands in 1265 (on account of his being of the barons' part) after the battle of Eveſham. Leland, ibid. vol. II. p. 459.

[4] Of Tamworth, founded an hoſpital there 15 Edw. I.—Philip Marmion, de veyr a une feſſe de goules.—Philip de fiz Marmion ebartile (forſan ecartele, i. e. quarterly) d'argent e de goules endente. Leland, ibid. p. 615.

[5] Margareta, uxor Joannis Dymmok, militis, clamabat per manetium de Scrivelby, aſſertionem pro tuenda hereditate et jure regis ad coronam. Balduinus de Freville, miles, competitor ejuſdem officii, ratione manerii de caſtello Tamworth, in comit' Warwik, quia etiam cognatus, et ex parte heres Lioneſſæ, filiæ Philippi Marmion, ad quem ſpectabat caſtellum de Tamworth. Dymmok Offic' faciebat, ſalvo jure Freville. Leland, ibid. vol. I. p. 255.

[6] See Hutchins's Dorſetſhire, vol. I. p. 504; vol. II. p. 136.

[7] Ric' fil' Ric' Vernon & Matilda ux. ejus 16 Ed. II. Ex archivis Ducis Rutland. This Richard died before 22 Edw. II.; for then ſhe is ſtyled "Maud que fuſt la feme Ric. de Vernon le puiſne." Seal, Argent, a fret Sable, Vernon; impaling Camvile; fig. 36.

Pedigree of BURDET, of LOSEBY, NEWTON BURDET, BRAMCOTE, SECKINGTON, and FORMARKE.

Robert de Culeio, ſurnamed Burdet, a Norman, earl of Terracon. = Sibilla, dau. of William de Capra.

Hugo de Burdet, a noble Norman, came into England with the Conqueror, lord of the manor of Loſeby in 1066[1]. = ...

William Burdet, of Loſeby, living in the reign of William II. and Stephen. = ...

Hugo Burdet, of Loſeby, temp. Hen. II. = ...

Sir William Burdet, of Loſeby and Newton Burdet, temp. Hen. II; and 4 and 15 John, founder of Aucote priory. = Alice, avita of Ralph Baſſet.

1. Hugo Burdet. = ...

William, died ſ. p.

2. Sir Richard Burdet, of Newton and Loſeby, knt. died 10 H. III. = Maud de Somery.

3. William Burdet, of Paſton and of Alington. = ...

Avicia Burdet, wife of . . . . . Ivors, of . . . .

1. Sir Rich. Burdet, knt.
2. John Burdet. knt.
3. Sir James Burdet, knt. all ſlain ſ. p.

4. Sir William Burdet, of Loſeby, knt. 42 Hen. III. = Iſabella.

Michael Burdet, lord of Potton, Allington, and Stanton, 31 Hen. III. =

1. Rich. Burdet, of Loſeby, died 10 Edw. I. =

2. Rob. Burdet[2], of Huncote, died 31 Edw. I. ſ. p.

3. William Burdet[3], of Shepey and Coſby, co. Leic.

4. Hugh Burdett, temp. Edw. I. = Annabell[4], dau. of Sewall Tuchett and Sibill his wife, who brought the manor of Mythe to her huſband.

William Burdet, of Allington. =

John Burdet, 30 Ed. I.

1. Sir Will. Burdett, ſlain at Dundee in Scotland, 31 Edw. I. =

2. Hugo, lord of Hoton. Amicia, lady of Hoton.

Nicholas Burdet, had lands in Shepey, 32 Edw. I. =

Sir Rob. Burdet[5], knt. of Seckington, and, in right of his wife, of Huncote, d. 1333. = Elizabeth, dau. and heir of ſir Gerard de Camvile, of Seckington, 18 Edw. III.

2. Henry Burdet[6], 18 Edw. II. and 12 E. III.

Richard Burdet, 12 Edw. III. =

John Burdett, 20 Edw. III. = Elizabeth, dau. and coheir of ſir Roger de la Zouch, of Lubbeſthorpe.

John Burdet. =

Elizabeth, dau. and heir. = Richard de Aſhby, living 1391; owner of Loſeby in right of his wife.

Agnes, dau. and heir, married to William Shepey, of Shepey, 15 Ric. II.

1. Sir Robert Burdet, of Huncote, knt. married Elizabeth, dau. and coheir of Robert Garſhall, of Ibſtock; and their deſcendants are ſet down in Huncote.

2. Sir Gerard Burdet[7], of Seckington and Arrow, 12 & 20 Edw. III. died 33 Edw. III. = Eleanor, ſiſter and heir of John Devalle, of Broughton, co. Warwick, dau. to ſir Robert Devalle, of Lodington and Compton Scorfen.

Sir John Burdet, knt. 44 Edw. III. & 2 Ric. II. = Margaret, dau. and heir of Thomas Fitton, of Goſworth, co. Ceſtr.

Sir Thomas Burdet, knt. 5 Ric. II. 20 Hen. VI. = Anne, dau. and coheir to John Waldyve, and Margaret, dau. and heir to Rich. Oldingſells, of Foſhaw, Warw. with whom Foſhaw.

Sir Nicholas Burdet[8], great butler of Normandy, ſlain 18 Hen. VI. in the battle of Pontoys in Bretagne. = Joan, couſin and heir of Henry Bruyn, of Belne, &c. dau. and heir to John Bruyn; by whom came the manor of Bramcote.

Agnes, dau. of John Waldeiſe, divorced 1464, as too near of of kin to Anne before; firſt wife. = Thomas Burdet, eſq. beheaded 1477, heir to his grandfather, eſquire to George duke of Clarence, which coſt him his life by the artifice of the duke of Glouceſter, afterwards Richard III. = Margaret, dau. of ſir John Rodney, ſecond wife; afterwards married to Thomas Woodhull.

Richard Burdet, of Arrow, died 8 H. VII. firſt huſband. = Joyce, dau. of ſir Sim. Mountfort, knt. of Colſhill, co. Warwick. = Sir Hugh Conway, treaſurer of Ireland, brother to ſir Edward, 2d huſband.

1. Sir John Burdet, knt. reſtored in blood 2 Hen. VII; died 20 Hen. VIII. = Anne, dau. of Will. Harewell, of Wootton-Wawen, co. Warwick, eſq.

2. Nicholas.
3. Robert.
4. George.
5. Edward.

1. Joan.
2. Iſabella.

1. Thomas Burdet, eſq. died without iſſue.
2. Robert, died ſ. p.

Anne, dau. and heir. = Sir Edward Conway, of Arrow, in right of his wife; from whom the lord Conway.

1. Tho. Burdet, of Bramcote and Seckington, co. Warwick, eſq. 26 Hen. VIII. d. 31 H. VIII. = Mary, dau. of ſir Rob. Throgmorton, knt. of Coughton, Warwick; afterwards married to Rich. Middlemore, of Edgbaſton, co. Warwick, eſq. 2d huſb. from whom the heir female, wife to ſir John Gage, of Firle, in Suſſex, bart.

2. John.
3. William.
4. George.

1. Joan.
2. Oſburna, = Geo. Daſton, of co. Glouc.
3. Elizabeth. = John Copland.
4. Anne. = John Hall.

1. Robert Burdet, eſq. 34 H. VIII. died Jan. 11, 2 Edw. VI. = Elizabeth, dau. of ſir Thomas Cockayne, of Aſhbourne, co. Derby, knt.

2. Clement, a prieſt.
3. Humphrey. = Suſan, dau. to ſir Tho. Englefield, of Englefield, Berks.
4. William.
5. Ethelbert, a juſtice of the Common Pleas.

1. Blanch. = ... Sambourn.
2. Catharine. = ... Ludlow.
3. Eleanor. = ... Willeſcote.

1. Thomas Burdet, eſq. died 15 July, 1594. = Bridget, dau. of Thomas Curzon, of Croxhall, co. Derby, eſq. died 1611.

2. Francis.
3. George.

4. William, of the Middle Temple.
5 John.

1. Robert Burdet, eſq. born Nov. 26, 1557: died Mar. 27, 1603; buried at Seckington. = Mary, dau. and coheir of Tho. Wilſon, LL.D. dean of Durham, and ſecretary of ſtate to queen Elizabeth; afterwards married to ſir Chriſtopher Lowther, of Lowther, co. Weſtmoreland, knt. by whom ſhe had no iſſue. She died May 31, 1622; and was buried in St. Andrew's church, Penrith, Cumberland.

2. Nicholas, b. 1560.
3. Thomas, b. 1556.
4. John, b. 1566.
5. Raphael, b. 1568.
6. Laurence, b. 1571.

1. Dorothy, b. 1556. = John Barwell, of Seckington, gent.
2. Anna, b. 1562. = ... Sheffield, gent.
3. Elizabeth, b. 1563.
4. Philadelphia, b. 1565.
5. Mary, born 1569.

Sir Thomas, &c. See p. 352.

[1] Arms: Azure, two bars Or, as now borne; ſee p. 352.

[2] William, in Burton's printed Book, p. 204; which ſeems right. His arms were, Azure, two bars Or, a bend Gules, fig. 37. He gave the manor of Huncote to his nephew.

[3] Arms: Azure, two bars; and in chief three mullets Or, fig. 38.

[4] Arms: Gules, ten martlets Or, 4. 3. 2. 1. fig. 39.

[5] Arms: Azure, two bars Or; the top one charged with three martlets Gules, fig. 40.

[6] Arms: Azure, two bars Or, charged with three martlets Gules, two on the top, and one on the bottom, fig. 41.

[7] Arms: Gules, a feſs between ſix martlets Or, fig. 42.

[8] Arms: Azure, two bars Or, each charged with three martlets, fig. 43.

Sir Thomas Burdet, of Bramcote, knt. born 1585; created a baronet 25 Feb. 1618; living 1641. = Jane, dau. and heir of William Francys, niece and heir of John Francys, of Formarke, co. Derby; marr. 1622; died 1637; bur. at Repton.

1. Bridget, b. 1586. = William Whelpdale.
2. Anne, b. 1588. = John Bowes, of Elford, co. Stafford, esq.
3. Mary, b. 1589. = Richard Frampton, esq.
4. Lucretia, b. 1591; died unmarried.
5. Elizabeth, b. 1593. = Anthony Hutton, of Penrith, Cumberland, esq. master in the court of Chancery.
6. Letitia, b. 1602. = Richard Skelton, of Armenthwayte, Cumberland, gent.

1. Sir Francis Burdet, bart. of Bramcote and Formarke, born 1608; died Dec. 30, 1696, æt. 89; buried at Formarke. = Elizabeth, dau. of sir John Walter, of Saresden, Oxon. knt. chief baron of the Exchequer; born 1613; married 1635; died Apr. 17, 1701, ætat. 89; buried at Formarke.

2. Robert Burdet, esq. alderman of London. = Mary, third dau. to Nathan Wrighte, esq. alderman of London; (see p. 279.)
Benjamin, who died 1710.

3. Leicester, died at Aleppo unmarried before 1662.

1. Bridget, d. 1685. = Thomas Gresley, esq. son and heir to sir Geo. Gresley, of Blokeston, co. Derby, knt. and bart. from whom the present sir Nigell Gresley, bart. is descended.
2. Dorothy, died unmarried.
3. Jane. = Gilbert Thacker, of Repton, co. Derby, esq.
4. Mary, d. 1699. = Geo. Bowes, of Elford, co. Staff. esq.
5. Letitia, d. 1683. = William Hounsell, merchant, of London.
6. Isabella. = John Merrick, merchant, of London.
7. Catharine, d. 1663. = Sebright Repington, of Amington, co. Warwick, esq.

Mary, dau. to Gervas Pygot, of Thrumpton, by Mary his first wife, dau. and coheir to John St. Andrew, of Gotham, Notts, esq. 1st wife; died Aug. 31, 1668; buried at Formarke. = 1. Sir Robert Burdet, bart. b. 1640; knight of the shire for the county of Derby in his father's lifetime; died January 18, 1715-16, æt. 76; buried at Formarke. = Magdalen, dau. to sir Thomas Aston, of Aston, Cheshire, bart. 2d wife; married 1676; buried at Formarke 1694. = Mary, dau. of Tho. Brome, of Croxhall, co. Derby, gent. third wife; buried at Formarke 1742.

2. Francis, b. 1641; died April 18, 1709, unmarried.
3. Walter, b. 1646; of the Inner Temple, and of Knowl-hill, co. Derby, esq. died unmarried 1732.
4. John, of Donisthorpe, b. 1650; married Anne, dau. to . . . Muggelstone, of Packington, esq. died 1729.
5. Thomas, b. 1655; died Aug. 12, 1698, unmarried.

1. Jane, b. 1637. = Edward Hopgood, esq. merchant, of London.
2. Elizabeth, b. 1638. = Edward Jodrell, of Erdsley, Cheshire, esq.
3. Maria, died April 15, 1701, unmarried.
4. Dorothy, b. 1648; died Sept. 4, 1718, unmarried.

1. Francis.

Elizabeth, dau. and heir to her mother, b. 1667; married at Formarke 11 Dec. 1689. = Charles Jennens, of the Middle Temple, and of Gopsal, esq.
(See under Gopsal.)

2. Robert Burdet, esq. b. 1680; died in his father's lifetime, January 7, 1715-6; buried at Formarke. = Elizabeth, only issue of William 4th visc. Tracy, of Ireland, by Frances his first wife, dau. of Leicester Devereux visc. Hereford. She remarried Robert Holden, of Aston, co. Derby, esq. and was buried at Formarke 1747.

3. Francis, died an infant.
4. John, died an infant.
5. Henry, drowned at Oxford, an infant.

1. Lettice, died 1684.
2. Magdalen, died 1695.
3. Dorothy, died 1886.

4. Jane. = John Cotton, of Stratton, co. Bedford, esq. son and heir to sir Robert Cotton, of Steeple Gedding, co. Huntingdon, bart.
(See vol. II. p. 834.)

Elizabeth, only dau. of sir Charles Sedley, of Nuthall, co. Nottingham, bart. married at Hucknall 1739; first wife; buried at Formarke Aug. 27, 1747. = 1. Sir Robert Burdet, bart. born May 28, 1716, after his father's death; married Nov. 1739; died Feb. 15, 1797, æt. 81; buried at Formarke. = Lady Caroline Manners, dau. of John duke of Rutland, and relict of sir Henry Harpur, bart. second wife; died Nov. 10, 1769; buried at Formarke.

2. Francis, born 1711, and died that year.

1. Elizabeth, b. 1705; died unmarried, and buried in South Audley-street chapel.
2. Jane, b. 1707; died unmarried 1727.
3. Mary, b. 1708, married, first, Col. Rich. Pyott[1], of Strethay, Staff. esq.; secondly, to Henry Delabain, who died s. p. She died in 1786, and was buried at Doncaster.
4. Anne, died young.
5. Frances, b. 1713; died unmarried 1753.
6. Anne, b. 1714. = Wrightson Mundy, of Osbaston, Leic. and Markeaton, Derby, esq.
7. Dorothy, b. 1715. = John Rolleston, rector of Aston super Trent, co. Derby.

1. Robert-Thomas-Sedley Burdet, born 1741; died 1744.

2. Francis Burdet, esq. born 1747; died Feb. 3, 1794; buried at Formarke. = Mary Eleanora, dau. and coheir of William Jones, esq. of Ramsbury manor, Wilts; married Dec. 30, 1766; d. at Bath, Feb. 3, 1794; bur. at Formarke.

3. John, born Feb. 13, 1768; died April 2, 1779, æt. 20.

1. Elizabeth. = Francis-Noel-Clarke Mundy, of Markeaton, esq.
Francis. Charles.

2. Frances.

1. Robert, born 1744, died 1764.

2. Sir Francis Burdet[2], bart. born Jan. 25, 1770; living 1799. = Sophia, third dau. and coheir expectant of Thomas Coutts, of the Strand, esq. married at St. Martin's in the Fields Aug. 5, 1793.

3. Charles-Sedley Burdet, born Dec. 26, 1772; drowned at the Rhine-fall at Schaffhausen in Switzerland in 1793.

4. William-Jones Burdet, born Aug. 23, 1774; unmarried 1795.

5. Ernley Burdet, born Jan. 14, 1776; died Dec. 23, 1778.

1. Mary-Eleanora, born March 14, 1775; died unmarried 1795.
2. Eliza, born Jan. 25, 1777.
3. Frances, born July 27, 1778.

Sophia, born June 13, and bapt. July 10, 1794.
Robert, born April 26, 1796, in Stratton-street, Piccadilly.

---

[1] See their issue, "Shaw's Staffordshire," vol. I. p. 360.

[2] Arms: Azure, two bars Or; fig. 44.

PRESTWOULD,

a large pariſh, towards the North-eaſt angle of Leiceſterſhire, and near the borders of Nottinghamſhire, due North from Leiceſter 12 miles, about an equal diſtance from Nottingham, and 2 miles from Loughborough, is bounded by Wimeſwould, Walton, and Barrow; and alſo by Burton, Cotes, and Hoton, the three latter of which places are hamlets of this extenſive pariſh; which, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote. The whole pariſh conſiſts, for the moſt part, of rich good land.

At the Norman ſurvey, Preſtwould was conſidered as an appendage to the manor of Barrow, then held by Earl Hugo immediately under king William. It contained two ploughlands, a meadow three furlongs long and one broad, and a wood ſix furlongs long and five broad. The value was not returned to the ſurveyors [1]. Another ploughland and a half, all but one ox-gang, in Preſtwould, belonged, at that time, to the manor of Burton, and was the property of Durand Malet [2].

It appears that Poutrell, the lord of Cotes, held lands in Preſtwould and Wimeſwould, and that part thereof belonged to the monaſtery of St. Ebrulf in Normandy, by likelihood of the gift of theſe Poutrells; for in a charter of William the Conqueror are theſe words: "Alii quoque homines Hugonis comitis Ceſtrie dederunt decimas ſuas eccleſie in Nicholeſcirâ; Rozſceli de Eſtentonâ, Oſbernus Tezſonis filius, de Neubold, Baldricus de Farefort, decimam cum uno ruſtico; Rogerus de Millai & Briſard, & Robtus Pultrel in Legreceſtreſcirâ. Omnes hi decimas ſuas Sancto Ebrulfo dederunt, & predictas comes gratanter conceſſit [3]."

The other part of this lordſhip was in the poſſeſſion of the Preſtwoulds, an antient family, who took their name from the place; and one of whom, Ankitell de Preſtwould, about the time of Henry II, gave the church and certain lands in Preſtwould to the nuns of Bolyntgon, co. Lincoln; which were confirmed to them by Elias de Preſtwould his ſon, and William ſon of Philip de Kyme chief lord of the fee [4].

The abbot and convent of Croxton had from this family a ſmall annual rent at Preſtwould and Burton:

"Habemus in Preſtewold, de dono Sibille que fuit ſponſa Elie filii Anketilli de Preſtwold, annuum redditum v s̄. in puram & perpetuam eleemoſinam, recipiend' de Yvone de Preſtewold & heredibus ſuis, pro III bovatis terre, ad II anni terminos, ſcil', ad Inventionem Sancte Crucis xxx đ. & ad Mich' xxx đ. Hunc quidem redditum dimiſimus per cartam Yvoni filio Willielmi de Preſtewold, reddendo nobis annuatim VI đ. in octavis Paſche pro omni ſervicio [5]."

On the aid granted to king Henry III. in 1235, towards the marrying of his ſiſter with the emperor of the Romans, Preſtwould paid one mark for half a knight's fee held by William de Herbert.

In the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about the year 1240, Preſtwould is deſcribed as conſiſting of one ploughland; and in the Itinerary of 1280, Preſtwould, Burton, Hoton, and Cotes, anſwered collectively as one vill.

In 1296, the town of Preſtwould was held in fee of the honour of Leiceſter; and John de Segrave and Thomas de Chaworth held lands here of the Earl, and the Earl of the King [6].

In 1297, Edmund earl of Lancaſter, the king's brother, held, at his death, divers lands at Preſtwould [7].

In 1308, John Bardolf, at his death, held one acre and an half in Preſtwould, of Hugh the ſon of Henry, by the ſervice of one halfpenny a year; and three roods and an half of land there, of Ralph Randolph, by the ſervice of one clove-flower (unius clavi gariefoli); and John Bardolf, his ſon and heir, was then 7 years old [8].

Hugh de Preſtwould was in 1327 a collector of the ſubſidy of a twentieth in this county.

Two grants from Ankitell de Preſtwould to Stephen de Segrave of lands at Cotes [9], and of two acres of Preſtwould called Gares, are noticed in the Segrave Chartulary; where it appears, that "Cotes ſuper Sore, cum Preſtwold & Hoton," were in 1325 conſidered as members of the lordſhip of Segrave [10].

In 1329, Robert Powtrell, deceaſed, held a moiety of the manor of Preſtwould of the king (by reaſon of the forfeiture of Henry de Beaumont) by the ſervice of a quarter of one knight's fee, and the other moiety of the ſaid manor by knight's ſervice; and Richard ſon of John Powtrell, couſin of the aforeſaid Robert, was the next heir [11].

In this town and Cotes adjoining to it were antiently two manors intermixed; one of which in 1346 was in the hands of ſir John de Nevile, knight; who (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 10*s*. for a quarter of one knight's fee in Preſtwould, Wymondſwould, Burton, and Cotes, parcel of the honour of Leiceſter; and Robert Poutrell, lord of Cotes, 3*s*. 4*d*. for a twelfth part of one knight's fee in Preſtwould and Burton, parcel of the fee of Cheſter [12].

In 1350, John Poutrell, at his death, held certain lands and tenements in Preſtwold, of Alice relict of Henry de Beaumont, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee [13].

In 1361, Henry Plantagenet duke of Lancaſter died ſeiſed of one knight's fee in Wymondeſwold, Burton, and Preſtwold, which Thomas de Chaworth held; alſo of one knight's fee in Wymondſwould, Burton, Preſtwold, and Cotes, which John de Segrave held [14].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Preſtwould was rated at 1*l*. 3*s*. 0*d*.; and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 5*s*.; Burton at 2*l*. 1*s*. 0*d*.; and 1*s*. abated; Cotes, at 1*l*. 18*s*. 0*d*.; and 2*s*. abated; Hoton, at 1*l*. 17*s*. 0*d*.; and 6*s*. abated.

In 1434, Robert Nevill died ſeiſed of a certain ruinous capital meſſuage, and of one cottage with a cloſe, in Preſtwould, held of the king in capite; and John Nevill was his next heir [15].

"Theſe two manors, in the time of king Henry VI, came unto ſir Richard Nele, ſerjeant at law, and after one of the juſtices of the common pleas in the time of king Edward IV. and king Richard III. He died 1 Hen. VII.; as appears by two inquiſitions; one taken after the death of Chriſtopher Nele, ſon and heir of the ſaid ſir Richard Nele, 18 Hen. VIII; the other taken 5 and 6 Philip and Mary, after the death of Richard Nele, ſon and heir of the aforeſaid Chriſtopher Nele [16]." Francis Nele, ſon of the laſt-mentioned, was twice married; but left only one ſon, Richard, and two daughters, Mary and Elizabeth; and, Richard dying without iſſue, the two ſiſters ſhared their father's inheritance.

Richard Beaumont, of Cole Orton, eſq. died, Oct. 18, 1538, poſſeſſed of lands in Preſtwould, Burton, Cotes, Hoton, and Loughborough, held of the honour of Leiceſter, by the fourth part of a knight's fee, and a rent of 20*d*.; leaving Nicholas, his ſon and heir, aged 11 [17].

In 1564, there were 14 families in Preſtwould; in Burton, 33 families; in Cotes, a chapel and 23 families; and in Hoton a chapel and 9 families.

---

[1] "In Preſteuuald 2 carucatæ terræ; pratum 3 quarentenarum longitudinis, & 1 quarentenæ latitudinis. Silva 6 quarentenarum longitudinis, & 5 quarentenarum latitudinis. Require pretium."

[2] See hereafter, under Burton, p. 363.

[3] Dugdale, Mon. Angl. vol. II. p. 966; and Ordericus Vitalis, p. 602.

[4] Ex veteri Rotulo in Bibliothecâ Deweſianâ.

[5] Peck, MS. 4935; ex Cod. MS. de Domeſday, apud Belvoir, in 24mo, fol. 9. b.

[6] Inq. 24 Edw. I. in Scacc.

[7] Eſch. 25 Edw. I. N° 51. Leic.

[8] Eſch. 2 Edw. II. N° 25. Leic.

[9] See hereafter, under Cotes, p. 365.

[10] Inq. 19 Edw. II.

[11] Eſch. 3 Edw. III. N° 62. Leic.

[12] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[13] Eſch. 24 Edw. III. N° 38. Leic.

[14] Fin. 16 July, 35 Edw. III. m. 23.—See more in Aſhby Magna.

[15] Eſch. 13 Hen. VI. N° 41. Leic.

[16] Burton, MS.—Richard Nele was raiſed to the degree of ſerjeant 3 Edw. IV; appointed king's ſerjeant at Stamford the year following; judge of the common pleas 49 Hen. VI; of the king's bench 11 Edw. IV; 1 Edw. V, when he was knighted; 1 Ric. III; 1 Hen. VII. 1485; in which laſt year he died. Gough's Sepulchral Monuments in Great Britain, vol. II. p. 294.

[17] Inq. at Harborough, 2 May, 30 Hen. VIII; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. V. (Harl. MSS. 760.) p. 352.

In Auguſt 1588, Henry Skipwith, eſq. of Keythorpe, died ſeiſed of certain lands, meadows, and paſtures, in Preſtwould, Hoton, and Loughborough, held of the queen, as of her honour of Leiceſter, by the ſervice of one knight's fee, and the rent of 1*d*.[1]

“ Everard Digbie, the ſon of Kenelm Digbie, of Stoke Dry, in the county of Rutland, eſq. married Mary, ſiſter and coheir to her brother Richard Nele; and ſo the poſſeſſion came to the Digbies. Theſe Digbies have been, and continue, a race of gentlemen of great account in theſe counties[2].”

In 1610, ſir William Skipwith died poſſeſſed of the inheritance of this place; to whom ſucceeded his ſon ſir Henry Skipwith, who made Preſtwould his principal reſidence; the family manſion at Cotes being reſerved for his mother dame Jane, who continued in it till her death in 1630; in which year ſhe is noticed as the only freeholder at Cotes, as in 1641 ſir Henry Skipwith, bart. was at Preſtwould.

“ 26 Oct. 1646. By virtue of an order of both houſes of parliament of the 2d of May laſt, it is ordered that the yearly ſum of £40. be paid out of the profits of the impropriate rectory of Preſtwould, co. Leiceſter, ſequeſtered from ſir Henry Skipwith, knight and baronet, delinquent, to and for increaſe of the maintenance of Mr. Timothy Kirke, miniſter of the pariſh-church of Onelippe in the ſaid county; his preſent maintenance being but £40. a year; and the ſequeſtrators are required to pay the ſame accordingly, as the profits ſhall grow due and payable[3].”

After a variety of fines and ſequeſtrations, the eſtate of ſir Henry Skipwith appears to have been conſiderably impaired; and, on his ſecond marriage, he had ſecured to the lord mayor and citizens of London, as guardians for the children of his wife by a former huſband, a long leaſe of his property at Preſtwould, as appears from the following authentic document:

“ March 2, 1649-50. Whereas the portions of Anne, Martha, and Edward, the children or orphans of John Acton, deceaſed, amounting to the ſum of £3750. 18*s*. 1½*d*. were ſecured to this Court by ſir Henry Skipwith, knt. and bart. who married with Blandina the wife of the ſaid John Acton, deceaſed, by a leaſe of the manor of Preſtwould in the county of Leiceſter, for the term of fourſcore and nineteen years, and upon a ſtatute of £5000; which ſtatute is by order of this Court extended, and divers lands are thereupon ſeized and delivered to Iſaac Pennington and ſir John Woollaſton, knt. aldermen of London, and Thomas Adams, eſq. the ſurviving truſtees to whom the ſaid leaſe and ſtatute were taken: And whereas, for the obtaining the ſaid portions, by order of this Court, the ſaid truſtees have aſſigned the ſaid leaſe unto Chriſtopher Packe, ſheriff, and one of the aldermen of this City: It is thought fit, and ſo ordered by this Court, that the ſaid truſtees ſhall aſſign the ſaid extent and lands, extended and ſeized as aforeſaid upon the ſaid ſtatute, to Thomas Cutler, citizen and cloth-worker of London, and his aſſigns, as a perſon nominated and appointed, and put in truſt, by the ſaid Chriſtopher Packe; and that the Chamberlain of London do deliver unto the ſaid Chriſtopher Packe the aforeſaid leaſe for 99 years, and all other writings in the Chamber of London touching the ſame leaſe and ſtatute[4].”

The lordſhips of Preſtwould and Cotes were ſoon afterwards regularly aſſigned by ſir Henry Skipwith in fee to Mr. Packe; “ who was owner of them before 1653; as appears,” ſays ſir Thomas Cave, “ from the evidences and collections I have ſeen in the cuſtody of Bennet earl of Harborough[5].”

In 1655, there was collected in Preſtwould, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 1*l*. 2*s*. 0*d*.; and 5*s*. at Hoton.

“ Within theſe precincts was a manor called Huet's Manor; on which account, the States of the Commonwealth claimed payment of the following ſums, or chief rents, heretofore due to the Crown of England:

For a houſe on Dalby's farm per annum, 2*s*.
For the hall of Cotes, in this pariſh, 2*s*. 2*d*.
For the neatherd's houſe per annum, 1*s*. 6*d*.
} 5*s*. 8*d*.

The former poſſeſſors appear to have had a liberty of free-warren here; concerning which the jury (at a court held here ſoon after Mr. Packe made the abovementioned purchaſe) gave in the following preſentment: ‘ The jurors, upon their oath, do farther preſent, that, time out of mind, whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary, there hath been a certain place for the lord of the manor aforeſaid, for the keeping of coneys, lying on the head of the leys called Conygree Leys, in Preſtwould aforeſaid; but whether the ſame is free-warren or not, they know not. And the ſaid jurors, upon their oath, do farther ſay, that the ſame was lately deſtroyed, by the conſent of the lord of the manor of Preſtwould aforeſaid, with the agreement and conſent of ſir Henry Skipwith, knight and baronet, late lord of the ſaid manor. And farther they ſay not[6].’ After Mr. Packe's purchaſe of this manor, he ſeemed, by the correſpondence which paſſed between him and the vender ſir Henry Skipwith, to be deſirous of continuing theſe lands as free-warren; and ſir Henry alſo, on the ſame evidence, aſſerts he never gave his conſent to the diſcontinuance or breaking up of the ſaid warren. How this matter was terminated, I am ignorant as yet; nevertheleſs, as it is an hiſtorical matter, I thought it not unworthy of inſertion[7].”

Chriſtopher Packe, eſq. citizen and draper, was the ſon of Chriſtopher Packe, of Finchley, co. Middleſex, (a merchant of London, and derived from a family originally of Northamptonſhire). In an ordinance of parliament, Oct. 9, 1646, for ſettling the poſſeſſion of the biſhops' lands to the uſe of the Commonwealth, Mr. Packe was appointed a truſtee[8]. He was elected alderman of Cripplegate ward, Oct. 4, 1647; and ſo acceptable were his magiſterial ſervices, that, on the 9th of February following, he was one of the four perſons nominated by the ward of Langbourn to be their alderman; but, not having then been two years an alderman in his former ward, he was ineligible.

Jan. 19, 1648-9, he purchaſed for £8174. 16*s*. 6*d*. the manor of the biſhops of Lincoln at Buckden; which for ſome time became his occaſional reſidence. May 30, 1649, he was one of the fifteen aldermen who attended the lord-mayor[9] in proclaiming the act for aboliſhing the kingly government; June 10, was again put in nomination as an alderman for the ward of Cheap; and on Midſummer-day following was elected one of the ſheriffs of London. Oct. 2, having been nominated an alderman for Cornhill ward, he accepted the change; but, in a few days, was prevailed on to continue with his original friends[10]. At

---

[1] Eſch. 3 April, 31 Eliz.

[2] Wyrley, MS.

[3] From the original minute-books of the Committee of Sequeſtrations, preſerved in the Bodleian Library.

[4] Repertory Foot, fol. 74.

[5] Sir Thomas Cave, MS. 1769.

[6] To this preſentment appends a ſeal with the arms of Packe; Argent, a feſs embattled . . . on a chief Azure, three anchors Or. Creſt, a demi lion couped, holding an anchor; Plate LI. fig. 13.

[7] Sir Thomas Cave, MS. 1769.

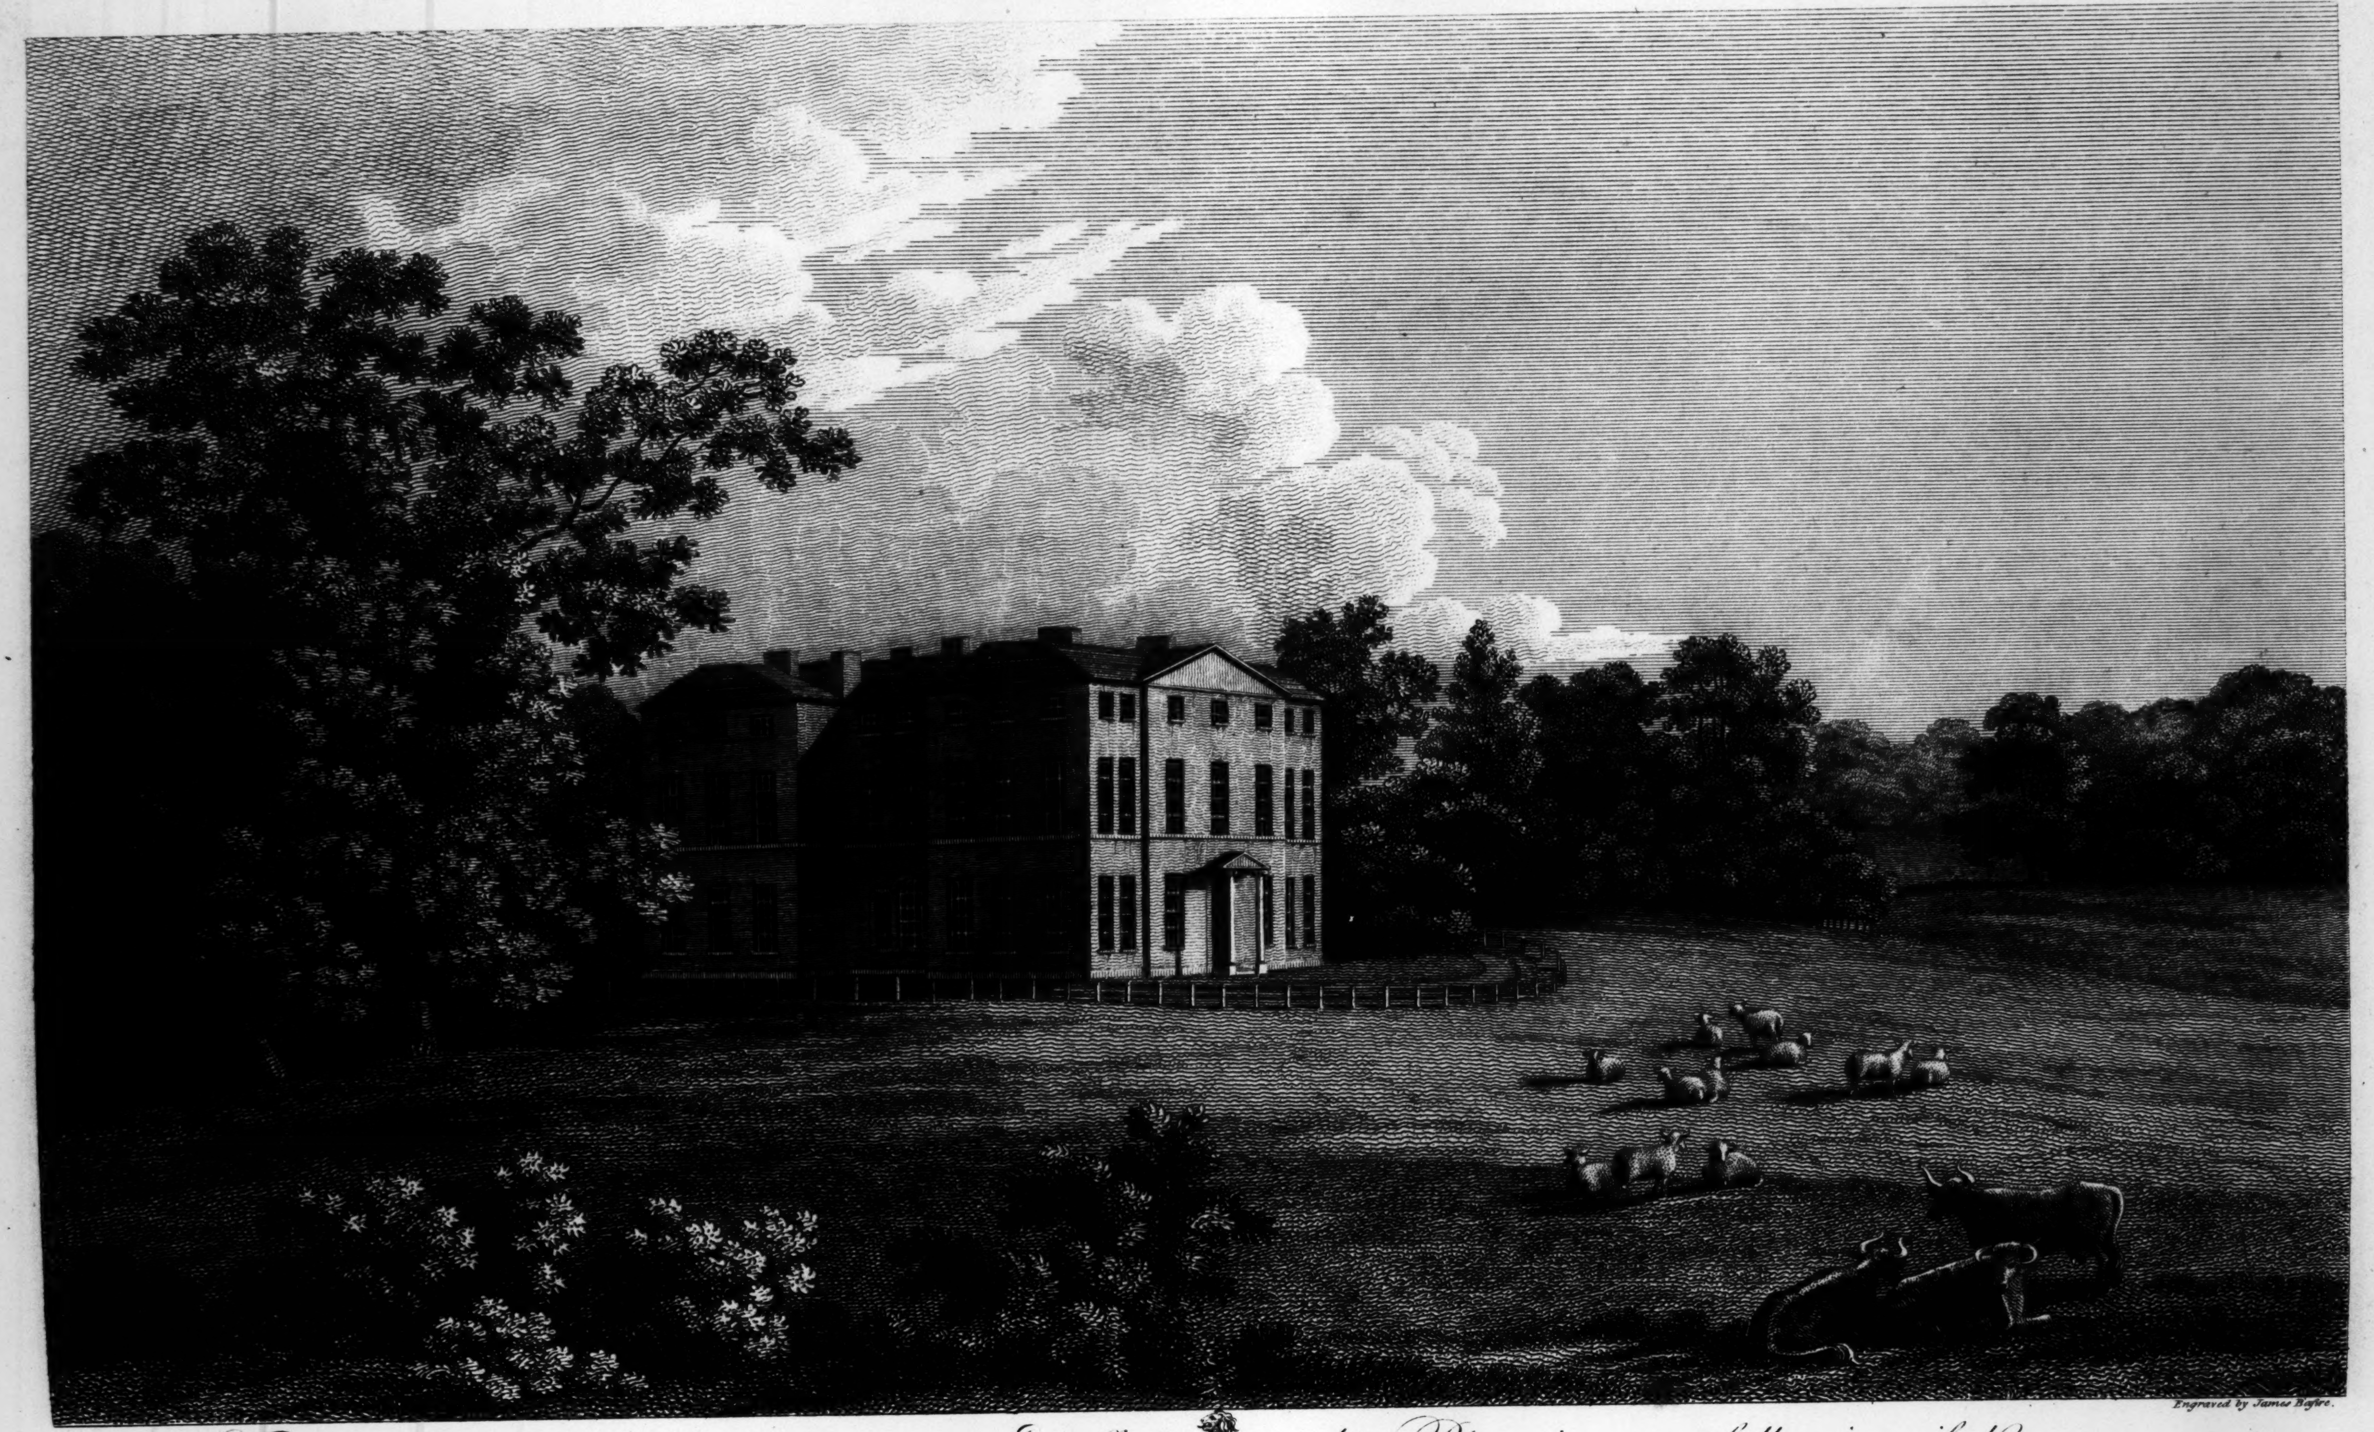
[8] Huſbands, p. 322.

[9] The lord-mayor (Andrews) was accompanied by aldermen Pennington, Wollaſton, Foulkes, Kenrick, Bigg, Edmonds, Packe, Bateman, Atkins, Viner, Avery, Wilſon, Dethick, and Foot. Hiſtory of Independency, Part II p. 185.

[10] “ Court of Aldermen, Oct. 2, 1649; Andrews, Mayor. His Lordſhip made a report unto this Court, that, ſitting in the ward of Cornhill, for the nomination of an alderman in place of George Price, eſquire, lately diſcharged, the inhabitants thereof did nominate ſir John Woollaſton, knight and alderman, and Mr. Alderman Packe (alderman of the ward of Cripplegate), Colonel Edmund Harvey, and Thomas Noell, goldſmith; of which nomination this Court did accept and allow: And ſir John Woollaſton refuſing to remove, Mr. Alderman Packe declared his acceptance of the ſaid nomination, and to remove to the ſaid ward of Cornhill: It is therefore ordered, that his Lordſhip repair into the ſaid ward of Cripplegate, for nomination of another Alderman thereof, in place of the ſaid Mr. Alderman Packe.”—“ Item, Oct. 9. Whereas Mr. Alderman Packe (being nominated, amongſt others, by the inhabitants of the ward of Cornhill for alderman of the ſaid ward), did lately declare his acceptance of the ſaid nomination; and, by conſent of this Court, did remove from the ward of Cripplegate (whereof he was before alderman) to the ſaid ward of Cornhill: Now, upon the humble petition of the common-councilmen of the ward of Cripplegate, in behalf of themſelves and the reſt of the inhabitants of the ſame ward, expreſſing their great deſire to have Mr. Alderman Packe ſtill continued alderman of the ſaid ward; and for as much as it appears that the ſaid Mr. Alderman Packe has not been fully two years alderman of the ſaid ward of Cripplegate, himſelf alſo now declaring his willingneſs to abide in the ſaid ward of Cripplegate, notwithſtanding his acceptance of the ſaid new election; this Court doth hereby annul their former proceedings upon the ſaid nomination, and proceeded to the election by ſcrutiny, according to the antient cuſtom; and did thereby elect Thomas Noell, goldſmith, to be alderman of the ſaid ward of Cornhill.” Repertory Reynardſon and Andrews, fol. 504. b.

Michael-

PRESTWOULD HALL,

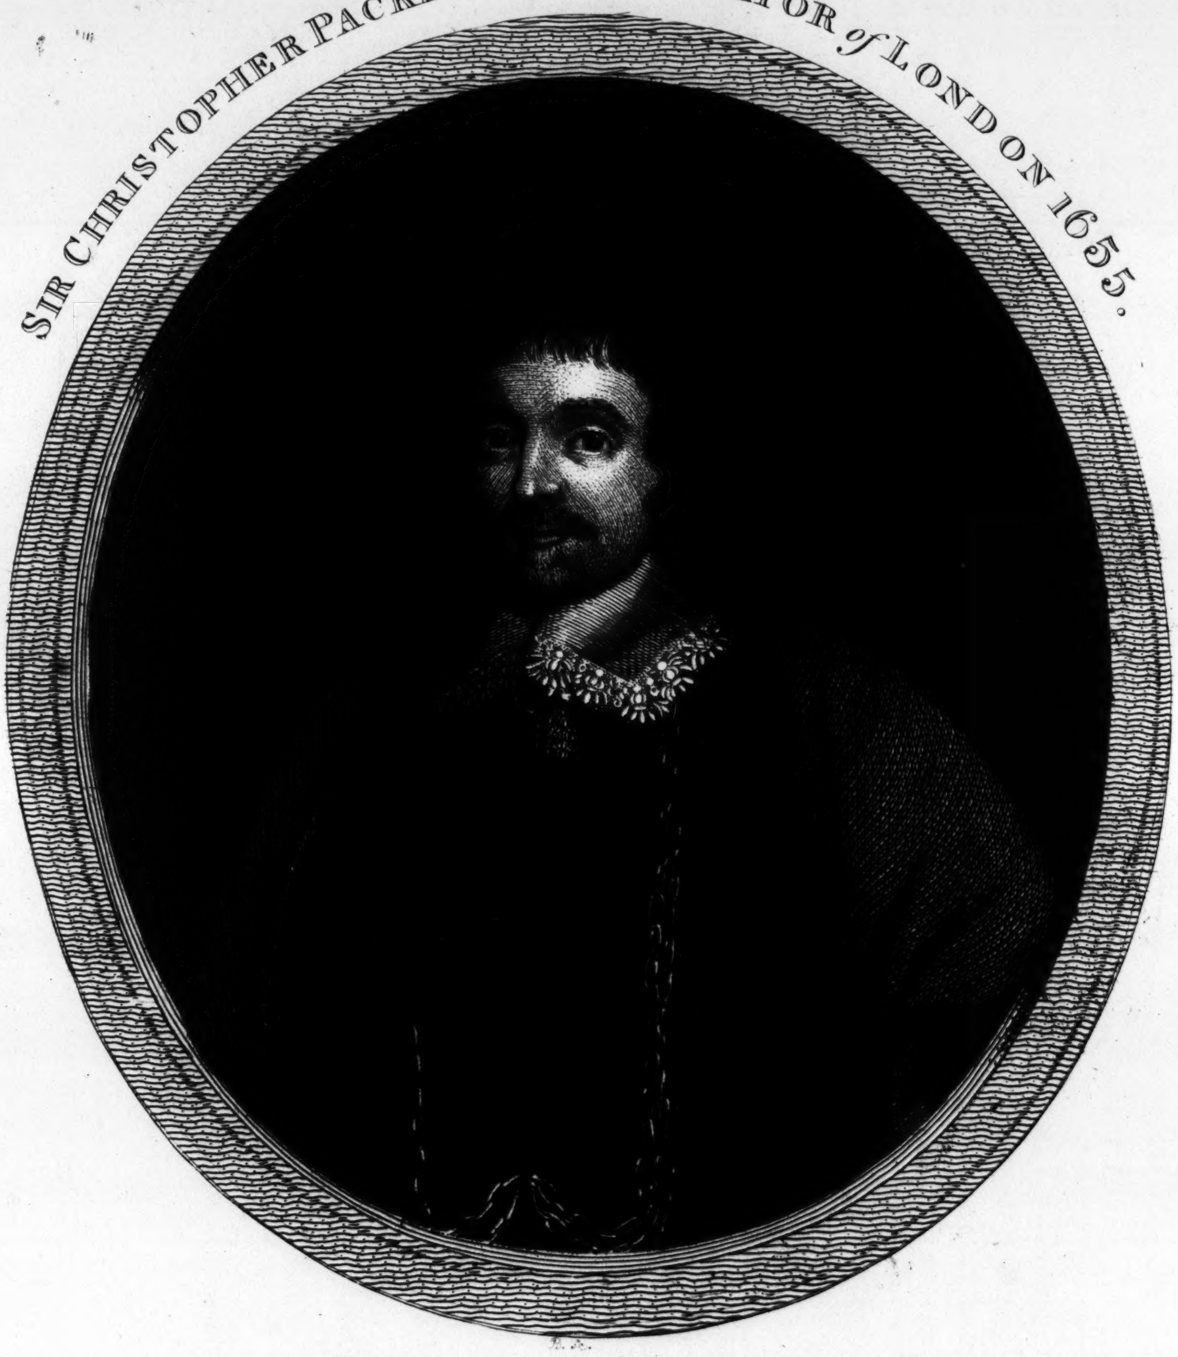


Engraved by James Baſire.

To CHARLES JAMES PACKE Esq.r this Plate is respectfully inscribed
by his much obliged and faithful Serv.t J. Nichols.

Vol. III. Pl. L. p. 355.

SIR CHRISTOPHER PACKE KN^T. LORD MAYOR of LONDON 1655.



To CHARLES JAMES PACKE Esqr. this Plate is respectfully inscribed
by his much obliged and faithful Servt. J. Nichols.

Published by J. Nichols, May 16th. 1800.

Michaelmas 1654 he was elected to fill the civic chair; and took his ſeat October 2, as "lord-mayor elect." About this period he received the honour of knighthood from Oliver Cromwell, the Lord Protector, at Whitehall; and, in the entry of the proceedings of the firſt Court of Aldermen which he held, Nov. 7, he is ſtyled "the right honourable ſir Chriſtopher Packe, lord-mayor [1]." Sept. 20, 1655, he was appointed joint-treaſurer, with alderman Viner, for the money, which was a very large ſum, collected throughout the kingdom, for the uſe of the ſuffering Waldenſes in Piedmont [2]. In January 1655-6, the Lord Protector and his council purpoſed to ſend ſir Chriſtopher Packe, in conjunction with Mr. Whitelock, on an extraordinary embaſſy to the king of Sweden; their intention in ſending ſir Chriſtopher being to manifeſt the engagement of the City in the buſineſs [3]. Feb. 21, 1656-7, being at that time a commiſſioner of the cuſtoms, and treaſurer at war, he brought forward the important queſtion, "That the Protector might be deſired to aſſume the ſtyle of King, as the moſt known and agreeable government [4];" and had, for a ſhort time, the title of "Lord Packe [5]," as one of Oliver's "other Houſe of Parliament [6]." May 8, 1660, he regularly attended, as an alderman, at the king's proclamation; and on the 5th of June ſigned a declaration, together with the lord-mayor, one of the ſheriffs, and ten other aldermen, of "their acceptance of his majeſty's free and general pardon; engaging (by God's aſſiſtance) to continue his majeſty's loyal and obedient ſubjects [7]." Notwithſtanding this, he was included, June 16, amongſt the twenty perſons, "to be excepted out of the act of general pardon and oblivion, for and in reſpect only of ſuch pains, penalties, and forfeitures (not extending to life), as ſhall be thought fit to be inflicted on him by another act intended to be hereafter paſſed for that purpoſe [8];" but, on the 13th of Auguſt, at the expreſs recommendation of the houſe of lords, his name was omitted in the liſt of perſons excepted; "provided, however, that he ſhould never from that time accept any office, eccleſiaſtical, civil, or military, or any other public employment [9]." He was accordingly, with ſix others who had been lord-mayors during the Uſurpation, removed from the office of alderman [10]; and, after that period, reſided many years in hoſpitable retirement at Cotes, where he was living at the time of the Heraldic Viſitation in March 1681-2; but died on the 17th of May following, at the age of about 89.

His ſon Chriſtopher, grandſon Clifton, and great grandſon Charles, continued their reſidence at Preſtwould; where the preſent owner, Charles-James Packe, eſq. who poſſeſſes the entire lordſhip, has built a new family-manſion on the ſite of the old manor-houſe. This houſe (of which an excellent view is given in Plate XLIX.) is large, commodious, and neat. The ſituation, however, is not adapted to the eye which delights in proſpects various and diſtant, though the country hereabouts lies much above the common level of the plains in Leiceſterſhire. Stanford-hall, a neighbouring ſeat, is an object every where in view in or near Charnwood Foreſt, or Loughborough; whilſt Preſtwould-hall is boſomed in calm ſerenity; and, as a near object, has many very pleaſing attractions. The grounds before it are ſpacious, and poſſeſs much of a park-like appearance; and the houſe, in every point of view, ſhews itſelf delightfully ſhaded with wood, being ornamented with large plantations of foreſt-trees; Mr. Packe having, perhaps, planted and raiſed, within the laſt 30 years, more trees than any gentleman in this county. The land is good, and their progreſs is very great; being at preſent very beautiful, and many of them fit to cut for various purpoſes; and to the next generation they will be highly productive. Were gentlemen in general thus to plant their eſtates, it would not only be a great ornament to the country, but poſterity would reap an incalculable advantage from it. Not a hedge, nor even a gravel-pit, is here to be ſeen, but what is planted with oak, aſh, or elm. The latter ſeems particularly adapted to this ſoil; many of which are now ſtanding, of a very large ſize. This lordſhip, with other adjoining eſtates belonging to Mr. Packe, from being almoſt deſtitute of wood, will, in a very few years, be as well covered as moſt parts of the county. The lordſhip of Cotes, and a conſiderable part of the adjoining one of Hoton, and part of Burton Bandalls, belong alſo to Mr. Packe.

Preſtwould-hall is adorned with ſeveral good family-portraits, by Vandyck, ſir Peter Lely, ſir Godfrey Kneller, and ſome in the beſt ſtyle by Dahl.

Amongſt the principal portraits are,

Jane Shore; a remarkably good picture, and believed to be an original.

The right hon. Sir Chriſtopher Packe, lord mayor of London, in the ſcarlet gown, black hood, and gold chain, of an alderman; laced band and taſſels, laced ruffles turned back over the ſleeve of his gown; his right hand on a table, the left reſting on his ſide. This portrait is faithfully copied by Mr. Baſire in Plate L.

His ſon, Chriſtopher Packe, eſq. in a large flowing wig; a tolerably good picture by ſir Peter Lely.

Sir Gervaſe Clifton [11], of Clifton, bart.

Frances counteſs of Tyrconnell, daughter of the late Sir Robert Clifton, bart. K. B.; by Smith.

Lady D'Oyley.

A lady of the Maſkelyne family.

Sir James Houblon [12], knt. by ſir Godfrey Kneller.

Mrs. Catharine Houblon, by ſir Peter Lely.

Three of Sir James Houblon's ſiſters, the preſent Mr. Packe's great aunts, daughters of James Houblon, merchant of London; one of whom married John Harvey, eſq. of Norfolk). One of theſe is by Vandyck.

Mrs. Rebecca Packe, by Dahl.

The preſent Mr. and Mrs. Packe, by Smith.

---

[1] In the Repertory of his Mayoralty, I find no remarkable political entries; but have extracted from it the two following articles relative to Leiceſterſhire: "George Sherwood, of Buſhby, gent. having married Mary Scott, one of the daughters and orphans of Richard Scott, late citizen and brewer of London, deceaſed, without leave of this Court; the parties were fined £5. and a jointure in land to the value of £70. a year was directed to be ſettled on the wife." P. 414. b.—"Oct. 23, 1655, the Chamberlain directed to pay £8. to Mr. Vynes, towards the charge of printing his four ſermons, now preſented unto this Court." P. 445.

[2] Heath's Chronicle, p. 374.

[3] Whitelock's Memorials, p. 619.

[4] "Whitelock declined the firſt delivery of "The humble Petition and Advice to the Protector," from the Parliaments of England, Scotland, and Ireland, to have the title of King, not liking ſeveral things in it; but ſir Chriſtopher Packe, to gain honour, preſented it firſt to the Houſe; and then the lord Broghill, Glyn, Whitelock, and others, put it forward." Whitelock, p. 639.

[5] By the aſſeſſments made during the Protectorate, it appears that "the lord Packe" had a country-houſe at Mortlake. Lyſons, vol. I. p. 376; referring to "Myſteries of the good old Cauſe," p. 44.

[6] "The Other Houſe conſiſted of 60 members, to whom writs were ſent in the ſame form by which the peers had uſually been ſummoned. Jan. 20, 1657-8, both Houſes met; and the Protector came as Sovereign to the Houſe of Lords, and ſent for the Speaker and Houſe of Commons by the Black Rod, and then ſpoke in ſhort to them, beginning his ſpeech in the old ſtyle, "My Lords, and you the Knights, Citizens, and Burgeſſes of the Houſe of Commons;" and then diſcourſed ſome particulars which he recommended to them; thanked them for their fair correſpondence the laſt ſeſſion; and aſſured them, if they would continue to proſecute his deſigns, they ſhould be called 'the bleſſed of the Lord, and generations to come ſhould bleſs them:' And ſo he left his lord-keeper Fiennes to make a large ſpeech to them, with all the ſtate of our antient Monarchs. When the two Houſes fell upon buſineſs, they could by no means agree; the Commons had envy and indignation to ſee a Houſe pretending to be ſuperior to them without the claim of birth-right, or any old legal creation; and the Other Houſe knew it was their commiſſion to be a Houſe of Peers in every thing but name; and therefore inſiſted upon all the antient rights and privileges belonging to the place where they ſate. The Protector, ſeeing their diſputes growing higher every day, reſolved upon their diſſolution." Kennett, vol. III. p. 221.

[7] Repertory Alleyne, p. 83. b.

[8] Journals of H. C. vol. VIII. p. 65.

[9] Ib. p. 217.

[10] His laſt attendance in the court of aldermen was on the 7th of Auguſt, 1660.

[11] Sir Gervaſe Clifton, who died in 1666, is remarkable for having had ſeven wives.

[12] Some of this family were eminent merchants in Elizabeth's reign. James Houblon, merchant of London, who died in 1682, aged 90, had by Mary Ducane 10 ſons and 3 daughters; and two of the ſons roſe to great wealth. James, alderman of Alderſgate Ward, was knighted at Guildhall, Oct. 29, 1692; M. P. for London 1698; and dying Oct. 25, 1700, was buried at St. Bennet's, Paul's Wharf. John, alderman of Cornhill Ward, 1689; knighted at Whitehall 29 October that year: ſheriff 1690; was lord-mayor in 1696; and at the ſame time was the firſt governor of the Bank, and a lord of the Admiralty. He died Jan. 8, 1711-12. Strype's Stow, 1720, Book V. p. 151. 301. & 2d Appendix; Morant's Eſſex, vol. II. p. 513; Pennant's London, p. 399.

The date of the earlieſt Regiſter here follows: "Regiſtrum omnium & ſingulorum baptiſmatis aquâ ablutorum, matrimonio copulatorum, & eccleſiaſticæ ſepulturæ beneficio affectorum, in eccleſiâ & parochiâ de Preſtwould, ex veteri Regiſtro pergameneo tranſcript' per Guillielmum Ward, nunc ejuſdem eccleſiæ paſtorem, anno Domini 1598, juxta Conſtitutiones eccleſiaſticas per Archiepiſcopum, Epiſcopos, & reliquum Clerum Cantuarenſis provinciæ, in ſynodo inchoatâ Londini xxv° die Octobris, A. D. 1597."

The entries are chiefly in Latin; and at the bottom of many of the pages are added ſeveral mottoes, adapted to baptiſmal, nuptial, or ſepultural entries.

Baptiſmata in parochiâ de Preſtwold, eccleſiâ impropriatâ, cum membris de Burton, Hoton, & Coates, per Hugonem Whitmowe, miniſtrum.

"Clotho colum geſtat, Lacheſis net, Atropos ſecat."
"We begin with cryes, and end with cares."

Richard Neele, Aug. 27, 1563.

William Neele, June 13, 1566.

Bartholomew Neele, Aug. 24, 1568.

George Neele, June 22, 1572.

Editha, ſpuria (ut aiunt) Willmi Barrett, filii Thomæ Barret de Wymeſwold & Emmatæ Belton de Hoton, 9 die Septembris, 1576.

Henricus, filius & hæres Willmi Skipwith de Cotes armigeri, natus eſt Martii die 21°, 1589; & baptizatus eſt 29° die menſis ejuſdem, 1590.

Wm. ſon of Kenelm Neele, of Burton, gent. May 10.

George, ſon of William Skipwith, of Cotes, eſq. born Feb. 12, baptized Feb. 17, 1591-2.

Maria filia Willmi Ward, eccleſiæ hujus parochialis miniſtri, nata eſt 11° die Septembris, & baptizata eſt 17° die ejuſdem menſis, 1592.

Eliz. daugh. of W. Skipwith, of Cotes, eſq. Feb. 13.

Thomas, ſon of Wm. Skipwith, eſq. Aug. 18, 1594.

Willmus filius Willmi Ward, eccleſiæ hujus Preſtoldienſis paſtoris, natus eſt in diem Nativitatis Chriſti Salvatoris noſtri, ante diluculum, & baptizatus eſt Decembris 28°, 1594.

"Naſcitur indignè, per quem non naſcitur alter:
Indignè & vivit, per quem non vivit & alter."

Ego Guilielmus Ward junior, natus in diem Nativitatis Chriſti, factus ſum ejuſdem Chriſti membrum Decembris 28°, 1594[1].

Thomas, filius pauperis cujuſdam mendicantis, nomine (ut aiunt) Johannis Percie, Sept. 14, 1595.

Thomas, filius & hæres Johannis Wadworth, de Butlers Marſon, in com. Warwick, arm', Maii 28, 1597.

Roſamond, daughter of John Kirk, of Burton, yeoman, Dec. 15, 1605.

"Naſcitur in Burton Roſa-mundi, non Roſa-munda."

Thomas, filius primogenitus Franciſci Moreton, nuper de Lutterworth, ſutoris veſtiarii, Junii 14, 1607.

Gulielmus, filius Richardi Noble de Burton, ovium paſtoris, Junii 17.

Guilelmus, primogenitus Thomæ Wildman de Preſtwold, Aprilis 29°, 1609.

Robertus filius Richardi Webſter, de Hoton, opiferi, 6° Januarii.

Maria, ϖρωτοτοκη Richardi Briggs, de Burton, ovium paſtoris, Feb. 20, 1610.

Gulielmus, filius & hæres Henrici Skipwith, de Preſtwould, militis, natus eſt in diem Veneris, viceſimo-quarto die Februarii, & baptizatus eſt decimo die Martii, 1613.

Henricus filius Henrici Skipwith, de Preſtwould, militis, natus 16° die Septembris, baptizatus eſt 21° die ejuſdem menſis, 1615.

Elizabeth, daughter of ſir Henry Skipwith, knt. born Oct. 6, baptized Oct. 24, 1617.

Thomas, ſon of ſir Henry Skipwith, of Preſtwould, knt. born March 9, bapt. 15, 1619.

Diana, daughter of ſir Henry Skipwith, knt. born May 27, baptized June 13, 1621.

Graye, ſon of ſir Henry Skipwith, of Preſtwould, knight and baronet, baptized Feb. 1, 1622.

Maria, filia Georgii Roe, de Burton, chirurgi, Nov. 29, 1623.

Anne, daughter of ſir Henry Skipwith, knt. March 12.

Hamlet, ſon of Henry Toone of Preſtwould, 21 Dec. 1631.

Henry, ſon of Thomas Pate, eſq. of Preſtwould, April 21, 1633.

William, ſon of Tho. Skipwith, of Coates, eſq. July 6.

Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Pate, of Preſtwould, and Dorothy his wife, 9 Aug. 1636.

Timothy, ſon of Timothy Hemſley, of Burton, gent. and Katharine his wife, 1 Jan. 1651.

Anne, daughter of Moſes Foxcroft, of Preſtwould, clerk, born June 30, 1659.

Moſes, ſon of Moſes Foxcroft, Aug. 18, 1660.

Mary, daughter of Samuel Shawe, of Cotes, clerk, and Jane his wife, Feb. 24.

Charles, ſon of Chriſtopher Packe, eſq. of Preſtwould, Oct. 2, 1676.

Gervaſe, ſon of Robert Cliſton, of Preſtwould, gent. and Frances his wife, Jan. 11, 1695.

Nuptiæ.

"Matrymonie a matter of money now-à-days!"

Walterus Haſelrigge & Anna Neele ſancto matrimonio conjuncti ſunt 6° Novembris, 1562.

"Deliberandum eſt diù quod ſtatuendum eſt ſemel."

Gabriel Stapleton, of Eaſt Leeke, co. Notts, gent. to Joan Grace, of Burton, widow, April 17, 1575.

"Neſcio quid ſit Amor; nec amo, nec amor, nec amavi; Sed ſcio quiſquis amat, tangitur igne gravi."

Willus Ward, clericus, Preſtoldienſis eccleſiæ paſtor, copulatus eſt in ſancto conjugio Elizabethæ Norrice, filiæ Thomæ Norrice, de villâ Leiceſtriæ, nuper defuncti, 18° die Maii, 1591, in eccleſiâ Omnium Sanctorum in Leiceſtriâ predictâ.

"Menſe malum Maio nubere vulgus ait.
Figmentum & falſum eſt: Experto crede Roberto."

"Great is all love: it maketh ſweet man's life;
But greater is the love 'tween man and wife."

Matheus Sanders, de Shankton, armiger, Margaretæ Skipwith, filiæ Henrici Skipwith, nuper de Keythorpe, armigeri, defuncti, 4° Januarii, 1598.

John Atkins, of Laund Abbey, to Mary daughter of John Ibetſon of Preſtwould, Sept. 24, 1599.

Johannes Alonge, de Tamworth, ſutor calcearius, copulatus eſt in matrimonio Elizabethæ Smyth, ancillæ W. Skipwith, de Cotes, armigeri, Oct. 19, 1602.

Leonardus Digby & Gertruda Nevel, ſervi Gulielmi Skipwith, de Cotes, militis, Jan. 26.

Humphrey Fowlds, of Woodhouſe, to Alice daughter of Hugh Keble of Burton, July 30, 1604.

Johannes Leverton & Philippa Duckyt, ſervi Gulielmi Skipwith, de Coates, militis, Maii 3, 1608.

Ric. Brigges, olim paſtor Gul. Ward, hujus eccleſiæ miniſtri, Urſulæ Poterell de Burton, 14 Nov. 1609.

Edward Pate, of Kettleby, eſq. to Anne daughter of ſir William Skipwith, late of Coates, knt. deceaſed, June 26, 1611.

Sir George Throckmorton, of Fulbruck, co. Bucks, knt. to Joan, daughter of ſir William Skipwith, knt. late of Coates, Jan. 6.

Robertus Lambert de Burton, & Alicia vidua inveterata & delirans Thomæ Mewyt nuper de Burton, Jan. 24.

Henricus filius Hamleti Toone, de Belton, yeoman, & Maria filia Gulielmi Ward, Preſtoldienſis hujus eccleſiæ paſtoris, Junii 15, 1612.

John Pate, of Kettleby, eſq. and Elizabeth daughter of ſir William Skipwith, knt. deceaſed, 5 Oct. 1613.

Thomas Lock, of Gray's Inn, London, eſq. to Suſanna Welby, of Coates, daughter of William Welby, of Gedney, co. Lincoln, June 3, 1619.

Richard Nicholls, of Loughborough, to Margaret Hunt, of Preſtwould, Nov. 10, 1621.

Georgius Corbridge, ſervus Henrici Skipwith, de Preſtwould, militis & baronetti, Dorotheæ Ragge, filiæ Gulielmi Ragge de Preſtwould, June 25, 1622.

"It is not the having of a wife, but the loving of her, that maketh a man live chaſtely. And it is not the having, but the loving of an huſband, that preſerveth a woman from whoredom."

---

[1] This ſecond entry was added ſome years after by the ſon, who wrote an excellent hand, and was frequently his father's amanuenſis. This appears in 1606; where he ſigns "W. Ward, junior, ætatis meæ anno decimo tertio." Both their ſignatures are copied in Plate LII.

Georgius Raſon, de burgo Leiceſtriæ, juriſperitus, Elizabethæ Jenninges, filiæ Henrici Jenninges, de Burton, generoſi, 30 Martii, 1624.

Thomas Lewyne, of St. Martin in the Fields, co. Midd. gent. and Catharine daugh. of Henry Francyes, of Burton ſuper le Wold, gent. 22 April, 1633.

Devereux Barret, of Loughborough, and Mary Weſt, of Beeſton, co. Notts, May 8, 1651.

John Clarke and Mrs. Chavenie, both of Burton, married before William Danvers, eſq. juſtice of the peace, April 14, 1654.

John Smith, of Cotes, and Anne Beſtow, of Quorndon, married before William Bainbrigge, eſq. juſtice of the peace, 3 Nov. 1656.

George Brough, of Huckney, Notts, and Mary Wildman of Preſtwould, married Dec. 14, 1656, by Mr. White, juſtice of the peace for Nottinghamſhire.

William Toone, of Preſtwould, and Bridget Whatton, of Maplewell, married by Mr. Wrighte of Thurkinſton, Feb. 28, 1657.

Thomas White, of Burton, and Margaret Baker, of Shepeſhed, were married by Mr. Foxecroft of Preſtwould, June 16, 1658.

John Wingfield, of Willoughby on the Woulds, and Alice Grane, of Eaſt Leeke, both co. Notts, Feb. 15, 1660.

Mr. Henry Boſſe [of Woodthorpe [1]] and Mrs. Olive Farnham [of Quorndon], March 15, 1683.

John Johnſon and Alice Gamble of Grimſton, May 24, 1688.

Sepulturæ.

Joanna Danvers ſepulta 4° die Junii, 1561.

Hugo Whatmowe, clericus, Oct. 4, 1571.

“ Quod ſibi quiſque ſerit præſentis tempore vitæ, Hoc ſibi meſſis erit cùm dicitur, Ite, Venite.”

Wiłłmus Tylley, nuper de Syſton, repentinâ morte ex hâc vitâ emigravit in novâ cloſurâ Richardi Pollard, proximè capellæ de Hoton, 30° die menſis Januarii, 1575; eſtque ſepultus in Hoton predict' 31° die ejuſdem menſis.

“ Vive Deo gratus, toti mundo tumulatus, Crimine nudatus, ſemper tranſire paratus.”

Grace Pegge, of Hoton, widow, Jan. 26, 1576.

Katharina Bowne de Hoton, ancilla Wiłłmi Dalbie, gravida facta (accepto veneno), obiit, & ſepulta eſt Martii 12°, 1588.

“ Sin, before the action, a flattering enemy.
in the action, ſweet poiſon.
after the action, a living ſerpent.”

Edward ſon of Kenelm Neele, of Burton, gent. July 23, 1590.

William Tallys, “ nuper ballivus Henrico Skipwith, armigero, defuncto,” July 27.

Edwardus Steward, de Burton, laborer, ultimè in terram fodiens interfectus, & illiſus eſt ſubtùs terræ motu, & ſepultus Julii 22°, 1592.

“ Young men } have Death { behind them.
Old men before them.
All men not far from them.”

Margareta, uxor Wiłłmi Skipwith, de Coates, armigeri, ſepulta eſt Auguſti 22°, 1594.

Robertus filius pauperis cujuſdam nomine Georgii Townſend, nuper (ut refert) de Exeter, in comitatu Devon, ex improviſo flamine venti præcipitatus eſt de ponte infra Stanford, ſepultus eſt Preſtoldiâ, Aug. 4, 1596.

Elizabetha Boſſe, ſerva Roberti Fiſher de Burton (rejecto Dei timore) ſeſe laqueo ſuffocavit, & ſepulta eſt in agro, ſive in termino inter campos de Preſtwold & Burton, Octobris 21°.

Margeria, filia cujuſdam circumforanei nomine Jacob Exley, nuper de Burton ſuper le Trent, mortem obiit apud Hoton; & ſepulta eſt Preſtoudiæ, Dec. 28, 1596.

Iſabella Hawkyns de Burton Parvâ, langueſcens in ægrotatione (inſtigante diabolo) cultro jugulum ſuum petiit 30° die Decembris, & ſepulta eſt in agro inter campos Burtoniæ & Preſtoldiæ Jan. 1°, 1600.

“ Ex^r & alloca^r in Viſitatione triennali tent' apud Leyceſter, 22° die Junii, año Dñi 1601. W. Fyroppe [2].”

Johannes Malorye de Cotes, coquus Wiłło Skipwith, armigero, Dec. 12, 1602.

Wiłłs Pratt de Burton ſubito terræ motu interfectus, & ſepultus eſt Junii 22, 1603.

Anna Read de Hoton, de morbo caduceo laborans, præcipitata in puteolum, immerſa eſt, & ſepulta Nov. 12, 1608.

William Wildman, ſon of Thomas, April 30, 1609.

Gulielmus Skipwith, miles, obiit mortem Londini, 3° die Maii, & ſepultus eſt Preſtoldiæ 7° die ejuſdem menſis, 1610.

Kenelmus Wright, ſervus dominæ Janæ Skipwith de Coates, Jan. 16, 1619.

Joanna, relicta Gul. Skipwith, nuper de Coates, militis, intumulata eſt Preſtoldiæ, Aprilis quarto die, 1630.

Dña Amy, uxor venerabilis viri Henrici Skipwith, de Coates, militis & baronetti, intumulata fuit Sept. 7, 1631.

Nicoläus Brotherhood, de Mountſorell, in viâ regiâ inter Preſtouldiam & Hotunam, ſubitò moritur, & ſepultus eſt Hiberniæ 18° die Maii, 1633.

Gulielmus Ward, eccleſiæ parochialis de Preſtwold paſtor, ſepultus erat Julii 29, 1637.

“ Natus ego Gu. Ward, Preſtoldienſis eccleſiæ miniſter, ſecundo die Julii, anno Dom. 1557; & Julii 20, 1617, completus ætatis meæ annos 60. Clymactericus annus meus magnus incepit Julii ſecundo, 1619, & perdurabit uſque ad Julii 2, 1620.”

“ Epicedion Gulielmi Ward, Preſtoldienſis eccleſiæ paſtoris, quod ipſe (dum vixit) compoſuit, & propriâ manu ſcripſit.

“ Ward jacet in tumulo Gulielmus nomine dictus;
Divini populum verbi qui ſemine pavit:
Ciſtula corpus habet; melior pars gaudia cœli
Poſſidet, atque Deo laudes cantabit in ævum.
“ Inveni portum; ſpes & fortuna, valete:
Nil mihi vobiſcum, ludite nunc aliis. W. W.”

“ Chriſtus } Juſtificat { Effectivè, } W. Ward.”
Fides Apprehenſivè,
Opera Juſtificant Declamativè;

Mercia Wintrop, ſervula Henrici Skipwith, de Cotes, militis & baronetti, ſepulta eſt Aug. 21, 1638.

[From 1639 to 1648 no Regiſter remains.]

Ricus Palmer, de Burton, clericus, Oct. 1, 1650.

Henry Iremonger, of Burton, gent. Dec. 29, 1651.

Frances his widow, June 26, 1652.

John Clarke, being taken as vagrant, whoſe laſt abode was at Newcaſtle upon Tyne, was ſent home, and was buried March 15, 1653.

Sampſon Mills, that tabled at Dorothy Mills of Preſtwould, buried Sept. 8, 1656.

Suſanna Wayroine, gentlewoman, of Burton, buried Sept. 25.

John Kirke, of Burton, gent. Feb. 11, 1656.

Thomas Wildman, of Burton, Oct. 6, 1657.

Miles Newton, of Loughborough, gt. Feb. 24, 1659.

Moſes, ſon of Moſes Foxcroft, of Preſtwould, clerk, and William, ſon of Will. Boyer, of Cotes, gt. Feb. 27.

Margaret Chaveney, of Burton, widow, Sept. 5, 1660.

Præſtanti formâ fœmina, Jana uxor venerabilis Chriſtopheri Packe, armigeri, ſepulta erat die Sabbati, 23° Januarii, año Dom. 1685.

Quidam pedes-viator in itinere ægrotabat, & morabatur apud hoſpitium Mariæ Kirke, de Preſtwould, viduæ. Venit die Mercurii, 29° die Septembris, & langueſcebat uſque diem Veneris. Idem obibat eâdem nocte incognitus vicinis de Preſtwold durante toto tempore ægritudinis ſuæ; ſepultus fuit die Dominico, 3° die Octobris, 1686.

Elizabeth, wife of Samuel Shallcroſs, gent. Aug. 12. 1689.

John Wileman, of Burton, gent. March 21, 1692.

Matthew Beridge, of Cotes, Aug. 11, 1695.

Henry Davies, of Loughborough, Aug. 19, 1696.

Mrs. Anne Skipwith, of this pariſh, Jan. 17.

Miſcellaneous Extracts from the early Regiſter.

“ 1588. Hoc anno magnum diluvium.

“ Hoc anno Hiſpanorum Invincibilis Exercitus (ut ipſi dixerunt), Deo nobis propitiante, in pelago immerſus eſt. Sic pereant omnes Eccleſiæ Chriſti inimici! Amen!”

“ Auguſt 1609. Plague in Barowe.”

“ May 1610. Peſtis in Loughboro.”

1614. Hoc anno magnum gelu à Januarii 20° uſque ad Martii 13um perduravit, cum multâ nive, præſertim ſub finem Februarii & initio Martii 1614. Apud nos piſæ fabæque non ſeminatæ ſunt in terræ ſulcis ante Martii 26 & 27, 1615.”

---

[1] Some account of Mr. Boſſe will be found under the hamlet of Woodthorpe in the pariſh of Loughborough.

[2] Of this eccleſiaſtical office ſee before, under Staunton Wyvile, in vol. II. p. 805; and ſee his hand-writing in Plate LII.

"1618. Hoc anno, menſe Novembris, & initio Decembris, apparent Cometæ in Oriente ante diluculum; & altera etiam Cometa menſe Januarii circiter horam decimam veſpertinam."

"Hoc anno moritur Regina Anna, 24 die Martii."

"1622. Rediit Princeps Carolus ex Hiſpaniâ Octobris ſexto."

"1624. Hoc anno meſſis noſtra apud nos conſummata eſt, & frumentum omnigenum in horreis & acervis accumulatum eſt, pridiè feſtum S. Bartholomæi.—Æſtus magnus, & paululum pluvii."

"1602. Moritur Regina Elizabetha, Martii 24°."

"Hoc anno (1625) Jacobus Rex noſter ex hâc luce migravit, 27° die Martii, apud Tibalds.—Notandum, quòd Regina Elizabetha, Regina Anna, & tandem Rex Jacobus, ex hâc vitâ diſceſſerunt, eâdem hebdomade ejuſdem menſis."

"Hoc anno magna peſtis. Londini de peſte mortui ſunt, inter Decembris 23, 1624, & Novembris 10, 1625, 35,306.—Toto, de omnibus morbis, 53,038."

"1628. Aug. 23. Felicitèr occubuit ignobilis & infortunatus dux Buckinghamiæ."

"Meſſis apud nos hoc anno incepit primo die vel initio Septembris, & perduravit uſque ad decimumſextum Octobris.

"Felton, qui ducem Buckinghamiæ, hujus regni & reipublicæ peſtem, interfecit, poſt multum jejunium, aſſiduas preces, ſeriam & fidelem pœnitentiam, mortem patientèr perpeſſus eſt, Decembris ſecundo."

"Nov. 5. A fearful horrible wind; and, the next morning, the ſun, at his riſing, appeared red as blood. Our Navy was then at ſea, for the relief of the Rochellers; but too late."

"Henricus Fredericus immerſus erat in mare, Jan. 9, 1628."

"1631. Peſtis in Loughburge, & ſparſim per Angliam."

"1635. This year an unſeaſonable ſummer; inſomuch as, for want of rain, the graſs was burnt up, till the latter end of July and Auguſt; by means whereof hay and graſs was at a wonderful dear rate, and very ſcant: but a bleſſed and welcome Autumn followed, making another ſpring-time."

Nov. 10, 1653, Edward Hewett, of Preſtwould, elected regiſter by the pariſhoners, atteſted by William Danvers, eſq. juſtice of the peace.

Jan. 10, 1656, William Cooper, of Preſtwould, was in like manner elected regiſter.

Mr. Clarke, of Loughborough, left 15*s.* a year to the ſchool at Preſtwould, and 15*s.* to the miniſter.

See ſome farther extracts, from the modern Regiſters, in p. 361.

The CHURCH (ſee Plate LI.)

dedicated to St. Andrew, conſiſts of a tower (in which are three bells), a ſpire, chancel, and nave.

The tower and one ſide of the chancel are antient; but the nave and one wall of the chancel were rebuilt, by brief, about the year 1740.

The font is a modern marble baſon on a wreathed column.

Mr. Burton notices theſe arms here, Plate LI.

In the Eaſt window of the chancel:

1. Sable, a chevron Or, fretty Gules, between three garbs Argent, Preſtwould.
2. Sable, a lion rampant Argent, crowned Or, Segrave.
3. Or, on a bend Azure three fleurs de lis Argent, Poutrell.

In a South window of the chancel:

4. Gules, three lions paſſant guardant, in pale Or, England.
5. Or, three chevrons Gules, Clare earl of Glouceſter.

In a South window of the church, the picture of a man kneeling, on whoſe ſurcote,

6. Sable, three garbs Argent, banded Gules, Segrave.
7. Ermine, three chevrons Gules.
8. Bendy of ſix, Argent and Sable, a canton Ermine; Biſhopton.

In another South window, the arms of Segrave, Preſtwold, and Poutrell, were repeated.

In a high North window:

9. Gules, three greyhounds' heads eraſed Argent, 2, 1; collared, Nele.
10. Quarterly, 1. and 4, Nele; 2. Sable, a chevron between three bugle-horns Argent, Storey of Storey, co. Lincoln; 3. Sable, a chevron between three annulets Argent.

This church was given, in very early times, by Ankitell de Preſtwould, to the priory of Bolyngton in Lincolnſhire, which had not long before been founded by Simon Fitz-William for nuns of the order of Sempringham, "& fratribus earum, clericis & laicis;" and the gift was ſoon after confirmed by Elias his ſon:

"Omnibus, &c. Elias filius Anketelli de Preſtwold ſalutem. Sciatis me conceſſiſſe, &c. ſanctimonialibus de Bolyngton, &c. donationem patris mei; ſcilicet, eccleſiam Sancti Andree de Preſtwold, cum capellis & omnibus aliis pertinentiis ſuis, &c. Hiis teſtibus; magiſtro Ricardo de Kimâ de Preſtwald, &c."[1]

The church of Preſtwould was alſo confirmed to this monaſtery by Philip de Kime, lord of the fee.

"Notum ſit omnibus ſancte matris, &c. quòd ego Philippus de Kyme & heredes mei dedimus in perpetuum, &c. ſanctimonialibus canonicis, Deo & Sancte Marie in eccleſiâ de Bulingtunâ ſervientibus, eccleſiam Sc̄i Andree de Preſtwold, cum capellis & omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, liberè & quietè, ſicut ulla eleemoſina religionis liberiùs dari poteſt, pro ſalùte meâ & uxoris mee Hawiſe, & heredum, & pro animâ patris mei Simonis, ex cujus hereditate hec donatio pervenit, & pro animâ uxoris mee, & meâ, & omnium meorum, atque omnium fidelium defunctorum, ut proſit nobis ad eternam ſalutem. Et, ut hoc ratum in perpetuum permaneat, preſenti cartâ meâ, & hiis teſtibus, confirmo; Symone, Willo, Prill, filiis meis; Symone fratre meo; Radulfo Oſberti filio; Gaufrido de Hyelbi, Willo de Barchewood, Johe Clerico[2]."

In the Matriculus of 1220, Preſtwould is deſcribed to be under the patronage of the prior of Bolyngton; the rector .... inſtituted by biſhop Hugh Welles. It had appendant to it the chapel of Cotes; which enjoyed all ſacramental rights, and the privilege of burial; and had a reſident chaplain, preſented by Robert Frumentyn, owner of the advowſon. It had alſo the free chapel of Hoton, where was a reſident chaplain, preſented by the mother church; and which enjoyed all ſacramental rights, and the privilege of burial; and paid 12*d.* for ſynodals. It had alſo the chapel of Burton, which was to be ſerved once a week from the mother church. The prior of Bolyngton had two ſheaves of the tithes of the demeſne of Robert Putrell at Cotes, and of Elias de Preſtwould, paying to the abbot of St. Severin one mark annually, agreeably to a compoſition made between them. The prior received alſo two ſheaves of the tithes from the fee of Randulph de Jorz in Hoton, paying to the prior of Lenton 4*s.* a year, which he had long enjoyed. The monks of Gerendon paid to the rector of Preſtwould three marks for the tithe of eight ploughlands, which they cultivated at their own coſts, by a regular compoſition[3].

In 1344, the procurations for Preſtwould, Burton on the Woulds, Hoton, and Cotes, were 7*s.* 6¾*d.*; the rectory was taxed at 65 marks; and paid 5*s.* for Peter-pence.

Mr. Burton, in 1641, ſays, "This church, at firſt appropriated to the priory of Bolyngton, is now impropriate, but not preſentative. The curate, with his ſtipend, is appointed by the earl of Devon;" and, inſtead of the five laſt words are added, in another hand, "by Sir Henry Skipwith during his life, and after cometh to Mr. Charles Cavendiſh."

In 1650, Preſtwould was returned as an impropriation worth £120; and the curate "weak;" his penſion, 13*l.* 13*s.* 13*d.*

In 1709, the clear yearly value of the curacy was returned to be £20.

In the king's books, Preſtwould is entered, "cum capellâ de Hoton," as a living not in charge.

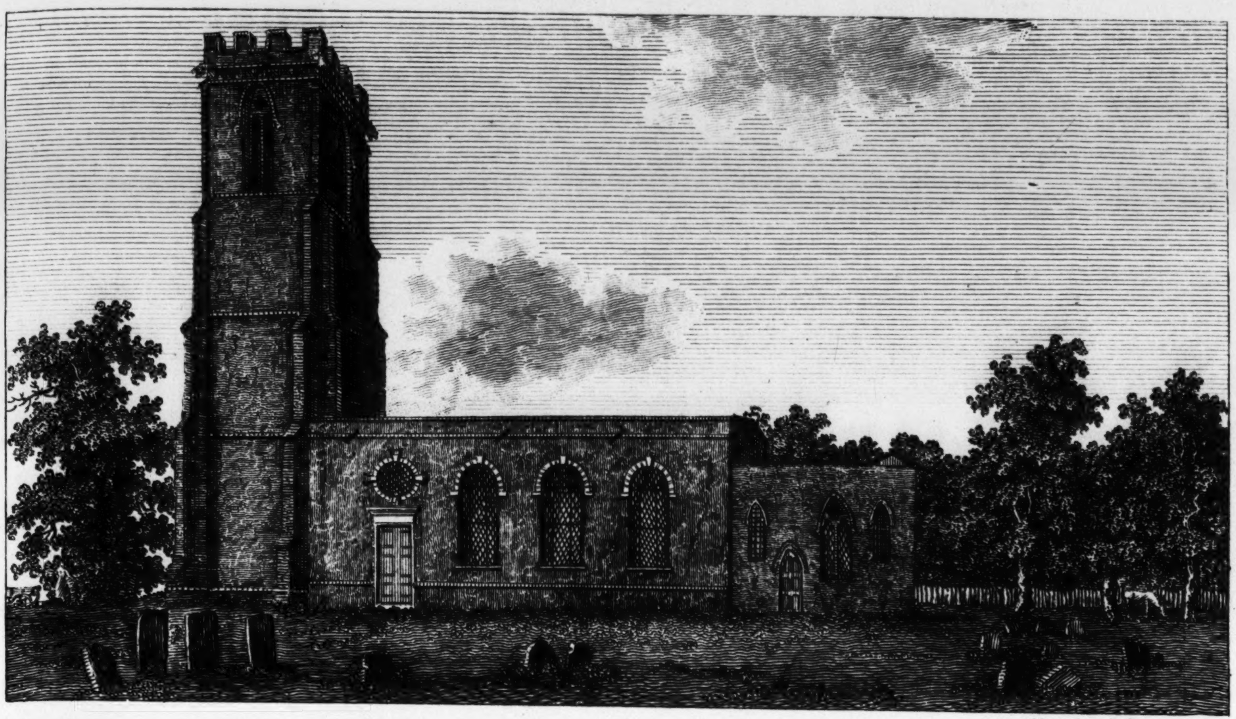
The epiſcopal procurations are 6*s.* 8*d.*

---

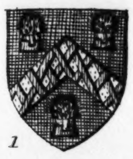
[1] Dugdale, Mon. Angl. vol. II. p. 795, ex vetuſto rotulo pergamenico in Bibl. Deweſianâ, anno 1648.

[2] Harl. MSS. 2044. p, 109.

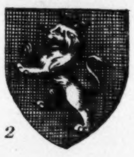
[3] Vol. I. p. lix.



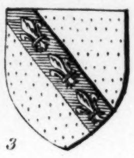
Malcolm, del et sc. 1792.



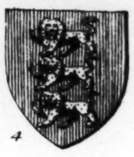
1



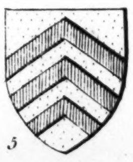
2



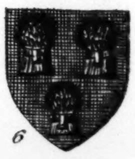
3



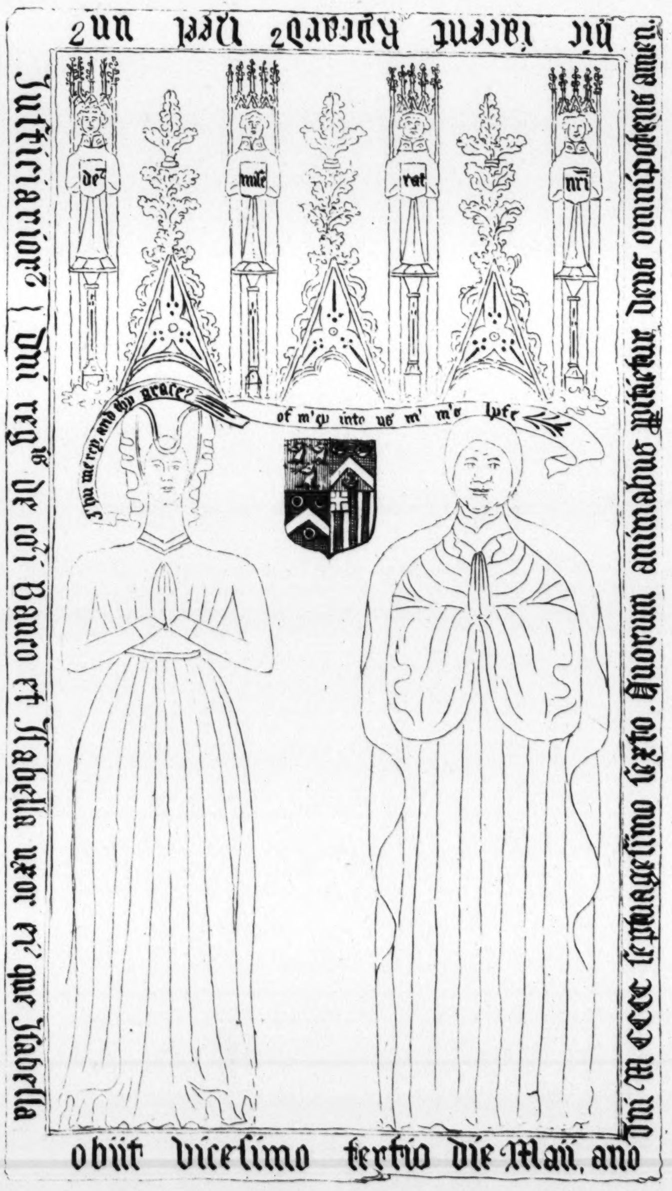
4



5



6



hic iacent Ricard⁹ Neel un⁹
Justiciarior⁹ dni reg̃is de coi banco et Isabella uxor eius que Isabella obiit vicesimo tertio die Maii, ano dni m cccc septuagesimo sexto quorum animabus propicietur deus omnipotens amen de mie rat nri
Jhu mercy and thy grace of m'cy into us m' me have 7

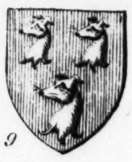
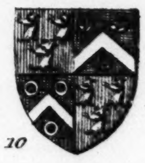
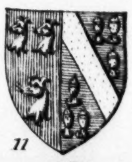
8



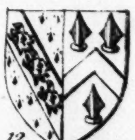
9



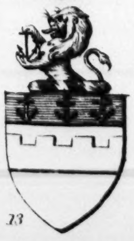
10



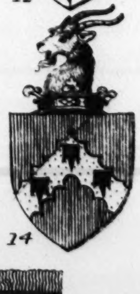
11



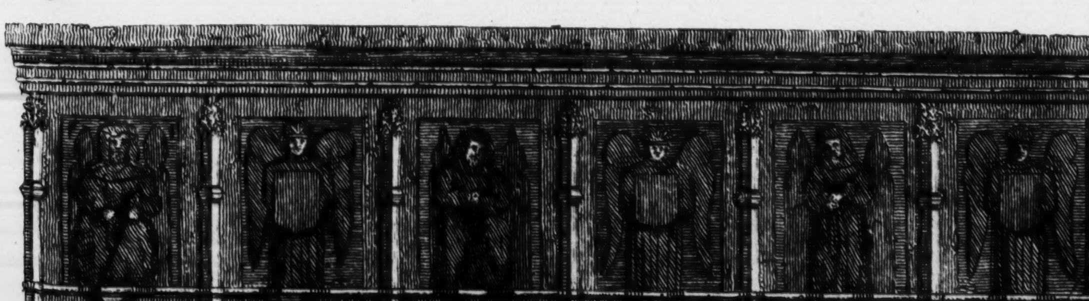
12

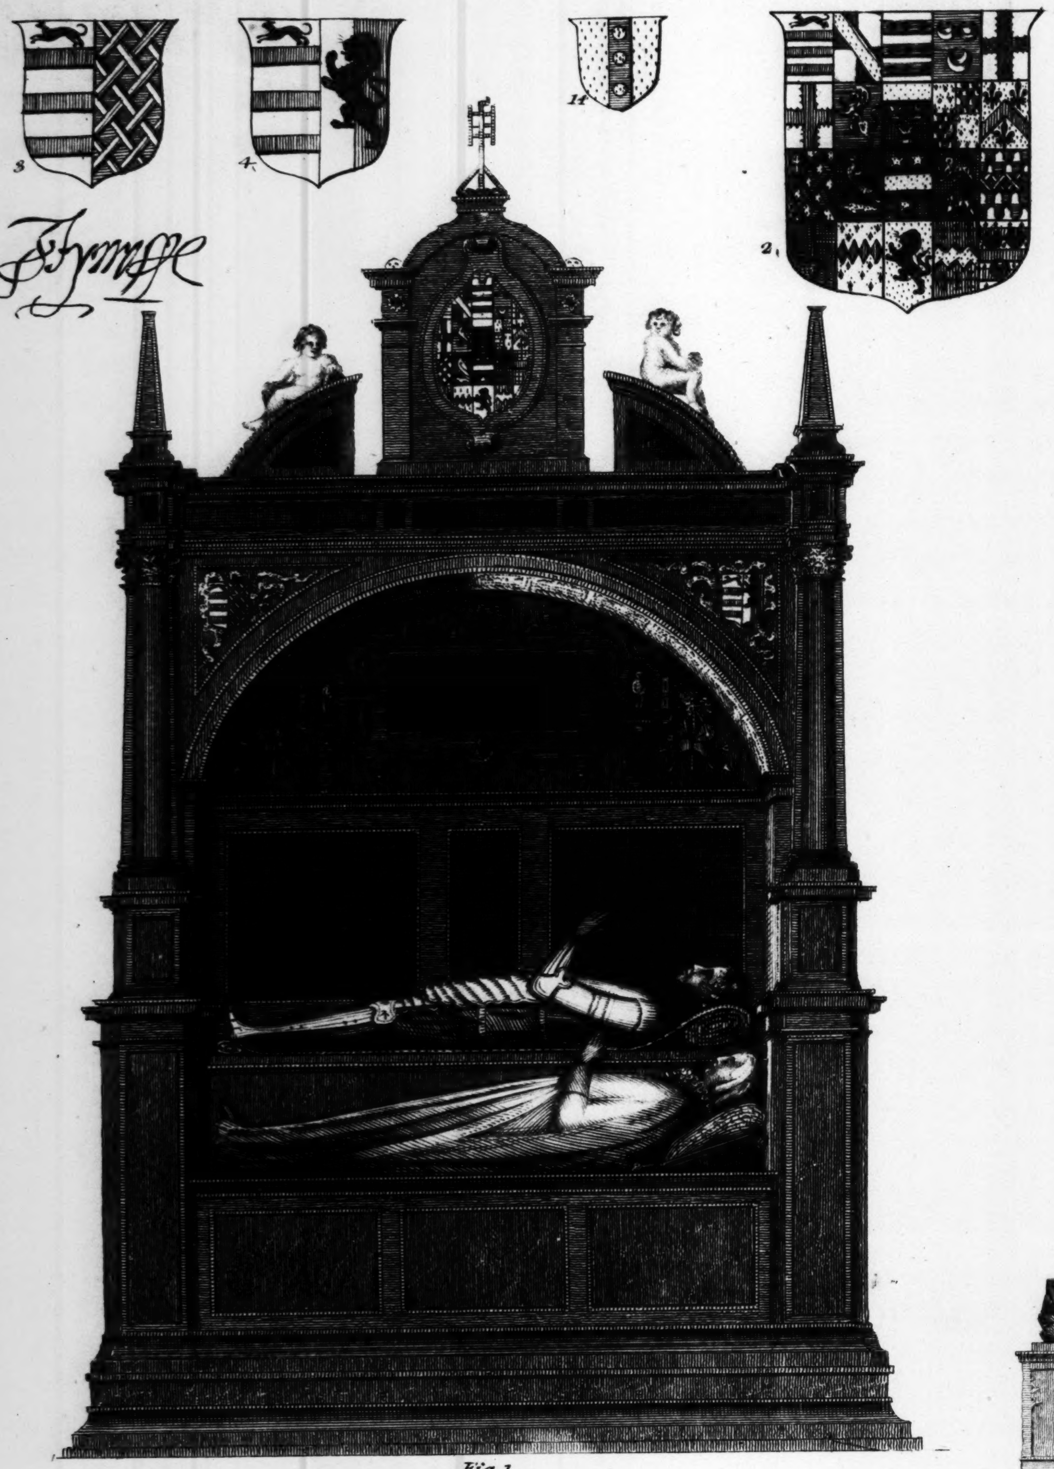


13



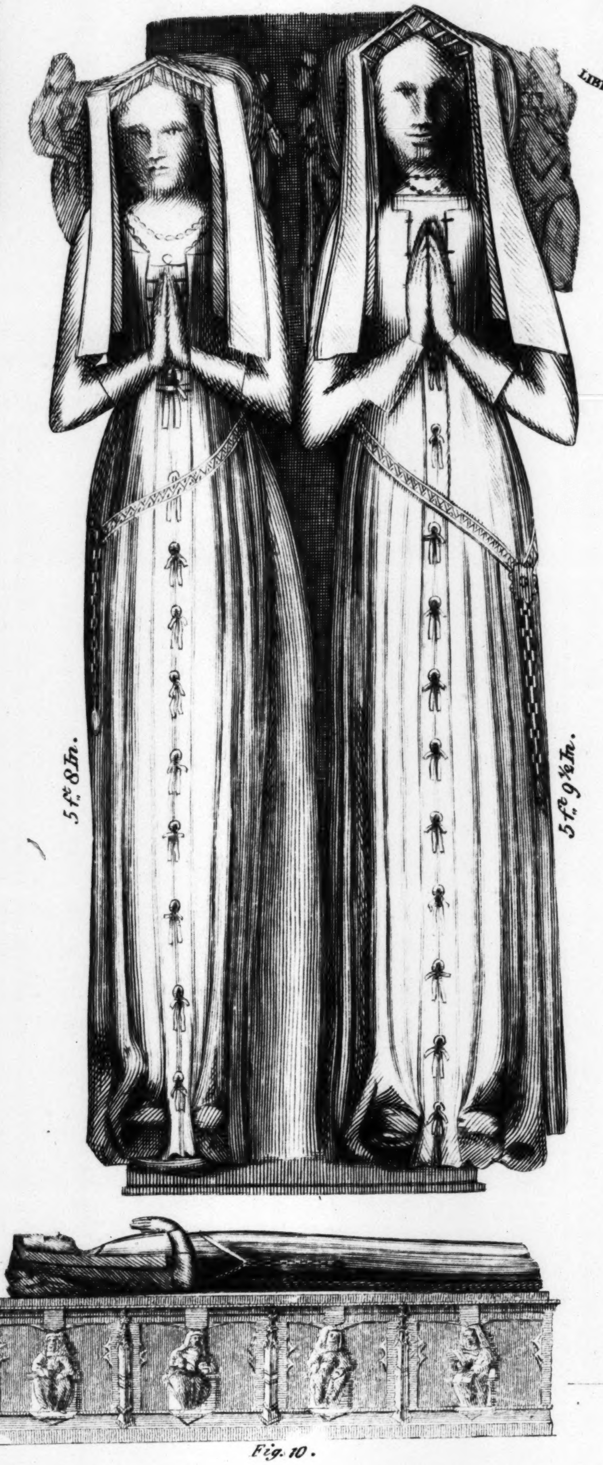
14





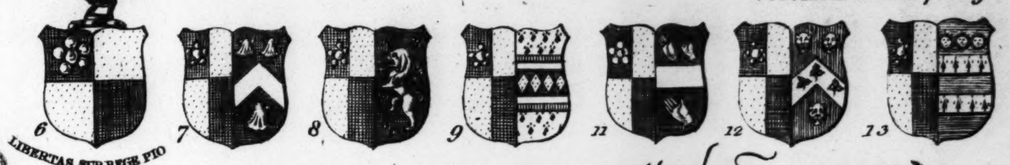
W. Thynne

Fig. 1.



5 f.t 8 In.
5 f.t 9½ In.

Fig. 10.



6
LIBERTAS SUB REGE PIO
7
8
9
11
12
13

Gº Guillelmu Ward

W. Ward Junior. 1606.

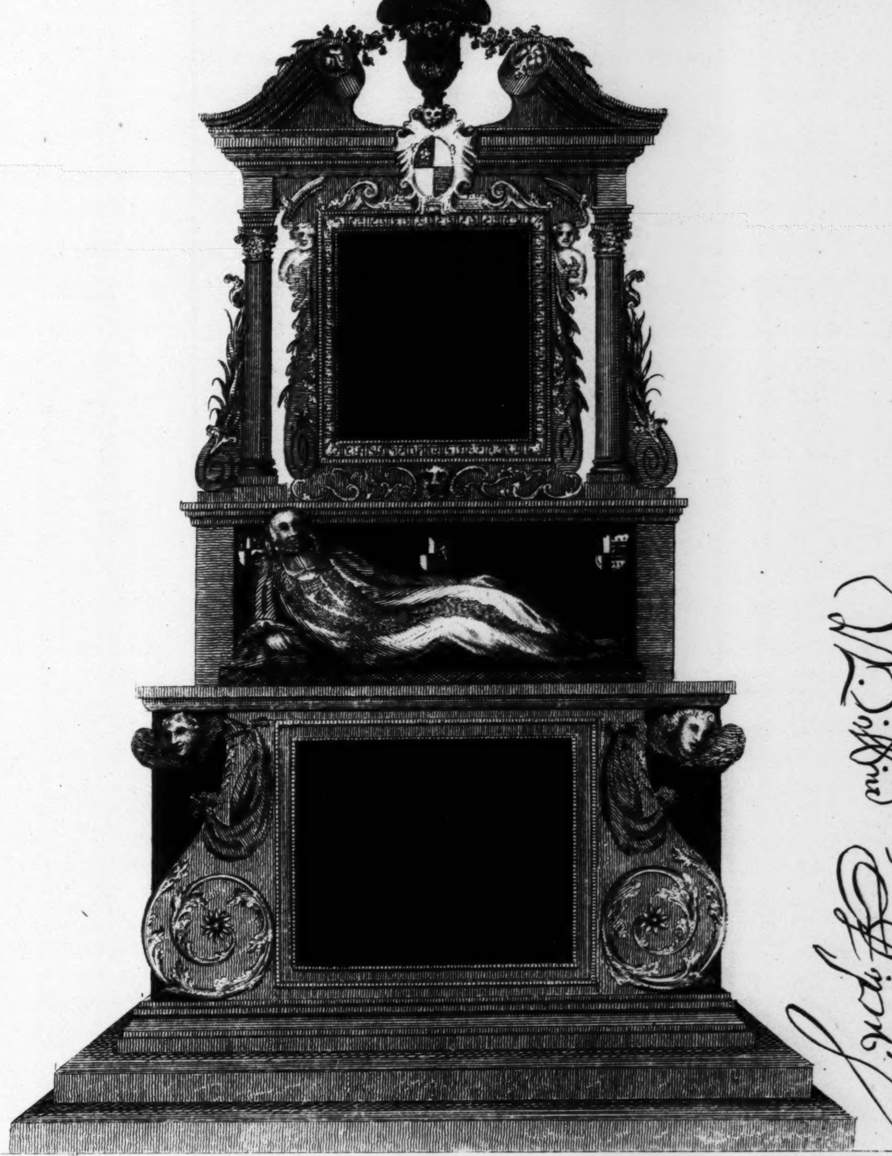


Fig. 5.

Malcolm 1793

To CHARLES JAMES PACKE Esq. this Plate is respectfully inscribed by his much obliged & faithful Servant J. Nichols.

RECTORS.

Godefridus filius Willielmi, 1229.
Richard de Neville, clerk, 3 non. April. 1235.
John de Campan, 1237.
Robert de Camera, 1241.

PATRONS.

The maſter of the order of Sempringham, and the convent of Bolington.

MINISTERS, or CURATES.

Hugo Whatmowe 1560; died 1571.
Robert Blunt, 1571.
Thomas Jeſſon, in October 1577.
William Warde, Sept. 17, 1581; died 1637.
Richard Palmer, 1650.
Moſes Foxcrofte, 1661.
Charles Lewis[1], M. A. 1670; reſigned 1710.
Thomas Pope[2], 1710.
Ralph Heathcote, M. A. 1746; died 1765.
Richard Benſkin, died 1767.
Joſeph Dawſon, 1767; reſigned 1793.
Thomas Whiteman[3], 1793.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

Mr. Wyrley mentions "an old monument in a window, wrought in mayl, ſtanding croſs-legged, on which was written, "Orate pro anima Hugonis Preſtwold[4]."

In the upper corner of the North wall of the chancel is a raiſed alabaſter tomb, the ſides painted; monks in cowls with roſary and crutch ſitting, and angels ſtanding, alternately; the latter hold three ſhields, baron and femme; and at the head ſtand a monk and two angels with ſhields. See Plate LI.

On the ſlab is cut-in the figure of a man with a woman at his right hand. He is in a gown and coif; ſhe in a cloſe gown, long ſtrait ſleeves, furred cuffs, divided veil head-dreſs, reticulated hair.

On a label, over the heads of the two figures, is the following inſcription:

"J'hu mercy, and thy grace of m'cy into us m 'm's lyfe."

Between them: Quarterly, 1. Nele; 2. Storey; 3. a chevron between three annulets Azure; 4. Argent, three pales Sable, and on a canton a croſs.

Over the figures three arches with purfled finials, on the laſt of which four figures in hair and gown hold on ſhields; the firſt De'; the ſecond miſe; the third r'at; the laſt mi.

The inſcription round the ledge of the tomb is,

"Hic iacent Rycard' Neel, un' iuſtitiarior' dñi regis de co'i banco, et Iſabella uxor ei';
que Iſabella
obiit viceſimo-tertio die Maii, an° Dñi M.CCCC.-ſeptuageſimo-ſexto. Quorum animabus pro-pitietur Deus Omnipotens. Amen."

Mr. Burton erroneouſly gives the inſcription thus:

"Hic jacet Richardus Nele, miles, et dominus de Preſtwould, et unus juſticiariorum domini regis de communi banco, et Iſabella uxor ejus; qui quidem Ricardus obiit 1485."

And ſays, that on the tomb were painted the coat of Nele ſingle (which were alſo in an upper North window); and alſo Nele, impaling, Azure, a bend between ſix cups covered Or, Butler of Warrington in Lancaſhire[5]; by whom he had two ſons[6].

On the South wall of the chancel, in the year 1631, was erected a very fair monument of alabaſter and touch, coloured and gilt, erected for ſir William Skipwith, of Cotes, knight, and lady Jane his ſecond wife, at the coſt and charges of the ſaid lady Jane; where, under an arch, lie both their proportions, neatly cut and graven. Sir William has a piked beard and hair, plated armour, trunk hoſe, ſword by his ſide; a mattraſs under him. At his feet his creſt. His lady has a ruff, and hood falling back; double falling ruffles, and mantle; her head on a cuſhion; Plate LII. fig. 1.

On the top of the arch ſtandeth an old atchievement, in an oval frame, with theſe coats; fig. 2.

1. Argent, three bars Gules, a greyhound in chief, courant Sable. Skipwith.

2. Quarterly, Sable and Argent, a bend Or. Langton.

3. Argent, three bars Azure, charged with as many croſs croſſlets Or. Memthorpe.

4. Azure, three creſcents Argent. Thorpe.

5. Argent, on a croſs engrailed Sable, five maſcles Or. Arches.

6. Argent, a croſs engrailed Gules. De la Lind.

7. Azure, a lion rampant Ermine. } Ormeſby.

8. Sable, three cheſſrooks Argent, a chief Or. } Ormeſby.

9. Quarterly, Ermine and Vaire, Or and Azure. Gibthorpe.

10. Or, a chevron Gules between three fleurs de lis Vert. Hiltoft.

11. Or, fretté Azure, in a canton Gules, a croſs moline Argent. Mumby, or Willoughby.

12. Sable, a falcon ſitting upon a trunk of a tree, Or. Le Muer.

13. Sable, a feſs between three mullets Or. Dimok.

14. Sable, two lions paſſant in pale Ermine, coronné Or. Heronville.

15. Vaire, Argent and Azure, a feſs Gules, fretté Or. Marmion.

16. Sable, a ſword in pale, point towards the chief Argent, hilted Or. Kilpeck.

17. Ermine, four fuſils in feſs Gules. Hebden.

18. Or, a lion rampant queué fourché Sable. Welles.

19. Gules, a feſs dauncetté between ſix croſs croſſlets croſſed Or. Engaine.

20. Barry of ſix, Ermine and Gules; over all three creſcents Sable. Waterton.

The creſt; a turnpike Gules, the foot Or.

In the ſpandrils of the arch are two leſs eſcutcheons;
Skipwith; impaling, Azure, fretty Argent, Cave.
Skipwith; impaling, Party per pale, Argent and Gules, a lion rampant Sable, Roberts; fig. 3, 4.

Under the arch, on a table of touch, this epitaph:

"To frame a man who in thoſe guiftes excelles,
Which makes the cuntry happy where hee dwelles,
We firſt conceive what names his line adorne:
It kindles Virtue to be nobly borne.
This picture of true Gentry muſt bee grac'd
With glittering jewells round about him plac'd;
A comely body, and a beauteous mind;
A heart to love, a hand to give inclin'd;
A houſe as free and open as the ayre;
A tonge which joyes in language ſweete and faire;
Yet can, when need requires, with courage bold
To publike eares his neighbour's griefs unfold:
All theſe we never more ſhall find in one;
And yit all theſe are clos'd within this ſtone."

Below, on two ſmaller tablets of touch, thus written:

1. "HERE LYETH THE BODY OF SIR WILLIAM
SKIPWITH, OF COOTES, KNIGHT, AND DAME
JANE SKIPWITH, HIS LAST WIFE, BEING THE DAUGHTER AND HEIRE OF JOHN ROBERTES, OF WOLLASTONE, IN THE COUNTY OF NORTHAMPTON, ESQ.
HE DEPARTED THIS LIFE ON THE 3D DAY OF MAY,
IN THE YEARE OF OUR LORD 1610;
AND SHEE LIVED TWENTY YEARES AFTER HIM;
AT WHOSE COST AND CHARDGES
THIS MONUMENT WAS ERECTED,
ANNO 1631.

2. HIS FIRST WIFE WAS MARGARET CAVE,
DAUGHTER OF ROGER CAVE, OF STANFORD, IN LEASTERSHIERE, ESQ.; BY WHOM HE HAD FOURE SONS AND FOURE DAUGHTERS;
THE ELDEST WHEREOF IS Sr HENRY SKIPWITH, KNIGHT AND BARRONETT."

---

[1] He died 1726. See his epitaph at Quorndon, p. 107.

[2] Rector of Walton.

[3] Curate of Wimeſwould.

[4] Wyrley, MS.—This monument is now gone.

[5] Plate LI. fig. 11.

[6] In the floor of a chapel on the South ſide of Newton St. Lo chancel, co. Somerſet, is a braſs figure of a woman with her hands uplifted, and the following fragments of an inſcription round the ſtone:

"Hic jacet Elizabeth Neell . . . .
Keythorpe et Preſtolde in . . . .
Pax vivis et requies defunctis. Amen."

She was probably related to the judge. See Collinſon's Somerſetſhire, vol. III. p. 344.

Againſt the North wall of the chancel is a monument with a cumbent figure of a venerable perſonage, with long hair, in the robes of a lord-mayor of London; with the collar of SS. portcullis, and roſe; Plate LII. fig. 5.

At the Weſt end, the mace, ſword, cap of maintenance, and other emblems of civic honours, with the arms of London.

At the Eaſt end, the arms of Packe; Quarterly, Sable and Or; in dexter quarter a cinquefoil Argent; fig. 6. Creſt, a lion's head Or, collared Sable. Motto, "LIBERTAS SUB REGE PIO."

Behind him are his arms; impaling thoſe of his three wives:

1. Sable, a chevron between three eſcalops Argent, Newman; fig. 7.
2. Sable, a lion rampant between ſemé of cinquefoils Argent; Clifton, fig. 8.
3. Ermine, on a feſs Sable, cotiſed Gules, four lozenges Argent; Richards, fig. 9.

On a tablet of black marble:

"Chriſtopherus Packe, de Cotes, armiger,
Chriſtopheri Packe, armigeri, hìc infra ſepulti, filius natu maximus, necnon hujus manerii dominus;
uxorem duxit Janam, filiam unicam ſuperſtitem Gervaſii Clifton, de Clifton, in agro Nottinghamienſi, militis & baronetti, è ſextâ uxore;
& tumulum hunc proprio ſumptu,
officii erga optimum parentem monumentum, mortiſque ſuæ indiès adrepentis monitorem,
diù valetudinarius poſuit,
ſuum juxta patrios cineres brevì expectans ſepulchrum.
Filios hodiè numerat duos, Clifton nempè & Carolum;
treſque filias, Annam, Franceſcam, & Arabellam."

On a ſimilar tablet below his figure:

"Sub hoc marmore deponuntur reliquiæ
Chriſtopheri Packe, de Cotes, armigeri;
qui, agro Northamptonienſi oriundus, difficillimis temporibus civitatis Londin. magiſtratum geſſit, anno, ſcilt, MDCXLIX vicecomitis, MDCLIV prætoris.
E tribus quas duxit uxoribus ab una tantùm ſuſcepit prolem;
filia nempè natu maxima
Simonis Edmonds, año MDCXLVII vicecomitis Londini, annoq̃ MDCLI electi prætoris.
Ex hâc binos genuit filios, Chriſtophorũ & Simonem;
treſque filias,
Annã nempè natu maximã,
Thomæ Wilſon mercatori Londinenſi,
Mariam ſecundam
Georgio Pochin, de Barkby, armigero, & Suſannam tertiam Thomæ Bellot, de Moreton, in comitatu Palatino Ceſtriæ, baronetto, matrimonio junctas.
Poſtquàm octoginta-quatuor plùs minùs impleverat annos, ingraveſcente indiès ſenectâ, moriendi cupidus, feliciorisq̃ vitæ ſpe plenus,
ex hâc migravit,
anno Domini incarnati MDCLXXXII, menſiſq̃ Maii die XXVII.
Uxor prima fuit filia
Newman.
Uxor tertia filia
Richards."

In the middle of the chancel is an altar-tomb, with the figures of two ladies[1]; that on the right in the pointed head-dreſs, double necklace of ſquare links with pendant, boddice open, cordon hanging acroſs to the right ſide, and in front ten loops; two cuſhions with angels under head; collared dog at feet, which appear; mantle, cloſe ſleeves to wriſts with cuffs; rings on firſt and third left fingers; the other broken. The left hand figure has the ſame dreſs, but a necklace of a different pattern; the boddice open, and eleven frogs from the necklace downwards to her belt by a chain of ſquare links, a roſe at head, and boſs at bottom, as the other; at her feet a dog running; two rings on the ſecond and fourth right, and firſt left, finger. Ten monks ſit round on flat ſtarred quatrefoils, having over each a blank ſhield, and one in armed chair; the two at the feet more in profile. See Plate LII. fig. 10. This monument had once a canopy over it; of which the North-weſt pillar remained in 1790, but has ſince been removed.

In the nave, from which is a deſcent of two ſteps into the old chancel, is an alabaſter ſlab with the figures of a man and woman, with her dog, cut-in and almoſt defaced, and this inſcription:

"Hic iacent Will'ſ Ruddyns de Preſtwold, arm', et Margareta uxor eius; qui obierunt primo die menſ' Februarii, año d'ni mccccxxxvii; quorum a'iab'ſ propicietur deus. Amen."

On flat ſtones in the chancel:

1. Packe; impaling Clifton; fig. 8.

"Memoriæ ſacrum.
Jana uxor Chriſtophori Packe, de Cotes, armigeri, necnon filia Gervaſii Clifton, de Clifton, in agro Nottinghamienſi, militis & baronetti, hìc inhumatur.
Quàm pia fuit, quàm ſuorũ amantiſſima, quàm erga pauperes miſericors, erga omnes munifica;
quàm genere inſignis ſine faſtu,
venuſta paritèr ac verecunda;
quàm faceta ac perurbana,
nulli non cui nota fuit innotuit,
anguſto hoc lapide exprimi nequit!
Talem amiſsã poſt viceſimũ annũ in connubio elapſum, infelix deflet maritus; & hoc poſuit.
Nata xi° die Januarii, 1646;
denata xiii° die Januarii, 1685-6."

2. Packe; impaling Clifton, as before.

"Chriſtopherus Packe, de Preſtwold, armiger, hìc inhumatur; eximiâ pietate inſignis,
literis necnon paritèr eruditus; ſuorum amantiſſimus,
& omnibus perurbanè ſe ſemper geſſit.
Poſtquàm quinquaginta & ſex confecerat annos,
è vitâ exceſſit, anno Domini incarnati 1699,
menſiſque Septembris die octavo."

3. Arms of Packe; as before.

"Sub hoc marmore tumulantur reliquiæ
Simonis Packe, armigeri, militumque præfectoris.
Filius natu minimus fuit Chriſtopheri
Packe, de Cotes, in agro Leiceſtrienſi, armigeri, nuper civitatis Londonii prætoris.
Tam fuit expertus quàm animoſus in armis,
& in aperta pericula libertatem regis & patriæ ad propugnandam ſe ſæpè projecerat;
miro præditùs ingenio, liberalis, affabilis, optimus
amicus, & ſuâ ſummâ humanitate omnes ad ſe allicit.
Quadrageſimo-octavo anno ætatis ſuæ mortem obiit, ſecundo die Aprilis, annoq̃ Domini 1701."[2]

4. Packe; impaling, Sable, a feſs Argent engrailed between three hands, two and one, lying feſsways Or, Bates; fig. 11.

"Here lies interred the body of Clifton Pack, eſq.
late of Preſtwold, in the county of Leiceſter;
who married Penelope, one of the coheireſſes of Edward Bates, eſq. of Maids Morton, in the county of Bucks.
She left iſſue one ſon Charles, and two daughters;
Penelope, married to the hon. Mr. Verney, eldeſt ſon of lord Willoughby de Broke;
Anne, to Francis Stratford, eſq.
of Merevale, in the county of Warwick.
Obiit Jun. 9, 1707, ætat. 33."

5. Packe; impaling, Gules, on a chevron between three leopards' faces Argent, three trefoils Vert; Harvey; fig. 12.

"In a vault under this ſtone lie interred
the remains of Charles Pack, eſq.
late of Preſtwold, in the county of Leiceſter;
who married Rebecca, the third daughter of John Harvey, eſq.
of Old Buckenham, in the county of Norfolk;
by whom he left iſſue one ſon Charles-James,
and one daughter Elizabeth-Rebecca;
ſhe died unmarried.
Obiit Aug. 1, 1735, ætat. 34."

6. Packe; impaling, Azure, two bars Ermine, and in chief three ſuns Or, Jenkinſon; fig. 13.

"In a vault under this ſtone lie interred
the bodies of Charles Packe, gent.

---

[1] There is a tradition in the pariſh, that theſe ladies were the builders of Swarkſton bridge.

[2] This monument was the workmanſhip of Mr. Staunton. See Le Neve, Monumenta Anglicana, vol. I, p. 26.

(younger brother of Clifton Packe, late of this place, eſq.);
and Penelope his wife, daughter of Paul Jenkinſon, of Hodſeck, in the county of Nottingham, gent.
He departed this life March 31, 1751, aged 74.
She died Nov. 15, 1747."

In the nave, on a blue ſlab:

"Sub hoc ſaxo requieſcit Elizabeth Barman, filia Stephani Barman, generoſi,
ex Suſannâ ejus uxore propagata.
Abiit ex hâc vitâ 5to Auguſti 1705."

"Anne, wife of Daniel Kirke, died April 13, 1727, aged 21.
If love and care could have preſerv'd my life,
I ſhould have liv'd, and been a happy wife.

Daniel Kirke died May 30, 1746, aged 43.
Joſhua Kirke died Nov. 25, 1739, aged 67.
Suſannah his wife died Sept. 1, 1746, aged 61"

Francis Knight, gent. died Feb. 9, 1739, aged 68.

Anne, wife of William Henton, of Burton, died Jan. 6, 1739, aged 53.

Alice, wife of Thomas Stanley of Hoton, daughter of William and Anne Henton of Burton, died Jan. 31, 1735, aged 31; Thomas her ſon, Feb. 11, 1735.

William Henton died April 14, 1748, aged 73.

Thomas Henton, his ſon, died 1716.

Sarah, his daughter, died 1722, aged 1.

Elizabeth, another daughter, died 1724-5.

Sarah, ſecond wife of John Cooper of Preſtwould, and daughter of the late Mr. William Henton of Burton, died Jan. 6, 1755, aged 28.

Mr. Roger Cox died Oct. 8, 1720, aged 76.

Another Roger Cox died May 14, 1751, aged 84.

William Cannor, late innholder, died Oct. 23. 1737, aged 51.

On flat ſtones on the South ſide:

1. "Hannah, only child of Samuel Shalcroſſe, gent. and Eliz. his wife, died Aug. 19, 1683, aged 13.

2. Samuel Shalcroſſe, of Burton, eſq. died April 9, 1713, in his 70th year."

3. "Anne Shalcroſſe, ſecond wife of Samuel Shalcroſſe, died May 28, 1713, aged about 57 years."

4. "Samuel Shalcroſſe, of Burton, eſq. died April 9, 1729, in the 90th year of his age."

5. Ermine, on a bend . . . . . . three boars' heads eraſed . . . . . . Maſon; impaling, a chevron between three ſpear-heads . . . . .; Plate LI. fig. 12.

"Nicholas Maſon, of Burton, gent. died April 16, 1733."

6. "Here lieth interred
Mrs. Anne Maſon, relict of the late Nicholas Maſon, of Burton ſupra Wolds, gent.; by whom ſhe had one ſon and four daughters. She departed this life January 8, 1737, in her 50th year."

On ſmall braſs plates on ſlabs on the North ſide:

1. "Here lieth buried the body of Elizabeth Ragge[1], who died the 25th of January, a° Dñi 1619."

2. "HERE LIETH THE BODY OF WILLIAM MILNES, LATE HUSBAND UNTO DORITHIE MILNES, DAUGHTER UNTO WILLIAM RAGG; DECEASED
MAY THE 3D, ANNO DOM. VERBI INCARNATI 1653."

On a pillar on the North ſide of the chancel entrance:

"William Cheſter, late of Knipton, in the county of Leiceſter, deceaſed May 17, 1703, gave the yearly revenue of £2. to the poor of Burton, to be paid on the 11th of December annually;
two Bibles of 7*s.* price given to 2 poor children out of the £2. out of certain lands in Barkſton."

In the church-yard.

"To the memory of Elizabeth the wife of William Davey, of Friſby, in this county.
She died of the ſmall-pox, Nov. 10, 1783, aged 81."

"Gervaſe Cragg, of Burton, died Oct. 3, 1779, aged 74."

"William Bonſar, of died June 25, 1721, aged 76."

"Thomas Bonſar, Sept. 15, 1722, aged 67."

Extracts from the modern Regiſters.

WEDDINGS.

William Stephens[2], citizen of London, gentleman, bachelor, and Roe Bonfoy, of Burton, ſingle-woman, married by licence, Auguſt the 4th, 1697.

George Thirlby, of Beaumont Leys, gent. near Leiceſter, and Elizabeth Marſhall, of Burton, ſpinſter, married by licence, March 7, 1709.

BAPTISMS.

Penelope, daughter of Clifton Packe, of Preſtwould, eſq. and Penelope his wife, Sept. 14, 1699.

Charles, ſon of ditto, Sept. 24, 1701.

Anne, dau. of ditto, baptized Sept. 26 at home, by reaſon of weakneſs; and the ſaid baptiſm lawfully confirmed in the pariſh-church Oct. 8, 1702.

Elizabeth, daughter of Samuel Marſhall, of Burton, the younger, and Elizabeth his wife, July 11, 1702.

Charles-James, ſon of Charles Packe, eſq. of Preſtwould, and Rebecca his wife, baptized at home, by private baptiſm, Dec. 11; and the ſame baptiſm lawfully confirmed in the pariſh-church May 3, 1727.

Charlotte, daughter of Thomas Pochin, of Burton, bachelor of phyſic, and dame Prudence Jenkinſon his wife, July 20, 1744.

Thomas, ſon of ditto, July 28, 1745.

Rebecca, daughter of Charles-James Packe, eſq. and Charlotte his wife, Jan. 22, 1752.

Charlotte, daughter of ditto, June 20, 1755.

Charles-James, ſon of ditto, Jan. 30, 1758.

Clifton and Chriſtophorus, ſons of ditto, Jan. 19, 1759; died the day after their birth.

Frances, daughter of Charles-James Packe, eſq. and Catharine his wife, Aug. 8, 1775.

Anne, daughter of ditto, Feb. 19, 1778.

Catharine-Maria, daughter of ditto, July 13, 1776.

Clifton, ſon of ditto, Sept. 18, 1779.

BURIALS.

Mrs. Anne Skipwith, of Burton, Jan. 17, 1696.

Chriſt. Packe, of Preſtwould, eſq. Sept. 17, 1699.

Thomas Allen, of Burton, gent. May 23, 1700.

Lieutenant colonel Simon Packe, of London, eſq. buried at Preſtwould April 11, 1701.

Mrs. Elizabeth Burman, of Burton, ſpinſter, Aug. 8, 1705.

Clifton Packe, of Preſtwould, eſq. high-ſheriff of the county of Leiceſter, died in his ſhrievalty, on Monday June the 9th, and buried the 12th, 1707.

Mrs. Suſanna Kirke, of London, widow, June 11, 1710; and Mrs. Rebecca Kirke, of Nailſton, in this county, ſpinſter, July 24, 1710.

Anne, the wife of Samuel Shallcroſſe, of Burton, eſq. May 29, 1713.

The hon. Penelope Verney, the eldeſt daughter of Clifton Packe, eſq. and wife to the hon. Richard Verney, eſq. ſon to the lord Willoughby de Broke, of Compton Verney, in Warwickſhire, buried at Preſtwould, Sept. 11, 1718.

Daniel March, of Cotes-park houſe, Nov. 9, 1719.

Roger Cox, of Preſtwould, gent. Oct. 11, 1720.

Samuel Shallcroſs, of Burton, eſq. April 12, 1729.

Mary, wife of William Hall, of Cotes, gentleman, Dec. 23, 1729.

Nicholas Maſon, of Burton, gent. April 19, 1733.

Charles Packe, eſq. of Preſtwould, Aug. 5, 1735.

Mrs. Anne Maſon, of Burton, widow, Jan. 11, 1737.

Mrs. Davies, of Loughborough, widow, June 10, 1740.

Penelope, wife of Charles Packe, of Preſtwould, gent. Nov. 18, 1747.

Charlotte, daughter of Thomas Pochin, of Burton, bachelor of phyſic, and dame Prudence Jenkinſon his wife, March 6, 1748.

Charles Packe, gent. April 5, 1751.

Chriſtophorus and Clifton, ſons of Charles-James Packe, eſq. and Charlotte his wife, Jan. 20, 1759.

Charlotte, the wife of Charles-James Packe, eſq. April 30, 1772.

Dame Prudence Jenkinſon, the wife of Thomas Pochin, of Loughborough, bachelor of phyſic, April 1, 1777.

---

[1] Of this family very frequent mention is made in the early Regiſter.

[2] This William Stephens and Roe his wife were the father and mother of Mr. Robert Stephens of Loughborough. He afterwards married Mrs. Anne Farnham (ſee their epitaphs under Quorn). He was the grandfather of the preſent Rev. Dr. Stephen.

Pedigree of NELE, of PRESTWOULD. (From the Chetwynd MS.)

Richard Nele, 20 Hen. VI.

Sir Richard Nele, knt. one of the juſtices of the Common Pleas, lord of Preſtwould, died 1 Hen. VII. = Iſabel, dau. of —— Butler, of Warrington, co. Lancaſter.

1. Chriſtopher Nele, died 18 Hen. VIII. = Mary, dau. of John Digby, of Welby, co. Leic.

2. Richard Nele. = ... dau. of William Heſilrige, of Noſeley.

Richard Nele, died 5 and 6 Philip and Mary. = Elizabeth, dau. of Richard Slory, of Braunſton.

Robert Nele. = Alice, dau. and coheir of John Sutton, of Oſbaſton. (See their deſcendants under Great Glen, vol. II. p. 575.)

Faith, dau. of ſir William Kempe, of Olantigh in Kent, firſt wife. = Francis Nele, of Preſtwould. = Jane, dau. of Francis Hall, of Grantham, co. Linc. comptroller of Calais, 2d wife; afterwards married, ſecondly, to Henry Skipwith, of Keythorp, eſq.

Jane, dau. and coheir. = Henry Hall, of Gretford, co. Linc.

Elizabeth. = Sir Tho. Mackworth, of Normanton, bart.

Everard Digby, of Keythorpe, co. Leic. firſt huſb. = Mary, dau. and coheir, born 1559; living 1632. = Sampſon Erdeſwick, of Sandon, co. Staff. ſecond huſband. = Thomas Digby, third huſband.

Chriſtian.
Mary.
Elizabeth.

Sir Everard Digby, of Tilton, knt. attainted. = Maria, dau. and ſole heir of Will. Mulſho, eſq. of Gothurſt.

Thomas.
John.
George.
Seven other children.

Richard.
Matthew.

Jane.

Pedigree of PACKE, of COTES and PRESTWOULD.

(From the Viſitation ſigned at Leiceſter, 23 March, 1681-2, by Chriſtopher Packe, eſq. the father, and Chriſtopher the ſon; and continued from Regiſters and Monumental Inſcriptions.)

Chriſtopher Packe, of Finchley, co. Midd. a merchant in London. = Mary, dau. of . . . . . Jones, of . . . . . in Wales.

. . . Newman, firſt wife. = Chriſtopher Packe, of Cotes, eſq. ſheriff of London 1649; lord-mayor 1654-5; knighted 1655; died May 27, 1682, aged about 89. = Anne, dau. of Simon Edmonds[1], of Howell, co. Lincoln, eſq. lord-mayor of London in 1651; ſecond wife; died 1657. = Elizabeth, dau. of . . . . Richards, of Berkſhire, widow of Alderman Herring, of London; third wife.

Jane, youngeſt and only ſurviving dau. of ſir Gervaſe Clifton, of Clifton, co. Nott. knt and bart. by Jane his ſixth wife, dau. of Gervaſe Eyre, of Rempſton, co. Notts, eſq. died June 13, 1685-6, æt. 40. = 1. Chriſtopher Packe, eſq. of Preſtwould, in the commiſſion of the peace for the county of Leiceſter; died Sept. 8, 1699, æt. 56.

2. Simon Packe, late a captain in Flanders under ſir Hen. Goodrick, knt. and bart. born Dec. 31, 1654; died 1701.

1. Anne, died Dec. 22, 1722, æt. 80. = Thomas Wilſon[2], eſq. of Keythorpe, a merchant of London, died 1699, æt. 63.
2. Mary, wife of George Pochin, eſq. of Barkby.
3. Suſanna, wife of ſir Thomas Bellot, of Moreton, co. Cheſter, bart.

1. Clifton Packe, eſq. died June 9, 1707, æt. 33. = Penelope, dau. and heireſs of Edward Bate, of Maids Morton, co. Bucks.

2. Charles Packe, gent. died Mar. 31, 1751, æt. 74. = Penelope, dau. of Paul Jenkinſon, of Hodſeck, co. Wilts, gent. died Nov. 15, 1747.

1. Anne.
2. Frances, married to Robert Clifton[3].
3. Arabella.

1. Charles Packe, eſq. born 1701, died Auguſt 1, 1735, æt. 34. = Rebecca, third dau. of John Harvey, eſq. of Old Buckenham, co. Norfolk.

1. Penelope, born 1701; married to the hon. Mr. Verney, ſon of lord Willoughby de Broke, died 1718.
2. Anne, born 1702; married to Francis Stratford, eſq. of Merevale hall, co. Warwick.

Charlotte Pochin, dau. of Thomas Pochin, eſq. of Barkby, firſt wife; died April . . 1772. = Charles-James Packe, eſq. born 1726. = Catharine, dau. of Rob. Clifton[4], of London, gent. ſecond wife.

Elizabeth-Rebecca, died unmarried.

1. Rebecca, born at Preſtwould Jan. 31, 1752.
2. Charlotte, born at Preſtwould June 19, 1755; married, Oct. 24, 1775, to William Hanbury, eſq. of Kelmarſh, co. Northampton; and has children.

3. Charles-James Packe, eſq. born at Preſtwould Jan. 29, 1758; ſome time lieut.-colonel in the Leiceſterſhire militia, and now of Hanthorpe Houſe, near Bourn in Lincolnſhire. = Penelope, eldeſt dau. of Richard Geaſt[5], eſq. of Blithe-hall, co. Warwick, by Penelope-Bate Stratford, eldeſt dau. of the above-mentioned Francis Stratford[6], eſq. of Merevale.

1. Frances, b. 1775; marr. May 16, 1799, Rob. Andrew, jun. eſq. of Harleſton Park, North'ton.
2. Catharine-Maria, born 1776.
3. Anne, born 1778.
4. Clifton, b. 1779; d. 1780.
5. Robert-Chriſtopher, b. 1783.
6. Henry, b. at Bath in 1786; regiſtered in Walcot pariſh.

1. Charles-William Packe, born at Carlby, co. Lincoln, Sept. 23, 1792.

2. George-Huſſey Packe, born May 1, 1796.

3. Edmond Packe, born April 30, 1799.

[1] Younger brother to ſir Thomas Edmonds, comptroller of the houſhold to king James, and one of the privy council.

[2] They had nine ſons and one daughter: ſee hereafter, under Keythorpe, in the pariſh of Tugby.

[3] Only brother of ſir Gervaſe Clifton, bart. of Clifton, Notts, and grandfather to the preſent Mrs. Packe.

[4] Deſcended from a younger branch of the family of Clifton, of Clifton in Nottinghamſhire.

[5] Mr. Geaſt, in March 1799, by royal licence, aſſumed the name of Dugdale only; and his only ſurviving ſon Dugdale (who, June 27, 1799, was married to the Hon. Charlotte Curzon, youngeſt daughter of Lord Curzon) by the ſame licence has taken that of Stratford Dugdale. The names of Mr. Dugdale's daughters are; 1. Penelope, married to Mr. Packe; 2. Louiſa-Anne, married to William Dilke, of Maxtoke Caſtle (who died in October 1797); 3. Francis, died an infant; 4. Emma, ſingle.

[6] Mr. Stratford had four daughters: 1. Penelope-Bate, married, as above ſtated, to Richard Geaſt, eſq. (now Dugdale); 2. Sarah, relict of —— Chetwynd, eſq. of Grendon in Warwickſhire; 3. Anna-Franceſca, married to Joſeph Cradock, eſq. of Gumley (ſee vol. II. p. 589.) 4. Maria, died unmarried in 1797, and was buried at Mortimer in Berkſhire, where ſhe reſided.

The family of Stratford, it is ſaid, can be traced from the time of Alfred the Great; but Mr. Archdall commences their hiſtory with Robert Stratford, a younger branch of the houſe of Merevale, and the firſt of the name that ſettled in Ireland; whither he emigrated before 1660, and repreſented the county of Wicklow in parliament. Edward, his eldeſt ſon, was very inſtrumental in eſtabliſhing the Houſe of Orange and the ſucceſſion of the houſe of Hanover; furniſhed king William's army with 2000 ſheep and 200 oxen; entertained his majeſty at Belan, and maintained ſuch of that king's forces as were quartered near him with bread and beer; for which king James's adherents threatened their lives, plundered their Munſter eſtates of their ſtock, and did other conſiderable damages. The then commiſſioners, by order of king William, ſent letters of acknowledgement for theſe aids, and a peerage was offered to Mr. Stratford, which he declined. But his third ſon, John Stratford, eſq. was created baron Baltinglaſs May 10, 1763; viſcount Aldborough, June 26, 1776; and advanced to an earldom Jan. 29, 1777. On his lordſhip's death, July 24, 1777, his ſon Edward Stratford ſucceeded to the title of earl of Aldborough, of the Palatinate of Upper Ormond, viſcount Amiens and Aldborough, and baron of Baltinglaſs, in the county of Wicklow. His lordſhip married, 1. Barbara, ſole heireſs of the late honourable Nicholas Herbert, of Great Glenham, co. Suffolk, uncle to the earl of Pembroke and the earl of Carnarvon, by Anne North, otherwiſe Herbert, his wife, coheireſs of Dudley North, of Little Glenham, eſq. which lady died April 14, 1785, leaving no iſſue; 2dly, May 24, 1788, Miſs Henniker, only daughter of ſir John Henniker, of Stratford Hall, in Eſſex, niece to the ducheſs of Chandos. Archdall's Iriſh Peerage, vol. III. p. 336; and Kearſley, p. 406.

BURTON ON THE WOULDS.

In the reign of king Edward the Confeſſor, Burton, containing nine ploughlands, and employing three ploughs, was valued at four ſhillings; and at the general ſurvey was worth twenty ſhillings. It was then held by William under Goisfrid de Wirce, with ſoc and ſac. Nine ſocmen employed four ploughs; and there were forty acres of meadow. Lewin had held this land freely[1].

Hugo Lupus earl of Cheſter was owner of Burton at the time of the Conqueror's ſurvey; and under him one hide, the ſoc of which belonged to Loughborough, was held by Lewin. One plough was in the demeſne, and one villan, with two bordars; and there were twenty acres of meadow. In the ſame manor two ploughlands were held of the earl by Godric; who had one plough in the demeſne; and had twenty acres of meadow. The ſoc of this part of the manor was claimed by Hugo de Grenteſmainell[2]; who had alſo three houſes in the town of Leiceſter belonging to Burton[3]. Hugo held alſo of the earl two ploughlands all but one oxgang, in Burton, which lay waſte. The value of all theſe is reckoned with that of Loughborough[4].

Durand Malet held of the King five ploughlands in Burton; which in the Confeſſor's reign (when there were four ploughs) was valued at three ſhillings, and at the ſurvey was worth ten ſhillings. One plough was then in the demeſne; and two ſocmen, with two villans and one bordar, had one plough. There were forty acres of meadow. To this manor belonged one ploughland and a half, all but one oxgang, in Preſtewold, worth two ſhillings; where half a plough had been employed in the Confeſſor's reign, and at the ſurvey there was one ſocman[5].

In 1227, king Henry III. granted to Hugh le Diſpenſer and his heirs, that they and their men of Burton ſhould be quit of all county and hundred ſuits, ſheriff's aids, and views of frankpledge[6]; and in 1229, this Hugh was lord of Burton, and obtained the king's grant of free-warren for his lands there[7].

The greateſt part of this town was antiently given to the abbot and convent of Gerendon[8].

Thomas Diſpenſer granted them 10 bovates of land; Gilbert de Colevile 4 carucates and a half; Hugh le Deſpenſer 2 meſſuages and 3 yard-lands; and Henry Putrell one carucate; all within the ſaid town[9].

The abbot and convent of Croxton alſo had here a ſmall annual rent, the gift of Richard Diſpenſer.

"Habemus in Burton, de dono Ricardi Diſpenſatoris, de Burton, annuum redditum xLđ. recipend' de Amabiliâ filiâ Willielmi, filii Yvonis de Preſtewold, pro unâ bovatâ terre in Burton, ſine toſto. Hanc bovatam terre predicta Amabilia & heredes ſui tenent de nobis & ſucceſſoribus noſtris per cartam liberè & quietè; reddendo indè nobis & ſucceſſoribus noſtris xLđ. ad II terminos; ſcil', ad Paſcha xxđ. & ad Mich' xxđ. & capitalibus dominis dimidiam libram cumini ad Natale Domini, pro omni ſervicio & exactione ad nobis pertinentibus, ſalvo forinſeco ſervicio de quodam prato. Item habemus, de dono ejuſdem Ricardi Diſpenſatoris, quoddam pratum quod dicitur Holm, quod jacet inter diviſas de Brocton & Hickling; & quatuor ſeliones, cum prato adjacente, juxta diviſas de Brocton, in liberam, puram, & perpetuam eleemoſinam. Mem', redditus IIIs̄. IIIIđ."[10]

In 1308, John Bardolf, at his death, held two acres of land in Burton of William Gilbert, by the ſervice of one penny a year; and John Bardolf, his ſon and heir, was then aged 7[11].

The Segrave Chartulary notices,

1. A grant of William le Colville, to Stephen de Segrave and his heirs, of an annual rent of two marks, from a tenement held by the abbot of Gerendon under the ſaid William, at Burton ſuper le Wold; to be held by the ſaid Stephen and his heirs, by the payment of a pair of white gloves, or one penny, at Eaſter, in lieu of all ſervice.

2. A grant of Thomas Diſpenſer to the ſaid Stephen, together with Roeſia his daughter in free marriage, and to their heirs, of 2*s.* a year, which the ſaid abbot had uſed annually to pay him "ad Inventionem Sc̄e Crucis."

3. A grant of Richard Curzon to the ſaid Stephen, of a rent of 2*s.* which the abbot and convent of Gerendon had uſed to pay him for a tenement they held within his fee at Burton; to be held by the ſaid Stephen by the payment of three roſe-flowers, "inter octavas Apoſtolorum Petri & Pauli," in lieu of all ſervices[12].

In 1325, John de Segrave, deceaſed, and Chriſtian his wife, held Burton grange; and John de Segrave (ſon and heir of Stephen de Segrave, couſin of the aforeſaid John de Segrave ſenior) was his next heir[13].

In 1329, it was found that Robert Powtrell, of Preſtwold, at his death, held certain tenements in Burton of Reginald de Bergey, by knight's ſervice[14]; and alſo, that Alice, relict of Thomas le Brun, deceaſed, held certain lands and tenements in Burton ſuper Wolds, of the king (by the reaſon of the forfeiture of Henry de Beaumont), by the ſervices of a twelfth part of a knight's fee, and 2*d.* a year rent; as alſo certain tenements in the aforeſaid town of Burton, of William Cotes of Preſtwold, by the ſervice of 12*d.* a year[15].

July 20, 1336, king Edward III. granted divers lands at Burton, late parcel of the poſſeſſions of Hugh le Diſpenſer earl of Winton, to Henry lord Beaumont and Alice his wife[16].

In 1340, Henry de Beaumont earl of Boghan, at his death, held the hamlet of Burton, as a member of Loughborough[17].

In 1346, John de Nevill (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 10*s.* for a quarter of a knight's fee in Preſtwould, Wymondſwould, Burton, and Cotes; Robert Poutrell 3*s.* 4*d.* for a twelfth part of a knight's fee in Preſtwould and Burton; the abbot of Gerendon 10*s.* for a quarter of a knight's fee in Burton; all parcel of the honour of Leiceſter[18].

In 1361, John de Moubray, lord of the Iſle of Axeholme, died ſeiſed of one knight's fee in Oleby and Burton ſuper le Wold, which the abbot of Gerendon held[19].

In 1361, Henry Plantagenet duke of Lancaſter died ſeiſed of one knight's fee in Wymondeſwould, Burton, Preſtwould, and Cotes, which Thomas de Chaworth held; alſo of one knight's fee in Wymondſwould, Burton, Preſtwould, and Cotes, which John de Segrave held[20].

In 1387, Henry de Ferrars of Groby died ſeiſed of

---

[1] "Idem [Willielmus] tenet de G[oisfrido] Burtone, cum ſocâ & ſacâ. Ibi ſunt 5 carucatæ terræ. Ibi fuerunt 3 carucæ. Ibi 9 ſochmanni habēnt 4 carucas. Ibi 40 acræ prati. Leuuinus liberè tenuit." Domeſday, fol. 235. b. 2.

[2] "Leuuinus tenet de Comite [Hugone] 1 hidam in Burtone. Soca pertinet ad Lucteburne. In dominico eſt 1 caruca; & unus villanus, cum 2 bordariis; & 20 acræ prati. In eâdem villâ tenet Godricus de Comite 2 carucatas terræ; & ibi habet 1 carucam in dominico, & 20 acras prati. Hujus terræ ſocam reclamat Hugo de Grenteſmainell." Ibid. fol. 237. a. 1.

[3] "Hugo de Grenteſmainell habet 3 domos pertinentes ad Burtone." Ibid. fol. 230. a. 1.

[4] "In Burtone tenet Hugo de Comite 2 carucatas terræ, 1 bovatâ minus. Vaſta eſt. Hæc commutatur cum ſuperioribus." Ibid.

[5] "Durandus Malet tenet de Rege in Burtone 5 carucatas terræ. Ibi fuerunt 4 carucæ. In dominico eſt 1 caruca; & 2 ſochmanni, cum 2 villanis & 1 bordario, habent 1 carucam. Ibi 40 acræ prati. Valuit 3 ſolidos; modò 10 ſolidos. Huic terræ pertinet 1 carucata terræ & dimidia, unâ bovatâ minus, in Preſtwolde. Ibi fuit dimidia carucæ. Ibi eſt 1 ſochmannus. Valet 2 ſolidos." Ibid. fol. 236. b.

[6] Clauſ. 11 Hen. III. m. 12.

[7] Cart. 13 Hen. III.

[8] The property of the abbot and convent of Gerendon at Burton will be more particularly ſtated hereafter, under the Hiſtory of that religious houſe.

[9] Cart. 14 Edw. III. n. 19. per Inſpex.

[10] Peck, MS. 4935; ex Cod. MS. de Domeſday, apud Belvoir, in 24mo, fol. 8. a.

[11] Eſch. 2 Edw. II. N° 25. Leic.

[12] Appendix to vol. II. p. 112.

[13] Eſch. 29 Edw. II. N° 88. Leic.

[14] Eſch. 3 Edw. III. N° 62. Leic.

[15] Eſch. 3 Edw. III. N° 82. Leic.

[16] Pat. 10 Edw. III. pars 2. m. 2.

[17] Eſch. 14 Edw. III. N° 24. Leic.

[18] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[19] Eſch. 35 Edw. III. pars 2. N° 10.

[20] Fin. 16 July, 25 Edw. III. m. 23.—See more in Aſhby Magna.

9 virgates of land in Stockton and Burton, which the heirs of Thomas de Fryday and their partners held, by the ſervice and dues of wards and marriages; alſo the moiety of one knight's fee and an half in Burton and Upton, which Margaret lady Nevill (couſin and heir or Robert de Warde, knight,) held; and of the moiety of one knight's fee in Burton and Upton, which the other heir of the ſame Robert de Warde held [1].

In 1444, William de Ferrers of Groby, knight, was ſeiſed of a moiety and half of one knight's fee in Burton and Upton, which dame Margaret Nevill, couſin and one of the heirs of Robert de la Ward, knight, lately held; alſo of the other moiety and half of the ſame knight's fee in Burton and Upton aforeſaid, which Richard Meynill (the other of the heirs of Robert de la Ward, knight,) lately held [2].

In 1457, Edward de Grey, knight, lord Ferrers of Groby, died ſeiſed of one knight's fee in Burton and Upton, which dame Margaret Nevil (couſin and one of the heirs of Robert Warde, knight), lately held; alſo of another moiety of one knight's fee in Burton and Upton, which Richard Meynill, the other of the heirs of the ſame Robert de la Ward, knight, lately held; of nine virgates of land in Stocton and Burton, which the heirs of Thomas Fryday and their partners held of the ſame Edward, by the ſervice of one knight's fee and an half; and of the manor of Burton, which ſir William de la Zouch of Haringworth held [3].

In 1461, John Moubray duke of Norfolk died ſeiſed of one knight's fee in Olby and Burton on the Woulds, which the abbot of Gerendon held; alſo of one knight's fee in Queneborow and Burton on the Woulds, which Thomas Curſon held [4].

In 1486, ... Keble died ſeiſed of certain lands and tenements in Burton on the Woulds, held of the Prince [5].

In 1518, it was found that Ralph Shirley died ſeiſed of the manor of Burton, held of the king as of the honour of Winton; by what ſervice unknown [6].

The manor of Burton and all other poſſeſſions of the monaſtery of Gerendon were granted, 32 Hen. VIII, to Thomas earl of Rutland in fee; Burton grange being then worth yearly £4. [7]

In 1559, Thomas Wileman [8] was cited to ſhew by what title he held the grange of Burton-Preſtwould [9].

In 1589, it was found that Henry Skipwith, eſq. died in 1588, ſeiſed of a certain grange called Burton Grange, and of certain lands belonging thereto; and that it was held of the Queen in capite, by the ſervice of a twentieth part of one knight's fee; alſo of three cottages and divers lands and tenements in Burton on the Woulds, Wymeſwould, Preſtwould, and Cotes, late Muſton's cottages, &c. [10]

"Burton," ſays Mr. Wyrley in 1595, "is a hamlet in the pariſh of Preſtwould; but not of any note."

In 1609, ſir William Skipwith held in capite the grange called Burton Grange; and at the ſame time Hugo Kirke and John Smalley held lands in capite at Burton ſuper le Woldes.

"Within this lordſhip (not long ſince) hath beene found a quarrey of alabaſter, and white ſtone ſerving for cutters and picture-makers for ſtatues, tombes, and proportions, but not altogether ſo hard or cleare as that ſtone which is gotten in the Caſtle-hey Parke neere Tutbury, or in the quarries at Falde neere adjoyning: where in a mount, called Natmorehull, myſelfe have a roche of the ſame ſtone [11]."

The freeholders at Burton ſuper Oulds in 1630 were, William Iremonger, John Kirke chief conſtable, Thomas Wildman, William Henton, and John Fiſher.

The following arms were granted, Oct. 29, 1667, by ſir Edward Walker, Garter, to Edward Smith, of London, eſq. the ſon of John Smith of Burton upon the Woulds, in the county of Leiceſter, and grandchild of Paul Smith of the ſame:

Gules, on a chevron engrailed Or, three croſſes patée fitché Sable. Creſt; out of a ducal coronet, a goat's head, Smith; fig. Plate LI. fig. 14.

Samuel Shalcroſſe [12], of Burton, eſq. dying without iſſue in 1729, his property at Burton was inherited by the late William-Shalcroſſe Maſon, eſq. high ſheriff for the county in 1773, who was a principal freeholder here, and owned a good part of the lordſhip, with other lands in the adjoining pariſh of Walton. He built a good houſe here, about 60 years ago, on a pleaſant ſpot, upon an elevated ſituation, at the end of the village. He married Judith, daughter of the rev. Paul Jenkinſon, rector of Weſton, co. Notts, and ſiſter of dame Prudence Jenkinſon, wife to the late Dr. Pochin; by whom he had no iſſue. Mr. Maſon ſurvived his wife (who was buried at Preſtwould April 15, 1772); and, dying in September 1788, deviſed his whole eſtates to his nephew John Noon, eſq. ſon of Mr. Thomas Noon, a hoſier at Mountſorell, who had married one of Mr. Maſon's four ſiſters; and was buried alſo at Preſtwould, Oct. 1, 1788.

Mr. Noon (who ſerved the office of high ſheriff for the county in 1793) reſides in the houſe built by his uncle; to which he has lately added ſome excellent ſtables and offices. He married, April 29, 1789, at Preſtwould, Anne, one of the daughters of the late Mr. William Tyler [13] of Mountſorell; but has no iſſue.

Earl Moira is lord of the manor of Burton.

The other principal landholders are, Mr. Noon, Mr. Packe, Mr. Steel, and a few ſmall freeholders.

Burton Bandalls and Burton on the Woulds are adjoining to Preſtwould; and the ſoil of this lordſhip is in general a ſtrong clay, good corn-land, and feeds ſheep.

In an advertiſement, Feb. 22, 1799, for ſale of four rich cloſes of arable and paſture land, called Brook Cloſes, in Burton on the Woulds, containing 18 acres, it is obſerved that they are tithe-free, and that ſtrata of limeſtone are ſuppoſed to run through the whole of them.

	Preſtwould.			Burton.			Cotes.			Hoton.
Money raiſed for the poor within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	£. 26	s. 4	d. 2	£. 50	s. 3	d. 5	£. 25	s. 2	d. 10	£. 41	s. 19	d. 0
Expended in county rates, &c.	3	14	9	4	13	2	4	7	6	3	9	2
——— on the poor, —	12	9	5	45	10	3	20	15	4	41	19	0
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	0	12	6	2	15	0	0	0	0	13	12	0
Expended in litigations, —	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	6	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	39	3	0	86	11	3	12	4	10	84	5	9
——— 1784, —	40	14	10	68	12	4	14	11	7	100	5	6
——— 1785, —	41	5	1	78	6	11	10	11	2	68	11	9
Medium of theſe three years,	40	7	8	77	16	10	12	9	2	84	7	8
——— of county expences,	6	10	4	6	15	8	6	3	11	5	15	6
——— of expences not relating to the				0	0	0	0	17	10	0	0	0
poor, repairs of church, roads, &c.	0	0	0	0	0	0	5	7	5	0	0	0
——— of nett annual expences,	33	17	4	71	1	2	20	15	4	78	12	2
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	0	5	11	0	13	8	0	15	10	1	8	9
——— of entertainments at meetings,	0	2	8	0	8	5	0	0	0	0	14	6
——— of law expences, —	0	1	8	4	10	3	0	0	0	7	13	4
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0	11	5	10	0	0	0	0	16	8

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations at Preſtwould may be ſeen in vol. I. pp. 50, 51; and at Hoton in p. 47.

---

[1] Eſch. 11 Ric. II. N° 26. Leic.
[2] Eſch. 23 Hen. VI.
[3] Eſch. 36 Hen. VI.
[4] Eſch. 1 Edw. IV. N° 46. Leic.
[5] Eſch. 2 Hen. VII.
[6] Eſch. 9 Hen. VIII.
[7] The grant is in the Augmentation Office.
[8] See a pedigree of Wildman of Burton, hereafter, p. 379.
[9] Paſch. Record. 1 Eliz. Rot. 22.
[10] Eſch. 3 April, 31 Eliz.
[11] Burton, p. 63.—In his interleaved copy this paragraph is croſſed over, but nothing added inſtead of it.
[12] This family appears to have been originally of Derbyſhire: John Shalcroſſe, of Shalcroſſe, eſq. occurring as high-ſheriff for that county in 1686, as does a ſir Paul Jenkinſon in 1687.—Anthony Shalcroſſe, gent. died 13 Jan. 7 Eliz. ſeiſed of the Old feoffment, otherwiſe Shalcroſſe-hall manor, worth £5. a year, held under the honour of Tutbury by fealty, ſuit to High Peak, 6*d*. rent, and heriots; and Leonard his ſon and heir was then 28 years old." Inq. 12 Eliz. Derb.
[13] See Mr. Tyler's epitaph in the chapel at Mountſorell, p. 92.

COTES,

formerly called Over Cotes and North Cotes, is a hamlet of Preſtwould, ſituated on the banks of the Soar, on the left-hand ſide of the high road to Nottingham, within two miles of Loughborough.

In the time of king Ethelred, earl Morcar gave this village (which was of his mother's inheritance) to the abbey of Burton; but, after the Conqueſt, the king ſeized it into his own hands; after which, coming to Burton, he reſtored it, by his charter, to the ſaid abbey for ever.

This appears by the two following entries:

1. "Wiłłs rex Anglorum, W. de Ferr' & War' ſalutem. Sciatis me dediſſe Deo & Sc̃e Marie, in eccleſiâ de Burthonâ & Andreſeyâ, terram de Chotes, ſicuti mater Morcaris comitis meliùs habuit le Wile, ut Longuinus novus clericus de eâdem eccleſiâ tenuit. Teſt', W. de Ferrariis; & tu, Harding, videto nè ſibi aliquis injuriam faciat."

2. "Stephanus rex Anglie juſtitiariis, vicecomitibus, baronibus, miniſtris, & omnibus fidelibus ſuis Anglie, ſalutem. Precipio, quòd eccleſie Sc̃e Marie de Burthonâ, & abbas & monachi ejuſdem eccleſie, teneant eccleſiam ſuam de Chotes ita benè & in pace, & liberè, & quietè, & pacificè, ſicut rex Wiłłus avus meus illam predicte eccleſie dedit & conceſſit, & cartâ ſuâ confirmavit, nè ſuper hoc Stephanus de Belcamp, aut aliquis alius, eiſdem indè injuriam aut contumeliam faciat. T. Ric̃o de Canvill, apud Witcherche [1]."

In the Conqueror's ſurvey, the deſcription of Cotes is blended with that of Preſtwould.

The Regiſter of Burton begins with, "Carta Wlfrici Spoti, monaſterii Burtonenſis fundatoris [2];" in which are included lands in various parts of this county; amongſt other things, "fundum apud Appleby, quem emi pecuniâ meâ, & hidam [terræ portionem, ſcilicet, alendæ uni familiæ ſufficientem] apud Scearnford, ad Wiggeſtanam pertinentem." There is no ſpecific mention of Cotes; but, among the poſſeſſions of the abbey of Burton in the Wincheſter Domeſday-book, are noticed, "In Cotes, III carucate terre; terra III carucarum. Valet III libras."

The abbot and convent accordingly enjoyed this lordſhip till the time of king Henry II; when Robert abbot of Burton, having, without the conſent of his convent, paſſed it to Nicholas then ſheriff of Staffordſhire, who had married his ſiſter; for which, in 1159, he was depoſed and expelled, "propter alienationem poſſeſſionum & rerum monaſterii."

On this ſubject the Burton Regiſter preſerves the following writ, iſſued in 1162 to Robert Fitz Geffrey, ſheriff of the counties of Warwick and Leiceſter:

"H. rex Anglorum R. filio G. vicecomiti, ſalutem. Mando tibi & precipio, ut ſine morâ facias rectum inter abbatem Burton & N. de Stafford vicecomitem de terrâ de Cotes; &, ſi N. non vult venire ad placitum pro dirationandâ terrâ indè ſuper x libr' de foriſfacturâ, ut abſque occaſione aut prolongatione ſine morâ ſit ſeiſitus ſicut comitatûs teſtimonium perhibet abbati per patris mei breve, tibi juſſit quòd abbas ſeiſitus fuiſſet; quare volo ut abbas ampliùs indè tarditudinem ſuſtineat. Vide, nè pro pecuniâ juſtitie abbas iterùm ad me clamet. Teſtibus; W. Giff' Wint' ẽpo, & R. Canc'. Apud Weſtm' [3]."

The ſaid Nicholas procured a grant to hold it in capite, by the ſervice of giving the king, every year, unum brachetum cum ligamine; and died ſeiſed thereof; leaving Stephen de Beauchamp, his ſon and heir, under age; who afterwards reſigned and quitted claim, to the abbot and convent, to all his right in the ſaid village, which he acknowledged to have unjuſtly detained from them:

"Univerſis ſancte matris eccleſie filiis, ad quos preſens ſcriptum pervenerit, Stephanus de Bellocampo ſalutem. Noverit univerſitas veſtra me reddidiſſe & quietum-clamâſſe Deo & Sc̃e Marie & Sc̃e Moduene virginis de Burthon, & monachis ibidem Deo ſervientibus, villam de Cotes, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis, quam injuſtè occupaveram, in perpetuum, pacificè & quietè tenendum & habendum, abſque omni reclamatione [4]."

In the account of abbot Barnard, who died in 1175, it appears that he had ſued for the vill of Cotes, and recovered it.

Under the next abbot, however, Cotes became again the ſubject of litigation; for, Roger Malebraunch, who was abbot from 1177 to 1182, impleaded Stephen de Segrave for the vill of Cotes; "qui ejecit eum indè; & adhuc pendet placitum, quia Rex indè ſeiſitur." The ſeignory and manerial rights of Cotes were at this period divided between the earls of Leiceſter and Cheſter.

Robert earl of Leiceſter, in the time of king Richard I, gave certain lands here to Ralph the ſon of Roger; and Ranulph the third earl of Cheſter was at that time ſeiſed of other lands here.

After this, the abbot and convent quietly poſſeſſed Cotes for ſome years, and endeavoured to get it confirmed to them by king John; for which they gave to the king ſix palfreys; but, his death happening ſoon after, it was not done; and, Stephen de Beauchamp dying about the ſame time beyond the ſeas, Ranulph Blundeville earl of Cheſter, being then at the ſiege of Mountſorell caſtle, ſeized on the ſaid village, and gave it to William de Vernon; who held it till the earl's death; after which, Stephen de Segrave, then juſtice of England, having informed king Henry III. that the four ſiſters of Stephen de Beauchamp before-mantioned, Iſode de Beauchampe and Maud her ſiſter, Aline the wife of Ralph de Anderne, and Idone who was ſome time the wife of Henry de Alneto, were heirs to the ſaid village of Cotes; he cauſed them to appear before him in court, and to ſurrender into the king's hands all their right and title; whereupon the king immediately, with the aſſent and conſent of the ſaid ſiſters, granted it to the ſaid Stephen; who, at his death, left it to ſir Gilbert his ſon; to whom ſucceeded Nicholas lord Segrave; againſt whom Thomas abbot of Burton brought his action for the aforeſaid village.

Thus far out of the ledger-book of Burton abbey; in which there are ſome miſtakes; for, Ranulph earl of Cheſter and Stephen de Beauchamp both paſſed the manor of Cotes [5] (by their ſeveral deeds) to Stephen de Segrave, to hold by the ſervice of one brache (a large hound) yearly [6]. The four daughters of Stephen de Beauchamp afterwards, in 1229, relinquiſhed all their claim and title thereto.

The Segrave Chartulary preſerves the titles of the following transfers at "Cotes ſuper Sore, cum Preſtwould & Hoton:"

1. A grant of Elias ſon of Anketill de Preſtwould, to Stephen de Segrave and his heirs, of two tofts and crofts in Cotes, and two acres of land in Preſtwould called Gares, to be held by fealty and a payment of three halfpence at Eaſter, in lieu of all other ſervice, except foreign ſervice.

2. Another grant of one toft and croft in Cotes, to be held by fealty and the accuſtomed payments.

3. A grant of William de Wichelon, to the ſame Stephen, of ten virgates of land in Cotes, with tofts and crofts, by payment of 2*s.* a year at Eaſter, and the ſixth part of a knight's fee, free from all ſervices.

4. A quit-claim from Ranulph earl of Cheſter, to Stephen de Segrave, and his heirs and homagers (hominibus ſuis) dwelling on two ploughlands and a half in Cotes, parcel of his fee, "de clauſurâ parci ſui de Querndon."

5. A grant of William de Torp, to Gilbert de Segrave and his heirs, of one virgate of land in Cotes, and of another in Hoton, with a toft and croft, together with Simon ſon of Ulfketes and his wife, and their boys, and all their iſſue; and alſo Elias ſon of William and his wife, and their boys, and all their iſſue; and of one toft and croft in Hoton; to be held by the ſervice of one pair of ſpurs, or 6*d.* in lieu of them,

---

[1] Regiſter of Burton Abbey, p. v.
[2] Ibid. p. iii.
[3] Ibid. p. v.
[4] Ibid. p. xxxv.

[5] In the county of Derby, ſays Dugdale, Bar. Angl. vol. I. p. 672. a; and ſo ſays his follower Blount, Tenures, p. 11: but it ſhould be, in Leiceſterſhire. PECK, MS.

[6] Clauſ. 13 Hen. III. m. 2.

at the feaſt of St. Martin, for all ſervices [1].

Robert Powtrell (deſcended from Robert Pultrell, who lived in the Conqueror's reign, and then gave certain tithes in this county to the monks of St. Ebrulf [2]) was lord of a manor lying in this place and Preſtwould in the beginning of the reign of Henry III. which was then held of the honour of Cheſter.

In 1250, the widow of John de Nevile ſued for her third part of Cotes, as for her dower. This fine is between Sara and Jollanus fil' Jollani de Neville; which Jollanus very probably was her father in law, and John Neville her huſband's nephew by his younger brother Andrew Neville [3].

In 1254, it was found that Gilbert de Segrave held, at his death, the manor of Cotes in ſocage of the king, by paying yearly one berſetbrigumnue [4]; that Stephen ſon of Burge held 3 virgates of land by charter, paying yearly one pound of pepper; that Peter ſon of Nigel held 3 acres of land, and paid 5*s*. 3*d*. a year; that Henry ſon of Hawiſia held one bovate of land, paid yearly 5*s*. and owed ſuit; that there were 22 virgates of land there in villanage; that the forelands were worth 8*s*. 10*d*. a year; that the toll (tallagium) was worth 40*s*. a year; that the perquiſites of the court and the merchetum were worth half a mark yearly; that the whole town of Cotes paid yearly 2*s*. to the hundred-court; that there were 40 acres of wood there; and that Nicholas Segrave, ſon of the above Gilbert, was his next heir, and then 17 years old [5].

In 1296, Nicholas de Segrave held, at his death, 5 virgates of land, with the appurtenances, in Cotes, of Henry earl of Cheſter, by ſcutage; and John de Segrave, his ſon and heir, was aged 30 [6].

In 1308, John Bardolf held, at his death, 6 acres of arable land in Cotes of John Poutrell, by the ſervice of 2*s*. a year; and John Bardolf, his ſon and heir, was aged 7 [7].

In 1325, John de Segrave, deceaſed, and Chriſtian his wife, held £6. rent of the bondſmen of Cotes; and John de Segrave, ſon and heir of Stephen de Segrave, couſin of the aforeſaid John de Segrave ſenior, was his next heir [8].

In 1343, Ralph Baſſet of Drayton died ſeiſed of the moiety of one knight's fee in Cotes-Poutrell and Houton, which John Poutrell, Henry Jurdon, William de Steynesfeld, Robert Hatcheditch, and Letice Rous, held [9].

In 1346, John de Nevill (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 10*s*. for a quarter of one knight's fee in Preſtwould, Wymondeſwould, Burton, and Cotes, parcel of the honour of Leiceſter; and John de Poutrell 10*s*. for a quarter of one knight's fee in Houton and Cotes, parcel of the fee of Cheſter [10].

In 1353, John de Segrave held lands in Cotes [11].

In 1361, Henry Plantagenet duke of Lancaſter was ſeiſed, at his death, of one knight's fee in Wymondſwold, Burton, Preſtwold, and Cotes, which John de Segrave held [12].

In 1391, Robert de Swillington, knight, held certain lands and tenements in Cotes and Houton (value 56*s*. a year) of the duke of Lancaſter, as of the honour of Lancaſter and Tickhull [13].

In 1399, it was found that Thomas Mowbray late duke of Norfolk died ſeiſed of certain lands in Cotes [14]; and alſo that Margaret late dutcheſs of Norfolk was ſeiſed of certain lands there [15].

In 1406, Thomas Mowbray earl Mareſcal died ſeiſed of certain meſſuages, lands, and rents, in Cotes [16].

Sir Robert Nevile, knt. ſold his moiety of the lordſhip of Cotes to ſir Richard Nele, knt. in 1442.

John Beaumont, eſq. attainted of high treaſon in 1464, was ſeiſed of the manor of Cotes juxta Lughborowe [17]; and on the 8th of November, that year, king Edward IV. gave the manor and demeſne of Cotes juxta Lughtburgh, with the advowſon of the church there, (late parcel of the forfeited poſſeſſions of John Beaumont) to Richard Haſtings, eſq. and his heirs [18].

In 1476, Richard Illingworth, knt. died ſeiſed of one meſſuage and three acres of land in Cotes, held of the duke of Norfolk; and Ralph Illingworth was his ſon and heir [19].

In 1538, a clauſura in Cotes was held of the king, as of his dutchy of Lancaſter, by knight's ſervice [20].

In 1550, Henry Stapleton, eſq. obtained a large grant in divers counties [21]; in which the manor of Cotes is believed to have been included; for, in 1589, it was found that Henry Skipwith, eſq. died ſeiſed of this manor, which was held of the queen in ſocage, by the ſervice of one brachet; alſo of one meſſuage and divers tenements in Cotes aforeſaid, called Beaumondes landes; and of one meſſuage and divers lands and tenements there, lately purchaſed of Henry Stapleton [22].

In 1595, Henry, William, and George Skipwith obtained a grant of divers lands in Leiceſterſhire [23].

William Skipwith, eſq. was high-ſheriff in 1597; "and was afterwards," ſays Fuller, "deſervedly knighted." This honour was conferred on him by king James, at Workſop, April 30, 1603.

Mr. Wyrley ſays, "In the Weſt part of Leiceſterſhire, bordering upon Nottingham, is placed Coates, pleaſantly upon the Soare, the ſeat of ſir William Skipwith, knt. a worthy gentleman, who fetcheth his deſcent from the antient race of the Skipwiths of York. But it ſome time did belong to the abbots of Burton upon Trent; between whom and one John Toke, a knight, were great contentions for the ſame [24]."

On an inquiſition taken after the death of ſir William Skipwith, which happened May 3, 1610, it was found that he held the manor of Cotes in capite in free ſocage [25]. He was buried at Preſtwould; and the verſes on his tomb (ſee p. 349.) were the production of his neighbour ſir John Beaumont.

His ſon Henry Skipwith, eſq. was knighted, at Whitehall, July 19, 1609; obtained in 1613 a grant of lands in Lincolnſhire [26]; and in 1615 was enabled to hold court-leets, &c. in Leiceſterſhire and other places [27].

Mr. Burton, in 1622, ſays, "Cotes is now the inheritance of ſir Henry Skipwith, knight; whoſe worthy father, not long ſince deceaſed, ſir William Skipwith [28], knight, I cannot paſs over in ſilence; for that his ſo many good parts, his perſon, his valour, his learning, judgement, and wiſdom, do challenge more than I can expreſs. Among the reſt, yet I cannot omit to ſpeak of his witty conceits, in making fit and acute epigrams, poëſies, mottos, and devices, but chiefly in deviſing apt and fit Impreſes, agreeing and expreſſing the party's conceit and intendment;"—"neither ſo apparent," adds Fuller [29], "that every ruſtick might underſtand them, nor ſo obſcure that they needed an Œdipus to interpret them;"—of which Impreſes the Italians were the firſt inventors and perfectors [30].—This family is deſcended of the antient family of Skipwith [31], of a place called Skipwith, co. York; who, in the time of king Edward I, married with the heir general of Ormeſby of Ormeſby, almoſt in the middle way betwen Bollingbroke and Lowth, where the lineal heir male of the houſe now reſideth, 1641. Of this houſe was deſcended that grave and juſt Judge, Sir William Skipwith, knight, one of the Juſtices of the Common Pleas, who, in thoſe buſy and dangerous days [1] of king Richard II, when all the Judges of the Benches underwent the doom of judgement, ſome by death, ſome by baniſhment, ſome by confiſcation of goods and forfeiture of lands, he alone eſcaped free from cenſure; and (that I may uſe the words of that noble and learned Sir Henry Spelman in his Gloſſary), "ſolus inter impios manſit integer Gulielmus Skipwith, miles, clarus ideò apud poſteros [2];" whoſe integrity, no doubt, was rewarded with a great bleſſing; in that ſo many now living, that are deſcended from him, are of great and flouriſhing eſtates; as, ſir William Skipwith of Ormeſby, the lineal heir male [3]; ſir Henry Skipwith of this place, baronet; Henry Skipwith of Knight Thorpe, in this county, eſq.; ...... Skipwith of Calthorpe, and ..... Skipwith of Cobham, both co. Lincoln [4]."

---

[1] Appendix to vol. II. p. 114.

[2] Ordericus Vitalis, Hiſtoria Eccleſiaſtica, p. 602.

[3] Gaſcoigne, MS note; ex Rot. Fin. 34 Hen. III. in craſtino Martini.

[4] Sic.

[5] Eſch. 23 Hen. III. N° 20.

[6] Eſch. 24 Edw. I. N° 54.

[7] Eſch. 2 Edw. II. N° 25. Leic.

[8] Eſch. 19 Edw. II. N° 88. Leic.

[9] Eſch. 17 Edw. III. N° 59. Leic.

[10] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[11] Eſch. 27 Edw. III. N° 69. Leic.

[12] Fin. 35 Edw. III. m. 23.—See more in Aſhby Magna.

[13] Eſch. 15 Ric. II. pars 1, N° 62.

[14] Eſch. 1 Hen. IV. N° 71. Leic.

[15] Ibid. N° 72. Leic.

[16] Eſch. 8 Hen. IV. N° 76. Leic.

[17] Eſch. 4 Edw. IV. N° 47. Leic.

[18] Pat. 2 Edw. IV. pars 2. m. 24.

[19] Eſch. 16 Edw. IV. N° 38. Leic.

[20] Eſch. 29 Hen. VIII.

[21] 3 Pars Original. 3 Edw. VI. Rot. 65.

[22] Eſch. 3 April, 31 Eliz.

[23] Tenuræ in com. Leiceſtriæ dimiſſæ Henrico, Willielmo, & Georgio Skipwith; 2 Pars Original. 37 Eliz. Rot. 7.

[24] Wyrley, MS.

[25] Eſch. 7 Jac. I.

[26] 3 Pars Original. 10 Jac. I. Rot. 163.

[27] 5 Pars Original. 12 Jac. I. Rot. 85.

[28] See his hand-writing in Plate LI.

[29] Worthies, p. 143.

[30] "An Impreſe is defined, by the Italians, to be a kind of emblem, or proportion of ſome thing either natural or artificial, with a poſy or motto thereunto annexed; thereby expreſſing ſome paſſion, action, conceit, or intendment: the proportion they call the body, the motto the ſoul; ſo that, if that the ſubject or body bear no proportion or meaning to the ſoul, or the ſoul to the body, they hold that Impreſe imperfect: they would not have the motto ſo apparent, that every ruric fellow might underſtand; nor ſo harſh or obſcure, that it ſhould need an Oedipus to interpret. Of theſe Impreſes many have written; as, Luca Contile, Girolamo Ruſcelli, Sciopione Amirato, Camillo Camilli, Paulo Jovio, Andrea Palazzi, Scipione Bargagli, Julius Cæſar Capaccio, Ludovico Dolce, and many others." Burton.

[31] Weever, pp. 579, 580, gives, from St. Peter's church at St. Alban's, the epitaphs of Richard Skipwith. gent. late fellow of New Inn, who died 1414; John and Joan Skipwith, and George Skipwith; obſerving that "in this church are others of this family interred, whoſe monuments are quite defaced; of which name, gentlemen of antient deſcent, fair poſſeſſions, and knightly degree, do at this day flouriſh at Cotes in the county of Leiceſter."

The late lord Harborough lent me a curious folio volume in MS. which appeared to have been formerly a common-place book of Sir William Skipwith, containing many poetical eſſays by the Wits of thoſe days; particularly of Dr. Donne (when a young man), Francis Beaumont of Gracedieu, Sir John Beaumont, Biſhop Corbett, Sir Henry Wotton, Sir H. Gardner, Sir R. Eaton, one by King James [5], and one by Lord Digby; ſeveral by Sir William Skipwith himſelf, and ſome by his ſon Sir Henry. From this MS. one ſhort poem by Sir William Skipwith is here copied.

"If any be content with words, 'tis I;
If any not content with deeds, 'tis you;
If any fear your words like ſwords, 'tis I;
If any vex the heart that bleeds, 'tis you;
'Tis you and I that make theſe ſayings true;
Diſdained I, and moſt diſdainful you.

If any man be fed with looks, 'tis I;
If any woman love by fits, 'tis you;
If any leave for love his life, 'tis I;
If any bate the edge of wits, 'tis you:
'Tis you and I that make theſe ſayings true;
Unhappy I, and more than happy you.

If any ſwim againſt the ſtream, 'tis I;
With wind and tide if any go, 'tis you;
If any be more than they ſeem, 'tis I;
If any think more than they know, 'tis you:
'Tis you and I that make theſe ſayings true;
Unfaining I, and deep diſſembling you.

If any pull for prime, and miſs, 'tis I;
If any pull for fluſh, and hit, 'tis you;
When colour holds, of any life 'tis I;
By contraries, if any get, 'tis you:
'Tis you for whom each game proves for the beſt;
'Tis I that on each game do loſe my reſt.

W. SKIPWITH."

Sir Henry Skipwith was created a baronet Dec. 20, 1622; and in 1629 obtained, jointly with ſir Thomas Walſingham, knt. a grant of lands in the counties of Leiceſter, Derby, &c. [6]; in 1631, a grant of free-warren for his lands in Leiceſterſhire [7]; in 1636, was high-ſheriff for the county; and in 1637, certain amerciaments againſt him on account of that office, which had been returned into the Court of Chancery, were certified to the Court of Exchequer [8]. Heartily eſpouſing the cauſe of king Charles I, he was one of the commiſſioners of array for this county; and, May 28, 1645, had the honour of entertaining his Sovereign at Cotes [9]; after which, he was fined £1114. by the parliamentary ſequeſtrators. He was the laſt of the family [10] who reſided here; and amongſt his poems is "An Elegy on the Death of my never enough lamented maſter King Charles the Firſt." The others are chiefly of a melancholy turn: for example;

"To thee, O Lord, to thee alone, I run:
Oh! let the blood of thine own bleſſed Son
Weigh my black ſoul, and let his precious merit
Appeaſe thy wrath; and ſo ſhall I inherit
The place reſerved for thoſe that ſerve thee better;
If not, I know I die thy damned debtor:
But, though my ſins exceed the faithleſs Turks,
Yet is thy mercy greateſt of thy works."

Sir Henry, his ſecond ſon, died ſoon after his father unmarried; whereupon his title and eſtate went to his next brother ſir Grey; who, after the death of the king, went with ſeveral other gentlemen, to avoid the Uſurpation, over to Virginia, and there married, and left one ſon.

---

[1] Knighton, in his Chronicle, ſays, that, notwithſtanding the threats of great power of the duke of Ireland, ſir William Skipwith pretended an indiſpoſition, and did not appear at the council at Nottingham, 11 Rich. II. when all the judges were ſummoned to meet there, in order to ſubſcribe to ſeveral queſtions, whereby they might take occaſion to work the death of the duke of Glouceſter. This judge therefore, notwithſtanding the threats and great power of the duke of Ireland, pretended an indiſpoſition, got his quietus, and did not appear at that council, wherein all the judges were ſo overawed, that they gave their opinions illegally; upon which, the parliament meeting ſoon after in the ſaid year, they were all of them arreſted on the bench, except ſir William Skipwith, being charged with over-ruling the actions and determinations of the lords by their advice and directions, upon aſſurance that all was done according to law; yet they afterwards had given the king a contrary judgement at Nottingham, and had delivered it as their opinion that the actions of the ſaid parliament were illegal and traiterous. This affair being taken into conſideration, they were all of them condemned by the lords temporal, with the aſſent of the king, to be drawn and hanged as traitors, their heirs diſinherited, and their lands, &c. forfeited; which had been executed, had not the biſhops, juſt as ſentence paſſed, interceded for their lives; which the king granted them: but their eſtates were ſeized, and their perſons impriſoned.

[2] Fuller's account of this tranſaction (Worthies, Leic. p. 131.) is much to the honour of our Judge:—"Sir Robert Belknap, being bred in the ſtudy of the laws, became chief juſtice of the common pleas, Oct. 8, 48 Edw. III; and ſo continued till the general rout of the judges, in the wonder-working parliament, 11 Rich. II. when he was diſplaced on this occaſion. The king had a mind to make away certain lords, viz. his uncle the duke of Glouceſter, the earls of Arundel, Warwick, Darby, Nottingham, &c.; who in the former parliament had been appointed governors of the kingdom. For this purpoſe, he called all the judges before him to Nottingham; where the king's many queſtions were reſolved into this. "Whether he might, by his regal power, revoke what was acted in parliyment?" To this all the judges, ſir William Skipwith alone excepted, anſwered affirmatively, and ſubſcribed it. This Belknap underwrote unwillingly, as foreſeeing the danger; and, putting to his ſeal, ſaid theſe words: "There wants nothing but an hurdle, an horſe, and an halter, to carry me where I may ſuffer the death I deſerve; for, if I had not done this, I ſhould have died for it; and, becauſe I have done it, I deſerve death for betraying the lords." Yet, it had been more for his credit and conſcience, to have adventured a martyrdom in the defence of the laws, than to hazard the death of a malefactor in the breach thereof: but judges are but men; and moſt deſire to decline that danger which they apprehend neareſt unto them. In the next parliament, all the judges were arreſted in Weſtminſter-hall of high treaſon; when there was a vacation in Term-time, till their places were re-ſupplied. Sir R. Treſilian, chief juſtice of the King's Bench, was executed. The reſt, thus named and reckoned up in the printed Statutes (ann. 11 Ric. II.), Robert Belknap, John Holt, John Cray, William Burgh, and Roger Fulthorp, all judges and knights, with J. Locktan ſerjeant at law, had their lands (ſave ſuch as were entailed), with their goods and chattels, forfeited to the king, their perſons being baniſhed, and they, by the importunate interceſſion of the queen, hardly eſcaping with their lives.—Dr. Fuller places Judge Belknap among the Worthies of Leiceſterſhire, "only," as he ſays, "becauſe he finds a worſhipful family of his name fixed therein; whereof one was high ſheriff 17 Hen. VII; provided this be no prejudice to Suſſex, the ſame name being very antient therein."

[3] Sir William Skipwith, of Ormeſby, married two wives; but, leaving no ſurviving male iſſue by either, the ſeniority of blood deſcended to the progeny of an uncle; as will appear by the account of the family of Skipwith of Newbold given in p. 369.

[4] Burton, MS. 1641.

[5] "You women, that doe London love ſoe well,
Whom ſcarce a proclamation can expell;" &c.

[6] 5 Pars Original. 5 Car. I. Rot. 32.

[7] 5 Pars Original. 7 Car. I. Rot. ult.

[8] "Amerciamenta in Curiâ Cancellariæ ſuper Henrico Skipwith, vicecomite comitatûs Leiceſtriæ, certificata hic per breve de Mittimus, & hic irrotulata." Mich. Recorda, 13 Car. I. Rot. 1.

[9] Lloyd, in his Worthies, p. 649, informs us that ſir Henry Skipwith of Cotes entertained the king nobly; and, after naming ſeveral other Worthies of Leiceſterſhire, adds, "they need no other hiſtory than the firſt commiſſion of array in their own country wherein they were inſerted; the Catalogue of Compounders, wherein they were puniſhed between them £20,000; the Paper of Loans, wherein they contributed to his Majeſty's ſervice £25,642; the ſeveral compoſitions they ſuffered, and ſequeſtrations they endured."

[10] Of his deſcendants, ſee the Pedigree in p. 368.

The manſion-houſe at Cotes (commonly called Cotes Park-houſe) was purchaſed by ſir Chriſtopher Packe; who died here in 1683; and was afterwards inhabited by his ſon Chriſtopher, and grandſon Clifton, in whoſe time it was almoſt wholly demoliſhed by fire; which is ſaid to have happened either by the careleſſneſs or worſe conduct of the family-ſteward on a rent-day, who abſconded with the money he had received.

Large fragments of the walls ſtill remain; tradition talks of its haunted cellars, in which, it is vulgarly believed, are ſtill concealed immenſe quantities of old ſtrong beer. The entire garden, fenced in with a good ſtone wall, has been for ſome time let to a gardener, of the name of Stevenſon.

Mr. John White, of Cotes, near Loughborough, on leaving one of his farms in 1799, advertized a ſale of "about 120 capital ewes and 40 ſheaves, bred with the greateſt care, and much judgement. The late Mr. White (whoſe death was the cauſe of this ſale), was one of the earlieſt diſciples of the late Mr. Bakewell; and never hired above one ram that was not bred at Diſhley [1]."

At Cotes bridge [2] near Loughborough, in Leiceſterſhire, ſome boys were leaping off the bridge. Amongſt the reſt was one Lumley; upon whoſe performance all the boys cried out, "Well leaped, Lumley!" At the ſame time a gentleman riding by, whoſe name was Lumley, called for the boy, aſked him diligently about his name, made him ſpell it and write it, when he found it was the very ſame with his own. He took him home, bred him up carefully, made him his heir; and from him comes the preſent family of the lord Lumley, made noble by king Charles II. in 1681, and earl of Scarborough by king William III. 1690 [3].

CHAPLAINS of COTES.

Ricardus de Monteſorelli, 1233.
Miles de Leiceſter, diaconus, 1288.

PATRONS.

William Frumentein.

Pedigree of SKIPWITH, of COTES. (From the Chetwynd MS. and the Engliſh Baronetage, I. 249. II. 352.)

John Skipwith, knight, temp. Edw. II. = ...

John.
Sir William Skipwith, knt. = Margaret, dau. and heir of Ralph de Ormeſby, co. Lincoln.

Sir Ralph Skipwith, knt. from whom deſcended the Skipwiths of Hever, co. Lincoln. = ... dau. and heir of . . . . Cotes, of Hever.
Sir William Skipwith, knt. judge of the Common Pleas, 34 Edw. II. and 11 Ric. II. = Alice, dau. and heir of William de Hiltoft, knt.

John Skipwith, of Calthorpe, co. Linc. knt. = Alice, dau. of Frederick Tilney, knt.

1. William, died without iſſue.
2. Patrick Skipwith, from whom the Skipwiths of Utterby. = ... dau. of . . . . Hawley.
Sir Thomas Skipwith, knt. d. before 19 H. VI. = Mary, dau. of Robert lord Willoughby.

Joan, dau. of Rob. Mortimer, knt. 1ſt wife = Will. Skipwith, knt. d. 1485. = Agnes Conſtable, of Burton Conſtable, 2d wife.

Sir John Markham, knt. = Alice.
John Skipwith, knt. = Katharine, dau. of Richard Fitz-Williams, of Wadworth.

Alice, dau. and coheir of Lionel Dimock, knt. ſecond wife. = William Skipwith, knt. of Ormeſby. = Elizabeth, dau. of William Terwhit, knt. firſt wife.

2. Lionel Skipwith, of Calthorp.
3. John.
4. George Skipwith, of Cotham.
5. Henry Skipwith, of Keythorpe, eſq. M.P. for Leiceſter 1585; died 1588. = Jane, dau. of Francis Hall, of Grantham, co. Linc. relict of Francis Nele, of Preſtwould and Cotes, died 1598.
1. William Skipwith, of Ormeſby, knt.

Jane, dau. of John Roberts, relict of John Markham, of Sidebrook, 2d wife, buried April 4, 1630. = 1. Sir William Skipwith, of Cotes, knt. M. P. for Leiceſter in 1604; died 1610. = Margaret, dau. of Roger Cave, of Stanford, co. Northampton, died 1594; firſt wife.
4. Henry Skipwith, gent. of Tugby and Knight Thorpe. = Joan, dau. of Leonard Aſton, of Longdon, co. Staff.
2. Francis, died at Cambr. ſ. p.
3. George, ſlain at Bommel in Holland at the age of 22, ſ. p.
1. Jane, wife of Will. Samwell, of Upton, co. Northampton.
2. Urſula, wife of Edward Ayſcough, of Nuns Cotham, co. Linc.
3. Margaret, wife of ſir Matthew Saunders, of Shankton.
4. Catharine, wife of ſir William Ayſcough, of Blithborough, co. Linc.
5. Dorothy, wife of John Woodward, of Butler's Marſton, co. Warwick.
6. Bridget, wife of Walter Ayſcough, brother of Edward Ayſcough, of Waſhingborough, co. Linc. knt.
7. Anne, wife of Hen. Smyth [4], of Withcock, co. Leic.
8. Alice died unmarried.
9. Elizabeth, wife of Tho. Harrington, of Boothby, co. Linc.

1. Thomas, died ſ. p.
2. Henry, died ſ. p.
Jane, dau. and heir, marr. Simon Rugeley, of Hawkeſhead, co. Staff. living 1692; ſold Knight Thorpe.

Amy, third dau. and coheir of ſir Thomas Kempe, of Kent, knt. firſt wife, died 1631. = 1. Sir Henry Skipwith, of Preſtwould and Cotes, knt. and bart. born 1589; living 1652. = Blandina, widow of John Acton, citizen of London.
2. George, b. 1591; died in Denmark, ſ. p.
4. Another ſon.
3. Thomas, born 1594. = . . . dau. of John Blewit, of Harlaxton, co. Lincoln.
Jane, wife of Geo. Throckmorton, ſon and heir of Geo. Throckmorton, of Fulbrook, co. Oxford, knt.
Anne, wife of Edw. Pate, ſon and heir of Hen. Pate, of Eye Kettleby, eſq.
Elizabeth, born 1592, wife of ſir John Pate, of Siſonby, bart. 1652, brother of Edward.
Another daughter.

1. William, b. 1693.
2. Henry.
3. John.
4. George.
A daughter.

1. William Skipwith, died unmarried before his father.
2. Sir Henry Skipwith, bart. died unmarried ſoon after his father.
3. Thomas, died ſ. p.
4. Sir Grey Skipwith, bart. went to Virginia. = ...
1. Elizabeth.
2. Diana.
3. Anne, married.

Sir William Skipwith, bart. reſided in Virginia, where he married, and in 1730 was about 60 years of age. = ...

Sir Grey Skipwith, bart. alſo reſided in Virginia. = ...
Seven other children.

Sir William Skipwith, bart. of Preſtwould in Virginia died in 1764. = ...

Sir Peyton Skipwith, bart. was living in Virginia in 1771.

---

[1] Leiceſter Journal, Nov. 1, 1799.

[2] Robert Townſend, a poor boy from Exeter, was blown by a guſt of wind from over a hedge into the river, and drowned, Aug. 4, 1506. See before, p. 357.

[3] Birch's MSS. (in the Britiſh Muſeum) 4460. p. 49; from Mr. Croſs of Loughborough; who ſays, it is a common tradition in that town. The antient barony of Lumley had become extinct in 1609; and was revived (1723) in Richard lord viſcount Lumley, father of Richard earl of Scarborough; which Richard was chief heir-male of the family after the deceaſe of John lord Lumley 1609, and inherited the greateſt part of the eſtate of his anceſtors by deed of ſettlement, and the laſt will and teſtament of the ſaid lord Lumley. He was created baron Lumley 1681. Collins's Peerage by Longmate, vol. IV. p. 131.

[4] Upon the death of ſir Thomas George Skipwith, of Newbold, co. Warwick, 1790, without iſſue, the title is ſuppoſed to go to this family. Gent. Mag. vol. LX. p. 766.

Skipwith, of Newbold Hall, co. Warwick.

This family, originally written Scbypwyc, and denominated from the town and lordſhip of Skipwith, in the Eaſt Riding of the county of York, is deſcended from Robert de Eſtouteville, baron of Cottingham, in the reign of William the Conqueror, of which Robert and his deſcendants, barons of Cottingham, ſir William Dugdale has largely treated in his Baronage.

Robert, ſon of the above-mentioned Robert, became poſſeſſed of a great inheritance by marriage with Eneburga, daughter and heir to Hugh, ſon of Baldric, a great Saxon thane; and, among other lands, had the lordſhip of Skipworth, (or Skipwic, as antiently written) in Yorkſhire; he left three ſons; from Robert the eldeſt deſcended the barons of Cottingham, whoſe male line terminated 17 Henry III.

From Oſmund, ſecond ſon, who died at Joppa in Paleſtine, the Eſtotevills of Greſſing Hall deſcended.

Patrick, the younger ſon, being poſſeſſed of the lordſhip of Skipwith by gift of his father, his deſcendants aſſumed their name from that town, according to the cuſtom of the age: by Beatrix his wife, daughter and heir of ſir Pagan de Langtun, he had a ſon Geoffrey, who ſucceeded to the ſaid lordſhip; who, by Mariana his wife, daughter and heir of William de Menithorp, had two ſons, Reginald and Gerard; which Reginald was an hoſtage to the king for the lord Scales in the barons' wars, 9 John; and his ſon and heir, ſir William de Skipwith, knt. lord of Skipwith, was living temp. Henry III.; and marrying Alice, daughter of ſir John, couſin and heir to ſir William Thorp, knts. became poſſeſſed of a great inheritance in the county of Lincoln, and was the laſt of the family that reſided at Skipwith.

Sir John de Skipwith, knt. his ſon and heir, reſiding at Thorp in Lincolnſhire, and from his habitation was ſometimes ſtyled de Thorp, poſſeſſed likewiſe the manor of Beakby in right of his mother; and having married Iſabel, daughter and heir of ſir Robert de Arches, knt. of Wranby in Lincoln, had alſo poſſeſſion of that manor and eſtate, and was ſucceeded therein by his ſon John de Skipwith, who reſided at Beakby, and increaſed his patrimony by marriage with Margaret daughter and coheir of Herbert de Flinton in Yorkſhire (by a daughter and coheir of Walter de la Lynde, lord of Laſeby in Lincolnſhire, and of Bulbrook in Suſſex, ſon of ſir Willlam de la Lynde, knt. ſeneſchal of the city of London, temp. Henry III.); by which wife he had iſſue William de Skipwith, who married Margaret, daughter of Ralph Fitz-Simon, lord of Ormeſby in Lincolnſhire, and ſiſter and ſole heir of Simon Fitz-Ralph, whereby this family became poſſeſſed of that inheritance which was the poſſeſſion of ſir Ralph Fitz-Simon, knt. temp. Henry III. who in ſeveral charters was termed Nobilis, and had obtained that manor by his wife, the daughter and heir of Ormeſby of Ormeſby. From this marriage with Margaret aforeſaid proceeded three ſons; 1. John Skipwith, eldeſt ſon and heir, who died without iſſue 10 Edward III. the ſame year wherein his father deceaſed; 2. ſir William Skipwith; 3. ſir Ralph, from whom deſcended the Skipwiths of Heburgh in Lincolnſhire, poſſeſſors of lands in Southliſton, Kernington, Heighburgh, Aleſby, and Laſeby, temp. Henry IV.

Sir William Skipwith before-mentioned ſucceeded his brother in his eſtate; and was brought up to the ſtudy of the law, and grew to great eminence therein. He was elected in 1355 one of the king's ſerjeants, conſtituted one of the judges of the King's bench 1359, and ſworn in Trinity term 1362 lord chief baron of the Exchequer, continuing therein till his death in 1366 [1]. He married Alice, ſole daughter and heir of ſir William de Hiltoft, lord of Ingoldmells, by Alice his wife, ſiſter and ſole heir of Ralph de Muer, lord of Calthrop and Covenham in Lincolnſhire, which ſir William de Hiltoft was ſon of another ſir William, by Agnes his wife, daughter to Thomas, and one of the ſiſters and coheirs of William de Munby, a family extracted from the houſe of Willoughby; for, ſir William Willoughby having two ſons, Robert and Thomas, by his wife, the heir of the baron Beke of Ereſby, Robert the eldeſt had the barony; and Thomas his brother, having married Margaret, ſiſter and coheir to Alun de Munby, William his ſon took the name of Munby; and dying without iſſue, ſir William Hiltoft before-mentioned, by marrying his ſiſter, became his heir. Sir William Skipwith had four ſons, William, John, Patrick, and Stephen; with two daughters, Alice, wife of Robert lord Willoughby, and Margaret, married to William Vavaſor, eſq.

William, the eldeſt ſon (whom Fuller calls "ſir William Skipwith, junior, inferior to the former in place) likewiſe ſtudied the law, and made ſuch proficiency therein, that he was conſtituted one of the juſtices of the common pleas 1376; and his patent was renewed 1378, when he was ſenior judge of that court, and acted therein with that candour and integrity, that his name is tranſmitted to poſterity by all our hiſtorians with great honour [2]. In the ſame year his patent was renewed he obtained free-warren of all his demeſnes at Ormeſby, Ingoldmells, Carleton, Covenham, and Bekeby; and in the eleventh of that reign had, at his own requeſt, a quietus from his office of juſtice.

The collar of S.S.S. (or Eſſes) as now worn by the judges, and other perſons of honour, wreathed into that form whence it receiveth its name chiefly from the initial letters of Sanctus Simon Simplicius, an uncorrupted judge in the primitive times [3], well ſuited this ſir William Skipwith; who died, full of honour, without iſſue male.

He married Catharine, daughter of .... Aſwordby; and had by her a daughter Elizabeth, who was married to George, ſtyled lord Monboucher, but had no iſſue.

John Skipwith, ſecond brother to the laſt ſir William, became now chief heir male, and reſided at Ormeſby. He was high-ſheriff of Lincolnſhire 18 Richard II.; and in parliament 12 Henry IV. ſerved the county as knight of the ſhire. He took to wife Alice, daughter of ſir Frederick Tilney, of Tilney, co. Norfolk, knight, and by her had three ſons; William, who died without iſſue; 2. Thomas; and 3. Patrick, from whom deſcended the Skipwiths of Utterby, co. Lincoln; and, by a younger ſon of that line, the Skipwiths of Shore-hall, co. Norfolk [4].

Thomas Skipwith, ſecond ſon and heir of John, ſucceeded to the eſtate in 1422; at which time he held lands at Skipwith, Merethorp, Wakesfee, and South Ormeſby; and was knighted in France in the reign of king Henry V. having greatly diſtinguiſhed himſelf in thoſe wars. It is ſuppoſed he lived ſome time at Hampſtead near London; for in a houſe on the right hand in that town are finely painted on glaſs the arms and portraitures of him and Margaret his wife, daughter to John baron Willoughby of Ereſby.

He was ſucceeded by his ſon and heir William in 19 Hen. VI, 1441; in which year, by the name of William Skipwith, ſon of Thomas, he is ſaid to be ſeiſed of Skipwith and Merethorp, co. Ebor.; South Ormeſby, Ketteleſby, Walmeſgate, Calthrop, Covenham, Garnethorp, Wargholme, Laceby, Caldale, and Somercotes, co. Lincoln. In 1447, the king granted to William Skipwith, then clerk of the extracts in the Exchequer, an annual penſion of £10. [5] He was knighted in France temp. Henry VI.; and was high-ſheriff of Lincolnſhire the 37th of that king's reign, and in the 4th of Edward IV. [6]; in the firſt year of which reign he was ſeneſchal of the demeſne of Borewell, in that county [7]; and was living in 1483, poſſeſſed of the advowſon of the church of St. Peter [8].

He married twice; but by his firſt wife Joan, daughter to ſir Roger Mortimer, knight, had no iſſue. By Agnes his ſecond wife, daughter to ſir John Conſtable, of Burton Conſtable in Holderneſs, co. York, knight, widow of ſir .... St. Quintin (who is alſo portrayed with her huſband in the windows of the aforeſaid houſe at Hampſtead) he had iſſue a ſon John, and a daughter Alice, wife of ſir John Markham, knt. This ſir William died in 1485.

---

[1] Fuller, in his Worthies, Lincolnſhire, p. 170, ſays, "I meet not with any thing memorable of him in our Engliſh Hiſtories; except this may paſs for a thing remarkable; that, at the importunity of John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaſter, this ſir William condemned William Wickham, biſhop of Wincheſter, of crimes rather powerfully objected than plainly proved againſt him; whereupon the Biſhop's temporals were taken from him, and he denied acceſs within 20 miles of the king's court." This interference of Skipwith does not appear in biſhop Lowth's account of this buſineſs. Life of Wickham, p. 128, 129.

[2] See before, p. 367.

[3] Fuller, ubi ſupra.

[4] Of whom ſee Blomefield, vol. IV. p. 114.

[5] Orig. 35 Hen. VI. Rot. 14.

[6] Clauſ. 19 Hen. VI. m. 27.

[7] Pat. 16 Edw. IV. m. 3.

[8] Pat. 1 Ric. III. m. 3.

John, his ſon and heir, ſtood firm to the intereſt of king Henry VII. againſt the Yorkiſts, and aſſiſted in defeating Perkin Warbeck; and when the lord Audley headed the Corniſh men, who had riſen under pretence of illegal taxes, and had marched through ſeveral counties into Kent, he was with the king when he gave them battle on Blackheath on the 17th of July, in the 12th year of his reign; and for his ſervice therein had the honour of being created a knight-banneret[1]. He married Catherine, daughter to Richard Fitz-Williams, of Wadſworth, eſq. by whom he had iſſue a ſon William, and four daughters; 1. Catharine, married to ſir Thomas Harnage, of Hampton, co. Lincoln, knt. mother to Elizabeth, wife of Charles the firſt baron Willoughby of Parham. 2. Mary, married to George Fitz-Williams, of Mablethorp; 3. Elizabeth, firſt married to Anthony Riggs; afterwards to Matthew Thimelby; 4. Margaret, wife to Richard Yarborough, eſq.

William, only ſon and heir, ſucceeded to the eſtate, and married, firſt, Elizabeth, daughter to ſir William Tirwhitt, of Kettleby, co. Lincoln, knight; ſecondly, Alice, daughter and heir to ſir Lionel Dymock, of Scrivelſby, co. Lincoln, knight. By his firſt lady he had four ſons; 1. ſir William; 2. Lyonel, from whom the Skipwiths of Calthorp deſcended; 3. John, of Walmſgate, whoſe ſon Lionel built the church at Walmſgate; but who died without iſſue male, leaving three daughters, Katharine, Margaret, and Urſula[2]; 4. George Skipwith, of Coles or Coleham. He had alſo four daughters; 1. Elizabeth, married to Thomas Clifford, of Brakenburgh, co. Lincoln; 2. Anne, wife of William Hattecliffe, of Hattecliffe, 36 Henry VIII; 3. Bridget, wife of —— Cave; and 4. Eleanor, married to Richard Bolles, of Boſton. By Alice his ſecond wife, he had iſſue Henry, anceſtor to ſir Henry Skipwith of Cotes and Preſtwould.

Sir William Skipwith, eldeſt ſon of ſir William, was high-ſheriff of Lincolnſhire 18 Henry VIII. and alſo in the laſt year of his reign, and in the firſt of Edward VI; was in the expedition againſt Scotland under the duke of Somerſet lord protector[3]; and in the great battle of Muſſelburgh, wherein 14,000 Scots were killed, and 1500 taken priſoners, with all their cannon and baggage; and for his ſervice therein was knighted, with many more, under the royal ſtandard, in the camp beſide Roqueſborough. In the 6th of Edward VI. he was choſen one of the knights of the ſhire for the county of Lincoln in the parliament then ſummoned to meet at Weſtminſter; and in the 4th of queen Elizabeth was again high-ſheriff for the county of Lincoln; and, departing this life, was buried in the chancel of the church of Ormeſby, March 7, 1587. He alſo married two wives. His firſt lady was Elizabeth, ſole daughter and heir to ſir Richard Page, of Beechwood, co. Herts, knt. by whom he had iſſue ſir Richard, hereafter mentioned, and divers daughters; viz. Frances, married, firſt, to Francis Conſtable, of Burſtwick, co. Ebor.; ſecondly, to Ralph Ellerker, of Riſby in that county; Anne, wife of Francis Carſey; Mabell, to Thomas Skipwith[4], of Utterby; Elizabeth, to Thomas Portington; Mary, to George Metham; and Margaret, to John Try, of Hardwick, co. Glouceſter, eſq. His ſecond wife was Anne, daughter to John Totheby, of Totheby, co. Lincoln, eſq. by whom he had a ſon Edward, of Beringworth, co. Lincoln, and a daughter Anne, married to Chriſtopher Banks. This Edward married Mary, daughter of ſir Richard Hanſard; and was progenitor to the Skipwiths of Grantham, and to ſir Thomas Skipwith, of Metheringham, co. Lincoln, knt. created a baronet in 1678.

Sir Richard Skipwith, of Ormeſby, knt. ſon and heir of ſir William, taking in marriage Mary, daughter to ſir Ralph Chamberlaine, of Gedding, co. Suffolk, had iſſue three ſons, William, Edward, and Henry; and two daughters; Catharine, married to Charles Ayſcough; and Suſan, to William Skipwith, of Utterby, eſq.

William, the eldeſt ſon, ſucceeded to the eſtate at Ormeſby, and married two wives; but had no iſſue male that ſurvived him.

Edward, the ſecond ſon, married Chriſtian, daughter to Robert Aſh, of Oughton, co. York. They had 5 ſons and 4 daughters; but this family is now extinct.

Henry Skipwith, eſq. third ſon of ſir Richard, had in marriage Margaret, daughter to Richard Fulwar, of Copwood, co. Suſſex; by whom he had iſſue Richard, Henry, William, and Edward; and, having rendered himſelf famous by ſeveral glorious actions, was buried in the church of Lambeth, in Surrey; where, on the North ſide of the altar, is a monument with the following arms and hiſtorical inſcription, much injured by time and the dampneſs of the wall:

1. Gules, four bars Argent, on a chief of the ſecond, a greyhound courant Sable.
2. Quarterly, Sable, a bend Argent and Or.
3. Argent, three bars Gules, each charged with five fleurs de lis Or.
4. Argent, two bars Gules within a bordure Sable.
5. Gules, three arches Argent, reſting on as many piers, with baſes and capitals Or.
6. Argent, a croſs engrailed Gules.
7. Azure, a lion rampant Argent.
8. Sable, three cheſs rooks Argent.
9. Or, a chevron Gules, between three fleurs de lis Vert.
10. Or, a fret of ten pieces Azure, on a canton a croſs patoncé Argent.
11. Argent, a falcon perching proper, armed, jeſſed, and belled Or.
12. Sable, a feſs between three ſwallows Argent.

"Here lieth the body of Henry Skipwith, eſq.
third ſon of ſir Richard Skipwith, knt.
which ſir Richard was chief of that antient family, denominated of the towne of Skipwith in Yorkſhire, the ould landes of Hugo, ſon of Baldrick, a great baron in his time, whoſe daughter and heir Eneburga was the wife of Robert de Estoteville, baron of Cottingham and Gnarſburge, and vicecomes Eboraci by inheritance, whoſe predeceſſors came in barons with the Conqueror, and were the greateſt lords in Yorkeſhire;
Patrick, ſecond ſon of this Robert de Estoteville, had,
by his mother Eneburga, given him the towne of Skipwithe, and therefore was ſurnamed Patricius de Skipwith in the time of king Henry the Firſt, ſince which time, in lineal deſcent, they have continued the name of Skipwith in an equeſtrious ſucceſſion, two of them having bin kts. bannerets, and matched with heires of very remarqueable families and great poſſeſſions bothe in Yorkſhire, their firſt ſeat, and by maridge with the heir of Skipwith in the countie of Yorke. They have bine linked and are nerely allied to many honorable houſes, as the erle of Howard, erle of Bathe, erle of Lindsey, and others. This Henry Skipwith was bred in the Netherlands, under that famous generall the ould lord Willoughby, and afterwardes went laſten into Irland, at the ſiege of Blackwater, where he did divers good ſervices upon the enemie, and at the ſiege of Kinſaile, where he ſlew a Spaniſh commander hand to hand.
He was lieutenant-colonel to the late erle of Totness, and at a ſalie by the Spaniards out of Kinſaile receiving a wound, and forcing the Spaniards out of a fort, for which ſingular deed, his generall, the then lord Montjoy, and his colonel, the then lord Carew, much graced him after that memorable ſiege, for his ſignal merit it pleaſed queene Elizabeth to give him the prime honor to build hir the fort of Caſtle-Purque, which commanded Kinſaile, where before he had won honor, ſhe gave him the conſtableſhip of that fort and the ward therein, which was confirmed by king James, who beſtowed a penſion on him,
having ſundry time modeſtly refuſed the order of knighthood. He was, for his wiſdom, made one of the councell of ſtate for the province of Munſter, being one of the oldeſt captaines in his time, who, continuing a penſioner to our moſt excellent king Charles, departed this mortal life March 7, anno D'ni 1630."

William, the third and only ſurviving ſon of this Henry, by Margaret his wife, daughter of Richard Fulwar as afore-mentioned, having married Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of Richard Reding, of Harrow on the Hill, co. Middleſex, with whom he had the manor of Dunington, co. Lincoln, had iſſue by her two ſons, Fulwar and William; alſo two daughters, Hen-

---

[1] Subnomina equitum in Bibl. Cotton.

[2] This appears in an inquiſition taken after the death of Margaret Skipwith, his widow, who died Nov. 1, 1565; Inq. 3 Nov. 7 Eliz.; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. III. (Harl. MSS. 758. p. 128.)

[3] Subnomina equitum in Bibl. Cotton.

[4] John Skipwith, of Utterby, died 6 Sept. 1593; leaving, by Mabel his wife, William his ſon and heir, æt. 18 years and 10 months. Inq. 16 Jan. 26 Eliz.; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. III. (Harl. MSS. 758.) p. 234.

rietta and Elizabeth. This William ſerved his majeſty king Charles I. in the civil wars, and was in the battle of Edgehill. He died in 1643, and was buried at Cranbourn, co. Dorſet.

Edward, the fourth ſon, was drowned in his voyage to Barbados Oct. 13, 1645. He married a niece of lord Strafford, lord lieutenant of Ireland, but had no iſſue.

Fulwar, eldeſt ſon and heir, born at Shacklewell, co. Middleſex, the 12th of September, 1628, having purchaſed ſeveral lordſhips and manors in the county of Warwick, made his chief reſidence at Newbould hall in the county aforeſaid, and was created a baronet 25 Jan. 22 Charles II, 1670. He married two wives: by the firſt, Dorothy, daughter of Thomas Parker, of Angleſey abbey, co. Cambridge, eſq. he had one ſon, Humberſton Skipwith, eſq.; ſhe died at Brome court Feb. 3, 1655, and was buried in the chancel at Bitford, and a fair monument is erected to her memory. By his ſecond lady, Elizabeth, daughter of Edward Skipwith, of Grantham, and widow of ſir George Coney, knt. he had no iſſue.

Humberſton, his only ſon, married Elizabeth, daughter and ſole heir of ſir George Coney, knt. by Elizabeth his father's ſecond wife, and died before his father, leaving iſſue ſir Fulwar, and Elizabeth his ſole daughter, married to William lord Craven, who left by her three ſons.

Sir Fulwar Skipwith, of Newbold Hall, ſucceeded his grandfather in dignity and eſtate. Having viſited moſt parts in England, he afterwards travelled through Holland, Flanders, France, Italy, and Germany. He was repreſentative in parliament for the city of Coventry 1713, and married Mary, daughter of ſir Francis Daſhwood, of Wycombe in Bucks, bart. by whom he had five ſons and three daughters; ſir Francis his ſucceſſor; Fulwar and William, who died infants; Fulwar-Humberſton; and George, who died Dec. 1729, æt. 11; Mary, who died an infant; Elizabeth and Mary. Sir Fulwar died at the Bath in May 1728 (and his lady in Auguſt 1738); and was ſucceeded in dignity and eſtate by his eldeſt ſon, Sir Francis Skipwith, bart. who married, in 1734, Urſula, youngeſt daughter of Thomas Cartwright, of Aynho in the county of Northampton, eſq. one of the knights of the ſhire for that county, by whom he hath iſſue three ſons, Thomas-George, Francis-William, both living in 1771; and Fulwar, who died in 1747.

Sir Francis had likewiſe a daughter, who lived but a few days. He died Dec. 6, 1778; and his lady in 1771.

Sir Thomas-George Skipwith, bart. was married at Marylebone, Sept. 13, 1785, to Selina daughter of the honourable George Shirley. He died at Margate 1790, aged 60, without iſſue; and the title is ſuppoſed to deſcend to the Preſtwould family in Virginia[1]. The following undated and unſigned letter, addreſſed to ſir Fulwar Skipwith, contains ſeveral particulars of the family:

"MOST HONOURED SIR,

"Monday, the 29th of September, I ſet out for Lincolnſhire; to Leiceſter 12 miles, to Melton Mowbray 10 miles, to Grantham 10 miles. I got there [to Ormeſby] by two o'clock. I went into the church; on the North ſide of which, in a chapel ſuppoſed to be built by the Skipwiths (the houſe belonging antiently to that family being juſt behind it), which hath been a burying-place for the family, is a large monument with iron rails, finely gilt and painted; and near it on one ſide, upon a large ſtone in the hall, is this inſcription:

"Edward Skipwith, eſq.
by death paid Nature's due the 24th day of May, 1666, ætatis . . . . (his age is left out).
He had iſſue,
by Elizabeth, daughter of ſir John Hatcher, knight,
Edward, Thomas, Elizabeth, Jane, John,
Mary, Henry, Charles, William, and Henry.
Elizabeth his wife died the 2d day of December, 1631.
Ecce, audi, cave; ille heri, ego hodie,
Tute cras[2]; vivens, mortuus, et ſepultus."

Mr. Hart hath this eſtate now, and buried his lady in this chapel about a year and a half ago; at which time the plaſter was taken off the rails, and they taken down to bring the corpſe into the chapel, the door being too little: and are now put up and plaſtered up again: for what reaſon they were plaſtered up, nobody can tell, unleſs it was to ſave them in the war-times.

Tueſday the 30th, I went by Lincoln, Ragby, Panton, and Belchworth, to Wormſgate, Careſby, and Ormeſby, 40 miles. When I came there, it was too late to go into the church that night; ſo I found out the curate, Mr. Dale, a very civil gentleman; and he helped me to the Regiſter; and by that I found your honour's family hath been poſſeſſed of the three towns of Warmſgate, Carſby, and Ormeſby, and ſeveral other towns thereabouts; for in the Regiſter I found a vaſt number of the Skipwiths of thoſe towns baptized, married, and buried, at the beginning of it.

The firſt I met with is William Skipwith, ſon of John, eſq. baptized in 1568. Sir William Skipwith buried Oct. 18, 1586. It would have been two or three days work to have taken all; ſo I took no more.

Wedneſday the 1ſt of October I went early in the morning into Ormeſby church. Over the chancel door, a great height, is nine large coats of arms painted; the middlemoſt is the Skipwiths (your honour's exactly) only; the other eight are the Skipwith's quartered with other families. Under theſe is a hatchment with twelve coats of arms of the Skipwith's quartered with other families; and two creſts. The right hand is the turnpike; and the left hand is the head and ſhoulders of a ſavage man (I ſuppoſe the Lindſeys) upon helmets.

At the bottom, upon gold gilt parchment, red letters, ſeveral places torn, is the following inſcription:

"Perenni memoriæ ſacrum.
Hic jacent reliquiæ Chriſtianæ Skipwith, conjugis Edwardi Skipwith, armigeri, filii ſecundi Ricardi Skipwith, de South Ormſby, militis.
Fuit una filiarum Roberti Aſke, de Aghton, in com. Ebor. arm.
antiquæ Aſkorum familiæ heredis primarii.
Vixit cum marito ſuo paucos quidem ſed religioſos annos, & ad ſexûs ſui decus caſtiſſimè ſimul & unanimitèr;
ex quo 5 filios, 4 filias, turbidulo hujus mundi æſtuario reliquit jactitandos;
in quorum tenerâ inſtitutione,
ipſa quidam incubuit gnaviter;
benigniſſimis erga proximos moribus, & celebri
erga totos Dei alumnos charitate ſanctiſſima.
quæ anno Salutis . . . . [torn, but ſuppoſe 1611], et ætatis ſuæ circiter 40°,
ad ſalutem æternam migravit, & terreſtre ſuum domicilium
hic ſepeliendum reliquit, donec per ſecundum Chriſti adventum reſuſcetur.
Poſuit gemebundus ejus conjux, E. S."

I got up, and nailed the hatchment up much ſtronger than it was before; for it was ready to fall.

In the chancel, leading up to the communion-table, is a black marble ſtone, 8 feet and a half long, and about 3 feet and a half broad, with the figures in braſs of a man and a woman; and at their feet, in the ſame metal, the figures of two girls and a boy entire; the ſtone hath a fine wrought braſs pillar all along both ſides; and, adjoining to thoſe pillars, over their heads, are two arches of braſs, richly wrought, ſteeple like, or pyramidical; and between them hath gone a piece of wrought braſs, with a globe on the top of it; and at their feet hath gone acroſs a large plain piece of braſs, but hath been pulled off, where I ſuppoſe hath been ſomething wrote. At the four corners of the ſtone is the Skipwith's arms entire; and others have been quartered with them, but have been pulled off, ſuppoſed to have been done in the civil wars.

Juſt under the communion-table, at the foot of this before-mentioned, and joining to it, is another marble ſtone, 15 feet long, and 3 broad, with the figure of a woman in braſs, like a nun's dreſs; and braſs hath gone all round the ſtone, where I believe hath been ſomething written, but is pulled off. At her feet is a greyhound, with a collar about his neck, with pearls like a crown." Theſe were all the obſervations I could make, though in the church four or five hours.

My lord Caſtleton lives at Mr. Magenbourg's houſe at Ormeſby, which he has taken for ſome time, and hath made a great deal of alteration; and one colonel Frangton that came with him lies at Careſby Houſe, there being nobody in it but a tenant. Mr. Gunſteild hath been dead theſe twelve months.

I came back on Wedneſday in the afternoon to Lincoln; and on Thurſday the 2d I came back by Newark all along the Foſs to Leiceſter; and yeſterday the 3d I came home about eleven o'clock."

---

[1] Gent. Mag. vol. LX. p. 766.

[2] He yeſterday, I to-day, thou thyſelf to-morrow. See Eccleſiaſticus, xxxviii. 22.

HOTON

H O T O N

is a conſiderable village on the great turnpike-road leading to Nottingham, about three miles from Loughborough, and near adjoining to Preſtwould, of which it is a hamlet.

In the general ſurvey, amongſt the "Land of the King's Servants," it is ſtated that Robert de Lorz[1] held of the king four ploughlands in Holetone; and that he had poſſeſſion by force[2]. Four ploughs had been employed there in the reign of the Confeſſor. At the ſurvey, there were two villans; and a meadow two furlongs long, and half a furlong broad[3]. The ſame Robert held two ploughlands in Wimondeſwell; and the two lands were worth ſeven ſhillings[4].

On the aid granted to king Henry III, in 1235, for marrying his ſiſter to the king of the Romans, one mark was paid for a knight's fee at Hoton, held by Richard Poutrell.

In the Teſta de Nevill, about 1240, it is ſtated that in Hocton-Putrell were four ploughlands[5], and four de feodo de Ferers.

Within this lordſhip Sampſon de Leke had one ploughland, and Ivo de Preſtwould half a ploughland.

In the ſame record, under the head, "De Serjantiis arrentatis per Robertum Paſſelewe, tempore regis Henrici filii regis Johannis," are theſe entries:

"In villâ de Houton, de dc̄â ſerjantiâ,

Hugo de Waleton tenet 8 bovat'.

Ivo de Preſtwold 4 bovat'.

Anketilus fil' Petri 2 bovat'.

Thom' de Putel' 4 bovat', unde Rad̄us de Bredon h̄t wardam.

It' Rad̄us de Bredon 4 bovat'.

It' Petrus fil' Wil̄li 2 bovat'.

Gilb̄tus de Seg̃ve 2 bovat'.

It' Joh̄es Karcolf 2 bovat'; p̃t' cujuſlibet bovate 5 s̃.

Ranulphus de Jorz tenet de ſerjantiâ d̄ni regis in villâ de Wymundewould & Houton 32 virgatas terre, unde idem Radulphus tenet unam virgatam terre in dominico.

Item Wil̄lus Warin de eâdem 1 virgatam.

Item Petrus de Nevill 3 acras.

Item Wic̄e Treget 1 bovatam.

Item Hugo filius Elye 1 bovatam.

Item Nicolaus Quenburc 5 bovatas.

Item Godefridus, Hugo, & Rogerus, 2 bovatas.

Robertus Gernun 1 bovatam.

Joh̄es de Pec 2 bovatas.

Petrus de Nevill 4 bovatas.

Galfridus Blundel 1 bovatam.

Alicia, Margeria, & Matilda, 1 virgatam.

Item Iſabella, Margeria, & Iſouda, 2 bovatas.

Thomas filius Thome 1 bovatam.

Robertus Arnold 6 bovatas.

Item Robertus de Jors 6 bovatas.

Item abbas de Gerenedon 3 culturas.

Stephanus Preſtold 2 acras.

Pretium cujuſlibet bovate 6 s̃. 8 d̄.; pretium cujuſlibet acre 5 d̄.[6]

In Houton & Wymundewald Wil̄lus de Jors tenet de ſerjanciâ cuſtiar' d̄ni regis Warg' 3 carucatas & dimidiam. Et due vidue ſunt dotate de terrâ illâ; ſcil̄t, Emma de Jors & Alicia de Berti; & valet terra 20 s̃. Et terra quam Wil̄ls de Jors tenet, qui eſt in cuſtodiâ Petri de Alakeſton, valet 24 s̃.[7]"

In 1270, Roger de Quincy earl of Winton died ſeiſed of half a knight's fee in Houton and Hautherne, value 2 marks a year; Eleanor de Vaus, relict of the ſaid earl, held the ſame moiety in dower; and Simon Mallore and Hugh Nantell held the ſame under her and the heirs of the earl[8].

Simon Malory poſſeſſed two carucates of land in this village in 1277[9].

In 1297, Edmund earl of Lancaſter, the king's brother, died ſeiſed of divers lands at Hoton[10].

In 1308, John Bardolf, at his death, held one meſſuage and half an acre of land, with the appurtenances, in Hoton, of Alice de Brayles; John Jorſe alſo held the land aforeſaid of the king in capite, with all his other lands and tenements, by the ſervice of finding one horſe, with a ſack and a ſpit (cum quodam ſacco & uno brochello[11]) in the wars of the king in Wales; and John Bardolf, his ſon and heir, was then aged 7[12].

In 1328, it was found that it would be no loſs to the king nor any other, if the king gave leave to Simon de Jorce of Wymundwold to enfeof Richard de Wyloughby and Iſabel his wife in one meſſuage and one carucate of land, with the appurtenances, in Wymundwold and Houton; and that the premiſes were held of the king by grand ſerjeanty; to wit, by the ſervice of finding the king, in his army in Wales, for the ſpace of 40 days, one horſe, cum capifero, pretii v s̃. & unum ſaccum cum prick', at their own expence[13].

In 1340, Henry de Beaumont earl of Boghan died ſeiſed of a moiety of one knight's fee in Hoton and Swineford, held of the king in capite, as of the right of Alice his wife[14].

In 1343, Ralph Baſſet of Drayton held, at his death, a moiety of one knight's fee in Cotes-Poutrell and Hoton, which John Poutrell, Henry Jurdon, William de Steyneſfeld, Robert Hatchebditch, and Letice Rous, held[15].

In 1346, John de Poutrell (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon,) was aſſeſſed 10*s.* for a quarter of a knight's fee in Howton and Cotes, parcel of the fee of Cheſter[16].

In 1390, Ralph Baſſet of Drayton, knt. died ſeiſed of one meſſuage and one virgate of land in Hoton, held of the duke of Lancaſter by ſuit of court twice a year[17].

In 1391, Robert de Swillington, knight, died ſeiſed of certain lands and tenements in Cotes and Hoton (value 36*s.* a year) held of the duke of Lancaſter, as of the honour of Lancaſter and Tickhull[18].

In 1396, John de Beaumont, knt. died ſeiſed of half a knight's fee in Hoghton and Swynford, which John Mallore ſome time held[19].

In 1589, Henry Skipwith, eſq. died ſeiſed of certain lands, meadows, and paſtures, in Preſtwold, Hoton, and Loughborough, held of the queen by the ſervice of a quarter of one knight's fee, and 1*d.* rent[20].

The freeholders at Hoton in 1630 were, John Burrowes, Thomas Berdall, Henry Whitworth, and Thomas Lacy.

In an act of parliament paſſed in 1759, for incloſing the open fields of Hoton, computed to contain about 1110 acres, Francis earl of Huntingdon is deſcribed as lord of the manor, and a proprietor of land in the ſaid fields; and Charles-James Packe, eſq. as impropriator of, and entitled to, both the great and ſmall tithes of every kind ariſing within the ſaid open fields, and a proprietor of a very conſiderable part of the land and ground therein; and Thomas Jones, Francis Winfield, Richard Bonſar, John Foulds, John Savage, and others, were the owners and proprietors, in different proportions, of the reſidue of the lands and grounds in the ſaid fields: The commiſſioners were directed to allot to Mr. Packe a full eighth part of the lands in the ſaid fields, as a recompence for all his great tithes within the ſaid fields, and a full ſixty-fourth part of the then reſidue of the lands in lieu of his ſmall tithes; ſuch allotments to be ſubject to the ſame ſort of taxes and payments as the great and ſmall tithes reſpectively had been ſubject to, and no other: To Francis earl of Huntingdon, his heirs and aſſigns, over and above the ſhare to be allotted to him in lieu of his land, ground, and common right in the ſaid fields, a proportionable quantity of the then reſidue of the lands intended to be incloſed, in ſatisfaction to him as lord of the manor of Hoton, and of the ſoil of and in the common or waſte land, and for his aſſent to the diviſion and incloſure: The then reſidue of the lands to be divided between the ſaid earl of Huntingdon, Charles-James Packe, Thomas Jones, and the reſt of the proprietors of the lands and grounds in the ſaid fields (excluſive of the ſaid earl in reſpect to his ſaid manor, and the ſaid Mr. Packe in reſpect to his ſaid great and ſmall tithes) in proportion to their ſeveral and reſpective ſhares and intereſt, and right of common, and other properties in, upon, and over, the fields intended to be incloſed. A modus of 1*s.* 8*d.* an acre to be paid to Mr. Packe for ſuch of the antient incloſures as were within the ring of the town of Hoton, and ſubject to the payment of great and ſmall tithes; and the great turnpike-road to Nottingham not to be diverted.

---

[1] Sic Orig.; ſed Qu. Jorz?

[2] This ſeems very ſtrange; and one would almoſt ſuſpect ſome error. But the original record is expreſsly ſo.

[3] "Robertus de Lorz tenet de rege 5 carucatas terræ in Holetone. Ibi 4 carucæ fuerunt. Ibi nunc 2 villani; & pratum 1 quarentena longitudinis, & dimidia quarentenæ latitudinis. Robertus vi poſſidet." Domeſday, fol. 236. b. 2.

[4] "Idem tenet 2 carucatas terræ in Wimondſwele. Iſtæ duæ terræ valent 7 ſolidos." Ibid.

[5] Teſta de Nevill, vol. I. p. xlvii.

[6] Ibid. p. lix.

[7] Ibid. p. li.

[8] Eſch. 55 Hen. III. N° 36. Leic.

[9] MS. Chetwynd.

[10] Eſch. 25 Edw. I. N° 51. Leic.

[11] This tenure is mentioned by Bracton, lib. ii. cap. 16. n. 6.

[12] Eſch. 2 Edw. II. N° 25. Leic.

[13] Inq. ad quod dampnum, 2 Edw. III. N° 86. Leic.

[14] Eſch. 14 Edw. III. N° 24. Leic.

[15] Eſch. 17 Edw. III. N° 59. Leic.

[16] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[17] Eſch. 14 Ric. II. N° 9. Leic.; ex Libro de Lovel.

[18] Eſch. 15 Ric. II. pars 1. N° 62.

[19] Eſch. 20 Ric. II. N° 14. Leic.

[20] Eſch. 3 April, 21 Eliz.

The whole lordſhip contains 1246 acres of land.

The regiſter only begins in 1723; and there appear to be about five baptiſms and three burials in a year.

The village contains about 70 dwellings; and in 1776, ſix perſons were maintained in the workhouſe at Hoton. Poor-rates, 2*s.* 6*d.* in the pound.

The following brief ſketch of a journey through Hoton to Leiceſter is at leaſt amuſing:

"Iter ad Leiceſtriam à Coſtock.

"Ven. Aug. 10. 1722. A Coſtock foribus ſylvianis ad finem vici Rempſton, 1 mil. 3 ſtad.; ad torrentem de Hoton in agris, ubi ingredimur arva Leiceſtriæ, 3 m. 1 ſt.

Hinc, per viculos (lanes) periculoſos & vicum de Hoton, ubi ædes Packe arm'; dein per pontem & juxta calcetum ſtratum longum, & per prata Soari fluvii ſolo glareoſo & ſabuloſo, ventum eſt ad eccleſiam de Loughborow, oppidi mercatorii ſpatioſi & pulchri, 5 m. 4 ſt. 20 p.

Alia eſt via brevior juxta ædes nitidas, & per fundos Louiſianos, ad eccleſiam de Stanford, 4 m. 20 p.; & indè per vadum Soari fluvii ad eandem eccleſiam de Loughborow, 5 m. 4 ſt. 18 p.

Ab eâ ad fanum Quarendon, 2 m. 6 ſt. 10 p.

In viciniâ ſiniſtrâ eſt vicus Barrow ſuper Soarum, cujus rectoriâ quondam uſufructus eſt ὁ ϖάνυ Beveregius, epiſcopus poſtea Aſaphenſis.

Hinc ad fanum de Montſorell, 1 m. 4 ſt. 21 p.

Hinc ad Rodely-odd-houſe, 1 m. 6 ſt. 25 p.

Hinc ad pontem de Belgrave, 3 m. 2 ſt. 23 p.

Hinc ad Leiceſtriæ urbem inſ. Gruis[1], 2 m. 1 ſt. 0 p.

Breviore viâ, Coſtock diſtat à Leiceſtriâ 17 m. 1 ſt. 17 p.

Longiore, addas 5 ſt. 32 p.

Via de Wanlip deflectit paulò in Rodely-odd-houſe. Eccleſia de Wanlip diſtat ab eccleſiâ de Loughburough 7 m. 5 ſt.

Hinc via per Thurmaſton & antiqua foſſata ad inſ. Gruis Leiceſtriæ, 4 m. 7 ſt."

The CHAPEL (ſee Plate XL.)

Hoton chapel was given, by Robert Poutrel of Cotes, to the priory of Bolington, co. Lincoln, at the time of his being received into their fraternity:

"Omnibus ſancte matris eccleſie filiis, tam preſentibus quàm futuris, Robertus Putrel de Cotes ſalutem. Notum ſit vobis me, aſſenſu & conſenſu ſponſe mee & heredum meorum, dediſſe, & cartâ meâ confirmâſſe, Deo & beate Marie, & ſanctimonialibus de Bolington, & fratribus earum clericis & laicis, eccleſiam de Houtunâ, & advocationem ejus, cum omnibus pertinentiis; ſcilt, in terris, decimis, & omnibus obventionibus, in puram & perpetuam eleemoſinam, ſicut aliqua eleemoſina liberiùs & quietiùs religioſis dare poteſt, pro ſalute meâ & ſponſe mee, & omnium meorum tam vivorum quàm defunctorum, ut proſit nobis ad perpetuam ſalutem. Ego verò & heredes mei warantizabimus eis prefatam eleemoſinam contra omnes homines pro animâ Henrici Putrel, & pro animâ Haldeburt uxoris ejus. Hiis teſtibus; Willo ſacerdote de Rande, Herbto capellano de Barkewood, Anketillo capellano de Preſtwold, Hugone capellano de Houton, Ivone de Preſtwold, Willo Hevui, Joſepho de Rande, Petro de Bucolun, Robto de Haneworth, Rado de Bolyngton. Hec carta facta eſt in capitulo ſanctimonialium quando predictus Robertus Putrel in fraternitatem ſuſceptus eſt[2]."

"Oct. 7, 1646. By virtue of an order of both houſes of parliament, of the 2d of May laſt, it is ordered that the yearly ſum of £50. be paid out of the impropriate rectory of Hoton, co. Leiceſter, ſequeſtered from ſir Henry Skipwith, knight and baronet, delinquent, to and for increaſe of the maintenance of the miniſter of the pariſh church of Hoton aforeſaid, over and above his uſual allowance of £5. a year; and the ſequeſtrators of the premiſſes are required to pay the ſame accordingly, at ſuch times and ſeaſons of the year as the profit ſhall grow due and payable[3].

"Nov. 28, 1648. Whereas this Committee have, the 7th of October, 1646, granted the yearly ſum of £50. out of the profits of the impropriate rectory of Hoton, co. Leiceſter, ſequeſtered from ſir Henry Skipwith, knight and baronet, delinquent, to and for increaſe of the maintenance of the miniſter of the pariſh-church of Hoton aforeſaid, over and above his uſual allowance of £5. a year; and complaint is made, that the ſaid miniſter cannot receive the fruit of the ſaid grant, upon pretence that the ſame is otherwiſe diſpoſed of by the Committee of the ſaid county; this Committee do notwithſtanding confirm their ſaid former order, and do require the ſequeſtrators of the premiſſes to pay the ſaid £50. unto the ſaid miniſter from time to time, together with arrears thereof hitherto due unto him.

"May 24, 1650. Whereas this Committee have, the 7th of October, 1646, granted the yearly ſum of £50. out of the profits of the impropriate rectory of Hoton, co. Leiceſter, ſequeſtered from ſir Henry Skipwith, knight and baronet, for increaſe of the maintenance of the miniſter of the pariſh-church of Hoton aforeſaid: It is ordered, that the tenants of the premiſſes do forthwith pay unto Mr. James Squire, preſent miniſter of the ſaid church, all arrears thereof to him due, according to the ſaid order in that behalf[4]."

Hoton chapel has lately been put into good repair. It conſiſts of a low embattled tower, in which are two bells; a nave, and chancel. It is neatly pewed; and has a good pulpit.

Divine ſervice is performed here only once in a year, on Low Sunday.

There is but one grave-ſtone within the chapel, for an infant, ſon of John and Elizabeth Budge, who died Oct. 17, 1737, in the firſt year of his age."

---

[1] Inſigne Gruis, the ſign of the Cranes, at Leiceſter.

[2] MS. Dodſworth, vol. XXX. fol. 81. b.

[3] From the original minute-books of the Committee of Sequeſtrations, preſerved in the Bodleian Library.

[4] Ibid.

QUENEBOROW,

antiently called Cuniburg, Quenborough, Queenborough, Queinborowe, Quenyborowe, is ſituated in a fine plain, continued about half a mile from the Melton turnpike-road. It is ſix miles from Leiceſter, and is bounded by Barkby, South Croxton, Syſton, Radcliffe, Rereſby, and a ſmall part of Gaddeſby; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote. The village is finely emboſomed amidſt lofty trees.

Cuniburg, conſiſting of nine ploughlands, was valued, in the reign of Edward the Confeſſor, at three pounds; and at the general ſurvey was worth four pounds, being then held by William under Goisfrid de Wirce. There were formerly eight ploughs; at the ſurvey, two were employed in the demeſne; and twenty-eight villans, with ſeven bordars, had ſeven ploughs. There were forty acres of meadow; and a mill of ten ſhillings value[1].

This lordſhip came ſoon after to Ralph de Queneburg, who was lord of it from 1154 to 1189; and gave the church and divers lands here to the abbey of Leiceſter; whoſe poſſeſſions are thus ſtated in their Regiſter:

"Habemus eccleſiam de Quenyboro in proprios uſus, cum decimis garbarum, feni, lini, & canabi, &c. ex dono Radi de Quenyboro, & ex confirmatione regis Henrici II, &c.; & ſolvimus capitulo Ebor' iiii marcas annuatim, ſicut patet in matriculo epiſcopi.

Et percipimus de vicario, nomine penſionis, xxxiiis̄. iiiid̄. per annum, ſicut patet in ordinatione ejus factâ per Hugonem ſecundum eccleſie Lincolnienſis epiſcopum, in hiis verbis: 'Vicarius in eccleſiâ de Queniburgh habebit, nomine vicarie ſue, in eâdem totum altaragium, & ſolvet abbati & conventui Leiceſtrie duas marcas & dimidiam per annum, & ſolvet ſynodalia.'

Memorandum, quòd iſta penſio recuperata fuit per placitum coràm judicibus ordinariis in eccleſiâ Sancti Martini Leiceſtrie, die Veneris proximâ poſt feſtum Sancti Marci Evangeliſte, anno Domini mcccxix, &c.

Habemus ibi decimam feni de hadys & leys; &c. pro decimâ feni de dominico, habemus unam placeam prati que vocatur Langedeles, continentem ii acras & iii rodas, eſtimatam ad iiii carectatas, que valent communibus annis vs̄.

Habemus ibi, pro decimâ feni villate, unam placeam prati vocat' Ferredoles, vel Tythemedowe, contin' vi acras eſtimatas ad viii carectatas, que valent communibus annis xs̄.

Et percipimus ibi medietatem decime lini & canabi ſeminatorum in campis, & vicarius aliam, per judicium.

Et habemus decimas ibi molendini ventritici.

Dona diverſorum, ſicut hìc patet per cartas eorum.

Habemus ibi, ex dono, conceſſione, & confirmatione Roberti de Curſon, militis, paſturam ad xii boves & vaccas, & iiii averia, in paſturâ domini que vocatur Rutholm, ſcilicet, quando dominus dictam paſturam cum averiis ſuis depaſcat; &, ſi dominus ad nocumentum dictam paſturam depaſcere voluerit, nos nichilominùs cum dictis animalibus noſtris depaſcemus, ſcilicet, ad craſtinum Inventionis Sancte Crucis, cum libero introïtu & exitu, ſine impedimento domini vel ſuorum. Eandem libertatem habemus in liberis hayis domini, ubicunque & quandocunque ſciti fuerint; & quàm tociès fenum in illâ placeâ que vocatur Lamare cariatum fuerit, liberè intrabimus dictam placeam, & eam cum dictis beſtiis noſtris depaſcemus; &, ſi dominus poſt falcationem feni & levationem in dictâ placeâ cum averiis ſuis eam depaſcere voluerit, nos ſtatim, unà cum ipſo, cum dictis beſtiis noſtris eam depaſcemus; &, ſi dominus eam falcare voluerit, ſive cum averiis ſuis depaſcere, nos ſtatim, unà cum ipſo, poſt Nativitatem Sancti Johannis Baptiſte, eam cum dictis beſtiis noſtris depaſcemus. Hanc libertatem paſture habemus; ſalvâ nobis communi paſturâ noſtrâ prehabitâ in eâdem villâ, &c. ut in primâ cartâ.

Habemus ibi, ex conceſſione abbatis & conventûs de Seleby, paſturam ad duo averia, ſcilt, ad duos boves vel vaccas, in liberis paſturis ſuis & hayis, ſcilt, in hiis in quibus habuimus paſturam ad xvi averia, &c. Pro hâc conceſſione nos remiſimus, conceſſimus, & in perpetuum quietum-clamavimus, Deo, &c. & monachis de Seleby, totum jus & clameum, & paſturam quam habuimus, &c. occaſione unius bovate terre quam Johannes Margeri tenuit, in omnibus liberis paſturis & hayis predictorum abbatis & conventus de Seleby; ſalvâ nobis communi paſturâ noſtrâ pertinente ad predictam bovatam terre extra liberas paſturas & hayas dictorum abbatis & conventûs de Seleby infra villam de Queniboro & extra, &c. ut in compoſitione.

Habemus, ex remiſſione, relaxatione, & quietâ clamatione Hugonis filii Roberti de Stanton, totum jus ſuum & clameum quod habuit, &c. in tribus acris prati quas habuimus ex dono & feoffamento Johannis de Bradwey, vicarii de Baro, & quas idem vicarius habuit de dono & feoffamento Ricardi de Stanton, avi ſui, &c. ut in cartâ ii^{a}.

Memorandum, quòd vicarius de Quenyboro habebit xiiiis̄. annuatim pro omnibus decimis vel fructibus, vel fructibus decimarum, de exitibus & proficubus manerii de Queniboro, ſicut per compoſitionem patet inter abbatem de Selby & vicarium de Quenyboro.

Memorandum, quòd Robertus Byrd, vicarius de Queniboro, dedit & conceſſit W. Aſton & Roberto filio Ricardi de Elmeleye i meſſuagium, & xs̄. annui redditûs exeuntis de uno meſſuagio & i bovatâ terre, &c. Item dedit eiſdem viiis̄. annui redditûs exeuntis de unâ bovatâ terre & de medietate unius acre prati, &c. Item dedit eiſdem i meſſuagium terre, cum pertinentiis, in eâdem villâ de Quenyboro, & ii dolas prati, cum pertinentiis, in Reriſby, &c. ut in cartâ iii^{a}.

Habemus eccleſiam de Queniboro, cum omnibus pertinentiis ſuis & libertatibus, &c. ex dono Radulfi de Queniboro, ut in cartâ v^{a}.

Memorandum, quòd Robertus de Folevil dedit & conceſſit, & quietum-clamavit, Emmam filiam Nigelli, nativam ſuam, cum totâ ſequelâ ſuâ, exceptis duobus parvulis, ſcilt, W. & Bartholomeo, & cum omnibus catallis ſuis, eccleſie beate Marie de Quenyboro, &c.

Habemus ibi, ex dono Roberti de Thorp, vicarii de Quenyboro, unam bovatam terre quam Robertus de Curſon, dominus de Quenyboro, ſibi dedit; illam, ſcilt, quam Johannes filius Margeri tenuit de dicto dño Roberto; cum tofto & crofto, cum omnibus libertatibus, & maximè in liberis hayis dicti dñi Roberti de Curſon, &c.; & cum predicto Johanne & totâ ſequelâ ſuâ, &c.; reddendo ſibi & heredibus i obolum, &c.

Memorandum, quòd, cùm controverſia mota fuit inter capitulum Eboracenſis eccleſie & abbatem & conventum Leyceſtrie ſuper eccleſiâ de Queniboro, amicabili compoſitione in hâc formâ ſopita quievit.—Robertus preſcripte Eboracenſis eccleſie decanus & ejuſdem loci capitulus conceſſerunt memoratam eccleſiam de Queniboro predictis canonicis Leyceſtrenſibus, de ſe in perpetuum tenenda, ſolvendo eis exindè annuatim iiii marcas argenti, &c. ut in cartâ vel compoſitione x^{a}.

Memorandum, quòd W. filius Rogeri Curſon remiſit & quietum-clamavit Roberto Byrd, vicario de Queniboro, totum jus & clameum quod habuit, &c. in uno meſſuagio & unâ virgatâ terre in Quenyboro, & in uno denariato annui redditûs exeuntis de predictis meſſuagio & virgatâ, &c. ut in cartâ xviii^{a}.

Edwardus rex, &c. Conceſſimus & licentiam dedimus Roberto Byrd, vicario de Quenyboro, quòd ipſe iiii meſſuagia, iii virgatas terre, & iiii acras prati, & unam rodam prati, cum pertinentiis, in Quenyboro, Belgrave, & Reriſby, dare poſſit & aſſignare cuidam capellano divina ibidem celebraturo, &c. ut in cartâ.

Edwardus rex, &c. Conceſſimus & licentiam dedimus W. de Aſton & Roberto filio Ricardi de Elmeley, quòd ipſi VI meſſuagia, LX acras terre, duas acras prati, & IIIs̄. cum pertinentiis, in Quenyboro, Burſtal, Belgrave, & Reriſby, dare poſſint & aſſignare abbati & conventui Leyceſtrie, &c. ut in cartâ.

---

[1] "Willielmus tenet de G[oisfrido] in Cuniburg 9 carucatas terræ. Ibi fuerunt 8 carucæ. In dominico ſunt 2; & 28 villani, cum 7 bordariis, habent 7 carucas. Ibi molinum de 10 ſolidis, & 40 acræ prati. Valuit 3 libras; modò 4 libras." Domeſday, fol. 235. b. 2.

Habemus ibidem patronatum cujuſdam cantarie, ex fundatione dicti Roberti Bryd, quondam vicarii de Quenyboro; pro quâ cantariâ in perpetuum obſervandâ & cuſtodiendâ, dedit nobis predictus Robertus III meſſuagia in villâ de Queniboro, II virgatas terre, cum pertinentiis, in campo de Quenyboro, & III acras & dimidiam & I rodam prati, in pratis de Reriſby, & dimidiam acram prati in pratis de Queniboro, III meſſuagia & II virgatas terre in Burſtall, I meſſuagium & I virgatam terre, cum pertinentiis, in Belgrave; unde nos conceſſimus per cartam noſtram, quòd dictus đnus Robertus habebit unum capellanum ſecularem in perpetuum in eccleſiâ parochiali de Quenyboro, per nos & ſucceſſores noſtros inveniendum, pro animâ dicti Roberti, &c. cotidiè celebraturum; ita tamen quòd dictus capellanus per nos & ſucceſſores noſtros ad dictam cantariam preficiatur; qui quidem capellanus à dictâ cantariâ nullatenùs amoveatur, niſi ex cauſâ legitimâ probatâ, ex quâ ſolent rectores & beneficiati a ſuis beneficiis amoveri, & ex cauſâ inferiùs deſignatâ; &, ſi contingat prefatum capellanum amoveri, alius loco illius per nos ſubrogabitur indilatè; dictus verò capellanus, cùm admiſſus fuerit ad dictam cantariam, juramentum preſtabit quòd dictam cantariam fidelitèr adimplebit quamdiù in dicto officio ſtabit; &, ſi contingat eum per III dies continuè ſuam miſſam differre abſque cauſâ rationabili, & ſuper hoc fuerit convictus, à dictâ cantariâ ſit eò ipſe privatus; & quòd fidelis erit nobis & monaſterio noſtro, &c.; &, ſi contingat nos vel ſucceſſores (quod abſit!) in inveniendâ predictâ cantariâ ultra menſem deficere quoviſmodo culpâ noſtrâ, &c. concedimus, ac bonâ fide promittimus, XLs̄. ſolvend' đno epiſcopo Lincolnienſi nomine pene, & XLs̄. đno archidiacono Leyceſtrie, &c. ut in cartâ.

Habemus cartam Henrici, permiſſione divinâ, Lincolnienſis epiſcopi, ad tranſmutandum cantariam Roberti Bryde de Queniboro ad abbathiam Leyceſtrie, ut patet in cartâ que eſt in libro de Chartwary poſt cartas villarum. Et ſic tranſmutata fuit multis annis; circa A. D. MCCCC. Summa totalis, LXIIIs̄. VIIIđ.

Reſolutiones; ſcil', eccleſie Eboracenſi IIIs̄. IIIIđ.; archidiacono Leyceſtrie, pro procuratione, VIIs̄. VIđ. ob. q̄.; abbati de Selby, IIđ. ob.; capellano cantarie totum redditum noſtrum illius ville, ſcilt, XIIs̄. VIIIđ.; & ultra illum redditum habet XXs̄. apud Segrave, & XXs̄. à celarario. Summa, CIIs̄. VIIIđ.[1]."

The abbot had two naives belonging to Queneborow; William Margery, dwelling at Whatborough, or Tilton; and Agnes Margery, dwelling at Coventry[2].

The cuſtoms of the abbot's tenants here were; that every bovate paid two hens on New-year's day, 20 eggs at Eaſter, and the uſual aid. The tenant, if he had a plough, was to uſe it for three days; or, if he had not a plough, was to join the abbot's ſervants for one day. He was to harrow one day in the winter, and one in Lent; ſarculare for one day; to mow for three days, one of which he was to cut at the abbot's coſt, the other two at his own; to make hay one day; to pay his proportionable aids, and alſo merchetam[3].

In the terrier referred to under Barkby, p. 45, Queneborow fills three pages.

On the aid granted to king Henry III. in 1235, towards the marrying of his ſiſter with the emperor of the Romans, Richard de Curzun paid two marks for one knight's fee.

In the Teſta de Nevill, Queneborow is deſcribed as conſiſting of eight ploughlands; and the following entry occurs: "in Queniburgh & Burton unū feodū quod Ricus le Curzun tenet de Rogero de Moubray."

Several virgates of land here were given by Richard de Curzun to the Knights Hoſpitallers of St. John of Jeruſalem[4].

In the Itinerary of 1280, Queneborow anſwered by itſelf as an entire vill.

In 1301, the abbot of Selby held a knight's fee in Queneborow of Roger de Mowbray, deceaſed[5]; and in this year king Edward I. granted liberty of free-warren to the abbot of Leiceſter for lands at Queneborow (inter alia), he being certified to hold them of the lord Mowbray by the ſervice of half a knight's fee[6].

In 1346, the abbot of [Selby] (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 20*s.* for half a knight's fee in Queneborow, and the prior of the Hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem in England, 12*d.* for a fortieth part of a knight's fee there, both parcel of the fee of Huntingdon; the maſter of the Hoſpital of Burton St. Lazarus, 16*d.* for a thirtieth part of a knight's fee; and the maſter of St. John's in Leiceſter, 16*d.* for the ſame portion of a knight's fee, both parcel of the honour of Tutbury[7].

In 1361, it was found that John de Mowbray lord of the iſle of Axeholme died ſeiſed of one knight's fee in Burton [St. Lazarus], Melton, and Queneborow, which the maſter of [the hoſpital of] Burton held; the moiety of one knight's fee in Queneborow, which the abbot of Leiceſter held; the moiety of one knight's fee in Stormeworth and Queneborow, which the prior of the hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem in England held; a quarter of a knight's fee in Queneborow and Thurſtington, which the maſter of [the hoſpital of] St. John of Leiceſter held; and one knight's fee in Queneborow and Burton, which Thomas de Curſon held[8].

In 1399, Thomas Mowbray, late duke of Norfolk, died ſeiſed of one knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Queneborow[9].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Queneborow was rated at 2*l.* 14*s.*; and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 5*s.*

In 1461, it was found that John Mowbray duke of Norfolk died ſeiſed of one knight's fee in Melton, Burton, and Queneborow, which the maſter of the hoſpital of Burton St. Lazarus held; of half a knight's fee in Stormeworth and Queneborow, which the prior of St. John of Jeruſalem in England held; of a quarter of one knight's fee in Queneborow and Thruſtington, which the maſter of the hoſpital of St. John in Leiceſter held; and of one knight's fee in Queneborow and Burton, which Thomas Curſon held[10].

Robert Billeſden, citizen and haberdaſher, ſon of Alexander Billeſden, of Queneborow, was lord-mayor of London in 1483.

In 1486, it was found that ..... Keble died ſeiſed of certain lands and tenements at Queneborow, and that they were held of the Prince[11].

In 1504, it was found that ..... Cotton died ſeiſed of certain lands and tenements in Queneborow; and that they were held of the lord Henry prince of Wales, as of his earldom of Cheſter and Huntingdon[12].

In 1564, there were 48 families in Queneborow.

In 1585, it was found that Henry Sacheverell, eſq. died ſeiſed of a moiety of divers manors, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, in Queneborow; and that they were held of the Queen, as of her honour of Tutbury[13].

This village was divided into two manors; one of which was held by the Curzons of Croxall, co. Derby, and afterwards came to Mr. Bennet, who was lord of it in 1642; the other, which had belonged to the abbey of Selby, co. York, (but by whoſe gift is unknown,) was paſſed in 1587, by Richard Branthwaite, eſq. and Roger Bromley, gent. to Francis Smith, whoſe deſcendant George Smith poſſeſſed it in 1642.

In 1595, Wyrley ſays, "Queneboro acknowledgeth for lord .... Smith, of Aſhbie Folvile, a man of great poſſeſſions by the matches of Folvile, Harevell, Woodford, and others."

In 1606, it was found that Francis Smyth, eſq. died ſeiſed of the manor of Queneborow; of a capital meſſuage there, parcel of that manor; of twelve virgates and a half of land, meadow, and paſture, one cloſe of paſture, and one cottage there; that they were held of the king in capite; that he died Sept. 3, in that year; and that George Smith of Brentingby, his ſon and heir, was, March 10, aged 29 years[14].

---

[1] Charyte's Rentale, fol. cxxi. a.—cxxii. b.
[2] Appendix to vol. I. p. 77.
[3] Ibid. p. 75.
[4] MS. in Offic. Armor.
[5] Eſch. 29 Edw. I. N° 47. Leic.
[6] Cart. 29 Edw. I. Rot. 29. m. 27.
[7] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.
[8] Eſch. 35 Edw. III. pars 2, N° 10.
[9] Eſch. 1 Hen. IV. N° 71. Leic.
[10] Eſch. 1 Edw. IV. N° 46. Leic.
[11] Eſch. 2 Hen. VII.
[12] Eſch. 20 Hen. VII.
[13] Eſch. 21 Aug. 21 Eliz.
[14] Eſch. at Leiceſter, 27 March, 4 Jac. I.

A daughter of Anthony Dormer, father of Rowland fourth lord Dormer, and ſecond ſon of Robert firſt lord Dormer, wedded to —— Smith of Queneborow[1].

George Smith held the manor in capite in 1612[2].

The freeholders in 1630 were, George Smith, eſq. Tho. Bennet, gent. William Thorpe, and Tho. Wilkinſon.

Prince Rupert's army was at Queneborow in 1642[3]; and, Aug. 4, 1652, the eſtate of George Smith of Queneborow was included in an act for ſale of eſtates forfeited to the commonwealth for treaſon, and to be ſold for the uſe of the navy.

Nov. 26, 1652, Ralph Atterton's eſtate here was alſo, for a ſimilar offence, forfeited for the ſame purpoſe.

In 1655, there was collected in Queneborow, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 8*s.* 7*d.*

A Terrar of all the Lands in the Manor of Queneborow, in the county of Leiceſter, belonging to Francis Smith, Eſq. Lord of the ſaid Manor, according as they were all in the occupation of divers tenants herein mentioned. Collected out of a Survey of the ſame Manor, taken anno Dñi 1704, per Johem Stanley ſuperviſorem. (96 folio pages[4].)

	a.	r.	p.
" Freehold land, glebe land, and the land called Church or Farm Land,	685	3	13
Common Cow-paſture, together with other parting or lot-graſs, —	316	2	21
Midſummer ground, that is, common, excepting about 6 weeks in 3 years,	18	3	28
Streets, lanes, ways, roads, and other commons herein, — —	28	0	37
Homeſteads and meadows,	132	2	18
Ley or graſs-ground,	184	2	34
Goſs-ground, —	92	0	34
Arable land, —	714	3	19

In 1722, fifteen freeholders polled from this pariſh; and in 1775, we find but five names.

John Darker, eſq. F. R. and A. S. S. lord of the manor of Queneborow, one of the repreſentatives in parliament for the borough of Leiceſter[5], and treaſurer of St. Bartholomew's hoſpital in London, died Feb. 8, 1784, ætat. 62; leaving two daughters; of whom one was married to ſir George-Auguſtus-William Shuckburgh, bart. M. P. for the county of Warwick, and died ſ. p.; the other, to Joſeph Naſh, eſq. a very conſiderable grocer in London (only ſon of alderman William Naſh) by whom ſhe has one daughter; and, ſecondly, Aug. 19, 1785, to Edward-Loveden Loveden, eſq. of Buſcot Park, Berks, M. P. for Abingdon.

In an act paſſed in 1793, for incloſing the open fields, meadows, and commonable grounds in Queneborough, containing together about 2200 acres, John-Peach Hungerford is deſcribed as lord of the manor, and conſequently ſeiſed of the waſtes and other commonable places, and alſo as owner of a conſiderable part of the lands in the common fields; Edward-Loveden Loveden, eſq. as owner of the rectory impropriate, entitled to all the great tithes (except from ſome portions which were tithe-free), and owner alſo of five yard-lands and a half of glebe, and patron of the vicarage; and John Simpſon, clerk, as vicar, entitled to all ſmall tithes, except in ſuch lands, &c. of Mr. Hungerford as had cuſtomarily been ſubject to a modus; and Robert Kilby, Anthony Kilby, Henry Kilby, Iſaac Kilby, John-Whattoff Cleever, William Biddles, Thomas While, and Stephen Bennet, gentlemen, with others, were proprietors of the remainder. After the proper proviſions for public and private roads, and for a convenient ſheepwaſh at ſome commodious part of one of the brooks running through the pariſh; three acres are directed to be allotted to Mr. Hungerford, in lieu of his intereſt in the waſte ground; and five acres to the ſurveyor of the highways for gravel-pits, &c. To Mr. Loveden, in lieu of his land, ſuch quantity of the common as ſhould be a full equivalent; and, as impropriator, the following proportions; in reſpect of The Corn Land Fields, two ninths; The Corn Clay Fields, one fifth; the Bornton cloſes and Bornton meadows (except three cloſes of Mr. Hungerford's, Hall Cloſe, Green Yard, and Lady Orchard, which were tithe-free), one ſeventh; the Tol Graſs Lands (excepting ſuch parts of Mr. Hungerford's as were tithe-free) one ſeventh; the commonable lands (after deducting his and Mr. Hungerford's allotments) one ſeventh; the Furze Lands (except 22 acres, one rood, and 10 perches of Mr. Hungerford's) one ſeventh; the Leys (except 78 acres and two roods of Mr. Hungerford's) one ſeventh; and from Mr. Hungerford's leys and furze lands, excepted above, one ninth. To the vicar, in lieu of all ſmall tithes, and of all moduſes except ſuch as are hereafter ſpecified, ſo much of the land allotted to Mr. Loveden (which was conſidered, in his allotment, to have received an equivalent for all vicarial tithes, as well as thoſe of the impropriator) as ſhould be worth £45. a year; and from Mr. Hungerford's allotment, in lieu of an old modus of 14*s.* a year, as much land as ſhould be worth an equal ſum; in lieu of tithes of old incloſure, land worth 2*l.* 6*s.* a year; and in lieu of tithes of the Low Meadows, land worth £2. a year: The remainder to be proportionably divided amongſt the other proprietors. Of the ſaid allotments to the vicar, land to the value of £15. to be laid as near to the vicarage as conveniently could be; and the remaining £35. a year to be veſted in Mr. Loveden as part of the rectory impropriate, chargeable with an annual rent of £35. to the vicar and his ſucceſſors for ever, ſubject to ſuch variation as may be occaſioned by a difference in the prices of corn. Surplice-fees and Eaſter-offerings are referred to the vicar. Proviſion is made for two ſeparate allotments in lieu of 36 acres of cow-paſture, which the poor of Queneborow had long been accuſtomed to enjoy to the no ſmall advantage of their families.

The oldeſt regiſter begins in 1573.

Baptiſms, 1573—1577, 63; 1785—1789, 54.
Burials, ——— 21; ——— 37.

Queneborow contains near 90 dwellings, moſt of them in a wide and long ſtreet, formed, as it appears, on a grand plan for a large town.

In the hall-houſe are theſe arms: A hind's head Azure, ducally gorged Or; Plate LIII. fig. 1.

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	7	4	7
Expended in county-rates, &c.	6	15	8
——— on the poor, ——	130	8	11
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	5	4	0
Litigations, — — —	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	186	17	9
——— 1784, —	208	2	10
——— 1785, —	179	0	3
Medium of theſe three years,	191	6	9
——— of county expences,	7	2	11
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of churches, roads, &c.	8	13	4
——— of nett annual expences,	175	10	6
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	0	10	8
——— of entertainments at meetings,	0	7	4
——— of law expences, —	1	5	10
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	6	4

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 51.

Mr. Monk, in his Agricultural Report, obſerves, " There are very few open fields in Leiceſterſhire; and thoſe few, in all probability, will be incloſed in the courſe of a very few years. It is the opinion of one of the firſt men in the county, that incloſing the open fields has advanced the rents all through the county upon an average as from eight to twenty. In many inſtances, it has been very great. Queniborough, which is now incloſing, has never netted more than 2*s.* 6*d.* per acre; and I heard the above gentleman ſay, he would with great pleaſure give, for ſeveral hundred acres of it, 25*s.* per acre, and be at the expence of incloſing, provided the proprietors would grant him a leaſe of 21 years. Tenants are partial to the incloſures, becauſe they are tithe-free (in all the new incloſures they throw a certain quantity of land in lieu of tithes), and they can cultivate their eſtates without fear of a drawback on that head; and another advantage is, their lying ſo very compact. The ſize of the new incloſures depends a great deal upon fancy, and the ſize of the farms. They run from 5 to 40 acres, but in general are from 7 to 10 or 12 acres. In the old incloſures they are of all ſizes, from the half-acre homeſtead up to 100 acres. It is the opinion of the beſt farmers, that from 8 to 12 acres is the beſt ſize, and the moſt convenient. Mr. Bakewell is certain, that 50 acres of paſture-ground, divided into five incloſures, will go as far in grazing cattle as 60 acres all in one piece: this was the opinion likewiſe of ſeveral capital graziers I converſed with on the ſubject. Waſte lands amount nearly to 20,000 acres, and the whole capable of conſiderable improvement; which, in their preſent ſtate, are of very little value, being depaſtured with a bad ſort of ſheep and ſome young cattle, unreſtrained as to quantity. The Woulds contain about 4000 acres of a cold dark-coloured clayey ſoil, capable of great improvement, if they were incloſed and properly ſoughed (drained). The principal proprietor is the Earl of Moira, who, I underſtand, is about to incloſe it very ſoon. There is very little waſte land, beſides the above, but what is in very ſmall pieces, ſome of which certainly might be very much improved by draining, &c.; but that muſt depend on the ſpirit of the proprietors. Some of the roads, being thrown out upon the incloſures 30 feet wider than is neceſſary, may almoſt be deemed waſte. It is true, the graſs is eat up by ſheep, &c. turned on for that purpoſe; but the value of it in its preſent ſtate is very little to what it would be if taken into the adjoining fields, and cultivated in a proper manner. It is, beſides, very inconvenient, and very unlike a good farmer, to have his cattle running about the high roads. Many ſcore acres (taking the country through) are waſted, owing to this ſlovenly practice [1]."

---

[1] Collins, ed. 1779, vol. VII. p. 68.

[2] See vol. I. p. cxxxiii.

[3] Throſby's Nottinghamſhire, p. 56.

[4] MS. Rawlinſon, unnumbered; but near the MS. marked "1347."

[5] His portrait is placed in the Town-hall amongſt the benefactors to the corporation.

On the ſubject of incloſures, it may be worth while to hear the opinion of a very able writer a little before the middle of the laſt century.

Dr. Fuller, in his "Holy State," deſcribing "a good Landlord," ſays, "He deteſts and abhors all incloſure with depopulation. And becauſe this may ſeem a matter of importance, we will break it into ſeveral propoſitions.—1. Incloſures may be made without depopulating. Infinity of examples ſhew this to be true. But depopulation hath caſt a ſlander on incloſure; which becauſe of this done with it, people ſuſpect it cannot be done without it.—2. Incloſure made without depopulating is injurious to none. I mean, if proportionable allotments be made to the poor for their commonage, and free and leaſeholders have a conſiderable ſhare with the lord of the manor.—3. Incloſure without depopulating is beneficial to private perſons. Thence have they moſt power and comfort to improve their own parts, and for the time and manner thereof may mould it to their own conveniency. The Monarch of one acre will make more profit thereof than he that hath his ſhare in forty in common.—4. Incloſure without depopulating is profitable to the Commonwealth. If injurious to no private perſon, and profitable to all, it muſt needs be beneficial to the Commonwealth, which is but the ſumma totalis of ſundry perſons, as ſeveral figures. Beſides, if a mathematician ſhould want the wood in the hedges, to what a mighty foreſt would it amount? This underwood ſerves for ſupplies to ſave timber from burning; otherwiſe our wooden walls in the water muſt have been ſent to the fire. Add to this, the ſtrength of our incloſed country againſt a foreign invaſion. Hedges and counter-hedges (having in number what they want in height and depth) ſerve for barricadoes, and will ſtick as bird lime on the wings of the horſe, and ſcotch the wheeling about of the foot. Small reſiſtance will make the enemy to earn every mile of ground as he marches. Object not, that incloſure deſtroys tillage, the ſtaff of a country; for it would not all be converted to paſturage. Cain and Abel may very well agree in the Commonwealth; the Ploughman and Shepherd part the incloſures betwixt them.—5. Incloſure with depopulation is a canker to the Commonwealth. It needs no proof: woeful experience ſhews how it unhouſes thouſands of people, till deſperate need thruſts them on to the gallows. Long ſince had this land been ſick of a pleuriſy, if not let blood in their Weſtern Plantations.—5. Incloſure with depopulation endamageth the parties themſelves. 'Tis a paradox, and yet a truth, that reaſon ſhews ſuch incloſures to be gainful, and experience points them to be loſs to the makers. It may be, becauſe God being φιλάνθρωπος, a lover of man, mankind, and mens ſociety, and having ſaid to them, multiply and increaſe, counts it an affront unto him, that men depopulate, and whereas bees daily ſwarm, men make the hives fewer. The margin ſhall direct to the Author [2] that counts eleven manors in Northamptonſhire thus incloſed; which towns have vomited out (to uſe his own expreſſion) and unburthened themſelves of their former deſolating and depopulating owners, and I think of their poſterity [3]."

About 1760, when many incloſures took place in Leiceſterſhire, the common cry was, that to be ſure ſheep ſold tolerably well, becauſe ſo many were wanted for the new incloſures; but when they were completed, and began to ſell off this increaſed ſtock, mutton would be a drug from its plenty. But has this been the caſe? has not the price increaſed regularly? Is it not now twice, if not nearly thrice, as dear as it was then? Whereas corn, ſince that time, has not been unreaſonably dear, except in very unfavourable harveſts; and ſometimes very cheap, as in the beginning of 1799. What may we fairly ſuppoſe would have been the price of mutton now, if this general incloſing had not taken place? It is much that a thing practiſed on ſo large a ſcale, and for ſo long a time, cannot be determined for certain to be right or wrong. Whether the uſe of tea be injurious to health or not, is by no means ſettled. Corn may be imported; cattle, which are equally neceſſary to life, cannot; hence a proviſion of the latter ſeems abſolutely neceſſary. Ships perhaps might be found to import grain in ſufficient quantity; but what number would be required to furniſh Smithfield twice a week with the preſent quantity of cattle? Add to this, the prodigious quantity ſlaughtered in all the great cities, towns, &c. all over the iſland.

The CHURCH (ſee Plate LIII.)

dedicated to St. Mary, conſiſts of an embattled tower of foreſt ſtone (in which are four bells); a very handſome, tapering, crocketed ſpire of wrought ſtone; a South porch; chancel, nave, and two ailes ſeparated by four arches ſurmounted by clereſtory windows.

On the South ſide of the tower is a clock, as ſhewn in the plate.

Mr. Burton notices three coats here, fig. 2—4:

1. Gules, a cinquefoil Ermine, the old earls of Leiceſter.
2. Sable, a lion rampant Argent, crowned Or, Segrave.
3. Sable, three ſwans within a border Argent.

---

[1] Monk's Agricultural Report, p. 45.

[2] "I could deſcend to our own times, and our fathers, and ſhew you how God's curſe hath lighted upon the principal actors in this truculent and tyranniſing tragedy. I have a catalogue of many in this kind; as, C. incloſed by M. R.; K. incloſed by S. R. O.; the two R. and H. incloſed by S. F. F.; W. incloſed by S. E. A.; H. incloſed by M. S.; C. incloſed by M. E. B. and M. E. D.; P. incloſed by S. E. I.; V. incloſed by S. R. W.; W. by M. L.; H. incloſed by M. A; L. incloſed by M. K.; and others; but I ſpare to name them: which towns have vomited out and unburdened themſelves of their former deſolating and depopulating owners." Mr. Joſeph Bentham's "Chriſtian Conflict, preached at ſeveral Lectures, 1635," 4to, (Bibl. Bodl. 4to, J. 21. Th.) p. 322. Whence Fuller gathered they were Northamptonſhire towns does not appear. They are not ſo called by Bentham; who was, however, 40 years rector of Broughton in that county; where he has this conciſe epitaph: "Hic jacet Joſephus Bentham, Boltoni tam artibus quam moribus ſucceſſor; bonis operibus dives, febre attritus, annorum ſatur, placidè in Domino obdormivit, 16 Apr. anno Domini 1671, æt. 77."

[3] Holy State, 1648, Book II. chap. 13. p. 99.

In this church is a piſcina, fig. 5; and an old round font, with a kneeling-ſtep, fig. 6.

This church was appropriated to the abbey of Leiceſter by Ralph de Queniburgh, and confirmed by king Henry II, paying four marks to the chapter of York.

In the Matriculus of 1220[1], Queneborow is thus deſcribed: "Eccleſie de Queniburgh patronus abbas de Leiceſtriâ, habens eam in proprios uſus, & ſolvens capitulo Ebor' quatuor marcas ab antiquo; Robertus vicarius," &c.

In 1344, the procurations were, 7*s.* 6¼*d.*; the rectory was taxed at 24 marks and a half, and paid 2*s.* 6*d.* for Peter-pence. The abbot of Leiceſter held it to his own uſe, and had alſo a penſion from it of 2*s.* 6*d.*

Robert Bird, vicar of Queneborow, founded and endowed a chantry here, in patronage of the abbot and convent of Leiceſter, for a ſecular prieſt to ſing maſs at St. Nicholas's altar, within the pariſh-church of Queneborow, and to pray for the founder's ſoul; which ſaid chantry was in the king's majeſty's gift; its yearly value, in 1546, being 5*l.* 5*s.*[2]

In the reign of king Richard II. the abbot of Leiceſter, by a regular judgement in law, recovered the advowſon of this church from the abbot of Selby in Yorkſhire[3].

In 1534-5, the ſynodals were 2*s.* 6*d.*; and the value of the vicarage £4.

In 1641, the daughter and heir of Thomas Cave, gent. who was then married to one Robert Page, a lawyer, had the patronage of this church[4].

"Oct. 7, 1646. By virtue of an order of both Houſes of Parliament, of the 2d of May laſt, it is ordered that the yearly ſum of £50. be allowed and paid out of the tithes and profits of the impropriate rectory of Queneborow, ſequeſtered from Alexander Lowen, delinquent, to and for increaſe of the maintenance of ſuch miniſter as this Committee ſhall approve of to officiate the cure of the pariſh-church of Aſhby de la Zouch, the vicarage whereof is worth but £30. a year; and the ſequeſtrators of the premiſſes are required to allow and pay the ſame accordingly, at ſuch times and ſeaſons of the year as the ſaid tithes and profits ſhall grow due and payable.

"March 22, 1647. Whereas it appears, by order of the Committee of Lords and Commons for Sequeſtrations, of the 20th of October laſt, that the ſequeſtration of the eſtate of Alexander Lowen, eſq. is taken off: It is therefore ordered, that the ſeveral augmentations granted out of the impropriate rectory of Queneborow, ſequeſtered from the ſaid Mr. Lowen, to the ſeveral churches of Aſhby de la Zouch and Harborow, be diſcharged, unleſs the miniſters or pariſhioners of the ſaid ſeveral pariſhes ſhew good cauſe to the contrary, before this Committee, on the 20th day of April next[5]."

In 1650, Queneborow was returned as an impropriation; the rectory worth £100. the vicage £16; and the incumbent as "ſufficient."

In the king's books, Queneborow is entered as a diſcharged living, worth "in decimis majoribus & minutis, cum manſo, terr' gleb', & aliis proficuis, communibus annis," £8.

The epiſcopal procurations are, for the rectory 2*s.* 4*d.* the vicarage 1*s.* 8*d.*; the archidiaconal 3*s.* 6*d.*

VICARS.	PATRONS.
Robert, 1220.	Abbot and convent of Leiceſter.
Walter de Enderbie, 1238.
Robert de Lutheburgh, 1241.
John de Brakkele, 1274.
Robert de Thorpe, ...
Robert Byrd, 14 . . .
William Townſhend reſigned 1439; by exchange with John Smith[6], Feb. 24, 1439.
William Noble[7], M.A. June 25, 1636; died Oct. 1644.	The King, "ad noſtram præſentationem, per lapſum temporis, ſive per pravitatem ſimoniæ, hâc vice ſpectante."
Francis Squire[8], 1640.	Alexander Lowen, eſq.
John Frank, Aug. 21, 1680.	Dorothy Wrighte, widow.
Joſeph Pagett, May 28, 1716.	Nathan Wrighte, clerk.
Thomas Bradbury, June 17, 1724.	Hon. Anne Wrighte.
Samuel Belton, June 1, 1746.	Marſh Dickinſon, gent.
John Simpſon, Oct. 15, 1767.	John Darker, eſq.
George Foxton, Sept. 5, 1797.	Edward-Loveden Loveden, eſq.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

In the chancel.

On the South ſide, on a braſs plate againſt the wall; fig. 7:

MARGARET BVRY, THE WIFE OF GILBERT BVRY, GENT. AND DAVGHTER OF ANTHONY CAVE, ESQ. BEING STEDFAST IN FAITH, JOYFVL THROVGH HOPE, AND ABOVNDING IN DEEDS OF CHARITY, DEPARTED THIS LIFE THE 20TH OF OCTOBER, 1633."

A Lady is repreſented in a ruff, with a flower in her left hand, her right under her head, reſting on a ſtone inſcribed JACOB'S STONE. On the part neareſt her is written CHRIST. From the ſtone riſes a ladder reſting in the clouds; on the top of which is a figure with a palm-branch, whoſe head is environed with ſtars; and above, in the clouds, is written, The Land of the Living. From the top of the canopy are ſuſpended two ſhields; in the baſe of which are, 1. Ermine, on a bend engrailed Azure, three fleurs de lis Or, Bury; impaling, Azure, fretty of ten pieces Argent, Cave. 2. Cave; impaling, Ermine, on a bend Sable, three whales' heads eraſed Argent.

Above the canopy are two angels in the clouds, each with a trumpet in his mouth; from the firſt of which iſſues,

The memorial of the juſt is bleſſed, and endureth for ever.

From the other,

Bleſſed are the dead which die in the Lord; for, they reſt from their labours.

The canopy is ſupported by five pillars; on the capital of the firſt of which is inſcribed FIDES, and about one third down the pillar is repreſented an eye; on the ſecond pillar in the front is CARITAS; on the third, SPES; this pillar is encircled with a cable and anchor. On the two pillars in the back-ground are PIETAS and VIRTUS.

Above theſe, on a ſcroll, Vivit poſt funera Virtus.

And under the figure of the lady:

HERE VNDER LYES A BODY BALM'D IN TEARS;
HER SOULE HIGH MOVNTED FAR ABOVE THE SPHEARS.
HER RADICATED FAITH DID DAYELY SHINE;
FOR, SHE DID FAITH WITH CHARITY COMBINE;

---

[1] See the Introductory Volume, p. lix. [2] Certif. Coll. & Cantar. Offic. Augm. [3] Burton, MS. [4] Ibid.

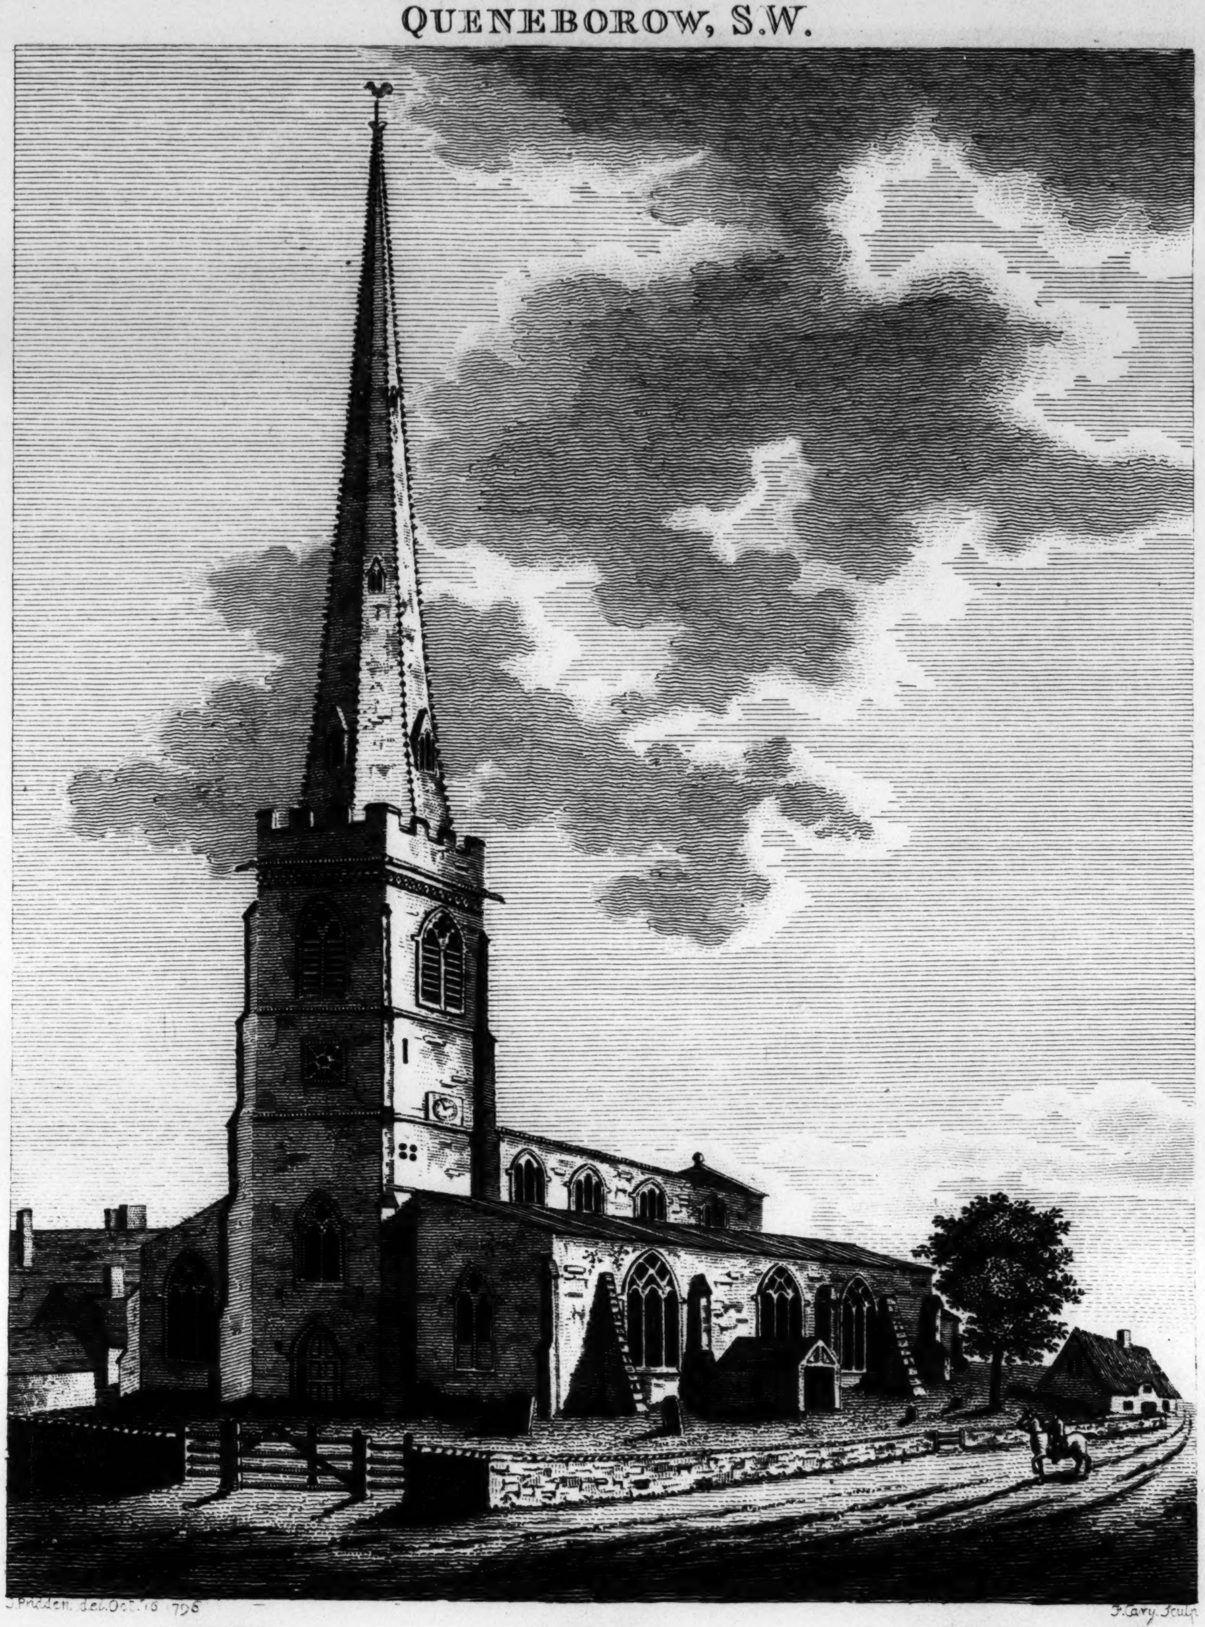
[5] From the original minute-books of the Committee of Sequeſtrations, preſerved in the Bodleian Library.

[6] "Joh'es Smyth, præſentatus per abbatem & conventum beatæ Mariæ Leyc' ad vicariam de Quenyngburgh, per reſignationem domini Willielmi Townſhend, ex cauſâ permutationis de ipſâ cum vicariâ eccleſiæ de Bryklesworth, Feb. 24, 1439."

[7] Rymer, vol. XX, p. 135; from Pat. 12 Car. I.; and ſee Walker, p. 319. He was alſo rector of Brokeſby; and was buried at Purley, in the county of Berks. See p. 196.

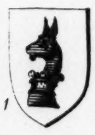
[8] Walker, p. 366, ſays, "I have ſome reaſon to fear, that he was a man of no good life; but quære of that matter. One of his name was B. A. of Trinity College, Cambridge, 1639."

QUENEBOROW, S.W.

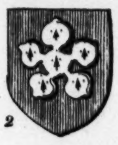


J. Pridden. del. Oct. 16 1798

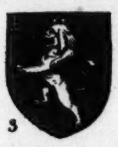
J. Cary. Sculp.



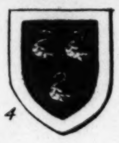
1



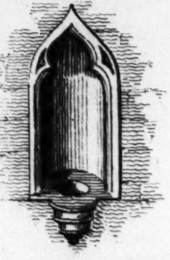
2



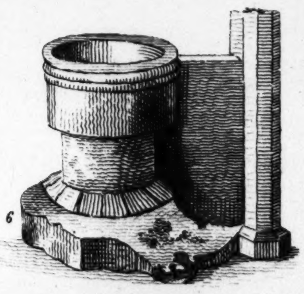
3



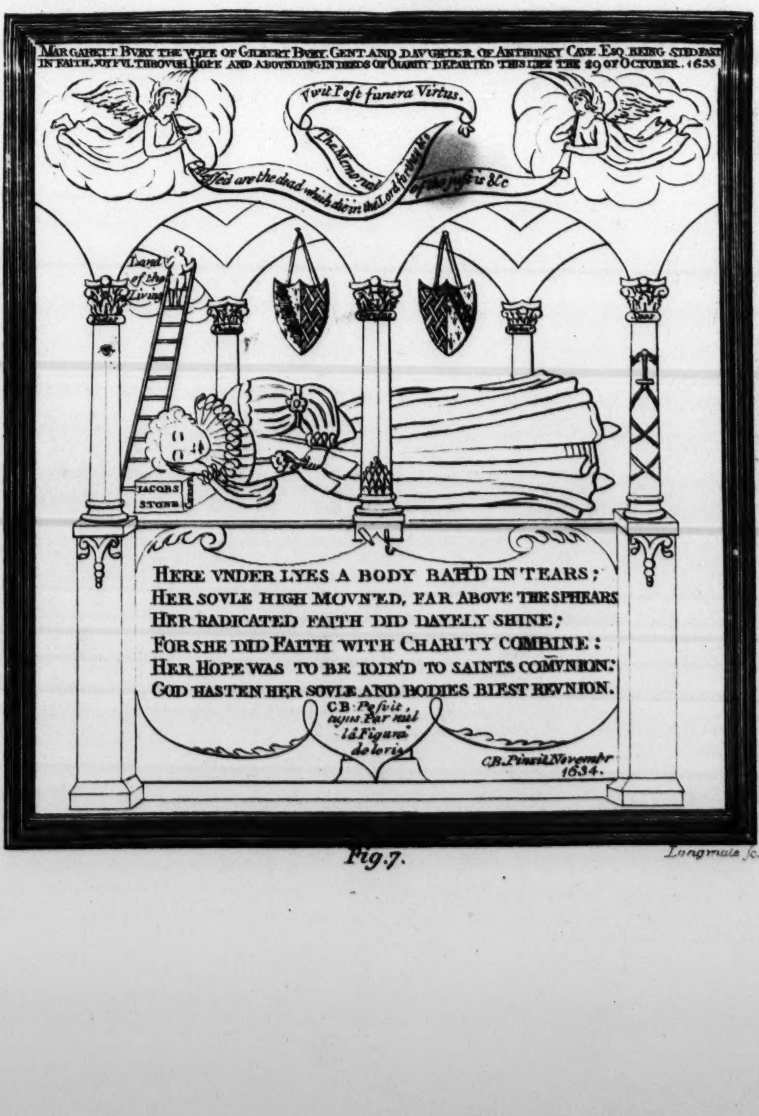
4



5



6



MARGARETT BURY THE WIFE OF GILBERT BURY, GENT. AND DAUGHTER OF ANTHONEY CAVE ESQ. BEING STEDFAST
IN FAITH, JOYFUL THROUGH HOPE AND ABOUNDING IN DEEDS OF CHARITY DEPARTED THIS LIFE THE 29 OF OCTOBER. 1633
Vivit Post funera Virtus.
The Memorial of the just is &c
Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord for they &c Land of the Living
IACOBS STONE
HERE VNDER LYES A BODY BATHD IN TEARS;
HER SOVLE HIGH MOVN'ED, FAR ABOVE THE SPHEARS
HER RADICATED FAITH DID DAYELY SHINE;
FOR SHE DID FAITH WITH CHARITY COMBINE:
HER HOPE WAS TO BE IOIN'D TO SAINTS COMVNION:
GOD HASTEN HER SOVLE AND BODIES BLEST REVNION.
CB Posuit, cujus Par nulla Figura doloris
CB Pinxit Novembr 1634.

Fig. 7.

Longmate sc.

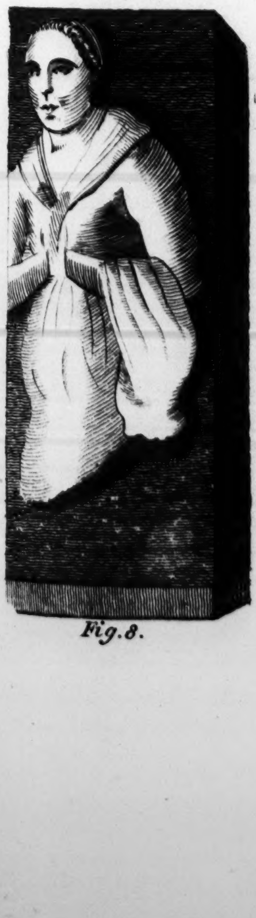

Fig. 8.

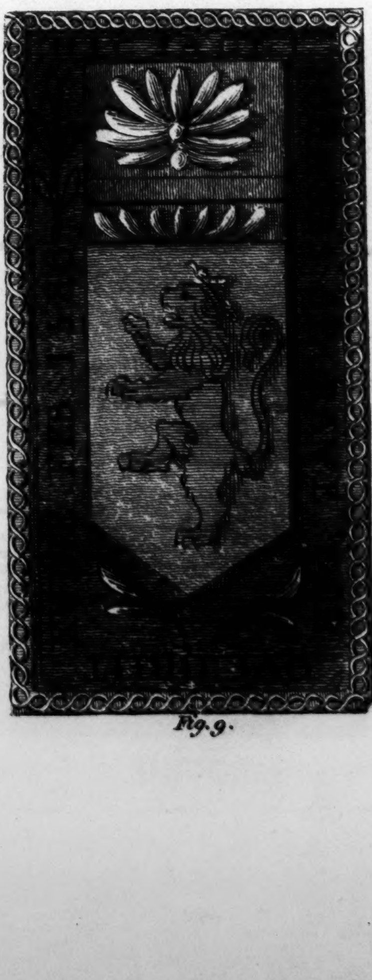

Fig. 9.

HER HOPE WAS TO BE JOIN'D TO SAINTS' COM̃UNION:
GOD HASTEN HER SOULE AND BODIE'S BLEST REUNION!

G. B. poſuit;
cujus par nulla figura dolore.
C. B. pinxit, Novemb. 1634."

On flat ſtones:

1. "Here lieth the body
of John Parker,
y^{e} ſon of John Parker,
of Hartſhill-hall, in the county of Warwick,
gent. who married
Elizabeth, the daughter of the Reverend
Mr. John Frank,
y^{n} miniſter of y^{t} town.
He died Oct. 30,
1711, in the 3^{d} year of his age."

2. "Joſeph, ſon of the
Rev. John Pagett,
by Elizabeth his wife, died
February the 4th, 1719,
aged 4 years.
Alſo
Anne, daughter of the ſaid John and Elizabeth Pagett, who died September the 20th, 1733, aged 15 years."

3. "Here lieth the body of Catharine,
wife of Dallington Ayres, goldſmith, London, and daughter of Capt. Watts.
She died
September 12, 1739, aged 74."

4. "In hopes of a joyful reſurrection,
here lie interred the remains of William Coleman,
ſon of William Coleman,
of Stretton Parva, by Eliz. his wife.
He was married to Anne Kilby, daughter of Anthony Kilby,
of Queneborough, by Eliz.
his wife;
and departed this life Auguſt
XIX, MDCCLXXXIII, in the 54th year of his age."

In the wall of the North aile is the fragment of the figure of an eccleſiaſtic (fig. 8); which may, with ſome probability, be aſcribed to Robert Byrd, who founded the chantry in this church.

On a ſtone faſtened to a pillar at the end of the North aile near the pulpit is a lion rampant (fig. 9); and round the ledge, (now hid by white-waſhing),
"HIC IACET
IOHANNES SEGRAVE,
QUI OBIIT
XV DIE FEB. 1586."

On flat ſtones in the North aile.

"Here lieth interred the body of William Tyers, gent.
the only ſon of John Tyers, gent. by Mary his wife; who departed this life the 5th day of December, in the 35th year of his age, 1723."

"In hopes of a joyful reſurrection, here lieth interred the body of Mary,
the daughter of John Tyers, gent. and Mary his wife.
She was married to John Parlby, gent.
of Rearſby near this place;
whom ſhe ſurvived;
and departed this life the firſt day of February,
in the year of our Lord 1750, aged 63."

"Here lies the body of Martha, onely daughter of Richard Rawſon, gent. and Martha his wife, firſt married to Thomas
Nevinſon, eſq. of Eſtrey in Kent, afterwards to Thomas Bennet of this towne, gent.;
whoſe death was even her death, ſhe not ſurviving him 11 months. She was the mother of nine children. She lived a virtuous and pious life, endowed with beauty both of body and minde; and died about the LXII yeare of her age, December IX, 1668."

On flat ſtones in the South aile.

"Here lieth the body of Mary Tyers,
the wife of John Tyers, daughter of John Hallam, gent.;
who departed this life July 10, 1733,
in the 68th year of her age."

"Here lieth the body of John Tyers, of Queniborough, gent. who was eldeſt ſon of William Tyers of Twyford, by Mary his wife; and was married to Mary Hallam, daughter of John Hallam, of Queniborough, gent. by Anne his wife.
He departed this life June 17, 1717,
in the 54th year of his age."

In the church-yard.

"Beneath are conſigned to Earth's reſt
the remains of John While, late of Burſtall, gent.; in whom were united an inflexible integrity and rational devotion.
After a ſeries of declining health, ſupported by the conſolation of Religion,
he died the 15th of January, 1795,
in the 93d year of his age."

Thomas Kilby, 17 Sept. 1761, aged 90.
Richard Kilby, 5 Feb. 1793, aged 73.
{Thomas Johnſon, Sept. 14, 1775, aged 80.
{Mary Johnſon, 13 Feb. 1780, aged 86.

Pedigree of WILEMAN, or WILDMAN, of BURTON ON THE WOULDS.

(Entered at Leiceſter 24 March, 1681-2, by JOHN WILEMAN.)

Arms: Or, on a pale Azure, three bezants; Plate LII. fig. 14.

Thomas Wileman, of Burton on the Woulds, died Oct. 6, 1656, æt. circa 80. = ...

1. John Wileman, of Burton, died about 1658, æt. 48. = Mary, dau. of John Allen, of Loughborough.
. . . . . wife of . . . . Savage, of Walton on the Woulds.
2. Richard Wileman, of Earls Shilton, æt. about 66, 1681. ✝
Henry Wileman, of London, married and had iſſue.

1. John Wileman, of Burton, gent. æt. 39 in 1681; buried March 9, 1692-3. = Frances, dau. of Chriſtopher Roper lord Teynham, by Mary daughter to ſir Francis Englefield; and ſiſter to Chriſtopher lord Teynham.
1. Mary, wife of Roger Manwaring, of Carincham, co. Ceſtr.
2. Suſanna, died unmarried.
2. Thomas Wileman, of Nottingham, living 1681. = ... dau. of . . . . Langhorn, of Bedfordſhire.

1. Roger Wileman, æt. 10 and more.
1. Winifred, æt. 16.
2. Helen, æt. 15.
3. Elizabeth, æt. 14.
Dorothy and Mary, both died young.
1. John, æt. 12, 1681.
2. Thomas, and other ſons.

RADCLIFFE,

RADCLIFFE,

in old writings called Radeclive, Ratcliffe, Radeclive en Wylawis, and Ratcliffe ſuper Wreke, is bounded by Rereſby, Queneborow, Coſſington, Sileby, Segrave, and Thruſſington; and the river Wreke paſſes by its baſe. It is about ſeven miles diſtant from Leiceſter; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote. The etymology is Rad (red) cliff, from a hill of red marle hanging over the river about 300 yards below the mill.

"Ratcliffe upon Wreke," ſays Wyrley, "the laſt village it paſſeth by before it falleth into the Soare, being a large mile Eaſtward from the ſame. By this town paſſeth the Foſs-way over Lewen bridge [1]."

In the time of king Edward the Confeſſor there were four ploughlands in Radclive. At the time of the general ſurvey the wife of Robert Burdet held two ploughlands here under Robert de Buci; and three villans, with two bordars, had one plough. There were twelve acres of meadow; and a mill of three ſhillings value [2].

On the aid granted to king Henry III. in 1235, towards the marrying of his ſiſter with the emperor of the Romans, Henry Harent of Radclive paid 14*s*. 8*d*.

In the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about 1240, Radeclive en Wylawis is deſcribed as conſiſting of ſix ploughlands, and Radeclive Burdet one ploughland.

William Burdet, grandſon of William Burdet, founder of Aucote priory, gave to the monks there half a yard-land and a water-mill in Ratcliffe [3]; concerning which, in 1260, the following legal proceſs occurs:

"Aſſiſa, &c. ſi Radulphus Baſſet, Jacobus de Hampton, Robertus de Anvers, Radulphus Folevill, Robertus de Colleſhull, & Henricus Baſſet, diſſeiſiverunt priorem de Avecote de dimidiâ virgate terre & uno molendino aquatico in Radclive. Et Radulphus venit, & reſpondit pro ſe & omnibus aliis; & dicit quod Aſſiſa non debet inde fieri, quia dicit quod predictus prior eſt amobilis ad voluntatem prioris de Malverniâ, nec poteſt per aliquod breve de aliquo libero tenemento placitare, nec per aliquod breve reſpondere. Et preterea dicit quod prior nunquam fuit in ſeiſinâ, niſi tantum quod quidem Willielmus Burdet, qui predictam terraram tenuit ad terminum vite ſue per legem Anglie, eo quod deſponſaverat quandam Aliciam amitam predicti Radulphi, cujus heres ipſe eſt, de quâ ipſe prolem ſuſcitavit, dum laborabat in extremis feoffavit predictum priorem, &c. Juratores dicunt, quod predicta tenementa aliquo tempore fuerunt jus & hereditas cujuſdem Hugonis Burdet, patris predicti Willielmi, &c." [4]

In the Itinerary of 1280, Radclive, Rakedale, Wilghes, Thruſtington, and Houby, anſwered collectively as one vill.

Geva, daughter to Hugh Lupus earl of Cheſter, gave the ſervice of William Burdet (viz. the fourth part of a knight's fee) in this town to Ralph Baſſet, her grandſon; which was confirmed to him by Geoffrey Ridell his brother, as may be ſeen by his deed mentioned in Dunton [5].

The Segrave Chartulary notices a grant of William Burdet, to Stephen de Segrave and his heirs, of four buvates of land in Radcleve ſuper Wrec, which Gervaſe ſon of Arnald, William Bande, Robert ſon of Uthred, and Hugh ſon of Martin, held, together with the ſaid Gervaſe, William, Robert, and Hugh, their chattels and ſequela, to be held of the ſaid William and his heirs by payment of one pound of cumin annually in lieu of all other ſervice [6].

The manor came afterwards to the deſcendants of Ralph Baſſet, as appears by an old Feodary book, viz. "Radulphus Baſſet de Drayton tenet manerium de Ratcliffe ſuper Wreke, & advocationem eccleſie, de Roberto Burdet, milite, per quartam partem unius feodi militis, ut patet per finem levatam coram Martino de Littlebury, & ſociis ſuis juſticiariis itinerantibus, apud Leic', 46 Hen. III. inter Willielmum Burdet, petentem, et Willielmum de Lymar, tenentem [7]."

In 1301, it was found that Henry de Nottingham held a knight's fee in Thurſtington and Radcliffe, of the heirs of Thomas de Wappenbur, and of Thomas de Waſſingle, Richard de Boyvill, and William de Ryvell; which heirs, and Thomas, Richard, and William, held the ſame of Roger de Mowbray, deceaſed [8].

In 1346, Ralph Baſſet of Drayton (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 10*s*. for a quarter of one knight's fee in Ratcliffe; and Henry de Nottingham 10*s*. for a quarter of one knight's fee in Thruſſington, Ratcliffe, and Howby; all parcel of the fee of Cheſter and Huntingdon [9].

In 1361, John de Mowbray, lord of the Iſle of Axholme, held at his death the fifth part of one knight's fee in Ratcliffe ſuper le Wreke, which the prioreſs of Gracedieu held; alſo one knight's fee in Thruſſington and Ratcliffe, which Thomas Wake held [10].

In 1390, Ralph Baſſet of Drayton, knt. held the manor of Radcliff ſuper Wreke of the heir of Ralph Baſſet of Weldon, by knight's ſervice: "Juratores dicunt, quòd Radulphus Baſſett de Drayton, miles, fuit ſeiſitus de maneriis de Ragdale & Wilowes, cum pertinentiis; de manerio de Dounton, cum pertinentiis; de manerio de Radcliffe ſuper Wreke, cum pertinentiis; de manerio de Barowe ſuper Soarum, cum Boudon, cum pertinentiis; XXIIII virgatas terre, cum pertinentiis, in Whatton; de uno meſſuagio & unâ virgatâ terre, cum pertinentiis, in Houton; & de uno meſſuagio & XII acris terre, cum pertinentiis, in Thurſington. Item dicunt, quòd manerium de Barowe, cum pertinentiis, tenetur de d̃no rege per ſervicium militare; maneria de Rakedale, Wilowes, & Radcliffe ſuper Wreke, tenentur de heredibus Radulphi Baſſett de Weldon per ſervicium militare; XXIIII virgate terre in Whatton tenentur de Johanne de Bellomonte per ſervicium militare; unum meſſuagium & una virgata terre in Houton tenentur de d̃no duce Lancaſtrie per ſectam curie ſue bis per annum; unum meſſuagium & XII acre terre in Thurſington tenentur de Katharinâ de Nottingham, dominâ de Thurſington, per ſervicium IIs̃. per annum. Et dicunt, quòd Thomas comes Staffordie & Alicia uxor Willielmi Chaworth militis ſunt conſanguinei & heredes propinquiores predicti Radulphi Baſſett; videlt, predictus Thomas eſt filius Hugonis filii Radulphi, filii Margarete, unius ſororum Radulphi Baſſett, patris Radulphi Baſſett qui ultimò obiit [11]."

In 1399, Thomas Mowbray late duke of Norfolk was ſeiſed of one knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Thurſtington and Ratcliffe [12].

In 1402, Joan, relict of Ralph Baſſet of Drayton, died ſeiſed, for term of life, of a third part of the manor of Ratcliffe upon Wreke, held of the heir of Ralph Baſſet of Weldon[1].

---

[1] Wyrley, MS. Of Lewen bridge, ſee hereafter, under Syſton.

[2] "Uxor Roberti Burdet tenet de R[oberti de Buci] 2 carucatas terræ in Radeclive. Tempore Regis Edwardi erant ibi 4 carucæ, ibi 3 villani, cum 2 bordariis, habent 1 carucam. Ibi molinum de 3 ſolidis, & 12 acræ prati." Domeſday, fol. 234. b. 1.

[3] Plac. 14 Edw. III.

[4] Mr. Roper, who extracted this article from the Placita de anno 44 Hen. III. in Recept. Scaccarii Rot. 3. obſerves on it, that "this record is worth reading at large, but here is not room."

[5] MS. Chetwynd.

[6] See Appendix to vol. II. p. 114.

[7] Lib. Feod. Imp. E. 1.

[8] Eſch. 29 Edw. I. N° 47. Leic.

[9] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[10] Eſch. 35 Edw. III. pars 2. N° 10.

[11] Eſch 14 Ric. II. N° 9. Leic.

[12] Eſch. 1 Hen. IV. N° 71. Leic.

Ralph the laſt lord Baſſet of Drayton entailed it on ſir Hugh Shirley, knight, his nephew; and, after a long diſpute betwixt the heirs of the ſaid ſir Hugh and the earls of Stafford, who laid claim to it, the feoffees of the ſaid lord Baſſet, in 1423, finally releaſed it to ſir Ralph Shirley, knt. (as will appear in Rakedale); in whoſe poſterity it hath ſince continued.

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Radcliffe was rated at £1. 6*s.*; and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 6*s.*

In 1461, John Mowbray, duke of Norfolk, died ſeiſed of a fifth part of one knight's fee in Ratcliffe upon Wreke, which the prioreſs of Gracedieu held; alſo of one knight's fee in Thruſſington and Ratcliffe, which the heir of Ralph Crumbewell held[2].

In an act for granting a ſubſidy in 1513, Walter and Thomas Kebell are both mentioned; in 1514 only Walter.

In 1518, it was found that ſir Ralph Shirley died ſeiſed of Ratcliffe upon Wreke, held of the king in capite, as of the caſtle of Rockingham[3].

Walter Kebell died July 31, 1522, ſeiſed, inter alia, of lands in Ratcliffe ſuper Wreke, held under ſir Maurice Berkeley[4].

Certain lands in Radcliffe ſuper Wreke belonged to the nunnery of Langley; and were under leaſe to ſir George Villiers, knt. at the time of the diſſolution[5].

Sir Richard Radcliffe had lands here[6].

In 1544, meſſuages and lands in Radcliffe ſuper Wreke, ſome time parcel of the monaſtery de Pratis at Leiceſter, were granted to Thomas Grey[7].

A meſſuage and lands in Radcliffe ſuper Wreke, formerly belonging to a chantry at Melborne, were granted to Edward lord Clinton 3 May, 1553[8].

In 1564, there were 14 families in Radcliffe.

A leaſe of a term in Radcliffe ſuper Wreke was granted to William Watts, of Rereſby, 1 Dec. 1583.

The freeholders here in 1630 were, John Burbage and William Kilbey. In 1722, two freeholders polled from this pariſh; but in 1775 we find only one name.

In 1655, there was collected in Ratcliffe, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, 5*s.* 9*d.*

By an act paſſed in 1774, for dividing and incloſing, within the manor of Ratcliffe upon Wreke, the ſeveral open fields, called The Upper Field, The Middle Field, The Aſh Field, and The Nether Field, and alſo ſeveral parcel of meadow, paſture, and other commonable grounds, conſiſting of 26 yard-lands, and containing about 800 acres[9], Waſhington earl Ferrers is deſcribed as lord of the manor of Ratcliffe upon Wreke, and a proprietor of a conſiderable part of the ſaid open fields and meadows, and entitled to right of common therein, and in the ſaid commonable grounds; the King, as patron of the vicarage; and the Rev. Samuel Belton, clerk, as vicar, and entitled to certain glebe lands and common right in the ſaid open fields and commonable grounds, alſo to a piece of meadow ground, called The Tithe Piece, heretofore ſet out in lieu of the tithes of certain parcels of meadow ground hereby intended to be divided and incloſed, and to all the great and ſmall tithes ariſing from part of the lands and grounds intended to be divided and incloſed; and lady Frances Coningeſby, as owner of the impropriate tithes ariſing from the reſidue of the lands and grounds intended to be divided and incloſed; and the Rev. John Baker, clerk, as vicar of Thruſſington, entitled to the ſmall tithes ariſing from the ſaid lands and grounds of which the ſaid lady Frances Coningeſby is impropriator of the great tithes, and alſo entitled to certain parcels of graſs-ground in the ſaid fields; and the Rev. John Orton, clerk, Mary Wells, widow, and others, were then the owners and proprietors of the reſidue of the ſaid open fields, meadow, paſture, and other commonable grounds, intended to be divided and incloſed. After proviſion made for public roads, an allotment is directed for the vicar of Ratcliffe, in full compenſation for his glebe and tithe piece; and one ſeventh of the reſidue of the common field, with as much more as ſhould be equal to one tenth of the old incloſures, to be ſet out in lieu of all tithes and eccleſiaſtical dues, except mortuaries and ſurplice-fees; and, from ſuch parts of the common field and of the old incloſures as were liable to pay tithes to the lady Coningſby and the vicar of Thruſſington, the like proportion of a ſeventh and a tenth, to be divided according to their reſpective intereſts, and to be in lieu of all tithes and payments, except ſuch mortuaries and ſurplice-fees as were payable to the vicar of Thruſſington.

Almoſt the whole of the pariſh of Radcliffe, containing upwards of 500 acres of very rich land, is now the property of Robert earl Ferrers; and has been in his lordſhip's family upwards of 400 years. The mill, manor, and fiſhery, which extends from Reresby mill to Lewin bridge, are alſo earl Ferrers's property.

One farm within the lordſhip of Radcliffe, but in the pariſh of Thruſſington, is the property of Wells Orton, eſq. of Enfield.

The old hall-houſe appears to have ſtood near that which belongs to earl Ferrers's largeſt farm. There are remains of a moat, and the piece of ground takes that name.

Near the church are the ruins of a large farm-houſe; part of which are ſeen beyond the Eaſt end of the church in the view given of it, in Plate LIV.

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor, within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	18	14	0
Expended in county-rates, &c.	5	0	7
——— on the poor, —	15	19	11
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	0	0	0
Expended in litigations, —	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	38	16	8
——— 1784, —	40	8	7
——— 1785, —	35	17	0
Medium of theſe three years,	38	7	5
——— of county expences, —	0	0	0
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	0	0	0
——— of nett annual expences,	38	7	5
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	0	2	8
——— of entertainments at meetings,	0	3	10
——— of law expences, —	0	11	0
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 52.

---

[1] Eſch. 4 Hen. IV. N° 38. Leic.

[2] Eſch. 1 Edw. IV. N° 46. Leic.

[3] Inq. at Leiceſter, 8 April, 9 Hen. VIII.; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. IV. (Harl. MSS. 759.) p. 180.

[4] Inq. at Boſworth, 27 Nov. 14 Hen. VIII; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. I. (Harl. MSS. 756.) p. 396.

[5] Bailiffs Accounts, 31 Hen. VIII. in the Augmentation Office.

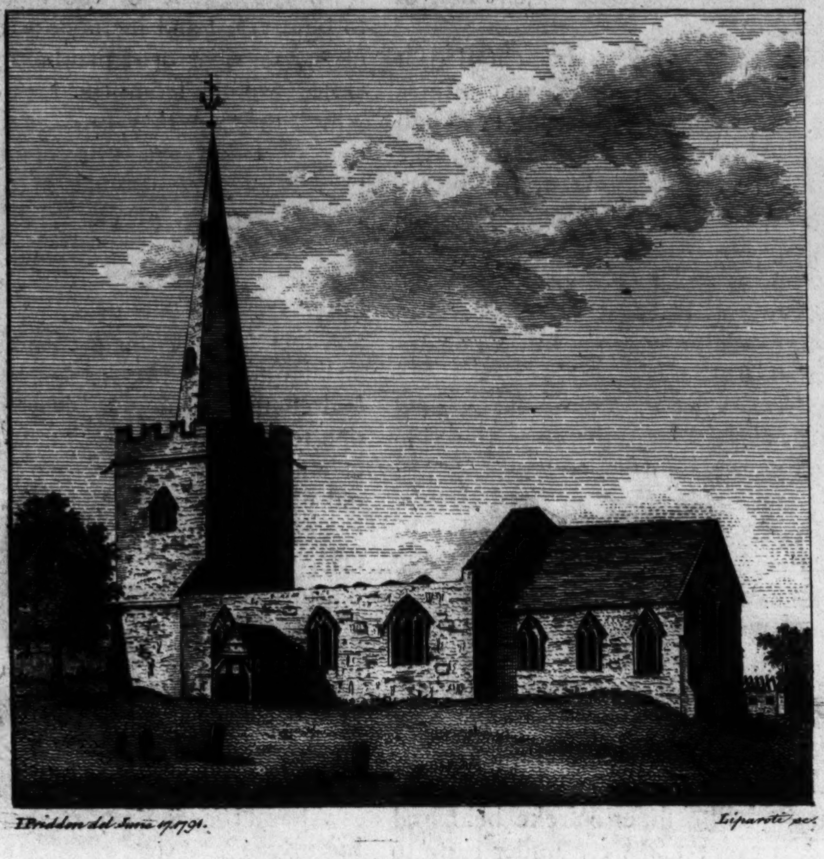
[6] Rolls of Parliament, temp. Hen. VIII.

[7] MSS. in the Augmentation Office.

[8] MSS. in the Augmentation Office.

[9] This includes Mr. Wells's farm, which, though within the manor of Radcliffe, is in the pariſh of Thruſſington.

p.382. RADCLIFFE on the WREKE, S.E. Pl.LIV.



I Pridden del June 17.1791. Liparoti sc.

The CHURCH,

dedicated to St. Botolph, conſiſted in 1791 of an embattled tower (in which are three bells); a ſpire; chancel covered with tile; and a nave and North aile covered with lead, as ſhewn above, in Plate LIV.

This church has been lately thoroughly repaired by earl Ferrers and his tenants; and his lordſhip has rebuilt all that was defective of the beautiful taper ſpire; the expence of the whole near £300. See a view of it, in its preſent ſtate, Plate LV.

In the church Mr. Burton deſcribes theſe arms:

Or, three piles Gules, a canton Ermine. Baſſet.

Gules, three lions paſſant guardant in pale Or. England.

Gules, a lion rampant Argent.

Gules, 7 maſcles voided conjoined Or. Quincy.

Sable, a lion rampant Argent, crowned Or. Segrave.

Paly of ſix, Or and Azure, a canton Ermine. Shirley.

In the chancel are three ſtone ſeats, with a piſcina; a piſcina in the South-eaſt corner of the nave, and another in the ſame part of the North aile.

An old round font; in four different parts have been ſome ſmall groteſque ornaments, now worn off.

In the windows are ſeveral fragments of painted glaſs, in the form of oak-leaves, and fancied ornaments, which appear to have been the border to the windows, where ſome painted coat-armour has been; it is chiefly red and yellow, the colours of the lords Baſſets' arms, from whom this manor and the greateſt part of the pariſh deſcended to earl Ferrers.

In a window over the altar is, "SANCTUS BOTOLFUS."

In the Matriculus of 1220[1], Radcliffe is deſcribed to be under the patronage of the prior of Charley; the vicar, William, inſtituted by biſhop Hugh Welles, having all the profits, except the ſheaves of the demeſne; which he had been accuſtomed to receive ab antiquo, paying to the prior an annual penſion of three ſhillings.

In 1344, the procurations were, 5*s.*; the rectory was taxed at 2 marks, and paid 1*s.* for Peter-pence. The prior of Charley then held it in proprios uſus. This little priory was (in 1465[2]) united to that of Ulveſcroft, to which Radcliffe was appropriated.

In 1534-5, the procurations and ſynodals were 9*s.* 6*d.*; the prior of Ulveſcroft's penſion 13*s.* 4*d.*; the value of the vicarage £8.; and the rectory was returned worth £40.

The church was alſo preſented to by the lords Baſſet, from whom the preſent earl Ferrers is deſcended by the female line.

In the time of king Henry VIII, it was in the hands of commiſſioners, and ſince entirely in the gift of the crown.

In 1650, the vicarage was worth £40; and the incumbent as "no preacher."

Nett value in 1716, 58*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

The living is a ſmall one; land in lieu of tithe.

The preſent value in the king's books, in decimis majoribus, cum manſo, & terr' gleb', is £7. 16*s.* 8*d.*; cum terrâ pro reparatione eccleſiæ; certified value £80.

The epiſcopal procurations are, 2*s.* 6*d.*; the archidiaconal 9*s.* 6*d.*

VICARS.	PATRONS.
William, 1220.	Prior and convent of Charley.
W. de . . . . 1242.
Thomas Whalley, died 1547.	Prior and convent of Ulveſcroft.
John Bewarne[3], 1547.	Robert Rigmaydon and Thomas Lawton.
Peter Preſtland[4], 1562.	The King.
John Richardſon, about 1670.
Henry Boulter, April 13, 1628; died 1697.
Eliezar Boyer, 1683; died 1729.
Thomas Harriſon[5], inducted April 15, 1729; died 1745.
William Bareſby; April 13, 1745.
Samuel Belton, Dec. 13, 1763; died Oct. 31, 1783.
Griffith Gardiner, Jan. 6, 1784.

---

[1] See the Introductory Volume, p. lx.

[2] Reg. Chedworth, epiſc. Lincoln.

[3] "15 die Junii, 1547, apud Lambeth, dominus pref. Joh'em Bewarne cleric. ad vicariam perpetuam eccleſie parochialis de Ratclyffe, Linc' dioc. ſede vacante, per mortem d'ni Thome Whalley vac', ad preſentationem Rob' Rigmaydon de Lughbrugh & Thome Lawton de Leiceſtr', vigore cujuſdam advocationis eis in hac parte fact' hâc vice ſpectant'." Reg. Cranmer, fol. 405. b.

[4] In the Certificate referred to under Allexton, p. 8, Mr. Preſtland is thus deſcribed: "Preſbyter, non conjugatus; competenter doctus; reſidet; hoſpitalis; deget ibidem; non licentiatus, nec prædicat; nullum aliud habet."

[5] Mr. Harriſon had been a Diſſenting miniſter, but conformed. He was buried in St. Peter's churchyard, St. Alban's, with the following epitaph: "Here lieth the body of the Rev. Mr. Thomas Harriſon, late vicar of Ratcliffe in Leiceſterſhire, who departed this life 30 March, 1745, aged 52. Mrs. Mary Harriſon, his mournful relict, who died 29 Auguſt, 1747, aged 53."

MONU-

RADCLIFFE, N.E. Vol. III. Pl. LV. p. 383.

Drawn Aug. 15, 1793.

Fig. 1 p. 383.

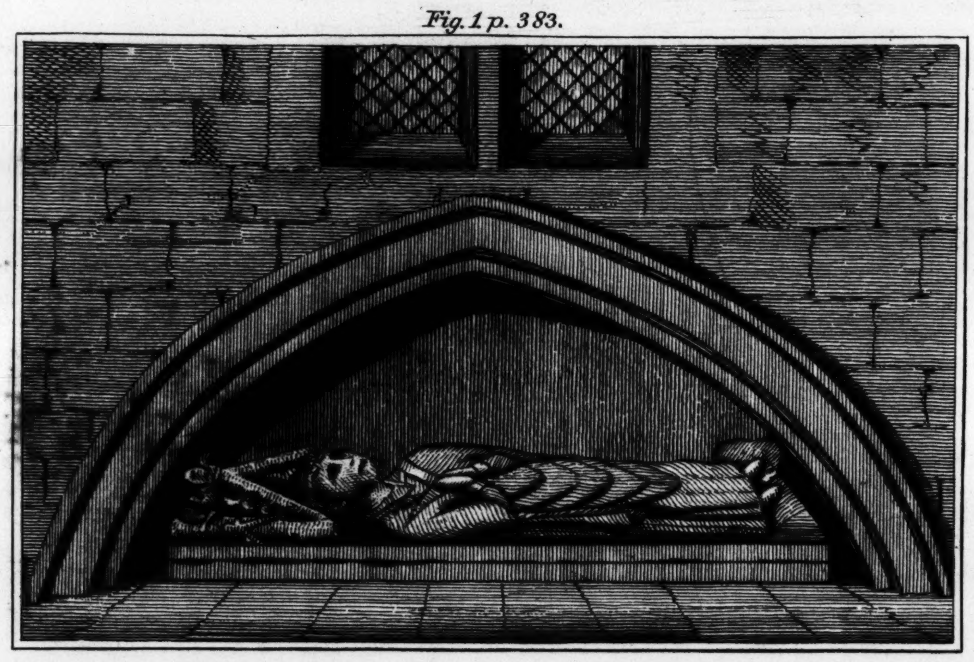

Fig. 2. p. 386.

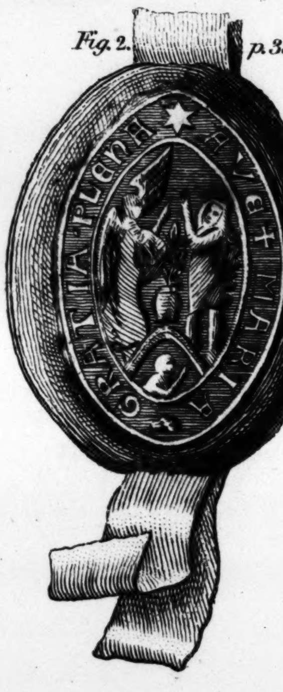
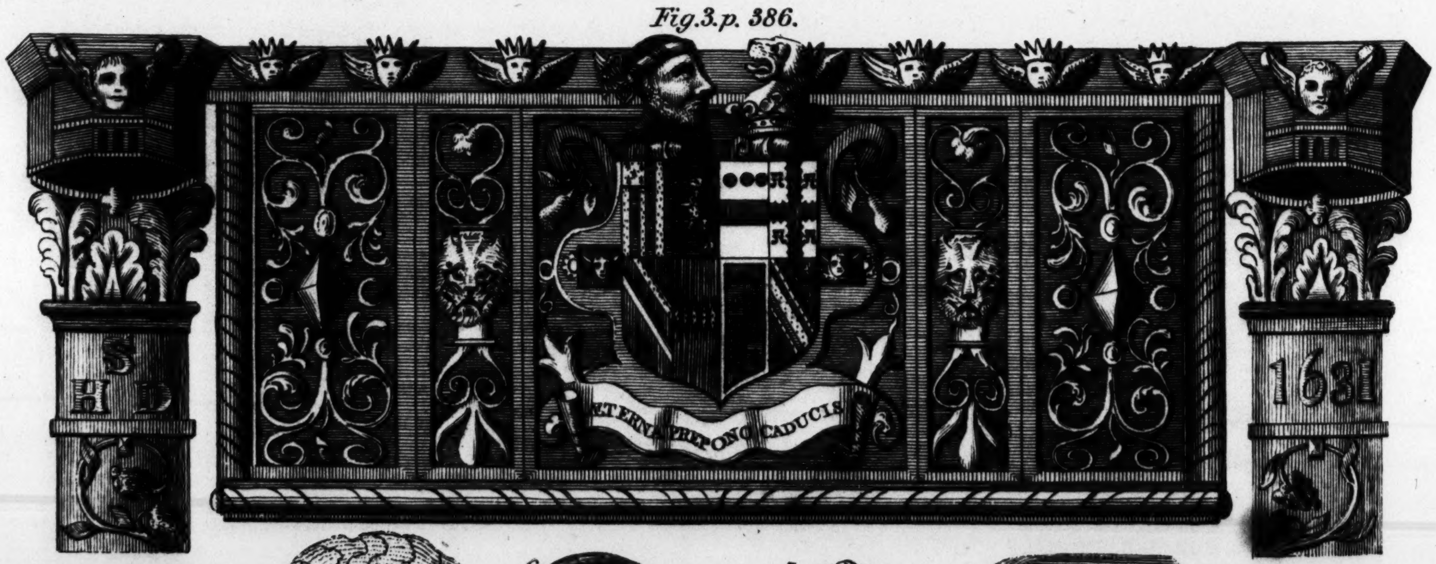
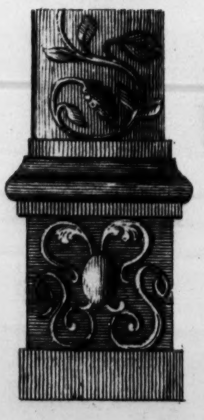


AVE + MARIA
GRATIA PLENA

Fig. 3. p. 386.



S
H D
ETERNA PREPONO CADUCIS
1631



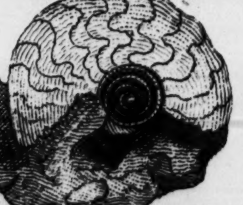


Fig. 4. p. 388.

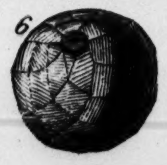
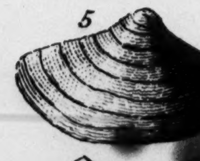
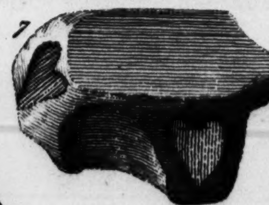
6

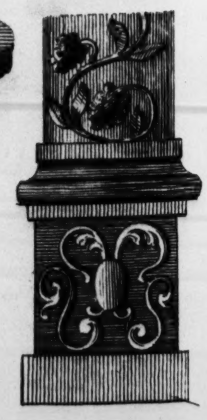


5



7





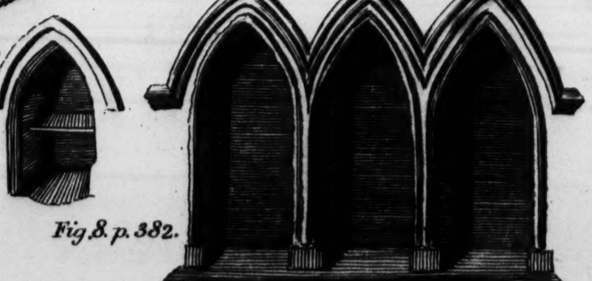


Fig. 8. p. 382.

Longmate del. et sculp.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

Under an arch in the North ſide of the chancel (carved in ſtone) is the full length figure of a tonſured eccleſiaſtic in his cowl; his hands uplifted; over him a canopy; ſee Plate LV. fig. 1.

This is ſuppoſed to be Thomas de Ratcliffe, S. T. P. a celebrated preacher, biſhop of Dromore in Ireland, and ſuffragan biſhop of Durham[1], who was born here, and was probably of the Baſſet family. "He was an Auguſtinian friar in Leiceſter, where he was ordinis ſui epiſcopus[2], ſtrain the word no higher than an overſeer of his order. He had ingenium fœcundum & amplius; and pity it was, that he had vitæ inſtitutum ſterile & anguſtum. However, to enlarge his ſoul, he wrote divers books; and flouriſhed anno 1360[3]."

He was a hermit of the Auguſtin order in Leiceſter abbey. He wrote "Scholaſtic Lectures," in one book. Pro noſtro tu ſententiam, lib. i. "Sermons to the Common People," one book; and died a little before 1389.

On flat ſtones in the chancel:

"Henry Boulter, vicar of this church, was buried March 13, 1697, ætatis 81."

"Here lieth the body of Jane Southernwood, who departed this life April 19, 1725,
aged 59 years."

"Here lieth the body of the Rev.
Ebenezer Boyer, vicar of this pariſh,
who departed this life Nov. 21, 1729, aged 70."

"In memory of Mary, wife of the Rev. Mr. Samuel Belton, vicar of Ratcliffe.
She departed this life April 27, 1778, aged 62."

"In memory of the Rev. Samuel Belton, vicar of Ratcliffe and Barkby.
He departed this life Oct. 31, 1783, aged 70."

On flat ſtones in the North aile:

"Here lieth the body of Catharine,
third daughter of the late William and Mary Beck.
She departed this life April the 26th, 1743,
and the 53d of her age.
She was poſſeſſed of many virtues, which endeared her to all her friends and acquaintance while living, and made her loſs greatly to be lamented.
Part of her laſt words: 'She deſired to depart, and to be with Chriſt, which is far better.'
She was buried in the grave of her kinſman
William Watts."

[Some inſcriptions for the family of Watts have been obliterated by time; as is alſo one formerly here for ——— Adcock, who died September 2, 1644.]

"Here lyeth interred the body of Mary, the wife of William Beck, and daughter of Captain Timothy Helmſley, of Dalby on the Woulds,
who departed this life Nov. 30, 1731, aged 73.
Alſo near this place lieth two of her daughters, viz.
Katharina and Margaret; both died in the month,"

"Here lies the body of William Beck
(a loving huſband and affectionate father) who departed this life September the 25th, 1738, and the 82d year of his age."

"Here lieth interred the body of James Morriſon, gent. ſon of the Rev. James Morriſon, both of Herlyſton, in the county of Lincoln, and grandſon of John Welby, eſq. of Denton Hall, in the ſaid county of Lincoln.
He departed this life January the 25th, 1745,
and the 44th year of his age.

He married Mary, ſecond daughter of the late William Beck, by whom he left iſſue one ſon.
Near unto him lieth one of his children ſtill-born."

"Here lieth interred the body of Mary,
the wife of James Morriſon, gent.
She departed this life March 6, 1759, aged LXXII.
Bleſſed are thoſe in Jeſus dead,
Sweet their ſlumbers, ſoft their bed:
Silly we for ſuch to weep—
They're not dead, but gone to ſleep."

On a tablet:

"Mr. Jonathan Boulter, ſon of the Rev. Mr. Henry Boulter, formerly vicar of Ratcliffe, gave 20 guineas A. D. 1742, towards beautifying the church. He alſo bequeathed five pounds for the poor of this pariſh."

On another tablet is a long agreement, made by Samuel Belton, vicar, the pariſh officers, &c. relative to the incloſure of the common field.

Richard Kilbye, D. D. was born at Radcliffe on the Wreke; and, having paſſed his ſchool education, was elected fellow of Lincoln College, Oxon, Jan. 18, 1577. He took the degrees in arts and holy orders, and became a celebrated preacher. Dec. 10, 1590, he was elected rector of Lincoln College[4], took his degrees in divinity, having then been of about three years ſtanding; and was elected Regius profeſſor of Hebrew at Oxford in 1610[5]. He wrote a Comment on the Book of Exodus (collected from the Rabbins and Hebrew Interpreters) ſome time in the hands of Mr. Gilbert, a fellow of Lincoln College, but it was never publiſhed. He alſo continued Mercer's Notes on Geneſis, but was reſtrained from publiſhing them; was concerned in the tranſlation of the Bible by appointment of king James I, 1604; publiſhed a ſermon, preached in St. Mary's church there, 26 March, 1622, at the funeral of Thomas Hilliard, the king's profeſſor of Divinity, Oxon, 1613," 4to; and did other very laudable matters relating to learning. His glaſs ran to about the length of 60 years, when he returned again to duſt; and was buried Nov. 17, 1620, in the chancel of the collegiate church of All Saints[6] in Oxford. His epitaph was probably deſtroyed when the church was rebuilt[7].

The antient Roman road called The Foſs way[8] runs through the lordſhip of Radcliffe[9] on the Wreke; betwixt which and the river is a very remarkable eminence, ſituated about a mile and a half from Coſſington, and a mile from Radcliffe, near and upon the Eaſt ſide of the Foſs; which Mr. Carte (in MS.) thus deſcribes: "There is an antient funeral monument, in the manner of the Britons before the arrival of the Romans, at a village called Radcliffe, conſiſting of a mount of earth about 350 feet long, 120 broad, and 40 high. It is not to be ſuppoſed that this monument was raiſed to the memory of one ſingle perſon; but, rather, it is conjectured, to perpetuate the memory of a battle between the inhabitants of the iſland and the

---

[1] Wharton, Angl. Sacra, vol. I. p. 778. Ware de Præſulibus, p. 93. Pitts would inſinuate that he was biſhop of Lincoln, becauſe Leiceſter is in his dioceſe. Tanner, Bibl. Brit. p. 613.

[2] Bale, Cent. VI. N° 14.

[3] Fuller's Worthies, Leiceſterſhire, p. 132. See alſo Pitts, p. 504; Tanner, Bibliotheca Britannica, p. 613.

[4] "As ſoon as Dr. Kilbye became rector of Lincoln College, beholding the library to lay neglected, as it had done moſt part of queen Elizabeth's reign, he reſtored it, and made eight new repoſitories for the books, four on one ſide, and as many on the other, and gave divers good books thereunto; which being done, others by his example gave alſo." Gutch, p. 248.

[5] Wood ſays he had a prebend at Lincoln; but he miſtakes him for another of the ſame name, whom Dr. Browne Willis ſuppoſes to have been rector of Lodington in Northamptonſhire.

[6] This church is a rectory, incorporated into one collegiate church with the college of Lincoln, in whom the patronage is veſted. Dr. Kilbye is enrolled amongſt the benefactors to it, by the gift of "£10. and a covered cup and plate of ſilver gilt." Peſhall, pp. 42. 44; and Wood, Athen. Oxon. vol. I. fol. 453.

[7] My friend Mr. Ellis has examined all the tombs that were not put up in the new church, but could find none for Dr. Kilbye.

[8] See the account of the Foſs road in vol. I. p. cliii.

[9] The cliff itſelf is well deſerving notice; whence the name of the town, Radcliff, being a cliff of red marle. Dr. Stukeley, as above, derives its name from the Roman road.

Belgian Britons." In another place Mr. Carte[1] ſays, "About four miles from hence (meaning Leiceſter) there is an uncommon tumulus, which I take to be the monument of a Daniſh king[2]. It is about a land's length on this ſide Radcliffe on the Wreke, between the Foſs road and the river. And whereas all tumuli which I have ſeen are of a round form, this is long, and agrees with the account which Olaus Wormius gives us of the ſepulchres of the moſt antient Daniſh kings[3]."

Dr. Stukeley ſays, "At Coſſington, juſt before I came to the river Wreke, is a vaſt barrow, 350 feet long, 120 broad, 40 high, or near it: it is very handſomely worked up on the ſides, and very ſteep. It ſeems to have loſt ſome of its length at both ends, eſpecially the Northern, a torrent running cloſe by. It ſtands exactly North and South, upon the very edge of the Ings; and in wet times it muſt be almoſt encompaſſed with water: they call it Shipley hill, and ſay a great Captain, called Shipley, was buried there. I doubt not but this is of great antiquity, and Celtic, and that the intent of it is rightly preſerved by the country people; but as to the name of him, I can ſay nothing. On the top are ſeveral oblong double trenches cut in the turf, where the lads and laſſes of the adjacent villages meet upon Eaſter-Monday yearly, to be merry with cakes and ale[4]. Near this place, at Radcliff, ſo called from the road, it ſeems that the Foſs-road paſſes over this brook; and, filling up its cavity, made it neceſſary to cut a new channel, that the road might run ſtrait, and, like the Roman terminus, give place to nothing. Having paſſed the river, it proceeds over the meadows: juſt beyond them is a large round tumulus, which I ſuppoſe Roman. Then the road goes ſtrait through Thurmaſton, and ends full upon the Eaſt gate of Leiceſter[5]."

A friend, who examined this hill in the ſpring of 1799, ſays, "Shipley Hill in ſome part agrees with your account; but it has been brought lower than it formerly was, by ploughing; for, my guide informs me that, every time it is ploughed, they plough round it, and always down. It does not appear likely that any part of it can be waſhed away, for it is a furlong at leaſt from the Wreke; but I believe that, in a large flood, it may reach the lower ſide. My guide told me, that, about ſeven years ago, the late Miſs Orton, the owner, took it into her head that ſhe would have it cut through, to make a diſcovery, if poſſible; and actually ſet a number of men to work for that purpoſe; but, finding gravel within it, and there being none in any other part of the pariſh, ſhe deſiſted from her ſcheme; but there were ſeveral hundreds of loads taken away: and, it being expected that Earl Ferrers might inſiſt on gravel being got there to mend the public roads, and ſhe not liking it, ſhe propoſed, if poſſible, to prevent it; but, after making holes for planting an orchard, finding it would not anſwer her purpoſe, ſhe carried off the trees, and left the holes open."

Another friend, who has alſo ſurveyed this hill in 1799, ſays. "The tumulus is ſituate on the right of the Foſs, going from Thurmaſton to Radcliff, at the diſtance of about 200 yards, and nearly the ſame from the river Wreke, but not (as Mr. Carte ſays) 'about a land's length from Radcliff.' It is half a mile from that village. This hill has, from the Foſs-road, ſomewhat the appearance of a church-yard banked-grave, except for its magnitude. It meaſures, at its baſe, 350 or 360 feet in length; on its ſummit 280; and, taking off the medium, about 24 feet bread. On the top are ſome ſmall patches of gorze. On the ſide towards the Wreke, near the centre, the earth of which it conſiſts has been taken away to the depth of 4 yards, and in length 26. From examining this ſunken part, I have my doubts of its being any thing more than a natural hill; for, here you may ſee regular ſtrata of blue marle, within a yard of the ſummit, reſembling that of a hill near it, which is ſeated by the ſide of the river; but, at the ſame time, I muſt allow that the form of Shipley Hill, on its ſurface, has much more the appearance of a work of labour than almoſt any thing I have ever ſeen of this ſort."

On ſubmitting the obſervations of Mr. Carte to Earl Ferrers, I have been honoured by his Lordſhip with the following incontrovertible facts:

"The hill is lately proved to be the wonderful work of Nature, not of Art; and has been produced by ſome uncommon ſurflux of the river Wreke. It was cut open a few years paſt, and found to contain ſtrata of gravel and red marle, evidently waſhed together by ſome extraordinary vortex of the river, or waters, making ſtrands round it; which are very perceptible. There are ſtrata of different ſorts of earth; firſt, ſoil; then, gravel; marle, red and white; ſome little blue marle; mixture of gravel, &c.; but all evidently appear to have been the work of Providence, not of man. This hill is cloſe to the river; and the appearance of channels waſhed by the water are ſeen in many places near it, which are now deep dales and uneven ground covered with graſs, but which the winter floods ſeldom reach.

"I have alſo another remark to make; which is, that the remains of an entrenchment, or Roman encampment, are not 'at Sex-hill, where the Foſs is interſected by another road towards Barrow upon Soar;' but about a quarter, or half, a mile from Sexhill, on the right ſide of the Foſs-road towards Willoughby, and in Nottinghamſhire. The foregoing errors have crept into the writings of every one who has treated upon the ſubject; which induced me to be more particular in my deſcription of facts to you. I may here add another obſervation; which is, that every map of Leiceſterſhire is incorrect as to Sex-hill[6]; they having given above a mile ſpace between Sex-hill houſe and the borders of Nottinghamſhire; whereas the diſtance is not fifty yards from Sex-hill houſe to a gate on the Foſs; which gate is in Willoughby pariſh."

---

[1] In his letter to Browne Willis, eſq. printed in the Leiceſterſhire Collections, p. 597.

[2] It was the rude cuſtom of thoſe Pagans, at the burial of their leaders and kings, to raiſe over their graves a large mount of earth, which ſerved the purpoſe of a ſepulchre.

[3] Sir William Dugdale, from whoſe Hiſtory of Warwickſhire, vol. I. p. 5. Mr. Carte cites theſe words of Olaus Wormius, enters very learnedly into the ſubject of tumuli in general.

[4] An old ſhepherd, ſtill living (1799), remembers theſe ſports; but they have long fallen into diſuſe.—Dr. Stukeley adds, "I obſerved upon the Foſs, all along, that in almoſt every pariſh were ſuch like tables, for the ſame purpoſe; and ſuch a one I formerly found at Rowldrich ſtones in Oxfordſhire."

[5] Stukeley's Itinerary, vol. I. p. 102.—"Not far from upper Shot-hill in Burton Bradſtock pariſh, Dorſet, and near the road between Dorcheſter and Bridport, is a vaſt barrow, called Shipton Hill. It ſtands on an eminence, and at a diſtance looks like a large boat, or hull of a ſhip, turned keel upwards. It is 749 feet long, 161 broad at the top, and 147 high, in a ſlant line. It ſeems to receive its name from its form, and is 250 feet longer than Silbury barrow in Wiltſhire." Hutchins's Dorſetſhire, vol. I p. 570. 2d edition.—Dr. Salmon (Survey of England, p. 618.) deſcribes a barrow of the ſame form, at Haltwiſel in Northumberland, upon an eminence above South Tyne. The country-people call it Caſtle-Hill; but, as it is in no defenſible ſhape, he ſuppoſes it made by the Danes as a memorial of victory. It bulges out on each ſide like a ſhip, is contracted at both ends, and is lower in the middle than at the ends. Mr. Vine deſcribes one of this form, but only 130 feet long, in Suſſex. Gent. Mag. vol. XXXVIII. p. 384. In vol. XXXIII. p. 396, he makes it 55 yards, or 165 feet long.—Wormius ſpeaks of ſuch ſhaped barrows, as appropriated to kings, and peculiar to the earlier age, when the dead were burned: "Regios tumulos ad magnitudinem & figuram carinæ maximæ navis ex iis quas poſſidebant fabricatos volunt." Mon. Dan. p. 42.—The epithet of Ship, in the name of theſe large barrows, is an evident alluſion to their form; conſequently, their bearing a name of ſome Daniſh or other hero is a vulgar error.

[6] "Seggeſwold is an hilly tract of country, now bare of wood, and called the Woulds, running from a place ſix miles North of Leiceſter, known by the name of Segs-hill, along rhe Foſs-road, for about 12 miles, towards Newark upon Trent. Here Ethelbald was ſlain in 755, either by the ſword of the Weſt Saxons, or by the rebellion of his own ſubjects." Carte's Hiſtory, p. 269, n. 6. p. 281. See alſo Wallis's Northumberland, vol. II. p. 268, 9. Segſhill, Segedunum; Horſley, Britannia Romana, 102. 136. Dunum ſignifies a flat country, the Downs. A flat country may be high, as in Dorſet and other counties.

RAKEDALE,

antiently called Ragendale [1], Rakdale, Ragdale, Radgdale on the Willows, and Rekedale, is a village on the North-eaſt border of the county, near Segs-hill and the Foſs-road; bounded by Hoby, Thruſſington, Dalby, and Shouldby; about 11 miles from Leiceſter, 5 from Melton, and 7 from Loughborough; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote. The boundary of Rakedale next to Shouldby is made by a deep break or embankment.

It is ſuppoſed the name of this place is derived from a very remarkable break, or Rake, which forms a very deep Dale, beginning about a quarter of a mile above the village, through which it extends itſelf a conſiderable diſtance, till it gradually diminiſhes to ſo ſmall a breadth as only to allow the paſſage of a little brook, which runs to Hoby, and there falls into the river Wreke.

In the reign of Edward the Confeſſor, Ragendale, conſiſting of ſix ploughlands, and employing ſix ploughs, was valued at ſixteen pence; which, at the Conqueror's ſurvey, were worth twenty ſhillings, and were held by Hugo under Robert de Buci. One plough was then in the demeſne; and four ſocmen had another. The ſame Hugo held alſo two ploughlands in the manor of Wilghes; which, though waſte, were valued at twelve pence.

At the end of the enumeration of Hugo's property, the record ſtates, that thoſe who held thoſe lands in the time of king Edward might remove where they pleaſed, without alienating; except one Seric, who held three ploughlands in Ragendale, but could not remove elſewhere without parting with the land [2].

This place was by the Conqueror (with divers other lordſhips in this county) beſtowed on Hugh Lupus earl of Cheſter, his nephew; who gave it in marriage with Geva his daughter to Geoffrey Ridell; from whom it paſſed, with Maud their daughter and heir, to Richard Baſſet, juſtice of England under king Stephen; who had iſſue by her Geoffrey (who called himſelf Ridell after his mother), Ralph, and William. This manor came to Ralph by the grant of Geva his grandmother, and was confirmed to him and his heirs by Geoffrey his elder brother (as appears by a deed mentioned in Dunton Baſſett), to be held by knight's ſervice, of his manor of Weldon in Northamptonſhire.

"The deſcendants from this Ralph," ſays Mr. Burton, "were ſummoned to parliament as barons of the realm; had their chief ſeat at Drayton Baſſet, co. Stafford; and were all Ralphs; which makes the proofs of their deſcents and their matches very difficult. I have ſet down their genealogy [3] (with the other branches of that noble family) in Sapcote; as it was drawn by Robert Glover, Somerſet Herald, the moſt ſkilful genealogiſt of that age; but I ſhall not anſwer for the truth of every particular in it."

Rakedale is not noticed in the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about the year 1240; but, in the Itinerary of 1280, Rakedale, Wilghes, Radclive, Thurſtinton, and Houby, anſwered collectively as one vill.

Oct. 15, 1301, king Edward I. granted to Ralph Baſſet and his heirs liberty of free-warren in all their demeſne lands at Rakedale. "Hiis teſtibus; Joh̃e de Warennâ, comite Surrie; Adomaro de Valentiâ; Joh̃e de Sc̃o Joh̃e; Hugone le Diſpenſer; Joh̃e de Segrave; Amaneno de la Bret; Waltero de Bello-campo, ſeneſcallo hoſpitii noſtris; & aliis. Dat' per manum regis, apud Donpas, 15 die Octobris [4]."

In 1346, Hugo de Meignell (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 13*s*. 4*d*. for a third part of one knight's fee in Rakedale and Wilghes, parcel of the fees of Cheſter and Huntingdon [5].

In 1389, Ralph lord Baſſet of Drayton, at his death, held the manors of Rakedale and Willows of the heir of Ralph Baſſet of Weldon, by knight's ſervice [6]. Dying without iſſue, he entailed theſe lordſhips, with all the lands whereof he was then ſeiſed in fee ſimple, upon his nephew ſir Hugh Shirley, of Staunton, knt. (ſon to his ſiſter Iſabella, who had married ſir Thomas Shirley) and to the heirs male of his body, on condition that he ſhould bear the name and arms of Baſſet; with remainder to William de Stafford, &c. brother of Edmund earl of Stafford. Hugh never obtained the quiet poſſeſſion of them; becauſe he would not conſent to change his name and arms (poſſibly deeming them more ancient and more reſpectable than thoſe of Baſſet); for which reaſon he was impleaded by the earl of Stafford, who claimed under an old entail made 1340 by Ralph lord Baſſet his grandfather; whereupon, great and long diſputes aroſe, between the ſaid earl of Stafford, ſir Hugh Shirley, and their heirs, which were not ended till 1423; when it was ſettled by Henry VI; the feoffees of the ſaid Ralph lord Baſſet then releaſing to ſir Ralph Shirley, knt. and the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten, all their title and intereſt in this manor, and thoſe of Willoughes, Radcliffe, Barrow upon Sore, Dunton, and Whatton, with ſeveral other manors in various counties [7].

[The preſent poſſeſſor earl Ferrers is deſcended from the above-mentioned Iſabella (ſiſter and heireſs of the laſt lord Baſſet of Drayton), who brought this eſtate by marriage to ſir Thomas Shirley, knight, temp. Ric. II.]

In 1402, Joan relict of Ralph Baſſet of Drayton, knight, died ſeiſed, for term of life, of a third part of the manors of Rakedale and Willoughes, both held of the heir of Ralph Baſſet of Weldon [8].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Rakedale and Willoughes were jointly rated at 19*s*. 6*d*.; and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 3*s*.

After the death of Beatrix relict of ſir Hugh Shirley in 1439, it was found that ſhe held no lands of the king's; but that ſir Ralph Baſſet of Drayton, knight, was ſeiſed of the manors of Rakedale, Willoughes, Radcliff ſuper Wreke, and Barrow ſuper Soram; and that Ralph Shirley was her next heir [9].

Ralph Shirley died in 1461, ſeiſed of the manors of Rakedale and Wilowes [10], then held by knight's ſervice of the manor of Weldon [11], co. Northampton.

In 1466, Ralph Shirley, eſq. died ſeiſed of the manors of Rakedale and Willoughes, both held of Alianor relict of Humphrey Stafford, knight; and John Shirley, eſq. was his ſon and heir [12].

Sir Ralph Shirley died Jan. 6, 1516-7, ſeiſed, inter alia, of the manors of Rakedale and Willoughes, &c. worth £25. and held of the heir of Baſſet of Weldon, but by what ſervice was not known; the manor of Radcliffe ſuper Wreke, worth £12. held of the king in capite, as of the caſtle of Rockingham; the manor of Staunton Harold, worth £12. held of the honour of Tutbury; the manors of Long Whatton, Dunton, &c. [13]

---

[1] This name adds another inſtance to the obſervation in our verſion of Domeſday, vol. I. p. vii. on the orthography of the Norman ſcribes, "Ragendèle," as it is ſpelt in the ſurvey, being evidently the French pronunciation of Rakindale.

[2] "Hugo tenet de R[oberto de Buci] 6 carucatas terræ in Ragendele. Tempore regis Edwardi erant ibi 6 carucæ. In dominico eſt una: & 4 ſochmanni habent aliam. Ibi 30 acræ prati. Valuit 16 denarios; modò 20 ſolidos. Idem Hugo tenet 2 carucatas terræ in Wilghes. Vaſtæ ſunt; & tamen valent 12 denarios." Domeſday, fol. 234, b. 1.

[3] See the ſeal of Ralph lord Baſſet of Drayton, Plate LVII. fig. 1.; and a ſmall ſeal of ſir Ralph Baſſet, knt. fig. 2. from a drawing by Peter Le Neve. For the Pedigree of the Baſſetts, ſee Dugdale's Catalogue of Nobility.

[4] Cart. 29 Edw. I.

[5] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[6] Eſch. 14 Ric. II. N° 9. Leic. See before, under Radcliffe, p. 381.

[7] Burton, MS.

[8] Eſch. 4 Hen. IV. N° 38. Leic.

[9] Eſch. 18 Hen. VI.

[10] Eſch. 6 Edw. IV. n. 15.

[11] See p. 388.

[12] Eſch. 6 Edw. IV. N° 18. Leic.

[13] Inq. at Leiceſter, 8 April, 9 Hen. VIII; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. IV. (Harl. MSS. 759.) p. 80.

A curious ſeal of the priory of Canwell, in red wax, affixed to a grant to ſir Ralph Shirley of the paſturage in Rakedale, Willoughes, Long Whatton, and Radclyff ſuper Wreke, is engraved in Plate LV. fig. 2.

In 1564, there were 8 families in Rakedale.

The only freeholder here in 1630 was, Sir Henry Shirley, baronet; who died 8 Feb. 1632-3, ſeiſed, inter alia, of the manor of Staunton Harold, value £20. a year, held of the honour of Tutbury; of the manors of Rakedale and Willoughes, each worth £10. a year, held under the honour of Baſſet of Weldon; and of the impropriate rectory of the church of Rakedale, worth 33*s*. 4*d*. a year, held of the king in capite by the 100th part of a knight's fee; the manor of Sileby, worth 40*s*. a year, but by what ſervice was unknown, and divers other lands in various counties. Sir Charles Shirley, his ſon and heir, was then nine years old [1].

In 1655, there was collected in Rakedale, for the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 2*s*. 4*d*.

In 1722, William Atterbury and John Paget, inhabitants of Rakedale, occur in the freeholders book, for freeholds in other parts of the county.

Robert earl Ferrers is now the ſole proprietor of lands in this pariſh, which includes the lordſhip of Willoughes; and his lordſhip has lately purchaſed the land-tax of the pariſh. The two lordſhips of Rakedale and Willoughes (comprized in the pariſh of Rakedale) contain about 1430 acres of land, chiefly grazing; ſome part of which is of excellent quality. The pooreſt land is in the Woulds, which contain about 400 acres out of the above quantity.

The preſent earl became poſſeſſed of this pariſh and lands in fee, in conſequence of a recovery ſuffered by him and the late earl in May, 1781.

The old manſion-houſe at Rakedale, of which, by the liberality of the noble owner, a good view is given in Plate LVI, is at preſent inhabited by Mr. Henton, a ſubſtantial farmer, earl Ferrers's tenant.

Over the porch, which, with the Eaſt bow, was built about 1629, there ſtill remains a large coat of arms carved in ſtone, with the following 50 quarterings: (ſee Plate LVII. fig. 3.)

1. Paly of ſix, Or and Azure, a canton-Ermine; Shirley.
2. Azure, ſix bars gemells, a chief Or; Meyſnill.
3. Gules, a chevron Argent between three garbs Or; Waldeſchef.
4. Or, ſix eaglets Sable, a canton Ermine; Baſing.
5. Or, three piles Gules, a canton Ermine. Baſſet de Drayton, baro.
6. Or, three piles Gules, a canton Vaire, Argent and Azure; Baſſet de Sapcote, baro.
7. Or, three piles Gules, a bend Azure; Ridel, baro.
8. Argent, three bars Sable; Buſy, baro.
9. Gules, a lion rampant Or; De Albineio, comes.
10. Argent, three fleurs de lis between nine croſs croſſlet Sable, within a border Gules; St. Hillary.
11. Azure, three garbs Or; Kiviliock, comes.
12. Or, a lion rampant Gules; Karleolienſis, comes.
13. Azure, a wolf's head eraſed Argent; Lupus, comes Ceſtriæ.
14. Sable, an eagle diſplayed Or; Algar, comes Leiceſtriæ.
15. Azure, ſemé of croſs croſſlets, a lion rampant Or, coronée Gules; Braoſe (or Brewoſe) baro de Brembre.
16. Azure, three bars Vaire, Ermine and Gules; Braoſe (or Brewoſe) baro de Gower.
17. Gules, an eagle diſplayed Argent within a border Argent; Totnes.
18. Gules, two bendlets Or and Argent; Milo comes Herefordiæ.
19. Or, five fuſils in feſs Gules; Newmarch, baro.
20. Azure, a lion rampant Or; Meredith.
21. Argent, a chief indented Sable; Bauent.
22. Ermine, on a bend Azure, three lions heads eraſed Or; Wiſtoneſton.
23. Gules, two bars Or; Harcourt, comes.
24. Argent, two bars Gules; Weſton.
25. Gules, three ſtirrups with their leathers Or; Eſcudamore.
26. Or, a croſs patée, fitché at the foot, Gules; Eſcudamore.
27. Gules, three lions paſſant in pale Argent; Giffard, baro.
28. Or, two chevrons Azure; Muſard (or Muzard) baro.
29. Or, three piles Gules, a canton Ermine, charged with a griffin ſegreant Sable; Baſſet de Brayleſford.
30. Or, a cinquefoil Sable; Brayleſford.
31. Argent, two bars and a canton Sable, charged with a cinquefoil Or; Twyford.
32. Vaire, Argent and Sable, a canton Gules; Staunton de Staunton Harold.
33. Sable, a bend between ſix martlets Or; Eccleſhall.
34. Paly of ſix, Argent and Gules, a bend Azure, charged with three horſeſhoes Or; Meignell.
35. Argent, ſix lions rampant Sable, 3, 2, 1; Savage.
36. Vaire, Argent and Sable; De la Warde, baro.
37. Sable, a lion rampant Argent, armed and langued Gules; Beauley.
38. Or, fretty Gules; Verdon.
39. Argent, three wolves paſſant in pale Sable; Lovet.
40. Ermine, a border Sable bezanté; Turvile.
41. Argent, a croſs Gules voided of the field, between four croſs croſslets fitché Gules; Billinge.
42. Argent, a croſs engrailed Gules; Drayton.
43. Or, a chevron between three leopards' faces Azure; Gemilis.
44. Or, a chief Azure; Lizures.
45. Gules, an orle Vaire, Or and Azure; Lindſey.
46. Azure, a bend cotized between ſix martlets Or; Prayers (or de Pratellis.)
47. Argent, a chief indented Azure; Crayneford.
48. Per pale, Or and Azure, a chevron Ermine. Jewell.
49. Gules, two chevrons Ermine; Dauncey.
50. Sable, a chevron between ten croſſes patée Argent; Paris [2].

Creſt, On a wreath Or and Azure, the buſt of a Saracen, ſide-faced, and couped, proper; wreathed about the temples Argent and Azure, Shirley.

On one ſide is the coat of Berkeley, Gules, a chevron between ten croſſes patée, ſix above, and four below, Argent. Creſt, On a wreath a mitre Gules, garniſhed Or, charged with the paternal coat. On the other ſide, the coat of Devereux, Argent, a feſs Gules, in chief three torteauxes. Creſt, Out of a ducal coronet Or; a talbot's head Argent, eared Gules. This creſt is marked D. S.

On the ſides of the doorway, at the ſpringings of the arch, the creſts of Shirley and Devereux are repeated; Plate LVII. fig. 4, 5.

Over the parlour chimney, on a finely emblazoned ſhield carved on wood, are the eight following quarterings, as in Plate LV. fig. 3.

Quarterly, 1. Shirley; 2. Braoſe of Gower; 3 Milo earl of Hereford; 4. Newmarch: Impaling, Quarterly, 1. Devereux; 2. Argent, a croſs engrailed Gules, between four water-bougets Sable, Bourchier; 3. Quarterly, France and England within a border Argent, Woodſtock duke of Glouceſter; 4. Azure, a bend Argent, cottized Or, between ſix lions rampant of the ſecond; Bohun earl of Hereford. Over the coat is a double creſt, Shirley and Devereux; and under it this motto, ÆTERNA PRÆPONO CADUCIS.

On the ornamented pillars, “ $\overset{\text{S.}}{\text{H. D.}}$ 1631.”

The arms of Shirley and Devereux are alſo carved in the oak wainſcot of the chamber over the parlour.

Towards the latter part of the reign of king Charles II, Robert firſt earl Ferrers built the largeſt bow to the old manſion, and made it a hunting-ſeat.

He alſo kept his hawks here: the ſtone trough upon which they were fed ſtill remaining in the room where they were kept.

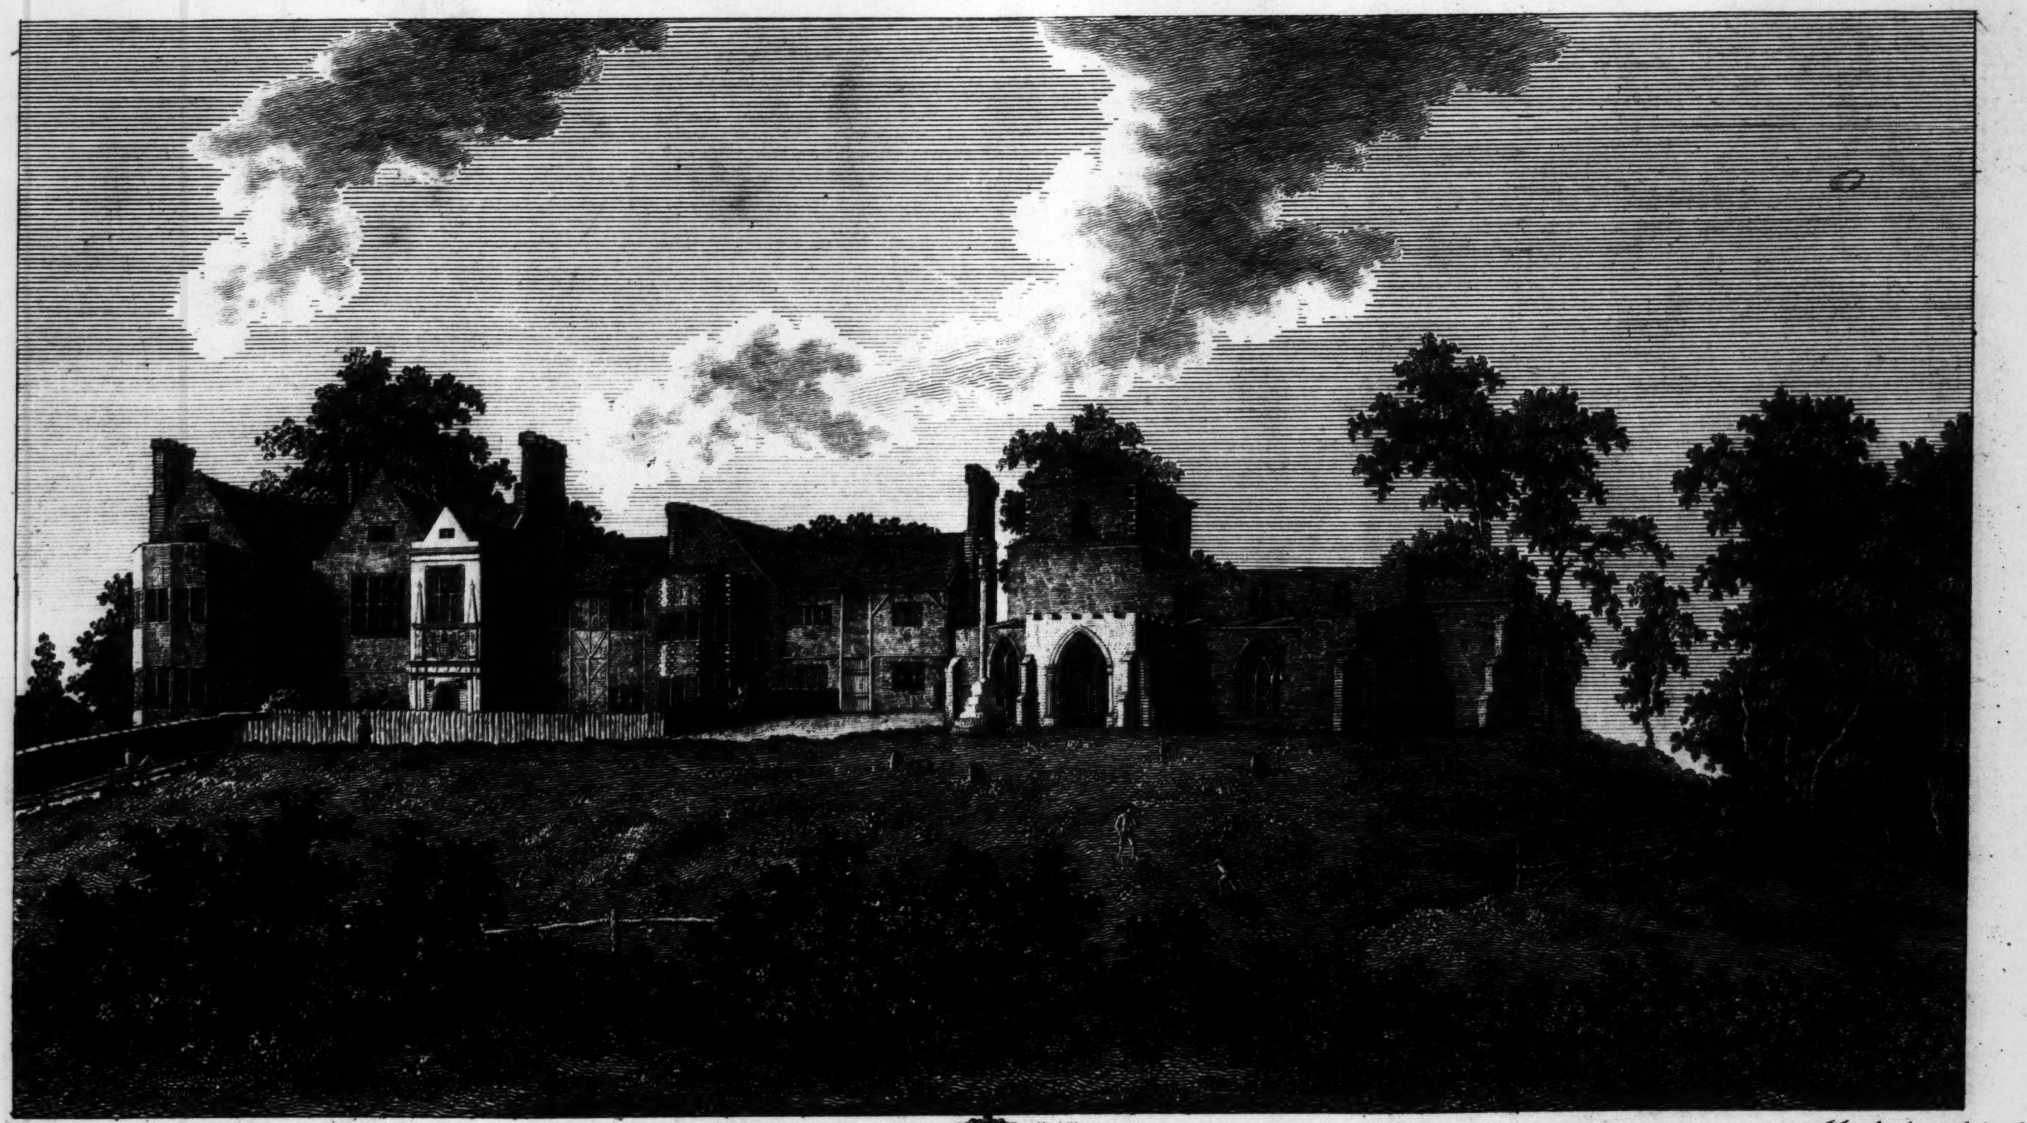
---

[1] Inq. at Leiceſter, 18 April, 1633; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. III. (Harl. MSS. 758.) p. 153.

[2] A coat of ſir Thomas Shirley of Botolph's Bridge, a younger brother of ſir Henry Shirley of Rakedale, with 50 quarterings, differing only in a few of the quarters from that here deſcribed, may be ſeen in Harl. MSS. 4028. p. 194.

The

RAKEDALE.

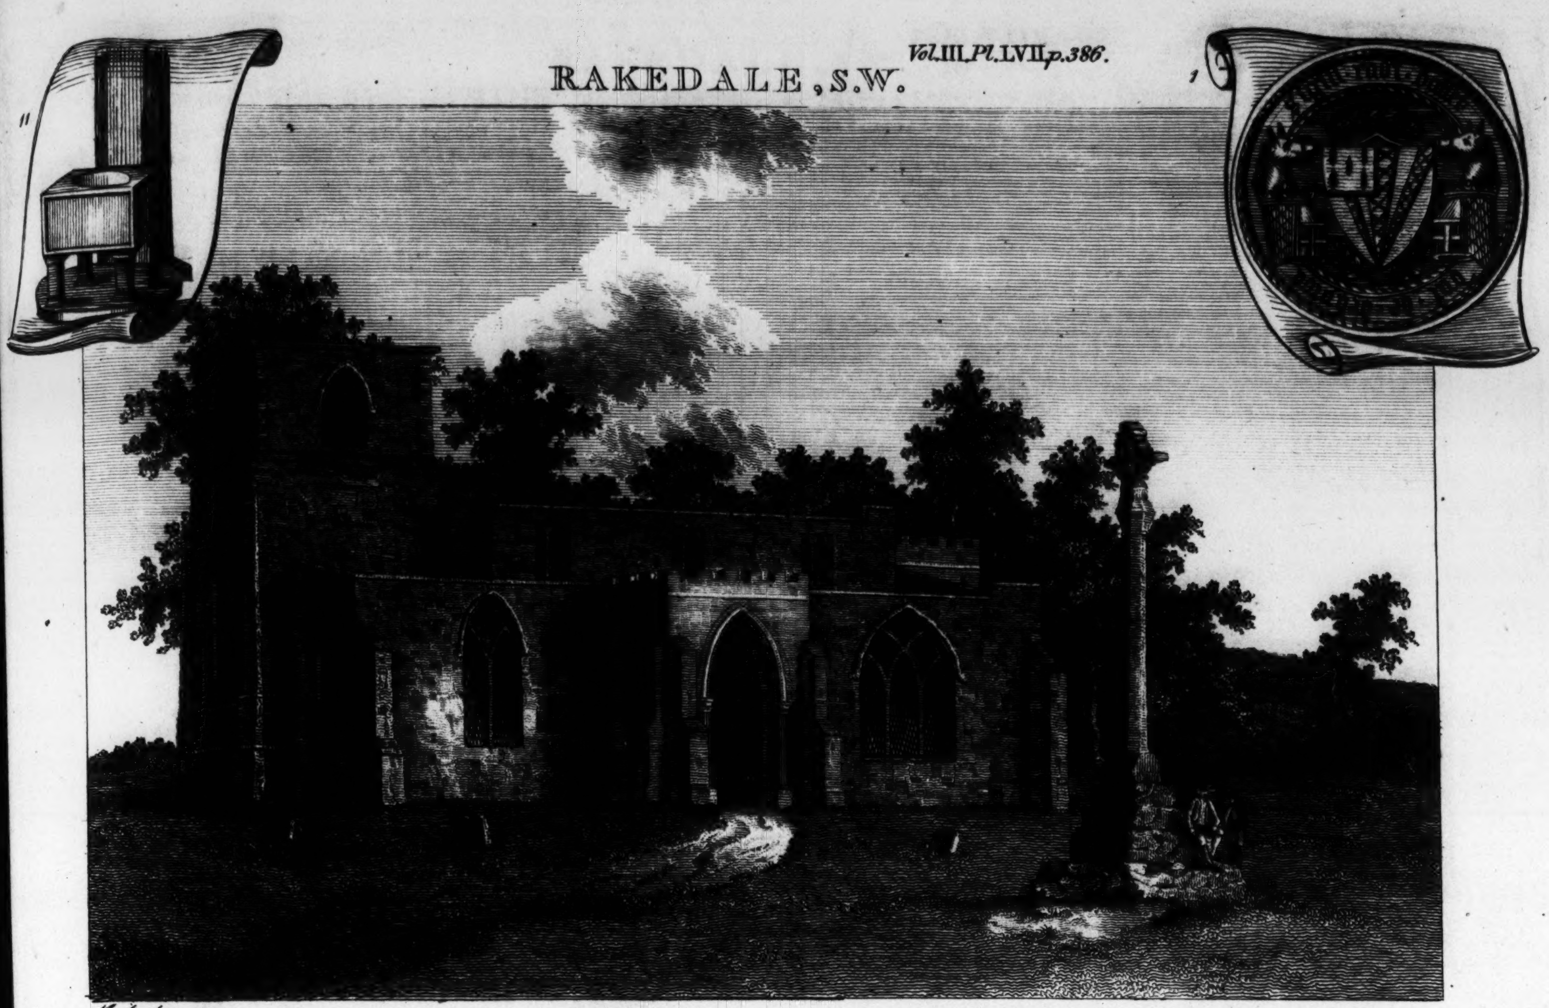


Malcolm del et ſc.

To the Right Hon.ble ROBERT SHIRLEY, Earl FERRERS, Viscount TAMWORTH, &c. &c.
this Plate, is with due Respect and Gratitude inscribed by J. Nichols.

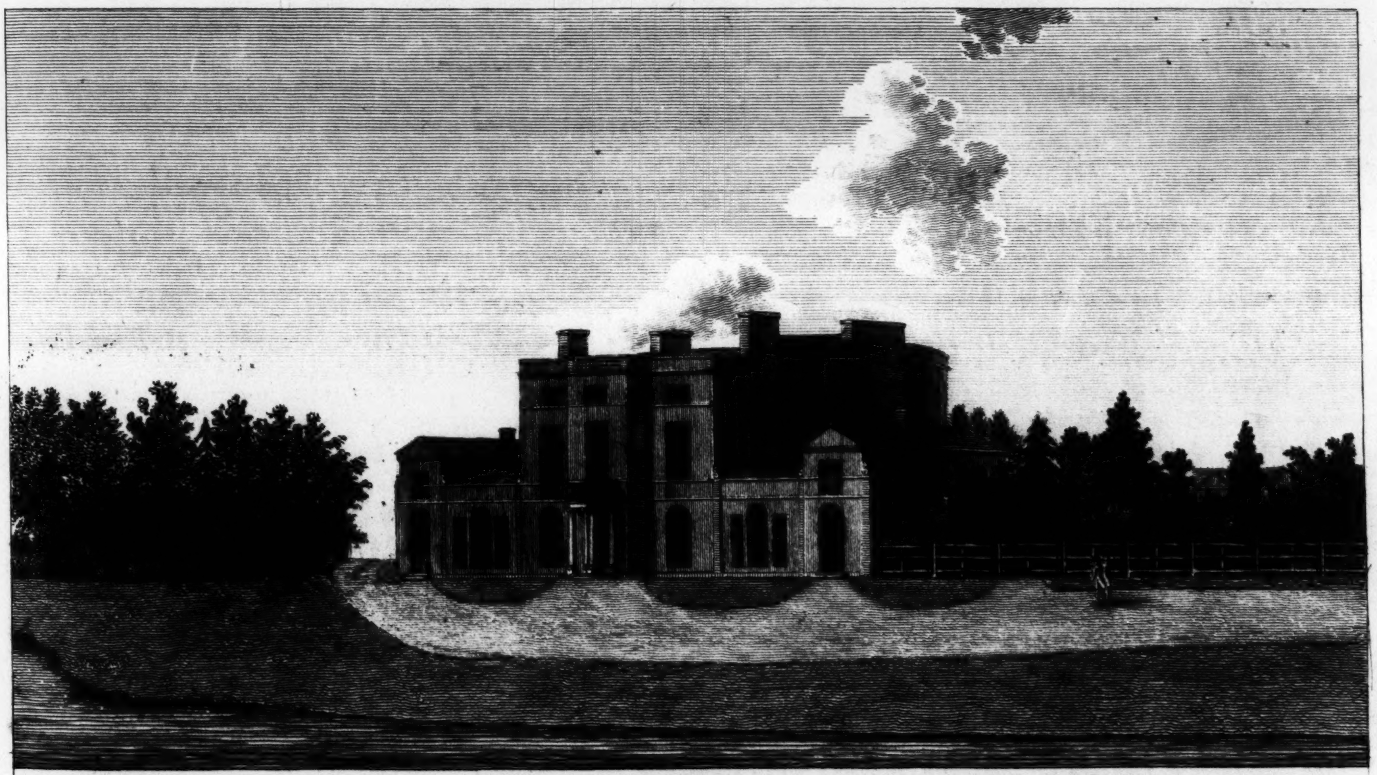
Vol. III. Pl. LVII. p. 386.

RAKEDALE, S.W.



Malcolm 1792

RAKEDALE HALL, 1799.



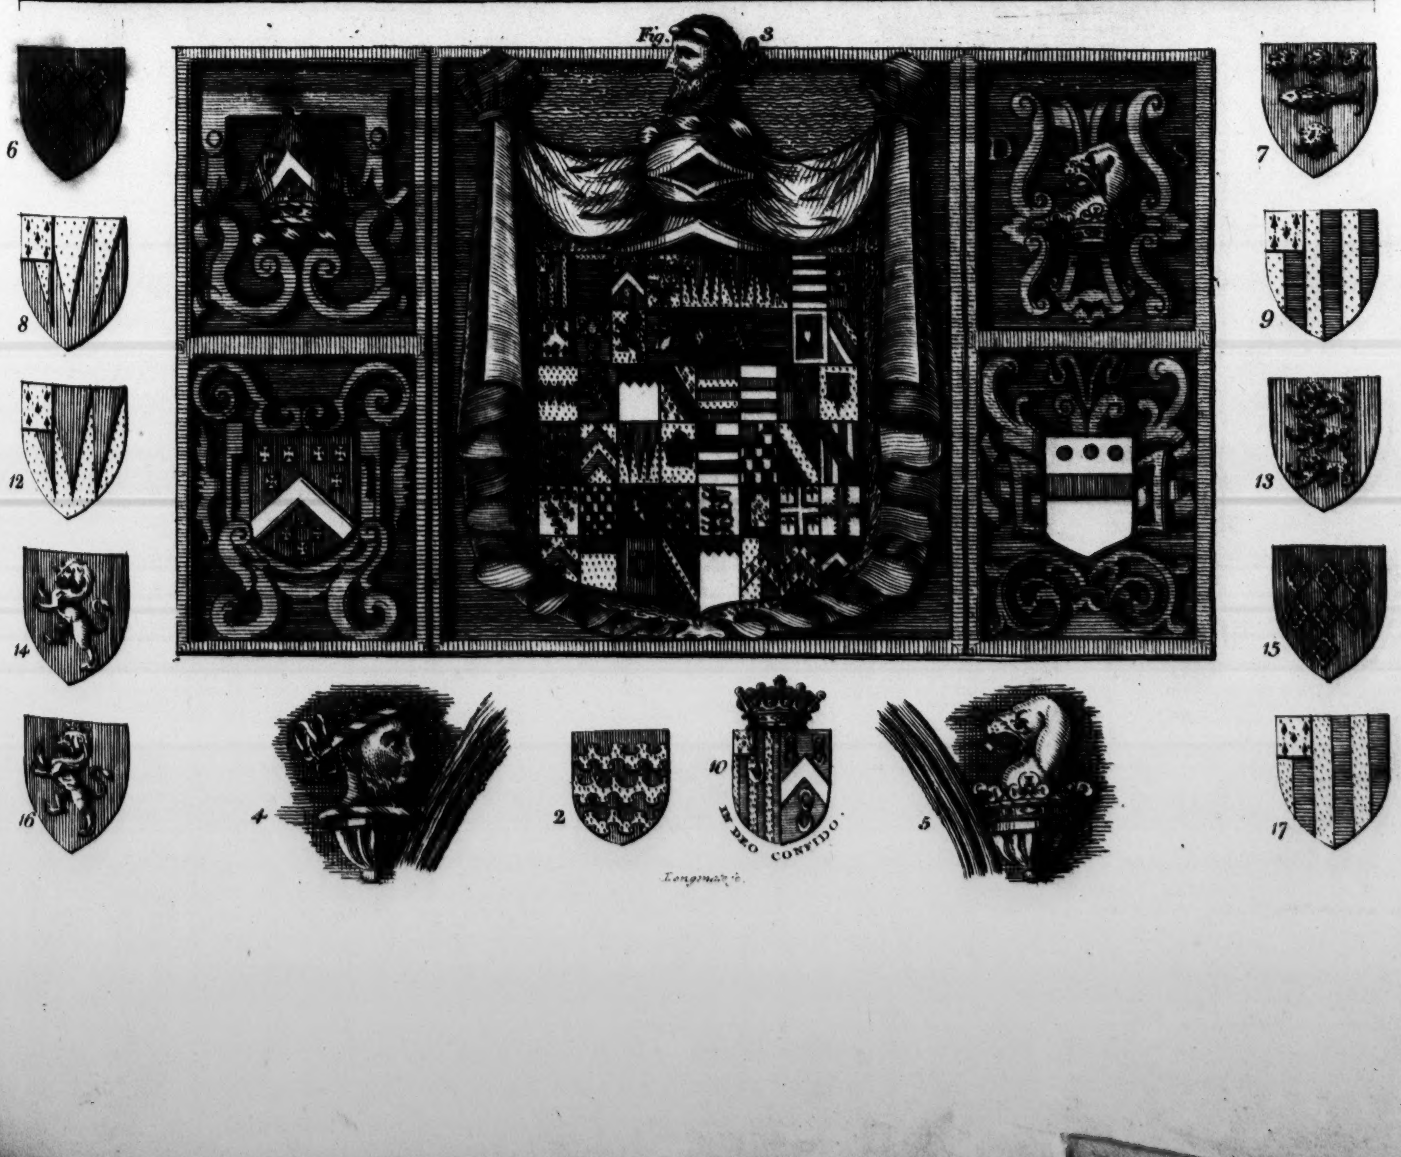


Fig. 3
D
6
7
8
9 12
13
14
15
16
4
2
10
IN DEO CONFIDO
5
17

Longmate sc.

The modern houſe, in which Earl Ferrers reſides when in this part of the county (and built entirely by himſelf in 1785), is alſo engraved in Plate LVII. It ſtands on an eminence, commanding a delightful proſpect; and the plantations are riſing rapidly to perfection. At the diſtance of two miles, the country in the front forms an extenſive valley, the Wreke running through it, whence gradually riſing into hill, it has the appearance of a grand amphitheatre; ſeated on which are Burrow hill, Billeſdon Coplow, Tilton on the hill, Quenby hall, Gaddeſby church, as principal objects. Melton Mowbray on the left, backed by Stapleford hall, with ſeveral intervening churches, have a good effect. Towards the right, the beautiful ſpire of Queneborow, and at the diſtance of about 11 miles Leiceſter is viſible, towards which the eye is guided by a number of intermediate villages, Croft hill, and other pleaſing objects[1]; and beyond which the view is very extenſive. The Weſt is finely bounded by the Foreſt hills, which appear in ſoft pictureſque colouring. It is ſuppoſed the extent of view from Eaſt to Weſt is upwards of 30 miles. The moſt diſtant object is probably near 20 miles off. At the ſame time the whole of the proſpect (except the foreſt) is a rich luxuriant country, chiefly conſiſting of paſture land,

> "with ev'ry mingled charm of hill and dale."

The pedigree of the Shirleys will be given under Staunton Harold; where an account may alſo be ſeen of the family portraits; a few very good copies of which, by H. Singleton, are at preſent in his lordſhip's town-reſidence. They are, a half-length of ſir Robert Shirley, bart. in armour (of whom a good plate by Baſire is here given by the noble owner, Pl. LVIII.); a half length of his ſon Robert firſt earl Ferrers in coronation-robes; and a head of the favourite earl of Eſſex (ſir Robert Shirley's grandfather by his mother's ſide), copied from a miniature (an original) in the poſſeſſion of the preſent earl Ferrers; who has added lately an elegant collection of cabinet pictures to thoſe he had placed in Rakedale houſe ſoon after it was built.

Money raiſed for the poor, of Rakedale	£.	s.	d.
for the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	4	12	6
Expended in county rates, &c.	4	6	6
——— on the poor, —	0	6	0
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	0	0	0
Expended in litigations, —	0	6	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	27	15	8
——— 1784, —	36	2	7
——— 1785, —	19	9	1
Medium of theſe three years,	27	15	9
——— of county expences,	6	11	8
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	0	0	0
——— of nett annual expences,	21	4	1
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	0	0	0
——— of entertainments at meetings,	0	0	0
——— of law expences, —	0	0	0
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 52.

The CHURCH (ſee Plate LVII.)

dedicated to All Saints, conſiſts of a low tower (in which are two bells); a chancel, nave, and South aile.

The chancel and porch, both embattled, were rebuilt in 1787 with ſtone, in the Gothic ſtyle, by the preſent earl Ferrers; who alſo repaired and new-paved the church, and put up a new pulpit and pews.

Mr. Wyrley notices the following arms, fig. 6—9.

"Gules, ſeven maſcles voided and conjoined Or, Quincy."

"Gules, a fiſh naiant in feſs, three leopards' heads in chief, and one in baſe Or."

"An old monument in the window of one kneeling, who holdeth in his hand a banner, wherein is, Gules, three piles Or, a canton Ermine, Baſſet de Rakedale; his ſhield on his back, and in mail[2]." [Theſe arms are ſtill preſerved in a window of the North aile.]

"Paly of ſix, Or and Azure, a canton Ermine, Shirley."

At the Eaſt end of the chancel are the arms of the late Earl Ferrers; impaling, Azure, a chevron between three leaſhes; Cotton of Etwall, co. Derby; motto, IN DEO CONFIDO; fig. 10.

There are alſo two panes of glaſs with the arms of Baſſet, and two with thoſe of Shirley, in the aile and nave; and in ſome of the windows, are ſingle horſe-ſhoes Or, being the badge of Ferrers.

All theſe were put up by the preſent earl, after he had completed the new chancel.

The font is antient, and ſquare; ſee fig. 11.

The arms fig. 12—17 are in Radcliffe church; and have been deſcribed in p. 382.

This church was given by Geva Ridell to the priory of Canwell, co. Stafford, at its foundation; and in the Matriculus of 1220 is deſcribed as under the patronage of that priory; the rector, Richard Baſſet, paying to the prior three marks and a ſtone of wax ab antiquo[3].

In 1344, the procurations were 7*s.* 6¾*d.*; the rectory was taxed at 15 marks; and paid 2*s.* for Peter-pence. The then patron was Ralph Baſſet.

At the time of the appropriation of this church, an annual penſion of 13*s.* 4*d.* at Michaelmas was granted to the biſhop of Lincoln, "pro indempnitate epiſcopi, ratione appropriationis[4]."

In 1534-5, the procurations and ſynodals were 13*s.* 4*d.*; to the college of St. Frideſwide 1*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; the biſhop's penſion 13*s.* 4*d.*; and the value of the vicarage, 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

In 1545, John Beaumont, of Gracedieu, eſq. obtained a licence of alienation from the king, to ſell to Francis Shirley, eſq. of Staunton Harold, the rectory and vicarage of Rakedale; which formerly belonged to the priory of Canwell, and afterwards to Cardinal Wolſey[5], who was attainted of high treaſon.

In 1609, ſir George Shirley, knight and baronet, held the rectory of Rakedale in capite.

In 1654, it was, by deſcent, the property of ſir Robert Shirley; and is now in like manner veſted in earl Ferrers.

In the king's books it is entered, among the diſcharged livings, as a curacy; which is erroneous, it being a peculiar. There are no procurations paid; nor is it under the biſhop's juriſdiction, the preſent earl Ferrers being the patron and viſitor. His lordſhip poſſeſſes ſome curious old deeds reſpecting this pariſh.

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
Richard Baſſet, 1220.	Prior and convent of Canwell.
Walter de Rokeſey, 1261.
Thomas de Sengelton, 1274.
John Marſhall[6], Aug. 12, reſigned Dec. 9, 1404.	Sir Thomas Aſton, knt.; and others.

Richard Weſt was ſtyled vicar in 1534.

Since that time, there have been no regular preſentations; but an officiating miniſter has been appointed by the Shirley family, to continue as curate during their pleaſure. The ſalary is alſo optional.

Mr. Rawlins was curate at the time of the Heraldic Viſitation in 1682.

The Rev. William Caſſon, the preſent curate, was appointed by Robert earl Ferrers (when lord Tamworth) in 1783.

---

[1] Throſby, Excurſions, p. 439.

[2] Wyrley, MS.

[3] See the Introductory Volume, p. lx.

[4] This appears by the Epiſcopal Regiſter at Lincoln; and earl Ferrers is in poſſeſſion of all the deeds.

[5] Canwell priory was diſſolved 17 Hen. VIII; being given, with divers others, by Pope Clement VII, to Cardinal Wolſey, for the founding of the colleges at Chriſt Church and Ipſwich.

[6] "Joh' Marſhall, clericus, præſentatus per Thom' Aſton, mil', Joh' Leyre, Joh' Broune, & Joh' Outhorpe, capellanos, ad eccleſiam de Rakedale, Linc' diœc', 12 Aug. 1404; reſignavit 9 Dec. 1404." Reg. Beaufort.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

On flat ſtones in the aile:

1. "Here lieth the body of George Henton[1], who departed this life the 22d of November, 1731,
in the 71ſt year of his age."

2. "Memento mori.
Here lieth interred the body of William Henton, of Hoby, the ſon of George and Elizabeth Henton,
of this pariſh, deceaſed,
who departed this life the 1ſt of May,
ann. Dom. 1733, in the 32d year of his age."

3. "Here lie the remains of Mr. George Henton, who departed this life the 23d day of January, 1767,
in the 68th year of his age."

4. "Here lieth interred the body of Jane the daughter of George Henton, gent.; by Jane his wife; who departed this life Feb. 2, 1779, aged 47 years."

In the church-yard remains a curious and perfect old croſs (as ſhewn conſpicuouſly in the view of the church, Pl. LVII.) the ſhaft of which is one ſolid ſtone.

When the chancel and porch were rebuilt, the ground in the church-yard was removed almoſt three feet deep, to make it level with the floor of the church; and in digging there were found, towards the extremity of the church-yard, a great number of bones laying all together, as if many bodies had been depoſited in one grave; the ſoil about them a pure ſand, and not the natural ſoil of the place, which is chiefly gravel and clay. A ſilver coin of Henry III. and two very antient medals, were alſo found in the church-yard; and between the croſs and the church, a large jaſper-bead, cut in angles, with a hole through it (Plate LV. fig. 4.) was diſcovered and taken up.

Fig. 5, a marine foſſil, or cornua ammonis, was found 13 yards deep, in ſinking a well, in 1789, on the ſummit where lord Ferrers has built his new houſe; and fig. 6. a freſh-water muſcle petrified, at 53 yards deep in the ſame well.

The whole depth of the well is 61 yards: the water came in upon ſtriking through a thick ſtratum of very fine ſand at 59 yards deep: till then the ſoil had varied very little from blue marle, except that near the bottom the blue marle had a mixture of ſand.

Fig. 7. is a remarkable ſtone, which has long been preſerved at the door of the old manſion-houſe at Rakedale; and is ſuppoſed to have formerly ſupported ſome image or holy-water veſſel in the church.

WILGHES,

called alſo Willoughes, a ſmall manor within the pariſh of Rakedale, is noticed in Domeſday, as containing two ploughlands, which then lay waſte, but were valued at twelve-pence. From that time to the preſent the owners have been the ſame with thoſe of Rakedale.

"This manor," ſays Mr. Burton in 1641, "ſome time belonging to the lord Baſſet of Drayton, is now the inheritance of ſir Charles Shirley, bart.; and is held by knight's ſervice of the manor of Weldon in Northamptonſhire, now the inheritance of ſir Chriſtopher Hatton, of Kirby in the ſaid county, of the order of the Bath, knight."

There ſtood a hamlet of the name of Willoughes in a field of about 37 acres, now called The Townſhip, in which the ſites of houſes are ſtill diſcernable; and a hill towards the South-weſt ſide of the cloſe is known by the inhabitants of Rakedale by the name of the Chapel Hill. Mr. Burton, however, makes no mention of this hamlet having had a chapel.

It is now (1800) the property of Robert earl Ferrers; but contains not a ſingle dwelling.

The ſide of this lordſhip which joins Thruſſington is ſeparated from it by a remarkably deep ditch.

ADDITIONS to HOBY (ſee p. 264.)

antiently called Hobye, Houby, Howby, and Houtbeby, is ten miles diſtant from Leiceſter, and ſix from Melton; bounded by Thruſſington, Shoby, Rakedale, Friſby, Rotherby, and Brokeſby; divided from the three laſt by the Wreke.

For "ſir Robert de Horpedon," near the bottom of p. 264, read "ſir Robert de Grendon)," being the ſame perſon who is mentioned at the top of the ſecond column of that page.

About the year 1785, the ſkeleton of a human body was diſcovered in digging for gravel at the edge of this lordſhip, oppoſite to a ſhepherd's cottage, and very near the boundary of Rakedale. The place was within about ten yards of the high road which leads from Hoby to Rakedale. Previous to the incloſure of Hoby this muſt have been a dreary and ſolitary ſpot; and conjecture prompts to believe that ſome traveller had been deſtroyed and buried by the inhuman perpetrator of the deed. When earl Ferrers went to ſee the gravel or rather ſand-pit (which it afterwards proved), only the ſkull was remaining; the labourers had either thrown the crumbling bones into the carts with the ſandy gravel (which they took to mend the road), or had diſpoſed of them otherwiſe. From the ſkull being rather of a ſmall ſize, he is inclined to believe it was that of a female. The appearance of the ſkull indicated its having lain there many years. Enquiries were made in the pariſh, if they remembered to have heard that any perſon was miſſing in that neighbourhood; but none of the inhabitants had a recollection of any circumſtance that could elucidate the above conjecture.

In the year 1791, ſir George Robinſon, bart. ſold the greateſt part of his property here, which he inherited from an heireſs of the Villiers family of Brookſby; viz. four farms; one of which, about 163 acres, was purchaſed by the preſent earl Ferrers (who has ſince alſo purchaſed the land-tax on this farm); another, tenanted by William Willows, was purchaſed by himſelf; a third, tenanted by Thomas Henton, purchaſed by himſelf; and the fourth, tenanted by George Alſop, was bought by Peter Lafargue, eſq. of ——— in Lincolnſhire.

Sir George Robinſon ſtill retains the manor, and a fiſhery on the Wreke; upon which river he has a mill, which is quite out of repair.

A part, called Hoby New-fields, is claimed as a ſeparate manor by George Wrighte, eſq. to whom Brookſby belongs, to which lordſhip it adjoins, and to which pariſh it belongs.

There is a mound in a flat meadow near the river, part of earl Ferrers's farm, which the inhabitants (for ſome unknown reaſon, if there ever was any) call Robin Hood's Barn: it appears to be one of thoſe mounds which the Romans threw up to mark their marches to the rear of their legions.

---

[1] Mrs. Alice Stevens, wife of Mr. Edward Stevens, and daughter of Mr. George Henton of Rakedale, died in 1758, æt. 63. See vol. II. p. 420.

RERESBY,

a large and populous village, antiently called Reriſby, and now moſt uſually written Rearſby, is ſeated on the turnpike-road, ſeven miles from Leiceſter, eight from Melton, and ten from Loughborough; bounded partly, on the North and Eaſt, by the river Wreke, on the Weſt by Radcliffe, on the South by Queneborow, and on the Eaſt by Gaddeſby and Brokeſby; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote.

In the time of king Edward the Confeſſor, Alnod held two ploughlands all but two oxgangs in Rereſbi, with ſac and ſoc. Two ploughs were then employed here; and it was valued at three ſhillings; but at the general ſurvey, when it was held by Ingald under Robert de Buci, was worth ten ſhillings. One plough was in the demeſne; and there were eight acres of meadow, and half a mill worth two ſhillings[1].

Two ploughlands all but one oxgang in Redreſbi, together with eight acres of meadow, were returned, at the general ſurvey, as parcel of the king's manor of Barrow[2].

Hugo Burdet held at the ſurvey, under the Counteſs Judith, two ploughlands and a half in Rereſbi; which had been valued at ten ſhillings, and were then worth twenty. One plough was in the demeſne; and a prieſt, with one villan and three bordars. There were two acres of meadow, and a mill of two ſhillings value[3].

This town was antiently divided between the Neviles and Chamberlaines.

In the reign of king John, Ralph Chamberlain was lord of this manor; in whoſe poſterity it continued till the reign of Henry VI.

On the aid granted to king Henry III. in 1235, towards the marrying of his ſiſter with the emperor of the Romans, Hugo de Nevill paid half a mark for a knight's fee in Rereſby; and, in the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about the year 1240, Rereſby-Chamberlein is deſcribed as conſiſting of four ploughlands; Hugo de Nevill held another ploughland; and William Burdet held alſo a fee and a half in Loſeby, Rereſby, &c.[4]

In 1247, the following legal proceſſes occur:

1. "Robertus de Folevill, Radulfus Camerarius, vic' Marneham, Johannes de Folevile, Radulfus de Folevile, Petrus de Segrave, & Aluredus de Rereſby, recuperaverunt ſeiſinam ſuam verſùs Hugonem de Nevill, de communiâ paſture ſue in XIV acris terre, quas ipſe incluſit in Rereſby; & quas dicunt eſſe ſeparalem ſuam, & ſeparalem omnium anteceſſorum ſuorum[5]."

2. "Walterus le Bret & Iſolda uxor ejus, qui tulere breve verſùs Radulfum Camerarium de Rereſby, de unâ virgatâ terre ibidem, unde idem Radulfus injuſtè, &c. diſſeiſivit Willielmum de Rereſby, fratrem predicte Iſolde, &c. Non eſt perſecutus. Ideò in miſericordiâ, &c."[6]

In the Itinerary of 1280, Rereſby, Sitheſton, and Gaddeſby, anſwered collectively as one vill.

In the reign of king Edward I. ſir John Folvile, knt. was ſeiſed of lands here. He had iſſue ſir Philip de Folvile, who died about 1307, ſeiſed of certain lands in the manors of Rereſby and Shouldby; and was father of John Folvile lord of Rereſby, who had iſſue Euſtace Folvile: but, the Folviles being about that time indicted for the murder of Roger Beler, their lands here were ſeized by the king; nor do we find that they were ever reſtored to them; for, this manor being granted to Edmond of Woodſtock, it was, after his attainder in 1330, given by the king to Roger Mortimer earl of March, for Geoffrey his younger ſon[7].

The Segrave Chartulary notices the following deeds:

1. A grant of Ralph Chamberlayne to Stephen de Segrave, of the homage of all the land which Gilbert the father of the ſaid Stephen held of the ſaid Ralph in Rereſby; namely, of one virgate of land which, with an additional toft, William Butiler held under Gilbert; to be held by the ſervice of 25*d.* a year.

2. Another grant from the ſaid Ralph to the ſaid Stephen of a virgate of land held by Fegge, and a toft held by Seled.

3. A grant of Roger de Reriſby, to the ſaid Stephen and his heirs, of the homage and ſervice of an annual pound of comin on New-year's day[8].

In 1325, it was found that Stephen de Segrave, deceaſed, and Alice his wife, held 14*s.* 8*d.* rent, ariſing out of divers free tenements in Gerendon, Reriſby, and Querndon, of the honour of Winton; but by what ſervice was unknown[9].

In the ſame year alſo it was found that John de Segrave, deceaſed, and Chriſtian his wife, held divers rents in Reriſby; and that John de Segrave (ſon and heir of Stephen de Segrave, couſin of the aforeſaid John de Segrave, ſenior) was his next heir[10].

In 1343, Ralph Baſſet of Drayton died ſeiſed of the third part of a knight's fee (which Ralph Chamberleyn held) in Rereſby, Othorpe, and Ilveſton[11].

In 1346, Philip de Folvile (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 4*s.* for a tenth part of a knight's fee; Ralph Chamberleyne, 6*s.* 8*d.* for a ſixth part of a knight's fee; and William de Nevil 3*s.* 3*d.*; all parcel of the fees of Cheſter and Huntingdon[12].

In 1377, John ſon and heir of Ralph Chamberleyne, of Rereſby, releaſed all his right in all thoſe lands and tenements, &c. which had belonged to Ralph Chamberleyn his father and Ralph Chamberleyn his grandfather, in Rereſby and Thruſſington, to Robert Folevile parſon of Saxulby, and others, and to their heirs[13].

The poſſeſſions of the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter in this lordſhip are thus noticed in their Regiſter:

Dona diverſorum, ſicut patet per cartas ſubſequentes.

Edwardus rex, &c. Conceſſimus & licentiam dedimus Roberto Bryd, vicario de Queniboro, quòd ipſe IIII meſſuagia, III virgatas terre, & IIII acras & I rodam prati, cum pertinentiis, in Queniboro, Belgrave, & Rereſby, dare poſſit & aſſignare cuidam capellano divina ibidem celebraturo in perpetuum, &c.

Edwardus rex, &c. Conceſſimus & licentiam dedimus Willielmo de Aſton & Roberto filio Ricardi de Elmeleye, quòd ipſi VI meſſuagia, LX acras terre, duas acras prati, & tres ſolidates redditûs, cum pertinentiis, in Queniboro, Burſtal, & Rereſby, dare poſſint & aſſignare abbati & conventui Leyc', ut in cartâ.

Memorandum, quòd Robertus Bryd vicarius de Quenyboro dedit, conceſſit, & per cartam ſuam confirmavit, W. de Aſton & Roberto filio Ricardi de Elmeleye, duas dolas prati, cum pertinentiis, in Rereſby; quarum una continet IX rodas, & altera VI rodas, &c.; que valent per annum IX s̃.

Habemus ibi, ex perquiſito fratris Willielmi Charyte, & ex quietâ clamatione Ricardi Reynold & Roberti Stefhenez, totum jus ſuum & clameum quod habuerunt in omnibus terris illis & tenementis, &c. ut in cartis de Rereſby, que nuper habuerunt ex dono & feoffamento Johannis Stedeman de Markfeld South.

---

[1] "Ingaldus tenet de R[oberto de Buci] in Rereſbi 2 carucatas terræ, 2 bovatas minus. Tempore Regis Edwardi erant 2 carucæ ibi. In dominico eſt una; & dimid' pars molini de 2 ſolidis, & 8 acræ prati. Valuit 3 ſolidos." Domeſday, fol. 234. b. 1.

[2] "In Redreſbi 2 carucatæ terræ, 1 bovatâ minus; & 8 acræ prati." Ibid. fol. 237. a.

[3] "Hugo Burdet tenet de Comitiſſâ [Judith] 2 carucatas terræ & dimidiam in Rereſbi. Ibi eſt 1 caruca in dominico; & preſbyter, cum 1 villano, & 3 bordariis; & molinum de 2 ſolidis; & 10 acræ prati. Valuit 10 ſolidos; modò 20 ſolidos." Ibid. fol. 236. a. 2.

[4] See before under Loſeby, p. 337.

[5] Placita 31 Hen. III. Rot. 16. in Recept. Scaccarii.

[6] Ibid. Rot. 24.

[7] Cart. 4 Edw. III. n. 74.

[8] Appendix to vol. I. p. 113.

[9] Eſch. 19 Edw. II. N° 91. Leic.

[10] Eſch. 19 Edw. II. N° 88. Leic.

[11] Eſch. 17 Edw. III. N° 59. Leic.

[12] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[13] Cart. 51 Edw. III. N° 20.

Habemus ibi, per adquiſitionem fratris Willielmi Charyte, 1 meſſuagium, 1 croftum, 1 virgatam terre, que Robertus Stefhenez de Leyceſtriâ nuper tenuit; modò in tenurâ Johannis Noobul.

Capellanus cantarie de Quenyboro tenet duas dolas prati, que valent per annum ixs̄. vid̄.; & reddit xxs̄. Summa, xxixs̄. vid̄.

Reſolutiones; ſcilt, domino de Norfolk xviiid̄. pro 1 meſſuagio & virgatâ terre; & iis̄. vid̄. Johanni Kynull pro crofto.—Require terrarium de predictâ virgatâ in Rereſby in terrario fratris Willielmi Charyte[1]."

In the terrier referred to under Barkby, p. 45, Rereſby fills two pages.

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Rereſby was rated at 2*l.* 9*s.* 0*d.*; and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 3*s.*

In the reign of king Henry VI. Chamberlayne's manor came to Walter Keble, who in 1446 could diſpend of old rent of aſſiſe 20*l.* yearly, beſides all charges[2].

In 1504, ... Cotton died ſeiſed of the manor of Rereſby called Cotton's manor; held of the king, as of his earldoms of Cheſter and Huntingdon, by the ſervice of a tenth part of one knight's fee[3].

Thomas Kebylt died 18 July, 1526, ſeiſed of a manor in Rereſby, called Chamberlayne's manor, held of William Aſhby by knight's ſervice; and John his ſon and heir was 12 years old[4].

In 1535, ... Cotton died ſeiſed of the manor of Rereſby; held of the king, as of his honour of Huntingdon, by knight's ſervice[5].

In 1545, Thomas Laney and his wife were cited, to ſhew cauſe why they held the manor of Rereſby[6].

John Keble died in 1557-8, ſeiſed of Chamberlayne's manor here[7]; leaving his two ſiſters, Elizabeth wife of William Noble, and Joyce wife of ——— Clement, his coheirs; on partition of whoſe eſtate, this was allotted to Noble.

Thomas Cotton was cited in 1565, to ſhew by what title he held Rereſby manor and certain lands there[8].

In 1585, Henry Sacheverell, eſq. died ſeiſed of a manor, or capital meſſuage, called Chamberlayne's manor; alſo of ten virgates and an half of land, meadow, and paſture, with the appurtenances, in Rereſby, belonging to the ſame manor; held of the queen, as of her honour of Cheſter and Huntingdon, by the ſervice of a moiety of a ſixth part of a knight's fee; he died June 2, 1584; and Francis Sacheverell, his ſon and heir, was then aged 10 years and upwards[9].

In 1595, Mr. Wyrley deſcribes Rereſby to be the habitation of ——— Keble, eſq.; and adds, "Sacheverell, Keble, and Noble, be in this town competitors."

In 1598, it was found that William Watts, gent. died ſeiſed of one meſſuage, three cloſes, and ſeven acres of land, in Rereſby; that they were held of the queen, as of her honour of Cheſter and Huntingdon; that he died 26 April laſt; and that Thomas Watts, his ſon and heir, was then aged 35 years[10].

In 1608, it was found that George Noble, gent. died ſeiſed of a quarter of the manor called Chamberlayne's manor in Rereſby, held of the king, as of the honour of Cheſter and Huntingdon, by the ſervice of a moiety of a ſixth part of a knight's fee[11].

The freeholders here in 1630 were, Thomas Watts, chief conſtable; George Noble, gent.; George Hubbert, gent; Thomas Miller; William Moleſworth, and William Gilbert.

John Richardſon, clerk, died Feb. 3, 1633, ſeiſed of one meſſuage, three virgates and three quarters of meadow land and paſture in Rereſby; and left, by Alice his wife, William his ſon and heir aged 13[12].

In 1655, there was collected in Rereſby, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 2*l.* 18*s.* 4*d.*

Caſtle Ward rents of Rereſby due, and paid at Michaelmas 1673, to ſir Seymour Shirley[13]:

John Noble (now Pochin, or Ruding)	£0	1	7¼
William Brett (now John King)	0	0	6
Mr. Thomas Laney	0	0	3
Nicholas Jeſſon	0	0	6
Jeſſon for Weſt Curts and 2 yard-lands	0	0	7½
Nicholas Milton (now George Elliott)	0	0	9
John Orton	0	4	7¼

The following apologetic note, on behalf of Mr. Cotton of Rereſby, was addreſſed to the Heralds who made the Viſitation of this county:

"Gentlemen, Blythe Hall, 30° Martii, 1682.

I have here incloſed you by my good friend (this bearer) Mr. Cotton, a draught of what will be proper to be entered by you; which when you have entered, he will ſubſcribe, and give you the uſual fee for a gentleman. As to the arms, he deſires a reſpite, conſidering he hath not as yet ſettled his eſtate, which he doth ere long reſolve to do, and then to have the grant of arms to reach to the perſon on whom he ſhall ſettle it, and to his deſcendants. I heartily wiſh you good ſucceſs in your buſineſs; reſting your affectionate friend, WILLIAM DUGDALE."

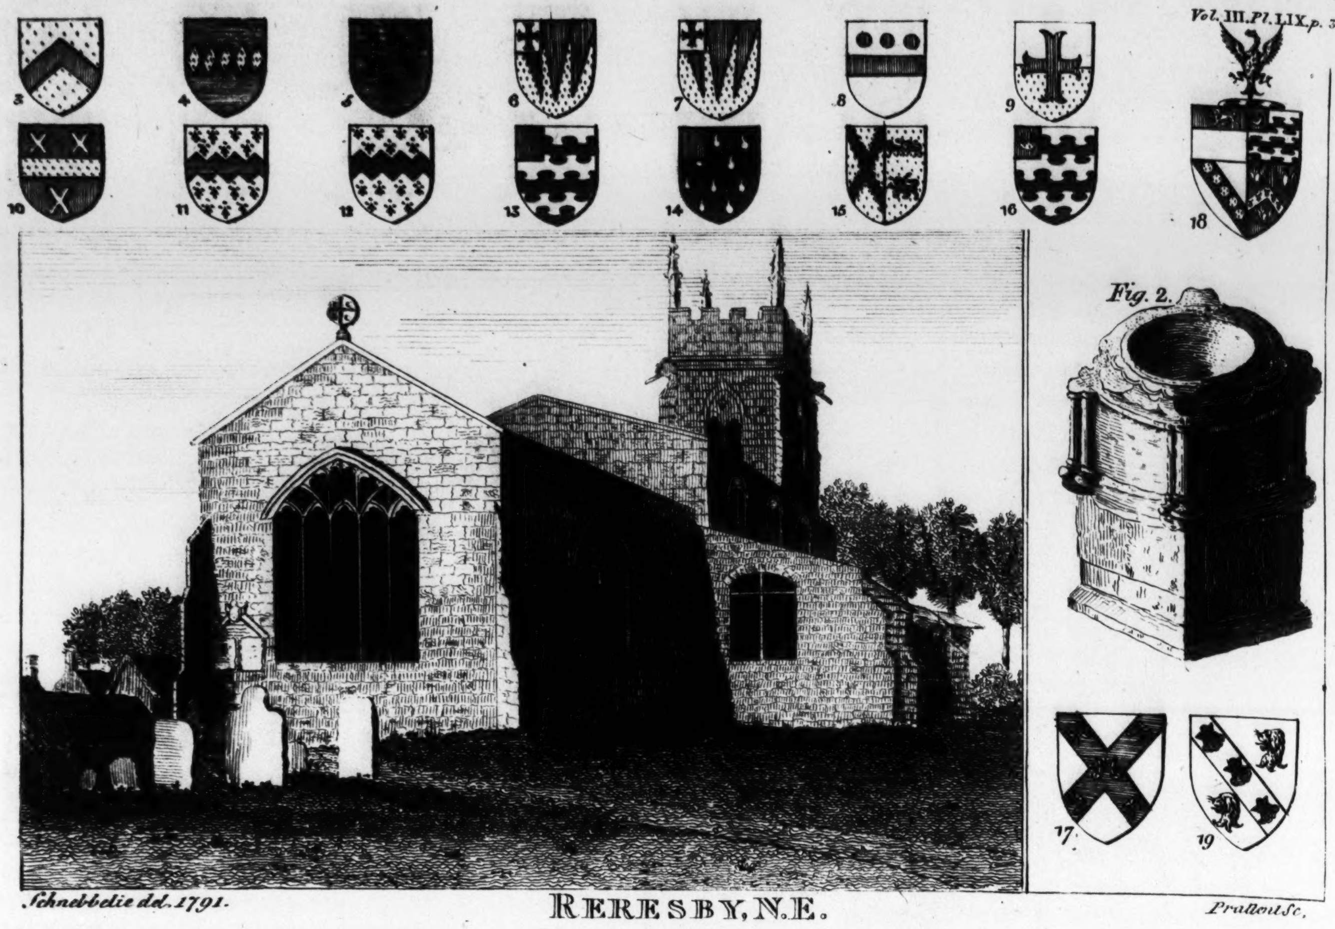
Thomas Noble, eſq. of the borough of Leiceſter, who died Feb. 8, 1743, deviſed his property at Rereſby to his friend Rogers Ruding, eſq. of Weſtcotes[14].

In 1722, ſixteen freeholders polled from this pariſh; and in 1775, we find 25 names.

In an act of parliament paſſed in 1761, for incloſing Rereſby-field, containing about 1600 acres, William Pochin, eſq. is deſcribed as lord of the manor, and proprietor of a conſiderable part of the lands, and of the whole of the ſoil of the waſte grounds, and poſſeſſing a conſiderable right of common; John Orton, clerk, patron and incumbent of the rectory, and entitled to all the great and ſmall tithes, and other rectorial dues, ariſing within the pariſh, and alſo in right of his church, and in his own right, entitled to part of the lands, paſture-grounds, and having a right of common; and Rogers Ruding, eſq. John Kilby, gent. William Benſkin, Francis Allſopp, and others, were the proprietors of the reſidue of the lands and right of common. An allotment was directed to be made to the lord of the manor, in full ſatisfaction for his right to the ſoil of the waſte grounds, and the public roads over the field, to be held in ſeveralty for ever, and diſcharged of all common and other right of any other of the perſons intereſted; and ſuch farther part of the waſte grounds as in the judgement of the Commiſſioners (incluſive of the aforeſaid allotment) ſhould be equal in value to Mr. Pochin's intereſt in the ſoil of the waſte grounds and public-roads: The allotment to Mr. Orton, as rector, in lieu of all the great and ſmall tithes, and other rectorial dues (except mortuaries and ſurplice-fees) ariſing out of the uninclosed lands, and the houſes and yards, homeſteads, gardens, and orchards (not exceeding one rood each) of the ſeveral proprietors of land in the fields, and from the reſpective owners and occupiers thereof reſpectively, ſuch parcel of the ſaid field as (quantity and quality conſidered) ſhould contain in the whole a full ſeventh part of all the unincloſed lands, in full compenſation of all the great and ſmall tithes of all the antient incloſures in Rearſby, belonging to proprietors of land, ground, or right of common in the ſaid field; and alſo, from all the homeſteads, gardens, and orchards, in Rearſby, containing in quantity more than one rood each, ſuch parcel of the unincloſed land of ſuch reſpective proprietors as (quantity and quality conſidered) ſhould be equal in value to one tenth part of the yearly rent or value of ſuch antient incloſures, homeſteads, gardens, and orchards, reſpectively; which ſaid ſeveral parcels of land, to be ſet out to the ſaid John Orton as rector, to be veſted in him and his ſucceſſors in lieu of all great and ſmall tithes, and other rectorial dues and payments aforeſaid (except as before excepted), and in full diſcharge thereof, and to be ſubject to the ſame ſort of taxes and payments as the aforeſaid great and ſmall tithes, and other rectorial

---

[1] Charyte's Rentale, fol. cxxiii.
[2] Burton, MS.
[3] Eſch. 20 Hen. VII.
[4] Inq. at Leiceſter, 17 Hen. VIII; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. IV. (Harl. MSS. 759.) p. 180.
[5] Eſch. 27 Hen. VIII.
[6] Ibid. Record. 36 Hen. VIII. Rot. 34.
[7] Eſch. 5 & 6 Phil. & Mar. n. 35.
[8] Paſch. Record. 7 Eliz. Rot. 51.
[9] Eſch. at Leiceſter, 22 Aug. 27 Eliz.
[10] Eſch. at Leiceſter, 4 Oct. 40 Eliz.
[11] Eſch. at Leiceſter, 19 May, 6 Jac. I.
[12] Inq. at Leiceſter, 18 April, 10 Car. I.; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. II. (Harl. MSS. 757.) p. 330.
[13] Extracts from the book of Chief Rents belonging to ſir Robert Shirley.
[14] See his will hereafter under Skeffington.

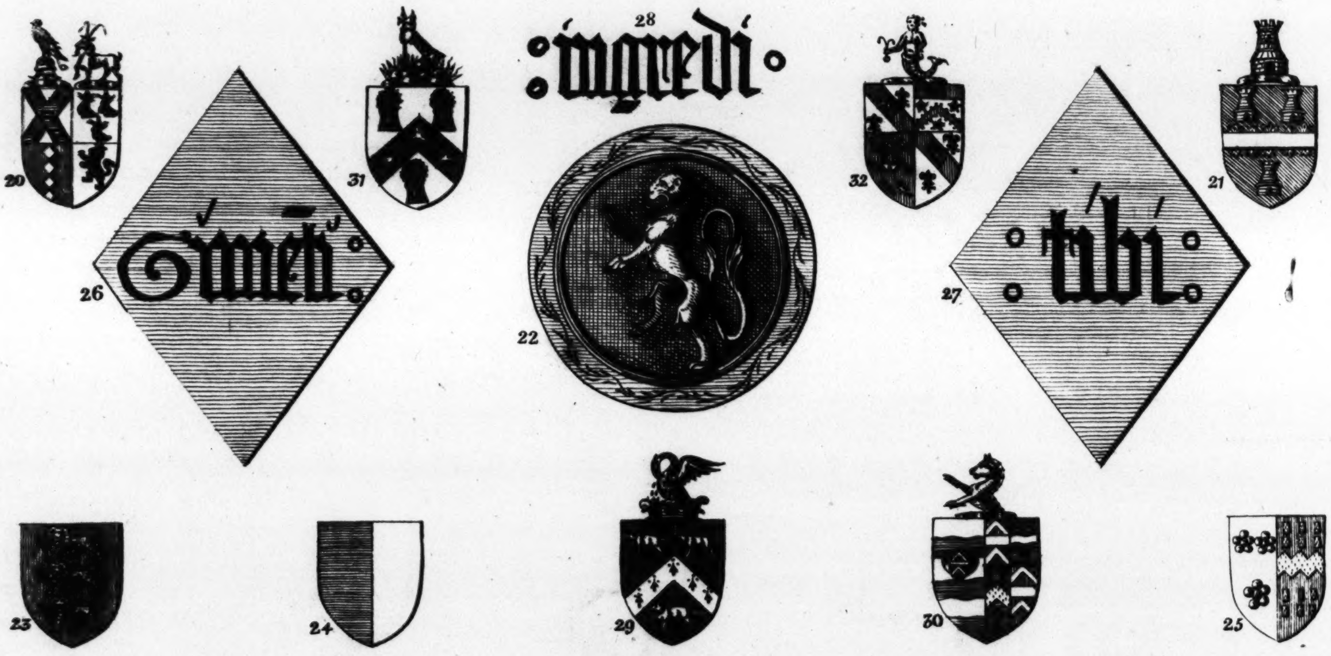


3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
18
Fig. 2.
17
19

Schnebbelie del. 1791.

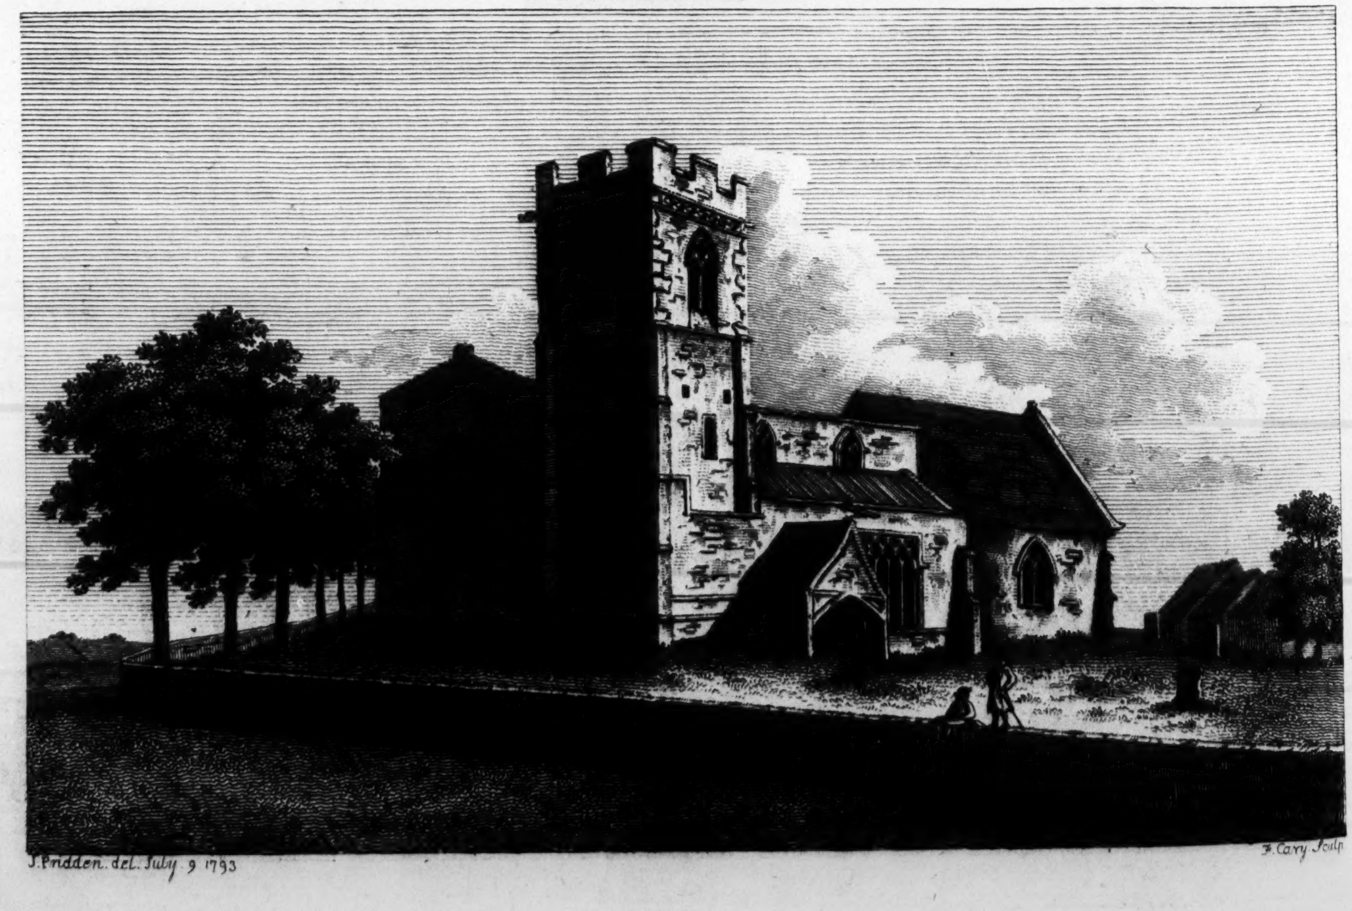
RERESBY, N.E.

Prattent Sc.



20
31
28
:ingredi:
32
21
26
Amen:
22
27
:tibi:
23
24
29
30
25

ROTHERBY, S.W.



J. Pridden. del. July 9 1793

J. Cary Sculp.

ties were then ſubject to, and no other; and the rector to have alſo ſuch parcels of the uninclosed land as (quantity and quality conſidered) ſhould, when incloſed, be of the full yearly value of 40*s.* (clear of the land-tax and all other payments) in lieu of the corn due or uſually paid to the clerk of the ſaid pariſh for the time being, as part of his ſalary or wages, by the occupiers of the lands and grounds in the ſaid fields. The reſidue of the uninclosed lands to be ſet out amongſt the ſeveral perſons who, at the time of making the diviſion, ſhould be entitled to land or other property, in proportion to their reſpective ſhares and intereſts therein (except the ſaid Mr. Pochin, as lord of the manor, in reſpect to his right and intereſt in and to the ſoil of the waſte grounds and public-roads; and Mr. Orton, as rector, in reſpect to his tithes and other rectorial dues and payments). And the commiſſioners were directed, in making ſuch their allotments of the meadow-ground in the ſaid field, to allot to the rector, as part of the ſeventh of the ſaid field, aforeſaid, certain tithe-pieces in the ſaid meadow, then belonging to the ſaid rectory, ſeverally called Gooſe-holme (containing about ten acres), and the three acres; and, in making their allotments to the ſaid William Pochin and John Kilby reſpectively, were to ſet out to and for them reſpectively as part of their allotments, the reſpective pieces of land in the field called Blakemoor Spinneys, belonging to them the ſaid William Pochin and John Kilby; and, in ſetting out the land to be allotted unto and for the ſaid John Orton as rector, as aforeſaid, in lieu of the land and ground in the ſaid field, then belonging to the ſaid rectory, were to have a due regard to the ſituation of the parſonage-houſe of the ſaid rectory.

This lordſhip, conſiſting principally of ſandy land, great part of which was antiently covered with broom, produces ſince the incloſure excellent barley, oats, and turnips.

The manor of Rereſby, with a conſiderable property in the lordſhip, was purchaſed from the Nobles by the late William Pochin, eſq. and is now, by his will, the property of his nephew and heir.

The other land-owners are, the Rev. Thomas Orton Mr. Kilby, and Mr. Benſkin.

In this pariſh are 64 families.

The Regiſter begins in 1713:

1713—1717—{ baptized 40.
{ buried 32.
1784—1789—{ baptized 71.
{ buried 27.

CHARITABLE DONATIONS, ON A TABLET.

Formerly has been purchaſed a cloſe, called The Poors' Cloſe; the rent to be applied to buy coals for the poor at Chriſtmas.

Mr. John Orton, late rector, gave £25; the intereſt to buy flax, to be ſpun and wove, to be diſtributed by the miniſter and churchwardens; and £10; the intereſt of which to be applied to learn poor children to read.

20*s.* a year given by Mrs. Faunt, paid out of the Dale cloſe belonging to William Pochin, eſq. to learn poor children to write and read.

Money raiſed for the poor of Rereſby,	£.	s.	d.
within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	171	8	2
Expended in county rates, —	5	1	2
——— on the poor, —	166	7	0
Rent of workhouſe[1], &c. —	6	10	0
Expended in litigations, —	10	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	145	18	5
——— 1784, —	149	16	9
——— 1785, —	122	9	2
Medium of theſe three years,	139	8	1
——— of county expences,	7	10	2
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	0	0	0
——— of nett annual expences,	131	17	11
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	1	1	11
——— of entertainments, —	0	3	3
——— of law expences, —	0	5	10
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 52.

The CHURCH, (ſee Plate LIX.)

dedicated to St. Michael, conſiſts of a neat ſmall embattled tower (wherein are three bells) with pinnacles at the corners; a chancel; nave; and two ailes ſeparated by Gothic arches, over which are three clere-ſtory windows.

In the windows are ſome ſcraps of painted glaſs.

The font is ſquare and antient, lined with lead, fig. 2.

In the South wall of the chancel are three ſtone ſeats, and a piſcina.

The church is badly pewed.

Mr. Wyrley notices theſe arms[2]; now all gone:

Or, a chevron Gules. Lord Stafford.

Azure, five fuſils in feſs Or. Percy.

Azure, ſix lioncels rampant Or, armed and langued Gules. Longſpé earl of Saliſbury.

Or, three piles Gules; on a canton Argent a croſs formy Sable. Baſſet.

The ſame; but the croſs formy Azure.

Argent, a feſs Gules, in chief three torteaux. Devereux.

Party per feſs, Argent and Or, a croſs moline Gules. Folvile.

Gules, a feſs Or, between three ſaltires humetté Argent. Boivile.

Ermine, a chief indented Azure. Nevile.

Ermine, a chief indented Sable. Nevile.

Barry nebulé of ſix, Argent and Sable, a canton Gules. Brokeſby.

Sable guttée Argent, a canton Gules. Danet.

Or, a ſaltire engrailed Sable; Botetort; impaling, Or, three lions paſſant Azure. Somery.

In the Matriculus of 1220[3], one moiety of Rereſby is deſcribed to be under the patronage of Ralph de Colevill; the other moiety of Ralph Chamberlain, and afterwards of Geoffrey Baſſet. The monks of St. Nicholas of Angiers received ab antiquo two ſheaves from one ploughland of the fee of Simon de Nevill.

In 1334, the procurations were, 7*s.* 6¾*d.*; the rectory was taxed at 12 marks, and 2*s.* for Peter-pence.

In 1534-5, the procurations and ſynodals were, 13*s.* 4*d.*; and the value of the rectory £15. 16*s.* 8*d.*

Henry Sacheverell, eſq. being ſeiſed in fee of the fourth part of the advowſon in groſs of the church of Rereſby, Feb. 1, 12 Eliz. granted the ſame to Henry Sacheverell, of Rereſby, gent. and Remigius Hunt, gent. to the uſe of himſelf and Gertrude his wife, for their lives; the remainder in tail to the firſt, ſecond, third, fourth, fifth, ſixth, ſeventh, eighth, ninth, ſons of his body; remainder to him and his heirs in fee. Henry Sacheverell, eſq. had iſſue Francis Sacheverell; who was ſeiſed of the remainder of the fourth part of the ſaid advowſon in tail. Henry Sacheverell, eſq. and his wife Gertrude died; by which event, Francis Sacheverell was ſeiſed in tail of the fourth part of the ſaid advowſon; ſir Robert Cotton, knight, of two other parts; and George Noble of the other part. Levied a fine in the king's bench, Octav. S. Trin. 3 Jac. of the ſaid three other parts to the uſe of the ſaid Francis Sacheverell in fee; who preſented Francis Squire to the church in the time of king James; and afterwards, 12 Oct. 2 Car. I, he granted the next preſentation to John Danvers, gent.; and, the church becoming vacant by the death of Francis Squire, John Danvers brought a Quare impedit againſt the biſhop of Lincoln and Thomas Archer, gent.[4]

In 1650, the rectory was returned worth £60; and and the incumbent as "ſufficient."

In an advertiſement for ſale of the advowſon by auction, April 11, 1798, the rectorial-houſe is ſaid to be well ſituated in the village of Rereſby; conſiſting of a variety of good rooms, two large barns, ſtable, two gardens, with garden-houſe and ſummer-houſe; and the rectory, as compriſing ſeveral cloſes of rich arable, meadow, and paſture ground, allotted in lieu of tithes and glebe on the incloſure, and containing together 335 acres, 2 roods, and 4 perches; with a new-built brick-barn, ſtables, and granaries, ſtanding in the middle of the eſtate; alſo the tithes of about 24 acres of old incloſure, belonging to Mr. Riley, taken in kind; and ſeveral ſmall money payments, in lieu of tithes, iſſuing out of 23 or 24 cottages in Rereſby; the lands let to tenants at will at rents amounting together to £480. 19*s.* making, with the tithes and money payments, an income of nearly £500. a year; the outgoings, including the curate's ſtipend, not exceeding £66.; no hamlet within the pariſh, and only one church to ſerve; the incumbent nearly 72.

---

[1] In 1776, fourteen perſons were in this workhouſe.

[2] Plate LIX. fig. 3—15.

[3] See the Introductory Volume, p. lix.

[4] William Browne's "Entering Clerk's Vade Mecum," p. 388.

The preſent value in the king's books, 17*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.*

The epiſcopal procurations are 3*s.* 4*d.*; the archidiaconal, 11*s.* 0¾*d.*

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
Thomas Baſſet, 1224.
Adam of Dorcheſter, 1235.
William of Leiceſter, 1237.	Sir Rob. de Folvile, knt. and Ralph Chamberlain.
William Belton[1], D.D. 1420.
Richard Bearſwoe, D.D. Dec. 5, 1503.	Thomas Kebyll, eſq.
John Carter, 1534.
Peter Preſtland, Oct. 13, 1559.	Queen Elizabeth.
Thomas Mounteforth[2], in leg' bacalaur', 1562.
William Whitaphe, B.D. died 1617.
Francis Squire, 1618.
Cleare Sacheverell[3], B.A. Nov. 27, 1633; ejected 1644; reſtored 1653.	The King.
William Grace, M.A. 1659.
Cadwallader Jones[4], Nov. 2, 1660.	John Danvers, gent. pro hâc vice.
John Orton, M.A. Nov. 24, 1676; died 1715.	The King, per pravitatem ſimoniæ.
Joſeph Orton, Oct. 7, 1715.	Sim. Barwell, and John Ludlam, gent. pro hâc vice.
John Orton, M.A. 1730; died 1760.	Himſelf the patron.
John Orton[5], M.A. June 2, 1760; died Feb. 1791.	Thomas Boothby, eſq.
Thomas Orton, his brother, July 9, 1791; rector 1799.	Wells Orton, eſq. of Enfield.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

Mr. Wyrley notices here "a fine monument in form of this croſs[6], which is Folvile's."

Another, of John Keble, eſq. of Rereſbie, and Anne his wife, 1557; on which are graven, Barry, nebulé of ſix, Argent and Sable; on a canton Gules a creſcent Or, fig. 16.

And alſo a flat ſtone of alabaſter (which ſtill remains, though ſomewhat defaced) on which was the following arms and inſcription:

Arms: Argent, on a ſaltire Azure, five water-bougets Argent, Sacheverell, fig. 17.

"Here lieth the body of Henry Sacheverell[7], who died . . .
. . . . . 1581; and Gertrude[8] his wife . . . ."

In the chancel.

On a ſmall mural monument on the South ſide:

"THOMAS NOBLE, OF RERESBIE,
GENTLEMAN, SON OF GEOR GE NOBLE, MARRIED FRANCES
HERRICK, DAUGHTER UNTO
ROBERT HERRICK, OF LEICES-
TER, GENTLEMAN. HEE DIED
THE 10 OF JULY, ANNO 1625.

DEATH NIPS THE FRUIT,
THE BLOSSOM, AND THE BUD:
HAPIE WHOSE LIFE
IN YOUTH AND AGE IS GOOD."

On flat ſtones:

Within the communion rails:

1. "Here lieth the body of John Orton, Maſter of Arts, and rector of Rereſby;
who departed this life the 13th day of September, 1715,
in the 65th year of his age."

2. "Here lieth the body of Anne,
the wife of John Orton, rector of Rereſby.
She had iſſue by him only one ſon, John Orton;
and departed this life the 18th day of October, 1710,
in the 65th year of her age."

3. "Here lieth the body of John Orton, M.A.
rector of Rereſby.
He died the 2d day of May, 1760,
aged 72 years."

4. "Here lieth the body of Mary Orton, wife of the late John Orton, rector of Rereſby.
She died the 14th day of May, 1762,
aged 72 years."

On other flat ſtones:

5. "Here lies Margaret, the ſecond wife of Thomas Noble, of Leiceſter, gent.
She was the eldeſt daughter of Sir William Keyte, of Everton, in the county of Glouceſter, bart.
She departed this life the 3d day of March, 1710,
in the 47th year of her age."

---

[1] "17 Dec. 1420, D'ns Ep's commiſit vices ſuas mag'ro Will' Belton, S.T.B. rectori eccleſie de Rereſby, Linc' dioc', & Henr. Whytehed in ſacra theol. ſcolari, rectori S. Martini, Leyc', ad predicand' verbum Dei per totam dioc' Linc' in formâ communi, pro ſue voluntatis beneplacito duratur'."

[2] In the Certificate referred to under Allexton, p. 8, Mr. Mounteforth is thus deſcribed: "Preſbyter, non conjugatus; in jur' facult' doctus; reſidet; hoſpitalis; deget apud Aldwynkle; non licentiatus, nec prædicat; duo beneficia habet; & eſt pluralit' auctoritate regiâ." Thomas Mounteforth, chaplain, was preſented to the rectory of Aldwincle, 27 June, 1527, by Leonard Grey, in right of his wife, the counteſs of Worceſter. Bridges, vol. II. p. 210.

[3] Rymer, vol. XIX. p. 536. He was a deſcendant from an antient family; compounded for firſt fruits May 22, 1636; and was turned out about 1644 or 5, for no other crime than his loyalty; but lived to be reſtored with his royal maſter. Walker's Sufferings of the Clergy, p. 366. He married Jane, widow of William Noone, gent. of Walton on the Woulds (who died July 31, 1633.)

[4] He was educated at St. John's college, Cambridge; where he gave £10. to the library; and his arms are entered among the benefactions in a MS folio volume blazoned in vellum.

[5] Mr. Orton was a gentleman of large poſſeſſions, extenſive charity, and univerſal benevolence. The following character was printed in the Leiceſter Journal, Feb. 18, 1791: "On Monday laſt died at Rearſby the Rev. Mr. Orton, rector of that place. His univerſal benevolence and extenſive charity are well known, and his loſs will be ſeverely felt by the many poor families who experienced his bounty; he may be literally ſaid to have fed the hungry, and cloathed the naked. His heart was ever open to the diſtreſs of others, and he was always happy in adminiſtering to their neceſſities."

[6] See Plate LV. 195.

[7] His grandſon Andrew Sacheverell's leaden coffin, weighing 2 cwt. was found in 1760, on digging a grave in the chancel for the then deceaſed rector; and ſold for £1. 8*s.* to buy the clerk a mourning coat. There was an inſcription on the coffin in raiſed black letters. From the information of Mr. Joſeph Moore of Syſton, who bought the coffin.

[8] "This Gertrude was the daughter of John Hunt of Newton." Wyrley, MS.

6. "Here lieth the body of Thomas Noble, of the borough of Leiceſter, eſq.;
who departed this life the 3d day of May, 1730."

7. "George Hubbert, gent.
died Dec. 30, 1684, aged 46;
and Anne his wife, daughter of William Sacheverel, of Barton, in the county of Nottingham,
died Dec. 17, 1725, aged 89."

On a monument againſt the North wall:

Arms: Quarterly; Argent, on a chief Gules, a lion paſſant Or, Noble; 2. Barry, nebulé of ſix, Argent and Sable, on a canton Gules a creſcent Or, Keble; 3. Argent, on a bend Sable, five bezants, Palmer; 4. Gules, a chevron Ermine between three eagles diſplayed Or. Creſt, an eagle diſplayed Or; fig. 18.

"Near this place lies interred the body of Thomas Noble[1], ſon of Thomas Noble, late of the borough of Leiceſter, eſq.
by Mary his firſt wife;
who departed this life the 8th day of February,
in the year of our Lord 1743,
and in the 48th year of his age."

"Mrs. Margaret Noble died Sept. 15, 1680, aged 20."

"Mrs. Barbara Noble died July 3, 1708, aged 50."

On a monument againſt the wall of the South aile:

"Sacred to the memory of Elizabeth Corbet, daughter of William Watts, gent, late of this place, by Mary his wife, and relict of Delapool Corbet, gent.
late of St. Paul's, Covent Garden, London.
She departed this life May the 1ſt, 1784,
in the 80th year of her age.

Lo! here interr'd ſhe lies, who humbly gave
Her ſoul to God, her body to the grave:
A tender mother, and a loving wife,
Throughout her paſſage to a better life.
She dy'd to live, but humbly liv'd to die:
So God remov'd her, to complete her joy."

On flat ſtones in the nave:

1. "In memory of Robert, ſon of John Parlby;
who was born October the 8th, 1711;
and died January the 8th, 1747."

2. "Here lieth the body of Elizabeth,
the wife of Robert Parlby;
who departed this life the 29th of May, 1711,
in the 60th year of her age."

3. "Here lyeth the body of Robert Parlby, who departed this life the 26th of December, 1720,
in the 71ſt year of his age."

4. "Here lieth the body of Mary Parlby, eldeſt daughter of John Parlby, by Mary his wife;
who departed this life the 20th of November, 1722,
in the 16th year of her age."

5. "John Parlby died Aug. 29, 1734, aged 56."

6. "George Grove, gent. departed this life
May the 14th, 1724, in the 50th year of his age."

7. "In memory of William Woodhouſe, gent.
who died February the 24th, 1742-3, aged 74.
Dorothea his wife died Nov. 21, 1739, aged 57.
Dorothy their daughter died April 27, 1743, aged 26."

Againſt the end of the chancel, on the outſide:

Arms: . . . . on a bend Argent between two lions' heads eraſed Or, three eſcalop-ſhells Sable, fig. 19.

"Here
lieth the body of Richard Benſkin,
gentleman,
who departed this life
Feb. the 10th, 1756,
aged 85 years."

"Near this place
lieth interred the body of Sarah the wife of
Richard Benſkin, gent.
She departed this life
the 29th of Auguſt,
1741, aged 62 years."

There are many other upright ſtones to this family.

Mr. William Grace, who was alſo vicar of Shenſtone in Staffordſhire, was a ſerious, humble, grave perſon; well eſteemed by his pariſh, eſpecially major Hubbart and family, for the holineſs of his life and his edifying preaching. He had a great many children, who, with their parents, were reduced to great want. He was nearly related to archbiſhop Sheldon, to whom applications were made for his poor diſtreſſed family; but no relief could be obtained there, unleſs Mr. Grace would conform; which if he would yield to, great things were promiſed; but this moved him not to act againſt his conſcience. Some time after the archbiſhop recovered ſo much humanity, as to take ſome care of two of his children. Upon his ejectment, having a wife and 11 children, he was reduced to ſtraits, and for a maintenance took a farm of about £30. a year, preaching in his own houſe, for which he was ſoon apprehended by two juſtices, and, with many of his hearers, bound over, which was very chargeable. Not long after, he was ſent for by a party of horſe, and taken priſoner to Stafford; for what, he know not. Being unable to bear the charge of his impriſonment, he made his application to the deputy lieutenant, and was forced to give in bonds of £100. to appear when called. He was diſmiſſed after many hard ſpeeches, but no charge laid againſt him. After all which he was neceſſitated, by the five-mile act, to remove to a place where he lived at great charges, ſeparated from his relations, and his farm left to the management of ſervants, to his unſpeakable loſs. He died Nov. 10, 1699, aged more than 90[2]; his wife Joanna in 1668, aged 52. They were both buried at Shenſtone, co. Stafford; where a ſtone within a frame of wood, with the following epitaph, is placed to their memory in the entrance of the aile from the North door:

"Εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας, ἀμήν.
Quod reliquum eſt Gulielmi Grace[3], M. A. hujuſce eccleſiæ ritu Anglicano olim
vicarii, hìc reconditur.
Juxta jacet Joanna Grace,
præfati Gulielmi conjux unica.
E' vivis exceſſit illa anno à Chriſto nato MDCLXVIII, ætatis ſuæ præter propter LII.
Nonagenarius ille & ultra deceſſit tandem, & in fide Chriſti obdormivit,
VII idus Novembris, æræ Chriſtianæ MDCXCIX.
Job Grace[4], eccleſiæ cathedralis Lichfield theſaurarius, ejuſdemque Gulielmi ex Joannâ filius, hunc lapidem ſepulchralem paritèr ac inſcriptum in memoriam parentum poſuit, ſacravit."

Upon the floor within the altar-rails of the church of Draughton, in Northamptonſhire.

"M. S. Hìc jacet Elizabetha, Maunſeli Courtman, hujus eccleſiæ rectoris, uxor;
Thomæ Noble, de Rearеſby in agro Leiceſtrienſi, gen.
natu maxima.
Sanctis moribus fœmina, habilis ingenii
& ad omnem humanitatis rationem commodi;
in afflictos miſericors, in vicinos & amicos hoſpitalis, omnibuſque bonis flebilis: obiit Auguſti 25to, 1698.
Hoc monumentum chariſſimæ uxori poſuit mœrens conjux."

---

[1] See the Pedigree of Noble hereafter, p. 461.

[2] Incumbent 58 years. Richard Smith, his clerk, alſo held his office 57 years.

[3] Robert Grace, ſuppoſed to be ſon of William, was living, vicar of Shenſtone, very old, in 1721. Saunders, p. 11.

[4] Inſtalled treaſurer at Lichfield, by Archbiſhop Sancroft's option, Auguſt 14, 1688. He held, from 1671 till 1719 the vicarage of Watford, co. Northampton; where he was buried, with this epitaph:

"Job Grace, late treaſurer of the cathedral church of Lichfield, prebendary of Lawley, and 49 years miniſter of this pariſh. He died Oct. 2, 1719, in the 75th year of his age."

In the ſame church, on a mural monument at the Weſt end of the South aile, is this inſcription:

"P. S. Spe beatiſſimæ in Chriſto Reſurrectionis requieſcit in pace ANNA GRACE, aſſiduæ pietatis exemplar; parentibus ſupplex, amicis comis conſtanſque,
cæteriſque officioſa, amabilis.
Nata V° idus Aprilis, } anno Domini
Renata VIII° calendas Maii, } MDCLXXIIII.
Denata VIII° calendas Martii, anno Chriſti MDCCIX.

In memoriam filiæ chariſſimæ mœſtiſſimus parens J. GRACE, A. M.
hujus eccleſiæ præpoſitus,
necnon Eccleſiæ Cathedralis de Lichfield Theſaurarius, juxta facere voluit, deſignavit.
Juxta jacet JEMIMA GRACE,
trium annorum infantula."

I. Pedigree of SACHEVERELL, of HOPWELL, WIMESWOULD, and OLD HAYS.

Arms: Argent, on a ſaltire Argent, five water-bougets Or, Plate LIX. fig. 17. (Harl. MSS. 1113. 77.)

Sir Patrick Sacheverell, temp. Edw. I.=Joan, daughter of Robert le Vavaſor.

Sir Robert Sacheverell, knt. 15 Edw. I.

William Sacheverell, temp. Edw. III.=Iſabell Okeover.

Robert Sacheverell, of Hopwell, eſq.= . . . . dau. and heireſs of ſir Roger de Hopwell.

John Sacheverell, of Hopwell, temp. Hen. VI.=Anne, ſecond dau. and coheir of ſir Roger Leche, of Chatſworth.

1. Ralph Sacheverell, of Hopwell, died Aug 28, 1488[1].=Joan, dau. of John Curzon, of Kedleſton, eſq.
2. William Sacheverell, of Smiterton. (See p. 513.)

1. Sir Richard Sacheverell[2], knt. d. 1534, ſ. p. buried in the collegiate church in the Newark at Leiceſter.=Mary, dau. and heir of ſir Tho. Hungerford, and relict of Edward lord Haſtings, died before 1534, bur. in the Newark.
2. John Sacheverell, of Morley, Smalley, and Ridley, in right of his wife; killed at Boſworth-field in the life-time of his father 1485[3].=Joan, dau. and heir of Henry Stathum, of Morley; afterwards wife of William Zouch, of Bulwick, co. Northampt.
1. Mary.=Thomas Finderne, of Finderne, co. Derby.
    1. George Finderne.
    2. John Finderne.
    3. Robert Finderne.= . . . . a widow of . . . Sacheverell, of Nuneaton.
        Tho. Finderne, married Alice, dau. of Rich. Beaumont, of Coleorton.
2. . . . .=Richard Slorey, of Slorey-hall, juxta Geding, co. Nott.
    1. John Slorey[4], of Braunſton.
    2. Elizabeth.=Richard Nele, of Preſtwould[5].
    3. Jane.=Geo. Vincent, of Peckleton.

Margery, widow of ſir John Holford, of Holford, co. Cheſter, 1547[6]; firſt wife.=1. Sir Henry Sacheverell, of Morley, knt. born 1475; high-ſheriff of Derbyſhire 1531 and 1541; died July 22, 1558[7].=Iſabella, dau. of ſir John Montgomery, of Cubley, knt. ſecond wife.
2. John. } See p. 220.
3. Ralph, } See p. 220.
4. A daughter.

1. John Sacheverell, of Morley and Hopwell, died before his father.=Elizabeth, dau. of ſir Will. Pierpont of Holme, knt.
2. William Sacheverell[8], of Staunton, co. Derby, died Sept. 6, 1557[9].=Mary, dau. and heir of Clement Lowe of Denby, and Iſabel Strelley his wife.
3 Richard Sacheverell[10], of Barton.=Elizabeth, natural dau. of Henry lord Grey of Codnor.
    Henry[12], d. ſ. p. 1605; gave Barton to his couſin Ralph of Staunton.
    Elizabeth.
4. Robert.
5. Henry Sacheverell, of Kibworth and Sadington (ſee p. 220.)
6. Thomas Sacheverell.= . .
    1. Henry Sacheverell, a vintner in London.
Five daughters[11].

John Sacheverell, eſq. of Morley, born 1518; died at Bruſſels Oct. 23, 1593[13].=Katharine, dau. of ſir Anthony Fitzherbert, ch. Juſt. Common Pleas.
1. Ralph[14] Sacheverell, of Staunton, born 1532; died Sept. 1, 1605.=Emma, dau. of Will. Dethick, of Newhall, d. April 30, 1606.
2. Richard, a clerk.
3. Patrick[15], marr. Anne, dau. of ſir Hugh Overſall, of Hull, knt.
4. Margaret.=William Bonington.

Henry Sacheverell, of Morley and Hopwell, 1613; afterwards of Old Hays, co. Leiceſter; died 1620, æt. 73.=Joan, third dau. of ſir Humphrey Bradburne.
    Jacinth, and ſeveral other children. (See p. 509.)
1. William Sacheverell[16], of Barton, born 1555; died 1616.=Tabitha, dau. of James Spenſer, of Alvaſton; re-married to Thomas Harrington.
2. Anthony.
3. John.
4. John.
5. Thomas[17].
6. Ralph.
7. Henry.
8. Edmund.
1. Mary.=William Blackwell, of Alton, co. Derby.
2. Lucy.=Edward Abell, of Ticknall.
3. Jane.
4. Iſabell.
5. Milicent,=firſt, to Thomas Gell, eſq. of Hopton; ſecondly, to John Curzon, of Kedleſton, eſq.
6. Dorothy.
7. Ellen.=Everard Digby, of Holwell (ſee vol. II. p. 14.)

1. Ralph, died young.
2. Henry Sacheverell, of Barton and Morley, living 1662.=Joice, dau. and heir of Francis Mansfield, of Hugglescote Grange.
1. Milicent, ſecond wife.=Tho. Mansfield[18], of Weſt Leeke, eſq.
    Richard Mansfield.=Elizabeth, dau. of ſir Thomas Richardſon, and ſiſter to lord Richardſon.
        1. Milicent.
        2. Thomas.
        3. Elizabeth.
        4. John.
2. Frances, married to Sam. Harward.

1. Henry, died young.
2. William Sacheverell, of Barton and Morley, b. 1638; M.P. for Derbyſhire 1661—1680[19]; and for Nottinghamſhire 1690.=Mary, dau[20]. of William Staunton, of Staunton; died Aug. 6, 1674.
1. Katharine,=William Sitwell, of Reniſhaw, co. Derby, gent.[21]
    George Sitwell[22], eſq. died in 1730; buried at Barton.
2. Joice, married to J. Milward.

1. Henry, born 1660. } all died young.
2. William, } all died young.
3. Ralph, } all died young.
4. William, } all died young.
5. Robert[23], born 1669; M.P. for the borough of Nottingham 1698—1701; and 1705—1713; died Dec. 10, 1714.
1. Mary, } living 1674.
2. Elizabeth, } living 1674.
3. Joice, } living 1674.
5. Anne, } living 1674.
4. Catharine, died young.

---

[1] Inq. 24 Oct. 4 Hen. VII.

[2] He poſſeſſed, inter alia, the manor of Wimeſwould; where ſee ſome account of him, p. 508.

[3] He lies buried in Morley church, under a fine thick and large ſlab of Derbyſhire marble. One of the ailes in that church is full of the monuments of the family, who have long flouriſhed there in great renown, this being their antient ſeat, and their houſe a large old building adjoining to the church. Wolley, MS Hiſtory of Derbyſhire; and ſee Thoroton's Nottinghamſhire, p. 50. A Sacheverell ſtands in the Magna Britannia as patron of Morley in 1738.

[4] Of whom hereafter, under Sparkenhoe.

[5] See before, p. 362.

[6] Sir Peter Leyceſter, p. 344.

[7] Inq. at Nottingham, 29 Oct. 5 & 6 Philip & Mary.

[8] De Willielmo Sacheverell, & uxore, occaſionatis ad oſtendendum quo titulo tenent manerium de Bylborough, in com. Nottingham; Mich. Rec. 29 Hen. VIII. Rot. 8.—This manor was afterwards granted by the king to ſir Nicholas Strelley, Mich. Rec. 35 Hen. VIII. Rot. 24. And Sept. 20, 1546, William Sacheverell and Henry Needham obtained a grant of the priory of Bentley at Harrow on the Hill, Middleſex, which they aliened the ſame year, Nov. 23, to Elizabeth Colte. Pat. 35 Hen. VIII. pars 12. & pars 28.

[9] Inq. 4 & 5 Philip & Mary.

[10] He was living in 1605; in which year he obtained a grant of lands in Nottinghamſhire. 6 Pars Original. 2 Jac. I. Rot. 2.

[11] 1. Elizabeth, wife of Ralph Fraunces, of Ticknall; 2. Catharine, wife of Thomas Babington; 3. Mary, wife of George Chaworth, had three ſons and three daughters, and died 1562; ſee their pedigree and epitaph in Thoroton, pp. 101. 259; 4. Joan, wife of John Booth, eſq. of Barrow, co. Derby, who died 8 June, 22 Hen. VIII.; 5. Barbara, married John Roiel; Thoroton, p. 93.

[12] See his epitaph in Thoroton, p. 51.

[13] See hereafter, p. 509.

[14] See their epitaphs in Thoroton, p. 52.

[15] He had a daughter Elizabeth, married to John Skelton, 1624.

[16] Anne Hubbert, daughter of William Sacheverell, died Dec. 17, 1725, aged 89. See p. 393.

[17] He married in London; and had a ſon William Sacheverell, and grandſon Leiceſter Sacheverell. He had alſo a daughter Mary, married to John Wright, of Swarkſton, co. Derby; whoſe ſon Thomas Wright, Aug. 25, 1662, was aged 42.

[18] His firſt wife was Joan, daughter of Thomas Paget, of Barwell, gent. See their epitaphs in Thoroton, p. 28.

[19] See p. 395.

[20] See her epitaph in Thoroton, p. 54.

[21] Born in 1630; in 1662 he had three ſons; 1. George, æt. 5; 2. Henry, 3. James, twins, æt. 3.

[22] Francis Sitwell, eſq. of Reniſhaw, was high-ſheriff of Derbyſhire 1735; and Edward Sacheverell Sitwell, eſq. of Morley, in 1779. Pilkington's Derbyſhire, vol. II. p. 23.

[23] See p. 395.

II. Pedigree of SACHEVERELL, of Reresby; entered at Leiceſter 23 March, 1681-2.

Arms: Quarterly, 1. Sacheverell; 2. Argent, three coneys ſejant Gules, playing on bag-pipes Or, Hopwell; 3. Gules, five fuſils conjoyned in pale Argent, Statham; 4. Argent, a lion rampant Sable, ducally crowned Or, charged on the ſhoulder with a creſcent, Morley. Creſt, a hawk's lure Azure, band and taſſeled Gules, thereon a bird cloſe Argent; ſecond creſt, a goat paſſant Argent, armed Sable. Motto, EN BON FOY, Plate LIX. fig. 20.

Henry Sacheverell[1], of Rereſby, ſecond ſon of Ralph Sacheverell, of Radcliffe upon Sore, co. Notts, a branch of the Sacheverells of Morley, co. Derby (ſee p. 220.) = ...

2. Ralph Sacheverell, of Rereſby. = ...

1. Henry Sacheverell[2], of Rereſby; died June 2, 1581. = Gertrude, dau. of John Hunt, of Lyndon, co. Rutland; and widow of Thomas Lany.

2. Baldwin Sacheverell.

Anne Sacheverell.

1. Francis Sacheverell, of Rereſby, born 1574; went over to Ireland, and died there. = Frances, dau. of Will. Gilbert, of Lockhoe[3], co. Derby, firſt wife.

1. Francis.
2. Henry.
3. Cleare, rector of Rereſby 1633.
4. William.

1. Dorothy, died unmarried.
2. Amie, married to Will. Whittaphe, who died rector of Rereſby, 1617.

1. Elizabeth, wife of . . . . Fernilaw, of Hoby.
2. Amie, wife of Will. Watts, of Thruſſington.
3. Catharine, wife of Robert Holcott, of Kelmarſh, co. Northampton.

2. George Sacheverell. = . . .

1. Henry.
2. Thomas.

3. Andrew Sacheverell, of Rereſby, died about 1658, æt. 74. = Iſabel, dau. of . . . . Baily, of Widmerpole, co. Nott. of the Baileys of Woburn, co. Bedford.

James Sacheverell, of Rereſby, æt. 58, 1681-2. = Mary, dau. of Geo. Burgoyne, of Quickſwood, Herts.

Thomas Sacheverell, only child, died about 1659, æt. 9.

⁂ The Parliamentary Speeches of Mr. William Sacheverell have been much noticed; particularly in 1678 on the parliament being diſſolved by proclamation; and more eſpecially in the Convention of 1689. On a diſpute relative to the charter of Nottingham, two different perſons having in 1682 been elected mayor by the contending parties, a riot enſued; for which fines were levied on ſeveral of the parties, the greateſt of which was 500 marks on this Mr. Sacheverell (Dering, p. 705.) See alſo, ib. p. 278, The Caſe of the Corporation of Nottingham, as it was truly ſtated by William Sacheverell, eſq. of Barton. Of his property at Chillewell, ſee Thoroton, p. 207.—Another William Sacheverell, eſq. governor of the Iſle of Man (and, like his relation the famous Dr. Henry Sacheverell, the intimate friend of Mr. Addiſon), publiſhed in 1702 an account of that Iſland; which he dedicated to his kinſman Robert Sacheverell, eſq. of Barton; "not only," he ſays, "as the head of my family, and for the perſonal eſteem I have for you, but as a teſtimony of my gratitude to the memory of your Father, to whoſe prudence and conduct, in my minority, I, in a great meaſure, owe my well-being.—Few," he goes on, "if any, underſtood the Conſtitution better, or how to diſtinguiſh between the factions and the buſineſs of the Nation. Thus no man was heard with greater attention in the Senate, either out of a ſenſe of his moderation in avoiding public employments, or his juſtice and fidelity in the execution of them, or his laying them down with greater honour and integrity than the reſt of mankind retain them: and this ſeems a peculiar addition to the happineſs of his life, in leaving a ſon, who ſo juſtly fills his ſtation, that with pride I ſubmit my papers to his cenſure and correction."

Pedigree of ORTON, of Rereſby. Entered at Leiceſter, Aug. 8, 1682, by JOHN ORTON.

Arms: Vert, a feſs flory and counterflory Argent, between three caſtles Argent. Creſt, a caſtle Argent; fig. 20.

Hugh Orton, of Leiceſter. = Anne, dau. of Henry Ferne, archdeacon of Leiceſter.

Samuel Orton, of Rereſby, died about 1643, æt. 60. = Audrey, dau. of . . . . . Fox, of Tower-hill, London.

1. John Orton, of Rereſby, died about 1675, æt. 50. = Sarah, dau. of Richard Ludlam, alderman and ſometime mayor of the Borough of Leiceſter. He married to his ſecond wife Frances, dau. of William Whittaphe, rector of Rereſby; and had iſſue William, living æt. 13, 1683.

2. Samuel Orton, of London, woollen-draper.
3. John Orton, of London.
4. Cordell Orton, died young.

1. Elizabeth, wife of Henry Stratford, of Bowden Parva.
2. Mary.
3. Anne, died young.

1. Samuel Orton, of Rereſby, died January 1681, æt. circa 33, ſ. p. = Elizabeth, dau. of Thomas Pearman, of London, living 1682; remarried to . . . . . Bree, of Warwickſhire.

2. John Orton, M. A. rector of Rereſby, died Sept. 13, 1715, æt. 68. = Anne . . . . died Aug. 18, 1710, æt. 65.

3. Cordell, died young.

1. Elizabeth, living 1683, unmarried.
2. Sarah, d. young.

John Orton, M. A. rector of Rereſby, died May 2, 1760, æt. 72. = Mary, dau. of Thomas Boothby, of Marſton, eſq. died May 14, 1762, æt. 72.

1. Rev. John Orton[4], M.A. rector of Rereſby, died Feb. 1791. = Elizabeth, dau. of William Wells[5], eſq. of Thruſſington, high-ſheriff in 1729.

Wells Orton, only ſon, living at Enfield, Middleſex, 1800.

Elizabeth Orton[8], died at Rereſby unmarried 1797.

Two other daughters, lived to be women, and died within two days of each other of a fever.

2. Rev. Thomas Orton[6], rector of Brokeſby and Rereſby, born 1726; living 1800.

Anne Erpe[7], of Leiceſter, firſt wife. = 3. William Orton, alderman of Leiceſter, and a conſiderable hoſier in that town, died 1793. = Margaret, dau. of Philip Bamford, gent. by Elizabeth his wife, 2d wife; living at Leiceſter 1800, æt. 71.

1. Anne, marr. to the Rev. John Brown, rector of Hoby.
2. Margaret, marr. to the Rev. Benj. Cooper.

---

[1] Harl. MSS. 1113. p. 8.

[2] He made his will May 15, 1581; and, dying in that year, was buried in the chancel of Rereſby church; where a monument was placed to his memory; ſee p. 392.

[3] See Pedigrees of this family; Harl. MSS. 5809. p. 44; and 6104, p. 18. b.

[4] To his widow, and to William Pochin, of Barkby, eſq. he gave the next preſentation of Rereſby rectory, to preſent the Rev. Thomas Haines, of Leiceſter, clerk. To his brother William, an annuity of £40. To Elizabeth, his only daughter, his meſſuages, cottages, cloſes, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, in Gaddeſby, Bareſby, South Croxton, &c. lately purchaſed of the Rev. Edward Stokes, of Blaby, clerk; 14 acres in Rereſby lordſhip, in the occupation of William Cooper; mill-cloſe in the ſame lordſhip, in the occupation of William Morley; eſtates at Hoby and Rotherby, held by Thomas Henton, and purchaſed of John Baſs; charged eſtates at Radcliffe on the Wreke with an annuity of £40. to Mrs. Sarah Readup for life; £30. per annum to Mary Dent, of Rereſby aforeſaid, for life; £20. per annum to Anne, widow of William Morley, late of Thruſſington; £10. to each man and woman ſervant that has lived a year with me. The reſidue and remainder, in truſt, to William Pochin and Thomas Haines, who are his executors with his wife. Will dated April 19, 1783. His wife and Haines died before him; and his only ſon his heir at law, who, on Mr. Pochin's renouncing, procured letters of adminiſtration, with will annexed: and poſſeſſed the perſonal and real eſtates, not diſpoſed to his daughter, and the advowſon, worth £400. per annum; all ſubject to the annuities and deficiences of perſonal.

[5] Mr. Wells died in 1739; and William his only ſon, who died ſ. p. in 1741, married Mary the eldeſt daughter of John Simons, eſq. of Belgrave; who, ſurviving him many years, quitted Thruſſington-hall, and reſided at Leiceſter in great hoſpitality. At her death, which happened in 1775, æt. 62, her jointure, which was very conſiderable, became the property of the preſent Mr. Wells Orton.

[6] See p. 392.

[7] A ſiſter of this lady was married to Mr. William Maſon, of Steward's Hay.

[8] She deviſed her property to her executor Mr. Charlton, of Chilwell in Nottinghamſhire.

ROTHERBY,

ROTHERBY,

antiently called Rederby and Retherby, ſtanding in a very low valley, on the ſide of the river Wreke, is 9 miles diſtant from Leiceſter 7 from Melton Mowbray, bounded by Friſby, Brokeſby, and Hoby, from which laſt it is ſeparated by the Wreke; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote.

At the general ſurvey, Rotherby is noticed as a member of the king's manor of Barho; and contained three ploughlands all but two oxgangs; and three acres of meadow[1].

Rotherby was long ſince belonging to the antient family we now call Bret, whoſe anceſtors had their denomination from the word Brito, or le Bret (being originally Britains, as the word importeth to us), and were great benefactors to the priory of Chaucombe, in the county of Northampton; to which houſe one of them gave lands, by the name of "Robertus Brito primogenitus & hæres Radulphi Britonis de Rederby," and another by this "Willielmus le Bret de Rederby," [as by the ſaid Priory-book appeareth, and as I have been farther aſſured out of authentical records in the Tower, ſhewed unto me by my late courteous friend and kinſman, maſter Auguſtine Vincent, now Rouge-croix, officer of arms[2].] In the time of king Edward the Third, Ralph Bret held lands here of the honour of Cheſter and Huntingdon, whoſe heir enjoyeth the ſame at this day; and from whom is deſcended the right honourable lady Anne, counteſs of Middleſex, wife to Lionel lord Cranfield earl of Middleſex, and late lord high treaſurer of England; and Henry Brett, eſq. Alexander and Arthur, eſqrs. her brothers.

"Ego Radulfus Brito dedi & conceſſi eccleſie Apoſtolorum Petri & Pauli de Chaucombe, cum corpore meo ibidem ſepeliendo, duas virgatas terre, & unam virgatam terre & dimidiam in Roderbye[3]."

On the aid granted to king Henry III. in 1235, towards the marrying of his ſiſter with the emperor of the Romans, Robert de Bret paid one mark for half a knight's fee in Rotherby.

In the Teſta de Nevill compiled about the year 1240, Rotherby is deſcribed as conſiſting of two ploughlands.

In the Itinerary of 1280, Rotherby, Friſby, and Brokeſby, anſwered collectively as one vill.

"Sciant præſentes & futuri, quòd ego Robertus de Chaucumb, pro ſalute animæ meæ, & Hugonis de Chaucumb patris mei, & Amabilis matris meæ, & omnium anteceſſorum & ſucceſſorum meorum, conceſſi & præſenti cartâ meâ confirmavi, Deo & Beatæ Mariæ & eccleſiæ Sanctorum Apoſtolorum Petri & Pauli de Chaucumbe, & canonicis ibidem Deo ſervientibus & ſervituris, totam terram de Rotherbi, cum molendino & cum omnibus pertinentiis, quam Hugo de Chaucumbe pater meus eis dedit, in liberam & puram & perpetuam eleemoſinam; faciendo capitalibus dominis feodi illius forinſecum ſervitium. Et ſciendum eſt, quòd præfati canonici habent in excambium illius terræ, totam terram Willielmi de Chaucumbe in Appeltre, tali conventione mediante, ſcilicet, quòd ſi Willielmus de Chaucumbe obierit abſque hærede de muliere ſibi deſponſatâ, tunc revertetur prædicta terra de Rotherbi, ad præfatos canonicos, & prædicta terra de Appeltre ad hæredes prædicti Willielmi: et ſi habuerit hæredes de muliere ſibi deſponſatâ, tunc prædicti canonici habebunt & tenebunt prædictam terram de Appeltre in ſempiternum, ſicut carta quam habent de prædicto Willielmo teſtatur. Et ſi idem Willielmus obierit abſque hærede muliere ſibi deſponſatâ, tunc præfati canonici ponent ſe in ſeiſinam prædictæ terræ de Retherbi, abſque contradictione & reclamatione mei vel hæredum meorum. Et ego & hæredes mei predictam terram illis warantizabimus contra omnes homines. Hiis teſtibus; Simone de [Croppri, Hugone de Bereford, Fulcone Baſſet, Roberto de Limis (with ſeven more), et multis aliis[4].

Hugh de Chaucombe granted half the church of Rotherby, and a yard-land there, and 8 yard-lands in Seveſby, (confirmed by king Edward III.) to the priory of Chaucombe[5].

In 1274, on an inquiſitio poſt mortem Roberti de Monte-alto, it was found that Thomas de Nevill held the fourth part of a knight's fee in Leiceſter and Rotherby, late parcel of the poſſeſſions of ſir Robert de Montalt; out of which ſir Robert and his heirs ought to have wards, ſervices, and reliefs[6].

In 1343, Ralph Baſſet of Drayton died ſeiſed of the third part of a knight's fee (which Ralph Bret held) in Rotherby[7].

In 1346, Ralph le Bret (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 4*s*. for a tenth part of a knight's fee; the prior of Chaucombe 10*s*. for a quarter of a knight's fee; both ſituated in Rotherby, and parcel of the fees of Cheſter and Huntingdon[8].

In 1394, it was found that Thomas de Erdington, knt. died ſeiſed of half a knight's fee in Rotherby, which John Bret held[9].

In 1486, ... Keble died ſeiſed of certain lands at Rotherby, Burton on the Woulds, Saxelby, and Queneborow, which were held of the Prince, as of the dutchy of Lancaſter, but by what ſervice was unknown[10].

In 1504, ... Cotton died ſeiſed of certain lands and tenements in Rotherby, Saxulby, and Queneborow, which were held of lord Henry, as of his honour of Cheſter and Huntingdon, but by what ſervice was unknown[11].

In 1545, it was found that John Villiers, knt. died ſeiſed of one meſſuage, four virgates and a half of land in Rotherby, held of the king in capite by knight's ſervice[12].

In 1621, ſir Alexander Cave, of Rotherby, knt. had a pardon for all and ſingular Adulteries and Fornications, and all and ſingular crimes and offences of Adultery and Fornication, by the ſaid Alexander committed with any woman or women before the date of theſe preſents, and all ſuits and proſecutions for them before eccleſiaſtical judges or commiſſioners, and in eccleſiaſtical courts, even though he had been, or ſhall be hereafter, convicted of, or condemned for, any of theſe crimes, excepting Inceſt, Rape, and Sodomy. The pardon extended alſo to his feloniouſly ſtealing and taking away three pieces of coined gold of the realm called Unites (each piece worth 22*s*.) from John Sarvin, gent.; and all concealments of the ſaid felony, together with the acceſſaries thereto, and their eſcape or eſcapes; though he were or ſhall be indicted, attainted, convicted, outlawed, condemned, and adjudged therefore; all forfeitures, corporeal puniſhments, impriſonments, ſuits, and actions, on account thereof—on condition of his appearing in court when required, though not bound by ſecurities ſo to do[13].

---

[1] "In Redebi 3 carucatæ terræ, 2 bovatæ minus; & 3 acræ prati." Domeſday, fol. 237. a. 1.

[2] The words between hooks, after firſt altering "now Rouge-croix" to "now Windſor Herald," Mr. Burton has ſtruck out.

[3] The ſeal to this deed, near two inches broad, with a lion in the rundle (not in a ſhield) was in the poſſeſſion of ſir Robert Cotton, baronet; ſee Plate LIX. fig. 22.

[4] A round ſeal in yellow wax, inſcribed "+ SIGILL. ROBERTI DE CHAVCVMBA:" on the reverſe, a counter-ſeal, inſcribed, "+ SIGILLVM SECRETI." Madox, Form. Angl. p. 158. CCLXVI.

[5] Pat. 2 Edw. III. pars 2. m. 36.

[6] Eſch. 3 Edw. I. Nº 19. Leic.

[7] Eſch. 17 Edw. III. Nº 59. Leic.

[8] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[9] Eſch. 18 Hen. II. Nº 15. Leic.

[10] Eſch. 2 Hen. VII.

[11] Eſch. 20 Hen. VII.

[12] Eſch. 16 April, 36 Hen. VIII.

[13] Pat. 18 Jac. I. p. 4. n. 7. Rymer, vol. XVII. p. 282.

In 1564, there were 13 families in Rotherby.

The freeholders here in 1630 were, Sampſon Waſe, gent. and William Muſſon.

"Nov. 5, 1654. By the concurrence [ſo my memorandum expreſſes it] of Frances Wace, widow and executrix of Thomas Wace, late of Rotherby, gent. deceaſed, Sampſon Wace his ſon and heir, and Anne-Catharine and Emme his daughters, in conſideration of £120. the capital meſſuage in Rotherby in the tenure of the Waces, the cloſe adjoining, and three yardlands and a half in the fields of Rotherby, were ſold to ſir Thomas Hartopp, of Burton Lazars, knt. and his heirs. This lordſhip has ſince been incloſed; but by whom, or at what time, I have not been informed: nor can I as yet give any farther account of the ſubſequent owners, ſeeing that it was for ſome time holden by Shukburgh Aſhby, in right of his wife, on whom it had been ſettled for jointure [1]."

In 1655, there was collected in Rotherby, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 5l. 11*s.* 6*d.*

"Rotulus finium pro brevibus, &c. ſuper ſtatutum Stapuli, incipiens viceſimo-octavo die Octobris prox' poſt feſtum Sc̃i Mich̃is Arch̃i, 1680.

Leiceſt. Pro fine facto 12° die Julii de Waltero Plummer [2] de Whiteham in com' Suff' baronett', per conſ' breve versũs Will'um Hartopp de Rothirby in com' Leic' militem, & filium ejuſdem, de debito mille & ducentarum librarum habend', 2*l.* 10*s.*

In the church of Empingham in Rutland is an epitaph for Mary, daughter of Robert Hopton, of Witham in Somerſetſhire, ſecond ſiſter and coheir of Ralph lord Hopton of Stratton in Cornwall; who died in 1693, at the advanced age of 93, after having been married, firſt, to ſir Henry Mackworth, of Normanton, bart. ſecondly, to ſir Thomas Hartopp [3], knt. whom ſhe ſurvived.

Previous to the marriage of Charles Henton the younger with Anne Hartopp, articles were ſigned, Nov. 11, 1712, by Elizabeth Bennet, of the town of Nottingham, ſpinſter, Anne Hartopp, niece of the ſaid Elizabeth, and ſecond daughter of Thomas Hartopp, of Quorn, eſq. of the firſt part; Charles Henton the elder, of Bridgford on the Hill, co. Nottingham, and Charles Henton the younger, clerk, rector of Widmerpole, co. Notts, of the ſecond part; and Thomas Bennet, eſq. ſon and heir apparent of John Bennet, of Welby, eſq. and John Henton, of Newark upon Trent, of the third part. Portion £500.

In 1722, four freeholders polled from this pariſh; and in 1775 we find five names.

In Rotherby are now 16 families.

The lordſhip contains 900 acres, all old incloſure.

The hall-houſe, an old building, yet ſtanding, at the Eaſt end of the church-yard, was formerly inhabited by the Bretts, ſome time lords of this town; who removed into Northamptonſhire. It was afterwards purchaſed by the Hartopps, and then by the Seamans. Dutton Seaman [4], eſq. of the Inner Temple, died ſeiſed of it in 1720; whoſe only ſon Dutton Seaman, eſq. purchaſed, June 11, 1740, for £4000, the office of comptroller of the city of London [5]; which he held till his death, Sept. 15, 1785, when Rotherby-hall became the property of his ſon, Dutton Seaman, eſq.

The other principal landholders are, Mr. Hudſon, Mr. Blower, and Mr. Mansfield of Leiceſter.

"Here are about twelve dwellings, one of which is now occupied by Mr. Boultbee, ſeated, like that at Brookſby, low: it gives the air of a family-reſidence to paſſengers, and was occupied by the late unfortunate Captain Wilſon, when he ruſhed into the arms of death, after he had with reputation and honour ſerved his king and country [6]."

Near a tree at the church-porch appear at a diſtance two windings of the river.

Extracts from the Regiſter.

"George ſon of George and Iſabel Villiers, baptized June 18, 1561.

James Brett, gent. ſon of William and Alice Brett, baptized Feb. 3, 1564.

Margaret, daughter of William and Alice Brett, baptized April 21, 1566.

William, ſon of Thomas and Anne Brett, baptized Nov. 20, 1666.

Frances, daughter of Thomas and Anne Brett, baptized May 17, 1569.

George, ſon of Thomas and Anne Brett, baptized Nov. 6, 1571.

Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas and Anne Brett, baptized Feb. 14, 1573.

Thomas, ſon of Tho. and A. Brett, bapt. Jan. 27, 1579.

Mary, daughter of Thomas and Anne Brett, baptized July 12, 1583; buried Aug. 2, 1584.

Thomas Hunſton, eſq. and Mrs. Anne Cave, married June 29, 1590.

John, ſon of Alexander Cave, bapt. Sept. 12, 1596.

Alexander, ſon of William Brett, gent. baptized Sept. 1, 1597.

Anne, daughter of William Brett, gent. baptized Sept. 1, 1597. } twins.

William ſon of Alex. Cave, gent. bapt. June 25, 1598.

Katharine, daughter of Alexander Cave, gent. baptized Oct. 21, 1599.

Elizabeth, daughter of William Brett, gent. baptized May 20, 1600.

Martha, daughter of Alexander Cave, gent. baptized Dec. 19, 1602.

Sarah, daughter of William Brett, gent. baptized Jan. 23, 1602; buried Jan. 24, 1602.

Jerome, ſon of William Brett, gent. baptized Jan. 26, 1602. } twins.

Katharine, wife of William Brett, gent. buried Dec. 6, 1604.

Alexander, ſon of Alexander Cave, knight, baptized Dec. 9, 1604.

Brian, ſon of William Brett, gent. baptized Oct. 22, 1606; buried Oct. 22, 1606.

Elizabeth, wife of William Brett, gent. baptized Oct. 22, 1606.

Francis, ſon of James Brett, gent. bur. Nov. 24, 1610.

Joſhua Spongue, clerk, and Anne relict of Rich. Smith, clerk, late rector of Rotherby, married Jan. 8, 1615.

James Brett, gent. buried Aug. ult. 1616.

Kenelm Falkner, clerk, buried April 7, 1617.

Francis Foxley, of Bulwick, co. Northampton, gent. and Mrs. Frances Cave, married April 19, 1619.

George Aſhby, eſq. was patron of this church in 1622.

Samuel Hill, clerk, and Alice Gouge, widow, married Jan. 28, 1627.

Sir Alexander Cave, knt. buried July 29, 1638.

Dame Anne, wife of ſir Thomas Brooke, knight, buried Aug. 20, 1639.

Rebecca, daughter of ſir Thomas Brooke, knight, buried Aug. 18, 1642.

The troubleſome times now coming on, Mr. Francis Nedham, rector, writes,

"1643. Bellum! 1644. Bellum! 1645. Bellum! Interruption! Perſecution! .... Sequeſtration by John Muſſen, yeoman, and John Yates, taylor! 1649, 1650, 1651, 1652, 1653, 1654, Sequeſtration!—Thomas Silverwood intruder."

[By this laſt note, it ſhould ſeem that Mr. Nedham lived to be reſtored: if he did, he was either removed to ſome better preferment, or lived not the year out. He was a good man.—See more of him under Hoby.]

William, ſon of ſir William Hartopp, knight, and dame Agnes his wife, baptized July 8, 1665.

Dame Agnes, wife of ſir William Hartopp, knight, buried June 26, 1667.

---

[1] Carte, MS.

[2] Walter Plomer, eſq. of the Inner Temple, created a baronet Jan. 2, 1660; now extinct.

[3] This ſir Thomas Hartopp, knt. was probably the elder brother of ſir Edward Hartopp, of Buckminſter, created a baronet in 1652 (ſee vol. II. p. 123); and who obtained, May 18, 1596, from Richard Lee, Clarenceux, the grant of the family arms, a chevron between three ounces, there called otters, (ſee MS. called Shirley, by P. Le Neve, Norroy, p. 41). Sir Thomas Hartopp, of Burton Lazars (ib. pp. 267. 285.) died before his ſecond wife Arabella Bennet.

[4] John Nourſe, of Woodeaton, co. Oxon, eſq. married Anne, daughter and coheireſs of William Sedley, of Northaw, Herts; by whom he had two ſons and four daughters; of whom the youngeſt, Mary, was married to Dutton Seaman, of Rotherby, eſq. whoſe only ſon Dutton, the comptroller of London, had three ſons and one daughter.

[5] To the honour of the Corporation of London, this reſpectable office was handſomely given in 1786 to Joſeph Buſhnan, eſq. who had for a conſiderable time tranſacted the buſineſs as Deputy Comptroller; and at Mr. Buſhnan's death, in 1797, the office was in the ſame manner beſtowed on Philip-Wyatt Crowther, eſq. who had for ſome years been City Solicitor; and the office of Solicitor given to the ſon of Mr. Buſhnan.

[6] Throſby's Excurſions, p. 375.

Agnes, daughter of William Young, eſq. and Dorothy his wife, baptized . . . . . . 1677.

Barbara, daughter of William Young, eſq. and Dorothy his wife, baptized April 1678.

Letitia, daughter of James Symonds, rector of Merſton in Suſſex, and Elizabeth his wife, baptized Jan. 21, 1679; buried Feb. 16, 1679.

Nele, ſon of Shukburgh Aſhby, gent. and Mary his wife, baptized April 16, 1694.

Edward, ſon of Shukburgh Aſhby, gent. and Mary his wife, baptized June 3, 1695.

William Baſs, of Melton Mowbray, clerk, and Elizabeth Jennings of Lichfield, married Jan. 18, 1703.

Baptiſms, 1579—1583, 9. 1786—1790, 16.
Burials, ————— 8. ————— 7.

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	7	16	6
Expended in county rates, &c.	3	10	0
———— on the poor, —	4	6	6
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	1	9	6
Expended in litigations, —	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	13	2	11
———————— 1784, —	12	13	10
———————— 1785, —	15	4	3
Medium of theſe three years,	13	13	8
———- of county expences,	4	10	11
———- of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	0	12	9
———- of nett annual expences,	8	10	0
———- of attending on magiſtrates,	0	12	0
———- of entertainments at meetings,	0	0	0
———- of law expences, —	0	3	4
———- of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 53.

Charitable Benefactions.

On a blue ſlate againſt a pillar in the South aile:

"Mrs. Catharine Gregory[1], of Hoby in the county of Leiceſter, by her laſt will, dated June 12, 1723, (and proved at Leiceſter Sept. 16, 1727,) gave and deviſed to the miniſter and overſeers of Rotherby, and to their ſucceſſors, and unto her executors and truſtees, and their heirs for ever, all that cloſe in Rotherby aforeſaid, known by the name of Waſe's Lammas Cloſe, in truſt; that they apply the income thereof yearly for inſtructing the poor children of Rotherby in the Church Catechiſm, and alſo to find them books; and to have ſome of them, ſo inſtructed, put out to trades, as often as the rent will allow; and to let each child of the pariſh have a Bible when they leave ſchool.

"She alſo gave and deviſed to the miniſter and overſeers of the poor of Hoby, and to their ſucceſſors for ever, and to her executor and truſtees, and their heirs for ever, the ſum of £20. in truſt; that they put out the ſame, and apply the income thereof yearly to have the poor children of Hoby taught and provided for, in manner as the poor of Rotherby are above directed to be taught and provided for."

Laurence Seaman was born of mean parents in the town of Leiceſter, and educated at the expence of ſome charitable perſons, by whom he was ſent to Emanuel College, Cambridge. He very ſoon left that ſeminary, and taught a ſchool for a livelihood: ſo that his learning was acquired by himſelf; and yet even Wood owns him to have been a learned man. A ſermon accidentally preached at St. Martin's, Ludgate, procured him that lecture; and his reputation there brought him into Alhallows, Breadſtreet[2], and into the Aſſembly, where he appeared very active, and very ſkilful in managing controverſies in divinity. He was preſented to Bread-ſtreet in 1642, by archbiſhop Laud, then a priſoner in the Tower, by order of parliament. But Laud told the earl of Northumberland (whoſe chaplain Seaman was), that, out of reſpect to his lordſhip, he had, before the receipt of that order, deſigned him for that benefice. April 7, 1643, he became maſter of Peter-houſe, Cambridge, being then M. A. and acquitted himſelf with abundant honour; took the degree of D. D. April 9, 1645; and was vice-chancellor in 1653. He was well-ſtudied in the controverſy of church-government, which was the occaſion of his being ſent by the parliament with their commiſſioners when they treated with king Charles I. in the Iſle of Wight; where his majeſty took particular notice of the doctor's ſingular ability in the debates about church-government, which were afterwards printed in the collection of his majeſty's works. He retained the rectory of Allhallows till the Reſtoration; when he was ejected for Nonconformity, and retired to a private houſe, where he ſpent the remainder of his days in ſtudying the Scripture Prophecies. He was a great divine, thoroughly ſkilled in the original languages; always carrying about with him a ſmall Plantin Bible, without points, for his ordinary uſe. He died in London, Sept. 9, 1675; and left behind him a moſt valuable library (the firſt that was ſold in England by way of auction) which produced £700. He was a perſon of a moſt deep and piercing judgement in all points of controverſial divinity: nor was he leſs able to defend than to find out the truth. Among many inſtances of it, the following is remarkable: Upon the invitation of an honourable lady, who was the head of a noble family, and was often ſolicited by Romiſh prieſts to change her religion, he engaged two of the moſt able prieſts they could pick out in a diſpute, in the preſence of the lord and lady, for their ſatisfaction; and, by ſilencing them upon the head of Tranſubſtantiation, was inſtrumental to preſerve that whole family ſtedfaſt in the Proteſtant religion. He was a moſt excellent and profound caſuiſt. Scarce any divine in London was ſo much ſought to for reſolving caſes of conſcience as Dr. Seaman. He was moſt able and dextrous in expounding Scripture, both in the pulpit and in private diſcourſe, and gave the ſenſe of difficult paſſages with the greateſt perſpicuity, ſo that he might truly be called "an interpreter, one of a thouſand." Doctrinal light was the great beauty of his ſermons; but he took care to give the warmth of application alſo. He was a divine richly furniſhed with all the materials of didactical and practical divinity; and could, upon all occaſions, diſcourſe rationally upon any point without labour or heſitation. He was a perſon of great ſtability in the truth; not a reed ſhaken with the wind. He would not debauch his conſcience for preferment, but valued one truth of Chriſt above all the wealth of both the Indies. As a Chriſtian, he diſcovered the greateſt contentment with his eſtate, and the allotments of Providence. He was better pleaſed in being a real paſtor to one congregation, than a nominal paſtor to a thouſand. He was eminent in obſerving public providences, and in ſubmitting to them. He was deeply and tenderly ſenſible of the ſtate of Chriſt's church, and was ever inquiſitive how it fared with the people of God in foreign parts; not out of Athenian curioſity, but a public ſpirit. He was eminently open-hearted, and open-handed alſo to the poor, eſpecially the pious poor. He did "conſulere tam modeſtiæ quam inopiæ." He ever regarded the modeſty of a poor man who could not be clamorous; and in regard both to poor miniſters and private Chriſtians, was ready to every good work. He was induſtrious and indefatigable in his calling. Rarely did he allow himſelf any diverting recreation. The precious jewel of time, how did he eſteem it! he would not loſe the very filings thereof. Admirable was his prudence in his ſpeech and behaviour. He knew to whom he ſpoke, when to ſpeak, and how much to ſpeak. He knew how to benefit others by ſpeaking, without inſnaring himſelf. In him practical prudence was joined with intellectual. His wiſdom made not only his own face to ſhine, but by example and counſel he reflected much of the luſtre of it upon others. Few perſons were more frequently deſired to give advice in affairs of difficulty than he. His prudential reſervedneſs was by ſome accounted exceſſive ſeverity; but he ſometimes knew how to be chearful, though in a grave and Chriſtian way. His patience in his ſickneſs (conſidering his natural temper) was great even to admiration. In all his torments, he ſeldom groaned under them, but never grumbled againſt him that ſent them. He often complained to God, but never of him[3]. In the midſt of his tortures he admired free grace, and advanced that God who ſeemed ſo much to depreſs him. In the leſſon of patience he grew perfect in the ſchool of affliction.—His works are only a few Sermons before the long Parliament; a Sermon before the Lord Mayor, April 7, 1650, againſt Diviſions; Vindication of the Reformed Churches concerning Ordination, in Anſwer to Mr. Simpſon's Diatribe; and Notes on the Revelations, which he preſented to Lord Wharton, but they were not printed.

---

[1] See before, under Hoby, p. 267.

[2] Not noticed there by Newcourt.

[3] Nonconformiſts Memorial, vol. I. p. 77.

The CHURCH (ſee Plate LIX.)

dedicated to All Saints, conſiſts of a ſmall ſtone embattled tower and ſteeple at the Weſt end of the South aile (in which are three bells); a South-weſt porch and a chancel, both covered with flat tiles; a nave and South aile, both leaded. There was formerly a North aile; but it is now down.

This church, as the tradition is, was built by the Bretts, ſome time lords of this town.

The bells have the following inſcriptions:

1. “Come, and pray!—1597.”
2. “Ave, Maria, gratia plena; Dominus tecum.”
3. “A. B. C. D. E. F.—1611.”

Burton notices theſe two coats of arms here:

Gules, three lions paſſant guardant in pale Or, England; fig. 23.

Per pale, Azure and Argent; fig. 24.

Both theſe are now gone: but in the Weſt window of the nave the following coat remains:

Argent, three cinquefoils Or; impaling, Gules, a feſs dancetté between twelve billets Or, Brett, fig. 25.

On ſome fragments of glaſs:
“Timenti : tib : ingredi :” fig. 26—28.

The font is round, large, and very antient; and has a ſmall ſtone kneeling ſtep.

In the South aile are a piſcina and a locker.

The ſeats in this church are open.

Here is a large King's arms, with this inſcription:

“The Rev. Paul Belcher rector.
Joſeph Barker churchwarden.
Henry Paget pariſh-clerk. } 1773.”
Henry Segrave painter.

In the Matriculus of 1220, Rotherby is deſcribed to be under the patronage of the prior of Laund. The then parſon was Hombert, paying to the prior two marks and an half, as of old[1].

In 1301, the prior of Laund preſented one rector to the church of Rotherby, and ſir John Segrave, knight, another; but ſir John Segrave revoked his preſentation, 11 kal. June.

In 1344, the procurations were 5*s.*; the rectory was taxed at 7 marks; and paid 12*d.* for Peter-pence. The prior of Laund was then the patron, and had a penſion of two marks and a half.

In 1534-5, the procurations and ſynodals were 9*s.* 6*d.*; the prior of Laund's penſion, 6*s.* 8*d.*; and the value of the rectory £18.

The patron of this church in 1612 was Mr. George Aſhby; in 1641, Mr. William Lane, citizen of London; afterwards Mr. Barnard, by marriage with a daughter of Lane.

In 1650, the rectory was returned worth £30; and the incumbent as “ſufficient, but a pluralitan.”

The preſent value in the king's books is 8*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.*

The epiſcopal procurations are, 3*s.* 8*d.*; the archidiaconal, 8*s.* 6*d.*

The feaſt is held on the Sunday following All Saints Day.

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
Hombert, 1220.	Prior and convent of Laund.
William Prowedfote, 1534.
William Thorpe[2], B. A. 1562.
Richard Smith, 1607; buried Oct. 21, 1610.
Samuel Hill[3], 1610.
Francis Nedham, 1631.
Francis Chamberlain[4], about 1640.
Francis Needham[5], 1642.
Gilbert Woodward[6], June 17, 1660.	Rex, ad confirm' titulum.
Edward Smith, M. A. 1667; buried July 28, 1682.
John Reading, 168 . .
John Steele, M. A. Dec. 10, 1691; died Dec. 31, 1715.	Thomas Noble, gent.
Thomas Pocklington[7], M. A. Jan. 14, 1715-16; died 1767.	Rob. Sherard, eſq. and Elizabeth his wife.
Paul Belcher, Oct. 20, 1768.	Thomas Segrave, gent. and his wife.
Henry Woodcock[8], LL. B. April 1782.	Samuel-Steele Perkins, eſq.
Paul Belcher, Sept. 13, 1775.

William Walkwood was curate in 1612; Edward Cooper in 1621; Martin Silverwood in 1621.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

In the chancel.

On the floor is a plaſter ſtone; whereon is the figure of a prieſt, cut with a chiſſel, but now almoſt worn out; with this imperfect inſcription:

“Hic iacet corpus Will'i[9] . . . . .
. . . . p'pitiet' Deus. Amen.”

On another old ſtone:

1. “Hic jacet dn̄us Robertus Brett, miles[10].”

On other flat ſtones in the chancel-floor:

2. “HIC JACET EDWARDUS SMITH,
ARTIUM MAGISTER, HUJUS
ECCLESIÆ RECTOR; QUI OBIIT
VICESIMO-QUARTO
DIE JULII, ANNO DOM. 1682,
ANNOQUE ÆTATIS
SEXAGESIMO-SECUNDO.”

3. Within the communion rails:
“John Steele, maſter of arts,
rector of Rotherby and Hoby, died the 21ſt of December, 1715,
in the 59th year of his age.”

4. On a blue ſlate:
“Here lieth interred the body of Thomas Pocklington, rector of this place upwards of 52 years,
and vicar of St. Mary's in Leiceſter;
who departed this life the 23d day of May, 1768,
in the 77th year of his age.”

5. “Here lieth the body of Mehetabel, the wife of Thomas Pocklington; who died April 12, 1744, aged 56.”

6. On an alabaſter ſlab:
“HEARE LYETH THE BODY OF WILLIAM RANDAL,
OF GADDSBY, WHO DYED THE 27TH DAY
OF JANUARY, ANNO DOMINI 1681.”

---

[1] See the Introductory Volume, p. lix.

[2] In the Certificate referred to under Allexton, p. 8, Mr. Thorpe is thus deſcribed: “Preſbyter, non conjugatus; competenter doctus; non reſidet; non hoſpitalis; deget apud Atteſmore; non licentiatus, nec prædicat; duo beneficia habet.”

[3] Qu. if he was not alſo rector of Asfordby?

[4] He is noticed in Walker's Sufferings of the Clergy, but without any particulars.

[5] He alſo is noticed by Mr. Walker, as “a very worthy man.” For more of him ſee under Hoby, p. 268.

[6] He would not agree to incloſe the lordſhip; whereupon he was removed to Wanlip, in exchange, with one Smith. Peck, MS. ex informatione viri reverendi Thomæ Pocklington.

[7] Vicar alſo of St. Mary's in Leiceſter by diſpenſation, in June, 1737. See vol. I. p. 476.

[8] Vicar alſo of Barkby; ſee p. 48.

[9] This is the tomb either of William Thorpe, or of his predeceſſor William Prowedfote.

[10] From St. Lo Kniveton's notes, taken in 1600.

7. "In memory of Martin Hartopp [1], eſq. M. D. fellow of Merton Colledge, in Oxford, and ſecond ſon of ſir William Hartopp and Agnes his wife; who departed this life Feb. 24, 1722, ætat. 60.
William Hartopp, gent. buried March 2, 1722."

8. "In memory of the Rev. John Tombes, who departed this life Feb. 27, 1770, aged 36."

9. "In memory of Elizabeth Tombes, wife of the rev. John Tombes;
who departed this life May 9, 1786, aged 57 years."

Againſt the North ſide of the chancel wall, on a ſmall monument of white marble :

Sable, a chevron Ermine between three otters paſſant Argent, langued and unguled Gules. Creſt; out of a ducal coronet Or, a pelican vulnerating her breaſt Gules, Hartopp; fig. 29.

"Near this place lyes the body of Thomas Hartopp, of Quorndon,
eſq. eldeſt ſon of ſir William Hartopp, of Rotherby, by Agnes his wife [2], daughter of ſir Martin Lyſter; who died the 17th of September, 1727, aged 72 years."

On flat ſtones in the nave :

1. "Thomas Clayton was buried Feb. 3, 1680."

2. "Mrs. Lacey Flanders, buried 1698."

3. "In memory of Francis Birch, died December 18, 1721, aged xxxix years.
Alſo Grace his wife.
She died September the 27th, 1757, aged 71 years."

4. "Beneath are depoſited the remains of William Blower,
who departed this life the 16th day of Nov. 1788,
in the 63d year of his age."

On a braſs plate in the South aile :

"Here lyes interred the body of Dutton Seaman, of the Inner Temple, London, eſq.;
who departed this life the 10th day of April, 1720, anno ætatis ſuæ 53."

Againſt the wall an atchievement with theſe arms :

Barry, wavy of ſix, Argent and Azure, a creſcent for difference Or, Seaman; impaling, Quarterly; 1. and 4, Gules, a feſs between two chevrons Argent, Charnell; 2. Azure, a feſs wavy between three goats' heads eraſed Argent, Sedley; 3. Azure, a chevron between three covered cups Or, Butler. On an eſcutcheon of pretence Charnells. Creſt, a ſalient demi ſea-horſe Argent; fig. 30.

In the church-yard.

{ Thomas Wheelwright, June 28, 1758, aged 86.
{ Mudwin his wife, Dec. 5, 1728, aged 68.

{ William Baker, Dec. 27, 1729, aged 39.
{ Anne his wife, Oct. 8, 1754, aged 90.

{ Samuel Andrews, July 16, 1782, aged 75.
{ Catharine his wiſe, April 25, 1782, aged 72.

Pedigree of BRETT, of ROTHERBY.

Arms : Gules, a feſs dancetté between twelve billets Or; fig. 25.

William Brett, of Rotherby. = Anne, dau. of Anthony Beaumont, third ſon of William Beaumont, of Cole Orton.

1. Henry Brett, ſon and heir. = Margaret, dau. of Thomas Seames, of Glouceſter.
2. Arthur, æt. 27 1619.
3. Alexander, æt. 32.
Anne. = Lionel Cranfield earl of Middleſex, and lord high treaſurer of England.

George Brett, one year old in 1622.

Pedigree of WASE, of ROTHERBY.

Argent, on a chevron Sable, between three garbs Vert, banded Or, three orles of the field. Creſt, on a wreath, clouds proper, iſſuing rays Or; thereon an arm embowed in armour of the firſt, garniſhed Or, ſupporting a battle-axe Argent, headed Gules, garniſhed of the ſecond; fig. 31.

John Waſe, of London, merchant, temp. Hen. VI. = . . .

John Waſe, of Leiceſter, merchant of the Staple. = Alice, dau. and heir of John Baylie, of Rotherby, co. Leiceſter, relict of William Hill, merchant of Calais.

Richard Waſe, of Leiceſter, temp. Hen. VIII. = Elizabeth, dau. of George Merewell, of Throwley, co. Stafford, eſq.

Thomas Waſe, of Rotherby, temp. Hen. VIII. = Anne, dau. of Thomas Coleclough, co. Stafford.
Anne. = William Widder, of Staffordſhire.

1. Samſon Waſe, marr. Dec. 13, 1586, Margaret, daugh. of Eraſmus Wildman, of Beby.
2. Richard Waſe, marr. Margery, dau. of William Brokeſby, of Gaddeſby.
3. Edward,
4. John, both died ſ. p.
Alice.
Jane.
Dorothy, d. ſ. p.
5. Thomas, of Hickling, co. Nott. married Jane, dau. of Henry Ducket, of Dalby on the Woulds
Elizabeth, married Auguſtine Olyſe; and after to Thomas Armeſon, of Loughborough.
Margaret, married to Hen. Fox, of Great Wigſton.
Anne, married George Allen, of South Croxton.

Children of Samſon Waſe:
1. Thomas, born Dec. 20, 1598.
2. John, b. Oct. 1599.
Anne, born 1598.
Suſan, born July 22, 1602.
Thomas and Dorothy, ſ. p.

Katharine, only daughter.

Thomas.
Elizabeth.
Anne.

William.
Valentine.
George.
Margaret.
Anne.
Eleanor.

Pedigree of LANY, of LEICESTER and RERESBY.

Quarterly, 1. and 4. Argent, on a bend between two fleurs de lis Gules, a lion paſſant of the firſt; Lany. 2. Argent, a chevron engrailed, between three cinquefoils Gules; on a chief of the ſecond, a lion paſſant of the firſt; Coke. 3. Gules, a creſcent Ermine, within an orle of eight martlets Or. Creſt, a merman proper, tail Argent, fins and hair Or, tied round the temples with two ribbons Argent and Azure, holding in his hand a hawk's bell hung to two ſtrings Argent and Or; fig. 32.

. . . . . dau. of Aſlake, of Norfolk, ſecond wife. = John Lany, of Cratfield, co. Suffolk. = Katharine, dau. of . . . . . Yaxley, of Melleis, co. Suffolk.

Aſlake Lany, married and had iſſue.

1. John Lany, recorder of Ipſwich, co. Suff. married Mary, dau. of . . . . Pooley, of Badley Hall, co. Suffolk.
2. James Lany, of Berwick, married and had iſſue.
3. Thomas Lany, of the Newark. = Gertrude, dau. of John Hunt, of Lindon, co. Rutland; afterwards re-married to Henry Sacheverell, of Rereſby.
4. Benjamin, died ſ. p.

1. John Laney, married two wives.
2. Baſſebon Laney.
Other children.

1. A ſon.
2. Anne, married to . . . .

Tho. Lany, ſon and heir, æt. 33, 1619.

---

[1] This gentleman (Eſq. and M. D. as he is here called) took the degree of A. M. June 19, 1688, and of B. M. Nov. 29, 1689; and was a perſon of good practice and ſkill in the ſcience which he profeſſed. He lived at Leiceſter, and was commonly known by the name of The Whiſtling Doctor.

[2] Agnes Liſter was ſir William Hartopp's firſt wife; his ſecond was Elizabeth, daughter of John lord Poulett of Hinton St. George; ſee vol. II. p. 267.

SAXULBY,

SAXULBY,

in antient writings called Saxelby, Saxulbe, and Saxilby, now pronounced Soſilby or Sauſuby, is a ſmall village, in a low but healthy ſituation, being almoſt wholly ſurrounded by hills; bounded by Wartnaby on the North; Asfordby on the South-eaſt; and Grimſton on the Weſt. It is about 5 miles Weſt-north-weſt from Melton Mowbray; and contains about 1100 acres.

In Domeſday book Saxulbie, containing one plough-land and five acres of meadow, is only noticed as a member of the royal manor of Rodolei [1].

In the Itinerary of 1280, Saxulby, Siwoldby, Dalby, and Asfordby, anſwered collectively as one vill.

The Knights Templars were formerly lords of this village as a member of the ſoke of Rothley; and, after their ſuppreſſion, it came to the Hoſpitallers, who held it till the time of their diſſolution [2].

The abbot and convent of Croxton had alſo conſiderable property here, the gift of divers benefactors.

" Habemus in Saxilbi, de dono Radulfi de Foleville, IIII bovatas terre, in puram eleemoſinam (quas Rogerus filius Radulfi tenuit, cum eodem Rogero, & totâ ſequelâ ſuâ); VII bovatas, quas Willielmus ad Petrum & Hugo filius Aylmeri tenuerunt, cum eiſdem Willielmo & Hugone, & totâ ſequelâ eorum.

Item Radulfus de Felaul [3], filius predicti Radulfi, confirmavit nobis unam virgatam terre in eadem villâ, ſecundum tenorem carte patris ſui.

Item Walterus de Folevile dedit nobis unam virgatam terre in eâdem villâ, cum ſeipſo & Johanne filio ſuo, qui ſeipſos huic eccleſie reddiderunt in puram eleemoſinam, ſalvâ forinſecâ domini regis, illam ſcilicet quam Willielmus filius Ricardi & Hugo filius tenuerunt.

Item Hugo filius Anketini dedit nobis ſervicium predicte virgate terre, in puram eleemoſinam; & reddit IIđ. recipiendos in die Paſche.

Item idem Hugo dedit nobis, in puram eleemoſinam, unam bovatam terre in eâdem villâ, illam ſcilicet, quam Walterus filius Leciline tenuit, excepto tofto.

Item Walterus filius Emme de Saxilby dedit, conceſſit, dimiſit, & quietum clamavit nobis per cirografum, totum jus & clameum, quod ipſe & heredes ſui habuerunt, vel habere potuerunt, in XII acris terre, & dimidiâ acrâ, & tribus ferthingis, in eâdem villâ; ut in homagiis, wardis, releviis, ſectis curie, ſerviciis, & conſuetudinibus & demandis, quas de XII acris predicti exigi potuerint, &c.; pro qua conceſſione, dimiſſione, quietâ clamatione, habuit, de dono noſtro, idem Walterus duas acras terre & dimidiam in eadem villâ.

Item Radulfus de Turvile, filius Hugonis de Thurvile, confirmavit nobis predictas XII acras & dimidiam, in puram & perpetuam eleemoſinam. Preterea dedit & confirmavit nobis, per eandem cartam, totum jus & clameum, quod ipſe vel heredes ſui habuerunt, vel habere potuerunt, in predictis terris, ut in homagiis, wardis, releviis, ſectis curie, ſerviciis forinſecis & non forinſecis, conſuetudinibus & demandis, quas in predictis terris exigi potuerint, &c.

Item dominus Robertus de Keriſby conceſſit & confirmavit nobis, per cirografum, IIII bovatas terre in Saxilby, cum pertinentiis; duas videlicet quas Rogerus filius Radulfi tenuit, cum totâ ſequelâ ejuſdem Rogeri; & duas bovatas quas Willielmus ad Petram & Hugo filius Ailmeri tenuerunt, cum totâ ſequelâ eorundem; benè & in pace, quietè & ſolutè, in liberam & perpetuam eleemoſinam; ita quod nec ipſe nec heredes ſui, ratione relevii, warde, eſchaete, ſecte curie, vel alicujus auxilii, ſivè cujuſlibet alterius conſuetudinis, in predictis IIII bovatis terre exigere potuerint; ſet de predictis omnibus quieti ſumus & immunes in perpetuum, ab omni ſervicio & ſeculari exactione, ſalvo forinſeco domini regis, ad tantam terram pertinente; ſalvo & viſu franciplegii tenentium noſtrorum in eadem villâ manentium. Et ſi contingat nos de predicto tenemento implacitari, predicti Robertus & heredes ſui predictum tenementum nobis warentizabunt & defendent in perpetuum.

Item ſciendum, quod Willielmus de Leche de Saxilby tenet de nobis X acras terre & tres ferthingos in eadem villâ, ſibi & heredibus ſuis, de A . . uxore ſuâ, filiâ Hugonis Ailmeri, exeuntibus, benè & in pace, reddendo inde nobis annuatim XIIđ. argenti ad tres terminos; ſcil' ad Purif' IIIIđ. ad Bapt' IIIIđ. ad Mich' IIIIđ. pro omni ſervicio, ſalvo forinſeco; ita quod non liceat dicto Waltero & heredibus ſuis dictam terram dare, vendere, invadiare, de nobis & ſucceſſoribus noſtris.

Item Beatrix, quondâm uxor Rogeri hominis noſtri, & heredes eorum de eiſdem procreati, tenent de nobis unam virgatam in eadem villâ, liberè, quietè, reddendo inde nobis XIIs̃. ſterlingorum, ad tres terminos; ſcilicet, ad Martini IIIIs̃. ad Purificat' IIIIs̃. ad Bapt' IIIIs̃. faciendo forinſeca ſervicia; ita quod non poſſint dare, ut ſupra, ſine ſpeciali licentiâ & aſſenſu noſtro; quod ſi fecerint, bene licebit nobis, in manu noſtra recipere, ſicut dominicum noſtrum.

Item Willielmus de Hotot & Alicia uxor ſua, & heredes eorum, tenent de nobis unam virgatam terre in eadem villâ, liberè, quietè, reddendo inde nobis XIIs̃. annuatim ad predictos terminos, & in eâdem forinſeca faciendo, &c. ut ſupra.

Item Willielmus Atte-ſtones, & Auwiſia uxor ſua, & heredes ſui de eiſdem procreati, tenent unam virgatam terre de nobis in eadem villâ, reddendo XIIs̃. ad eoſdem terminos, & in eâdem formâ.

Memorandum, redditûs noſtri in eâdem villâ XXXVIIs̃.

Thomas Levinz de Coſington tenet de nobis, ſibi & heredibus ſuis, unam virgatam terre in Saxilby, exceptis duabus ſelionibus, reddendo nobis annuatim XXs̃. argenti, ad III terminos.

Willielmus de Hotot, & Alicia uxor ſua, tenent de nobis, ſibi & heredibus ſuis, unam virgatam in Saxilby, pro homagio & ſervicio, reddendo nobis annuatim XIIs̃. ad III terminos.

Dominus Johannes de Berdefeld tenet de nobis, ſibi & heredibus ſuis, V acras terre cum holmo in territorio de Saxilby, reddendo nobis annuatim VIđ. ad Paſcha.

Hugo filius Willielmi Coci, de Saxilby, dedit nobis unum toftum; & remiſit nobis totum jus & clameum quod habuit in omnibus terris & tenementis, quas ipſe & pater ſuus Cocus aliquando tenuerunt de nobis in Saxilby. Eſt autem, inter cartas de Saxilby, quidam proceſſus dictorum tenementorum per predictum Willielmum Cocum alienatorum.

Vincentius de Grumſton, Juliana uxor ſua, & Hugo filius dicti Vincentii primogenitus, tenent de nobis unum toftum, cum edificio, in villâ de Saxilby, quod Willielmus Cocus quondam tenuit de nobis, excepto uno cotagio infra dictum toftum, quod tres filie predicti Willielmi Coci de nobis tenent, ad vitam earum, reddendo inde, nomine noſtro, predictis Vincentio, Juliane, & Hugoni, IIđ. per annum. Quod quidem cotagium bene licebit predictis Vincentio, Juliane, & Hugoni ingredi & de nobis tenere, cum eadem ſorores in fata deceſſerint, vel idem inhabitare ceſſaverint; reddendo nobis per annum IIIs̃. ad III terminos, & faciendo ſervicia inde debita & conſueta. Poſt finem vero dictorum Vincentii, Juliane, & Hugonis, predictum toftum ad nos revertetur.

Robertus de Sileby in Belgravo remiſit nobis totum jus & clamium, quod habuit in unâ virgatâ terre in Saxilby, quam Willielmus Cocus quondam de nobis tenuit. Remiſit & nobis totum jus & clamium quod habuit in 11s̃. annui redditûs exeuntibus de uno meſſuagio in Saxilby, quod quondam dimiſimus Vincentio de Grimeſton, Juliane uxori ſue, & Hugoni filio ſuo primogenito, ad terminum vite eorum, una cum reverſione dicti meſſuagii poſt deceſſum eorum [1]."

---

[1] " Rex tenet Rodolei. Huic manerio pertinent ſubſequentia membra; (inter alia). In Saxelbie I carucata terræ, & 5 acræ prati." Domeſday, fol. 230. a. 2. b. 1.

[2] MS. Chetwynd.

[3] Sic.

In 1346, John de Blewet (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon), was aſſeſſed 3*s*. 4*d*. for a twelfth part of one knight's fee in Saxulby; and the prior of the hoſpital of St. John of Jeruſalem in England, 20*s*. for half a knight's fee in Dalby and Saxulby; all parcel of the honour of Leiceſter [2].

According to tradition, the Saxulbys were poſſeſſed of this lordſhip; the laſt of which, ſir Thomas Saxulby's daughter, is ſaid to have been married to Brokeſby. And certain it is that William Brokeſby, younger ſon of John Brokeſby of Friſby, was lord of it in 1411 [3].

In 1361, it was found that Henry Plantagenet duke of Lancaſter died ſeiſed of one knight's fee in Stywaldeſby and Saxby, which Hugh Turvile held [4].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Saxulby was rated at 1*l*. 5*s*.; and, in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 1*s*.

In 1486, it was found that .... Keble died ſeiſed of certain lands and tenements in Saxulby, held of the Prince of Wales [5].

In 1504, it was found that ..... Cotton died ſeiſed of certain lands and tenements in Saxulby, held of the lord Henry Prince of Wales, as of his earldom of Cheſter and Huntingdon [6].

In 1564, there were 15 families in Saxulby.

The tomb of William Brokeſby, eſq. (who died in 1523) and of his two wives, remains in Saxulby church.

To this William ſucceeded Robert Brokeſby, eſq. who was buried in the chancel 1531; and was ſucceeded by Anthony his ſon, who died in 1552.

Next to him were his two ſons; Henry (the only one mentioned in the Regiſter); and Robert, who in 1566 was cited, with others, to ſhew cauſe why the manor of Elveſton and other property, in the counties of Derby and Leiceſter, ſhould not not be ſeiſed into the queen's hands [7].

Robert died in 1615, after having ſurvived his ſons Francis and Edward, and grandſon William; "which laſt, dying without iſſue male in 1606, left only two daughters; one of which, Winifred, was married to Francis Englefield, eſq. eldeſt ſon of ſir Francis Englefield, of Wotton Baſſet, Notts, baronet; the other, Mary, married to Thomas Bedingfield [8]."

Mr. Englefield received the honour of knighthood from king James I. at Eaſt Hamſted, Aug. 12, 1622; in 1631, on the death of his father, ſucceeded him in title and eſtate; and in 1634 obtained the following indemnifying letter from king Charles I:

"CHARLES R.

Whereas our truſty and well-beloved ſir Francis Englefield, knight and baronet, being a recuſant, is thereby ſubject to our laws and ſtatutes in that caſe provided: theſe are to ſignify our royal will and pleaſure, that no perſon or perſons ſhall, at any time hereafter, ſue, proſecute, or implead, either by way of indictment, information, or otherwiſe, againſt the ſaid ſir Francis, for being a recuſant, or convicted by virtue of any of our laws or ſtatutes againſt Popiſh recuſants, till we ſhall ſignify our pleaſure to the contrary. Given under our ſignet, at our palace of Weſtminſter, December the 6th, in the 10th year of our reign."

By Winifred his wife he had one ſon, ſir Francis, his ſucceſſor; another ſon, who died at four years of age, and was buried at Saxulby; and three daughters; Helen, married to ſir Charles Waldegrave, bart. father of the firſt lord Waldegrave; Mary, to ſir George Browne, knight of the Bath; and Catharine, the wiſe of William Turvile, of Aſton Flamvile, in Leiceſterſhire, eſq. He died in May, 1665; and lies buried in Englefield church, in Berkſhire, under the North-eaſt window of a chapel ſituated on the North ſide of the chancel, with this inſcription:

"Here lieth the body of ſir Francis Englefield, bart.
He was buried, in May 1665, in the grave where formerly ſir Edward Norris had been interred."

Dame Winifred Englefield his relict, who died June 5, 1672, in her 70th year, was buried with her anceſtors at Saxulby [9]. "She left a legacy to the poor tenants; the intereſt of which in 1730 amounted to £6.; to which in 1690 was added, Mrs. Anne Kirkby's benefaction of £4. to the poor of the ſaid pariſh. This ſum lying in the hands of Dr. Saunders, ſchool-maſter of Sadberg in Yorkſhire (ſome time rector of this place), and the intereſt not being regularly paid, it was at laſt added to the principal, which in 1731 amounted to £13. and then lay in the hands of Mr. John Love, rector of Over Broughton, Nottinghamſhire; and the intereſt, £1. 13*s*. was annually diſtributed on St. Thomas's feſtival [10]."

Sir Francis Englefield, the third baronet, married Honora, daughter of Henry O'Bryan, earl of Thomond, of Ireland; by whom he had no iſſue. His lady, ſurviving him, re-married to ſir Robert Howard, knt. ſixth ſon of Thomas the firſt earl of Berkſhire.

Sir Thomas Englefield, who ſucceeded to the title and Berkſhire eſtates, was the ſecond ſon of the firſt baronet; but, having been at law with his nephew ſir Francis, did not obtain the lordſhips of Saxulby and Shouldby, which were ſold by ſir Francis to that eminent lawyer, Heneage Finch, eſq. afterwards created baron Guernſey and earl of Ailesford; whoſe great grandſon Heneage earl of Aylesford at preſent poſſeſſes the lordſhips of Saxulby and Shouldby, and part of Grimſton.

In 1630, Nathanael Nedham was the only freeholder at Saxulby; and in 1654, William Nedham and captain Clement Nedham were ſeiſed of lands here.

In 1655, there was collected in Saxulby, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 3*s*. 7*d*.

In 1680, the Rev. Robert Kirkby (ſome time rector of this place) bought an eſtate of the yearly value of £1. at Long Claxton in this county, and gave it for ever to the uſe of the poor of this pariſh by his laſt will and teſtament, which is to be found at the Archdeacon's Court at Leiceſter, where it was proved.

In 1722, three freeholders polled from Saxulby; and one from Shouldby. In 1775, the Rev. John Jaques, the rector, then reſident at Packington in Warwickſhire, was the only freeholder from Saxulby; and none appeared from Shouldby.

Before the incloſure, which took place in or about 1765, the whole of Saxulby was let for ſeven ſcore pounds a year; and now it produces as many hundreds. It produces plenty of wool, beef, and mutton; the employment of the inhabitants being almoſt wholly grazing. The land is in ſome parts gorſey.

The village ſtands in a hollow way, and contains about 20 houſes.

The Regiſter begins in 1538.

Near the beginning are 31 births in 20 years; burials the ſame; and 20 weddings.

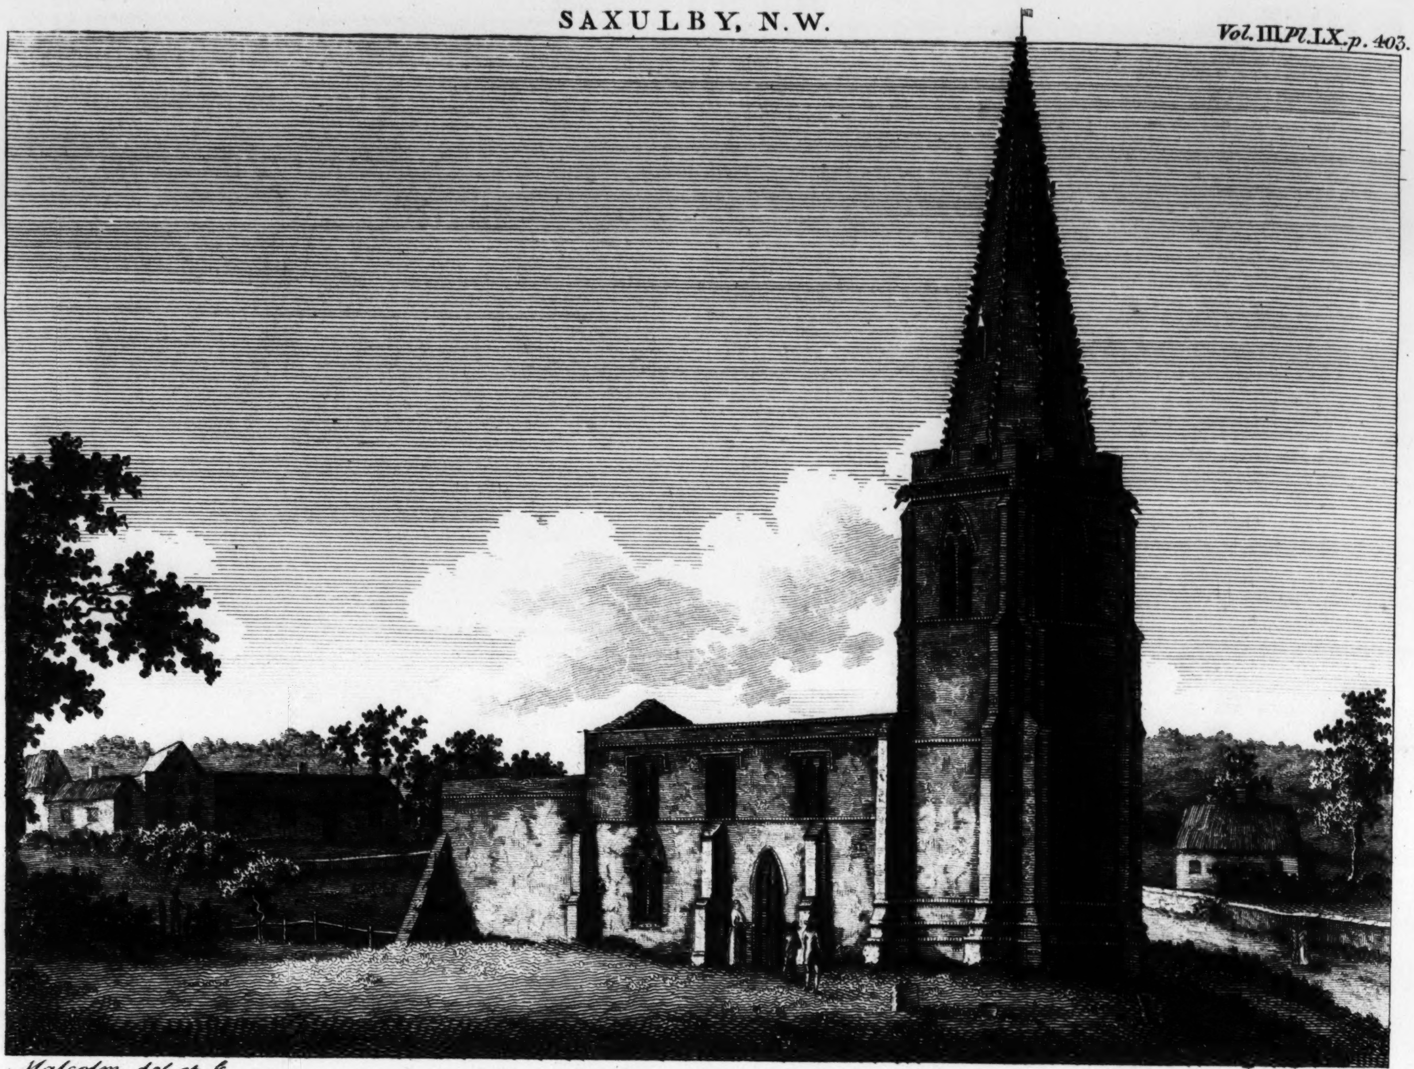
"The brook Northward of the town abounds in great λιθόςρεα, aſteriæ, brontiæ, or belemnites, marchaſites, cornua ammonis, and here and there fragments of the lapides anguini, or ſnake-ſtones.

"In Saxulby field, as well as Abkettleby and Wartnaby quarries, I have frequently met with petrified ſhells of ſeveral ſorts, incorporated in a cruſtaceous, mouldering, gravelly ſtone (much in uſe hereabout). Theſe ſhells to me ſeem to be the relicks of the Deluge, unleſs there can be proved that there has been an inundation ſince; and their being petrified might be thus accounted for. On the ebb and receſs of the tide, all ſhell-fiſh naturally pant and gape after their native element, and their valves or lids being open received in ſlime or ſand, more or leſs; ſo, cloſing up

---

[1] Peck MSS. 4935; è Codice MS. de Domeſday, fol. 7. b.
[2] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.
[3] Eſch. 13 Hen. IV.
[4] Fin. 16 July, 35 Edw. III. m. 23.
[5] Eſch. 2 Hen. VII.
[6] Eſch. 20 Hen. VII.
[7] Mich. Record. 8 Eliz. Rot. 140.
[8] Burton, MS.
[9] See her epitaph, p. 404.
[10] Letter from the Rev. William Harris, B. A. of Jeſus college, Oxford, in 1730, to Mr. Peck.

SAXULBY, N.W.



Malcolm del et sc

Fig. 4.

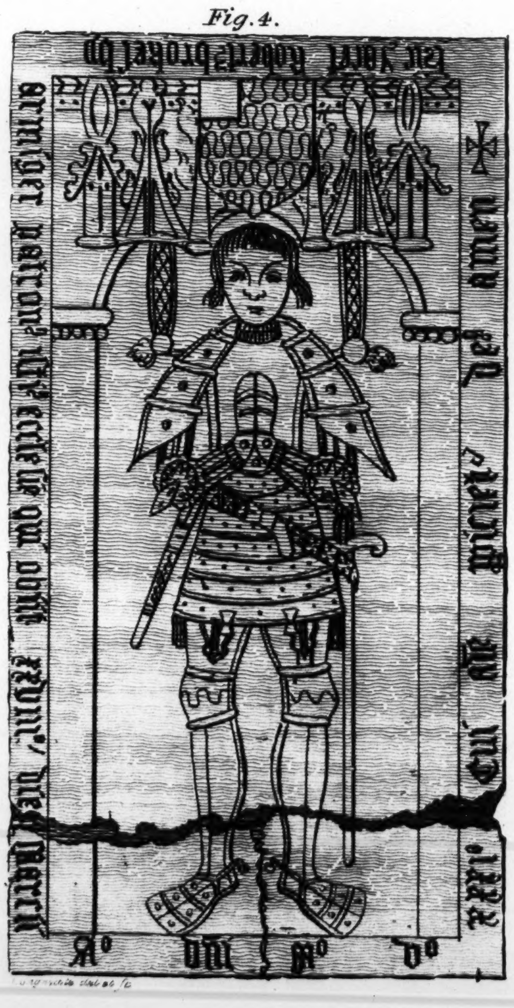


Fig. 5.

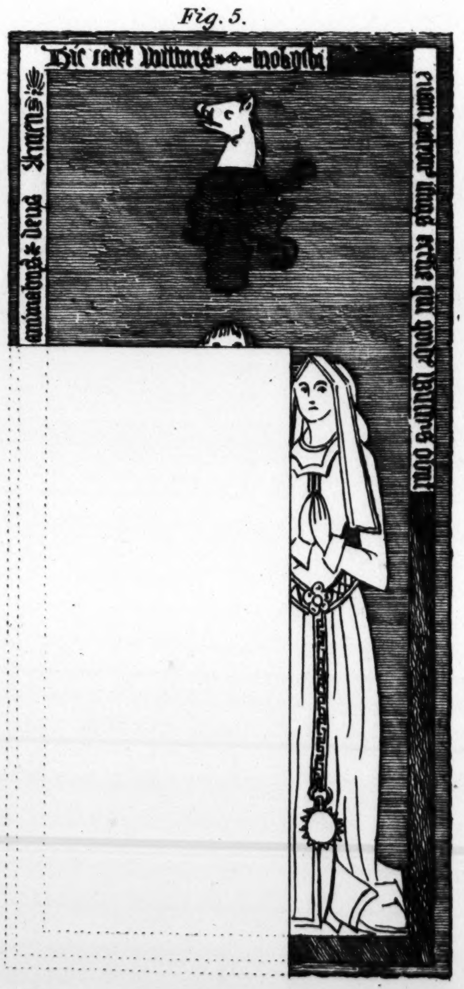
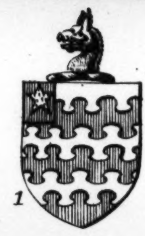
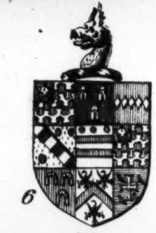
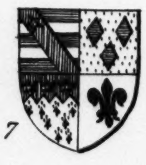




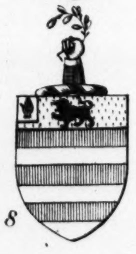
1



6



7



8

Fig. 2.

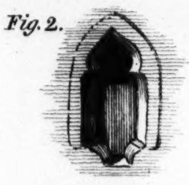


Fig. 3.

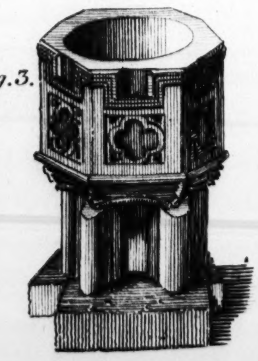

again, the ſun by degrees exhaled the moiſture from them and the ſand around them; and, by the aſſiſtance of the groſs ſaline particles of the ſea-water left behind by the ſun, the ſand within the ſhells was conſolidated, and, with the adjacent moulds of earth, ripened into an imperfect ſtone. The ſaline particles are in ſome eaſily diſcoverable; for, the ſhell being broke, they will ſhine like ſo much ſalt-petre. Some incurious, ſhort-ſighted moderns reſolve this into a luſus naturæ (not but that ſome teſtaceous bodies may be ſuch); but theſe thoughtleſs creatures do it purely to prevent the giving themſelves any farther trouble about the nature and production of theſe ſhells; which naturally put me in mind of Ariſtotle's Occult Qualities [1]."

Money raiſed for the poor of Saxulby	£.	s.	d.		£.	s.	d.
within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	17	18	10	At Shouldby.	16	19	8
Expended in county rates, &c.	3	6	0	———	1	17	2
——— on the poor, &c. —	14	12	10	———	15	2	6
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	0	0	0	———	4	0	0
Expended in litigations, —	0	0	0	———	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	44	12	2	———	28	12	11
——— 1784, —	46	14	1	———	19	17	8
——— 1785, —	53	6	9	———	22	5	8
Medium of theſe three years,	48	4	4	———	23	12	1
——— of county expences,	4	17	4	———	0	0	0
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	15	11	7	———	0	0	0
——— of nett annual expences,	27	15	5	———	23	12	1
——— of attending upon magiſtrates,	2	4	9	———	0	0	0
——— of entertainments at meetings,	0	0	0	———	0	0	0
——— of law expences, —	0	0	10	———	0	0	0
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	2	4	———	0	0	0

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in Saxulby and Shouldby, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 53.

The CHURCH (Plate LX.)

dedicated to St. Peter, is a ſmall, but decent building; and conſiſts of a nave, a chancel anſwering to the nave, and a South aile, all which are leaded. At the Weſt end of the nave is the ſteeple, a ſtone ſpire crocketed (part of the ſtone of which is very good, and part of a very periſhable nature); in the tower whereof, which is embattled, are three middling bells; the firſt and ſecond of which have nothing on them; but the tenor is inſcribed,

"Hec campana fiat Sancta Trinitate beata, 1695."

The wake is kept on the Sunday before Midſummer.

In the window over the high altar was formerly the coat of Brokeſby of Staunton; being, Barry, nebulé of ſix, Argent and Sable, a canton Gules, a mullet for difference; Plate LX. fig. 1. Theſe are now gone; but the ſame coat ſtill remains in the Eaſt window of the South aile; in which in 1730 was alſo the picture of the bleſſed Virgin weeping, now gone.

In this church is a ſmall piſcina, fig. 2; and an antient octagon font, fig. 3.

In 1220, Ralph . . . . was patron of the church; ſince which time the ſeveral lords of this and Shouldby manor have been ſucceſſively patrons.

In 1344, the procurations were 7*s.* 6½*d.*; the rectory was taxed at 12 marks; and paid 1*s.* 6*d.* for Peter-pence.

In 1534 the value of the rectory was £8.; the procurations and ſynodals, 11*s.* 1*s.*

In 1622, Francis Englefield, eſq. in right of his wife, was patron.

The value in the king's books is 9*l.*; patron the earl of Aileſford; certified value 66*l.* 3*s.* 10*d.*

The preſent value is about £90.

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
. . . . 1220.	Ralph . . . .
Richard Brokeſby, 1534.	Robert Brokeſby, eſq.
Robert Jordain, who was buried Oct. 18, 1549.	Anthony Brokeſby, eſq.
Thomas Hewytt [2], 1562.	Henry Brokeſby, eſq.
James Oxnere, buried Oct. 6, 1605.	Robert Brokeſby, eſq.
Thomas North, buried Sept. 21, 1613.
John Neale, buried Sept. 25, 1655.	Sir Francis Englefield, bart.
Thomas Gregory, buried Sept. 4, 1656.
John Noon, buried Nov. 13, 1658.
Robert Kirkby, 1660; buried Aug. 30, 1680.
Thomas Bleay, 1680; buried Dec. 29, 1706.	Heneage lord Guernſey.
Samuel Sanders [3], A. M. 1707; quitted it 1709.
John Love [4], Jan. 2, 1709; quitted it Feb. 28, 1727-8.	William Butt, gent.
Henry Howard, died 1728.	Heneage ſecond earl of Aileſford.
Thomas Taylor, 1731.
Thomas Parker, Feb. 25, 1734; died 1764.
John Jaques [5], M. A. July 19, 1764.	Heneage third earl of Aileſford.
John Jaques, May 31, 1793.

---

[1] Letter from the Rev. William Harris, B. A. of Jeſus college, Oxford, in 1730, to Mr. Peck.

[2] In the Certificate referred to under Allexton, p. 8, Mr. Hewytt is thus deſcribed: "Preſbyter, non conjugatus; mediocritèr doctus; reſidet; hoſpitalis; deget ibidem; non licentiatus, nec prædicat; nullum aliud habet."

[3] Afterwards D. D. head-maſter of Sadberg ſchool in Yorkſhire.

[4] Rector of Over Broughton, Nottinghamſhire.

[5] Of Corpus Chriſti college, Cambridge; M. A. 1764. He was preſented to the rectory of Great Packington, Bucks, in 1793.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

In the chancel:

On the North ſide is an antient altar-tomb of alabaſter, a figure in mail, with hands in the poſture of prayer, much defaced, Plate LX. fig. 4.

"Hic jacet Robert' Brokeſby, armiger, patron' iſti' eccleſie, qui obiit xxviii° die Marcii,
a° dñi m°v°xxxi°;
cui' aĩe ꝑpiciet' de'. Amen."

On flat ſtones:

1. ". . . . .
ſon to Francis Englefield,
knight and baronett, who being four years of . . . ."

2. "Here lieth the body of the lady Winifred Englefield, daughter of William Brokeſby, of Sholbey, eſq.
wife to ſir Francis Englefield, knt. and bart.
the true patron of this church,
who deceaſed on the 5th day of June, 1672,
in the 70th year of her age."

3. "Here lieth the body of Eleanor Kirkby, who departed this life Sept. . . . A. D. 1669, being 10 . . . [1] years of age."

4. "Here lieth the body of Mr. Thomas Bleay, late rector of this church,
who departed this life on the 27th day of December,
anno Dom. 1706."

5. "Here lieth the body of Mrs. Elizabeth Parker, the wife of Mr. Thomas Parker, rector of Saxulby.
She died March 30, 1743, aged 58.
Here alſo lieth the body of Mr. Thomas Parker,
rector of Saxulby.
He died March 15, 1764, aged 67 years."

In the nave, on flat ſtones:

1. "Here lieth the body of Robert Kirkby,
rector of Saxulby,
who departed this life Aug. 28, anno Dom. 1680,
in the 67th year of his age."

[And in the Pariſh-Regiſter is inſerted,
"1680. Viri verè ſinceri vitæque integerrimi M^ri Roberti Kirkby, hujus eccleſiæ annorum viginti ſpatio paſtoris pientiſſimi.

$$\left.\begin{matrix}\text{Anima}\\\text{Corpus}\end{matrix}\right\}\text{ in }\left\{\begin{matrix}\text{cœlo}\\\text{ſolo}\end{matrix}\right\}\text{ occluditur, die }\left\{\begin{matrix}28^{\circ}\\30^{\circ}\end{matrix}\right\}\text{Auguſti."]}$$

2. "Here lie the bodies of Sarah, John, and Winifred, ſon and daughters of William Stevens, of Shouldby, by Anne his wife.
Sarah was interred May the 18th, A. D. 1680,
in the 2d year of her age.
and John and Winifred were both interred April 9,
A. D. 1703, John in the 4th year of his age, and Winifred in her ſecond."

3. "Here lieth interred the body of Mrs. Alice Stevens, daughter of the late Mr. William Stevens, of Shouldby, by Anne his wife.
She departed this life October the 14th,
in the year of our Lord 1752, aged 57."

4. "Here lieth the body of Mrs. Eleanor Stevens, daughter of the late Mr. William Stevens, of Shouldby, by Anne his wife.
She departed this life March the 24th,
in the year of our Lord 1746, aged 54."

In the South aile:

1. Upon a large flat ſtone, now partly covered with a pew, are three neat braſs figures, about three feet long: a man in mail, and his two wives, with hands in the poſture of prayer. Above their heads is the family creſt, a horſe's head. (See Plate LX. fig. 5.) The inſcription, as far as remains, is,

"Hic jacet Willm̄s Brokyſbi, quondam patronus iſtius eccl'ie, qui quidē Willielmus obiit
. . . . Januarii, an° Dom.
mcccccc xx° tertio, ...
quorum animabus propitietur Deus. Amen."

2. "Here lie interred the earthly remains of Winifred, the wife of Morris Cam, and daughter of John and Elizabeth Stevens, of Shouldby.
She departed this life on the 13th day of March,
A. D. 1727, in the 43d year of her age."

3. "Here lieth the body of Mrs. Elizabeth Stevens, the wife of John Stevens, gent.
who departed this life the 6th day of February, 1731,
aged 85."

4. "Here lieth the body of John Stevens, of Shouldby, gent.
who departed this life the 27th day of February,
1731, aged 72."

5. "Here lieth interred the earthly remains of Mr. Morris Cam [2], who departed this life on the 4th day of May,
A. D. 1769, in the 81ſt year of his age."

On a monument againſt the South wall:
"Here lie interred within this aile the earthly remains of William Stevens, who departed this life July 23, A. D. 1684.
Likewiſe Eleanor his wife.
She departed June 17, 1688.
And alſo Anne [3], the wife of William Stevens, ſon of the above-named Will. Stevens, of Shouldby.
She departed this life Auguſt the 26th, 1729,
in the 69th year of her age.
Alſo William Stevens,
huſband of the above-named Ann Stevens.
He died Auguſt the 28th, 1732, aged 77 years."

On another, near the above:
"To the memory of Mr. William Stevens, of Shouldby, only ſon of the late
William Stevens by Anne his wife.
He died January the 25th, A. D. 1755, aged 57.
This ſtone is fixed here by the direction of Mrs. Deborah Stevens, ſpinſter, as a pledge of her affection, due to ſo kind a brother and ſo ſincere a friend.
Mrs. Deborah Stevens departed this life Dec. 11, 1758,
in the 66th year of her age;
and gave by will £100.; the uſe thereof for the ſchooling of poor children belonging to Grimſtone, Saxulby, and Shouldby."

On a ſmall braſs plate:
"Here lieth Captaine
Timothy Hemſley; and nere
him Katharine his wife,
daughter of John Morton,
of Sileby, eſq. He departed
this life the 4th day of January,
1690, aged 65 years."

In the South-eaſt corner of the church, on a ſtone in the floor:
"Beneath lie interred the remains of Will. Deverill, ſon of John and Elizabeth Deverill, who departed this life the 3d day of Auguſt, 1782,
aged 27 years.
In him were united
the dutiful ſon, the affectionate brother, the ſincere friend, and the kind maſter."

In the church-yard:

"To the memory of Eſther, ſecond wife of Jaſper Houghton.
She departed this life May 16, 1797, aged 34.
A dropſy terminated her life, after being tapped 21 times, from Auguſt the 21ſt, 1789, to April the 28th, 1797. The quantity of water taken from her was 222 gallons; weighing 19 cwt. 2 qrs. 9 lb."

---

[1] This is evidently 100 years of age, if not more; but the laſt figure is defaced.

[2] Mr. Maurice Cam, gent. occurs under Asfordby, p. 17, as patron of that rectory in 1726; and a Mary Cam was buried there in 1720, p. 18.

[3] For the hiſtory of this tomb, ſee p. 405.

SHOULDBY,

SHOULDBY,

antiently called Seoldeſberie and Siwouldby, was formerly an independent pariſh[1], including a conſiderable part of Saxulby, to which it is now conſidered as an hamlet; and at preſent contains but two houſes.

In the reign of Edward the Confeſſor, Seoldeſberie, containing eleven ploughlands, are valued at twenty ſhillings. At the general ſurvey it was held by Ralph Carnot under earl Aubrey; and was worth thirty ſhillings. The land was equal to eleven ploughs. One was in the demeſne; and four villans, and eight ſocmen, with two bordars, had nine ploughs. There was a meadow, five furlongs long, and three broad[2].

In 1297, it was found that Edmund earl of Lancaſter, the king's brother, deceaſed, held divers lands at Shouldby[3].

In 1346, John de Folevile (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 3*s.* 4*d.* for a twelfth part of a knight's fee in Shouldby, parcel of the honour of Leiceſter[4].

In 1361, it was found that Henry Plantagenet duke of Lancaſter, deceaſed, was ſeiſed of one knight's fee in Stywaldeſby and Saxulby, held by Hugh Turvile[5].

Gilbert, ſon of William de Bleby and Mary his wife, gave to Gilbert, ſon of Anketil de Houby, a capital meſſuage and lands in Siwoldeby. Witneſs, John de Folvile and Henry de Nottingham, knights, Walter Blewit, &c.[6]

In the next age it came to the family of the Brokeſbys; William de Brokeſby, younger ſon of John de Brokeſby, of Friſby, being lord of it in 1411.

Brokeſby of Shouldby is mentioned by Leland[7] under the head of "Gentillmen of Leyreceſtreſhir that be there of moſt reputation."

The laſt heir male of this houſe was William Brokeſby, who died in 1606; leaving only two daughters; of whom, Mary, the eldeſt, married to ſir Francis Englefield, knt.; from which family it paſſed with Saxulby to the Englefields, and afterwards to the earl of Aylesford, as ſtated already under Saxulby.

Mrs. Deborah Stevens, of Shouldby, by her will in 1758, gave £100. towards the education of the poor children of Saxulby, Shouldby, and Grimſton.

The CHURCH,

dedicated to St. Michael, has long been wholly deſecrated; but a part of the wall is ſtill viſible in Mr. Deverill's houſe, where a curious pillar was ſtanding till very lately; and where there was a burial-place, as appeared by the bones of ſeveral bodies that were thrown up ſome years ſince, in ſinking a vault for a cellar. At the ſame time was taken up a ſtone in the ſhape of a coffin, which is ſince put upon the grave of Anne Stevens in Saxulby church.

In the Matriculus of 1220, Sywoldeby is deſcribed to be under the patronage of the prior and convent of Laund, the rector then paying to the prior 2*s.* a year as a penſion.

In 1344, the procurations paid for Siwouldby were, 5*s.*; the rectory was taxed at 6 marks, and paid 1*s.* for Peter-pence; and the prior of Laund had his penſion of 2*s.*

In the preceding account of the priory of Laund, no mention has occurred of this rectory; and probably it did not long remain their property; for in the epiſcopal regiſtry at Lincoln is an inſtrument (we know not of what date) for the uniting of this church with that of Asfordby. We find, however, a diſtinct rector of Siwouldby in 1424.

In Hilary Term, 32 Eliz. a Quare Impedit was brought in the Common Pleas, by Bartholomew Brokeſby, againſt the biſhop of Lincoln and Wickham, The caſe was, that Robert Brokeſby was ſeiſed of the manor of Shouldby in fee, to which the advowſon was appendant; and, the church being full, granted to Humphrey Brokeſby and the plaintiff, his two ſons, the next avoidance of the ſaid church. Afterwards the church became void. Humphrey, by deed, releaſed all his right, eſtate, and intereſt, which then he had of and in the advowſon of the church aforeſaid, for the ſaid avoidance. Bartholomew ſole preſented; and the defendants did diſturb him. The biſhop pleaded, that he claimed nothing but as ordinary. Wickham pleaded a leaſe made of the manor, with the appurtenances, by the ſaid Bartholomew, to one Starkey, for years, before the grant made, ut ſupra, to Humphrey and Bartholomew; which Starkey preſented him: upon which they were at iſſue, and found for the plaintiff, that the grant was before the leaſe. It was holden by the Court, that this releaſe was merely void; for here was not any intereſt to be releaſed, but a power to preſent, and an authority annexed to the perſon. And afterwards, by the award of the Court, the writ was abated.

Even ſo lately as 1636 a preſentation occurs of Philip Hutton, late M. A. to the rectory of Shouldby, alias Siwouldby, "per mortem vacantem, & ad noſtram preſentationem pleno jure, ſive alio quocunque modo ſpectantem[8];" though the rectory could then be no more than a ſinecure.

At preſent this lordſhip (which contains about 900 acres) is conſidered as a hamlet of Saxulby; to which church it pays a regular modus of £4. 13*s.* 4*d.*

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
William the chaplain, 1238. John Paſſelewe, 1242. Thomas Coſteyne, 1250.	Prior and convent of Laund.
John Baſyngham[9], 1379.	The King.
Thomas Maltby, exchanged with Walter Keſtevene[10], July 19, 1424.	Sir William Mountford[11], of Colſhill, knt.
...... Wickham, 1590.	...... Starkey.
Philip Hutton, 1636.	King Charles I.

---

[1] "Shouldby is ſaid to have pariſhed to Asfordby (a corruption, I ſuppoſe, for Eyesfordby, taking its name from the river Eye, as well as Eye-kettleby.) Wyfordby alſo (vulgò Wiverby) near Stapleford, ſeems in like manner to have been denominated from the river Eye, on which it lies, and ſhould have been Eyefordby." Mr. Harris to Mr. Peck, 1730.

[2] "Idem [Radulfus Carnot] tenet 11 carucatas terræ in Seoldeſberie. Terra eſt 11 carucarum. In dominico eſt una; & 4 villani & 8 ſochmanni, cum 2 bordariis, habent 9 carucas. Pratum 5 quarentenarum longitudinis, & 3 quarentenarum latitudinis. Valuit 20 ſolidos; modò 30 ſolidos. Domeſday, fol. 231. b. 2.

[3] Eſch. 25 Edw. I. N° 51. Leic.

[4] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[5] Fin. 35 Edw. III. m. 23. See more in Aſhby Magna.

[6] Harl. MSS. 7178.

[7] Vol. I. p. 23.

[8] Rymer, vol. XX. p. 138; from Pat. 12 Car. I.

[9] "19 kal. Dec. 1379, apud Madinſton, d'nus contulit d'no Joh'i Baſyngham de Melton, Linc' diœc', preſb', eccl' paroch' de Sywoldby, Linc' diœc', vacant', & ad collationem d'ni per lapſum temporis, jure ſibi in hâc parte legitimè devoluto ſpectant'." Reg. Sudbury, archiep. Cantuar. p. 143. a.

[10] "19 die (Julii, 1424,) d'nus expedivit negotium permutat' præſentat' fiendæ inter Walterum Keſteven, rectorem eccl' paroch' de Beeſby, Linc' diœc', ad præſentat' d'ni H. reg' Angl' veri patroni, & Thom' Maltby rectorem eccl' paroch' de Sywoldeby, ejuſdem diœc', ad præſent' Will'i Mompford de Colſell in Ardenâ, Cov' & Lych' diœc', veri patroni, &c." Reg. Chichele, archiep. Cantuar. fol. 241. a.

[11] Sir William Mountford, who died in 1452, was three times ſheriff of the counties of Warwick and Leiceſter; and in his time the fair ſpire ſteeple of Coleſhill church was newly built from the ground, as alſo the chancel. See Dugdale, vol, II. p. 101.

Pedigree of BROKESBY, of SHOULDBY.

From the Viſitation of 1619.

Arms: Quarterly of 6; 1. Barry nebulé of ſix, Argent and Gules, on a canton of the ſecond a mullet Or, Brokeſby; 2. Sable, three dovecotes Argent, Sapcotes; 3. Gules, five lozenges conjoined in feſs Argent, ...; 4. Or, a bend gobony Argent and Sable, between three torteaux, Courtey; 5. Argent, two bars Gules, and in chief three torteaux; 6. Brokeſby; 7. Gules, three arches Argent, the tops Or, Arches; 8. Argent, a chevron between three eagles diſplayed Gules, Frauncis; 9. Azure, a croſs flory between four martlets Argent, Pleſington. Creſt, on a wreath, a boar's head Gules, maned Or; Plate LX. fig. 6.

Brokeſby of Staunton; Barry nebulé of ſix, Argent and Sable, a canton Gules. Creſt as before; fig. 1.

John Brokeſby, of Sywoleſby, alias Shouldby, temp. Edw. III.

Bartholomew, of Friſby, 12 Hen. IV. and 7 Hen. V. died 27 Hen. VI. ſ. p.
Edmund, heir to his brother, æt. 10.
William Brokeſby, of Shouldby, 13 Hen. IV. =

Petronilla, wife of ſir Thomas Berkeley, of Wymondham, knt. died 1488.
Henry Brokeſby, of Shouldby, eſq. 24 Hen. VI. died 31 Hen. VI. = Editha, ſiſter of Rich. Bracebridge, of Kingſbury, co. Warwick, re-married to Tho. Entwiſſell, ſecond huſband.

Felicia, wife of Baldwin Bugg, of Thurleſton.
Anna, wife of . . . . Walcote, of Walcote.
Emma, dau. of . . . . Myles, of Derbyſhire. = William Brokeſby, died 17 Hen. VIII. = Elizabeth, dau. and coheir of . . . . Staunton.

1. Robert Brokeſby, of Shouldby, died 22 Hen. VIII. = Alice, dau. of John Shirley, of Staunton Harold.
2. Thomas.
3. Richard.
4. Bartholomew; of whom ſee the next pedigree.

1. Anthony Brokeſby, died 1552, æt. 66. = Anne, dau. and coheir of Tho. Sapcote, of Elton, co. Huntingd.
2. Richard Brokeſby, of Shouldby. = ...
Humphrey. Bartholomew.
Alice, wife of Laurence Sanders, of Harrington, co. Northampton.

1. Henry, died ſ. p.
Dorothy, dau. of . . . . Congreve, co. Stafford. = 2. Robert Brokeſby, of Shouldby, eſq. died 1615. = . . . dau. of John Beaumont, of Gracedieu, ſ. p.
3. Richard Brokeſby, of Shouldby. = Elizabeth, dau. of . . . Hutchinſon, of Colſton Baſſet, co. Nottingham.
4. Bartholomew Brokeſby, of Melton Mowbray. =
Richard Brokeſby, of Melton Mowbray. =

1. Edward Brokeſby, d. during his father's life. = Ellen, dau. of William lord Vaulx.
2. Francis, died ſ. p.
Thomas Brokeſby, of Nether Broughton. = Margaret, dau. of J. Walker, of Eperſton, co. Nott. relict of . . . . . . Wattes.
Francis Brokeſby, of Syſton, co. Linc. = ...
Anthony. Bartholo. William. Robert.
George Brokeſby, of Stapleford, aged 25, 1619. = Ellen, dau. of Edmund Goodwin, of Stapleford.

Will. Brokeſby, married Dorothy, dau. of Will. Wiſeman, of Brodokes, co. Eſſex, knt. died, before his grandfather, May 26, 1606.
Mary, married Tho. Thimbleby, of Ireham, co. Lincoln.
Tho. Brokeſby, of Nether Broughton, 1619. = Joan, dau. of Tho. Frank, of Broughton.
1. John
2. Anthony.
Elizabeth. Mary. Iſabella.
Mary, wife of Paul Abney, of Leiceſter.
Phil. Brokeſby, of Stapleford, aged 25, 1619. = Alice, dau. of Tho. Mitchell, of Coſton, co. Leic.

Winifred, eldeſt dau. and coheir, married Francis Englefield, eſq. ſon and heir of ſir Francis Englefield[1], of White Knights, near Reading, bart. who died in 1665; and his lady in 1672. = ...
Mary, ſecond dau. and coheir, wife of Thomas Bedingfield.
1. William, æt. 16.
2. John, æt. 14.
3. Richard, æt. 12.
4. Robert, æt. 4.
Frances. Elizabeth. Mary.
1. George Brokeſby, æt. 3.
2. Philip Brokeſby, æt. 2.

Sir Francis Englefield, bart. married Honora daughter of Henry O'Bryan, earl of Thomond in Ireland; but, having no iſſue, ſold the lordſhips of Saxulby, Shouldby, and Grimſtone; and the title, with the Berkſhire eſtates, paſſed to his uncle, ſir Thomas Englefield, bart.
Another ſon, died an infant.
Three daughters; ſee p. 402.

Pedigree of LEIGH, of ASFORDBY.

Arms: Quarterly of 4; 1. Azure, two bars Argent, on a bend Gules, a mullet Or, Leigh; 2. Or, three lozenges, 2. and 1. Azure; 3. Ermine, on a chief dancetté Gules, three Eaſtern crowns Or; 4. Argent, a fleur de lis Sable; fig. 7.

Bartholomew Brokeſby, fourth ſon of William Brokeſby, of Shouldby. = ...
William Brokeſby, ſon and heir. = ...
Francis Brokeſby.
Robert Brokeſby. = Bridget, of Bornock, co. Notts.

Gilbert Leigh, deſcended of the Leighs of Cheſhire; and, being a younger brother, dwelt at Aſfordby, co. Leic.

2. Bartholomew.
3. John.
4. William.
5. Martin.
1. Robert Leigh, of Aſfordby, married Margaret, dau. of Tho. Biſhop, of Friſby. =

1. Gilbert Leigh, of Aſfordby. = Elizabeth, dau. of William Gregory, of Aſfordby.
2. James Leigh, of Aſfordby. = Baſheba, dau. and heir of Robert Brokeſby, of Kilumpton, co. Notts.

1. Robert Leigh, æt. 20, 1619.
2. William.
3. Philip.
4. James.
Margery. Anne.
Mary. Elizabeth.
Robert Leigh, ſon and heir, æt. 3, 1619.

---

[1] Arms: Barry of ſix, Gules and Argent, on a chief Or, a lion paſſant Azure. Creſt, on a wreath, an arm couped at the elbow, veſted per pale, Azure and Gules, holding a branch Proper.—Another creſt of the family is, a ſpread eagle, in pale, Azure and Gules; which latter is likewiſe on their tombs in Englefield church (of which ſee before, p. 217).

SEGRAVE,

SEGRAVE,

antiently called Setgrave, is placed by the Wreke; is 9 miles North from Leiceſter, and 8 miles Eaſt from Loughborough, ſituate amongſt hills; bounded by Thruſſington, Radcliffe, Sileby, Barrow, Walton, and the Foſs-way paſſeth by it next to Rakedale; is in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, and within the deanry of Goſcote.

"Segrave is ſited in a champain, at the edge of the Wolds, and more barren than the villages about it; yet no place likely yields a better air[1]."

It is very cold in the winter, but reputed healthy; and the roads very dirty, by reaſon of the cold ſtrong clay; inſomuch, that it has been ſaid, "if a perſon gets into Segrave road, he cannot eaſily get out again."

Henry de Ferrieres held, at the ſurvey, half a ploughland in Setgrave, which had been valued at ſix pence, but then was worth two ſhillings. One villan and one bordar had one plough; and there were four acres of [illegible]ow[2].

Robert held in [illegible]ve, under Robert de Buci, two ploughlands, which in the time of the Confeſſor had employed two ploughs, and were valued at twelve pence; but which at the ſurvey were worth five ſhillings. One plough was then in the demeſne; and there were three villans, with three bordars. There were ſeven acres of meadow[3].

Six ploughlands in Setgrave, with a meadow three furlongs long, and one and a half broad, were parcel of the king's manor of Rodolei[4]; and two ploughlands and ten acres of meadow here were parcel of his manor of Barhoo[5].

Sir Gilbert Picott, knight, had fair poſſeſſions in Leiceſterſhire; viz. Barrow, Segrave, Glen, &c. In 1220, his ſon William was one of the juſtices of gaol delivery in Warwickſhire and Leiceſterſhire. Picott's eſtate, about the middle of Henry the Third's time, deſcended, two parts of it to Nundae and Ireis, and the third part to Nicholas Picott, which came after to Gilbert Patemon, of which coparceners ſir Henry Nundae was chief, who had a ſon William, who had a daughter Alice, married to ſir Thomas Boyvile, unto whom ſhe brought a fair inheritance of lands in Leiceſterſhire; which Boyvile reſided at Stokefaſton, in the county of Leiceſter[6].

In the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about 1240, Segrave is not noticed; but, in the Itinerary of 1280, Segrave, Sileby, Coſſington, and Walton, anſwered collectively as one vill.

"This manor gave name and title of baron to that antient family of Segrave, who had here an antient caſtle[7], and bare antiently, Sable, three garbs Argent, tied Gules; as appeareth by an antient roll in vellum and in colours, made about the laſt year of the reign of king Henry the Third, late in the cuſtody of ſir Richard St. George, knt. Clarenceux King of Arms; for that other coat which after they did uſually bear, viz. Sable, a lion rampant Argent, coronné Or, I dare not affirm to be the coat of Chaucombe, whoſe heir-general they married; for that manuſcript which before I vouched in Dalby Magna[8], ſetteth down another coat borne by Chaucombe. But moſt certain it is, that the lion was moſt commonly borne by them after the time of king Henry III. as appeareth by the variation of that coat, with differences by the younger houſes. And moſt true likewiſe it is, that the garbs was their antient coat; for in many ſeals made in the time of king Edward I. and after, where they bear the lion of each ſide of the eſcutcheon, ſtandeth a garb, which I have very often ſeen[9]."

The firſt that aſſumed the ſurname of Segrave was Gilbert the ſon of Hereward, who reſided at this place in 1165; which he was certified to hold of William earl of Warwick by the fourth part of a knight's fee[10]; and who preſented a rector to the church of Segrave[11]. In 1192, he, together with Reginald Baſſet, executed the ſheriff's office for the counties of Warwick and Leiceſter under Hugh de Novant, at that time biſhop of Coventry; in which truſt he continued till 1194 incluſively; and, the three next enſuing years, for William de Aubeni, who then had the cuſtody of thoſe counties; and in 1198 he gave 400 marks to king Richard the Firſt, towards the maintenance of his wars.

To this Gilbert ſucceeded Stephen de Segrave, his ſon and heir; who became a perſon of great note in his time. In 1200-1, William Fitz-Henry agreed to pay the king half a mark, for a writ to cauſe this Stephen (who is ſtyled Fitz Gilbert) to reſtore to him one virgate of land, with the appurtenances, in Segrave, which was the land of Thomas Fitz Gilbert, then out-lawed; and to ſhew cauſe why he unjuſtly detained the ſame:

"Willielmus filius Henrici dat domino regi dimidiam marcam ſolvendam ad ſuum ſcaccarium, per ſic quod precipiatur Stephano filio Gilberti, quod juſtè & ſine dilatione reddat Willielmo filio Henrici unam virgatam terre, cum pertinentiis, in Segrave, que fuit Thome filii Gilberti, qui utlagatur? Et quare ei injuſtè detineat, ut dicitur? Et mandatum eſt vicecomiti, quod inde ſecuritatem capiat[12]."

In 1203, this Stephen was conſtable of the Tower of London; and, in 1215, ſtanding loyal to the king in the time of his war with the barons, obtained a grant of the lands of Stephen de Gaunt, lying in the counties of Lincoln and Leiceſter; and the next year following, of the manor of Kinton, co. Warwick; to hold to himſelf and his heirs, in fee-farm, paying £12. a year to the exchequer, at Eaſter and Michaelmas, by even portions. In 1218, on the death of earl Simon de Montfort, he had a grant of the cuſtody of all thoſe lands which belonged to the honour of Leiceſter, whereof the ſaid Simon died ſeiſed; and the ſame year was one of the king's juſtices in his court. In 1220 he was made governor of Sauvey caſtle; and in 1221 conſtituted ſheriff of Eſſex and Hertford; in which truſt he continued the two next enſuing years; in 1222 of Lincoln, for three parts of that year; and ſo till 1224 incluſively. In the latter year he was governor of the caſtle at Hertford; and, in 1226 a juſtice itinerant in the counties of Nottingham and Derby; in which employment, for thoſe and other counties, he continued for ſome time after. In 1228, being made ſheriff of Buckingham and Bedford ſhires, he ſo continued till 1234 incluſively; and in 1229 purchaſed the manor of Cotes of the daughters and heirs of Stephen de Beauchamp, to hold by the ſervice of one brache yearly; in which year being conſtituted ſheriff for the counties of Warwick and Leiceſter, as alſo for the county of Northampton, he ſo continued till 1233 incluſively. In 1229, he obtained the wapentake of Goſcote: "Henricus, Dei gratiâ, rex

---

[1] Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy, ed. 1652, p. 261.

[2] "In Satgrave eſt dimidia carucata terræ. Ibi unus villanus, cum 1 bordario, habent 1 carucam, & 4 acras prati. Valuit 6 denarios; modò 2 ſolidos." Domeſday, fol. 233. a. 2.

[3] "Robertus tenet de R[oberto de Buci] 2 carucatas terræ in Segrave. Tempore regis Edwardi erant ibi 2 carucæ. In dominico eſt una; & 3 villani, cum 2 bordariis. Ibi 7 acræ prati. Valuit 12 denarios; modò 5 ſolidos." Ibid. fol. 234. b. 1.

[4] "In Setgrave 6 carucatæ terræ; & 3 quarentenæ prati in longitudine, & 1 quarentena & dimidia latitudinis." Ibid, fol. 230. a. 1.

[5] "In Setgrave 2 carucatæ terræ, & 10 acræ prati." Ibid. fol. 237. a.

[6] See more in Dugdale's Warwickſhire, 1730, fol. 977. b. 998. a. b.

[7] See Matthew Paris, ad ann. 1234.

[8] See before, p. 240.

[9] Burton, p. 243.

[10] Matthew Paris; Matthew Weſtminſter, 1234.

[11] See p. 414.

[12] Nov. Oblat. 2 John, m. 9.

Anglie, d̄nus Hibernie, &c. epiſcopis, abbatibus, prioribus, comitibus, baronibus, &c. ſalutem. Sciatis nos dediſſe dilecto & fideli noſtro Stephano de Segrave, & heredibus, totum wapentagium de Goſcote, cum pertinentiis, in com' Leic', habendum & tenendum ſibi & heredibus, reddendo annuatim 100 s̃. ad ſcaccarium noſtrum; ita tamen quod reſpondit vicecomiti Leiceſtrie de auxilio vicecomitis, & de eodem wapentagio pro omni ſervicio & exactione. Teſtibus; Huberto de Burgo comite Cantii & juſticiario Anglie, Philippo de Almacio, Nicholao de Stuttevile, Hug' de Spencer, Ricom' de Grey, Galfrido de Corvo, Galfrido de Chaucer, Ricardo filio Hugonis, Radulpho de Littleberge. Datum per manum venerabilis patris Rad̄i epiſcopi Ciceſtrenſis, cancellarii noſtri, apud Windſor, 25 Aprilis, anno regni noſtri decimo tertio." About this time he purchaſed from Ranulph earl of Cheſter and Lincoln all the lands which that earl had at Mountſorel without the caſtle; as alſo two carucates and a half lying at Segrave, which he and his anceſtors had formerly held, at the rent of £100. a year; and likewiſe the manor of Caludon, co. Warwick, for the ſervice of a ſore-ſpar hawk yearly. In 1231 he paid £100. fine to the king for the marriage of Emma de Cauz, the widow of John de Segrave, his eldeſt ſon, who then died; and in 1232 obtained a grant of the cuſtody of the caſtle and county of Northampton, as alſo of the counties of Bedford, Buckingham, Warwick, and Leiceſter, for term of his life; taking the whole profits of all thoſe counties for his ſupport in that ſervice; excepting the antient farms which had been uſually paid into the exchequer; with the increaſe which in king Henry the Second's time was anſwered for them: And, having been of the king's council for divers years, as alſo chief of the juſtices of the common-pleas court from 1217 to 1232; on the removal of Hubert de Burgh (that year) from that great office of juſtice of England, he was ſubſtituted therein; being then alſo made governor of the caſtles of Dover, Canterbury, Rocheſter, Windſor, Odyham, Hertford, Colcheſter, and the Tower of London; of all which Hubert formerly had the charge.

About this time he purchaſed from Robert de Stotevile the manor of Brinklow, co. Warwick; and from Roger Bigot earl of Norfolk certain lands lying in Segrave, of ten pounds a year value; built here a ſtately houſe; and obtained from Margaret de Quincy free liberty, for himſelf and his heirs, to carry annually 140 loads of wood from Charnwood foreſt to his manor-houſe of Segrave, and free pannage there for two hogs[1]: but, having incurred the hatred of the nobility in a popular inſurrection, his houſe was burnt to the ground, his goods deſtroyed, and his lands laid waſte. After which, 1233, he fell under the king's diſpleaſure; and, being ſummoned to court to give an account of his waſting the king's treaſure and other crimes he was charged with, took ſanctuary in the abbey of Leiceſter; notwithſtanding which, he made his peace; and, the next year, on paying 1000 marks, was reſtored to the king's favour, made his chief counſellor, and conſtituted juſtice of Cheſter; and, having thus felt the inconſtancy of Fortune, returned to his former profeſſion, and became a canon regular in the abbey of Leiceſter, where he died Nov. 9, 1241. He gave to the canons of that houſe a certain wood, called New Hay, lying near Stockingford, co. Warwick; and to the monks of Stoneley, co. Warwick, the manor of Bericote in that county; and to the monks of Combe a mill at Wykin. He had two wives; 1. Roheſe, daughter of Thomas le Deſpenſer (ſiſter to Hugh); 2. Ida, ſiſter of Henry de Haſtings, with whom he had in frank-marriage the manor of Brown's-over, co. Warwick.

In the time of this Stephen was compiled "The Red Book of the Lordſhip of Segrave," being an abſtract of the chartulary of the lands belonging to the honour of Segrave, and of the titles of deeds relative to their poſſeſſions in the counties of Leiceſterſhire, Derbyſhire, Warwickſhire, Northamptonſhire, Buckinghamſhire, Cambridgeſhire, &c. which (with ſeveral notes illuſtrating the pedigree) was formerly the property of Peter Le Neve, eſq. and is now preſerved in that grand and uſeful repoſitory of national records, the Britiſh Muſeum. From this MS. an abſtract of ſo much as relates to Leiceſterſhire has been tranſcribed in a preceding volume[2]. Amongſt the names of places in this lordſhip, which are noticed in the Chartulary, we find Thurger's virgate, and ſix butts ſub fonte Pudewell, Muchelcroft, Twelford, curia Diaconi, Barlicroft, Little Berweſide, Lochaved lands, and Thornheya. And of the earlier landholders here the following names are preſerved: Ranulph earl of Cheſter, Margaret counteſs of Winton, Roger Bigot earl of Norfolk, Gilbert Pycot, Thurſtan, Swane ſon of Aylmer, William de Monte, Horvarus Bercarius, William Friday, John de Solum, Richard de Harcourt, Yvo ſon of Walklin de Rock, Thomas de Curſon, Hugo ſon of Thomas de Segrave, and William de Houby.

To him ſucceeded Gilbert his ſecond ſon (John the eldeſt having died in his father's life-time); who, having married Annabill daughter and coheir of Robert de Chaucomb, obtained in 1231 a grant from Simon de Montfort, lord of Leiceſter, of the whole town of Kegworth, co. Leiceſter; and in 1233 procured from the king a grant in fee-farm, to himſelf and his heirs, of the manor of Newcaſtle under Lime, co. Stafford, with the advowſon of the church of Stoke, paying £20. a year rent; and, the ſame year, was made governor of Bolſover caſtle; in which truſt, and for other ſervices, he merited ſo well, that the king, on his father's death (which happened ſhortly after), acquitted him of his relief then due for the lands thereupon deſcended to him; and, the next enſuing year, 1242, made him juſtice of all foreſts South of Trent, and governor of Kenilworth caſtle; the king by his letters patent, dated at Windſor, 7 April, declaring, that he was to keep it only during the king's pleaſure, and not to deliver it into the hands of any one but the king himſelf, ſo long as he lived; and, if the king ſhould die during the cuſtody thereof, to yield it to queen Eleanor for the uſe of the king's heirs: but in caſe the ſame queen ſhould not come in perſon, that then he ſhould not deliver it to any, except to ſome of her uncles, to the uſe of the king's heirs, who were not in league with the king of France. And for the obſervance of theſe conditions he took an oath[3]. But, in [illegible]44, another governor was made. In 1248 he gave a fine to the king of 100 marks, that neither himſelf, nor his heirs, nor ſir William Waſtneys, knt. (who was a retainer to him), might be queſtioned for any treſpaſſes done in the foreſts during the time that he was juſtice; and in 1251 he was made one of the juſtices of Oyer and Terminer in the city of London, to hear and determine of all ſuch cauſes as had uſually been tried before the juſtices itinerant at the Tower of London. A benefactor he was likewiſe to the monks of Stoneley, as it ſeems; for, it appears that they granted to him and Annabel his wife, that one monk of their convent ſhould perpetually celebrate divine ſervice there for the health of the ſoul of Stephen his father, Roheſe his mother, and her the ſaid Annabill. In 1254, being appointed an embaſſador beyond ſea, with Roger Bigod earl Marſhal, he went into Gaſcoigne: but this journey haſtened his death; for, on his return towards England, with John de Pleſſets earl of Warwick, and others of the Engliſh nobility, having ſpecial letters of ſafe conduct from the king of France for their ſecure travelling through any of his territories, he was treacherouſly ſeized upon at Poictou, and caſt into cloſe priſon; which hard uſage ſo impaired his health, that, languiſhing with infirmities, he died ſhortly after; Annabel his wife ſurviving; who ratified the grants of her anceſtors to the canons of Chaucombe; and, of her own gift, beſtowed on them 100*s*. yearly rent iſſuing out of her lordſhips of Chaucombe and Dalby; and afterwards re-married to Roger de Somery baron of Dudley.

---

[1] See Appendix to vol. II. p. 111.

[2] Ibid. p. 108—120; and the titles of ſuch deeds as more particularly relate to the pariſh of Segrave, pp. 111, 112.

[3] Dugdale, Warwickſhire, p. 161.

To this Gilbert ſucceeded Nicholas de Segrave, his ſon and heir; to whom Alianore the wife of Robert Hovell quit-claimed all her right in the manor of Alkmundbury, co. Huntingdon; which had been part of the poſſeſſions of Stephen de Segrave her father. In 1259 this Nicholas attended the king into France; but ſoon after proved himſelf an active rebel againſt him; for, the ſame year, taking part with the reſt of the barons, he was one of thoſe who conſtrained him to ſubmit to thoſe diſhonourable ordinances made at Oxford; and, in order to their after actings, planted divers ſchiſmatical perſons in church-livings: for which, and many ſacrilegious outrages, both himſelf and the reſt of his party were particularly excommunicated by the archbiſhop of Canterbury; and, in 1262, on an accord made betwixt the king and thoſe barons, received a ſpecial precept from the king, requiring him, in caſe he could not perſonally repair to court for ratifying the ſame agreement, that he ſhould ſend his ſeal for confirmation thereof. In 1263, on an inſurrection of the Welſh, wherein they waſted the lands of Roger lord Mortimer; amongſt other great men, he had ſummons to attend the king at Worceſter, on the feaſt of St. Peter ad Vincula, there to receive the order of knighthood, and thence to march with him, well fitted with horſe and arms. Whether he did ſo or not, is not known: but it is certain that, the next enſuing year, he was one of the ringleaders of thoſe who appeared in open hoſtility, and fortified Northampton againſt the king; for which his lands were ſeized; and, when the royal army took that town by aſſault (where many of his party were laid hold on), making his eſcape, he fled to London; where thoſe rebellious citizens, having raiſed a mighty power on the behalf of the barons, made him their general: whence he marched, with Gilbert de Clare and Henry de Haſtings, to the ſiege of the caſtle at Rocheſter; and ſo to Lewes; where the king being with his army, ready for battle, this Nicholas deſired that he might have the honour to make the firſt onſet; which he did with the Londoners, who were worſted in that encounter; though otherwiſe the day proved fatal to the king, he being there taken priſoner, with the prince and all the chief of his friends. After which, a parliament being called in the king's name, he was one of thoſe who had ſummons thereto[1], among ſuch of the nobility whereof their houſe of peers then conſiſted. But long they proſpered not in this their ſucceſs; for, within the compaſs of 16 months following, the prince, making his eſcape out of their hands, through the help of the lord Mortimer and ſome other, raiſing a powerful army, within a very ſhort time, utterly vanquiſhed them in the battle of Eveſham; where this Nicholas being wounded and taken priſoner, his lands were given to Edmund the king's ſon (afterwards earl of Lancaſter). Howbeit, after this, being admitted to compoſition (by virtue of the decree called Dictum de Kenilworth), on the undertaking of Geoffrey Genevill and ſome others, for his future fidelity, and that he ſhould ſtrictly obſerve the tenor of that decree, he obtained full pardon for his former actings, and a confirmation of his lands which had been ſeized thereupon; as alſo power to receive aid from all his tenants towards the raiſing of his fine; and, within four years after, had leave to attend prince Edward to the Holy Land; as alſo letters of protection, and ſome ſpecial immunities, by reaſon of that journey: whereupon he conſtituted John de Diggeby his attorney, to proſecute all ſuits for him in his abſence, as occaſion ſhould require. And, when that prince arrived to the crown, continuing in his favour, he attended him, in 1276, in that expedition then made into Wales, in which the caſtle of Rothelan was taken, and the Welſh ſubdued.

In 1277, we find this memorandum of his paying homage to the abbot of Leiceſter:

"Memorandum, quòd Nicholaus de Segrave fecit homagium đno Willielmo Schepiſhed abbati Leyc' in capitulo ejuſdem coram đnis Radulpho de London & Willielmo de Legâ, & multis aliis, VI° die ante Natalem Domini, anno Domini M°CCLXX°-ſeptimo, ut patet in libro Cronicarum, 2° fo.[2]"

The property which the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter poſſeſſed in Segrave is thus deſcribed in their Regiſter:

"Habemus in Segrave XX s̃. per annum, homagium & ſervicium, de heredibus Stefani de Segrave, pro totâ terrâ noſtrâ, ſerviciis liberorum, &c.; videlicet, pro manerio noſtro ibidem, cum VI carucatis terre & tribus bovatis que habuimus ex dono fundatoris noſtri, ut patet in cartâ originali fundationis noſtre.

Sciendum, quòd Stefanus de Seygrave dedit nobis in diverſis locis diverſas particulas terre & redditûs pro predictis manerio & terrâ; non tũ ad valorem, ut dicitur.

Memorandum, quòd, per unam cartam noſtram, dedimus & confirmavimus Stefano de Segrave & heredibus ſuis totam terram de Segrave, tenendam de nobis ad feodi firmam in perpetuum, ſolvendo nobis annuatim VII marcas, &c.

Item per aliam cartam noſtram conceſſimus eidem Stefano & confirmavimus, ſibi & heredibus ſuis, pro homagio & ſervicio ſuo, totam terram noſtram de Segrave, cum ſerviciis liberorum hominum & omnibus pertinentiis, &c.; tenend' de nobis ad feodi firmam, ſolvendo indè nobis annuatim, nomine firme, XX s̃. & faciendo homagium, ſicut patet in compoſitione inter nos & epiſcopum Lincolnienſem pro Knyton. Et poſſumus diſtringere tam infra villam quàm extra.

Et ſciendum, quòd pro hâc conceſſione & confirmatione dedit prefatus Stefanus nobis XIII s̃. IIII đ. in Newhay, quam Henricus de Lilburn annuatim prefato Stefano ſolvere ſolebat pro boſco Newhay, &c.

Item unam carucatam terre in Aleby; item VII s̃. in Kyrkby; & XVII s̃. in Melton; & unam virgatam terre in Humburſton; & unam virgatam in Odby; & homagium & ſervicium Willielmi de Leyvâ, & heredum ſuorum, unde II s̃. ei annuatim reddere ſolebat. Et inſuper dedit nobis, ad negotia domûs, XL marcas, ut in cartâ III^{a}.

Item per aliam cartam noſtram reddidimus ei, & quietè-clamavimus đno Stefano de Segrave, & heredibus ſuis, terras & redditus que de eodem Stefano aliquando tenuimus in villâ de Aleby, & Mealton, & Kyrkby, de dono ipſius; ſcilt, pro eſcambio cujuſdam redditûs in Segrave, ut ſuperiùs dicitur; &, in recompenſationem iſtius quiete clamationis, perquiſivit nobis idem Stefanus VI virgatis terre, cum pertinentiis, in villâ de Hungerton, &c. ut in cartâ IIII^{a}[3]."

In 1287, the above-mentioned Nicholas de Segrave was employed into Ireland in the king's ſervice; in 1291, into Scotland; and, July 24, 1292, obtained a charter for free-warren in all his demeſne lands at Cold Overton, Segrave, Sileby, Cotes, and Ditheſworth, co. Leiceſter; and Chaucombe, co. Northampton; as alſo for a market at Mountſorell. But in 1295 he departed this life; when it was found that he held the third part of the manor of Segrave, together with two carucates of land, and the appurtenances there, of the king in capite, by the ſcutage of one quarter of a knight's fee; and that he held the two other parts of the ſaid manor, together with four carucates of land, with the appurtenances, in the ſame town, of the abbot and convent of Leiceſter, by paying thence 20*s.* a year: that 12 virgates of land in the ſame town were held of the aforeſaid Nicholas in villanage; that the ſaid Nickolas held the ſaid 12 virgates of land of the aforeſaid abbot and convent by the aforeſaid ſervice; and that John de Segrave was then his ſon and heir, aged 30[4].

Gilbert Segrave, a younger ſon of this Nicholas, mentioned by Leland[5] and Bale[6], who was brought up in Oxford, and became an acute philoſopher, had a diſpenſation to hold ſeveral livings in 1291; was preſented by his father, to the living of Kegworth, being then ſubdean of Lincoln, Nov. 1292; inſtalled to the church of Aylſton 1292; rector of Fenny Stanton, co. Huntingdon; prebendary of Melton in the church of Lincoln 1296, and of St. Martin's there till 1302; warden of St. Sepulchre's chapel in the church of York 1303;

---

[1] Clauſ. Rot. 49 Hen. III. m. 11. in dorſo.

[2] Charyte's Rentale, fol. cxxix.

[3] Ibid.

[4] Eſch. 24 Edw. I. N° 54. Leic.

[5] Leland, Collectanea, vol. I. p. 327. vol. IV. p. 290.

[6] Bale, vol. II. Cent. 12. fol. 100.

archdeacon of Oxford 1303; reſigned the church of Pen, co. Bucks, 1309; precentor of St. Paul's and biſhop of London 1313; and died Dec. 18, 1316. He wrote "Quæſtiones & Quodlibeta[1]."

In 1270, John de Segrave (his father then living, and by his conſent,) married Chriſtiana the daughter of ſir Hugh de Pleſſets, knt. ſon of John earl of Warwick; and had with her, in frank marriage, the manor of Stodeſdon; John the ſon of the ſaid Hugh at that time alſo taking to wiſe Annabel the daughter of the ſaid Nicholas, giving her, in frank marriage, the manor of Burton-Hanred. Having been taken priſoner in the wars of Scotland, in 1281, he obtained from the king, in conſideration of his ſervices there, the ſum of £1000. towards the payment of his ranſom; deducting only ſo much as upon account was due to the king, upon any moneys by him received, ſince the time he had been warden of the foreſts beyond Trent, and conſtable of Nottingham caſtle; and in 1285 attended the king in his expedition into Wales. In 1291 he accompanied his father into Scotland; being the time when the competitors for that kingdom ſubmitted the determination of their diſpute to king Edward, who ſtayed then in Northumberland for that purpoſe; and in 1296 was conſtable of the Engliſh army then in Scotland. In 1297, he was, by indenture, retained to ſerve Roger le Bigod earl of Norfolk with ſix knights, himſelf accounted, as well in the time of peace as war, for the term of his whole life, in England, Wales, and Scotland; viz. in times of peace, with ſix horſes, as long as the earl ſhould think fit; taking touche of court for himſelf and his knights; and, for his eſquires, hay and oats, as alſo livery for ſix more horſes, and wages for ſix grooms and their horſes; likewiſe, for himſelf, two robes yearly, as well in times of peace as war, as for a banneret; and, for his five knights, the like robes as for his other batchelors, viz. two yearly. Moreover, he was by theſe covenants obliged to bring with him, in time of war, his five knights, with 20 horſes; and, in conſideration thereof, to receive for himſelf and his company, with all thoſe horſes, 40*s*. a day; but, if he ſhould bring no more than ſix horſes, then 32*s*. a day; it being likewiſe agreed that the horſes ſhould be prized, to the end that allowance might be made, in caſe any of them ſhould happen to be loſt in the ſervice. For the performance of which agreement, he had a grant from that earl of the manor of Lodene, co. Norfolk. In 1297, he had ſummons to be at London on the octaves of St. John Baptiſt, to attend the king in his expedition beyond ſea; and, the ſame year, in the month of October, to be at Newcaſtle upon Tine, on the day of St. Nicholas; thence to attend prince Edward, the king's lieutenant, in his wars againſt the Scots. In 1298, he had ſummons to be at Carliſle on Whitſun eve, well fitted with horſe and arms, to attend the king into Scotland; in which expedition the Engliſh obtained that great victory at Faukirke; and in 1300 was again in thoſe Scottiſh wars; in which year he procured a charter for free-warren in all his demeſne lands at North Newenton, co. Oxford, and Lodene, co. Norfolk. This John was one of the barons who ſigned the famous Barons' Letter to the Pope, anno 1300[2]. In 1301, he obtained licence to make a caſtle at his manor-houſe of Bretteby, co. Derby; and in 1302 was conſtituted governor of Berwick upon Tweed, as alſo warden of Scotland; in which year, riding out of that garriſon with a ſmall party, he was wounded in a ſkirmiſh by an ambuſcado of the Scots, and taken priſoner. About this time he had another charter for free-warren in all his demeſne lands at Alkmundbury, co. Huntingdon; and, the next enſuing year, the king marching into Scotland with great forces, he again attended him thither, and was at the ſiege of Caerlaverok. At this time the king, being victorious there, marched through the whole realm, all places of ſtrength yielding to him; whence making a triumphant return, he left this John de Segrave behind him as lieutenant there. In 1305, he received £100. agreeably to a contract made at Berwick upon Tweed, during the king's wars in Scotland, in payment for 30 men at arms, "quos habuit ex recenſione propriâ, pro cuſtodiâ Landomen' & partium adjacentium," from Auguſt 20, 1304, to Jan. 14, 1304-5[3]. In 1304, he obtained licence to fortify his manor-houſe at Caludon, co. Warwick, with a moat, and to wall and embattle it with lime and ſtone; and in 1305 had farther ſummons to attend the king at Carliſle, well fitted with horſe and arms; thence to march with him into Scotland againſt Robert Brus, then in arms, and aſſuming the title of king in that realm. And, as his employments of power and truſt under king Edward the Firſt were thus great and remarkable; ſo were they no leſs eminent and honourable in the time of his ſon and ſucceſſor king Edward the Second; for, in the firſt year of his reign, he was conſtituted juſtice of all the foreſts from Trent Northwards, as alſo governor of Nottingham caſtle; and in 1308 again made warden of all Scotland. In 1310, he had a grant of the juſticeſhip of the foreſts beyond Trent, and government of Nottingham caſtle, for life; and in 1311 was again in the Scottiſh wars; but in 1313, attending the king into that realm, was taken priſoner in the unfortunate battle of Bannockſburne, where the Engliſh loſt the day: for whoſe redemption, above a twelvemonth after, one Thomas de Moram, a Scot, then priſoner in the Tower of London, and divers others of that nation, detained in ſundry parts of this realm, were delivered to Stephen de Segrave, ſon and heir of this John, by the king's appointment, to be given in exchange for him.

In 1315, "Johannes de Segrave fecit litteram attorn' Nicolao ballivo de Penne, ad ponendum Gilbertum de Aremlegh etiam in ſeiſinam meſſuagii in London'; datum apud Karliol. 8 Edw. II." In the ſame year, he had another ſummons to fit himſelf with horſe and arms, and to be at Newcaſtle upon Tine, thence to march into Scotland; and in 1316 obtained licence for a market every week, on the Thurſday, at his manor of Fenny Stanton, co. Huntingdon; as alſo for one fair every year, on the eve and day of the Apoſtles Peter and Paul, and ſix days following. In 1317, in conſideration of his great ſervices, and in recompence of his impriſonment in Scotland, he obtained the grant of 1000*l*.; and in 1319 had licence for a market every week, upon the Tueſday, at Alſpath, co. Warwick; and a fair yearly upon the eve and day of St. Lawrence, and ſix days following. In 1325, the king having conceived ſome diſpleaſure towards him, for the eſcape of Roger lord Mortimer out of the Tower of London, ſent him (together with Edmund earl of Kent, and ſome others) into Gaſcoigne, under colour of defending thoſe parts; where there being a great mortality, he departed this life, leaving John his grandchild his conſanguineus and next heir (Stephen his eldeſt ſon dying a little before him) having had ſummons to parliament from 1296 to that year.

By the inquiſition taken after his death, it was found that John de Segrave, deceaſed, and Chriſtiana his wife, held two parts of the manor of Segrave, of the abbot and convent of Leiceſter, by the ſervice of 20*s*. a year, to be paid at the feaſt of St. Michael; alſo the third part of the manor of Segrave aforeſaid, of the earl of Cheſter, by the ſervice of a quarter of a knight's fee; "quæ quidem duæ partes et tertia pars tenentur in uno manerio et indiviſo;" the advowſon of the church of Segrave, worth 20 marks; and that John de Segrave (ſon and heir of Stephen[4] de Segrave) was his next heir[5].

Nicholas de Segrave, brother to the abovementioned John, was in the ſervice of king Edward I. in Gaſcoigne; and in 1297 had ſummons to attend his prince at Newcaſtle upon Tine, to march againſt the Scots; as alſo, the next enſuing year, to be at Carliſle, well appointed with horſe and arms, in order to another expedition deſigned for Scotland; at which time he was in the battle of Faulkirk, where the Engliſh were victorious. In 1305 this Nicholas, whom Matthew Weſtminſter calls unus de præſtantioribus militibus de regno, being charged with treaſon by ſir John de Cromwell, knt. in defence of his innocence, challenged Cromwell to a duel: but, that not being permitted, he went beyond ſea, without licence, to purſue him; at which the king took ſuch offence, that he commanded juſtice ſhould be done againſt him. Whereupon, after three days' conſultation, the judges declared that he deſerved death, and that all his goods ſhould be confiſcated; yet added that, in regard of his noble deſcent, as alſo in reſpect that he went not out of England in affront to the king, but to be revenged on his accuſer, he might do well to pardon him. To whom the king anſwered: "It is in my power to extend mercy as I pleaſe. Who hath ſubmitted to my clemency, and ſuffered for it? Let your ſentence be recorded; and it ſhall ſtand for law." Hereupon, he was committed to priſon, for a terror to other offenders in the like kind; but, after few days, divers of the nobility interceding for him; thirty of his peers alſo, girt with ſwords, offering to be bound, body and goods, that he ſhould be forthcoming whenſoever the king ſhould require; he was ſet at liberty, and reſtored to his poſſeſſions. On this his flight, to go beyond ſea to fight with Cromwell in the court of France, endeavouring to take ſhipping at Dover; and, being there withſtood by the conſtable of that caſtle, he got to another haven, and ſailed over; for which, on his return, he was ſeized on at Dover, and brought to trial (as before obſerved). But after this, 1306, he had another ſummons to be at Carliſle on the quindenes of St. John's Nativity; then to attend the king in his expedition againſt Robert Brus; and in 1310 was conſtituted governor of the caſtle at Northampton, and vicecomes mareſcallus of England. In 1310 he obtained licence to make a caſtle of his manor-houſe at Barton-Segrave, co. Northampton; and was the ſame year again in the Scottiſh wars. On this grant of the marſhalſhip to him, William le Mareſchall much ſtomaching the matter, both of them, by their friends and allies, raiſed ſtrong parties, and reſolved to come with them, in that ſort attended, to the parliament, which was to begin at London, upon Sunday next after the feaſt of St. Lawrence in 1311. But the king, being advertiſed thereof, prohibited them ſo to do, upon pain of forfeiture of all they had; commanding them, by his ſpecial precepts, that they ſhould not dare to come with weapons, or in any other ſort than had been uſual in the time of king Edward his father. This Nicholas de Segrave had ſummons to parliament, amongſt the barons, from 1302 to 1321 incluſive; and departed this life in 1322, being then ſeiſed of the manor of Peſinhale, co. Suffolk, Heydon, co. Eſſex, of the ſite of the caſtle of Barton, co. Northampton (which he had by the gift of Nicholas his father), as alſo of the manor of Weſton in that county; leaving iſſue Maud his daughter and heir, then married to Edmund de Bohun, 30 years of age.

---

[1] Godwin, Catalogue of Biſhops, p. 148; and alſo Reg. Dec. & Cap. Wigorn. fol. 41. See Fuller, p. 128; Tanner, Bibl. Brit. 663.

[2] His ſeal is here given, Plate LXI. fig. 1. from a copy of it in the College of Arms.

[3] From an original MS accompt of the king's expences, during the war in Scotland, annis regni 31° & 32°, in my poſſeſſion.

[4] So Dugdale, Bar. Angl vol. I. p. 675; but the Pedigrees in the College of Arms make this Nicholas, not Stephen.

[5] Eſch. 18 Edw. II. N° 88. Leic.

Stephen his nephew, who died the ſame year with his father (as already intimated) was in 1306 with John his father in the wars of Scotland: but in 1319 took part with Thomas earl of Lancaſter; yet, ſubmitting himſelf, had his pardon; and the ſame year, in conſideration of his good and faithful ſervices, obtained a grant of the hundred of Stodeſden, co. . . . . to hold for life; paying yearly to the king's exchequer, by the hands of the ſheriff, the antient farm thereof. In 1323 he was made conſtable of the Tower of London; and in 1325 accompanied his father, under the command of Edmund earl of Kent, into Gaſcoigne. Soon after which he died; whereupon the manor of Caludon, co. Warwick, with certain other lands, was aſſigned to Alice his wife for her dowry.

John de Segrave, ſon to the laſt-mentioned Stephen, but heir to his grandfather, was ſent into Gaſcoigne in 1325 with his father; and in 1327, arriving to his full age, had livery of his lands of his inheritance, doing his homage. In which year, being employed into Scotland, upon the king's ſpecial ſervice, his debts due to the exchequer were reſpited. About 1330, by marriage with Margaret, daughter and heir to Thomas of Brotherton, marſhal of England (ſecond ſon to king Edward the Firſt) he added no ſmall honour to his family. In 1341 he was by indenture retained to ſerve the king, with 40 men at arms, whereof eight to be knights, and the reſt eſquires; as alſo with 40 archers, under ſeveral banners; all which were to continue in the marches of Scotland, from the month of April, until Martinmaſs next enſuing, and to receive the wages of war accuſtomed. In 1343 he ſerved the king in his wars of France, with 40 men at arms, and 40 archers; and the ſame year was in that expedition made into Scotland. Likewiſe, in 1345, he was again retained, by indenture, to ſerve the king for one quarter of that year, in his wars of France, with 40 men at arms, whereof one banneret; beſides himſelf, eight knights, the reſt eſquires and men at arms. In 1346, he received a command to fit himſelf with horſe and arms, and to repair to Portſmouth upon the feaſt of St. Lawrence, thence to attend the king, with all the power he could make, into France; and, on the aid granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon, in that year, was aſſeſſed 10*s*. for a quarter of one knight's fee in Segrave, parcel of the fee of Cheſter and Huntingdon[1]. Having been ſummoned to parliament from 1337 till 1352 incluſive, he departed this life upon Tueſday in Eaſter-week, 1352. The inquiſition taken after his death runs thus:

"Johannes de Segrave tenet manerium de Segrave, Sileby, Mountſorel, Dalby-Chaucombe, & Overton, & 30 meſſuagia, & 30 yardlands, & 100 ſolidos redditûs, cum pertinentiis, in South Thurnby, Cotes, Thurnby, Smytheſby, Wymondham, Hoby, Thorpe Setchfeild, Twyford, Thurmaſton, Thorpe Buſherd, & Melton, & advocationes eccleſiarum de Segrave, Sileby, & Kegworth. Et dicunt quod predicta maneria, meſſuagia, terre, redditus, & advocationes predicte, tenentur de Edwardo principe Wallie, de ducatu Lancaſtrie, de abbate Leiceſtrie, Johanne de Mowbray, & domino de Roſſe, & aliis diverſis dominis, per ſervitia diverſa, & non de rege, & valent dicta maneria, meſſuagia, terre, redditus, &c. per annum in omnibus exitibus 100 libras[2]."

By the lady Margaret, who, after the death of her niece Joan counteſs of Suffolk, had the whole of her father's inheritance, he had iſſue, 1. Elizabeth, his daughter and heir, at that time married to John the ſon of John lord Mowbray, to whom ſhe brought an ample fortune; and, 2. Anne, lady abbeſs of Barking in Eſſex[3].

Margaret lady Segrave was afterwards re-married to ſir Walter Manny, knight of the Garter; who, at his death in 1372, held the manor of Segrave, of the abbot of Leiceſter, by the ſervice of 20*s*. a year[4]. This ſir Walter founded a chapel of the order of Carthuſians, and built there a monaſtery for the health of king Edward III. and his wife dame Margaret; and was there buried; his obſequies being performed with great ſolemnity; king Edward and all his children, with the great prelates and barons of the realm, being preſent. Thomas Manny, his only ſon by the lady Margaret, was drowned when young in a well at Deptford; and Anne, their only daughter, was married to John Haſtings earl of Pembroke.

In 1377, at the coronation of Richard II, Margaret lady Segrave exhibited her petition for the Marchalſy of England to be executed by her deputy; urging the example of Gilbert Marſhall, who performed the ſame office at the coronation of king Henry II; but the Marſhalſy being, by the death of her father without iſſue male, in the hands of the king, to diſpoſe of at pleaſure, and the time before the coronation too ſhort to determine the matter, Henry lord Percy was appointed by the king to execute the ſaid office till a final determination could be made therein. This lady married, thirdly, ſir Thomas de Erdington, who died in 1395, ſeiſed of a quarter of one knight's fee in Segrave, which Margaret counteſs of Norfolk held; and Thomas, ſon of the ſaid Thomas and Margaret, was his next

[1] Rot. Aux 20 Edw. III.

[2] Eſch. 27 Edw. III. N° 69. Leic.

[3] See the regular deſcent of the family of Mowbray, under Cold Overton, vol. II. p. 138.

[4] Eſch. 46 Edw. III. N° 38 Leic.

heir [1]. In a deed dated 26 Sept. . . . . . Ric. II. ſhe writes in her ſtyle, "Margaret Marſhal counteſs of Norfolk" (as heir to her father) and "lady of Segrave;" and afterwards was (for the greatneſs of her birth, her large revenues and wealth) created dutcheſs of Norfolk, for term of her life, 29 Sept. 1397; and her grandſon was at the ſame time created duke of Norfolk. She died March 24, 1399, having outlived her third huſband; and was interred in the Friers Minors [2] (vulgarly called the Minories) in London. Her ſeal (Plate LXI. fig. 2.) ſhews her arms, ſupported by an angel, Gules, three lions paſſant guardant Or, a file of five points Argent, between two collateral eſcutcheons; that on the dexter ſide charged with the coat of her firſt huſband John lord Segrave; Sable, a lion rampant Argent, crowned Or; and that on the ſiniſter the arms of Walter de Manny, her ſecond huſband, Or, three chevronels Sable [3].

Thomas Mowbray duke of Norfolk died of the peſtilence, at Venice, the Monday before Michaelmas-day 1399, ſeiſed (inter alia) of the manor of Segrave; alſo of the advowſon of the church of Segrave, value £10. [4]; and in the ſame year it was alſo found that Margaret dutcheſs of Norfolk (daughter and heir of Thomas de Brotherton earl of Norfolk, and grandmother of Thomas Mowbray late duke of Norfolk) died ſeiſed of this manor [5].

In 1406, Thomas Mowbray earl Marſhal (ſon of the laſt duke of Norfolk, but uſing no other titles than thoſe of Earl Marſhal, Nottingham, lord of Mowbray, Segrave, and Gower) was beheaded at York for rebellion; but died ſeiſed of the manor of Segrave [6].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Segrave was rated at £2. 6*s.*; and in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 4*s.* 4*d.*

In 1424, Elizabeth (widow of Thomas Mowbray duke of Norfolk) died ſeiſed of the advowſon of Segrave [7].

In 1437, it was found that Conſtance widow of Thomas Mowbray earl Marſhal died ſeiſed of the manor of Segrave; and that it extended itſelf into the towns and hamlets of Segrave, Cotes, Walton, Dalby Parva, Wymondeſwold, Houby, Thurmaſton, Thorp Buſard, Burton, Twyford, Thorp Sachvile, Smitheſby, Burton on the Woulds, Howes, Grimſton, Thruſſington, Rereſby, Markfield, Mountſorell, Burough, and Radcliffe upon Wreke, all in the ſame county [8].

In 1461, John Mowbray duke of Norfolk died ſeiſed of the manor of Segrave, held of the abbot of Leiceſter, by the rent of 20*s.* a year; and had granted to Richard Coupland an annuity of 6*l.* 1*s.* 4*d.* for term of life [9].

By his ſon and ſucceſſor, John duke of Norfolk, William Haſtings, eſq. was that year appointed ſteward of his manors of Melton Mowbray and Segrave:

"Johannes dux Norff', comes Mareſcallus & de Nottingham, Mareſcallus Anglie, dominus de Mowbray, de Segrave, & de Gower, omnibus ad quos hoc preſens ſcriptum pervenerit, ſalutem in Domino. Sciatis nos prefatum ducem de fidelitate, circumſpectione, & induſtriâ dilecti nobis Willi Haſtings, armigeri, plenius confidentes, ordinâſſe & conſtituiſſe ipſum Willm ſeneſcallum dominicorum meorum de Melton Mowbray & Segrave, in com' Leyceſtr', ad terminum vite dicti Willi, &c. Dat' in hoſpitio noſtro London', anno regni regis Edwardi Quarti poſt Conqueſtum Anglie primo. J. NORFF [10]."

In 1469, we find the following deed:

"John duke of Norff. erle Marſhall, of Suſſex, Surrey, and of Nottyngham, Marſhall of Inglande, lorde Mowbray of Segrave, Bromfelde, and Yalle. To al our frends, ſervaunts, and other Cryſtyne people, gretyng. Wher John Paſton, eſquier, and other diṽrs pſones, forſeble hath kepte the manore of Caſtre contrary to our will and pleaſer; and afterwarde by his lowly labour and gret meaneſs to us maade, the ſeide John Paſton hathe maade deliṽance of the ſeide manoir to ſoch pſons as we have aſſuignede; and he and his ſeide ſelouſhip, by our lycence, to departe oute of the ſame: Wherfor we pray, wil, and charge you, and eṽy ſet of you, that ye ne vexte, trouble, manaſe, ne greve, the forſeid pſones, nor eny of them, for the kepyng of the ſeide mane' contrary to the kyng our ſoṽeynge lordes lawyes; for we have takyne them in our ſafe garde. Yeven under our ſuignet and ſingmanuel the xxvj^{ti} day of Septembr', the ixth yer of kynge Edward iiii^{t}. [11]" NORFF. (L. S.)

A petition from the duke of Norfolk to the king in 1474-5, ſoliciting liberty to borrow money on his landed property at Segrave and other places, towards the expence of attending his royal maſter in his wars, is already printed under Cold Overton [12].

In 1475, John Mowbray duke of Norfolk died ſeiſed of the manor of Segrave [13]; and, the ſame year, on the marriage of Richard of Shrewſbury, duke of York and Norfolk, and earl Marſhal, to Anne daughter of John late duke of Norfolk, this manor was ſettled on Elizabeth widow of John the late duke [14].

In 1483, ſir Robert Harington had the ſtewardſhip of the manor of Segrave [15].

From the family of Mowbray, this lordſhip deſcended to William lord viſcount Berkeley, as grandſon and heir to James lord Berkeley, who had married the lady Iſabel, daughter to Thomas duke of Norfolk. He was created earl of Nottingham in 1483, and earl Marſhal in 1489; and from him the lordſhip of Segrave deſcended to Charles lord Berkeley, who was owner of it in 1641 [16].

Henry Dyſon, gent. poſſeſſed this manor at his death in 1707; and it was afterwards purchaſed by Leonard Foſbrooke, eſq. of Shardlow, co. Derby, who alſo purchaſed the manor of Ravenſton in this county; and whoſe ſon Leonard Foſbrooke, eſq. is the preſent owner.

In an act paſſed in 1760, for dividing the open fields within the lordſhip and liberty of Segrave, known by the ſeveral manors of Brick-field, Anſley-field, Averfield, and Wiches-field, and ſeveral commons, called the Hills, the Plains, the Woulds, the Gorſe, the Plebbs, and Walring Leys; Leonard Foſbrooke, eſq. is deſcribed as lord of the manor, and the Rev. Richard Benſkin, as rector and impropriator, entitled to certain glebe lands, added to all the rectorial or vicarial tithes, except tithes of hay from ground called the Hades and Stades, for which a modus of 3*d.* for every yard-land had time immemorially been paid. Mr. Foſbrooke was alſo principal proprietor, and, together with Thomas Fiſher, John Woodroffe, and others, entitled to the ſaid common fields. The rector's allotment was made to him in lieu of all glebe and tithes, and other intereſts, except only the church-yard, houſe, barns, out-houſes, gardens, orchard, and homeſtead, burial-fees, and ſurplice-fees of every ſort; and the rector's portion to be ſubject to the repairs of the chancel, and all ſuch taxes and payments as his glebe or tithes were before ſubject to. Good public roads were directed to be made, from Walton, through Segrave, to Thruſſington; and from Barrow, through Segrave, to Sex-hills.

The fields are moſtly a ſtrong coldiſh clay, containing, by ſtatute meaſure, 2230 acres, 3 roods, 29 perches, according to an account taken from the award.

Lime-ſtone is found here, of nearly the ſame quality as that at Barrow, it being an adjoining lordſhip; but none is worked at preſent.

Segrave contains about 65 houſes; and the ſite of the caſtle, as mentioned by Mr. Burton, is ſtill viſible.

Nicholas Segrave, of Leiceſter, bred up an otter tame [17].

A very ingenious clock-maker, of the name of Bird, an inhabitant of Segrave, died about the year 1774.

Thomas Ward, of this village, died Oct. 20, 1795, after having been married about 63 years; and his wife Sarah died Oct. 20, 1798. This remarkable

---

[1] Eſch. 18 Ric. II. N° 18. Leic.

[2] This appears in the Regiſter of the ſaid Friers Minors, fol. 1. b. So ſaith Brooke, York Herald, p. 256, and Weever, p. 413; yet Stow erroneouſly ſays ſhe was interred at the Charter-houſe with her ſecond huſband. Neither of theſe writers ſeem to have been aware that ſhe had a third huſband.

[3] Her arms, with thoſe of her firſt huſband, were in Mountſoreil chapel. See before, p. 91; and Sandford, pp. 122. 207.

[4] Eſch. 1 Hen. IV. N° 71. Leic.

[5] Eſch. 1 Hen. IV. N° 72. Leic.

[6] Eſch. 8 Hen. IV. N° 76. Leic.

[7] Eſch. 3 Hen. VI. N° 25. Leic.

[8] Eſch. 16 Hen. VI. N° 60. Leic.

[9] Eſch. 1 Edw. IV. N° 46. Leic.

[10] See his ſignature and ſeal in Plate LXI. fig. 3; from Harl. MSS. 5804. p. 108. b.

[11] See the ſeal, fig. 4, from the original, in Mr. Brooke's Aſpilogia, p. 35.

[12] See vol. II. p. 138.

[13] Eſch. 17 Edw. IV. N° 58. Leic.

[14] Rot. Parl. (17 Edw. IV.) vol. VI. pp. 168, 169.

[15] See vol. II. p. 139.

[16] MS. Burton.

[17] Walton's Angler, 1775, 8vo, p. 50.

Fig. 1.

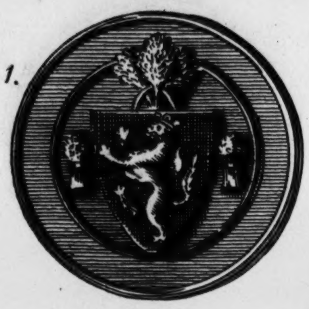

Fig. 3.

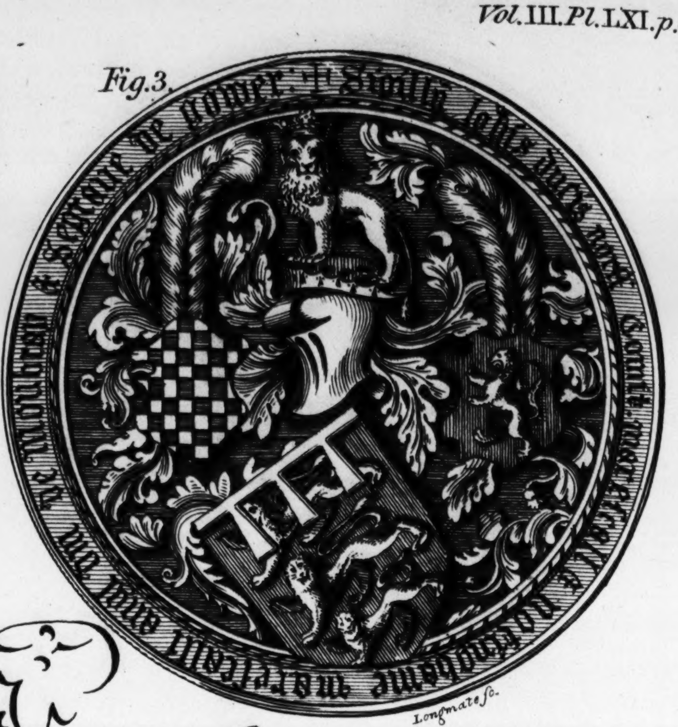

Longmate sc.

Fig. 2.

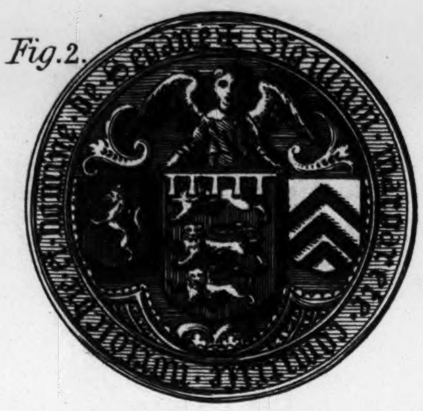

Fig. 4.

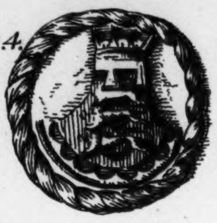
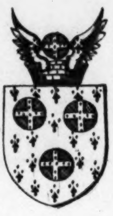


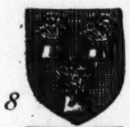
17



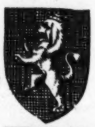
Norff

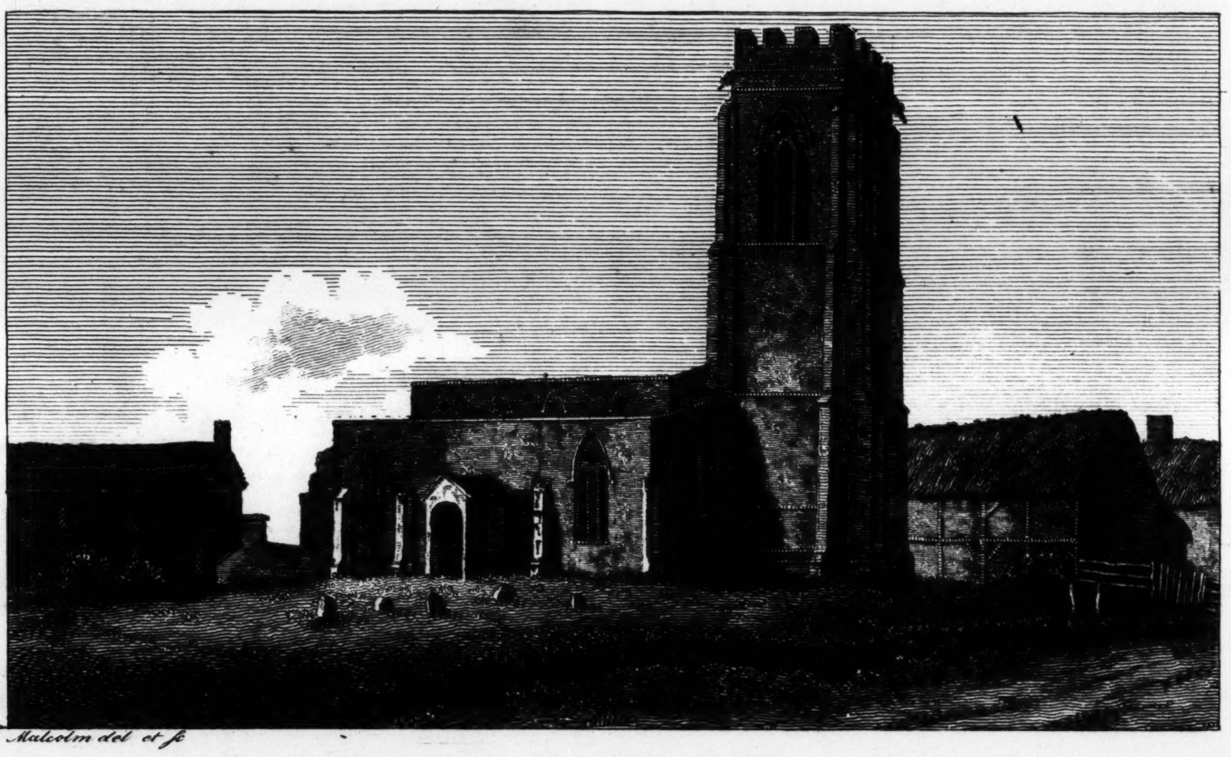
SEGRAVE. N.W.

8



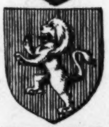
6



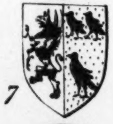


Malcolm del et sc

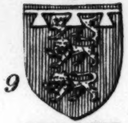
5



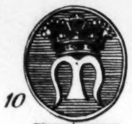
7



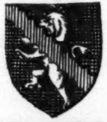
9



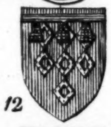
10



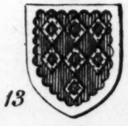
11



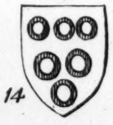
12



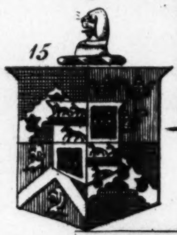
13



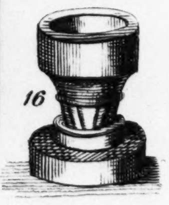
14



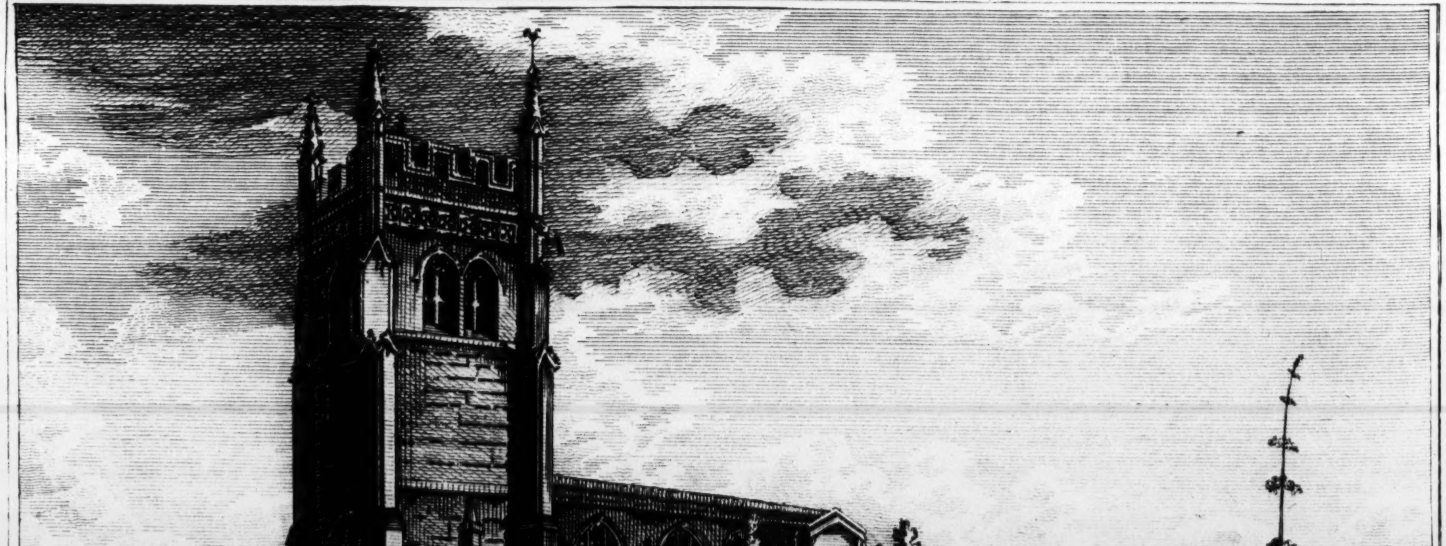
15



16



SILEBY, S.W.



Drawn June 17, 1791.

Longmate del. & sc.

couple enjoyed extraordinary good health, and brought up ſeveral children.

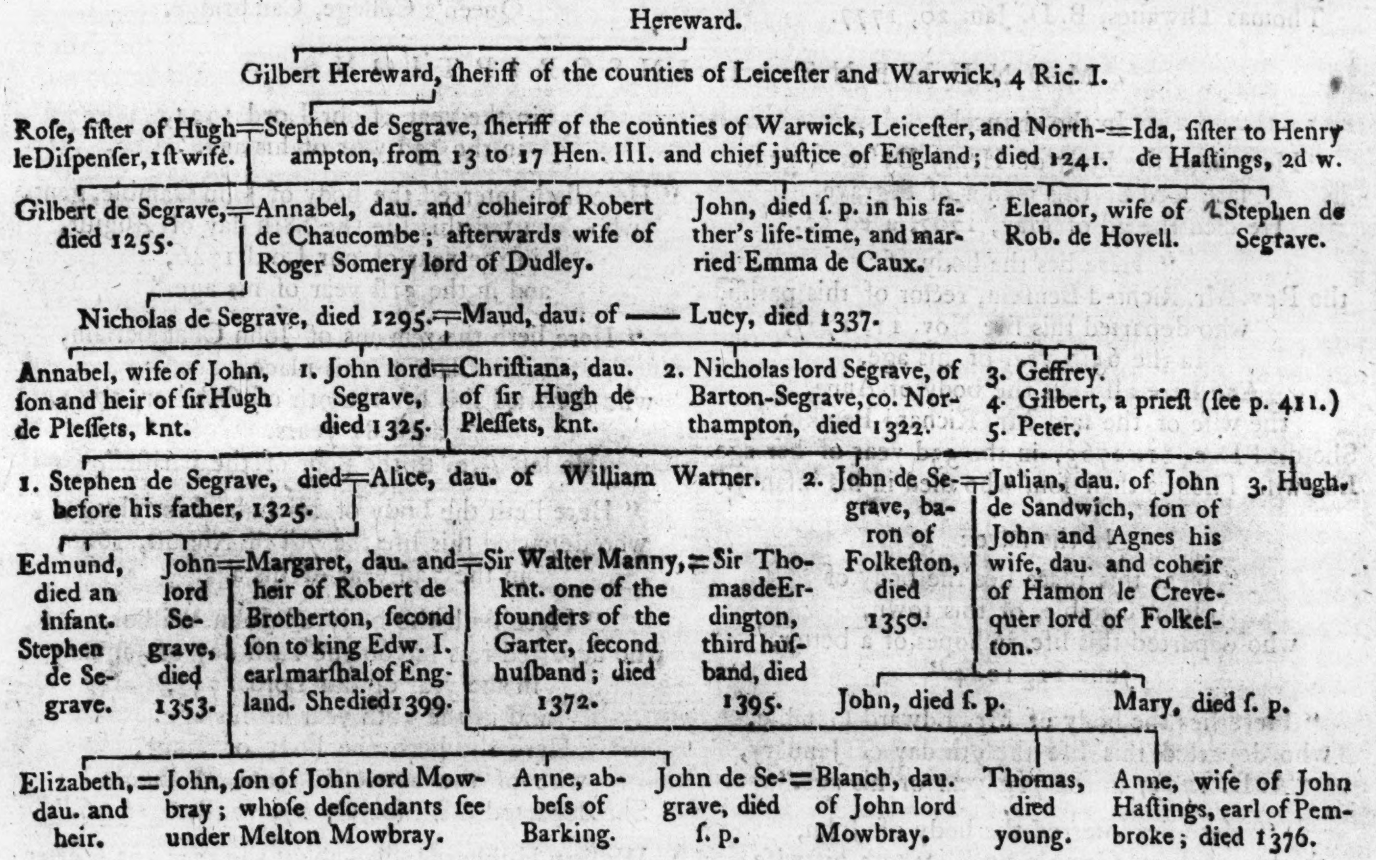
There are alſo living inſtances of longevity; John Tomlinſon, aged 71, has a mother at the age of 92.

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor within the year ending at Eaſter 1776, —	70	1	0
Expended in county rates, &c.	3	6	0
——— on the poor, —	66	15	0
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	0	10	0
Expended in litigations, —	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	101	17	0
——— 1784, —	109	13	4
——— 1785, —	109	13	4
Medium of theſe three years,	107	1	2
——— of county expences,	6	13	6
——— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	0	0	0
——— of nett annual expences,	100	7	8
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	7	10	11
——— of entertainments at meetings,	0	14	2
——— of law expences, —	0	7	4
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 53.

George Berkeley, of Chriſt Church, a younger ſon of George lord (afterwards earl of) Berkeley, was created M. A. July 19, 1669; rector of Cranford, Middleſex, April 8, 1686; inſtalled prebendary of Weſtminſter June 13, 1687; and died in October 1694; having married, March 4, 1689, Jane daughter of George Cole, of Devonſhire, eſq. by whom he left iſſue Elizabeth his only child, baptized March 21, 1691; and who, having married John Brome, of Tuppenden in Kent, eſq. died April 8, 1730, and was buried at Farnborough[1]. Previous to his accepting Cranford, he had ſome benefice in Leiceſterſhire, which Wood[2] ſuppoſes to be Segrave (though we find no room for him in the liſt of rectors); and, at the requeſt of Thomas Wilſon, eſq. of Keythorpe, high-ſheriff of the county, publiſhed a ſermon on Matthew vii. 12. preached at the Aſſizes at Leiceſter July 22, 1686, before the right honourable ſir Edward Atkins, lord chief baron, and ſir Chriſtopher Milton[3], baron of the Exchequer.

Pedigree of SEGRAVE. From the Chetwynd MS.



Hereward.

Gilbert Hereward, ſheriff of the counties of Leiceſter and Warwick, 4 Ric. I.

Roſe, ſiſter of Hugh le Diſpenſer, 1ſt wife. = Stephen de Segrave, ſheriff of the counties of Warwick, Leiceſter, and Northampton, from 13 to 17 Hen. III. and chief juſtice of England; died 1241. = Ida, ſiſter to Henry de Haſtings, 2d w.

Gilbert de Segrave, died 1255. = Annabel, dau. and coheir of Robert de Chaucombe; afterwards wife of Roger Somery lord of Dudley.

John, died ſ. p. in his father's life-time, and married Emma de Caux.

Eleanor, wife of Rob. de Hovell.

Stephen de Segrave.

Nicholas de Segrave, died 1295. = Maud, dau. of —— Lucy, died 1337.

Annabel, wife of John, ſon and heir of ſir Hugh de Pleſſets, knt.

1. John lord Segrave, died 1325. = Chriſtiana, dau. of ſir Hugh de Pleſſets, knt.

2. Nicholas lord Segrave, of Barton-Segrave, co. Northampton, died 1322.

3. Geffrey.

4. Gilbert, a prieſt (ſee p. 411.)

5. Peter.

1. Stephen de Segrave, died before his father, 1325. = Alice, dau. of William Warner.

2. John de Segrave, baron of Folkeſton, died 1350. = Julian, dau. of John de Sandwich, ſon of John and Agnes his wife, dau. and coheir of Hamon le Crevequer lord of Folkeſton.

3. Hugh.

Edmund, died an infant.

Stephen de Segrave.

John lord Segrave, died 1353. = Margaret, dau. and heir of Robert de Brotherton, ſecond ſon to king Edw. I. earl marſhal of England. She died 1399. = Sir Walter Manny, knt. one of the founders of the Garter, ſecond huſband; died 1372. = Sir Thomas de Erdington, third huſband, died 1395.

John, died ſ. p.

Mary, died ſ. p.

Elizabeth, dau. and heir. = John, ſon of John lord Mowbray; whoſe deſcendants ſee under Melton Mowbray.

Anne, abbeſs of Barking.

John de Segrave, died ſ. p. = Blanch, dau. of John lord Mowbray.

Thomas, died young.

Anne, wife of John Haſtings, earl of Pembroke; died 1376.

The CHURCH, (ſee Plate LXI.)

dedicated to All Saints, is a good building, not large, but ſufficient for the ſize of the village. It conſiſts of a tower, in which are three bells; a ſpire, chancel, nave, and two ailes.

Mr. Burton deſcribes theſe arms here, fig. 5—8.

In the Eaſt window of the chancel.

Gules, a lion rampant Argent, Mowbray.

Sable, a lion rampant Argent, crowned Or, Chaucombe, alias Segrave.

Barry of ten, Sable and Argent, over all a griffin ſegreant; impaling, Or, three ravens Sable; Corbet.

In the North window of the church.

Sable, three garbs Argent, banded Gules, Segrave antient.

Mowbray repeated.

In 1650, the rectory was returned worth £100; and the incumbent "ſufficient, but a pluralitan."

In 1774, an act was paſſed, for confirming an agreement between William earl of Radnor, and the Preſident and Fellows of the College of St. Margaret and St. Bernard, commonly called Queen's College in Cambridge, for an exchange of the advowſon of Segrave for that of Great Chiverell in Wiltſhire; by which the right of patronage to Segrave was ſecured in perpetuity to that college.

The preſent value in the king's books is £19. 8s. 11½d.; certified value £270.

The epiſcopal procurations are, 5s. 4d.; the archidiaconal, 11s. 0½d.

The feaſt is kept on the Sunday after All Saints day.

The parſonage-houſe has been lately rebuilt, and is a comfortable habitation. It is at preſent in the occupation of the curate, the Rev. William Lewin, who alſo farms the glebe-land.

---

[1] Thorpe's Cuſtumale Roffenſe.

[2] Faſti, vol. II. p. 179.

[3] As it is not generally known that the baron of the Exchequer was a brother of the famous Poet; it may not be impertinent to annex here a ſhort Pedigree from the MSS. of Peter le Neve:

John Milton, of London, a ſcrivener. = ...

1. John Milton, of London, who wrote Paradiſe Loſt.

2. Chriſtopher Milton, eſq. of Ruſhmere, Suffolk, one of the barons of the Exchequer, knighted at Whitehall April 25, 1686. He was a lawyer, and not a conſiderable one; but, being a Papiſt, was promoted by king James II, April 24, 1686, to be a baron of the Exchequer; and next day was knighted at Greenwich. He was buried at St Nicholas's church, Ipſwich. = Thomaſine, dau. of William Webber, of London; died before her huſband was made a baronet; and was buried in St. Nicholas's pariſh, Ipſwich.

Thomas Milton, eſq. clerk of the crown in Chancery. = Martha, daughter of Charles Fleetwood, of Northampton; re-married to Will. Coward, M. D. of London and Ipſwich.

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
Magiſter Dealthia, about 1180.
Henry de Colvill, 1237.	———
Henry de Tonvill, 1247.
Reginald de Garcy, promoted to a ſuffragan biſhopric in 1274.	Robert abbot of Garendon, deputed by Nicholas lord Segrave.
James de Segrave[1], 1274.
Gilbert de Segrave[2].	—
William Curteys[3], 1384.
William de Nenton[4], 1504.
George Savage[5], LL. D.; died 1602.
Thomas Cooper[6], B. D. 1602; died 1630.	George lord Berkeley.
Robert Burton[7], 1630; died Jan. 13, 1639.
Maurice Berkeley[8], 1640.	Charles lord Berkeley.
. . . . . . Wilſon.
Robert Reding[9], 1659.
Thomas Audley, Dec. 10, 1660.	George lord Berkeley, pleno jure.
Joſeph Franks, May 3, 1676.	John Moore, gent.
Ambroſe Kipling.
John Rogers[10], March 2, 1681; died 1715.	George earl of Berkeley.
George Berkeley, M. A. 1686.
Thomas Thwaites, Oct. 27, 1715.	Sarah Rogers, widow.
Thomas Horton, Nov. 20, 1721.	Richard Benſkin, gent.
Thomas Royle, Feb. 22, 1724.
Richard Benſkin, May 28, 1727; died 1767.
John Benſkin, April 21, 1768; died 1776.	On his own petition, being patron.
Thomas Thwaites, B. D. Jan. 20, 1777.	Queen's College, Cambridge.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

In the chancel:

"Here lieth the body of Henry Dyſon[11], gent.
late lord of this manor of Segrave.
He died the 3d of May, 1707, aged 52."

"Here lies the body of the Rev. Mr. Richard Benſkin, rector of this pariſh, who departed this life Nov. 11, 1767,
in the 65th year of his age.
And here alſo lies the body of Anne,
the wife of the ſaid Mr. Richard Benſkin.
She died Dec. 11, 1763, in the 53d year of her age.
Likewiſe Thomas their ſon, who died in his infancy."

In the nave:

"Near this place lies the body of John Gamble, of this town, who departed this life, in hopes of a better,
June 11, 1684."

"Here lies the body of Mr. Edward Gamble, who departed this life the 9th day of January,
A. D. 1703, in the 71ſt year of his age."

"Here lies interred the body of John,
the ſon of John Gamble by Elizabeth his wife,
who departed this life the 4th day of December,
in the year of our Lord 1730,
in the 7th year of his age."

"Here lieth interred the body of Mr. John Gamble, who departed this life the 23d of January,
in the year of our Lord 1734,
in the 53d year of his age."

"Here lieth interred the body of John Gamble, gent.
who departed this life the 28th day of Auguſt,
in the year of our Lord 1746,
and in the 51ſt year of his age."

"Here lieth the remains of John Chamberlain, late of this place,
who departed this life the 9th of October, 1784,
aged 85 years.
He left £50. to the poor of the pariſh."

"Here lieth the body of Nicholas Houghton, who departed this life the 7th of Auguſt, 1696,
in the 73d year of his age."

"Here lieth the body of John Wilbor, who departed this life on the 24th day of January,
in the year of our Lord 1737,
and in the 50th year of his age.
Here alſo lieth the body of Anne,
wife of the abovefaid John Wilbor.
She departed this life July 27, 1758, aged 76."

William Hubbard[12] died about the year 1774, after he had been clerk of the pariſh 52 years.

John Hickling, of Loughborough, by will, gave ten ſhillings yearly to the poor of this pariſh for ever. Bartholomew Hickling, of Loughborough, brother to the afore-named John, gave by will a Bible yearly.

---

[1] "Jacobus de Segrave, ſubdiaconus, præſentatus per Robertum abbatem Garendon, habentem ſpecialem poteſtatem a domino Nicholao de Segrave preſentandi vice ipſius ad eccleſias de ſuo patronatu vacantes, ad eccleſiam de Segrave; que dicebatur vacare per hoc, quòd Reginaldus de Garcy, ultimus rector ejuſdem, in epiſcopatum agentem dicitur aſſumptus, factâ prius inquiſitione per S. archidiaconum Leyceſtrie, ad dictam eccleſiam eſt admiſſus, 7 id' Mart', Pont' 17." Reg. Graveſend.

[2] See vol. II. p. 111.

[3] William Curteys, rector of Segrave, was inſtituted to the rectory of Bradford Peverel in Dorſetſhire, May 29, 1384; which he exchanged in September 1384, with John Beſt, rector of Blechyngdon, dioceſe of Chicheſter. Hutchins, ed. 2. vol. II. p. 142.

[4] Cole's Entries.

[5] George Savage, LL. D. in his will, dated May 24, 1600, and proved Oct. 8, 1602 (in which year he died), ſtyles himſelf "Archdeacon of Glouceſter, and parſon of Segrave, co. Leiceſter;" in the chancel of which church he appointed to be buried, near the body of his wife, though there is no memorial of him there. He held the rectory of Lanthony, co. Glouceſter, 1574. Willis's Cathedrals, vol. II. p. 732.—In one of the modern Regiſters of Segrave is this entry: "G. Segrave ſep. fuerat 16 die Julii, 1602, uti dicitur apud oppidanos, 1736."

[6] Of Trinity College, Oxford; and a benefactor to that college in 1630.

[7] The celebrated Author of the Anatomy of Melancholy; of whom ſee p. 415.

[8] He is noticed by Walker, p. 203, as having been ſequeſtered.

[9] His name occurs in the liſt of Puritan Divines who preſented an Humble Repreſentation to the Houſe of Commons in 1659.

[10] Fellow of St. John's college, Oxford; and archdeacon of Leiceſter. See his epitaph at Leiceſter, vol. I. p. 317.

[11] He married Katharine, daughter of John Heyrick, of Leiceſter, gent. (ſee vol. II. p. 629.) who, after his death, was again married to —— Savage, of Yorkſhire, clerk.

[12] This man, being rather apt to chatter, was once brought before a certain magiſtrate in the neighbourhood, to anſwer to ſome trifling matter laid to his charge. The juſtice, rather vexed at him on ſome account about what had paſſed, in the heat perhaps of paſſion, called Hubbard a raſcal; and told him, "people ſaid he was a conjuror." Whereupon Hubbard replied, "he could not help what people ſaid; for they ſaid things of his worſhip as well as him." "Aye, you raſcal," ſays his worſhip, "what do they ſay of me?" "Sir," ſays Hubbard, "they ſay you are no conjuror!"

ROBERT BURTON, known otherwiſe to ſcholars by the name of Democritus junior, was the ſecond ſon of Ralph Burton, eſq. of Lindley, co. Leiceſter, by Dorothy daughter of William Faunt, eſq. of Foſton, and younger brother to William the Leiceſterſhire Hiſtorian. He was born at Lindley[1] Feb. 8, 1576; educated at the free ſchool of Sutton Coldfield; and admitted, in the long vacation of 1593, a commoner of Brazen-noſe College, where he made a conſiderable progreſs in Logic and Philoſophy. He was elected ſtudent of Chriſt Church in 1599; and, for form's ſake, was put under the tuition of Dr. John Bancroft, afterwards biſhop of Oxford. He took the degree of B. D, 1614; was in that year admitted to the reading of the Sentences; and, 29 Nov. 1616, was preſented, by the dean and chapter of Chriſt Church, to the vicarage of St. Thomas in the Weſt ſuburbs of Oxford (to the pariſhioners whereof he always gave the ſacrament in wafers); which, with the rectory of Segrave, given to him about 1630 by George lord Berkeley, he kept with much ado till his death, which happened at Chriſt Church, Jan. 25, 1639-40.

In 1621, he publiſhed in 4to, "The Anatomy of Melancholy: What it is; with all the kinds, cauſes, ſymptomes, prognoſtickes, and ſeverall cures of it. In three maine partitions; with their ſeverall ſections, members, and ſubſections. Philoſophically, medicinally, hiſtorically, opened and cut up. By Democritus Junior. With a ſatyricall Preface, conducing to the following Diſcourſe. Macrob. Omne meum, nihil meum." This edition was inſcribed, "Honoratiſſimo Domino non minùs virtute ſuâ quàm generis ſplendore, illuſtriſſimo Georgio Berkleio [militi de Balneo[2]] baroni de Berkley, Mowbrey, Segrave, D^{o} de Bruſe & Gour, Domino ſuo multis nominibus obſervando." The concluſion is dated "From my ſtudy in Chriſt Church, Oxon, Dec. 5, 1620." In the Preface he thus apologizes: "It was not my intent to proſtitute my Muſe in Engliſh, or to divulge ſecreta Minervæ, but to have expoſed this more contract in Latin, if I could have got it printed. Any ſcurrile pamphlet is welcome to our mercenary ſtationers in Engliſh; but in Latin they will not deal."—"I have lived," he ſays, "a ſilent, ſedentary, ſolitary, private life, mihi & Muſis, in the Univerſity, as long almoſt as Xenocrates in Athens, ad ſenectam ferè, to learn wiſdom as he did, penned up moſt part in my ſtudy; for, I have been brought up a ſtudent in the moſt flouriſhing college[3] of Europe (auguſtiſſimo collegio); and can brag, with Jovius[4], almoſt, In eâ luce domicilii Vaticani, totius orbis celeberrimi, per 37 annos multa opportunaque didici; for 20 years[5] I have continued (having the uſe of as good libraries as ever he had) a ſcholar; and would be therefore loth, either by living as a drone, to be an unprofitable or unworthy member of ſo learned and noble a ſociety, or to write that which ſhould be any way diſhonourable to ſuch a royal and ample foundation. Something I have done, though by profeſſion a Divine, yet, turbine raptus ingenii, as he ſaid, out of a running wit, an unconſtant, unſettled mind, I had a great deſire (not able to attain to a ſuperficial ſkill in any) to have ſome ſmattering in all, to be aliquis in omnibus, nullus in ſingulis; which Plato commends; out of him Lipſius approves and furthers, 'as fit to be imprinted in all curious wits, not be a ſlave of one ſcience, or dwell altogether in one ſubject, as moſt do; but to rove abroad, centum puer artium; to have an oar in every man's boat; to taſte of every diſh, and to ſip of every cup;' which, ſaith Montaigne, was well performed by Ariſtotle and his learned countryman Adrian Turnebus. This roving humour (though not with like ſucceſs) I have ever had; and, like a ranging ſpaniel that barks at every bird he ſees, leaving his game, I have followed all ſaving that which I ſhould; and may juſtly complain, and truly, Qui ubique eſt, nuſquam eſt (which Geſner did in modeſty), that I have read many books, but to little purpoſe, for want of good method. I have confuſedly tumbled over divers authors in our libraries, with ſmall profit, for want of art, order, memory, judgement. I never travelled but in map or card, in which my unconfined thoughts have freely expatiated, as having ever been eſpecially delighted with the ſtudy of Coſmography. Saturn was lord of my geniture, culminating, &c.; and Mars principal ſignificator of manners, in partile conjunction with mine aſcendant; both fortunate in their houſes, &c. I am not poor, I am not rich; nihil eſt, nihil deeſt; I have little, I want nothing: all my treaſure is in Minerva's tower. Greater preferment[6] as I could never get, ſo am I not in debt for it: I have a competency (laus Deo!) from my noble and munificent patrons, though I ſtill live a collegiate ſtudent, as Democritus in his garden, and lead a monaſtic life, ipſe mihi theatrum, ſequeſtered from the tumults and troubles of the world; &, tanquam in ſpecula poſitus (as he ſaid), in ſome high place above you all, like Stoïcus ſapiens, omnia ſæcula præterita præſentiaque videns uno velut intuitu, I hear and ſee what is done abroad; how others run, ride, turmoil, and macerate themſelves in court and country; far from thoſe wrangling law-ſuits, aulæ vanitatem, fori ambitionem, ridere mecum ſoleo. I laugh at all, only ſecure leſt my ſuits go amiſs, my ſhips periſh, corn and cattle miſcarry, trade decay: I have no wife nor children, good or bad, to provide for. A mere ſpectator of other men's fortunes and adventures, and how they act their parts, which methinks are diverſely preſented unto me, as from a common theatre or ſcene. I hear new news every day, and thoſe ordinary rumors of war, plagues, fires, and inundations, thefts, murders, maſſacres, meteors, comets, ſpectres, prodigies, apparitions, of towns taken, cities beſieged, in France, Germany, Turkey, Perſia, Poland, &c. daily muſters and preparations, and ſuch like, which theſe tempeſtuous times afford, battles fought, ſo many men ſlain, monomachies, ſhipwrecks, piracies, ſea-fights, peace, leagues, ſtratagems, and freſh alarms. A vaſt confuſion of vows, wiſhes, actions, edicts, petitions, law-ſuits, pleas, laws, proclamations, complaints, grievances, are daily brought to our ears. New books every day, pamphlets, currantoes, ſtories, whole catalogues of volumes of all ſorts, new paradoxes, opinions, ſchiſms, hereſies, controverſies in philoſophy, religion, &c. Now come tidings of weddings, maſkings, mummeries, entertainments, jubilies, embaſſies, tilts and tournaments, trophies, triumphs, revels, ſports, plays. Then again, as in a new-ſhifted ſcene, treaſons, cheating tricks, robberies, enormous villainies in all kinds, funerals, burials, deaths of princes, new diſcoveries, expeditions; now comical, then tragical matters. To-day we hear of new lords and officers created, to-morrow of ſome great men depoſed, and then again of freſh honours conferred; one is let looſe, another impriſoned; one purchaſeth, another breaketh; he thrives, his neighbour turns bankrupt; now plenty, then again dearth and famine; one runs, another rides, wrangles, laughs, weeps, &c. Thus I daily hear, and ſuch like, both private and public news, amidſt the gallantry and miſery of the world; jollity, pride, perplexities, and cares, ſimplicity and villainy; ſubtlety, knavery, candour, and integrity, mutually mixed and offering themſelves, I rub on privus privatus; as I have ſtill lived, ſo I now continue, ſtatu quo priùs, left to a ſolitary life, and mine own domeſtic diſcontents; ſaving that ſometimes, nè quid mentiar, as Diogenes went into the city, and Democritus to the haven, to ſee faſhions, I did, for my recreation, now and then walk abroad, look into the world, and could not chooſe but make ſome little obſervation, non tam ſagax obſervator, ac ſimplex recitator, not as they did, to ſcoff or laugh at all, but with a mixed paſſion:

---

[1] There is a tradition at Falde, that he was born at that village; and the houſe is ſhewn to travellers; but he ſays himſelf that he was born at Lindley; and that the houſe at Falde, the antient patrimony of the family, was his elder brother William's. At the Heraldic Viſitation in 1619, the father reſided at Lindley, and William Burton at Falde.

[2] Theſe three words were added after the firſt edition.

[3] Chriſt Church in Oxford.

[4] Keeper of our college library, lately revived by Otho Nicholſon, eſq.; of whom ſee Gutch's Hiſtory and Antiquities of Colleges and Halls in Oxford, p. 458.

[5] This, in ſubſequent editions, was altered to "30 years."

[6] In the firſt edition this ſtood, "Preferment I could never get, although my friends prudence, care, alacrity, and bounty, was never wanting to do me good," &c.

Bilem ſæpè, jocum veſtri movère tumultus.

I did ſometime laugh and ſcoff with Lucian, and ſatirically tax with Menippus, lament with Heraclitus; ſometimes again I was petulanti ſplene chachinno, and then urere bilis jecur, I was much moved to ſee that abuſe which I could not amend.—Concerning myſelf I can peradventure affirm, with Marius in Salluſt, 'that what others hear or read of I felt, and practiſed myſelf:' they get their knowledge by books, I mine by melancholy. Experto crede Roberto. Something I can ſpeak out of experience.—To do myſelf good, I turned over ſuch phyſicians as our libraries would afford, or my private friends[1] impart. I am aquæ potor, drink no wine[2] at all, which ſo much improves our modern wits; a looſe, plain writer; and as free, as looſe.—There be many other ſubjects, I do eaſily grant, both in humanity and divinity, fit to be treated of; of which had I written ad oſtentationem only, to ſhew myſelf, I ſhould have rather choſen, and in which as I have been more converſant, I could have more willingly luxuriated, and better ſatisfied myſelf and others; but that at this time I was fatally driven upon this rock of Melancholy, and carried away by this bye-ſtream, which, as a rillet, is deducted from the main channel of my ſtudies, in which I have pleaſed and buſied myſelf at idle hours, as a ſubject moſt neceſſary and commodious. Not that I prefer it before Divinity, which I do acknowledge to be the queen of profeſſions, and to which all the reſt are as handmaids; but that in Divinity I ſaw no ſuch great need; for, had I written, poſitively there be ſo many books in that kind, ſo many commentators, treatiſes, pamphlets, expoſitions, ſermons, that whole teams of oxen cannot draw them; and, had I been as forward and ambitious as ſome others, I might have haply printed a ſermon at Paul's Croſs, a ſermon in St. Mary's in Oxford, a ſermon in Chriſt Church, or a ſermon before the right honourable, right reverend, a ſermon before the right worſhipful, a ſermon in Latin, in Engliſh, a ſermon with a name, a ſermon without, a ſermon, a ſermon, &c.: but I have been ever as deſirous to ſuppreſs my labours in this kind, as others have been to preſs and publiſh theirs."

On the ſubject of books he ſays, "How much are all we bound, that are ſcholars, to thoſe munificent Ptolomies, bountiful Mæcenaſes, heroical patrons, divine ſpirits—qui nobis hæc otia fecerunt, namque erit ille mihi ſemper Deus—that have provided for us ſo many well-furniſhed libraries, as well in our public academies in moſt cities, as in our private colleges. How ſhall I remember Sir Thomas Bodley[3] amongſt the reſt, Otho Nicholſon[4], and the right reverend John Williams lord biſhop of Lincoln, (with many other pious acts,) who, beſides that at St. John's college in Cambridge, that in Weſtminſter, is in fieri with a library at Lincoln (a noble precedent for all corporate towns and cities to imitate!); Oh! quàm te memorem, vir illuſtriſſime, quibus elogiis?"

He ſtrongly recommends an attention to repairing canals; and the rivers Wye, Trent, Ouſe, Thamiſis at Oxford (the defect of which we feel in the mean time), as the river of Lee from Ware to London. Biſhop Atwater of old, or, as ſome will, Henry I. made a channel from Trent to Lincoln navigable; which now, ſaith Mr. Camden, is decayed; and much mention is made of anchors, and ſuch like monuments, found about old Verulam; good ſhips have formerly come to Exeter, and many ſuch places, whoſe channels, havens, ports, are now barred and rejected. We contemn this benefit of carriage by waters; and are therefore compelled in the inner parts of this iſland, becauſe portage is ſo dear, to eat up our commodities ourſelves, and live like ſo many boars in a ſty, for want of vent and utterance.

He has an expreſs chapter on "Simples purging Melancholy," in which ſenna, aloes, and that moſt renowned plant hellebore, have a diſtinguiſhed place. He recommends the planting of olives[5], mulberries[6], vines, and firs; mentions cherries, artichokes, potatoes, and "divine, rare, ſuperexcellent tobacco, a ſovereign remedy for all diſeaſes," as proſpering well in our gardens in his days; and praiſes the famous garden then in fieri at Oxford at the coſt and charges of the earl of Danby."—"Tobacco," he elſewhere ſays, "goes far beyond all the panaceas, potable gold, and philoſophers' ſtones, a ſovereign remedy to all diſeaſes: a good vomit, I confeſs, a virtuous herb, if it be well qualified, opportunely taken, and medicinally uſed; but, as it is commonly abuſed by moſt men, which take it as tinkers do ale, 'tis a plague, a miſchief, a violent purger of goods, lands, health, helliſh, deviliſh, and damned Tobacco, the ruin and overthrow of body and ſoul."

In "A Digreſſion on Air," he obſerves, "In all particular provinces we ſee it confirmed by experience, as the air is, ſo are the inhabitants; dull, heavy, witty, ſubtle, neat, cleanly, clowniſh, ſick, and ſound. In Perigort in France the air is ſubtle, healthful, ſeldom any plague or contagious diſeaſe, but hilly and barren; the men ſound, nimble, and luſty: but in ſome parts of Quienne, full of moors and marſhes, the people dull, heavy, and ſubject to many infirmities. Who ſees not a great difference betwixt Surrey, Suſſex, and Romney Marſh, the Woulds in Lincolnſhire, and the Fens? He, therefore, that loves his health, if his ability will give him leave, muſt often ſhift places, and make choice of ſuch as are wholeſome, pleaſant, and convenient. There is nothing better than change of air in this malady, and generally, for health, to wander up and down, as thoſe Tartari Zamolhenſes, that live in hordes, and take opportunity of times, places, ſeaſons. The kings of Perſia had their ſummer and winter houſes; in winter at Sardis, in ſummer at Suſa; now at Perſepolis, then at Paſargada. Cyrus lived ſeven cold months at Babylon, three at Suſa, two at Ecbatana, ſaith Xenophon; and had by that means a perpetual ſpring. The Great Turk ſojourns ſometimes at Conſtantinople, ſometimes at Adrianople, &c. The kings of Spain move their Eſcurial in heat of ſummer; Madrid for an wholeſome ſeat, Villadolid a pleaſant ſite, &c.; variety of ſeceſſus, as all princes and great men have; and their ſeveral progreſſes to this purpoſe. Lucullus the Roman had his houſe at Rome, at Baiæ, &c. When Cnæus Pompeius, Marcus Cicero, (ſaith Plutarch,) and many noblemen, in the ſummer came to ſee him; at ſupper Pompeius jeſted with him, that it was an elegant and pleaſant village, full of windows, galleries, and all offices fit for a ſummer-houſe, but, in his judgement, very unfit for winter. Lucullus made anſwer, that the lord of the houſe had wit like a crane, that changeth her country with the ſeaſon; he had other houſes furniſhed and built for that purpoſe, all out as commodious as this. So Tully had his Tuſculane, Plinius his Lauretan village, &c.; every gentleman of any faſhion in our times hath the like. The biſhop of Exeter[7] had 14 ſeveral houſes, all furniſhed, in times paſt. In Italy, though they bide in cities in winter (which is more gentleman-like), all the ſummer they come abroad to their country-houſes, to recreate themſelves. Our gentry in England live moſt part in the country (except it be ſome few caſtles), building ſtill in bottoms, ſaith Jovius[8], or near woods, corona arborum virentium; you ſhall know a village by a tuft of trees at or about it, to avoid thoſe ſtrong winds wherewith the iſland is infeſted, and cold winter blaſts. Some diſcommend moated houſes as unwholeſome: ſo Camden ſaith of Ewelme[9], that it was therefore unfrequented, ob ſtagni vicini halitus, and all ſuch places as be near lakes or rivers. But I am of opinion that theſe inconveniences will be mitigated, or eaſily corrected by good fires, as Leander Albertus reports of Venice, that graveolentia and fog of the moors are ſufficiently qualified by thoſe innumerable ſmokes. Nay more, Thomas Philol. Ravennas, a great phyſician, contends that the Venetians are generally longer-lived than any city in Europe, and live many of them 120 years. But it is not water ſimply that ſo much offends, as the ſlime and noiſome ſmells that accompany ſuch overflowed places, which is but at ſome few ſeaſons after a flood, and is ſufficiently recompenſed with ſweet ſmells and aſpects in ſummer, Ver pinget vario gemmantia prata colore, and many other commodities of pleaſure and profit; or elſe may be corrected by the ſite, if it be ſomewhat remote from the water, as Lindley, Orton ſuper Montem[1], Drayton[2], or, a little more elevated, though nearer, as Caucut[3], as Amington[4], Poleſworth[5], Weddington[6], (to inſiſt in ſuch places beſt to me known, upon the river of Anker in Warwickſhire, Swarkſton[7] and Drakelow upon Trent[8]); or, howſoever they be unſeaſonable in winter, or at ſome times, they have their good uſe in ſummer. If ſo be that their means be ſo ſlender as they may not admit of any ſuch variety, but muſt determine once for all, and make one houſe ſerve for each ſeaſon, I know no men that have given better rules in this behalf, than our huſbandry writers. Cato and Columella preſcribe a good houſe to ſtand by a navigable river, good highways, near ſome city, and in a good ſoil; but that is more for commodity than health. The beſt ſoil commonly yields the worſt air: a dry ſandy plot is the fitteſt to build upon, and ſuch as is rather hilly than plane, full of downs, a Cotſwold country, as being moſt commodious for hawking, hunting, wood, waters, and all manner of pleaſures. Perigort in France is barren, yet, by reaſon of the excellency of the air, and ſuch pleaſures that it affords, much inhabited by the nobility; as are Noremberg in Germany, Toledo in Spain. Our countryman Tuſſer will tell us ſo much, that the field one is for profit, the woodland for pleaſure and health; the one commonly a deep clay, therefore noiſome in winter, and ſubject to bad highways; the other a dry ſand. Proviſion may be had elſewhere, and our towns are generally bigger in the woodland than the field one, more frequent and populous, and gentlemen more delight to dwell in ſuch places. Sutton Coldfield in Warwickſhire (where I was once a grammar ſcholar) may be a ſufficient witneſs, which ſtands, as Camden notes, loco ingrato & ſterili, but in an excellent air, and full of all manner of pleaſures. Wadley[9] in Berkſhire is ſituate in a vale, though not ſo fertile a ſoil as ſome vales afford, yet a moſt commodious ſite, wholeſome, in a delicious air, a rich and pleaſant ſeat. So Segrave in Leiceſterſhire [which town I am now bound to remember; for, I am now incumbent of that rectory; preſented thereto by my right honourable patron the Lord Berkeley[10];] is ſited in a champaign, at the edge of the Woulds, and more barren than the villages about it; yet no place likely yields a bettet air. And that fair houſe, Wollerton[11] in Nottinghamſhire, is much to be commended, though the tract be ſandy and barren about it, for making choice of ſuch a place. Conſtantine[12] praiſeth mountains, hilly, ſteep places, above the reſt by the ſea-ſide, and ſuch as look toward the North upon ſome great river; as Formack[13] in Derbyſhire on the Trent, environed with hills, open only to the North, like Mount Edgemond in Cornwall, which Mr. Carew[14] ſo much admires for an excellent ſeat; ſuch as is the general ſite of Bohemia; ſerenat Boreas, the North wind clarifies. But near lakes or marſhes, in holes, obſcure places, or to the South and Weſt, he utterly diſproves: thoſe winds are unwholeſome, putrifying, and make men ſubject to diſeaſes. The beſt building for health, according to him, is in high places, and in an excellent proſpect, like that of Cuddeſdon in Oxfordſhire (which place I muſt, honoris ergò, mention) is lately and fairly built[15] in a good air, good proſpect, good ſoil, both for profit and pleaſure, not ſo eaſily to be matched."—And, ſpeaking of extenſive proſpects, he ſays, "With us thoſe of the beſt note are, Glaſſonbury tower; Bever caſtle; Redway grange; Walſby in Lincolnſhire, where I received a real kindneſs by the munificence of the right honourable my noble lady and patroneſs, the lady Frances counteſs dowager of Exeter: And two amongſt the reſt, which I may not omit for vicinity's ſake, Oldbury in the confines of Warwickſhire, where I have often looked about me with great delight; at the foot of which hill I was born;" [in the margin is added, "at Lindley in Leiceſterſhire, the poſſeſſion and dwelling-place of Ralph Burton, eſq. my late-deceaſed father;" who died March 17, 1619-20;] "and Hanbury in Staffordſhire, contiguous to which is Falde, a pleaſant village, and an antient patrimony belonging to our family, now in the poſſeſſion of my elder brother William Burton, eſq."—Dr. Plot, conſidering this article of Robert Burton, calls him "the obſerving Mr. Burton;" and quotes him twice[16].

---

[1] Mr. John Ray, our Protobib. Oxon. Mr. Hopper, Mr. Guthridge, &c.—Thomas Hopper was fellow of New College, practiſed phyſic in Oxford, left 500 books to his college library, and died in 1623. Gutch, ubi ſupra, p. 205.

[2] This he elſewhere particularly repeats.

[3] Founder of our public library in Oxon.

[4] Ours in Chriſt Church, Oxon.

[5] Cardan, he ſays, exhorts Edward VI to plant olives, and is fully perſuaded they would proſper in this iſland.

[6] "Mulberry-leaves in the plains of Granada, he ſays, yield 30,000 crowns a year to the king of Spain's coffers."

[7] Godwin, vita Jo. Voyſye, al. Harman. He was biſhop of Exeter in 1520; reſigned in 1549: and in 1553 was reſtored.

[8] Deſcript. Brit.

[9] In Oxfordſhire.

In the chapter intituled, "Exerciſe rectified both of Body and Mind," he ſays: "But the moſt pleaſing of all outward paſtimes is deambulatio per amœna loca, to make a pretty progreſs, a merry journey now and then with ſome good companions, to viſit friends, to ſee cities, caſtles, towns;

Viſere ſæpè amnes nitidos, peramœnaque Tempe;
Et placidas ſummis ſectari in montibus auras;

—to walk amongſt orchards, gardens, bowers, and artificial wilderneſſes, green thickets, arches, groves, rillets, fountains, and ſuch like pleaſant places, like that Antiochean Daphne, brooks, pools, fiſh-ponds, betwixt wood and water, in a fair meadow, by a riverſide, to diſport in ſome pleaſant plain park, to run up a ſteep hill, or ſit in a ſhady ſeat, muſt needs be a delectable recreation. To take a boat in a pleaſant evening, and with muſic to row upon the waters. To ſee ſome pageant or ſight go by, as at coronations, weddings, and ſuch like ſolemnities; to ſee an embaſſador or a prince met, received, entertained, with maſks, ſhews, fireworks, &c. The country has its recreations, May-games, feaſts, wakes, and merry meetings. All ſeaſons, almoſt all places, have their ſeveral paſtimes; ſome in ſummer, ſome in winter; ſome abroad, ſome within. The ordinary recreations which we have in winter, and in moſt ſolitary times buſy our minds with, are cards, tables, and dice, ſhovel-board, cheſſe-play, the philoſophers game, ſmall trunks, ſhuttle cock, billiards, muſic, maſques, ſinging, dancing, ulegames, frolicks, jeſts, riddles, catches, purpoſes, queſtions and commands, merry tales of errant knights, queens, lovers, lords, ladies, giants, dwarfs, thieves, cheaters, witches, fairies, goblins, friers, &c. Dancing, maſquing, mumming, ſtage-plays, howſoever they be heavily cenſured by ſome ſevere Catos, yet, if opportunely and ſoberly uſed, may juſtly be approved; to read, walk, and ſee maps and pictures, ſtatues, old coins of ſeveral ſorts, in a fair gallery, artificial works, &c. Whoſoever he is, therefore, that is overrun with ſolitarineſs, or carried away with a pleaſing Melancholy and vain conceits, I can preſcribe him no better than this of ſtudy, to compoſe himſelf to the learning of ſome art or ſcience. Provided always that his malady proceed not from overmuch ſtudy; for, in ſuch caſes, he adds fuel to the fire. Let him take heed he do not overſtretch his wits, and make a ſkeleton of himſelf; or ſuch inamoratoes as read nothing but play-books, idle poems, jeſts, "Amadis de Gaul," the "Knight of the Sun," the "Seven Champions," "Palmerio de Oliva," "Huon of Bourdeaux," &c.: ſuch many times prove in the end as mad as Don Quixote. Study is only preſcribed to thoſe that are otherwiſe idle, troubled in mind, or carried headlong with vain thoughts and imaginations, to diſtract their cogitations (although variety of ſtudy, or ſome ſerious ſubject, would do the former no harm), and divert their continual meditations another way. Nothing in this caſe better than ſtudy. Let them learn ſomething without book, tranſcribe, tranſlate, &c. Read the Scriptures; which Hyperius holds available of itſelf: the mind is erected thereby from all worldly cares, and hath much quiet and tranquillity; for, it is the beſt nepenthe, ſureſt cordial, ſweeteſt alterative, preſenteſt diverter; for neither, as Chryſoſtome well adds, "thoſe boughs and leaves of trees, which are plaſhed for cattle to ſtand under in the heat of the day in ſummer, ſo much refreſh them with their acceptable ſhade, as the reading of the Scripture doth recreate and comfort a diſtreſſed ſoul in ſorrow and affliction."—"For women; inſtead of laborious ſtudies, they have curious needle-works, cut-works, ſpinning, bone-lace, and many pretty devices of their own making, to adorn their houſes, cuſhions, carpets, chairs, ſtools, confections, diſtillations, &c. which they ſhew to ſtrangers. This they have to buſy themſelves about; houſhold offices, &c.; neat gardens full of exotic, verſicolour (diverſly varied), ſweet-ſmelling, flowers and plants in all kinds, which they are moſt ambitious to get, curious to preſerve and keep, proud to poſſeſs, and much many times brag of. Their merry meetings and frequent viſitations, mutual invitations in good towns, I voluntarily omit; which are ſo much in uſe; goſſiping among the meaner ſort, &c. Old folks have their beads; an excellent invention to keep them from idleneſs that are by nature melancholy and paſt all affairs, to ſay ſo many Pater-noſters, Ave Maries, Creeds, if it were not profane and ſuperſtitious. In a word, body and mind muſt be exerciſed, not one, but both, and that in a mediocrity: otherwiſe, it will be a great inconvenience. If the body be over-tired, it tires the mind."—He winds up his ſyſtem of ſtudious recreation with a recommendation of the ſciences of aſtronomy, geography, and topography, botany, &c.; "to ſee a well-cut herbal, herbs, trees, flowers, plants, expreſſed in their proper colours to the life," &c.

---

[1] The poſſeſſion of Robert Bradſhaw, eſq.

[2] The ſeat of George Purefoy, eſq.

[3] Caldecote, then the poſſeſſion of William Purefoy, eſq. afterwards ſir Nathan Wrighte's, and now (1800) Mr. Saliſbury's.

[4] The ſeat of ſir John Reppington, knt.

[5] Sir Henry Goodiere's, lately deceaſed.

[6] The dwelling-houſe of Humphrey Adderley, eſq.

[7] Sir John Harpur's, lately deceaſed.

[8] Sir George Greſeley's, knt.

[9] The ſeat of George Purefoy, eſq.

[10] George lord Berkeley, who was of Chriſt Church, and probably had been under the tuition of Mr. Burton, preſented him to the rectory of Segrave after 1628, in which year the third edition of the Anatomy was publiſhed.

[11] Sir Francis Willoughby's.

[12] Lib. ii. cap. de Agriculturâ.

[13] The dwelling of ſir Thomas Burdet, knight and baronet.

[14] In his Survey of Cornwall, book 2.

[15] By John Bancroft, D.D. my quondam tutor in Chriſt Church, Oxford; now the right reverend lord biſhop of Oxford; who built this houſe for himſelf and his ſucceſſors.

[16] Staffordſhire, p. 39.

A third edition, 1628, "corrected and augmented by the Author," has this motto: "Omne tulit punctum qui miſcuit utile dulci." The frontiſpiece, engraved by C. Le Blond, gives an indifferent likeneſs of the Author; and the ſides of it are illuſtrated with expreſſive figures of the effects of Melancholy from Love, Hypocondriaſm, Superſtition, and Madneſs. At top Democritus is emblematically repreſented; and the corners are filled with emblems of Jealouſy and Solitude, and the herbs Borage and Hellebore.

In a preface to the fourth [1] edition, 1632, he ſays, "As I have been honoured by ſome worthy men, ſo have I been vilified by others. The firſt, ſecond, and third editions were ſuddenly gone, eagerly read, and, as I have ſaid, not ſo much approved by ſome, as ſcornfully rejected by others."

A fifth edition appeared in 1638; Mr. Burton died in 1639; and in 1652 a ſixth edition was publiſhed, with this advertiſement from his bookſeller, Henry Cripps [2]: "Be pleaſed to know (courteous Reader) that, ſince the laſt impreſſion of this book, the ingenious Author of it is deceaſed; leaving a copy of it exactly corrected, with ſeveral conſiderable additions by his own hand. This copy he committed to my care and cuſtody, with directions to have thoſe additions in the next edition; which, in order to his command, and the public good, is faithfully performed in this laſt impreſſion. H. C."—In the preface to this edition the Author ſays, "One main fault is, I have not reviſed the copy, and amended the ſtyle, which now flows remiſſly, as it was at firſt conceived; but my leiſure would not permit: I confeſs it is neither as I would, nor as it ſhould be.

"Cùm relego, ſcripſiſſe pudet; quia plurima cerno, Me quoque quæ fuerant judice digna lini [3]."
(When I peruſe this tract which I have writ,
I am abaſh'd, and much I hold unfit.)

—Et quod graviſſimum, in the matter itſelf, many things I diſallow at this preſent; which when I writ, non eadem eſt ætas, non mens. I would willingly retract much, &c.; but it is too late: I can only crave pardon for what is amiſs. The laſt and greateſt exception is, that I, being a Divine, have meddled with Phyſic [4]. Some things are here altered, expunged in this ſixth edition, others amended, much added, becauſe many good authors in all kinds are come to my hands ſince. But I am now reſolved never to put this treatiſe out again. Nè quid nimis: I will not hereafter add, alter, or retract what I have done."

Mr. William Burton, in his Hiſtory of Leiceſterſhire, under Segrave, ſays, "The late rector of this church was my brother Robert Burton, bachelor of divinity, and author of The Anatomy of Melancholy; who died in Chriſt Church, in Oxford, 25 Jan. 1639; having almoſt paſſed his climacterical year of 63, wanting but 14 days; and is buried in the cathedral church, cloſe to the monument of St. Frideſwide;" and, under Foſton, concludes his account of Anthony Faunt by obſerving, that "he fell into ſo great a paſſion of Melancholy, that within a ſhort time after he died, in the year 1588. What the force, power, and effect of melancholy are, I refer the reader to the Anatomy of Melancholy, penned by my brother."

Wood obſerves, "Mr. Burton was an exact mathematician, a curious calculator of Nativities, a general-read ſcholar, a thorough-paced philologiſt, and one that underſtood the ſurveying of lands well. As he was by many accounted a ſevere ſtudent, a devourer of Authors, a melancholy and humourous perſon; ſo by others, who knew him well, a perſon of great honeſty, plain dealing, and charity. I have heard ſome of the Antients of Chriſt Church often ſay, that his company was very merry, facile, and juvenile; and no man in his time did ſurpaſs him, for his ready and dextrous interlarding his common diſcourſe with verſes from the Poets, or ſentences from the Claſſical Authors; which, being then all the faſhion in the Univerſity, made his company more acceptable. He died, in his chamber in Chriſt Church, at or very near that time which he had ſome years before predicted from the calculation of his own nativity: which being exact, the ſtudents did not forbear to whiſper among themſelves, that, rather than there ſhould be a miſtake in the calculation, he ſent up his ſoul to Heaven through a ſlip about his neck. His body was afterwards with due ſolemnity buried, near that of Dr. Robert Wilſon, in the North aile which joins next to the choir of the cathedral of Chriſt Church, Jan. 27, 1639. Over his grave was ſoon after erected a comely monument on the upper pillar of the ſaid aile, with his effigies, in gown, ruff, and beard, painted to the life; as engraved in Plate LXII. At top, Azure, on a bend Or between three talbots' heads Or, a creſcent Gules; and under the buſt this inſcription, made by himſelf; all put up by the care of his brother William:

"PAVCIS NOTVS, PAVCIORIBVS IGNOTVS,
HIC IACET
DEMOCRITVS IVNIOR;
CVI VITAM DEDIT, ET MORTEM [5],
MELANCHOLIA.
OBIIT VIII ID. [6] IAN. A. C. MDCXXXIX."

On the left ſide is a celeſtial globe; and on the right the calculation of his nativity, as given in the Plate.

---

[1] I have not been able to meet with the ſecond edition, 1624, (from which Mr. T. Warton quoted), nor with thoſe of 1632, 1634, or 1638. That of 1621 has been lent me by Mr. Gilchriſt of Stamford; that of 1628 is in the Bodleian Library; thoſe of 1652 and 1660 are in the Britiſh Muſeum; and 1676 at Sion College.

[2] The firſt edition was printed, for Henry Cripps, by John Lichfield and James Short.

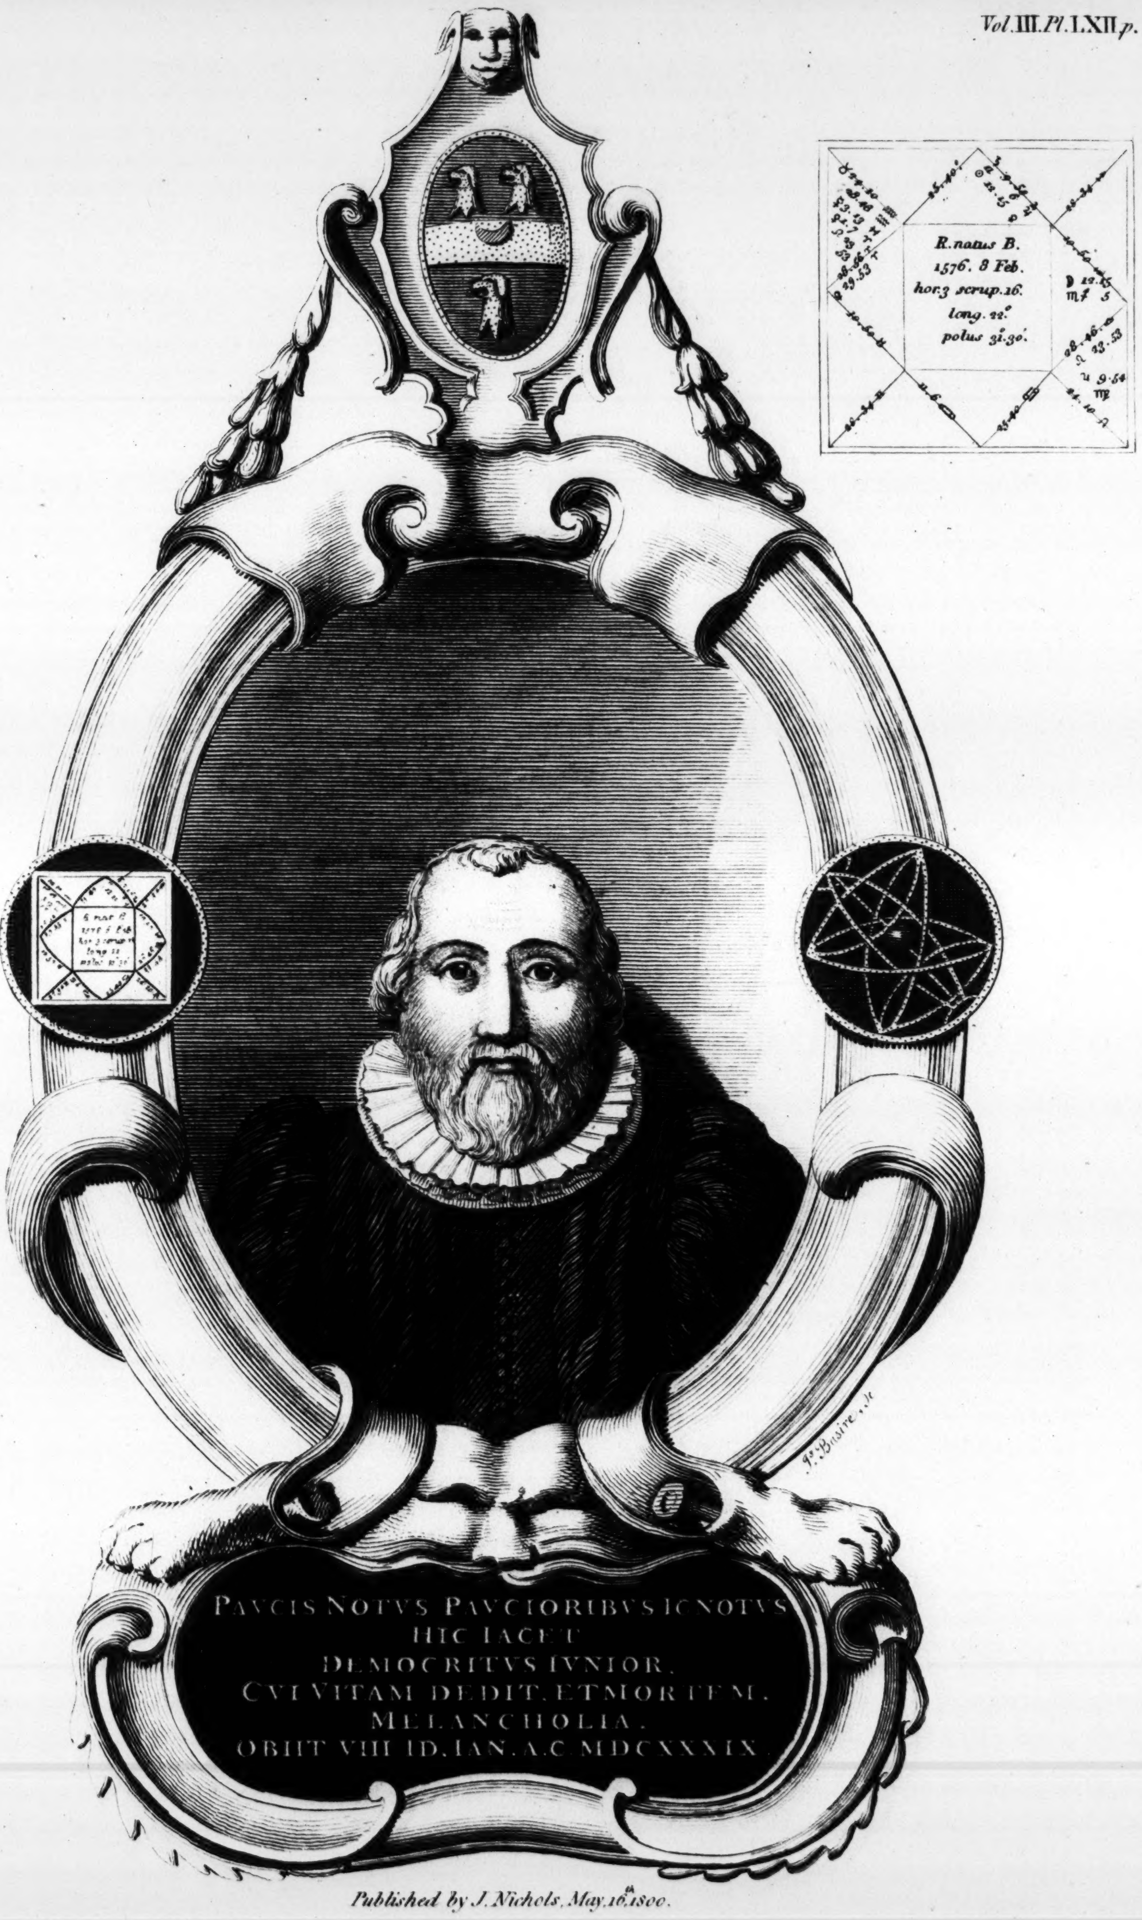
[3] Ovid. de Pont. Eleg. I. 6.

[4] He elſewhere calls himſelf "by profeſſion a Divine, by inclination a Phyſician; having taken ſome pains in the theory of Phyſic, not with an intent to practiſe, but to ſatisfy himſelf."

[5] It has been ſuggeſted that the expreſſion in this line ſeems to favour Wood's ſuppoſition.

[6] So the monument; but it ſhould certainly have been "VIII cal. Jan." which anſwers to Jan. 25.

Mr.



PAVCIS NOTVS PAVCIORIBVS IGNOTVS
HIC IACET
DEMOCRITVS IVNIOR,
CVI VITAM DEDIT ET MORTEM
MELANCHOLIA.
OBIIT VIII ID. IAN. A.C. MDCXXXIX.
Jo. Basire sc.
R. natus B.
1576. 8 Feb.
hor. 3 scrup. 16.
long. 22°
polus 51. 30.

Published by J. Nichols, May 16th 1800.

Mr. Burton left behind him a very choice library of books; many of which he bequeathed to the library of Bodley; and in the titles of ſeveral added to his ſurname Lindliacus Leyceſtrenſis.

Dr. Accepted Frewen, Vice-Chancellor of Oxford, in a letter to Abp. Laud, ſays, "On Saturday Jan. 25, died Mr. Robert Burton of Chriſt Church, who hath given £5. per annum for ever to the Univerſity Library, beſides a conſiderable number of books to be taken out of his ſtudy; and, becauſe a benefactor[1] to the Univerſity, I was preſent at his funeral[2]."

In the Catalogue of Benefactors to the Bodleian Library, vol. I. p. 538, is this entry: "1641, Robertus Burton, SS. Theologiæ baccalaureus, & olim Ædis Chriſti alumnus, moriens, legavit centum libras; quibus perquiſitus eſt annuus redditus quinque librarum ad cremendum libros in uſum bibliothecæ in perpetuum. Item ex libris ſuis quicquid in Bodleïanâ noſtrâ deſiderabatur in his."—Then follows a liſt of them, occupying eight folio pages; and at the end, "Porrò comœdiarum, tragœdiarum, & ſchediſmatum, idiomate vernaculo, aliquot centurias, quas propter multitudinem non adjicimus."

"Being ſo curious and diligent in collecting ludicrous and merry little pieces, it is no wonder that he procured likewiſe Dr. Borde's 'Right pleaſant and merry hiſtory of the Mylner of Abington.' As I remember, 'twas his copy that Mr. Wood made uſe of. I have ſeen it, if I am not much miſtaken, with Thomas Newton's notes. It is probable Dr. Borde took the hint of this merry piece from Chaucer's Reve's Tale, with which it ought by ſuch as have opportunity to be compared, to ſee whether it be not, in great meaſure, the ſame. If they ſhould prove ſo, it will then perhaps be deemed that there is a miſtake in Abington for Trumpington. It is certain that, in the ſaid Reve's Tale, we have an account of the Mylner of Trumpington, Iris his wife, and fair daughter, and two poor ſcholars of Cambridge. But if, after all, Abington, and not Trumpington, be the true reading in Borde; at the ſame time, methinks, for two poor ſcholars of Cambridge ſhould be read two poor ſcholars of Oxford, the ſituation of Oxford being more agreeable to the mill of Abington than Cambridge[3]."

Burton's book (as he ſays himſelf) is for the greateſt part a cento, though a very ingenious one. The quotations, which abound in every page, are pertinent; but, if the author had made freer uſe of his invention, and leſs of his Common-place book, his work, perhaps, would have been more valuable. However, he generally avoids the affected language, and ridiculous metaphors, ſo common in that age.

Wood ſays, "Mr. Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy was printed ſeveral times to the great profit of the bookſeller, who got an eſtate by it;" and adds, "it is a book ſo full of variety of reading, that gentlemen who have loſt their time, and are put to a puſh for invention, may furniſh themſelves with matter for common or ſcholaſtical diſcourſe and writing. Several Authors have unmercifully ſtolen matter from the ſaid book without any acknowledgement, particularly one William Greenwood, in his book intituled, "A Deſcription of the Paſſion of Love, 1657," 8vo; who, as others of the like humours do, ſometimes takes his quotations without the leaſt mention of Democritus junior."

Biſhop Kennett, in his "Regiſter and Chronicle," p. 320, ſays, "This author is ſaid to have laboured long in the writing of this book, to ſuppreſs his own melancholy, and yet did but improve it; and ſome readers have found the ſame effect. In an interval of vapours, he would be extremely pleaſant, and raiſe laughter in any company; yet I have heard that nothing elſe could make him laugh, but going down to the bridge-foot in Oxford, and hearing the bargemen ſcold and ſtorm and ſwear at one another, at which he would ſet his hands to his ſides, and laugh moſt profuſely; yet in his college and chamber ſo mute and mopiſh, that he was ſuſpected to be felo de ſe."

Archbiſhop Herring, in his 42d letter to Mr. Duncombe, refers to a paſſage in this work, with the following eulogium: "I mention the author to you as the pleaſanteſt, the moſt learned, and the moſt full of ſterling ſenſe. The wits of queen Anne's reign, and the beginning of George the Firſt's, were not a little beholden to him."

"Burton's Anatomy," Dr. Johnſon ſaid, "was the only book that ever took him out of bed two hours ſooner than he wiſhed to riſe[4]."—Again, "Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy is a valuable book. It is, perhaps, overloaded with quotations. But there is great ſpirit and great power in what Burton ſays, when he writes from his own mind[5]."

Dr. Feriar, in "Memoirs of the Literary and Philoſophical Society of Mancheſter, 1793," and in "Illuſtrations of Sterne, 1799," has detected in this book the ſource of many of Sterne's moſt admired writings. And Mr. Thomas Warton, when commenting on Milton's ſmaller poems, p. 93, obſerves, at the end of Il Penſeroſo, "It will be no detraction from the powers of Milton's original genius and invention, to remark, that he ſeems to have borrowed the ſubject of L'Allegro and Il Penſeroſo, together with ſome particular thoughts, expreſſions, and rhymes, more eſpecially the idea of a contraſt between theſe two diſpoſitions, from a forgotten poem prefixed to the firſt edition of Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy." As to the very elaborate work to which theſe viſionary verſes are no unſuitable introduction, the writer's variety of learning, his quotations from ſcarce and curious books, his pedantry ſparkling with rude wit and ſhapeleſs elegance, miſcellaneous matter, intermixture of agreeable tales and illuſtrations, and perhaps, above all, the ſingularities of his feelings cloathed in an uncommon quaintneſs of ſtyle, have contributed to render it, even to modern readers, a valuable repoſitory of amuſement and information." On Burton's work and Milton's imitations Mr. Warton enlarges conſiderably in pp. 93, 94, 95; to which the reader is referred.

In Camden's Inſignia, 1624, are the following lines:

In laudem Aſchami Sylvæ Camdeni, Lond. 1590, Epiſtolis Aſchami præfixa.

Aſchamum habet ille.

"Marmore de Pario ſtatuas ſi ponere poſſem,
Pingere vel vultus, vivoque referre colore;
Ducere ſi poſſem referentes ære figuras,
Sive viros meritos cœlo ſtelliſque beare;
Camdenum ſtatuæ, color, æs, marmorque referrent;" &c.

IN laudem Aſchami Camdenus talia quondam
Scripſit, & in laudes ſic ego (Clare) tuas;
Idque ex ore tuo; verbis & verſibus iiſdem
Te canto, tua quêis Muſa beavit eum.
Dignior & multò es Parium quem marmor honeſtet,
Quem pictor, Muſæ, & quiſque poeta canat,
Sydera quem donent cœleſti ſede, Lycæi
Quem Myſta æternis percolat officiis."

ROB. BURTON, S. T. B. ex Æde Chr.

In "Death Repeal'd by a thankfull Memoriall ſent from Chriſt Church in Oxford, celebrating the noble Deſerts of the Right Honourable Paule late Lord Viſcount Bayning of Sudbury, who changed his earthly honours June the 11, 1638," printed at Oxford, 1638, 4to, is this ſhort poem:

"In Obitum illuſtriſſimi Vicecomitis Bayning.

Quid voveat dulci nutricula majus Alumno,
Quàm bona fortunæ, corporis, atque animi?
En, hæc Heröe hoc ſimul omnia: quid petat ultra?
Quid potius? Cœlum; quod novus hoſpes habet."

ROB. BURTON, of Ch. Ch.

Thus quaintly Engliſhed:

"Can Nurſe chooſe in her ſweet Babe more to find,
Than goods of fortune, body, and of mind?
Lo, here at once all this: what greater bliſs Canſt hope or wiſh? Heaven: why, there he is."

---

[1] He was a contributor to the two painted windows at Chriſt Church. Gutch, p. 463.

[2] See Laud's Chancellorſhip of Oxford, folio, p. 184.

[3] Hearne's Preface to Benedictus Abbas Petroburg. pp. lv. lvi.

[4] Boſwell's Life of Dr. Johnſon, 8vo, vol. I. p. 580.

[5] Ibid. p. 325.

SILEBY,

in antient writings called Sigleſbie, Siglebie, Silby, and Salby, is a pleaſant village on the borders of the Soar; bounded on the Eaſt by Segrave; on the Weſt by Mountſorell; on the North by Barrow upon Soar; and on the South by Coſſington. It is 7 miles diſtant from Leiceſter, and 6 miles South-Eaſt from Loughborough; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote. The extent of the lordſhip from Eaſt to Weſt is a mile and a half; from North to South nearly two miles; and it contains about 2139 acres.

Hugo de Grenteſmainell had thirteen burgeſſes in the town of Leiceſter, who belonged to Sigleſbie [1]; and under him Ernald held, at the ſurvey, eight ploughlands and a half in Siglebi; which, in the reign of Edward the Confeſſor, had been valued at ſixty ſhillings, but were then worth one hundred and two. The land was equal to five ploughs. In the demeſne were three ploughs and five bondmen; and eighteen villans, with four ſocmen and four bordars, had ſix ploughs. There were ſixty acres of meadow, and two mills of thirty ſhillings value [2].

Two ploughlands and two oxgangs of land, and ten acres of meadow, in Seglebi, were parcel of the king's manor of Rodolei [3]; and one ploughland there was parcel of his manor of Barhoo [4].

"Juratores dicunt quod Sileby eſt de terrâ Normannorum, & fuit Ric̃i de Harecourt tempore regis qui nunc eſt [5]; & Gilbertus de Segrave eam tenet de dono dñi regis; & valet per annum xx libras. Item Syleby & Burſtel ſunt de terrâ Normannorum, & date fuerunt Simoni de Monteforti; pret' 30 libr' [6]." When the French ſeized upon Normandy, the eſtates of the Engliſh in that country were taken from them, and given away to others. The Engliſh made repriſals in the ſame way; which, veſting in the crown by way of eſcheat, under the name of "Terræ Normannorum," were granted away generally under this condition, "quouſque rectis hæredibus reddiderimus per pacem [7]."

This manor, the antient inheritance of the earls of Leiceſter, came by partition to Simon Montfort; and in 1238-9, an agreement was made between the ſaid earl on the one part, and Stephen de Segrave on the other part; that the ſaid Stephen, for him and his heirs, ſhould releaſe to the ſaid earl and his heirs all his right to the towns of Thornton and Bagworth; the ſaid earl ſatisfying Simon Pipard for his dues as to the third part of one knight's fee in Thornton, which the ſaid Stephen was before obliged to him, as chief lord: and that the ſaid earl and his heirs ſhould, in exchange, give to the ſaid Stephen and his heirs the town of Sileby, with the advowſon of the church there, as alſo all thoſe lands in Thirneby which were once the lands of Richard the ſon of Robert de Harecourt, and warrant the ſame to them the foreſaid Stephen de Segrave and his heirs: or, if the heirs of the above Richard de Harecourt ſhould at any time recover the lands of the ſaid Richard, that then the ſaid earl ſhould reſtore to the ſaid Stephen de Segrave £15. in Bagworth, and the foreſaid lands in Thornton, in the ſame ſtate as he firſt had them; provided that, if the ſaid earl or his heirs ſhould have laid out any thing in repairs or other charges on the premiſſes, that the ſame ſhould firſt be reſtored by the ſaid Stephen and his heirs: or, if the lands of the ſaid earl ſhould at any time be taken into the hands of the king or his heirs, and he the king or his heirs ſhould be minded to reſtore to the heirs of Richard de Harecourt aforeſaid their lands at Sileby and Thirneby, that the king or his heirs ſhould then firſt reſtore Thornton, and £15. lands in Bagworth, to the above Stephen de Segrave and his heirs. March 22, 1238-9, king Henry III. by an inſpeximus under the broad ſeal, confirmed this agreement, and in particular that clauſe, wherein it is ſaid, 'or if the lands of the ſaid earl ſhould at any time fall into the king's hands,' &c.

In the Itinerary of 1280, Sileby, Walton, Segrave, and Coſſington, anſwered collectively as one vill.

Robert Boſſu earl of Leiceſter gave to the abbey of St. Ebrulf in Normandy the tithes of his demeſne here [8].

Though it does not appear by Charyte's Rentale that the abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis had any property here; yet in the terrier referred to under Barkby, p. 45, Sileby fills five pages.

July 14, 1292, king Edward I. granted to Nicholas de Segrave, ſenior, and his heirs, liberty of free-warren in all their demeſne lands at Sileby [9].

In 1296, it was found that Nicholas de Segrave, deceaſed, held nine carucates of land in Sileby, by doing ſuit at the earl of Leiceſter's court; and that John de Segrave, his ſon and heir, was then aged 30 [10].

In 1297, Edmund earl of Lancaſter, the king's brother, held, at his deceaſe, divers lands at Sileby [11].

In 1325, it was found that Stephen de Segrave, deceaſed, and Alice his wife, held £4. 9*s.* 1½*d.* rent of divers free tenants in Sileby, of John de Segrave; but by what ſervices they knew not [12].

In the ſame year, it was found that John de Segrave, deceaſed, and Chriſtian his wife, held the town of Sileby; alſo the advowſon of the church of Sileby, worth £20.; and that John de Segrave (ſon and heir of Stephen de Segrave, couſin of the aforeſaid John de Segrave, ſenior) is his next heir [13].

In 1346, John de Segrave (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeiſed 10*s.* for a quarter of one knight's fee in Sileby and Thurneby, parcel of the honour of Leiceſter [14].

In 1353, John de Segrave died ſeiſed of the manor of Sileby, with the advowſon of the church [15].

In 1361, Henry Plantagenet, duke of Lancaſter, died ſeiſed of one knight's fee in Sileby and Thurnby, which John de Segrave held [16].

In 1372, Sir Walter de Manny, knight of the Garter, held the manor of Sileby of the duke of Lancaſter, by the ſervice of ſuit of court at his caſtle of Leiceſter; and it was then found that the manors of Sileby, Thurnby, and Houghton, were held of the dutchy of Lancaſter by the ſervice of one knight's fee [17].

From the Segraves this lordſhip paſſed, by marriage, to the Mowbrays; and afterwards, in like manner, from them to the Berkeleys; and in the Harleian MS. 5138, Sileby is noticed as belonging to the honour of Tutbury.

---

[1] "Hugo de Grenteſmainell habet in Ledeceſtre 13 burgenſes pertinentes ad Sigleſbie." Domeſday, fol. 230. a. 1.

[2] "Ernaldus tenet de H[ugone] in Siglebi 8 carucatas terræ & dimidiam. Terra eſt 5 carucarum. In dominico ſunt 3 carucæ, & 4 ſervi; & 18 villani, cum 4 ſochmanni & 4 bordariis, habent 6 carucas. Ibi 2 molini de 30 ſolidis; & 60 acræ prati. Valuit 60 ſolidos; modò 110 ſolidos." Ibid. fol. 233. a. 1.

[3] "In Seglebi 2 carucatæ terræ & 2 bovatæ; & 16 acræ prati." Ibid. fol. 230. a. 1.

[4] "In Siglebi 1 carucata terræ." Ibid. fol. 237. a. 1.

[5] Margaret counteſs of Winton paid 80 marks into the Exchequer, "pro habendâ conceſſione domini regis de terris Normannorum quæ ſunt de feodo ſuo & ſunt in manu ſuâ, vel de illis terris quas alii tenent per ipſam comitiſſam de eiſdem terris Normannorum quæ ſunt de feodo ſuo, habendis & tenendis eidem comitiſſæ totâ vitâ ſuâ, & Rogero de Quincy filio & hæredi ſuo poſt mortem ejus, niſi rex reddiderit terras illas hæredibus earundem terrarum per pacem." Rot. Mag. 13 Hen. III. Warw. & Leic. Madox, Hiſtory of the Exchequer, p. 207.—See alſo under Stapleford, vol. II. p. 332.

[6] Placita 31 Hen. III. in receptu Scaccarii, Rot. 32. MS. Roper.

[7] Cart. 23 Hen. III. n. 5.

[8] Vet. Rot. in Bibl. Cott.

[9] Cart. 20 Edw. I. N° 17.

[10] Eſch. 24 Edw. I. N° 54. Leic.

[11] Eſch. 25 Edw. I. N° 51. Leic.

[12] Eſch. 19 Edw. II. N° 91. Leic.

[13] Eſch. 19 Edw. II. N° 88. Leic.

[14] Rot. Aug. 20 Edw. III.

[15] Eſch. 27 Edw. III. N° 69. Leic.

[16] Fin. 35 Edw. III. m. 23; and ſee more under Aſhby Magna.

[17] Eſch. 46 Edw. III. N° 38. Leic.

In 1399, Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk, died ſeiſed of the manor of Sileby; and alſo of the advowſon of the church of Sileby, value 20 marks[1]; and in the ſame year, it was found that Margaret, late dutcheſs of Norfolk, was ſeiſed of the manor of Sileby[2].

In 1406, Thomas Mowbray, earl Marſhal, died ſeiſed of the manor of Sileby[3].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Sileby was rated at £2. 15*s.*; and, in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum, but an abatement was then made of 1*s.*

In 1432, John duke of Norfolk died ſeiſed of the manor of Sileby, together with the advowſon of the church there[4].

In the marriage ſettlement of king Henry VI. in 1444, he gives to his intended conſort the bailiwick of Belgrave and Sileby[5].

In 1444, it was found that William de Ferrers of Groby, knt. died ſeiſed of a quarter of one knight's fee in Sileby, which the prior of Chaucomb held[6].

In 1564, there were 78 families in Sileby.

Aug. 21, 1585, it was found that Henry Sacheverell, eſq. died ſeiſed of a moiety of divers lands, tenements, and hereditaments, in Sileby; and that they were held of the queen, as of her honour of Leiceſter, by the ſervice of a quarter of one knight's fee[7].

This manor came from the Mowbrays by deſcent to George lord Berkeley; from whom we find, 24 May, 1567, a leaſe to Thomas Babington, of the mills and water-courſes at Sileby.

In 1586, Henry lord Berkeley gave this manor to George Shirley, eſq. of Staunton, in frank marriage with Frances his daughter; and an indenture of ſale of this manor occurs, 20 Oct. 1587, by George lord Berkeley, to George Shirley, eſq.

"On the Eaſt ſide of the river Soare ſtandeth Soylbi, which from the lord Segrave to the lord Barkley deſcended, who gave this Soylbie in marriage with his daughter to George Shirley, eſq. an honourable gentleman, and of great poſſeſſions in thoſe counties[8]."

The freeholders here in 1630 were, George Barnard, Hugh King, John Gibſon, and John Dawſon.

"Sir Charles Shirley, of Staunton, bart. is now (1641) lord of the manor; but moſt of the lands were ſold to inferior purchaſers not long ſince[9]."

In 1645, Joſeph Smith, of Sileby, clerk, was fined £600. by the Committee of Sequeſtrations.

In 1722, 39 freeholders polled from this pariſh.

In an act paſſed in 1759, for incloſing the ſeveral open fields of Sileby, conſiſting, by eſtimation, of 2200 acres, or thereabouts, William Pochin, eſq. is deſcribed as impropriator and patron of the vicarage, and entitled to all the great and ſmall tithes, and to glebe and other land; and the Rev. Ralph Heathcote, clerk, as vicar and incumbent of the ſaid pariſh; and the ſaid William Pochin, the ſaid Ralph Heathcote in right of his vicarage, Thomas Wallis, James-More Molyneux, Thomas King, eſquires, and ſeveral other perſons, were the proprietors of the reſidue of the lands in the ſaid fields and meadows, and, with others, were entitled to a right of common therein and upon the ſaid paſture grounds. The allotment to the ſaid William Pochin of ſuch parcel or parcels of land as ſhall be equal to the glebe lands belonging to him in the ſaid fields and meadows and grounds, and alſo in lieu of all the great and ſmall tithes in the ſaid fields, and the houſes, yards, gardens, and orchards of the ſeveral proprietors thereof, and alſo in lieu of all Eaſter-offerings and other dues whatſoever, of and from ſuch proprietors only (mortuaries excepted) belonging to Mr. Pochin as impropriator of the rectory of Sileby, ſuch land as ſhould contain in the whole one ſeventh part, and no more, in the ſaid fields, as was ſubject to the payment of great and ſmall tithes, and ſuch parcel of land of ſuch parts of the ſaid fields, as were ſubject only to the payment of ſmall tithes (the ſaid parts conſiſting only of 187 acres, or thereabouts, of meadow ground) as ſhould be equal in value to two acres thereof upon an average of the whole: and the allotment of the reſidue to the ſeveral perſons who, at the time of making ſuch diviſion, ſhould be entitled to lands, right of common, or other property therein, in proportion to their ſhares, intereſts, and right of common (except as to ſuch part of the property of the ſaid Mr. Pochin for which allotments ſhall be made in manner hereinbefore directed); and an allotment to Mr. Pochin of ſuch land as ſhould be equal in value to the great and ſmall tithes of ſuch antient incloſures (not being yards, gardens, or orchards). Nothing in this act contained to prejudice the right of the vicar, or his ſucceſſors, to any ſurplice-fees, dues, or duties, which were taken by the ſaid vicar: And the allotments to be made to the vicar in lieu of lands belonging to the ſaid vicarage to be incloſed at the expence of the proprietors of the other allotments, in proportion to their properties; and ſuch fences for ever thereafter to be maintained by the vicar and his ſucceſſors.

The manor is now the property of earl Ferrers; with whom it has been cuſtomary to call a court once in three years: but Mr. Pochin of Barkby is the principal land-owner. Since the incloſure there are many ſmall freeholders.

There have been formerly two antient manſion-houſes at Sileby; one belonging to the Sherard family; and now in the tenure of Mr. Ward, a farmer; the other, belonging to the Pochins, is demoliſhed.

Mr. Thomas King has a tolerable houſe here, which he inherited from his father. The other inhabitants are chiefly farmers and frame-work knitters.

The village is ſituated in a deep ſoil, and the roads round it were till lately very indifferent; but are now generally much improved.

The Rev. George Staveley (who died in 1714) ſettled £4. a year for teaching 8 poor children of this place[10]; to which a private gentleman added 50*s.* a year, and another perſon 6*s.* A third gave 5*s.* a year to buy books, and a gentleman of Loughborough two annual Bibles.

There are three large ſchools beſide the free-ſchool.

Houſes 204, inhabitants 978[11], and teams 19.

There are three Diſſenting meeting-houſes.

The oldeſt ſtanding is that of the Quakers; but, as there are none of that ſect living in the village, it is now converted into a blackſmith's houſe and ſhop; the burial-ground into a yard and garden.

The ſecond belongs to a congregation of General Baptiſts, of which the Rev. Edward Pyke is the miniſter, to whom I am obliged for ſome uſeful information.

And the third to the people called Methodiſts, connected with the late Mr. John Weſley.

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor[12] of Sileby, within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	233	3	2
Expended in county rates, &c.	7	14	0
———— on the poor, —	225	9	2
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	11	5	10
Expended in litigations, —	3	6	4
Money raiſed for 1783, —	312	19	7
———————— 1784, —	330	10	6
———————— 1785, —	275	8	9
Medium of theſe three years,	306	6	3
———— of county expences, —	9	12	2
———— expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	11	13	8
———— of nett annual expences,	285	0	5
———— of attending on magiſtrates,	5	6	6
———— of entertainments at meetings,	0	7	10
———— of law expences, —	10	2	6
———— of ſetting the poor to work,	8	1	10

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 53.

---

[1] Eſch. 1 Hen. IV. N° 71. Leic.
[2] Eſch. 1 Hen. IV. N° 72. Leic.
[3] Eſch. 8 Hen. IV. N° 76. Leic.
[4] Eſch. 11 Hen. VI. N° 43. Leic.
[5] Rot. Parl. vol. V. p. 118.
[6] Eſch. 23 Hen. VI.
[7] Eſch. 27 Eliz.
[8] Wyrley, MS.
[9] Burton, MS.
[10] The ſchoolmaſter's ſalary is now 6*l.* 10*s.*

[11] From an actual eunmeration of the inhabitants made in 1793. J. D.

[12] The expences of the poor for 1797 and 1798 have amounted on an average to £550. per annum. In the years 1795 and 1796, when corn was dear, the expences were above £700. per annum.—Mr. Ward, one of the principal farmers, informed me, that in 1795 the aſſeſſments paid from his farm, for the relief of the poor, exceeded the ſums collected in the whole pariſh for that purpoſe 35 years before! J. D.

The CHURCH (Plate LXI.)

dedicated to the Nativity of the Bleſſed Virgin Mary, is built of ſtone, and ornamented with a great deal of carved work; outſide dimenſions, 38 yards by 18.

The height of the tower is 84 feet. It contains five heavy but melodious bells, the largeſt whereof is 28 hundred weight; the key is E flat. They are allowed by judges to be an excellent ring of bells, and are rung by the inhabitants to aſtoniſhment. There is alſo a ſett of chimes.

The nave and two ailes are each about 65 feet long, ſeparated by five arches, over which are clereſtory windows; the whole ſupported by handſomely carved pillars.

The roofs that cover the ailes are flat and low; but the nave is very lofty and magnificent, with a carved oak roof; and on the projecting ſtones which ſupport the roof are the repreſentations of men's faces diſtorted to a frightful appearance.

The chancel is ſpacious, with a fine aſcent of three ſteps to the communion-table; and is divided from the nave by carved work in wood, much decayed through age.

At the lower end of the building are the veſtry, belfry, and ſchool, which all formerly lay open.

Mr. Burton obſerved here in the North-eaſt window:

Gules, three lions paſſant guardant in pale Or, a label of three points Argent, Thomas de Brotherton earl of Norfolk; fig. 9—14.

In a round piece of azure glaſs, 𝔐 crowned Or.

In a South window:

Sable, a lion rampant Argent, crowned Or, debruiſed with a bend engrailed Gules, Segrave.

Gules, ſeven maſcles voided and conjoined Or; 3. 3. and 1. a label of three points Azure charged with nine horſe-ſhoes Argent, Ferrers.

Gules, ſeven maſcles voided and conjoined Or; 3. 3. and 1. within a border engrailed Argent, Ferrers.

In a North window of the chancel:

Argent, ſix annulets Gules; 3. 2. and 1. Pleſſey.

"Theſe," adds Mr. Burton, "are all which I found there ſtanding in 1609; the Eaſt window of the chancel being great and large, almoſt broken down, and moſt of the windows of the church exceedingly defaced."

On an atchievement on a pillar in the nave, fig. 15.

Quarterly, 1. and 4. Sable, on a chevron engrailed Argent, three eſcallops Sable, King; 2. Gules, three ducal crowns Or, ...; 3. Gules, a chevron between three lions heads eraſed Argent, Monke; on an eſcocheon of pretence quarterly 1. and 4; Argent, a feſs between three aſſes Sable, Aſcough; 2. and 3. Sable, a feſs Vaire, Or and Azure between three fleur de lis within a border of the ſecond. Creſt, a talbot's head couped Sable, collared Or.

The font is neat, but modern, fig. 16.

In the Matriculus of 1220, Sileby is deſcribed to be under the patronage of Richard de Harcourt; the rector . . . .; and the monks of St. Ebrulph had the tithes of ſix virgates of land there of old time [1].

Sir John de Segrave, knt. as patron of Sileby, preſented to the rectory 15 kal. Maii, 1318.

The church of Sileby was firſt appropriated to the abbey of St. Ebrulph in Normandy; which abbey being among the abbeys alien ſuppreſſed by king Henry the Fifth, John duke of Norfolk did, by patent from king Henry VI. and by authority of the church, appropriate this ſame thing to the houſe of St. Mary, of the order of Carthuſians, in Epworth in the Iſle of Axholme, co. Lincoln [2].

In the time of Marmaduke Lumley biſhop of Lincoln (1450), at the petition of the abbot of Leiceſter, on the behalf of the prior and convent of St. Mary's in the Iſle of Axholme, the ſaid abbot, being patron, obtained a grant for the appropriation thereof to the prior; building an houſe for the vicar South of the rectory, to be repaired by the vicar; and paying yearly 13 marks in money to the vicar, and no tithes or oblations; and 20 pence to the poor [3].

In an authentic copy of the endowment of the vicarage of Sileby is recited a bull from pope Nicholas V. allowing the rectory of Sileby to be annexed to the monaſtery of St. Mary in the iſle of Axholme; alſo a patent of king Henry VI. granting permiſſion to John duke of Norfolk, patron of Sileby, to aſſign the rectory to the monaſtery above-mentioned, which had been founded by that duke's grand-father, but had an income inſufficient to maintain, and a houſe too ſmall to accommodate, the monks then flocking to it (tunc ibi præter ſolitum confluentes.) The profits of the rectory (ſtated as not exceeding £20. a year) were aſſigned and annexed to the monaſtery, on condition that it ſhould pay 13 marks yearly to the vicar, and 20 pence (denarii) to the poor, and alſo build a manſe for the reſidence of the vicar.

The buſineſs of the annexation was done at the Abbey of Leiceſter, by John Pomerey, then abbot, on the 11th of Auguſt, A. D. 1450, the 14th year of Indiction, and 4th of pope Nicholas V. "There is now (1641) only a ſtipendiary curate. There is or was (as I have heard) two yard-lands of glebe-land belonging to this church [4]."

May 20, 1646. By virtue of an order of both houſes of parliament of the 2d of May inſtant, it is ordered that the yearly ſum of £50. out of the impropriate rectory of Sileby, in the county of Leiceſter, ſequeſtered from Joſeph Smith, clerk, delinquent, be paid for increaſe of the maintenance of ſuch miniſter as ſhall, by order of this committee, be appointed to officiate the cure of the church of Sileby aforeſaid, the vicarage thereof being under £10. per annum; and the ſequeſtrators of the premiſes are required to pay the ſame accordingly, at ſuch times and ſeaſons of the year as the ſame is due and payable.

Sept. 25, 1646. Whereas this committee have, by their order of the 20th of May laſt, ordered that the yearly ſum of £50. ſhould be paid out of the profits of the impropriate rectory of Sileby, in the county of Leiceſter, ſequeſtered from Joſeph Smith, for increaſe of the maintenance of ſuch miniſter as this committee ſhould appoint to officiate the cure of the pariſh-church of Sileby aforeſaid, the vicarage thereof being under £10. per annum: it is ordered that the ſaid yearly ſum of £50. ſhall be allowed and paid to Mr. Richard Yorke, the now miniſter of the ſaid church, for the better increaſe of his maintenance, for his officiating there. And the ſequeſtrators of the premiſſes are required to allow and pay the ſame unto him accordingly, at ſuch times and ſeaſons of the year as the ſaid profit ſhall grow due and payable.

Oct. 30, 1650. Whereas this committee have, the 20th of May, 1646, granted the yearly ſum of £50. out of the profits of the impropriate rectory of Sileby, in the county of Leiceſter, ſequeſtered from Joſeph Smith, for increaſe of the maintenance of the miniſter that this committee ſhould approve of to officiate the cure of the pariſh-church of Sileby aforeſaid; and have, ſince the 25th of September, 1646, ſettled the ſame upon Richard Hooke, who hath ſince relinquiſhed the ſaid church: it is ordered, that the ſaid £50. a year be continued and paid unto Mr. Leonard Curtis, hereby conſtituted miniſter of the ſaid church: and committees for ſequeſtration in the ſaid county are required to pay the ſame accordingly, together with all arrears thereof ſince the 25th of March laſt, according to the act of parliament in that behalf.

In 1650, Sileby was returned as an impropriation; worth £120. The curate had then a ſtipend of £10; and was "ſufficient."

May 9, 1651. Whereas this committee have, the 20th of May, 1646, granted the yearly ſum of £50. out of the profits of the impropriate rectory of Sileby, in the county of Leiceſter, ſequeſtered from Joſeph Smith, for increaſe of the maintenance of ſuch miniſter as this committee ſhould approve of to officiate the cure of the church of Sileby aforeſaid; and have ſince (viz.) the 30th of October laſt, ſettled the ſame upon Leonard Curtis, a godly and orthodox divine: for that this committee are now informed that the ſaid impropriation is made over to the lady Grantham; it is ordered, that £30. a year part of the ſaid £50. a year, be continued to the ſaid Mr. Curtis: and the ſaid lady Grantham is hereby required to pay the ſame unto him accordingly, at ſuch times and ſeaſons of the year as the ſaid profits ſhall grow due and payable.

---

[1] See the Introductory Volume, p. lx.

[2] Pat. 26 Hen. VI. p. 1. m. 18. pro rectoriâ de Sileby appropriandâ.

[3] Wadlandi MS nota in locum; è magno libro pergameneo in Regiſtro Lincolnienſi.

[4] Burton, MS.

GILBERT MILLINGTON, JAMES TEMPLE,
WILLIAM CAWLEY, WILLIAM HAY [1].

In 1727, the following letters were addreſſed by the vicar and inhabitants to the patron of the vicarage:

To Thomas Pochin, of Barkby, eſq.

"Sir, we, the miniſter, churchwardens, and other inhabitants, of the pariſh of Sileby, in the county of Leiceſter, are now fully aſſured, and make bold to acquaint you, that our vicarage is endowed not only with the yearly ſum of thirteen marks in money, but alſo with a convenient manſe or dwelling-houſe, to be repaired by the vicar after the firſt building of the ſaid manſe out of the rectorial profits of Sileby aforeſaid; and that the ſaid manſe is mentioned in the very ſame clauſe of the endowment where the marks are, and with the ſame force.

"Since then this affair has been brought to light amongſt us but lately, and (as we have reaſon to think) you have been as much ignorant of the wrong done as ourſelves; ſince it does not appear that ſuch a manſe was ever built by any of your predeceſſors from the firſt appropriating of the rectorial profits to this day; and ſince you are the preſent poſſeſſor of the ſaid rectorial profits, out of which the ſaid manſe ought to be firſt built; therefore we are willing to hope, and now beg leave to make it our humble requeſt to you, that you will be pleaſed to provide ſuch a manſe as the endowment mentions, with the ſame juſtice and readineſs as you pay the thirteen marks mentioned alſo in the ſaid endowment, together with a convenient manſe, &c.

"We have incloſed, verbatim, the clauſe in which the marks and manſe are mentioned together, and confirmed to the vicarage; towards the latter end of which clauſe you will find alſo a reſerve, out of the ſaid rectorial profits, of 20 denarii, to be diſtributed yearly amongſt ſuch poor pariſhioners of Sileby aforeſaid as are moſt needy; the neglect of which alſo we deſire and hope you will be pleaſed to rectify.

"If it will be any farther ſatisfaction, you, or any proper perſon deputed by you, may have the peruſal of the whole endowment; from whence will appear moſt clearly the reaſonableneſs and juſtice of theſe our joint requeſts and expectations. In the ſpeedy and amicable anſwering of which you will very much oblige, Sir, your humble ſervants,

S. Sherwin, vicar of Sileby.
Matthew Pearſon, }
John Kendall, } Churchwardens.
John Wooldridge, }
Elizabeth Pochin,
Elizabeth King,
John Church, &c. &c. &c.
Sileby, Leiceſterſhire, Aug. 22, 1727."

"Sir; your tenant Barradal told us that you ſaid you had not a copy of your endowment, which, indeed, I thought you had. He told us likewiſe to this effect; that, if we could make it appear that we had a right to a vicarage-houſe, you would provide one for us. The endowment ſhews our right. I am, Sir, your humble ſervant, S. SHERWIN.
Syleby, Aug. 22, 1727.

"Idcircò, vocatis vocandis, ac ſervatis ſervandis, prefatam eccleſiam parochialem de Syleby, cum ſuis juribus & pertinentiis univerſis, (ſalvâ & reſervatâ congruâ portione ad ſummam tredecim marcarum legalis monete Anglie, quam ordinamus perſolvi annuatim in pecuniâ numeratâ de fructibus, redditibus, & proventibus ejuſdem parochialis eccleſie, vicario perpetuo inibi inſtituendo, qui curam animarum gerat ibidem; quam quidem ſummam, unâ cum manſo congruente, per vicarium poſt primariam edificationem ejuſdem manſi reparando, pronunciamus, decernimus, & declaramus congruam, unde valeat congruè ſuſtentari, oneraque ſibi incumbentia ſupporare, etiam quatenùs poteſtas noſtra ſuppetit; reſervatâ & aliâ congruâ portione viginti denariorum de eiſdem fructibus, redditibus, & proventibus, inter pauperes parochianos dicte eccleſie maximè indigentes annuatim diſtribuendâ;) prefatis priori & conventui qui modò ſunt, ipſorumque ſucceſſoribus futuris, ac dicte ipſorum domui, auctoritate Apoſtolicâ unimus, incorporamus, & annectimus, ac eam, cum ſuis juribus & pertinentiis univerſis (ſalvis ſuprà reſervatis), in ipſorum prioris & conventûs eorumque ſucceſſorum proprios uſus perpetuò poſſidendam & tenendam auctoritate prefatâ concedimus."

In the king's books Sileby is entered as a diſcharged living, value "in pecuniâ, cum manſ', communibus annis, £8. 15*s*.. 5*d*; clear yearly value £10. 9*s*. 6*d*. The epiſcopal procurations are, for the rectory 4*s*.; the vicarage 1*s*. 4*d*.

A penſion of 3*s*. 4*d*. is payable to the biſhop of Lincoln at Michaelmas.

No account remains of the manſe mentioned in the endowment; nor was there any reſidence appropriated for the vicar, till the year 1722; when, the vicarage being augmented by £200. from queen's Anne's bounty, and £227. private contributions, of which the inhabitants gave £28. 14*s*. a houſe was purchaſed, and lands then lying in the open fields; for which an allotment of about 19 acres was made at the incloſure [2].

On a pillar in the nave is a table of donations:

"Mr. William Lane, citizen of London, gave out of ſome land lying in the lordſhip of Barrow 20*s*. to the miniſter, and 20*s*. each to five of the pooreſt town-born men yearly for ever. [N. B. This donation has lately produced nearly the ſum of £3. each a year.]

Mr. Bernard, of Sileby, gave out of the water-mill ſtanding in the lordſhip of Sileby 20*s*. to the miniſter, and 20*s*. each to five poor widows yearly for ever.

Mr. Thomas Oſwin, of Sileby, gave out of ſome land lying in the lordſhip of Sileby 10*s*. to the vicar, and 10*s*. each to four of the pooreſt inhabitants yearly for ever.

Mr. John Martin gave £10. for the uſe of the poor.

Mr. Thomas Oſwin, junior, gave to the poor 5*s*. yearly for books.

Mr. Bartholomew Hickling, of Loughborough, gave a Bible yearly to the poor.

Mr. Thomas Oſwin, of Sileby, gave an half-acre of meadow lying in the lordſhip of Sileby, for the uſe of the poor.

Mr. John Gibſon, of Sileby, gave the intereſt of £6. for the education of one poor child.

Mr. Ruſted gave, out of the impropriated tithes of Bredon, the yearly ſum of £10. to be paid to the vicar.

The Rev. Mr. William Staveley, late rector of Coſſington, gave to the free-ſchool £4. yearly for ever.

The ſaid Mr. Staveley gave the overplus of that money which he ſettled for charitable uſes, to the vicar yearly for ever.

George Pochin, of Barkby, eſq. gave the ſum of £50. for the uſe of the poor yearly for ever."

VICARS.	PATRONS.
Reginald de Sancto Leodegar, 1239.	Sir Richard de Harecourt.
Edmund la Zouch, 1287.
Anthony Berridge, M. A. May 11, 1639 [3].	} The King.
Richard Benſkin [4], M. A. May 4, 1639; ejected.
William Thornborough, about 1642; ſequeſtered.
Joſeph Smith, ſequeſtered 1646.

---

[1] From the original minute-books of the Committee of Sequeſtrators, preſerved in the Bodleian Library.

[2] From the information of the Rev. John Dudley, the preſent vicar, to whom I am obliged for ſeveral valuable communications.

[3] Rymer, vol. XX. p. 390.

[4] He had been preſented by the king to the vicarage of Humberſton in 1632; ſee before, p. 275; and was alſo rector of Wanlip. Walker ſays he was murthered.

VICARS.	PATRONS.
Richard Yorke, Sept. 25, 1646.
Richard Hicks, 164..
Leonard Curtis, 1650.
Theophilus Lilly, died 1687.
William Bentley, Nov. 1, 1704.	The Queen, by lapſe.
Samuel Sherwin [1], March 8, 1707; died March 21, 1730.	Thomas Pochin, eſq.
Ralph Heathcote [2], M. A. July 14, 1730; died June 9, 1765.	Thomas Pochin, junior, eſq.
Ralph Heathcote [3], D. D. Nov. 21, 1765; died May 28, 1795.	William Pochin, eſq.
John Dudley, M. A. Oct. 30, 1795.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

In the chancel floor:

1. "Here lieth the body of Theophilus Barnard, eſq.
who departed this life the 28th day of March,
in the year of our Lord God 1688."

2. "Hic jacet Maria Reading, filia Georgii Sherard, armigeri, uxor Johannis Reading,
clerici, eccleſiæ de Rotherbie nuper rectoris, obiit 18 die Julii, anno Dom. 1696."

3. "Here lieth the body of George Pochin, ſon of Joſeph Pochin, gent.
who departed this life Oct. 25, ... aged 2 years."

4. "Here lieth the body of Bithiah Pochin, daughter of Major Joſeph Pochin, who departed this life April the 8th,
in the 7th year of her age, 1714."

5. "Here lieth the body of Colonel Joſeph Pochin, who died Sept. 26, 1721, aged 67."

6. "SAMUEL SHERWIN, hujuſce nuper eccleſiæ vicarius,
obiit Martii die primo, anno Salutis 1730.
Accumbunt ſiniſtræ filii quatuor filiæque duæ,
è Bithiâ conjuge;
quæ infeliciter ſuperſtes, memoriale hoc depoſuit,
amans, grata, lugens."

7. "Here lieth the body of Mrs. Barbara Spence, daughter of the late Rev. Abraham Spence, rector of Market Boſworth, who departed this life Nov. 25, A. D. 1734, aged 71."

In the North aile:

"Here lieth the body of the Rev. Mr. John Bowes, ſome time curate of this pariſh.
He died 27 Feb. 1755, aged about 44 years."

"Here lieth the body of Mr. Thomas Carter, ſecond ſon of Mr. Thomas Carter, late of the Newark in Leiceſter,
who died the 26th day of October, 1773, aged 47.
He was an honeſt, humane, and generous man."

"Hic ſita eſt Maria Heathcote, Simonis Ockley, linguæ Arabiæ nuper apud Cantabrigienſes profeſſoris,
filia natu maxima;
Radulphi Heathcote, hujuſce eccleſiæ vicarii, amantiſſima nec minùs amata conjux.
Filios tres filiaſque quatuor feliciſſimi pignora conjugii reliquit ſuperſtites.
Obiit Januarii die triceſimo, anno Dom. 1737, æt. 39."

"Hic ſitus eſt Radulphus Heathcote, magiſter artium Cantabrigienſis,
hujus eccleſiæ vicarius,
et rector de Morton, in agro Derbienſi.
Vivunt etiamnum liberi ſeptem,
quos uxor Maria peperit,
optimum lugentes et parentem et virum.
Morbo doloribuſque confectus requievit tandem in pace
Junii die nono, anno Dom. 1765, ætatis 68."

"Here lieth the body of Mary Heathcote, who died the 8th of January, 1780, aged 48 years.
She was a woman of integrity, generoſity, and all Chriſtian virtues."

In the South aile:

"HERE LIETH INTERRED THE BODY OF
JOHN MORTON [4], ESQ. WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE IN AUGUST, IN THE 4..
YEAR OF HIS AGE, A. D. 1670."

"Here lieth the body of Mrs. Catharine Parkyns, ſpinſter, 1670."

"Here lieth the body of John Shaw, gent.
who died Nov. the 8th, 1708."

"Here lieth the body of Mrs. Catharine Collingwood, wife of Henry Collingwood, now living in Quorndon, eſq. and daughter of George Morton, late of Quorndon, eſq. next interred.
She departed this life the 18th day of March,
1709-10, in the 23d year of her age."

"Here lieth interred the body of Henry Dyſon,
who departed this life the 29th day of April,
in the 43d year of his age, A. D. 1714."

"Here lieth Mary, daughter of Thomas Herrick, of the borough of Leiceſter, gent. by Martha his wife, who died Jan. 29, 1721."

"Here lieth the body of Thomas King, of Sileby, gent. who departed this life July the 12th, anno ætatis 69, annoque Domini 1712."

"In a vault beneath this ſtone lies the body of Mrs. Mary King.
She died 30 Oct. 1743, in the 30th year of her age."

"Alſo the body of Mrs. Catharine King, ſpinſter, who departed this life on the 17th day of July,
in the 63d year of her age, and of our Lord 1766."

"Here lie the remains of Thomas King, eſq.
who died the 5th day of October, 1780, aged 46."

"Here alſo lieth the body of Elizabeth King, relict of Thomas King, and daughter of William Oſwin, of Coſſington, gent.
She departed this life January 23, 1734, aged 62."

"Here lieth the body of John Chamberlain, the huſband of Jane Chamberlain,
who departed this life the 28th day of Auguſt,
in the 77th year of his age, and of our Lord 1707."

"Here lies the body of Jane,
the wife of John Chamberlain abovesaid, who departed this life May 17, 1715, aged 67."

"Here lieth interred the body of John Chamberlain, who departed this life May the 20th,
in the year of our Lord 1754, aged 53 years."

"Here lieth the body of Robert,
ſon of Robert and Elizabeth Bird, who died Feb. 25, 1750, aged 5 months."

"Here lieth the body of Anne, the daughter of Robert Bird, gent. by Elizabeth his wife, who departed this life Jan. 15, aged 18 months."

In the nave:

"Here lieth the body of Mr. John Charnells, who departed this life on December 30, 1728,
in the 77th year of his age."

"Here alſo lieth interred the body of Mrs. Elizabeth Hall, wife of Mr. Thomas Hall, and relict of Mr. John Charnells.

---

[1] "Mr. Sherwin, vicar of Sileby, having a law-ſuit with his brother, went to prayers, took leave of his family, told them he hoped they ſhould all meet and be happy in another world; and then retired from them, and hanged himſelf." Peck, MS.

[2] Rector alſo of Moreton, Derbyſhire, by diſpenſation, dated June 3, 1739. His ſucceſſor at Morton (Benjamin Burrow, M. A.) was inſtituted in November 1765.

[3] Of whom ſee ſome hiſtorical particulars, pp. 425—428.

[4] Elizabeth, daughter of William King of Sileby, was married to John Morton of Quorndon, and ſon of Nicholas Morton of Boſworth; and in 1619 had a ſon William, 30 years old, married to Judith Chedlow of Coventry.

She departed this life the 2d day of January,
A. D. 1754, in the 77th year of her age."

"Here lieth interred the body of Elizabeth, the wife of Mr. John Canner.
She departed this life July 8, 1769, aged 57."

"Here lies interred the body of John Canner,
who departed this life Nov. 21, 1779, aged 64."

"Here lieth the body of John Church, gent.
who departed this life July 28, A. D. 1731,
in the 61ſt year of his age."

"Here lie the bodies of
Thomas Parſons and Suſannah his wife.
She departed January the 29th, 1736, aged 84.
He departed the 27th of December, 1739, aged 79.
Here alſo lie the bodies of Thomas Parſons, and Mary his wife, ſon of the aboveſaid.
He departed this life March 7, 1747, aged 57.
She died Auguſt 10, 1761, aged 62."

"Here lie the remains of Elizabeth,
the wife of Thomas Parſons.
She departed this life January 30, 1765,
in the 35th year of her age.
Alſo near this place lie the remains of Thomas Parſons, who departed this life April 5, 1772, in his 46th year."

"Here lieth Martha Sing, wife of John Sing, ſchoolmaſter of this pariſh,
who died the 14th of June, 1771, aged 59 years."

"Beneath lie the mortal remains of John Sing.
He departed this life Aug. 31, 1786, aged 74 years."

On a mural tablet at the Weſt end of the North aile:
"Depoſited below the mortal part of John Prior, who died 27 June, 1793, in the 64th year of his age."

In the church-yard:

"Here lieth the body of Thomas Barradell, who was clerk of this pariſh 35 years, who departed this life Nov. 3, 1707, in his 63d year."

"Here lieth interred the bodies of
Edward Barradell and Mary his wife:
$\text{viz.}\left\{\begin{matrix}\text{he}\\ \text{ſhe}\end{matrix}\right\}\text{ died }\left\{\begin{matrix}\text{March 15,}\\ \text{May 30,}\end{matrix}\right\}\text{ 1759, aged }\left\{\begin{matrix}\text{74.}\\ \text{75.}\end{matrix}\right.$"
For fifty-two revolving years
Devoutly he attended prayers;
With mellow voice and ſolemn knell
He ſung the Pſalms, and toll'd the bell.
But cruel Death ſpoil'd his laſt ſtave,
And ſent the Sexton to his grave:
And his dear wife, loving and kind,
Stay'd but a little while behind."

"Here lieth the body of John Noon, gent.
of Mountſorrel, who died 15 Jan. 1745, aged 64.
Alſo Anne Noon his wife, who died June 28, 1724, aged 34."

Elizabeth Lilly died Jan. 12, 1721, aged 69.
Philippa, daughter of Theophilus Lilly, and wife of Rich. Gilbert, died 23 Oct. 1739, in her 83d year.
Richard Bird, May 2, 1792, aged 78.
Anne Bird, Oct. 28, 1792, aged 78.

On a ſtone in Long Whatton church-yard:
"William Allt, late of Kegworth, who was miniſter of the Goſpel for upwards of 30 years; of which, the latter part of his time, he was paſtor of his own chapel in Sileby, in the county of Leiceſter; who departed this life Auguſt 4, 1779, aged 60 years.

Here lies the body of William Allt:
Some ſay he was without a fault;
And others ſay, there's none had more;
But he ſays, 'Jeſus has paid my ſcore:'
So, be they many, or be they few,
They're all forgiven; and this is true."

Some Account of RALPH HEATHCOTE, D. D. written in 1789 by himſelf.

Fugio ne fugarer—"I fly leſt I ſhould be driven away," ſaid an Univerſity Profeſſor upon a critical emergency[1]; and I write this account of myſelf, leſt others ſhould relate of me what may not belong to me. Nor muſt it be imputed to vanity[2], that I ſuppoſe any attention will be paid to my memory; the privilege of being recorded after death, whatever the value of it, is now become an appendage of authorſhip; inſomuch that the moſt inſignificant accounts of the moſt inſignificant men are hence deemed objects of amuſement to the publick.

My family is of Cheſterfield, in Derbyſhire; and, for a family in middle life, antient and reſpectable. There is extant among our records a will, ſigned by a perſon of both my names, a conſiderable tradeſman, and alderman of that town, who therein provides decently for five ſons and four daughters[3]: it is dated anno 1502. The landed property of the Houſe was afterwards much increaſed, but waſted (the greateſt part of it) by an eldeſt ſon, a fine gentleman of the times; who, in the civil wars of the laſt century, while his family continued loyal[4], became a Cromwellian; and, as tradition reports, contrived to get his father proſcribed and impriſoned, for the ſake of prematurely poſſeſſing it. What little remained of this ſaid property was inherited by my great-grand-father, a younger ſon, and tranſmitted down through my grandfather and father to me. Theſe were all of both my names; men liberally educated at Cambridge, who had decent preferment in the church, and were eſteemed for their good ſenſe, probity, and learning, by all who knew them.

I was born the 19th of December (O. S.) in 1721, at Barrow upon Soar, in the county of Leiceſter, where my father, then very young, was only a curate[5]; for alas, good man! by marrying a daughter of Simon Ockley, Arabic Profeſſor at Cambridge, while attending his lectures, he had provided for himſelf a family before he had provided where-withal to maintain it. I ſpent the firſt fourteen years of my life at home with my father, who grounded me in Latin and Greek: and was then, April 1736, removed to the public-ſchool of Cheſterfield aforeſaid; where I continued five years under the Rev. William Burrow, a very ingenious as well as humane perſon, and who was more than ordinarily ſkilled in the Greek. He had too (let me obſerve it), by his manner of commenting and expatiating upon our leſſons, the art of opening the underſtanding, and teaching the uſe and exerciſe of it, while he ſeemed to be only teaching the languages, beyond any man I ever knew.

---

[1] Peter Baro; Athen. Oxon.

[2] The hint was ſuggeſted to me, ſome very ſhort time ago, by the following paſſage, from a work entitled, "The Life of John Buncle, eſq." vol. II. p. 249. 256. "It is not the opinion of the Socinians that Chriſt was a mere man. It is plain from this aſſertion, that the Rev. Dr. Heathcote, in his "Remarks on the True and Candid Diſquiſitions," knows nothing of them. Yet unfriendly as he hath been in his account of the Socinians, you are not thence to conclude that he belongs to the Orthodox party. He is far from it; and therefore I recommend to your peruſal, not only what he has written upon the "Free and Candid Diſquiſitions," and his finer "Boyle Lecture Sermons" on the Being of a God, but alſo his "Curſory Animadverſions upon the Controverſy concerning the Miraculous Powers," and his "Remarks on Chapman's Charge." They are three excellent pamphlets." Now, it is very certain, that Dr. Heathcote never wrote any "Remarks on the Free and Candid Diſquiſitions," nor even knew that ſuch "Remarks" were written.

[3] "And if," ſays he, "any of my ſonnes wyll be a prieſt, I wyll that he be ſent to the ſchole till he is able; and then his part of land to be divided among the other."

[4] In my poſſeſſion is a receipt to his father for two pounds lent to king Charles I. dated 21 Feb. 1626. in form following:—"Scarſdale, in com. Derbie. Received the day and year above written of Godfrey Heathcote, of Cheſterfield, in the county of Derbie, gent. the ſome of two pounds, which the ſayd Godfrey Heathcote hath lent unto the kinge's moſt excellente Majeſtie; I ſay, received to his Majeſtie's uſe the ſayd ſome of £2. 0. 0. by me, Adam Eyre, collector."—Theſe royal loans were one of the four things remonſtrated againſt in the "Petition of Right" preſented to Charles I. May 1628; and for oppoſing which ſir Thomas Wentworth, afterwards earl of Strafford, had been committed a priſoner to the Marſhalſea by the Lords of the Council. Strafford's Life, at the End of his Letters, in 2 vols. folio.

[5] Ralph Heathcote, of Jeſus College, Cambridge, B. A. 1717; curate of Barrow 1721; M. A. 1728; was preſented to the vicarage of Sileby in 1730; to the curacy of Preſtwould 1746; and held alſo the rectory of Morton, co. Derby. By his wife Mary he had four ſons. She died Jan. 30, 1737; and he June 9, 1768, æt. 68. For their epitaphs, ſee pp. 76. 424.

April 1741, I was admitted of Jeſus College in Cambridge. I was admitted a ſizar for the ſake of œconomy, as we were a numerous tribe at home, et fruges conſumere nati; yet œconomy, in reality, was little concerned, the difference between ſizar and penſioner, either as to expence or manner of living, being (in our ſociety at leaſt) next to nothing. I took the degree of A. B. in Jan. 1745; and, after continuing in college till the commencement following, I went into the country, and became a divine ſoon after. March 1748, I undertook the cure of St. Margaret's church, in Leiceſter, the ſtipend and perquiſites of which were not leſs than £50. per annum; and the year after was preſented to Barkby, a ſmall vicarage in the neighbourhood, but which, with my curacy, made me well to live, as the ſaying is. July 1748, I took the degree of A. M. and at the ſame time withdrew my name from college, having only a diſtant as well as uncertain proſpect of a fellowſhip, and being in truth of an humour no ways ſuited to ſuch ſituations and connections. I had, beſides, another fellowſhip in view; and, Auguſt 1750, was married to Miſs Margaret[1] Mompeſſon, a Nottinghamſhire gentlewoman of good family, whoſe fortune made me, in my own eſtimation, independent, and with whom I have lived very happily to this hour.

But to go back a little. In 1746 I printed at Cambridge, and publiſhed, a ſmall Latin work, of ſeventy-two pages, in 8vo, entitled, "Hiſtoria Aſtronomiæ, ſive de Ortu et Progreſſu Aſtronomiæ;" which, though it cannot well be conſidered otherwiſe than as a juvenile production, was yet kindly received by the Univerſity[2], and laid the foundation of that little merit I have ſince acquired in the world of letters. It was then imagined, and indeed the Profeſſor Rutherforth noticed it in his public ſpeech to me at my Doctor's degree, that I undertook this work in order to make amends for ſome defect of character when I took my firſt degree in Arts; and when although I was not without honour, yet I was not diſtinguiſhed in the manner that was expected from me. How far this might be the caſe, I cannot pretend to ſay. Whether my taſte or prejudices for the Claſſics, with whom I had been long and intimately converſant (being in my twentieth year before I left ſchool), had any ways indiſpoſed me for mathematical and phyſical attainments, or whether becauſe no encouragement was given to them in college[3], certain it is, that I had no impulſe towards academical learning, nor then could bring myſelf to apply at all to it. What I have known in this way, which however has not been to any mathematical depth, was acquired afterwards.

The Middletonian Controverſy upon the Miraculous Powers, &c. being not yet ended, though indeed Dr. Middleton himſelf was dead, I was moved to enter the liſts, and in 1752 publiſhed two pieces; one intituled, "Curſory Animadverſions upon the Controverſy in General;" the other, "Remarks upon a Charge by Dr. Chapman." It will hardly be credited what diffidence I felt when I began the former piece; and ſtill leſs, when I mention the cauſe of this diffidence. But it is a real matter of fact, that, though I had gone through a ſchool and a college, and had produced a Latin work, which, notwithſtanding many miſtakes and overſights, had been applauded even for its language, I could not yet expreſs myſelf tolerably in Engliſh; but, after I had ſtepped into my twenty-ninth year, had the writing part of my native tongue almoſt entirely to acquire. I mention this chiefly to note, what I take to be a great defect in moſt of the grammar-ſchools, viz. a total neglect to cultivate our own language: as if the learning of Latin would teach boys not only to ſpell, as the vulgar imagine, but alſo to write, Engliſh.—In 1753 I publiſhed "A Letter to the Rev. Thomas Fothergill, A. M. Fellow of Queen's College, Oxford, relating to his Sermon preached before that Univerſity 30th Jan. 1753, upon the Reaſonableneſs and Uſes of commemorating King Charles's Martyrdom:" a ſlight production; yet ſufficient, perhaps, to ſhew, that there is neither reaſon nor uſe in any ſuch commemoration.

Upon the publication of my firſt Middletonian pamphlet, my bookſeller tranſmitted the compliments of Dr. Warburton to the unknown author; for I had not yet courage enough to ſet my name to my Engliſh productions. I was greatly ſurpriſed; but ſoon after perceived that, Warburton's ſtate of authorſhip being a ſtate of war, it was his cuſtom to be particularly attentive to all young authors of forward aſpiring ſpirit, in hopes of enliſting them afterwards into his ſervice. Accordingly, when my ſecond pamphlet came out, he learned my name, and ſent me not only his compliments, but the offer alſo of his aſſiſtant preacher's place at Lincoln's Inn Chapel, with the ſtipend of half-a-guinea for each ſermon. The ſtipend, to be ſure, was paltry, but the offer and the place were very agreeable to me; for I had ſome time before formed a ſcheme of living in London, in order to aſſociate and converſe with literati, and more effectually to gratify my humour, which, partly from the love of letters, but chiefly from ill health, was grown more retired and ſtudious. I removed to town June 1753, and ſoon found my way into a Society of Gentlemen, who met once a week to drink coffee, and to talk learnedly for three or four hours. This ſociety, as it was called, conſiſted of Dr. Jortin, Dr. Birch, Mr. Wetſtein, Mr. De Miſſy, Dr. Maty, and one or two more; and it flouriſhed till the death of Birch in 1766, though it was weakened by the departure of Jortin to Kenſington in 1762.

The works of lord Bolingbroke were publiſhed in 1754; and as all were ready to ſhew their zeal (not forgetting their parts and learning) againſt heterodoxy and irreligion, ſo in 1755 I alſo publiſhed what I called "A Sketch of Lord Bolingbroke's Philoſophy;" though indeed my object was, to vindicate the moral attributes of the Deity, where lord Bolingbroke was chiefly original, other matters being only touched occaſionally. The latter end of this year, came out "The Uſe of Reaſon aſſerted in Matters of Religion, in anſwer to a Sermon preached by Dr. Patten[4], at Oxford, 13 July, 1755;" and, the year after, a Defence of this againſt Dr. Patten, who had replied. Theſe were favourably received by the public; yet, when the heat of controverſy was over, I could not look into them myſelf without diſguſt and pain. The ſpleen of Middleton, and the petulancy of Warburton, who were then the writers in vogue, had too much infected me, as they had other young ſcribblers; though I never had the honour to be of what Hume, in his Life, calls the Warburtonian School[5]. The ſubſtance, however, of theſe two pieces, purged entirely from all that ferment which uſually agitates theological controverſy, came forth in my "Concio ad Clerum," preached at Cambridge for my Doctor in Divinity's degree, July 4, 1759.

Between the two pieces on the Uſe of Reaſon and the Defence of the ſame, I publiſhed, at the requeſt of the ſheriff and grand jury, an Aſſize Sermon[1], preached at Leiceſter, Aug. 12, 1756.

---

[1] She died much and juſtly lamented the 12th of April 1790, aged 66. Her great-grand-father, Mr. Mompeſſon, rector of Eyam in Derbyſhire, is mentioned with honour by Mr. Howard, for "not quitting his pariſhioners under the dreadful calamity of the plague in 1665." Account of Lazarettos, p. 24. See alſo three letters from him in Seward's Anecdotes, vol. II. p. 27.

[2] "R. Heathcote, A. B. of Jeſus College, Cambridge, in 1746, publiſhed The Hiſtory of Aſtronomy, a ſmall 8vo, in Latin, of 82 pages; an ingenious performance," &c. Long's Aſtronomy, vol. II. p. 648.

[3] Fifteen Lectures in Watts's Logic were all I ever received from my tutors.

[4] [Dr. Thomas Patten (who died in 1790) was a leader of the Hutchinſonian ſect; and, agreeably to his principles and profeſſions, called his ſermon "St. Peter's Chriſtian Apology;" and which, in anſwer to "The Uſe of Reaſon," he ſays, "is farther illuſtrated and maintained againſt the objections and miſrepreſentations of Mr. Heathcote."—Dr. Horne alſo (afterwards biſhop) publiſhed that year "An Apology for certain Gentlemen in the Univerſity of Oxford aſperſed in a late anonymous Pamphlet ["A Word to the Hutchinſonians"], with a ſhort Poſtſcript concerning another Pamphlet lately publiſhed by the Rev. Mr. Heathcote. On this ſubject, ſee a controverſy in Gent. Mag. vol. LXV. pp. 532. 569. 931. 984; vol. LXVI. pp. 203. 642. 720.]

[5] [What Pliny ſays of pleaders at the bar may be ſaid of controverſialiſts in general—"Multum malitiæ, quamvis nolint addiſcunt." Epiſt. iii.]

In 1763, 4, 5, I preached the Boylean Lectures, in St. James's church, Weſtminſter, by the appointment of Secker archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the duke of Devonſhire, who were the truſtees. This appointment was very à-propos to me; for the matter was a good deal of it prepared in my pieces againſt Bolingbroke and Patten; ſo that I had nothing to do but to mould it into the form of Lectures. They conſiſted of twenty-four; two of which, making one diſcourſe upon the Being of God, I publiſhed, by way of ſpecimen, in 1763. A ſecond edition was printed the ſame year.

In 1765, upon the death of my father, I ſucceeded to Sileby, another ſmall vicarage in the county of Leiceſter; in 1766 was preſented to the rectory of Sawtry-All-Saints, in Huntingdonſhire; and, in 1768, to a prebend in the collegiate church of Southwell. Theſe, in ſo ſhort a compaſs, may look pompous; but their clear annual income, when curates were paid and all expences deducted, did not amount to more than 150*l.* In 1771, I publiſhed "The Irenarch; or, Juſtice of the Peace's Manual;" and qualified myſelf for acting in October that year. I qualified ſoon after for the liberty of Southwell and Scrooby, in Nottinghamſhire; yet, as ſtrange as it may ſeem, nothing could be more averſe from my temper and way of life. But I was in both the commiſſions of the peace, and teazed into it. The fates ſeem to have ſet themſelves againſt my natural humour; for I had but juſt done with the education of my eldeſt ſon Ralph Heathcote, upon which I beſtowed five or ſix years in a manner, intereſting it is true, but certainly not agreeable, to myſelf[2].

In 1774 was publiſhed the ſecond edition of "The Irenarch," with a large Dedication to Lord Mansfield. This Dedication contains much miſcellaneous matter relating to laws, policy, and manners, and was at the ſame time written with a view to oppoſe and check that outrageous, indiſcriminate, and boundleſs invective which had been repeatedly levelled at this illuſtrious perſon. But the publick was diſpoſed, perverſely as I imagined, to miſunderſtand me; they conceived that, inſtead of defending, I meant to inſult and abuſe lord Mansfield; and this, as ſhould ſeem, becauſe, writing under a feigned character, I did, by way of enlivening my piece, treat the noble Lord with a certain familiarity and gaiety of ſpirit. Upon this, in 1781, I publiſhed a third edition of "The Irenarch," ſetting my name at full length, and frankly avowing my real purpoſe.

In the ſummer of 1785 we left London altogether, and divided our rural abode between Southwell and Sileby, though Southwell of late has had the greateſt ſhare of us. I became vicar-general of this church from November 1788. The authority of vicar-general extends to 28 towns, the Peculiar of Southwell, over which he exerciſes epiſcopal authority, except ordination and confirmation. But the great object of my employment is the adminiſtration of juſtice; and object enough at my time of life. I have nearly reached the age of man; yet (I thank God) am tolerably free from infirmities, bating that general invalid habit which has attended me from my birth, and which certainly has not been mended by a ſtudious and ſedentary life. Far from preſuming, however, I do not reckon upon any long continuance; contented and reſigned, I enjoy myſelf reaſonably well; cultivating in the mean time, and careful to preſerve, what I call the true tone of ſpirit and temper, "neither to wiſh, nor fear to die"—ſummum nec metuas diem, nec optes[3].

Stet quicunque volet potens
Aulæ culminæ lubrico:
Me dulcis ſaturet quies.
Obſcuro poſitus loco.
Nullis nota Quiritibus
Ætas per tacitum fluat.
Sic cum tranſierint mei
Nullo cum ſtrepitu dies,
Plebeius moriar ſenex[4]."

To this curious and well-drawn account a few particulars may not improperly be added.

At the requeſt of Mr. Whiſton, Dr. Heathcote wrote the Life of Dr. Thomas Burnet, the learned maſter of the Charter-houſe, prefixed to the edition of his works, in two volumes, 8vo, 1759; and in 1761, on the recommendation of Dr. Jortin, was one of the original writers engaged in the compilation of the "Biographical Dictionary;" eleven volumes of which were completed in 1764, and a twelfth added in 1767. The articles, Simon Ockley, Dr. Robert James, Queen Elizabeth, Madame de Maintenon, Dr. Thomas Burnet, Dr. Jortin, &c. belong particularly to him. He had alſo a conſiderable ſum from the bookſellers for ſeveral new articles in the edition of 1784; and in a letter to a friend in 1791, ſpeaking of the ſame work, he ſays, "Methinks I ſhould like to correct it for another edition; ſuch an employment would ſuit my time of life."

He publiſhed in 1767 "A Letter to the Honourable Horace Walpole, concerning the Diſpute between Mr. Hume and Mr. Rouſſeau," 12mo; which, in ſome of the Reviews, was ſuppoſed to be by Mr. Walpole himſelf.

In 1775, he was the author of "Memoirs of the late conteſted Election for the County of Leiceſter: or, a new Triumphal Arch erected in honour of Victory obtained from that Conteſt by the True Old Intereſt. By a Freeholder of Leiceſter[5]." This little tract was printed apparently to amuſe and divert a few friends, and without any determined purpoſe of being publiſhed; but getting abroad, and coming to be univerſally known of by a pamphlet publiſhed againſt it by the Rev. Mr. Greenaway, Dr. Heathcote judged it expedient to ſend it forth at large. He prefixed, however, an advertiſement, by way of apology for ſo doing; ſtating "that the Memoirs, drawn up as ſoon as the conteſt they treat of was ended, were deſigned, partly by way of repriſal upon the conquerors, who had ſhewn an intemperance in their rejoicings, which was thought to border upon inſult; and partly to amuſe and divert the conquered, by retorting a little mirth and pleaſantry upon their adverſaries. Some copies, accordingly, were diſtributed amongſt individuals, but without any determined purpoſe to publiſh them: and if ſuch purpoſe was ever in deliberation at all, it was very ſoon laid aſide; and they were left to depart ſilently into that non-entity, from which indeed they had ſcarcely emerged. Unluckily, however, they have become an object of attention to the public: many have enquired with eagerneſs after them; and ſome have affected to ſpeak of them, even ſeriouſly. Hence it was deemed neceſſary to ſend them forth at large; leſt, from not being ſufficiently known, they ſhould paſs for ſomething, which they are not; ſhould, perhaps, be imagined to breathe a ſpirit unrelenting and vindictive, while they are really little more than a jeu d'eſprit: a mere ſally and ſport of wit, rather calculated to make ridiculous electioneering in general, than to ſerve the purpoſe of any particular electors.—The Compiler had much rather be eſteemed an honeſt and

---

[[1] This was publiſhed under the title of "Religion and Morality eſſential to Society;" and inſcribed of courſe to his friend and patron, William Pochin, eſq. then high-ſheriff, and to the grand jury of the county; and a new edition of it (prepared for the preſs in 1781) contains an appropriate compliment to Mr. Pochin, who was then member for the county.]

[2] He went to Chriſt Church, Oxford, and is now the King's miniſter at Cologne and Heſſe Caſſel. I trained alſo my younger ſon Godfrey Heathcote, who likewiſe went to Chriſt Church, and is now in orders. Theſe were all the children I have had.

[3] Martial x. 47.

[4] Senec. Thyeſt. Act 2.

[5] Two anſwers to this pamplet were publiſhed the ſame year; one by Mr. Greenaway, the other by Dr. Parry (ſee vol. II. pp. 121. 504). The late Rev. Mr. Dickinſon of Somerby alſo, ſpeaking of Dr. Heathcote and his pamphlet, in a MS note, obſerves, "This gentleman, though undoubtedly a learned man, was pleaſed to ſtigmatize the whole county of Leiceſter as Bœotians; adding, when in a ſtrange country, he was aſhamed to own himſelf a Leiceſterſhire man; and all this owing to his friend Mr. Pochin of Barkby loſing his election for the county of Leiceſter in the year 1775; a gentleman of a moſt unblemiſhed character; and who was ſorry to find his clerical advocate endeavouring, as much as in him lay, to ſet the county again in a flame, when all were ſo deſirous that every thing ſhould be buried in oblivion."

humane man, than either a wit or a ſcholar: he wiſhes to be believed when he declares, that he hath a perfect good-will and kindneſs towards all men; that nothing merely notional, no difference of opinion in either politics or religion, can deſtroy one grain of his affectionate regard for the well-meaning of all perſuaſions and parties; that, how ready ſoever he may be to ridicule the abſurd, and chaſtiſe the inſolent, he is equally ready to ſerve all men whatever; and that he would deem it a ſeverer reproach, than the petulant tongue of Slander hath ever caſt upon him, if he could juſtly be charged with neglecting this ſervice, when it was in his power to perform it."

In 1777 he made a trip to Holland, in company with his worthy friend Iſaac Reed, eſq. of Staple Inn.

His Irenarch, the Dedication, and the Notes, are now all ſcattered up and down, but without alteration, in "Sylva, or the Wood; being a Collection of Anecdotes, Diſſertations, Characters, Apophthegms, Original Letters, Bon Mots, and other Little Things[1];" and are, indeed, much properer for ſuch a miſcellaneous collection, as being no ways connected with one another. The firſt volume of Sylva was publiſhed in 1786; and a ſecond edition in 1788[2].

He uſed to ſay, and it was true, that he had materials for half a dozen ſuch volumes in his commonplace book; and actually began in 1789 to print a volume of "Miſcellanies;" including, 1. "The Irenarch;" 2. "Miſcellaneous Reflections upon Laws, Policy, Manners, &c. &c. in a Dedication to Lord Mansfield;" 3. "Morality and Religion eſſential to Society," (the Aſſize Sermon of 1756); 4. "A Diſcourſe upon the Being of a God; againſt Atheiſts (the Boylean Lecture); 5. "Fidei Fundamentum Ratio" (the Concio and Clerum of 1759); 6. "An Account of Simon Ockley;" 7. "Some Account of R. H. D. D. 1789" (the Memoirs here tranſcribed). The copies of this volume are in the poſſeſſion of Mr. Payne; and, it is hoped, will not longer be withheld from the publick.

Feb. 10, 1791, the Author of the preſent Work was favoured with the following ſhort but kind note:

"Dr. Heathcote is juſt now favoured with Mr. Nichols's addreſs; and wiſhes him ſucceſs. The countenance of a man of ſeventy, and who will probably be no more ere the Hiſtory of Leiceſterſhire appears, can avail but little. Dr. Heathcote knows nothing particular of the pariſh of Sileby: he is little there, Southwell being his place of conſtant reſidence: however, he will deliver Mr. Nichols's queries to his curate. Dr. Heathcote had a correſpondence ſome years ago on the ſubject of this publication: he has ſent it as underwritten to Mr. Nichols[3]."

On the North ſide of the church-yard of the cathedral at Southwell, a tomb placed over Mrs. Heathcote is thus inſcribed:

"Deſuerunt eſſe mortales
RADULPHUS HEATHCOTE, S. T. P.
hujus Eccleſiæ Prebendarius;
et uxor ejus MARGARETTA:
Hæc 12° Aprilis, 1790, ætat. 67;
Ille 28 Maii, 1795, ætat. 74.
ΑΛΛΗΛΟΥΣ ΕΦΙΛΗΣΑΝ ΣΥΓΗ. Theocritus."

Under a ſtone by the ſide of the above are depoſited the remains of Dr. Heathcote, with the following inſcription: "RADULPHUS HEATHCOTE, S. T. P."

PEDIGREE of HEATHCOTE, of CHESTERFIELD and SILEBY.

Arms: Ermine, three pomels, each charged with a croſs Or. Creſt, a mural coronet Azure, ſurmounted with a pomey charged with a croſs Or, between two wings diſplayed, Ermine; Plate LXI. fig 17.

Godfrey Heathcote[4], of Cheſterfield, gent. impriſoned for his loyalty in the civil wars. = ...

1. . . . . . Heathcote, a Cromwellian, waſted much of the family property.
2. Ralph Heathcote, rector of Staveley, co. Derby, 1661; = ... died about 1714.

Ralph Heathcote, fellow of Chriſt's College by a mandamus of king James II; rector of Staveley, and of Morton[5], co. Derby, died 1738, æt. 74. = Elizabeth . . . . . died 1747, æt. 86.

Ralph Heathcote, M. A. rector of Morton, co. Derby, and vicar of Sileby. co. Leiceſter, of Jeſus Coll. Cambr. d. June 9, 1765, æt. 68. = Mary, dau. of Simon Ockley, Arabic profeſſor at Cambridge, died Jan. 30, 1737, æt. 39.

Godfrey Heathcote, of Cheſterfield, attorney at law, clerk of the peace for Derbyſhire 14 years; died 1773, æt. 72. = Dorothy, dau. of James Cooke, rector of Burlington, d. 1766, æt. 65.
A ſon, who died young.

1. Ralph Heathcote, D. D. of Jeſus Coll. Cambridge, vicar of Sileby, co. Leic. rector of Sawtry All Saints, co. Hunt. and prebendary of Southwell; died May 28, 1795, æt. 74. = Margaret Mompeſſon, died April 12, 1790; æt. 66.
2. Charles, born Jan. 14, 1725; died 17 . .
3. Godfrey, marr. Sarah Chambers, of Derby, died 1773; ſhe died 17 . .
4. Rev. Edward Heathcote, M. A. of St. John's Coll. Camb. living 1800. = A coheir of . . . . Hacker, eſq. living 1800.

Elizabeth, unmarr. 1800.
Mary, died unmarr. Jan. 8, 1780, æt. 48.
Grace, living unmarried 1800.
Dorothy, married 1766 Anthony Lax, of Cheſterfield, attorney at law, and clerk of the peace for the county of Derby, who took the name of Maynard in 1784; both living 1800.
No iſſue.

Children of Ralph Heathcote and Margaret Mompeſſon:
1. Catharine. = Whelpdale, dead.
2. Mary. = Armſtrong.
3. . . . . = Hunt.

Children of Rev. Edward Heathcote:
1. Charles Heathcote[6], living 1800.
2. Rev. Edw. Heathcote, B. A. of St. John's Cambridge. = Jane Cock, of Cheſterfield.
Iſſue.
Several other children.

1. Ralph Heathcote, eſq. his Majeſty's Miniſter Plenipotentiary at Cologne and Heſſe Caſſel. = A German lady.
Ralph, 1800.

2. Rev. Godfrey Heathcote, of Southwell. = Anne Sharpe[7], of Bury St. Edmonds.
1. Godfrey.
2. Ralph.
3. Joſeph-Chappel.
4. Anne.
5. Ockley.
6. Margaret.
7. Edward.
8. William.
9. Elizabeth-Frances.

---

[1] "This work," the Author ſays, "is not ſo much intended for the mere illiterate Engliſh reader, as for men who have been liberally trained, and are not unacquainted with languages; men who may wiſh to have ſome pabulum mentis, or mental fodder, always at hand, but whoſe profeſſions and ſituations in life do not permit leiſure to turn over volumes."

[2] "Our work having met with a far better reception, than the now prevailing taſte for books and reading gave any reaſon to expect; it hath ſeemed good unto us to reviſe and reprint it. We have ſaid in the title-page, that it is enlarged and corrected: enlarged it is, in the Text as well as Notes; but the corrections extend no farther than to the language, unleſs the tranſpoſition of an article or two, and the inſertion or omiſſion of here and there a ſentence, may be called ſuch. Nothing fundamental, nothing reſpecting doctrine, notions, or ſentiment, is changed in the leaſt. In ſhort, we have endeavoured, by a few additions, to be a little more uſeful and a little more entertaining; yet are far from being elated, or ſanguine in our expectations."

[3] See this correſpondence at the beginning of the preſent volume.

[4] Of this family was Mr. Gilbert Heathcote, alderman of Cheſterfield; whoſe eldeſt ſon, Gilbert, was created a baronet, June 17, 1732-3; and whoſe third ſon, Samuel, was alſo created a baronet Aug. 16, 1733.

[5] He kept a regular diary of the principal occurrences in his pariſh.

[6] He publiſhed in 1794 an octavo pamphlet, intituled, "Obſervations on the Corporation and Teſt Acts, in a Letter to a Friend; wherein is fully proved that no Diſſenter from the Eſtabliſhed Church can be admitted into any Office where the Teſt is required by Law as a Qualification, ſuch Diſſenter being inadmiſſible, though he demand the Sacrament, on any occaſion whatever. To which is prefixed, a ſhort Addreſs to the junior Council of the Town and County of the Town of Nottingham. By Charles Heathcote, Gentleman."

[7] This lady's father was reader of one of the churches in Bury upwards of 40 years.

SKEF-

SKEFFINGTON,

"pulchra ſedes Scevingtorum[1]," antiently called Sciftitone, and oftentimes written Skeffintone, Skeftington, Skeſtington, and Skevington, from the Saxon words ꞅceap, a ſheep, and ꞇon, a town, is a ſmall village, ſeated on a fine eminence, cloſe by and South of the turnpike road leading from Uppingham to Leiceſter; diſtant from the county town about ten miles, and from Uppingham about nine. Its ſituation is pleaſant, dry, and healthy. It is bounded on the Eaſt by Tugby, on the South by Rolleſton, on the Weſt by Billeſdon, on the North by Tilton, and on the North-eaſt by a ſmall part of Lodington; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote.

At the general ſurvey, Sciftitone is noticed as a member of the royal manor of Rodolei; containing twelve ploughlands; a mill of twelve pence value; and a wood, three furlongs long, and one broad[2].

Odo de Scevington was owner of the manor of Dolce in Kent in 1231[3].

In 1247, "De Serjantiis, Juratores dicunt, quòd Robertus filius David tenet per ſerjantiam eundi nuncius domini regis per totum infra Angliam ad cuſtum ſuum, & extra Angliam ad cuſtum domini regis; & valet per annum viii lī. x s̃."[4]

In the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about the year 1240, Sceftinton David' is deſcribed as conſiſting of one ploughland and a half; and in the ſame authentic record we find the following curious entries relative to the grand ſergeancy of this lordſhip:

"David de Scheftinton tenet in Scheftinton & in Merdefeld Wargnag', iv carucatas & i virgatam; & valet terra illa li s̃. Et debet eſſe nuncius dñi regis.

"De Serjantiis arrentatis per Robertum Paſſelewe tempore Henrici regis filii regis Johannis.

"In villâ de Sceftinton ſunt 15 virgate terre de ſerjantiâ dñi regis, de feodo Rob̄ti filii David; & heredes pro dictâ terrâ debent domino regi unum nuncium ad cuſtum eorum per xl dies infra Angliam; unde heredes dicti Roberti filii David habent in dominico viii virgatas terre & unam bovatam." Theſe heirs, it appears, were, "Magiſter Godefridus de Lucteburgh, Thomas de Thokeby, & Barth̄us Picout."

"Item prior de Landâ tenet 3 bovatas & 5 acras.

Item Chriſtiana que fuit uxor Joħis de Mardefeld tenet 1 virgatam.

Item Stephanus Jocelin 1 bovatam.

Item Willielmus de Buodon 1 bovatam.

Item abbas de Croxton 2 bovatas, 22 acras & dim'.

Item Petrus ad Fontem dim' acram.

Item Nicolaus Baret 3 rodas.

Item Robertus de Ilmeſton 3 rodas.

Pretium cujuſlibet virgate, 10s̃.; pretium cujuſlibet acre, 5 denarii[5]."

In 1257, when Alan de Swineford was ſheriff of the county, a ſurvey was taken of Skeftington, by twelve good men of the vill; who declared upon oath, that a virgate of land there was equal to the maintenance of four oxen, two averiæ, and two cows with their calves, 30 ſheep with their lambs, one ſow with her litter, and five geeſe with a gander and their brood, till the feaſt of St. Martin[6].

In 1273, it was found that Agnes, daughter of Robert, ſon of David de Skeffington, died ſeiſed of one meſſuage, one bovate and the fourth part of one bovate of land (value 10*s.* a year), at Skeffington, held of the king in capite, by the ſervice of an eighth part of one meſſenger when the king went into Wales; and that Margery ſiſter of the aforeſaid Agnes, and Amicia her niece, were her next heirs, and both of full age. Her arms were, Or, a lion rampant Vert[7].

In the ſame year, John lord of Verdun, at his death, held of the king in capite, the manors of Cotteſbach, Newbold, Skeffington, Tugby, Halſted, Belton, Gracedieu, Sharnford, Bocardeſcote, Sutton, Naneby, Barlſton, and Alveton[8], with their ſeveral honours and members; and Theobald de Verdun, his next heir, was then aged 22 years and upwards[9]. This Theobald was afterwards conſtable of Ireland; and poſſeſſed the advowſon of Skeffington in 1301, 1310, and 1312.

In the Itinerary of 1280, Skeffington and Tugby anſwered collectively as one vill; and, when ſcutage was paid after the rate of three marks, each virgate of land of the fee of Verdun paid 1*d.*[10]

The abbot and convent of St. Mary de Pratis at Leiceſter poſſeſſed ſome property in this pariſh; which is thus deſcribed in their Regiſter:

"Habemus in Skeyfyngton, ex dono & feoffamento Willielmi Aſton, redditum ſubſcriptum, ſicut patet in cartâ primâ ii libri de Chartwary.

Willielmus Hawkyn tenet 1 meſſuagium, 1 croftum, iii tofta, & ii virgatas terre; & reddit xxvi s̃. viii đ.

Willielmus Buttelarius tenet liberè unum meſſuagium & dimidiam virgatam terre, nuper Joħis Cubley; reddens iiii đ.

Johannes Cubley tenet liberè unum meſſuagium, nuper Thome Cubley; reddens xii đ.

Prior de Landâ tenet liberè 1 toftum juxta placeam terre ſuper le Grene, ubi ſolebat eſſe ſitus manerii; reddens xiiii đ. & homagium, ſicut patet per finalem concordiam.

Heres Willielmi Peyton tenet liberè redditum xii đ.

Require terrarium predicte virgate terre in terrario fratris Wiłłi Charite. Summa levabilis, xxx s̃.

Memorandum, quòd omnia predicta meſſuagia, terre, & redditus, recuperata fuerunt per placitum, in curiâ domini regis, apud Eboracum, in octavis Purificationis beate Marie, anno regni regis Edwardi Tertii xii°, &c. Unde habemus finem levatum, &c. ut patet in finali concordiâ. Et habemus cartam domini regis Edwardi de mortizatione predictorum, &c."[11]

In the terrier of their poſſeſſions, referred to under Barkby, p. 45, Skeffington fills two pages.

The abbot and convent of Croxton alſo poſſeſſed here a conſiderable ſhare of the lordſhip. They had a meadow in Wariniſholm, and two ſelions; three acres in Crotlindeſwong; a meadow under Randulſwode; two ſelions in Brentingſwolde; and a moiety of the North meadow; all which, together with ſix ſelions in Skeffington field, were given by Robert the ſon of David, together with his body.

Robert de Mardefeld gave ſix acres, and John ſon of Simon one toft; all in pure alms, and parcel of the fee of Robert the ſon of David.

They had alſo Andreſland, being three acres and a half, given to them by John the ſon of the ſaid Robert, together with his body.

William de Wytheland gave a bovate of land in the fee of Milo de Mardefeld.

Their other poſſeſſions here will be ſeen by the following extracts from their original Regiſter:

"Habemus, de dono Roberti filii Philppi, v acras terre & ii ſeliones, & totum pratum quod habuit apud Brokeſheved, cum forerâ arabili, & totum jus & clameum quod ipſe & heredes ſui habuerunt in aſſarto de Herteſſilig, in puram eleemoſinam.

Item habemus, de dono ejuſdem Roberti filii Philippi de Markefeud, totum pratum ſuum quod habuit in Depedale-more, in puram eleemoſinam; item, de dono ejuſdem, ii rodas, in puram eleemoſinam.

Item habemus, de dono Milonis filii Milonis, unum toftum in eâdem villâ, quod Willielmus de Carleton

---

[1] Wyrley, MS.

[2] "In Sciftitone 12 carucatæ terræ, & molinum de 12 denariis. Silva 3 quarentenarum longitudinis, & 2 quarentenarum latitudinis." Domeſday, fol. 230 b. 1.

[3] Eſch. 15 Hen. III.

[4] Placita 31 Hen. III. in Receptu Scaccarii.

[5] See the Introductory Volume, pp. xlix. li.

[6] See the Appendix to vol. II. p. 87; where the names of the jury are preſerved.

[7] Eſch. 2 Edw. I. N° 20. Leic.

[8] Alveton was the chief ſeat of Verdon's barony in Staffordſhire.

[9] Eſch. 2 Edw. I. N° 34. Leic.

[10] See Appendix to vol. II. p. 87.

[11] Charyte's Rentale, fol. cxxix.

tenuit, cum libero introïtu & exitu, (& jacet juxta toftum Roberti Blundi,) in puram eleemoſinam.

Item habemus, de dono ejuſdem, unam bovatam terre, in puram & perpetuam eleemoſinam, reddendo ſibi & heredibus ſuis annuatim xiiđ.; quem quidem redditum Henricus de Sc̄o Petro, filius Milonis de Markefeud, nobis remiſit & quietum-clamavit in puram eleemoſinam.

Item habemus, de dono Johannis filii Ricardi, iii ſeliones, in puram eleemoſinam; quas habuit de dono predicti Willielmi.

Item habemus, de dono Willielmi filii Ricardi de Garthorp, majorem locum prati ſui ex utrâque parte de Lundeſbrock, in puram eleemoſinam.

Item, de dono ejuſdem Willielmi, dimidiam acram terre, cum prato adjacente, ſuper Hotun; & dimidiam acram terre à Toldeford; & dimidiam acram in Eſkelund; in puram eleemoſinam.

Item, de eodem Willielmo, viii ſeliones terre, in puram eleemoſinam.

Item habemus, de dono Johannis de Hertiſhorn, homagium & ſervicium Willielmi de Garthorp, in puram eleemoſinam.

Item idem Willielmus de Garthorp reddidit & renunciavit nobis totum tenementum ſuum quod de nobis aliquando tenuit in Skeſtington, cum omnibus pertinentiis, tam infra villam quàm extra, in ſerviciis & homagiis, conſuetudinibus accidentibus, liberorum hominum qui de eodem tenuerunt; & in perpetuum quietum-clamavit de ſe & heredibus ſuis; nichil ſibi retinens, neque in tenemento, neque in homagio vel ſervicio, vel alicujus juris vel clamei vendicatione; habendum & tenendum nobis benè & in pace, liberè & quietè, abſque omni vexatione & calumniâ juris per reclamationem ſui vel heredum ſuorum. Et, nè iſta redditio & tenementi renunciatio, cum pertinentiis, &c. proceſſu temporis cedere poſſit à memoriâ, preſens ſcriptum, &c.

Item Thomas de Kaythorp & Amicia ſponſa ſua reddiderunt & renunciaverunt nobis totum tenementum quod de nobis tenuerunt aliquando in Skeſtington.

Item dicta Amicia confirmavit nobis, in liberâ viduitate ſuâ, dictam redditionem; & renunciavit & dedit nobis totum jus & clameum quod ſibi & heredibus ſuis de dicto tenemento hereditariè poſſet accidere.

Item habemus, de dono Ricardi de Hertiſhorn, cum corpore ſuo, annuum redditum xiiđ. in puram eleemoſinam, recipiend' annuatim ad feſtum Sc̄i Michaelis, de tofto quod Johannes Dareth tenuit, per manum ejuſdem Johannis, vel eorum qui dictum toftum tenuerint; ita quòd liceat nobis dictum toftum diſtringere pro predicto redditu.

Item Johannes de Hertiſhorn, filius ejuſdem Ricardi, dictam donationem nobis confirmavit in puram eleemoſinam; warrantizabunt ipſe & heredes ſui, &c. Et remiſit & quietum-clamavit nobis annuum redditum xiiđ. quem eidem reddere ſolebamus, de uno tofto quod jacet juxta toftum quod Robertus filius perſone tenuit. Dedit etiam nobis, per aliam cartam, unum toftum, cum edificiis & pertinentiis, quod Robertus Blund tenuit, in puram eleemoſinam.

Item habemus, de dono Johannis filii Simonis, unum toftum, cum pertinentiis, in puram eleemoſinam; quod Yvo Molendinarius aliquando tenuit. Item tres ſeliones, cum pertinentiis, in puram eleemoſinam. Item, totum pratum quod habuit juxta Rolinſton Broc, in puram eleemoſinam. Item duo tofta in puram eleemoſinam, que jacent inter capitale meſſuagium Roberti David & toftum quod fuit Will̄i Wytelunt.

Item, de dono ejuſdem, xv ſeliones, cum pertinentiis, in puram eleemoſinam.

Item totam placeam & partem, cum pertinentiis, que fuit quondam Willielmi de Garthorp, ad Fayrewellecroft; & totam partem quam habuit de terrâ Herberti in Fayrwelle-hill, cum pertinentiis, in puram eleemoſinam.

Item, de dono ejuſdem, ii placeas prati; ſcil̄t, unam ſuper Flintideles, & aliam ex oppoſito de Tilton-Litelhayche; & tres ſeliones; in puram eleemoſinam. Item, dimidiam acram terre in Brocholes, in puram eleemoſinam.

Item confirmavit nobis totum jus & clameum quod habuit in muro levato circa croftum noſtrum.

Item confirmavit nobis ii placeas prati, quas habemus de dono Simonis filii ſui, in puram eleemoſinam.

Item habemus iiii ſeliones in eſcambio, de Galfrido filio ejuſdem Johannis, juxta molendinum noſtrum ventriticum.

Item habemus pratum excambiatum cum Stephano filio Willielmi, & Robertus filius David idem confirmavit nobis in puram eleemoſinam, quod jacet circa Andriſlund.

Item habemus, de dono Thome filii Ade, dimidiam acram & ii particulas prati, in puram eleemoſinam.

Item habemus, de dono Ricardi filii Rogeri de Specton, dimidiam acram terre, reddendo annuatim iđ. pro omni ſervicio & exactione, ſcutagio & demandâ.

Item habemus, de dono Henrici de Billeſdon, totam quarteram unius ſelionis in territorio de Billeſdon; & plenariam licentiam eundi ad eandem & redeundi, & lapides cariandi; in puram eleemoſinam.

Item habemus, de dono Willielmi filii Galfridi, totum pratum quod habuit in Swanilpol & in Liteldale, cum pertinentiis, in puram eleemoſinam.

Item habemus, de dono Willielmi Fraunceys, vi rodas terre, & dimidiam acram; & duos ſeliones; & totum pratum quod habuit in Rollinſtoñ-broc.

Item, de eodem Will̄o, totam partem terre quam habuit in Longedale-lund, in puram eleemoſinam.

Item habemus, de dono Willielmi filii Willielmi Fraunceys, ii ſeliones terre arabilis, cum pertinentiis.

Item habemus, de dono Henrici Lofty, dimidiam acram terre, cum pertinentiis, in puram eleemoſinam.

Item habemus, de dono Johannis filii Yvonis, iiii acras terre, cum paſturâ pertinente.

Item habemus, de dono Willielmi filii Johannis de Carleton, unam bovatam terre, cum tofto quod jacet juxta toftum Roberti Blundi, in perpetuam eleemoſinam, reddendo annuatim iis̄. viđ.; quam quidem bovatam terre, cum tofto, Milo filius Milonis de Markefeud nobis dedit, ut ſuprà intitulatur.

Item habemus, de dono Henrici filii Emme, totam terram quam habuit in Haldeyniſbroch.

Item habemus, de dono Ricardi de Glen, quandam culturam terre, cum pertinentiis, in campo de Halſted.

Item Joh̄es de Queneby & Yſouda uxor ſua eandem culturam nobis confirmaverunt in puram eleemoſinam.

Item habemus, de dono Stephani filii Gocelini, ix ſeliones, cum pertinentiis, per duas cartas.

Item habemus in Skeſtington, de dono Gervaſii filii Willielmi Clerici, unam rodam terre arabilis in puram eleemoſinam.

Item habemus, de dono ejuſdem Gervaſii, unam bovatam terre, reddendo heredibus Roberti David iiis̄. iiiđ. pro omni ſervicio. Hanc donationem confirmavit nobis Robertus predictus filius David, & remiſit nobis predictum annuum redditum, in puram eleemoſinam. Dedit etiam nobis totam terram que jacet inter Horſpol-gate & Humberſtoniſholm, & inter viam que vocatur Stotgate & aliam viam que vocatur Stainſgate, que pertinet ad illam bovatam quam Stephanus Garray tenuit; quam terram Johannes filius ejuſdem Roberti habuit de dono ſuo, & eandem p̄dco Roberto patri renunciavit; in puram eleemoſinam.

Item habemus, de dono ejuſdem Roberti, unum croftum quod dicitur Tippiſcroft, cum pertinentiis, unam partem prati ſubtùs boſcum Ranulfi; & paſturam que pertinet ad iiii virgatas terre de dominico ſuo; & unum toftum quod Robertus Blundus tenet.

Item habemus, de dono ejuſdem, unam culturam terre arabilis que vocatur Crokiſlundeſwong, in puram eleemoſinam; & totum pratum quod vocatur Warmiſholm; & ii ſeliones qui abuttant ſuper Lundiſbroc; & medietatem totius prati quod vocatur Northmedewe; in puram eleemoſinam. Item Agnes filia ejus dictam medietatem prati nobis confirmavit in puram eleemoſinam; & Beatrix ſoror ejus ſimilitèr eandem nobis confirmavit in puram eleemoſinam.

Item habemus, de dono Johannis filii predicti Roberti, totum boſcum ſuum quod vocatur Endriſlund, quem habuit de dono dicti Roberti patris ſui, in puram eleemoſinam. Item predictus Robertus dictum boſcum nobis confirmavit in puram eleemoſinam.

Item habemus, de dono ejuſdem Roberti, ſex ſeliones terre, cum corpore ſuo, in perpetuam eleemoſinam. Hec omnia predicta dedit & confirmavit nobis predictus Robertus, in magnâ confirmatione ſuâ.

Confirmavit etiam nobis, in eadem confirmatione, duo tofta que habemus de dono Johannis filii Simonis, & ſex acras terre quas habemus de dono Roberti filii

Philippi, & quicquid habemus de dono Johannis filii ejus de feodo ſuo. Remiſit etiam nobis totum jus & clameum quod ipſe vel heredes ſui habuerunt, vel habere poterunt, in omnibus predictis terris, pratis, paſturis, & omnibus ſerviciis forinſecis, & aliis ſerviciis & ſectis, exactionibuſque, à quocunque vivente exigi poterunt, & quicquid habemus de feodo ſuo, in liberam & perpetuam eleemoſinam. Warentizabit, &c.

Item habemus, de dono Johannis predicti, filii ejuſdem Roberti, dimidiam acram terre, cum pratis adjacentibus, in puram eleemoſinam; quam habuit de dono Beatricis ſororis ſue.

Agnes, Sara, & Margeria, filie predicti Roberti David, confirmaverunt nobis omnes terras & tenementa quas habemus de dono dicti Roberti patris earundem, & de dono predicti Johannis fratris earum, & de dono Thome de Tokeby & Bartholomei Picoth [1], & de dono omnium aliorum qui fuerunt de feodo predicti Roberti, cum paſturâ unius carucate terre; & remiſerunt nobis totum jus & clameum quod habuerunt in predictis terris & tenementis, & paſturis; in liberam, puram, & perpetuam eleemoſinam.

Item habemus, de dono predicti Agnetis, in liberâ poteſtate & viduitate ſuâ, totam portionem prati ſui in Normedewe, & totam portionem ſuam quam habuit in II culturis, ſcilt, Stretewong & Brendalehil.

Item habemus, de dono Agnetis, in puram eleemoſinam, totam portionem terre ſue, cum prato, in Litilhae, & in Thornil-hill, & in Endris, & in Mambuſkes, cum prato & paſturâ; & II ſeliones ſuper Schortoft, propter victum ſuum & veſtitum.

Item habemus, de dono ejuſdem Agnetis, in puram eleemoſinam, totam portionem prati ſui in Lundiſbroc, que valet per annum VIIIs̄.; ſcilicet, ad inveniendam pitanciam conventui in die anniverſarii ſui.

Item habemus, de dono predicte Sare, in liberâ poteſtate & viduitate ſuâ, totum pratum quod habuit in Modiniſholm & Rodeburge, in puram eleemoſinam.

Item habemus, de dono predicti Thome de Tokeby, aſſenſu predicte uxoris ſue, totam partem illorum in Northmedewe, in puram eleemoſinam; & quinque rodas terre in Strete-wong; & alias quinque rodas terre, que abuttant ſuper magnam ſtratam versùs Tilton. Item unam acram terre & totam partem quam habuerunt in Houme, in puram eleemoſinam. Item unam acram in Litilhae. Item totam terram ſuam in Wyothebrocke, in puram eleemoſinam.

Item habemus, de dono Bartholomei Picoth & Margerie uxoris ſue, quinque rodas terre in Stretewong, que abuttant ſuper magnam ſtratam versùs Tilton. Item totam portionem earundem in Northmedewe. Item unam acram terre & dimidiam in Litilhae, in puram eleemoſinam.

Item habemus, de dono Walteri de Hugeford & Matildis uxoris ſue, totam terram, cum capitali meſſuagio, quam cepit in maritagio cum predictâ Matildâ; & totam terram quam habet de adquiſito de heredibus Helye de Halſtede, ſive de aliis; warda & relevia; & quicquid juris vel clamei ad ipſos pertinuit, tam in dominicis quàm in redditibus, in boſco & plano, & pratis & paſturis, viis & ſemitis, & omnibus communiis, & libertatibus, & aiſiamentis, ſine ullo retenemento; reddendo eiſdem & heredibus eorum VIII marcas argenti, ad feſtum Sc̄i Michaelis, apud abbathiam noſtram, pro omni ſervicio & exactione ad ipſos pertinentibus, ſalvo forinſeco; warentizabunt nobis per predictum ſervicium, &c. Item Willielmus Pantulf, qui dictas terras & tenementa dedit predicto Waltero, confirmavit nobis dictam donationem.

Item predicte terre & tenementa, quas predicti Walterus & Matilda nobis dederunt, ſicut predictum eſt, chirographantur in curiâ domini regis in hunc modum; ſcilt, quòd predicti Walterus & Matilda recognoverunt totam predictam terram, cum pertinentiis, ſcilt, VIII virgatas terre, cum pertinentiis, eſſe jus noſtrum & eccleſie noſtre, habendam & tenendam nobis & ſucceſſoribus noſtris de predictis Waltero & Matildâ, & heredibus ipſius Matilde, in perpetuum; reddendo indè annuatim VIII marcas argenti, ad feſtum Sc̄i Michaelis, pro omni ſervicio ad predictos Walterum & Matildam, vel heredes ipſius Matilde, pertinente; & faciendo capitalibus dominis feodi illius forinſecum ſervicium quod ad terram illam pertineat, pro omnibus ſerviciis & exactionibus. Warentizabunt predicti Walterus & Matilda, vel heredes ipſius Matilde, nobis & ſucceſſoribus noſtris, totam predictam terram, cum pertinentiis, & per predictum ſervicium adquietabunt & defendent contra omnes gentes in perpetuum.

Item dominus Johannes de Verdun confirmavit nobis predictas VIII virgatas terre, cum capitali meſſuagio, & toſtis & croſtis, & aliis pertinentiis ſuis; & inſuper IIII virgatas terre in Scarneford, cum toſtis & croſtis & aliis pertinentiis ſuis, quas habemus de dono Ogeri de Sproxton, cum corpore ſuo; tenendas & habendas nobis in perpetuâ eleemoſinâ, reddendo annuatim ſibi & heredibus ſuis VIs̄. argenti, videlt, ad Michaelis feſtum IIIs̄. & ad Paſcha IIIs̄. pro omnimodo ſervicio, exactione, conſuetudine, & demandâ, ſalvo forinſeco ſervicio quantum ad terram illam pertineat; ita quòd nos quieti ſimus de ſectis curie & viſu franciplegii in perpetuum; ſalvo ſibi & heredibus ſuis viſu franciplegii omni tempore tenentium noſtrorum, tam liberè tenentium, quàm villanorum, bis in anno, in eodem feodo manentium. Et, ſi de cetero aliquam terram nobis appropriemus, vel removeamus tenentes noſtros, liberos vel villanos, de tenementis ſuis, faciemus ſectam curie bis in anno, ſicut & ipſi tenentes facere conſueverunt.

Item idem Johannes confirmavit nobis cartâ ſuâ, quòd poſſumus includere croftum noſtrum, cum capitali meſſuagio noſtro, muro vel foſſato; ſalvo jure liberè tenentium undique exiſtentium.

Item omnes liberè tenentes ejuſdem ville incluſionem ejuſdem crofti nobis cartâ ſuâ conceſſerunt; ſet quedam ſigilla eorum non ſunt appoſita predicte carte.

Habemus, de dono Johannis filii Ranulfi de Fryſeby, & Amicie ſponſe ſue de Skeſtington, plures terras, prata, & paſturas, unam virgatam terre, & unum toftum, in Skeſtington, in liberam, puram, & perpetuam eleemoſinam; per duas cartas.

Item confirmaverunt nobis & quietum-clamaverunt omnes terras & tenuras, cum pertinentiis, quas habemus de dono & confirmatione Agnetis filie Roberti David, in Skeſtington; & de dono & conceſſione Thome de Tokeby & Sare ſponſe ſue, & Bartholomei Picoth & Marjorie ſponſe ſue, & Roberti David de Skeſtington; & remiſerunt nobis totum jus & clameum quod habuerunt in predictis terris & tenementis; in liberam, puram, & perpetuam eleemoſinam.

Item habemus, de eiſdem Johanne & Amiciâ, unam culturam terre, cum forerâ unâ adjacente; & unam rodam terre, in perpetuum excambium, pro uno tofto in Skeſtington, cum edificiis.

Item iidem Johannes & Amicia tenent de nobis unum toftum, cum edificiis, in Skeſtington, ad terminum vite; reddendo nobis annuatim unam libram cumini pro omnibus ſerviciis, ſalvo forinſeco.

Item Johannes de Fryſeby remiſit nobis totum jus & clameum quod habuit in unâ placeâ prati, & in unâ rodâ terre, & in duabus dimidiis rodis terre, in Skeſtington.

Habemus, de dono Willielmi filii Ricardi de Marnham, omnes terras & tenementa, cum pertinentiis, que ſe contingebant hereditario jure in villâ & territorio de Skeſtington; ſcilt, VII acras, unum toftum, & unam domum, in Skeſtington; & quicquid juris vel clamei ſibi, &c.; in liberam, puram, & perpetuam eleemoſinam.

Idem Willielmus confirmavit & quietum-clamavit nobis omnes terras & tenuras quas habemus de dono Johannis filii Ranulfi de Fryſeby & Amicie ſponſe ſue, Agnetis filie Roberti David de Skeſtington, Thome de Tokeby & Sare ſponſe ſue, Bartholomei Putoth & Marjorie ſponſe ſue, & Roberti David, in villâ & territorio de Skeſtington, in liberam, puram, & perpetuam eleemoſinam.

Liberi homines de Skeſtington remiſerunt nobis & quietum-clamaverunt totum jus & clameum quod habuerunt ratione communitatis, in placeis illis quas dudum incluſeramus muris & foſſatis continuatis manſo noſtro . . . . in villâ de Skeſtington. Conceſſerunt etiam nobis, ut liceat nobis, ubi fuerint foſſata in fundo eorundem feoffatorum, muros conſtruere; & in illâ placeâ que jacet coram P...... murum conſtruere, &c.

---

[1] This name is ſometimes written Putoth; but is evidently the ſame which in the Teſta de Nevill is called Picout, one of the heirs of Robert ſon of David.

Habemus, de dono Willielmi Fraunceys de Skeſtington, unam culturam terre in territorio de Skeſtington; ſcilt, VI ſeliones & unam foreram, cum quibuſdam capitibus prati, & unam placeam prati; & unam rodam terre, cum quodam holmo prati; & duas rodas terre, cum II ſuathis prati; in Skeſtington; & inſuper confirmavit nobis, & quietum-clamavit, unum toftum in Skeſtington; in liberam, puram, & perpetuam eleemoſinam.

Habemus, de dono Johannis filii Galfridi, molendinum de Skeſtington, unam acram & tres rodas terre, quas habuit de Willielmo filio Galfridi, fratre ſuo; & indè non habemus cartam feoffamenti, ſet veteres cartas de perquiſitione predicti Willielmi.

Item Walterus filius Willielmi de Hugeford confirmavit nobis & conceſſit, in liberam, puram, & perpetuam eleemoſinam, omnes terras & tenementa que habemus, de dono & conceſſione Walteri Hugeford & Matilde uxoris ſue, in villâ & territorio de Skeſtington. Et remiſit nobis octo marcatas annui redditûs, quas pro dictis tenementis & terris eidem ſolvere ſolebamus, de ſe & heredibus & aſſignatis, vel heredibus aſſignatorum, in perpetuum. Remiſit etiam nobis dictum redditum per unum ſcriptum ad terminum XL annorum.

Item Willielmus Fraunceys remiſit, pro ſe & heredibus ſuis, totum jus & clameum quod habuit in omnibus terris & tenementis ſuis, & que unquam fuerunt anteceſſorum. Warentizabit, &c.

Item Thomas Randolf remiſit nobis totum jus & clameum quod habuit in omnibus terris & tenementis que habemus de dono anteceſſorum; & warantizabit nos de ſectâ hundredi de Goſecot versùs Johannem de Segrave & omnes alios.

Item Willielmus, filius Galfridi de Skeſtington, remiſit & quietum-clamavit nobis totum jus & clameum (per tres cartas) quod habuit in omnibus terris & tenementis quas habemus in Skeſtington & Tilton. Warentizabit & unam placeam, &c. [1]"

The prior of Laund had alſo two yard-lands in the pariſh of Skeffington [2].

This village gave name to the Skevingtons, an antient and noble family, who have continued owners thereof for ſeveral centuries; and they have produced many men of note and abilities, who have repeatedly by their lives adorned the hiſtoric page. Few families in the kingdom can boaſt of more antient and honourable deſcent, or have more eminently diſtinguiſhed themſelves on all occaſions.

Sir William Skeffington has an original grant of king Henry III; with the great ſeal in Plate LXV. fig. 1.

John de Skeffington is witneſs to a deed relative to lands in Potters Marſton, 1267.

Simon Skeffington lived at Skeffington in the reign of king Edward I. and was father of Geoffrey, and John of Tatton; and in 1303, that monarch granted to Geoffrey de Skeffington and his heirs liberty of free-warren in all their demeſne lands at Skeffington. "Hiis teſtibus; Johanne de Warennâ comite Surrie, Thomâ comite Lancaſtrie, Radulpho de Monte-Hermero comite Glouceſtrie & Hertfordie, Humfrido de Bohun comite Herefordie & Eſſexie, Guidone de Bellocampo comite Warwicie, Johanne de Britanniâ juniori, Hugone le Diſpenſer, Roberto filio Rogeri, Roberto de la Warde ſeneſcallo hoſpitii noſtri, & aliis. Dat', per manum noſtram, apud Dunde, 16° die Octobris [3]."

In 1304, it was found that Nicholas de Lutterworth (who married Gundreda) held, at his death, one cottage, and two virgates and a quarter of land, with 3*s*. a year rent, in Skeftington, (as the inheritance of the aforeſaid Gundreda, late his wife, deceaſed,) of the king in capite, by the ſervice of finding a man, for the ſpace of 40 days, to carry the king's writs in time of war; and that Thomas [de Lutterworth] was the ſon and heir of the aforeſaid Gundreda [4].

In 1305, Avicia (wife of John Randolf) held, at her death, one meſſuage, half a virgate of land, and 18*s*. rent in Skeftington, of the king, by the ſervice of finding a man to carry the king's writs, for the ſpace of 40 days, in time of war, at her own expence. William Marnham of Skeftington was her ſon and heir [5].

In 1308, it was found that it would not be prejudicial to the king, nor to any other perſon, if permiſſion were granted to David de Scevington to exchange five marks of annual rent, with the appurtenance, in Halſted and Skeffington, for other lands [6].

In 1308, Amice Randolph died ſeiſed of one meſſuage, half a virgate of land, and 8*d*. rent, in Skeffington, held of the king in capite, by the ſervice of finding a meſſenger to carry the king's briefs in time of war, at her own charge [7].

In 1316, Theobald de Verdun held, at his death, two views of frankpledge at Skeftyngton (value 4*s*. a year); as alſo the advowſon of the church there (value 12 marks) [8].

In 1346, Geoffrey de Skeffington (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon,) was aſſeſſed 4*s*. for a tenth part of a knight's fee, parcel of the fee of Verdon [9].

Geoffrey was father of Thomas; and in 1355, it was found that it would be no damage to the king, nor any other, if leave were given to Thomas de Skeffington to give two meſſuages, two yard-lands, the fourth part of a yard-land, and 3*s*. rent, with the appurtenances, in Skeffington, to Ernald de Skeffington and Katharine his wife; and that they were held of the king in capite by grand ſerjeancy; viz. by contributing, with divers other perſons holding two virgates of land there, to find a meſſenger, to carry the king's writs and warrants to his army, in the time of war, by the ſpace of 40 days, at the proper coſt of the tenant [10].

In 1356, it was found that it would be of no damage to the king, nor any other, if leave were given to ſir John de Crophull, knt. and Margaret his wife, to enfeoff Ralph de Crophull parſon of Cotingham, and Richard de Makkeley clerk, in the advowſon of the church of Skeffington [11].

In 1369, it was found that Geoffrey de Skeffington died ſeiſed of one meſſuage and one virgate of land, with the appurtenances, in Skeffington; that John de Skeffington was his ſon and heir; and alſo that Adam Nicholas had entered upon two meſſuages, two virgates and a quarter of land, and 3*s*. rent, in Skeffington; which were held of the king in capite [12].

In 1389, William Bardolf of Wirmgey, knt. died ſeiſed of one knight's fee and an half in Billeſdon, Rolleſton, and Skeffington, which Simon ......, John Noveray, and William Dalby, held [13].

The family of Ravenſcroft of Flintſhire quarters the coat of Skeffington from about the time of Henry IV. when Hugh Ravenſcroft married the daughter and heir of Ralph Holland by Roſe his wife, daughter and heir of John Skevington, of Bretton, co. Flint, ſon of William Skevington [14].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Skeffington was rated at 1*l*. 12*s*. 6*d*.; and, in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum; but an abatement was then made of 1*s*. 6*d*.

In 1435, Agnes wife of John Aleſbury, eſq. died ſeiſed of 40*s*. rent, and of the view of frankpledge, in Skeffington, and of the advowſon of the church [15].

John Skeffington, eſq. who was reſident at Skeffington at that period, added greatly to the property of the family, by his marriage with Margaret daughter and heir of William Ouldbeif and Maud his wife; which Maud was daughter and heir of Brian Deane.

Their ſon Thomas Skeffington, eſq. who was living in 1460, and, with his wife Mary, was buried at Skeffington, had three ſons; William, John (who became an alderman and ſheriff of London, and of whom hereafter), and Thomas.

William, the eldeſt ſon, was honoured with knighthood by king Henry VII; in the 24th year of whoſe reign he was ſheriff of the counties of Leiceſter and Warwick, which office he alſo executed in the 7th and 13th of Henry VIII. In 1523, the demeſnes of the manor of Datchurſt in Kent, which had fallen to the Crown by the attainder of Edmund Stafford duke of Buckingham, were given to ſir William Skeffington; who, in 1529, was appointed the king's commiſſioner to Ireland, where he arrived in Auguſt, with inſtructions (among others) to find out a means to reſtrain the exactions of the ſoldiers; to call a parliament; and to provide that the poſſeſſions of the clergy might be ſubject to bear their part of the public charge. This commiſſion he diſcharged with ſo much care and fidelity, that he made way to thoſe preferments which he ſoon after enjoyed; for, in 1530, he was appointed maſter of the ordnance in England; and from that office made lord deputy to Henry Fitz-Roy, baſe ſon of king Henry VIII, duke of Richmond, lord lieutenant of Ireland, June 22, the ſame year, on which account the Iriſh uſually called him The Gunner. The king fixed his choice upon him, as the fitteſt perſon to curb the inſolences of O'Neile, O'Connor, and O'More; and, repairing to his poſt, he was received in a ſolemn proceſſion near St. Mary's Abbey, with great applauſe of the citizens, who conſidered him as their deliverer from the frequent incurſions of thoſe Iriſh chiefs upon the Engliſh pale. Accordingly, collecting his forces, he marched into the territory of Leix (now the Queen's County) againſt O'More and O'Connor, whom, by ſlight but frequent ſkirmiſhes, and driving away their cattle, he eaſily ſubdued. But, before the end of that year, private animoſities aroſe between him and the earl of Kildare, which ſoon increaſed to an open hoſtility: however, he neglected not the ſervice of the publick; but in 1531, accompanied by that nobleman, made an inroad into Ulſter, and, having taken and demoliſhed O'Neile's caſtle of Kinnard, deſtroyed the neighbouring territories, and burned the villages, thereby terrified Hugh O'Donnell, lord of Tyrconnel, into a ſubmiſſion, and (6 May) received at Drogheda his bond of fidelity to the king, by his delegates Conatius O'Fraghill, abbot of Derry, and Richard O'Greyhan of Drogheda, who entered into indentures for his preſervation of the peace, ſir Hugh himſeif being detained by ſickneſs from performing it in perſon. After this, the enmity between him and the earl of Kildare grew to that height, that ſir William, by letters and meſſengers to England, charged him with many heinous crimes; which the earl retorted by the ſame methods, endeavouring to prove his adminiſtration corrupt, and by that means effect his removal from the government. The event for a time favoured his proceedings; for, going to England about Eaſter 1532, he not only procured ſir William to be recalled, but himſelf to ſupply his place; and, returning to Dublin in Auguſt, received the ſword from him, which contributed ſtill more to enflame the contention, and to keep it alive until the year 1534; when the earl being ſent for into England, to anſwer the charges of his enemies againſt his government of the kingdom, and leaving his ſon deputy, who entered into open rebellion, ſir William Skeffington was thought the moſt proper perſon to ſuppreſs it, as he had done others, and to that end, July 30, was made lord deputy of Ireland. He landed at Dublin, October 11, with a well-furniſhed army; was received by the mayor and citizens with great joy, to whom he delivered the king's letters of thanks for their approved fidelity; and, receiving the ſword from the lord chancellor Trimleſton, inſtantly proclaimed Fitz-Gerald a traitor, and, October 28, marched to raiſe the ſiege of Drogheda, then inveſted by him; who flying, upon his aprpoach, to muſter an army in Connaught, he again proclaimed him a traitor, November 4, at the High Croſs, and returned to Dublin; where he prepared for the ſiege of the caſtle of Maynooth, which he undertook March 15 following, and had it ſurrendered in April; and afterwards ſo broke and ſcattered Fitz-Gerald's forces, that he could never collect any conſiderable army; but being ſoon forced to ſubmit, was ſent to England by ſir William, and executed there. This important ſervice being over, he prepared, in order to diſtract and diſperſe the rebels, for an expedition in Ulſter; but no ſooner had Con O'Neile intelligence of his deſign, than he deſired a parley; which being granted, and a day appointed, they met at Drogheda, and on certain conditions concluded a treaty, which (July 26) was ratified, and O'Neile received into favour. After this, his age and infirmities obliged him to ſolicit the king's licence to return to England; but his ſervices were too conſiderable, and his preſence too neceſſary in Ireland, to permit his majeſty to comply with his requeſt; who, in his anſwer, "thanked him for the taking of Fitz-Gerald; and told him, that he muſt continue in his government, notwithſtanding his age and ſickneſs[1]." He obeyed his ſovereign's commands; and died lord deputy the latter end of December, 1535, leaving the character of a worthy governor; and, among all the virtues he poſſeſſed, "very juſt of his word and promiſe." He was honourably buried, according to his dignity, in St. Patrick's church in Dublin; though afterwards a monument was erected for him at Skeffington; ſince demoliſhed by the impiety of the laſt age[2].

---

[1] Peck, MS. 4935; è Cod. MS. in 4to, apud Belvoir, fol. 30. a.

[2] Cart. 4 Edw. III. n. 6. per Inſpex.

[3] Cart. 31 Edw. I. n 3.

[4] Eſch. 33 Edw. I. N° 29. Leic.

[5] Eſch. 34 Edw. I. N° 34. Leic.

[6] Eſch. 2 Edw. II. No. 92. in Turr. London.

[7] Eſch. 2 Edw. II; ex Libro de Lovel.

[8] Eſch. 10 Edw. II. N° 39. 71. Leic.

[9] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[10] Inq. ad quod dampnum, 29 Edw. III. N° 14. Leic.

[11] Inq. ad quod dampnum, 30 Edw. III. N° 12. Leic.

[12] Eſch. 43 Edw. III. pars 2. N° 9.

[13] Eſch. 13 Ric. II. N° 6. Leic.

[14] MSS. in the College of Arms, A. 20. 45. b.

[15] Eſch. 14 Hen. VI. N° 32. Leic.

Sir William Skeffington was twice married; and, by his firſt wife, Margaret daughter of Everard Digby, eſq. of Tilton, had a ſon Thomas, who ſucceeded him at Skeffington; and by his ſecond wife, Anne daughter of ſir John Digby, knt. of Kettleby, had two ſons; 1. John, who was of London, and a knight, but died ſ. p.; 2. Thomas junior, whoſe lineal deſcendant, on failure of heirs male of the elder branch, ſucceeded to the property in Kent.

Sir William's will is here annexed, from a copy in the poſſeſſion of Thomas Selleck Brome, eſq.

"In the name of God, Amen. The firſt day of June, in the yeare of our Lord God 1522, I, ſir William Skevington, of Skevington, in the biſhoprick of Lincolne, knight, beinge of whole minde and good memory, make and ordaine this my teſtament and laſt will, under this forme following: Firſt, I bequeath my ſoule to Almighty God, and to the bleſſed Virgin our Lady St. Mary, and to the Holy Company in Heaven; and my body to be buried in the pariſh church of Skevington aforeſaid, before the bleſſed Trinitie, or elſe where it ſhall pleaſe th'Almighty. Alſo I bequeath to the altar, for my tithes and oblac̄ons forgotten, in diſcharging of my conſcience, x s̃.; and to the pariſh church of Skevington aforſaid, x s̃.; and to the cathedral church of Lincolne, iii s̃. iiii đ.; and to the church of Bylleſdon, vi s̃. viii đ.; and to the church of Tylton, iii s̃. iiii đ.; and to the church of Tougby, iii s̃. iiii đ.; and to the chapel of St. John of Roulſton, iii s̃. iiii đ.; and to every of the houſes of Freẽrs in Leiceſter, x s̃.; to be paide to them ſo ſoone as it is known that I am departed this world, that they may ſing their Trentals for my ſoule immediately: and xl đ. to our Lady of Grace of Forthington; and xl đ. to the prieſt of the place; and xx đ. to the autar, to pray for my ſoule; and the ſaid x s̃. to have a Trentall poore. Item, I will that a prieſt be found of my goods the ſpace of five years, to wait of my wife, and to ſing at Skevington for my ſoule, my wive's ſoule, and my father's ſoule and my mother's, John[3] Skevington and Jeſſe Ingwardby, my Lord Marqueſſe[4], and all the ſollis that I ſtand charged for, and am bound to pray for; and he to have vi l. for his ſallary; and ev̄ry ſecond yeare iii yards of black cloath for his gowne, price of a yard xl đ.; and if it fortunes John Tayler, my chaplin, that goeth with me in this journey of warre[5], to over-live me, then I will that at what hour he be better bene-fitted, that he have the ſaid ſtipend and wages the ſaid yeare if he be ſo contented. And more for myſelfe I do not aſke nor command, but vi ł. in pence to be dealt to poore people in the next towns adjoining to Skevington, to them that moſt needs have, as ſhall be thought by my executors, to be dealt all on one Friday, about x of the clocke the ſame day; and the prieſts of every of the ſaid townes to have iiii đ. to ſay maſſe of rem̃bring for my ſoule the ſame day; and the poore people to be warned to heare the ſaid maſſes: and further I will not charge, but as my wife and mine eldeſt ſon will vouchſafe to do of their charitie. Further, it is my will, that my wife ſhall peaceably enjoy all my lands in Byllesdon, Roulſton, Laughton, and Keythorp, Leyre and Frolleſworth, during her life. And alſo I will that my ſaid wife have my manor at Skevington, with the appurtenances, with all the lands, tenements, woods, paſtures, and leaſows, with milne and other commodities within the town and fields of Skevington, making no waſt, but ſuficient firewood, building timber, and for hedging, and ſale of underwood, at all times as ſhall be to her moſt ꝓfitable, and ſhe this to enjoy as long as ſhe keepeth herſelfe ſole and unmarried: and if it fortune her to marry, then I will that my eldeſt ſonne, upon a loving and gentle warning, by the ſpace of a yeare if ſhe ſo long require time of him, give her knowledge to amove from the ſaid manor, he to enter in the ſame: provided always, that he ſhall not amove her, nor make entry himſelfe into the ſaid mannor, nor in no ꝑcel thereof, till ſuch time as he ſhall finde her ſufficient ſureties, by ſuch bond as ſhe my feefee and mine executors ſhall thinke good and lawfull ſureties, that he will truly pay, at two times in the yeare, to her during her life, for the ſaid manor of Skeffington, with the appurtenances, and the lands, meddows, paſtures, leaſues, woods, milnes, with other commodities, within the ſaid towne and fields, xx ł. of lawfull moneys of England, in manner and forme followinge; that is to ſay, yearly at the feaſt of Michaell the Archangell x ł. and at the feaſt of Peace[1], x ł. Item, I will that my ſaid ſon and heir ſhall have all the lands that moveth by my daughter his wife immediately after my diſeaſe. Item, I will that all my lands, with the manor and the advowſon of the church of Shelton, with the appurtenances, and with all the woods in the ſame towne and fields to my ſaid manor belonginge; and all my ſaid woods, with paſtures, leaſues, and meddows, with their appurtenances, lying within the townes and fields of Deyn, Hargrafe, Swynneſhed, and Pertenall; and all my mannor of Dachehurſt, in the county of Kent, and with all my purchaſed lands in Comley, Foxton, Lovnam, Kulby, Ilverſton, and the windmill of Laughton, and my lands in Moche Bowdon; I will that all the yearly rents and revenues of them ſhall be received by mine executors, and by them to be imployed to the performance of this my laſt will and teſtament; that is to ſay, firſt, for payment of my debts, whoſoever rightfully clayme any of me; and alſo my children to be married of the revenues of the ſame; and that every daughter of mine to have to her marriage c ł. if mar̃iage take not till two of them of Antony Colly to be mar̃ied to one of my ſaid daughters, which God ſhall ordaine; and another to Robert Calgrave; which wardes I ordained to that intent: and if either of the ſaid wardes, or both, refuſe to marry my ſaid daughter or daughters, then I will that my ſaid executors or ſupervisors of this my will ſhall intend him or them that ſo refuſeth other marriages accordinge to the law, where the beſt advantage may be taken; and that ſumme of money which groweth of him or them to be put to the ſume aforſaid; and if the marriages take effect of one or both, then the marriage or marriages diſcharge the ſaid daughter or daughters of the ſaid ſume of a c ł. afore to every of them aſſyñd. And alſo I will that my goods and debts to me owinge to the performance of my debts and legacies, that mine executors ſhall and receive iiii c marc', which I ſhall or I paſſe or take the ſea expreſſe in a bill, and written and aſſyned with mine owne hand, to my ſaid wife, when and whereof the ſaid ſume ſhall be levied; and then I doubt not, by God's grace, ſeeing the aſſured loſe both of my ſaid wife and my ſonne, but what it ſhall pleaſe God to ordaine for me, there ſhall be ſufficient and enough for the diſcharge of my conſcience, and ſafeguard of my ſoule. Item, I will that my ſaid executors and ſupervisors agree as well as they can with my cozen William Aſheby for the marriage of Anne Aſheby, daughter of George Aſheby, late of Quenby, who I doubt not they will finde reaſonable according to his worſhip and promiſe, with the help of ſir John Digeby and Ralph Skevington, in whom both he and I putt ourſelves in them to be ordered; and what ſumme or ſumms of money they agree upon, I will that my executors of ſuch my goods and lands above aſſyñd, content and pay with ſuch ꝓfitt as ſhall grow upon the revenews as ſhall grow by the ſaid bargaine. And if good fortune life in Thomas Skeffington my younger ſonne and the ſaid Anne, then I will that, God being pleaſed, y^t^ marriage be ſolemnized between them two; and if it fortune the ſaid Thomas to dye, as God defend, afore marriage had; and then if it fortune my wife to be with child, and it be ſon, and given of God to have life; then I will that the ſaid marriage of the ſaid Anne ſhall take effect in him; and elſe my ſaid executours and ſupervisors make the beſt bargaine that they can for the marriage of the ſaid Anne[2]; and the profitt that cometh thereof to be towards the performance of this my will. And I will that Anthony my ſon have yearly to his exhibuſion, to ſuch time as he be benifitted, vi ł. xiii s̃. iiii đ.; and when he hath his firſt promocõn, that then I will the ſaid ſumme to ſurſeace, and from that time to be paid to my executor. And as for Leynard and Matthew my ſonnes, as their demainure is to be ordered by their mother and eldeſt brother, I remitt to their diſcreſſions for their helpe and ſucker as they ſhall ſee cauſe. And further, when my will is fully performed in every thinge in the ſame as I have intended, then I will that my lands in Bedfordſhire and Huntington, afore aſſin'd for the performance of my will, my wife to have it if ſhe live ſole and unmarried during her life, for her refreſhing, and for the ſakes of my ſaid children: and if it fortune that ſhe marrie, then I will my ſaid ſonne pay unto her yearly vi ł. iii s̃. iiii đ. finding to her ſufficient ſurtie for payment of the ſame; and that done, he to enter into all the lands in the ſaid both ſhires as in his owne poſſeſſion. And I will my ſaid ſonne have the manner in Dachehurſt, in ſuch manner as the king hath given it to me; and further I will that all my purchaſed lands afore aſſign'd in my will, that Thomas Skevington, my younger ſon, to have it to him and to his heirs; and if it fortune him to dye without iſſue, as God forbid, that then I will, if my wife be with childe, and it be a ſon, that then he ſhall have my ſaid purchaſed lands to him and to his heir; and if he fortune to die without iſſue, then I will my ſaid wife have all my ſaid purchaſed lands during her life; and after her deceaſe, to remain to Thomas Skevinton my eldeſt ſonne, to him and to his heirs for ever. I will my eldeſt ſon ſhall have ther[3] gobletts and my gowne of tauney velvett furred with booge, and a black damaſk gowne lyned with ſarſenett; and I will that a baſon and an ewer of ſylver, with two[3] . . . . coppis double gilded, to be of my gifts as heir-lomes, to remaine to my manor of Skevington for ever; and then to be delivered at the end of my wife's life to my eldeſt ſonne, or to the uſe of his heirs. Item, I will that my brother Thomas have my black gowne bound with velvett and furred with bogy. And I will my cozen William Dunham have my black puck-gowne furred with boge. And all my other goods I give to my welbeloved wife, to do with all at her pleaſure, and for the welth of my ſoule, as ſhe thinketh beſt; whom I ordayne and conſtitute my executrix; and my brother Thomas Skevington, and ſir Rowland Digby, prieſt, and Anthony Skevington my ſonne, my executors with her, for the performance of this my laſt will; and ſir John Digby and Thomas Skevington my eldeſt ſonne, my ſupervisors of the ſame. And further, I will that all ꝑſons that be or hath been entitled by feſſeement by me or by any of my anceſtors, by truſt, uſe, or otherwiſe, that they ſtand and be feſſeed from henceforth to the uſe and uſes of true ꝑformance of this my laſt will. Written at Skevington aforſaid, the 6th day of June, the xiiiith yeare of the reign of king Henry the VIIIth. Theſe witneſſes; my brother Thomas Skevington, Thomas Skevington my eldeſt ſonne, Antony Skevington, William Dunham, and George Scott, with others. And to the teſt of the ſame I have ſubſcribed this my preſent and laſt will with my owne hand, and ſett to my ſeale, the day and yeare above written."

---

[1] "Lord Herbert of Cherbury, in his Life of King Henry VIII. ſtates, that, Skeffington being old, weak, and ſlow in all his enterprizes, the lord Leonard Grey, brother to the marquis of Dorſet, was authorized, July 22, 1535, to execute the place of Deputy Lieutenant of Ireland, to the no little grief and diſcontentment of Skeffington." Kennett's Complete Hiſtory of England, vol. I. p. 182.

[2] Borlaſe's Reduction of Ireland, p. 103.

[3] John was the eldeſt ſon of his ſecond wife; and Jeſſe a daughter of the firſt wife. By the manner in which they are mentioned in the will, the compiler of the pedigree in Mr. Shaw's Staffordſhire ſuppoſed them to be ſir William's father and mother.

[4] Probably Thomas marquis of Dorſet (father to him in note 1.) who died in 1494.

[5] This was an expedition to France, undertaken in June, 1522, under the command of the earl of Surrey.

---

[1] So the tranſcript; probably a corruption for Paſch'.

[2] Anne Aſhby was married to George Skeffington, and died ſ. p. 1536.

[3] Sic in MS.

Sir John Skeffington, knt. alderman of London, and merchant of the Staple at Calais, in his laſt will, dated Dec. 31, 1524, gave one third of his property, according to the laudable cuſtom of the city of London, to his dear wife Elizabeth; another third only to his ſon William; and, his daughter Elizabeth being already honourably provided for in marriage, the other third he bequeaths in a great variety of legacies to relations, friends, apprentices, and ſervants; and directs a tomb to be placed in the church of the Crutched Friers, with the effigies of himſelf, wife, and children; gives divers ſums of money to that and other churches; particularly to St. Michael in Cornhill, where he was ſome time a pariſhioner; to the pariſh church of Skeffington, where he was born, a veſtment with all the appurtenances, to be ſet on the croſs there, value £6. 13*s*. 4*d*.; and a white veſtment to the church of our Lady of Bradley, value 53*s*. 4*d*.; legacies to Chriſtopher Skeffington [1], pariſh prieſt of St. Mary Woolnoth; to his brother Thomas and his children; to his ſiſter Ellyn, ſiſter Zouch, ſiſter Grafford, ſiſter Weſtcott, and his ſiſter the wife of Fulc; his nephews, Thomas, Matthew, and Leonard; niece Colley, &c.; and makes his friend Benjamin Digby and others executors; and his brother ſir William overſeer and ſupervisor of his will. He died July 10, 1525, ſeiſed of the manor of Fiſher-wicke; and of divers lands, &c. in the city of London, and counties of Middleſex and York [2]; leaving William [3] his ſon and heir, who in 1529 appears to have been 13 years old. The will was proved Dec. 21, 1525 [4].

The manor of Skevington was part of the poſſeſſions of Croxton abbey; and was granted, in 1539, to Thomas earl of Rutland and Eleanor his wife in fee [5].

In 1564, there were 13 families in Skeffington.

Leland, in his Itinerary, ſays, "Skefington lay upward a mile and more from Noſeley, wher roſe the name of the Skefingtons [6];" and he afterwards mentions the name of Schefinton under the head of "Gentlemen of Leyrceſterſhir that be there of moſt reputation [7]."

Thomas Skeffington, eſq. the lord deputy's eldeſt ſon, married Margaret, daughter and heir of Edmund Stanhope, of Weſt-Markham, co. Nottingham, eſq.; and, by various inquiſitions, it appears that ſhe died Jan. 1, 1539, ſeiſed of one third of the manor of Weſt Markham, worth 20*s*.; and of lands in Little Darlington and Ryton; which came to her huſband by the courteſy and law of England [8]. The huſband's will bears date June 28, 1542; and he died June 29, 1543. They were both buried at Skeffington. His land was Skeffington, where he poſſeſſed the manor; and hers, beſides Markham, the manor of Stoke Rochford, Lincolnſhire; with 2000 acres of arable, 100 of paſture, 300 of wood, 200 of meadow, and 200 of ruſhes and furze, in Stoke Rochford, South Stoke, Obthorpe, and Eſton [9].

William Skeffington, eſq. their ſon, who was heir to both, and was more than 21 years old at the death of his mother, married Mary, daughter of ſir Thomas Cave. He died Sept. 22, 1571; and was buried at Skeffington; leaving Thomas his ſon and heir, who, being then of full age, poſſeſſed the manor of Arley in Warwickſhire (which probably came with Stoke from the Rochfords); and ſucceeded alſo to the property at Skeffington. He was high-ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire in the 18th and 41ſt of Elizabeth; married Iſabella youngeſt daughter of Sir John Byron of Newſted, co. Nottingham, knt.; and died in 1600; when it was found that he was ſeiſed of 7 meſſuages, 200 acres of land, 100 acres of paſture, and 15 acres of wood, in Skeffington, late parcel of the poſſeſſions of the late-diſſolved monaſtery of Croxton, held of the queen in capite, by the ſervice of an 100th part of a knight's fee; alſo of two other meſſuages, 63 acres of land, 30 acres of meadow, 7 acres of paſture, and two acres of wood, in Skeffington aforeſaid, late parcel of the poſſeſſions of the late-diſſolved monaſtery of St. Mary de Pratis, Leiceſter, held of the queen in capite, by the ſervice of a 20th part of a knight's fee, and the rent of 15*s*. 1½*d*. a year; that he died 11 May laſt; and that William Skeffington, eſq. his ſon and heir, was then aged 21 years, 8 months, and upwards [10].

About this period Mr. Camden ſays, "Skeffington, quæ ut claræ familiæ nomen impertiit, ita viciſſim ab illâ claritatem accepit [11]."

In 1588, the memorable æra of the defeat of the Spaniſh Armada, Thomas Skeffington [12], eſq. of Belgrave, was ſheriff for Leiceſterſhire; and ſummoned together all perſons between the age of 18 and 50 years (to the number of 12,530) able to bear arms; 2000 of the prime of which were ſent to Tilbury camp, the reſt were ſent home furniſhed with various miſſile weapons, and directed to rendezvous on the firſt news of the Spaniards ſetting foot on Engliſh ground [13].

William Skeffington, eſq. was knighted at Theobalds April 23, 1603; and in 1605, it was found that he died ſeiſed of the property at Skeffington which is laſt deſcribed; and alſo of 8 meſſuages, 140 acres of land, 77 acres of meadow, 81 acres of paſture, three acres and an half of wood, and the rent of three ducks (trium ducarum) and three capons, in Skeffington, parcel of the poſſeſſions of the late-diſſolved monaſtery of Laund; held of the king in capite, by the ſervice of a 20th part of a knight's fee; and alſo the demeſnes of the manor of Datchurch in Kent, the reverſion of which was the king's; that he died the 19th of December then laſt paſt; and that John Skeffington, his brother and heir, was then aged 15 years, 10 months, and two days [14].

---

[1] Not noticed by Newcourt.

[2] Inq. at Stafford, Oct. 5, and at York Oct. 21, 21 Hen. VIII; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. I. (Harl. MSS. 756.) pp. 29. 93. Before 14 Oct. 1523, when he was ſtyled "a knight and alderman," he had been poſſeſſed of lands in Staffordſhire, Middleſex, and London, out of which he had granted an annuity to the duke of Norfolk, as appears by the duke's parchment diſcharge, in Mr. Brome's hands; though, 20 Nov. 1520, the lord Berners, in a Statute-Staple, ſtyles him only "John Skevington, merchant of the Staple of the town of Calais."

[3] The will of this William Skeffington (who was of White Ladies in Shropſhire) is very ſhort. It is dated May 30, 1551. Gives £20. to eldeſt ſon John; £40. each to his other children not married; reſidue of goods to wife Johan, executrix, together with brother Richard Leveſon, eſq. and ſaid ſon John. The Index-book mentions it was proved by the two former at Newport the ſame year, 1551; and calls the teſtator of the pariſh of Tong, in which White Ladies is ſituated. Mr. Shaw mentions his death, from ſome inquiſition, as on the 31ſt of May.

[4] This will, which is long and curious, may be ſeen in the Prerogative Office in London.

[5] From the original grant in the Augmentation-office. [6] Vol. I. p. 16. [7] Ibid. p. 23. [8] Thoroton, p. 385.

[9] Inq. at Sleford, 27 Auguſt, and at Boſworth, 2 October, 35 Hen. VIII; and alſo at Ragenhill, co. Notts, 3 Aug. 36 Hen. VIII; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. V. (Harl. MSS. 760.) pp. 5. 356.

[10] Eſch. 1 Oct. 42 Eliz. [11] Britannia, p. 290.

[12] This Thomas Skeffington was probably a deſcendant from Thomas, brother to the lord deputy and the ſheriff of London, and whom the latter's will mentions to have children.

[13] George Morris was mayor of Leiceſter at the defeat of this armament, and had the honour to entertain all the nobility and prime gentlemen of the county; amongſt others were Henry earl of Huntingdon, lord lieutenant of the county; Walter Haſtings, of Kirby, his brother, and major-general, who commanded the 2000 choſen Leiceſterſhire men; and Thomas Skeffington, of Belgrave, eſq. who was then high-ſheriff of the county. Corporation Papers.

[14] Eſch. 25 Jan. 3 Jac. I. Cole's Eſcheats, vol. IV. (Harl. MSS. 759.) p. 196.

"Sir William Skeffington," ſays Mr. Burton, "deceaſed without iſſue; a knight of good eſtate and worth, but too much poſſeſſed with an Italian humour (la geloſia); who ſo much diſliked that licentious ſaying of Ovid to his wife:

"Non ego, quòd pecces quia ſis formoſa, recuſo;
Sed nè ſit miſero ſcire neceſſe mihi [1];"
(A little ſcape, ſith you are fayre, may well be borne;
But act it ſo,
I may not know
That I do weare the horne);

—that he would not vouchſafe his wife (Catharine, daughter of ſir Richard Chetwode, of Warkworth, co. Northampton, knt.) ſcarce to ſee or to be ſeen, to converſe or be converſed withall, though ſhe was a lady of many worthy parts, well qualified, and of great deſert. But, had he conſidered another ſaying of the ſame poet,

"Cui peccare licet, peccat minùs: ipſa poteſtas Semina nequitiæ languidiora facit."
(He that may ſinne ſinnes leaſt: the pow'r to ſinne Makes one leſs able ever to beginne.);

—and, a little after,

"Nitimus in vetitum ſemper, cupimuſque vetita."
(We ſtrive for things forbidden, and covet that's denied);

—or, had he read the Antidote to that humour, penned by that witty Mantuan, Leuantino da Guidicciolo [2]; he would ſurely ſomewhat have been mollified: but I liſt not to cenſure him; but, with Arioſto, ſay,

"Ne la ſcuſa accetto che fuiſſe amore,
State cagione di coſi grieue errore [3]."
(The excuſe hereof I muſt approve,
When of this errour the cauſe was love)."

[So far we uſe the words of Mr. Burton.]

Sir William Skeffington was ſucceeded at Skeffington by his only brother, John Skeffington, eſq. who was unfortunately killed Nov. 4, 1613 [4], by Michael Bray, who had married his brother's widow [5], and was alſo ſlain at the ſame time [6]. By an inquiſition taken after his death, it appeared that the manor of Datchurſt, with its appurtenances, in Kent, had been entailed in fee on ſir William Skeffington and his heirs male, by letters patent dated 7 March, 13 Hen. VIII; and it paſſed accordingly to John Skeffington, eſq. (ſon and heir of Thomas Skeffington, junior, ſon of the lord deputy) who was then 40 years old. The property at Skeffington paſſed, under an entail of their brother ſir William, to his four ſiſters and coheireſſes.

1. Mary, wife of William St. Andrew [7], eſq. of Gotham, co. Nottingham; who dying before her brother John, her ſon John St. Andrew, eſq. inherited her portion of the eſtate.

2. Elizabeth, the wife of William Jettour, or Jetter; who died without iſſue.

3. Catharine, wife of William Brome, of Woodlow, co. Warwick, from whom the preſent baronet derives his deſcent.

4. Urſula, married to John Skeffington [8], eſq. of Fiſherwick, co. Stafford, and, in right of his wife, of Skeffington alſo; knighted by king James I. at Tamworth [9], Aug. 19, 1624; and baronet in 1635 on the death of his father, being the ſecond of the family who enjoyed that dignity. On the breaking out of the civil war, his loyalty was evident, from his being placed, in 1641, in the commiſſion of array for this county [10]; and in 1645 he was fined, with William his ſon, 1161*l.* 8*s.* 8*d.* He died in November 1651; and was buried at Skeffington. He was author of "The Hero of Lorenzo," a tranſlation from the Spaniſh of Gratian; and of ſome other publications; and celebrated for his great learning and knowledge of ſeveral languages; in all of which he excelled, as well as in mental qualifications and virtues.

His only ſurviving ſon ſir William, the third baronet, dying unmarried in April 1652; dame Urſula Skeffington, relict of the ſecond baronet, by deed and fine, levied by herſelf and Mr. Skeffington, with other parties, in 1654, conveyed the reverſion of a moiety of the manor of Skeffington to her kinſman William Skeffington, eſq. of Tunbridge in Kent.

In 1655, there was collected in Skeffington, Loſeby, and Newton, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 17*s.* 7*d.*

Dame Urſula Skeffington died in July 1658; and, deviſing her ſhare of the Arley eſtate to her nephew and executor Thomas Brome, eſq. deſired to be buried near her "late dear huſband, and dearly-beloved ſon ſir William." At the ſame time William Skeffington, eſq. ſtyled in her will "her loving couſin of Tunbridge," became poſſeſſed of Skeffington [11] under the above-mentioned ſettlement; and at the Reſtoration of king Charles II. (his eſtate being then worth at leaſt £1000. a year) was one of the intended knights of the Royal Oak [12].

In the year 1665 the plague raged at Skeffington ſo violently, that many of the inhabitants quitted the village, retired to the wood, and built huts to reſide in; and different parts of the wood (which is about a mile North of the town) are now called by the names of their different inhabitants at that time. The diſtemper is ſaid to have been brought hither by two or three perſons who left London to avoid the contagion.

Among the papers in ſir W. C. F. Skeffington's poſſeſſion, is a pardon under the great ſeal from Charles II. to Roger Twiſden, Edward Dering, knights and baronets, and John Skeffington [13], eſq. of all and every their breaches of truſt, great and ſmall, treaſons, rebellions, inſurrections, ſeditions, commotions, conſpiracies, and miſpriſions; and of all homicides, felonies, and other offences committed by them, either ſeparately or jointly; dated at Nottingham, Sept. 18, 1666.

---

[1] Ovid.

[2] "Antidoto della Geloſia diſtinto in doi libri: per Leuantino da Guidicciolo Mantouano. In Vinezia, appreſſo Franceſco Rampazetto, 1565, 8vo.

[3] Arioſto, Orlando Furioſo, Canto 32.

[4] "Obiit plenæ ætatis, & ante liberationem proſecutam ex manibus domini regis, 4° Novembris ultimò præteriti, ſine hærede maſculo de corpore ſuo procreato." Inq. at Eaſt Greenwich, 29 June, 12 Jac.; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. V. (Harl. MSS. 760.) p. 370.

[5] She was living in 1650, and enjoyed a jointure, under the name of "Old Lady Skeffington." Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. I. p. 372; where a farther account of the Fiſherwick family may be ſeen.

[6] The particulars of this unhappy rencontre have been already given, under Billeſdon, in vol. II. p. 434.

[7] His ſecond wife was Mary, daughter of Edmund Pilkinton; his third, Elizabeth, relict of . . . . . Fox, and daughter of . . . . . Wedgwood of Haracles, co. Stafford. Thoroton, p. 19.

[8] Whoſe father, ſir William Skeffington, was created a baronet May 8, 1627; and whoſe nephew ſir John Skeffington, on his marriage with Mary, daughter and heir of ſir John Clotworthy, baron of Antrim and viſcount Maſſareene, acquired thoſe noble titles by royal patent, dated 21 Nov. 1660, in default of iſſue male of the then lord. See hereafter, p. 449.

[9] Richard Skeffington, eſq. of Fiſherwick, was knighted two days after at Baſtwell-hall (probably either Ruſhall, Mr. Leigh's ſeat, near Walſall, and about 13 miles from Tamworth, or Balſhall, the ſeat of Robert Sidney earl of Leiceſter, which was in the king's road to Warwick, where we find him on the 27th). This royal viſit is not recorded in the Tamworth regiſter; but one, exactly five years before, is thus noticed: "Aug. 1619, the 18th day, James owre noble kinge and that worthey prince Charles came to Tamworth. The kinge lodged at the caſtell; and the prince at the Mothall. Mr. Thomas Aſhley and Mr. John Sharp, then belieffes, gave royall entertainment." On the 20th ſir Philip Eaton was knighted at Tamworth; and the next day the king reached Warwick.

[10] It is ſaid, that the farmers, who lived at Skeffington about this period, almoſt wholly exiſted from his bounty. They went regularly to dinner at the hall every day; and the poor as regularly attended at a certain hour alſo in a cloſe near, and were there ſerved, in a ring, with the remnants of the plenteous board.

[11] William Skeffington, eſq. and Elizabeth his wife reſided before this on St. Mary hill at Nottingham. Thoroton, p. 498.

[12] See vol. I. p. xlvii.

[13] Unleſs the pardon had a retroſpect to John Skeffington of Tunbridge, who died in 1661, we cannot aſcertain to what John this refers; and are equally at a loſs for Alice Skeffington, widow; againſt whom a commiſſion of lunacy was iſſued in 1581, when the verdict was non eſt lunatica. She at that time poſſeſſed a meſſuage and garden at Black Friers; and, after the death of William Humberſton (15 Dec. 1574), the manor of Dunwich in Suffolk. Cole's Eſcheats, vol. III. (Harl. MSS. 758.) p. 111,

In the Heraldic Viſitation of Leiceſterſhire, Sept. 8, 1682, Mr. William Skeffington, of Skeffington and Tunbridge, cauſed his pedigree to be very briefly entered [1]; which is here a little enlarged;

1. Thomas Skeffington [2], junior, (a younger ſon of ſir William Skeffington, the lord-deputy of Ireland, by his ſecond wife) captain of Nottingham caſtle. = Rachel, dau. of Robert Heſilrige, eſq.

William St. Andrew, of Gotham, co. Nott. eſq. died Nov. 25, 1624, æt. 46; buried at Gotham. = Mary, dau. of Thomas Skeffington, eſq. died Mar. 15, 1605, æt. 27.

John Skeffington, born 1574; and, as couſin and heir-male to John Skeffington, who was killed in 1613, inherited the property at Datchurch in Kent, which the king's patent had ſettled on the heirs male of ſir William, with remainder to the Crown [3]. = Anne, dau. of Thomas Galland.

John St. Andrew, eſq. æt. 13, 1614; died Jan. 14, 1625. = Elizabeth, dau. of John Bainbridge, of Lockington.

Barbara, married Will. Bainbridge, brother of Elizabeth; died April 5, 1623.

1. John Skeffington, died in December 1645 [4]. = . . .

John Skeffington, eſq. died Apr. 27, 1661; deviſed his eſtates to his uncle Francis and niece Elizabeth Lemming [7].

2. Thomas, died ſ. p.
3. Francis Skeffington, eſq. a captain in king Charles the Firſt's troops (deviſee of his nephew John.) He married Anne, dau. of Michael Chambers, of King's Sutton, gent. and died April 30, 1684, æt. 77.
4. Matthew, died ſ. p.

Mary, married William Danvers, of Adderbury, in Oxfordſhire.

Suſanna.

5. William Skeffington, eſq. of Tunbridge and Skeffington, by deed and fine acknowledged by the lady Skeffington after the deaths of ſir John and ſir William his ſon of Fiſherwick; æt. 72 years and 9 months in 1682. He was ſecond couſin to his wife's great grandfather; and died early in April 1692. = Elizabeth, 2nd dau. and coheir; and widow of ſir Fran. Thornhagh [5], of Fenton, co. Nott. died Jan. 11, 1676.

1. Mary. = Gervaſe Pigot [6], eſq.

3. Barbara. = Sir Oliver St. John, bart.

Francis Skeffington, eſq. of Tunbridge, died ſ. p. April 30, 1684, æt. 77; and gave by will £200. to purchaſe an annuity to provide 12 four-penny loaves of wheaten bread weekly to the poor of Tunbridge for ever. His relatives and friends, after one or more ſuits at law, agreed to divide his Kentiſh eſtate amongſt them; after which, it was gradually ſold in ſeveral parcels to different perſons [8].

On the death of William Skeffington, eſq. which happened in 1692, Skeffington went by his will, dated in 1687, to Thomas Brome, eſq. (grandſon of William Brome, eſq. and Catharine Skeffington [9] his wife); who in conſequence aſſumed the name of Skeffington, or, as he choſe to ſtyle himſelf, Skeffington, alias Brome. He married Elizabeth, only ſurviving daughter by the ſecond venter of ſir John Dugdale, Norroy king of Arms; by whom he had one ſon; Thomas, born Sept. 10, 1696; and two daughters; 1. Elizabeth, married to William Farrell, eſq. of Cheſter (grandfather of the preſent baronet, ſir William-Charles-Farrell Skeffington); 2. Bridget, married to ſir Thomas Peyton, bart.

It appears by letters [10] amongſt the preſent Mr. Brome's papers, that John lord viſcount Maſſareene lived to advance pretenſions (but ſoon dropped them) to Skeffington, in prejudice to Thomas Brome the deviſee, on the death of William Skeffington, in 1692; Mr. Danvers [11] alſo entered a caveat on that occaſion.

By an act paſſed in 1710, "for ſale of timber upon the eſtate of Thomas Skeffington eſq. an infant, for payment of his father's debts," it appears that Thomas Skeffington, alias Brome, eſq. deceaſed, by his laſt will, dated April 30, 1709, deviſed to his brother and executor Charles Brome, all that ground called Warner's Holme, and other the lands, meadows, and grounds, then or late in the poſſeſſion of his mother or her tenants, with their appurtenances, in truſt, by leaſing, mortgage, or ſale, to raiſe money for payment of all his juſt debts, and to apply the remainder thereof to his ſon; and in caſe of his ſon's death without iſſue, he gave the manor of Skeffington, with all his meſſuages, cottages, mills, lands, tenements, hereditaments, rents, and ſervices whatſoever, with their appurtenances, in Skeffington, together with the advowſon of the pariſh church, to his brothers Charles Brome and William Brome. And it appearing that the debts amounted to £3000. and the land deviſed to be ſold would not produce more than 1600*l.* and there being then in the ſaid woods a conſiderable quantity of timber, of which much was decaying; the guardians of Thomas Skeffington the ſon, an infant of the age of 14, applied for and obtained this act, to prevent the increaſe of debts, and for preſerving the inheritance, and ſpeedier payment of the creditors[1].

---

[1] "This account was exhibited to the Officers of Arms, at Leiceſter, Sept. 8, 1682, on behalf of Mr. William Skeffington, of Skeffington, my maſter, by me Kenelme Robinſon." See the Viſitation of that year in the College of Arms.

[2] Deſigned in marriage by his father for Anne, daughter of George Aſhby, eſq. of Quenby.

[3] See p. 433.

[4] This poſſibly may be the "ſir John Skeffington of Fiſherwicke, deceaſed," for whoſe debt of 40*l.* an acquittance occurs, dated Oct. 9, 1646 (written and atteſted by John Waybred, rector of Skeffington, the intimate of lady Urſula, and confidential over-looker of all her Skeffington affairs) to Mr. Thomas Brome, nephew, and afterwards executor to lady Urſula, and who appears to have managed all her concerns in widowhood. An inventory alſo appears, among Mr. Brome's papers, of "the goods of ſir John Skeffington, knight, taken Sept. 8, 1646," but containing nothing particular, being merely a valuation of live and dead ſtock, and goods (at Fiſherwicke-hall certainly, as it ſpecifies ſir William's chamber) at the prices of the times; 4*l.* for a cow, a horſe leſs, &c. The receipt runs thus: "October 9, 1646. Received by mee George Shittlewood, of Scalford, in co. Leiceſter, gent. fourty pounds of goods, &c. of Mr. Thomas Brome, being the laſt payment, in full ſatisfaction for the debt of ſir John Skeffington, of Fiſherwicke, deceaſed, to Mr. Richard Biddle, of Goldſmith Graunge, deceaſed. I ſay received, &c. George Shuttlewood." Seal, Ermine, three bows ſtringed, palewiſe *. "In the preſence of John Waybred, Chriſtopher Coles." Lady Urſula gives a legacy to her couſin Francis Bowden, gent. I ſee no trace of him in any pedigree I have met with. S. P. W.

[5] A valiant man, and colonel of horſe for the Parliament. He loſt his life by a Scotch lance, as it is ſaid, at the battle begun near Preſton in Lancaſhire, between duke Hamilton and that party. Thoroton, p. 415. Sir Francis Thornhaugh had two ſons; John, who ſucceeded him at Fenton; and Andrew, who, having purchaſed other ſhares of Arley, held court there May 10, 1723, jointly with Gerald lord Kinſale, whoſe maternal grandfather, Anthony Sadleir, gent. had purchaſed Oliver St. John's ſhare, with the manor-houſe, in 1665. Thomas's Dugdale, vol. I. p. 105.

[6] Mary Pigot, heir to her mother, was the firſt wife of Robert Burdet, eſq. eldeſt ſon of ſir Francis, and afterwards himſelf a baronet (ſee p. 352). Her daughter and heir Elizabeth was married to Charles Jennens, of the Middle Temple, and of Gopſal (where ſee the Jennens Pedigree). It is remarkable that ſir Robert ſhould have married two deſcendants from the ſiſters of John Skeffington who was killed in 1613. See p. 450.

[7] Thorpe's Regiſtrum Roffenſe, p. 858.

[8] Haſted, vol. II. p. 334. By this ſtatement it ſeems probable that they muſt have been enabled to ſell in conſequence of the Crown's remainder being extinguiſhed by the then Legiſlature, at the ſame time they ſold the manor, after the death of king Charles I; for Mr. Haſted ſays, that only the demeſnes of the manor were given in tail to the lord-deputy, but that the manor itſelf remained in the Crown till the above parliamentary ſale.

[9] "Robert Brome, ſon and heir of William by the coheir Katharine, left a ſon Robert, who (or his father) ſeems to have ſpent and ſold Woodlow, as the ſon become a boarder with his ſiſter-in-law Bridget, 1689, at Croxall, where he was buried the next year. He had a ſiſter Lettice, who ſoon after his death, 25 Oct. 1690, writes from Warwick to aunt Bridget Brome, ſigning Lettice Edes, ſpeaks of her huſband's wants, and appears to be her father's ſole then-ſurviving child, as ſhe claims a £50. legacy of dame Urſula to the children, generally, of Robert Brome, eſq. as then become due to herſelf. It is ſtrange enough that Dugdale, who mentions the elder Robert, then of Woodlow, the immediate iſſue of the Skeffington coheir, and quotes very particularly his curious old grants to Richard coquus de Woodlow, &c. ſhould afterwards, when he draws out the Brome pedigree in Badeſly-Clinton, break off (though plenty of room on his page) within two generations of Robert, and break off with a Reginald, married (enough to have reminded him) to a daughter of the prior Thomas of that very Skeffington houſe. But in Arley he is worſe than ſhort and defective as to the Skeffingtons; for he has left it printed, that the poſterity, inſtead of ſiſter's poſterity, of William (he who died 1605) do ſtill enjoy it" (Arley). As to Dr. Thomas's continuation of the Arley article, 'tis a moſt curious piece-work, beginning with a blundering pariſh-clerk tale of four coheirs (two of them really thoſe of John St. Andrew, and grand-daughter to one of the coheirs in queſtion), but inſenſibly ſliding on into a poſterior part of the hiſtory, well ſupported in appearance by dates and circumſtances, ſo as to give a falſe credit to the total of the narrative; but all along without quoting one voucher. It is far the worſt blot I know on the Doctor's book, which is moſt carefully printed from the old edition, ſo much ſo that I have obſerved but a ſingle inſtance of a wrong note-figure or two; and I think he has great merit in the pains that accuracy muſt have coſt, when additions and alterations were to be tacked on. S. P. W.

[10] He wrote one to Bridget, widow of Thomas, Jan. 31, 1692-3, requiring ſight of ſettlements.

[11] This muſt have been John Danvers, ſon of Francis Danvers, of Adderbury, co. Oxon, who married Mary, eldeſt ſiſter of William Skeffington (his mother being mentioned with him in ſpeaking of the caveat); who, writing to his kinſman Thomas Brome, from London, 18 Oct. 1677, ſends reſpects "to my uncle Skeffington."—There had been an earlier connexion between the families of Skeffington and Danvers; Elizabeth, the only ſiſter of ſir William Skeffington, the firſt baronet, having been married to Francis Danvers, eſq. of Swithland, who died in 1631. Mr. Brome has a bond, 4 Feb. 1621, from John Skeffington, of Skeffington, eſq. (lady Urſula's huſband, in his father's life) to "Elizabeth Danvers, of Switland, gentlewoman, payable at the houſe of Francis Danvers, eſq. in Swithland."

* See Plate LXIV. fig. 1.

The laſt-mentioned Mr. Skeffington died, unmarried, May 18, 1729; leaving two ſiſters his coheirs; and by indenture tripartite, 10 and 11 March, 1739, between ſir Thomas Peyton, bart. and dame Bridget his wife, who was ſiſter and one of the coheirs and alſo deviſee of the real eſtate of Thomas Skeffington the younger, eſq. who was ſon and heir of Thomas Skeffington, aliàs Brome, eſq. and who (i. e. dame Bridget) was alſo deviſee of the real eſtate of Elizabeth Hyde, widow and relict of William Hyde, eſq. (and who was formerly the widow and relict of the ſaid Thomas Skeffington, aliàs Brome,) of the firſt part; Anne Beaumont, Arabella Beaumont, Chriſtiana Beaumont, and William Buſby, executors of the laſt will and teſtament of ſir George Beaumont, bart. of the ſecond part; and Thomas Noble, eſq. ſon and heir and alſo executor of Thomas Noble, eſq. deceaſed, of the third part; reciting that, by a decree of the court of Chancery, made Dec. 8, 1718, in a cauſe dependent between Martin Hartopp and John Brome, and other creditors of the ſaid Thomas Skeffington, aliàs Brome, the father, plaintiffs, and the ſaid William Hyde and Elizabeth his then wife, Thomas Skeffington the younger, the ſaid ſir George Beaumont, Matthew Johnſon, eſq. the ſaid Thomas Noble, deceaſed, and others, defendants; it was, amongſt other things, decreed, that Mr. Lovilond, then one of the maſters of the ſaid court, ſhould examine and certify whether all the lands charged by the will of the ſaid Thomas Skeffington, aliàs Brome, the father, with the payment of his debts, were comprized in a ſettlement mentioned in the ſaid decree to bear date 26 Dec. 1657; and whether the ſaid teſtator Thomas Skeffington the father, or any in truſt for him, was not, at his death, ſeiſed in fee of other lands beſides thoſe charged by his will for payment of his debts: And, if it ſhould appear that there were any lands charged by the ſaid will with the payment of debts which were not comprized in the ſaid ſettlement, or that the ſaid teſtator, or any in truſt for him, was, at his death, ſeiſed in fee of other lands beſides thoſe charged by the will; it was farther ordered and decreed the ſaid ſeveral lands ſhould be ſold to the beſt purchaſer that could be got to be allowed by the maſter, and that all parties ſhould join; and the money ariſing by the ſaid ſale ſhould be brought before the ſaid maſter, and applied in diſcharge of the ſaid teſtator's debts: And farther reciting, that, by a report made in the ſaid cauſe by the ſaid Mr. Lovibond, bearing date 2 March, 1725, the ſaid Mr. Lovibond certified that he had been attended by the ſolicitors on all ſides, and, in their preſence, looked into a propoſal brought before him by the ſaid Thomas Noble the father, for the timber and wood and underwood ſtanding in the two woods in queſtion, called The Great Wood and Eagles Wood, and alſo the inheritance of the wood-ground on which the woods grew, being part of the eſtate directed by the ſaid order to be ſold by the ſaid maſter; by which ſaid propoſal, the ſaid Mr. Noble the father offered and bid for the purchaſe of the ſaid eſtate and premiſſes, having a good title made to him thereto, free from incumbrances, the ſum of £1000.; which ſaid report was afterwards confirmed by two ſeveral orders of court, bearing date reſpectively March 11, 1725, and July 20, 1727: And reciting, that, by another order of the ſaid court, made in the ſaid cauſe, March 23, 1736, it was ordered that the ſaid Thomas Noble the ſon ſhould depoſit £100. part of the purchaſe-money of £1000. into the Bank, in the name and with the privity of the accomptant-general of the ſaid court, to be placed to his account in the ſaid cauſe, ſubject to the farther order of the ſaid court, and that the ſaid Mr. Noble ſhould forthwith complete the ſaid purchaſe; which ſaid ſum of £100. the ſaid Thomas Noble did accordingly pay into the Bank of England, as appears by the accomptant-general's certificate, dated June 10, 1737: And farther reciting, that Richard Edwards, eſq. the maſter who ſucceeded the ſaid Mr. Lovibond, by a report made in the ſaid cauſe June 10, 1737, certified that he found that the ſaid teſtator Thomas Skeffington, aliàs Brome, died ſeiſed in fee ſimple of the ſaid two woods called Great Wood and Eagles Wood; which ſaid laſt-mentioned report, by two ſeveral orders of the ſaid court, bearing date reſpectively June 16, and July 23, 1737, was abſolutely confirmed: And reciting the ſaid two woods called Great Wood and Eagles Wood are the lands intended to be conveyed: And reciting, that, by another order of the ſaid court, made in the ſaid cauſe, Nov. 20, 1739, it was ordered that the ſaid Thomas Noble the ſon ſhould forthwith pay the ſum of £900. the reſidue of his purchaſe-money, into the Bank, in the name and with the privity of the accomptant-general of the ſaid court, to be placed to the ſaid account and to the credit of the ſaid cauſe, ſubject to the farther order of the ſaid court; which ſaid ſum of £900. the ſaid Thomas Noble the ſon hath paid accordingly, as appears by the accomptant-general's certificate dated Dec. 21, 1739: the indenture farther witneſſed, that, in conſideration of the ſaid two ſeveral ſums of £100. and £900. ſo paid into the ſaid Bank by the ſaid Thomas Noble the ſon in full for the abſolute purchaſe, as well of the timber-wood and underwood mentioned in the ſaid ſeveral reports, as of the fee ſimple and inheritance of the ſaid woods, and wood-grounds, and ground and ſoil thereof, and of five ſhillings to the ſaid ſir Thomas Peyton and dame Bridget his wife, they grant, bargain, ſell, releaſe, aſſign, and confirm, unto the ſaid Thomas Noble, the ſaid two woods called The Great Wood and Eagles Wood lying in Skeffington in the county of Leiceſter, to hold to him, his heirs and aſſigns for ever. Sir George Beaumont having been the ſurviving truſtee under the act of 1710, his daughters, Anne, Arabella, and Chriſtiana, with Mr. Buſby, his executors, joined in conveying the ſame to Mr. Noble and his heirs.

On the death of Mr. Noble the younger, a new difficulty aroſe concerning the lands ſo conveyed. Sept. 18, 1737, he had made his will in writing, duly executed and atteſted, according to the ſtatute of frauds, 29 Car. II; and thereby, after a bequeſt of his horſes and hounds and a few pecuniary legacies, deviſed in his verbis: viz. "Alſo I give, deviſe, and bequeath, unto my friend Rogers Ruding, ſon of Walter Ruding, for ever, all and ſingular my manors, meſſuages, cottages, cloſes, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, ſituate and being in Rereſby, &c. and alſo elſewhere in the county of Leiceſter; and alſo all my meſſuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, in Milehay and elſewhere in the county of Derby; and all other my meſſuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments whatſoever, charged and chargeable with the payment of my debts and the legacies herein by me given; and I do give and bequeath unto the ſaid Rogers Ruding all and ſingular my houſehold goods, chattels, and perſonal eſtates whatſoever and whereſoever (except my horſes and hounds); and I do hereby nominate, conſtitute, and appoint, the ſaid Rogers Ruding ſole executor of this my laſt will and teſtament;" &c.—After the making and executing of the above-mentioned leaſe and releaſe, Mr. Noble died, Feb. 8, 1743, without revoking or altering his will; which led to a doubt in law, whether the property at Skeffington, which had been acquired ſubſequent to the date of the will, devolved to Mr. Ruding the deviſee; or to Mary the wife of Thomas Jordaine, the only ſurviving ſiſter and heir of Mr. Noble. The determination was in the favour of Mr. Ruding.

---

[1] From the act of parliament which was paſſed on the occaſion in the 8th of queen Anne.

In 1722, four freeholders polled from this pariſh; and in 1775, we find the ſame number.

The lordſhip contains between 1200 and 1500 acres of good grazing land; ſome part of which is old incloſure; but by far the greater portion was incloſed under an act paſſed in 1772; which deſcribes William Farrell, eſq. as lord of the manor, patron of the rectory, a proprietor of a very conſiderable part of the open fields, and entitled to right of common; the Rev. James Daſhwood, as rector, entitled to all the tithes in kind, both great and ſmall, ariſing from the ſaid fields, and from the gardens, orchards, and homeſteads, for which no modus or compoſition was then paid or payable, to a part of the ſaid fields, and to right of common; and John Hewett, eſq. William Brown gent. and Bartin Green, as the proprietors of all the reſidue of the ſaid fields and commonable places, except a piece of land about one acre, called Allen's Cloſe. Three acres are directed to be ſet out for repair of roads; and an equivalent to the rector for his glebe; with two fifteenths of the common field, and a proper compenſation for tithes of old incloſures, in lieu of all tithes and payments; and the rector to be exempt from the uſual cuſtom of finding a bull and a boar for the uſe of the pariſh. The commiſſioners are empowered to ſet out the public roads, but not to alter the turnpike road from Leiceſter to Uppingham.

Within the lordſhip are five woods; Brome's wood, ſuppoſed to contain about 25 acres; Great wood about 19 acres, Eagland wood 10, Hoothill wood 15, and Many buſh wood 9.

There is alſo a cloſe called The Wood-cloſe in this lordſhip, ſuppoſed to be the ſame which is mentioned in p. 442. as Grange-wood cloſe. It joins Lodington lordſhip, and contains about 24 acres. There remain no marks nor tradition of any buildings ever being upon the ſpot.

The town at this time contains only 27 houſes, beſides the hall, and one lodge-houſe in a diſtant part of the lordſhip. Within the laſt 30 years, 21 houſes have been pulled down in the village; amongſt which was an antient manſion, ſome time inhabited by the Rev. Thomas Metcalfe, vicar of Tilton 1738—1769, which was pulled down within theſe 20 years, by ſir William's orders, to enlarge the proſpect from the hall, and to render the pleaſure-grounds adjoining more extenſive and complete. In the windows of the drawing-room of this houſe was painted the ſymbol or rebus of Skeffington, or Skeav-in-ton, a ſheaf on a tun[1].

A chief rent is paid annually to a court called Moody Buſh Court[2]; but the manor and the principal part of the lordſhip is now in the poſſeſſion of ſir William-Charles-Farrell Skeffington, bart. There are four other proprietors of lands within the pariſh; one of whom, —— Foljambe, eſq. reſides in Yorkſhire.

The lands in general are hilly, the ſoil exceedingly rich; feeding ſome of the fineſt ſheep and oxen the kingdom can boaſt of. The air is dry, clear, and exceedingly healthy; and the inhabitants in general live to great ages. There for many miles is a very beautiful range of woods, interſected by fertile paſtures of great dimenſions; which, running alternately wood and paſture, render the face of the country beautiful and pleaſing, and a reſidence in point of ſituation truly advantageous and deſirable. Some contend that the ground near Skeffington-hall is the higheſt in the county. The Foreſt hills, however, and the magnificent mountains of Bardon, Bredon, and Belvoir, muſt undoubtedly be excepted.

"By the ſide of the road leading from Skeffington to Tilton, in the firſt cloſe after quitting the turnpike-road which leads to Leiceſter, is a large and very deep gravel-pit, the upper ſtrata of which are ſand; the uppermoſt layer being fineſt, and each ſtratum in the deſcent gradually increaſing in coarſeneſs till it becomes a good and ſtrong gravel. The ſides of this pit, for about two thirds of the way round, riſing 20 feet or more perpendicular, render it a ſafe aſylum for the Sand-martins, who frequent it in large flights. In the ſandy ſtrata they have formed a great number of holes; in which, as the Verſifier of the Pſalms ſays on another occaſion,

'Securely there they build; and there
Securely hatch their young.'

The laſt time I ſaw this gravel-pit in ſummer, numbers of theſe martins were continually flying to and fro, buſily employed, ſome in forming holes, ſome in lining them with ſoft materials for neſts, and ſome in feeding their young. Notwithſtanding ſeveral men with carts and horſes, getting and loading of gravel, were making a perpetual noiſe below them, theſe birds, who are only viſitors for a few months in a year[3], regardleſs of it, purſued their avocations with unremitting ardour; while other birds, who are always with us, are ſo ſhy in theſe works, as generally to chuſe the moſt unfrequented ſpots in breeding-time for their habitations, and often to quit them on the approach of man; and not only leave their eggs, but even their offspring, to periſh. This is wonderful; but how to account for it I know not, unleſs that theſe birds, with others of the houſe-kind, and ſwallows, being ſuperſtitiouſly held more ſacred, are ſeldomer diſturbed, and therefore have leſs fears[4]."

In 1790 the altar-piece of St. Martin's church in Leiceſter was ornamented with a beautiful painting, preſented to that pariſh by ſir W. C. F. Skeffington. The ſubject is the Aſcenſion of our Saviour, who is repreſented with the banner of the croſs, and is ſurrounded by Cherubim. The principal figure is delineated with grace, and the countenance finely deſcriptive of mildneſs of character. The aſtoniſhed ſoldiers in the fore-ground are well grouped, and the Cherubim beautifully coloured, and happily diſpoſed in the upper part of the picture; which was painted by Franciſco Vanni[5].

On the 29th of Auguſt, 1794, a circumſtance occurred ſo highly honourable to ſir William Skeffington, and to the county of Leiceſter at large, that the inſertion of it at large in the note below can ſcarcely be called a digreſſion[6].

---

[1] So Langton in Gartre Hundred, vol. II. p. 674; but Skeffington is more appropriate. See Plate LXIV. fig. 2.

[2] Of this court, to which ſeveral other townſhips in Eaſt Goſcote pay a chief rent, ſee hereafter under Syſton.

[3] On the ſubject of birds, it may here be remarked, that the Nightingale doth not migrate far North; but, what is more extraordinary, is a ſtranger to Devon and Cornwall, where myrtles grow to the tops of cottages. A reſpectable friend informs me, that about 30 years ſince he ſaw the bearded Manica actually ſhot near Melton Mowbray.

[4] Letter from Mr. John Tailby.

[5] This artiſt, who was born at Siena in Tuſcany in 1563, was a diſciple of Arcangelo Salimbeni (his godfather); and afterwards of Frederico Zucchero. He quitted the manner he had learned from them, to follow that of Barocci; whom he imitated in his choice of religious ſubjects, as well as in his manner of painting. The moſt conſiderable works of this maſter are in the ſeveral churches of Siena, and are much commended, both for beauty of colouring, and correctneſs of deſign. He died in 1610, having been knighted by pope Clement VIII. for his famous piece of the fall of Simon Magus in the Vatican.

[6] On this memorable day the Leiceſterſhire Volunteer Cavalry received their ſtandards in form; a ceremony as intereſting and ſplendid, as the occaſion was momentous and glorious; the appearance of 300 reſpectable neighbours, voluntarily ſtanding forth in defence of their country, attended by the civil power of the county and town, as if uniting themſelves in ſupport of each other; honoured by the preſence and reſpect of the neighbouring nobility and gentry; ſurrounded by a numerous concourſe of their fellow-countrymen; and crowned with the approbation and ſmiles of the principal beauties in Leiceſterſhire, who ſeemed

To the elegant pencil of the juſtly celebrated Miſs Linwood, and to the liberality of ſir William Skeffington, my readers are indebted for the annexed view (Plate LXIII.) of Skeffington Hall[*], the antient reſidence of the family; the South ſide of it caſtellated. Surrounding this houſe are beautiful pleaſure-grounds; the priſtine elegance of which is not only reſtored, but very much improved, by the preſent owner; who has made very conſiderable additions and alterations, both with reſpect to the manſion, and the grounds about it. In the latter, judgement and taſte are conſpicuous to a common obſerver: old buildings, which were offenſive to the eye have been removed; and fence walls, near the dwelling, taken down; and in their place we now behold fine verdure and trees of ornament, ſeemingly governed, in their growth, by the guidance of improved nature. The views ſeen in the walks near the dwelling are various and extenſive; but they want the aid of water to enrich them. With the naked eye may be ſeen, over a fertile vale, the field of Naſeby, memorable for the overthrow of Charles the Firſt's army. The beautiful churches of Norton and Galby, in ſome points of view, are pretty objects; as are alſo Quenby, Billeſdon coppice, and Skeffington and Lodington woods, whence much fine timber is taken for the uſe of the Britiſh navy.

The rooms in this truly venerable manſion are numerous, ſpacious, and convenient; elegantly decorated with a variety of excellent paintings, by the firſt and moſt celebrated maſters of the antient and modern ſchools; the chief of which have been collected by the preſent owner, who is a judge and an admirer of the arts, and a patronizer of artiſts.

The great Drawing-room contains two pictures of value, which are unique; Our Saviour bleſſing the children, by Le Seur; and Moſes trampling on the crown of Pharaoh, by Rembrandt.

Other pictures in this room are; two ovals, repreſenting Muſic and Dancing, taken from the figures at Herculaneum; they were painted by Allen, when at Naples. The Earl of Holland, by Dobſon.. The enchanted palace, an Italian copy, after Claude Lorraine. Two Bacchanalian women, by Carlo Cignani. Two Flower-pieces, by Giovanni Ferrari; and two Landſcapes on copper, by Brueghel. A drawing in water colours, Our Saviour and the Woman at the well, Italian. A Magdalen, on copper, after Guido Rhedi. A Magdalen with a ſkull, by Coſtanza, of Rome, very capital. A portrait of his Majeſty. The enchanted palace, an Italian copy, after Claude Lorraine. A portrait of the Princeſs Elizabeth, afterwards Queen of England; and one of the Earl of Strafford. David with Goliah's head by Cero Ferri; and Fruit and Birds, by Boddani. An ſeemed to look up to them as to the "manly hearts who guard the fair!"—Early in the morning an officer's guard, under the command of captain-lieutenant Burnaby, mounted guard at head-quarters, and attended the perſon of the colonel (ſir William Skeffington) through the day. At eleven o'clock the troops aſſembled, from their different alarm-poſts, and formed a hollow ſquare in the market-place; after which, an officer's guard, from the colonel's troop, conducted Miſs Linwood, attended by Mr. Hungerford (who repreſented the lord-lieutenant of the county) and a ſplendid aſſemblage of ladies and gentlemen of the county and town, to head-quarters, with the truly elegant banner, which that lady, whoſe unequalled genius alone could produce it, had, to her infinite honour, wrought, as her patriotic donation to the corps, and which was afterwards, at her deſire, preſented by lady Skeffington. The Leiceſter troop, under the command of captain Heyrick, then conducted the mayor and corporation from the Guildhall, in their formalities, to the market-place, where they were received by the colonel, and ſaluted as they paſſed the line. The royal banner, which was extremely elegant, and the donation of lady Charlotte Curzon, daughter of the late gallant earl Howe, was then diſplayed to the troops, and afterwards preſented by her ladyſhip to the colonel, eſcorted by the high-ſheriff and the earl of Moira; at the ſame time, lady Skeffington, attended by Mr. Hungerford and the mayor of Leiceſter, diſplayed the provincial banner, given by Miſs Linwood. The preſenting ladies were attended by a train of ladies and gentlemen en uniforme. After paſſing in front of the line, the banners were preſented to the colonel, who delivered them to the ſenior cornets, accompanied by a manly and appropriate ſpeech. On the ſtandards being received, they were ſaluted by the troops. The colonel then, with animation and dignity highly becoming his character and rank, thus addreſſed the corps, on preſenting the royal ſtandard: "Gentlemen, I have the honour to preſent this royal ſtandard to the corps, being the gift of lady Charlotte Curzon, as a teſtimony of her loyalty to her Sovereign, her zeal for the glorious cauſe we are engaged in, and her ſingular regard for the honour and welfare of the loyal corps of Leiceſterſhire volunteer cavalry.—Under the influence of the donative of the daughter of the victorious earl Howe, I am confident that, whenever occaſion offers, it will incite you to valorous deeds; to the honour of the donor, and the eſteem of your country; remembering that it is to be valiantly defended, and never yielded but with life. Long live the King!"—On preſenting the provincial ſtandard, he ſaid, "Gentlemen, impreſſed with an unalterable loyalty for her Sovereign and attachment to her country, lady Skeffington experiences an heartfelt ſatisfaction in the opportunity of this public declaration of her ſentiments. The preſentation of the provincial ſtandard ſhe eſteems not only as an appropriate duty, but alſo as an honour which ſhe ever muſt remember with ſenſations as animating as the memorable cauſe we ſo glorioully are engaged in. She warmly participates in the approbation excited by Miſs Linwood, to whoſe ingenuity and loyalty we are indebted for a ſtandard, which ever, in point of work, muſt be eminently conſpicuous. Lady Skeffington, maintaining a ſtedfaſt eſteem for the ſpirited and gallant corps of Leiceſterſhire cavalry, ardently hopes an unvarying proſperity may happily diſtinguiſh our patriotic regiment, for whoſe welfare ſhe ever muſt retain the moſt anxious regard. Sincerely wiſhing each individual yeoman every ſucceſs which valour muſt deſerve, ſhe exhorts you to remember that this ſtandard, the Inſignia of Honour, like Honour, ſhould be yielded but with life."—After the ceremony of preſentation was concluded: "Gentlemen, the gratification I experience at the glorious ſight of my countrymen aſſembled here, is not to be deſcribed; confident I am there is not a breaſt but which glows with an animation equal to my own. The circumſtance moſt ſenſibly felt by me on this memorable occaſion is, having the honour of being appointed by our gracious Sovereign to the command of a corps of ſuch honourable and patriotic gentlemen, which I ſhall ever eſteem the moſt elevated ſtation of my life; and this day will be a memorial to remind your country of the affection you bear it, by ſtanding forth in defence of every thing human-nature holds moſt valuable; and at a time when you were looked up to for its defence. Since then, gentlemen, we give a proof that the ſame heroic ardor glows in our veins which did in our valiant anceſtors, let us emulate them who ſo bravely fought and bled in defence of a conſtitution which is the pride and envy of the world; and let us, by their bright example, be ſtimulated to the laſt drop of our blood, in defending our beneficent King, our Religion, our Country, and its Laws. Long live the King! and may proſperity, uninterrupted, await every part of his Majeſty's dominions!"—After this, as well as after the preſentation, the band played "God ſave the King!" the officers ſaluting, and the regiment pointing their ſwords towards the ſtandards. Then the colonel proceeded: "Gentlemen, I cannot quit the inſpiring ſubject without taking the liberty to intimate, that thanks are too deficient for your late worthy repreſentative in parliament Mr. Hungerford, who ſo long in his ſenatorial capacity conferred honour on the ſtation you were pleaſed to call him to, and who retired from the arduous taſk to enjoy his well-earned reward, the approbation of a grateful county. How then, Gentlemen, can we ſufficiently acknowledge our obligations to him, who, on the inſtant this glorious undertaking was deviſed, flew with a zeal that kept pace with his former acts, and never quitted the enterprize till, by his ſedulous and attentive care, the meritorious cauſe we are engaged in was accompliſhed! Thanks are his due; but let us do more; permit the remembrance of his attachment to the King and Country, and the ſervice he has rendered the cauſe, to be engraven indelibly on our hearts."—After the chaplain (the Rev. Thomas Greſley, B. A.) had very ſolemnly conſecrated the banners, the troops marched off to the Abbey Meadow, where they went through their exerciſe, to the approbation of the colonel, and the admiration of a great concourſe of ſpectators. From the field the troops were marched again to the market-place, where the banners were delivered into the hands of the colonel. The day concluded with a ball and ſupper given by the corps, which was numerouſly attended by the nobility and gentry of the county and town, amongſt whom were the counteſs of Denbigh, lord and lady Curzon, lady Charlotte Curzon, lady Skeffington, lady Bromley, the hon. Miſs Curzons, ſir Charles Cave, ſir John Palmer, ſir Charles and lady Hudſon, Mr. and Mrs. Winſtanley, Mr. and Mrs. Packe, Archdeacon Burnaby, &c. &c. The rooms (by requeſt of the corps) were ornamented under the direction of Miſs Linwood; the decorations of which were in a ſtyle of elegance peculiar to herſelf, whoſe loyalty and taſte throughout this occaſion reflect equal honour on herſelf and the corps. The horſe-guards blue, quartered in this town, under the command of quarter-maſter Rutledge, very politely offered their ſervices to keep the ground clear of intruſion, which they executed much to their credit. The utmoſt unanimity and ſatiſfaction prevailed the whole day; and Leiceſterſhire ſeemed to have but one heart.

---

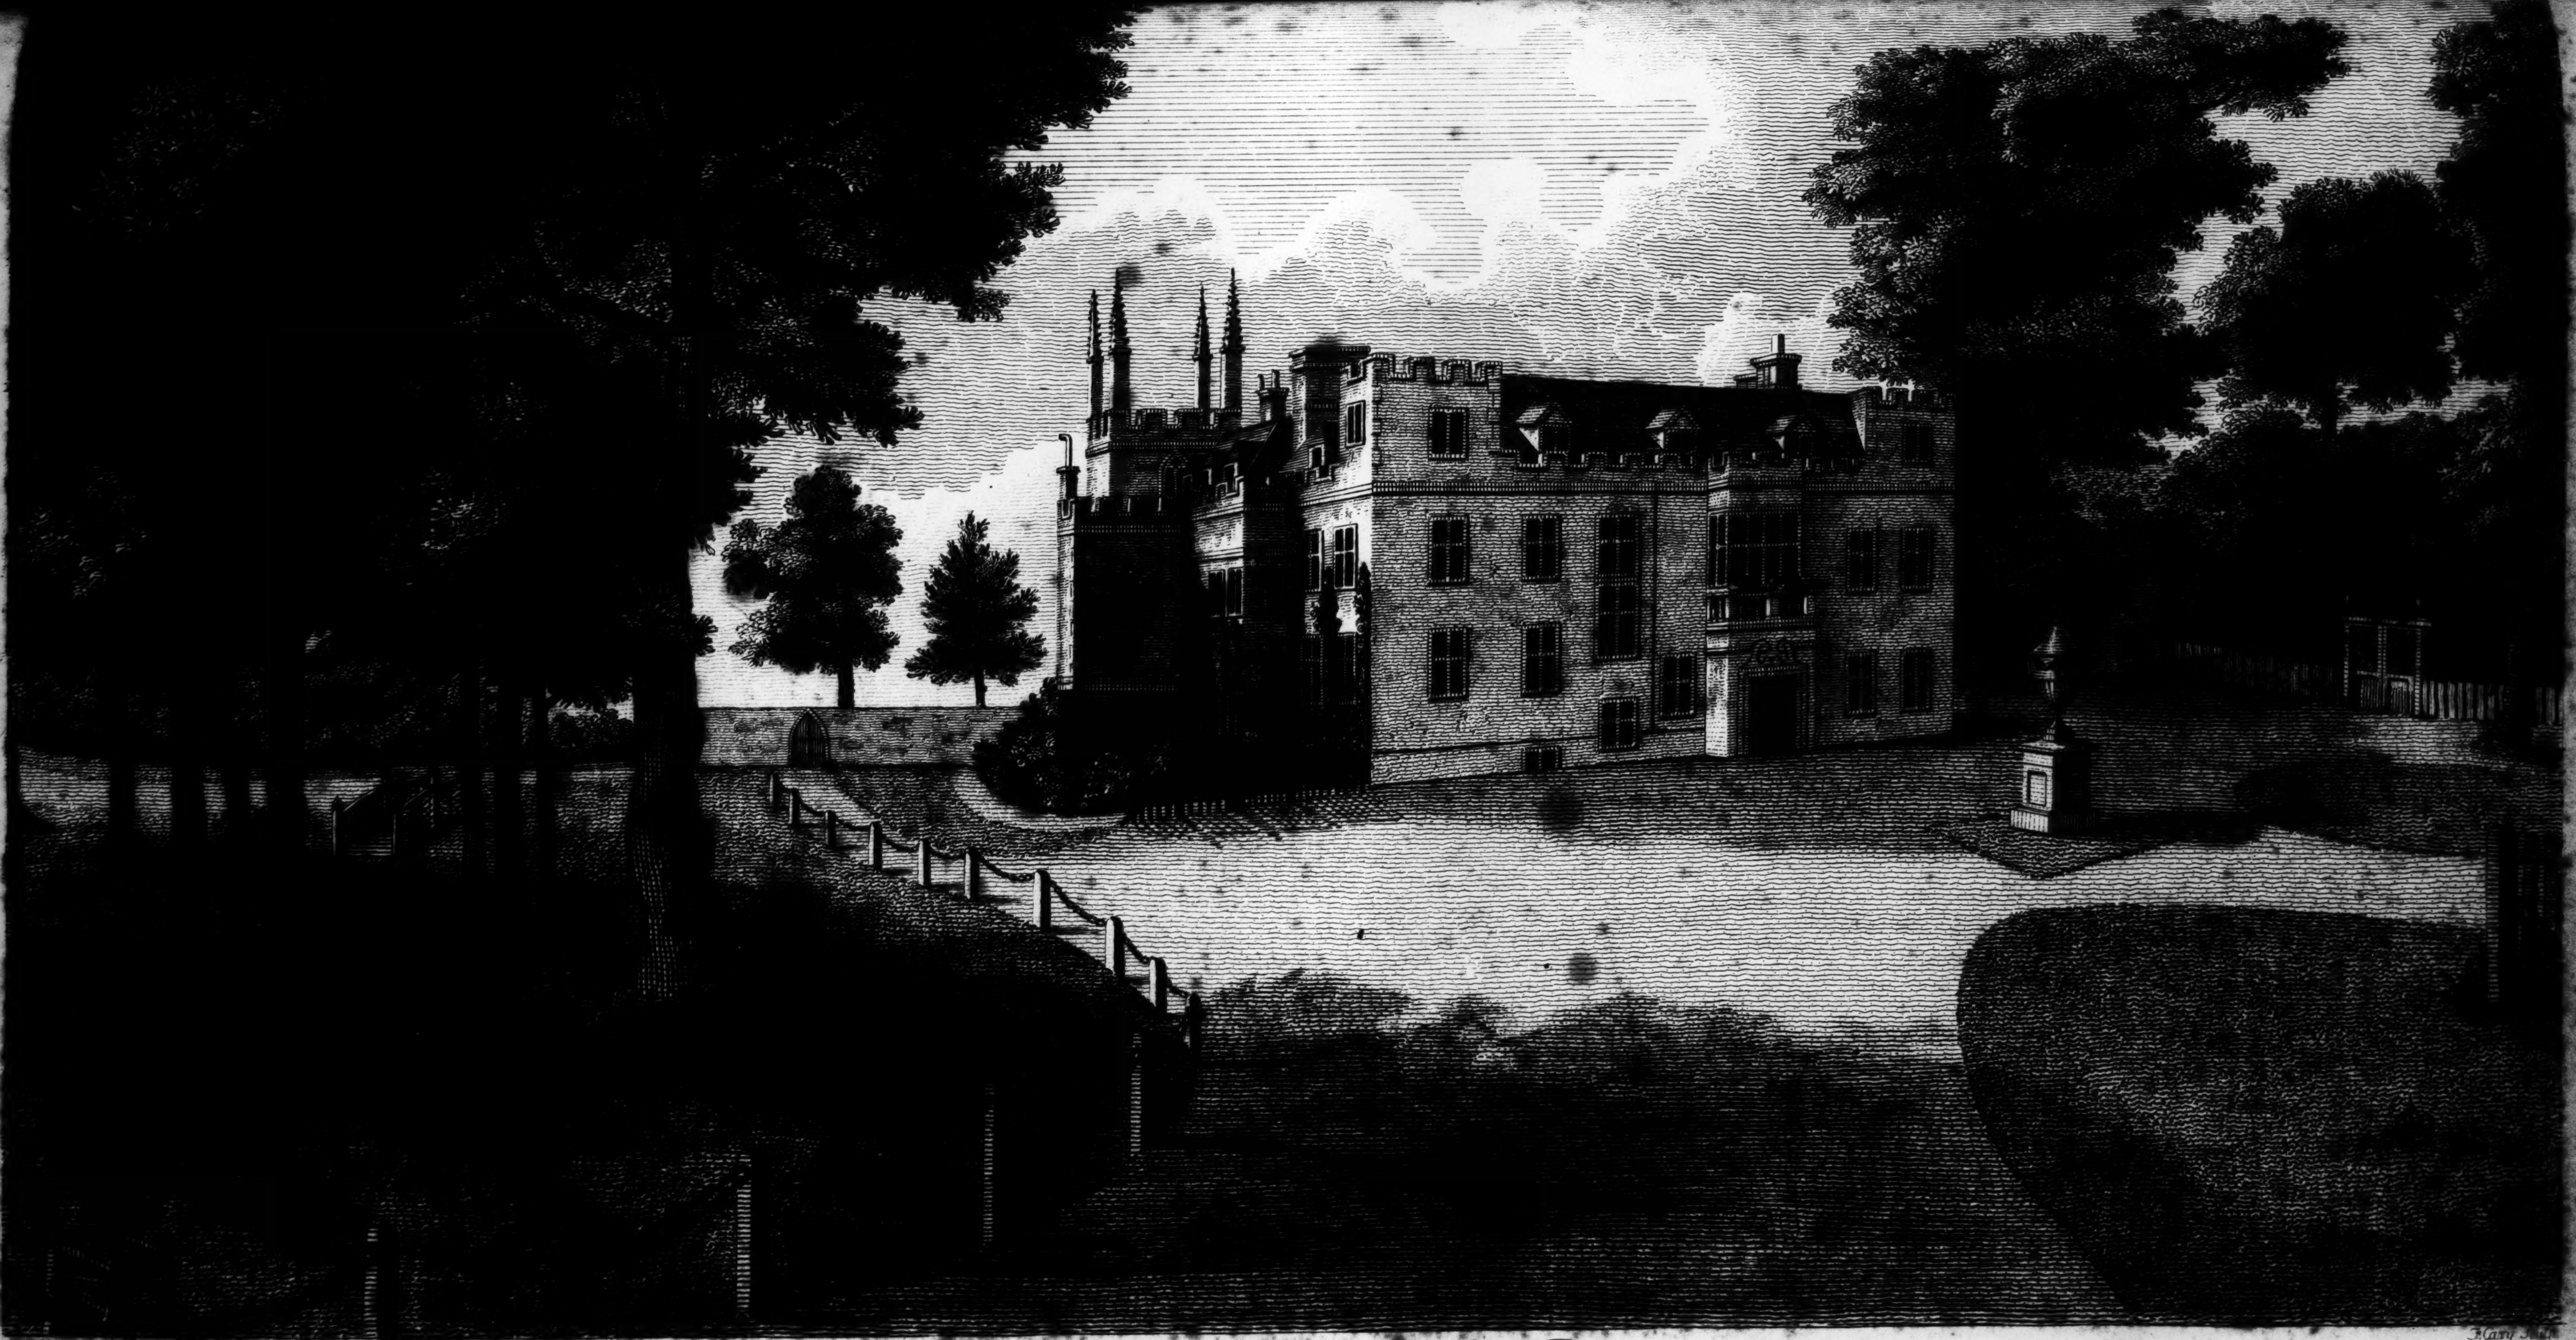
[*] A ſmaller view is alſo given in Plate LXIV.

admirable



[illegible]wood del. J. Cary sculp.

SKEFFINGTON HALL, the Seat of Sir William Charles Farrell Skeffington Bar.t
To whom this Plate is respectfully inscribed by his much obliged humble Servant J. Nichols.

admirable portrait of Pope Paul III, by Titian. Here is alſo a curious inlaid Florentine table, repreſenting landſcapes, fruit and flowers, and a variety of figures and devices, of exquiſite workmanſhip; ſuppoſed to be the fineſt of the kind ever brought to England.

There is a record in the family, deſcriptive of this drawing room; which meaſures 32 feet in length, 23 in breadth; and is ſaid to have been floored and wainſcoted by one oak, which grew in Skeffington wood. Whether this be an actual circumſtance or not, the report of the country is ſo prevalent, that ſtrangers and travellers, paſſing, frequently requeſt permiſſion to ſee this extraordinary room; no board of which hath a joint in it. The above relation merits the greateſt credit, having been handed down by poſterity for near 200 years; and the floor remains at this time perfect and entire.

The Great Hall.——A Magdalen, kneeling, as large as life; ſhe is reading, with one hand on a human ſkull, the other ſupports her head, by M. R. Parmegiano. A landſcape, with geeſe and ducks, and a ſpaniel, by Wenix; and a greyhound and dead game, its companion, by Curene. A hare, by Fyte. Spot, a favourite hunter, is by Sartorius. A door-piece of fruit and flowers, by Michael Angelo de Carravaggio, has great merit. Here alſo is a highly finiſhed picture of a China vaſe, by John Van Heck; and a large picture, repreſenting the Four Elements, by Jordaëns of Antwerp.

Dining Parlour.——A Flemiſh ball, by Gonzales. A portrait of Charles the Second, and one of General Monk, by Sir Godfrey Kneller. Venus returning from hunting, wounded, by Luca Giordano. The Baſilica of Antonius, now the Cuſtom-houſe, at Rome: the Temple of Fortuna Virilis; the Mauſoleum of Hadrian; and the Medicean vaſe, by Hardinge. Vandieſt's landſcape, with a man fiſhing, is in his beſt ſtyle. Some birds, by Bogdani, are beautiful: ſo are a ſpaniel dog, and a dead rabbit by the ſame hand. A view of a palace belonging to the King of Naples, by Marieſchi. The Engliſh and French fleets engaging off Cape Logos, by Peters. An owl and other birds, by Bogdani; and a very highly finiſhed fruit and flower-piece, by Marellius, date 1636.

In the Breakfaſt Room.—— Four portraits of Ladies, repreſenting the Seaſons, by Morland. Four bunches of grapes, by Mrs. Wright. A ſmall piece, of a girl as Columbine; and a boy piping, by Laraiſé; and two ſmall pictures of Bacchanalian Boys, by Coypel. A head of a lady by Blomart; and its companion, that of an old man, by Vandyke. Fruit, and a ſhell goblet, by Deheem; and a very beautiful picture of flowers, by the Velvet Brueghel. A ſketch of a lady with flowers, by Caſali. Allen has given a fine copy from that famous picture in the Florentine Gallery, by Raphael, the Madona della Sedia. Diana and Endymion, by Geminiani; Bacchus and Ariadne, its companion, by the ſame hand. Our Saviour and the woman at the well (on copper), by Annibal Carrachi. The Wiſe Men's offering, after Reubens, by Van Harp. A landſcape, by Van Uden, and the figures by Teniers. A ſtag-hunting, by Wyke; a favourite horſe, by Boultbee; a highly finiſhed landſcape, by Bott and Bodwin; and a fine portrait of a foreign lady, on a pannel. In this room is a curious old carved chimney piece, in the middle of which are the arms of the family, with 30 quarterings.

Library.——Two landſcapes, by Dietriche, painter to the King of France. Two oval pictures of ruins in Rome, by Hardinge. The adoration of the ſhepherds, by Luca Giordano. St. Anne teaching the Virgin Mary, by Jouvenet. A Head of King Charles the Firſt, by Vandyke. A boy at ſtudy, by Flint.

Sir William's Dreſſing-Room.——A landſcape, by Lambert. A ſmall piece, of a pointer and a pheaſant, by Roper. A hare ſitting, by Denner. Two landſcapes, Morning and Evening, by Williams of Shrewſbury. Two landſcapes of views on the Rhine, by Griffier. A Dutch merry-making, after Teniers, by Van Helmont; and a freſh gale, by Monamy.

Great Stair-caſe.——A portrait of Henry VIII. by Hans Holbein; on which are theſe complimentary lines:

> "Si talis pictâ prodit ſub imagine princeps
> Quale putas verum corpus habere decus;
> Mens divina latet tanti ſub corpore regis.
> Numinis huic forma effigieſque Dei."

A whole length of King Charles the Firſt, by old Stone. A whole length of James the Firſt, and one of his Queen, by Vanſomer. King William III. by ſir Godfrey Kneller. Queen Anne, by Vandyke. A boar-hunting, by De Vos. Love, Wine, and Plenty. A large picture of fruit and flowers, by Carlo Saracino. A portrait of a man about to drink, by Chriſtopher Pierſon; and a ruin, by James. Theſe pictures were given to the Howard family, in whoſe poſſeſſion they continued till 1730. They were bequeathed (with many others) by the Counteſs of Suffolk to her niece, Viſcounteſs Torrington; and were part of the noble collection in the famous Gallery at Audley end.

Crimſon Bed-chamber.——A view of St. Mark's at Venice, by Marieſchi. A ſhepherd driving ſheep and goats, by Roſa Tivoli. Portrait of a lady, by Cornelius Janſen. Abraham putting forth Hagar and Iſhmael, by Taſſeart. Solomon and the Queen of Sheba, by Paul Veroneſe. Portraits of the Earl of Pembroke and the late King of Pruſſia.

Chintz Bed-room.——A large piece of Charles the Firſt, his Queen, the Prince of Wales, and James Duke of York, by old Stone, after Vandyke. An army paſſing over a ford; and a battle-piece, by Parocelle. A camp by Hemſkirk. The entrance of the Dardanelles, by old Griffier; and a landſcape, with cattle and figures, by Hayman.

Another Bed-chamber.——The Virgin and Child, by Migniard. A peaſant going to market, by Sebaſtian Ricci. Ducks and birds, by Bogdani. The miſer, by Hanneman. A large and highly finiſhed picture of fruit and flowers, by Segers; an unique. A landſcape, by Ferg; and a capital head of a Burgomaſter, by the famous Miervelt.

Lady Skeffington's Dreſſing-room —— Is adorned with ſome beautiful diſplays of art. An Italian ſeaport has much merit, by Vendercable. But two oval pieces of flowers, by Baptiſta, are capital; the landſcapes are by Paterre. Adoration of the Magi, by Paul Veroneſe; Our Saviour, its companion, by the ſame hand. Here are alſo five very capital Italian paintings, of birds, in water colours, done at Venice, on vellum; moſt elaborately finiſhed: they have been painted 100 years, and are in the higheſt preſervation. A nun at devotion, by Scalken. A beautiful ſmall Landſcape and figures, by Ferg. Four landſcapes, by Waldgrave; and two ſmall, by ditto. Views on the Rhine, have much merit.

In the Back Stair-caſe, are ſeveral good portraits. Suſannah and the Elders, by Genaro; and a flower-piece, by Michael Angelo da Carravaggio, have merit.

Among many other pieces not mentioned above, is a very fine Crucifixion, by Coypel. A capital Italian copy of St. Peter, after Guido. The return of the Prodigal Son, by Franciſco Baſſen.

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	68	16	10
Expended in county rates, &c.	6	18	6
———— on the poor, —	60	2	8
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	7	18	6
Expended in litigations, —	0	0	0
Money raiſed for 1783, —	48	0	5
———————— 1784, —	53	0	0
———————— 1785, —	46	19	4
Medium of theſe three years,	49	6	7
———— of county expences,	6	17	10
———— of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of the church, roads, &c.	0	18	10
———— of nett annual expences,	41	9	11
———— of attending on magiſtrates,	1	7	10
———— of entertainments at meetings,	0	0	0
———— of law expences, —	0	0	0
———— of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 54.

The CHURCH, (ſee Plate LXIV.)

dedicated to St. Thomas à Becket[1], is built with ſtone, and conſiſts of a beautiful tower with an handſome turret upon each angle (in which are five good muſical bells, given by the anceſtors of the preſent family of Skeffington, nearly 200 years ago, as their inſcriptions teſtify), ſeparated from the nave by an open, lofty, pointed arch; a North and South aile, ſeparated from the nave by four pointed arches upon Gothic pillars, over which are as many clereſtory windows.

The chancel is open to the nave by a pointed arch; on the South ſide of which the rood-loft remains perfectly entire.

At the end of the North aile is a ſmall chapel, the burial-place of the Skeffington family; which is ſeparated from the aile by an arch open at the top and iron balluſtrades at the bottom. An entrance into this chapel from the chancel is ſeparated in a ſimilar manner.

In the South wall of the chancel is a curious piſcina, with an eſcaloped baſon, Plate LXV. fig. 2; and in the North chapel is a very ſmall water-ſtoup, with a pointed arch.

In the Eaſt window of the chancel are ſome mutilated figures in painted glaſs.

In the firſt compartment, a man kneeling before an altar, on which lies a book open; and behind him another in the ſame attitude.

The ſecond compartment appears like the Virgin Mary, with an illegible inſcription under her feet.

Third compartment; a perſon with two fleurs de lis on his garment.

The old font, fig. 3, is plain, and octagon.

Mr. Burton notices theſe arms here:

Barry of ſix, Or and Azure, an eſcocheon Argent; on a chief of the firſt, three pallets between two gyronnies dexter and ſiniſter of the ſecond, Mortimer Earl of March; fig. 4.

Quarterly; 1. and 4. France antient, with a label of three points Argent, charged with nine torteauxes; 2. and 3. Gules, three lions paſſant guardant in pale Or, Richard Duke of York; impaling, Gules, a ſaltire Argent, Cecilia youngeſt daughter of Ralph Nevile Earl of Weſtmoreland, by his lady Joan Beaufort; fig. 5.

Argent, a chevron Sable, between three gilliflowers proper, Pace; fig. 6; under which is written,

"Orate pro Thoma Pace, quondam epiſcopi Bangor'."

Here are two pieces of communion-plate; on each, "Ex dono dominæ Katharinæ Skeffington."

In the Matriculus of 1220[2], Skeffington is deſcribed to be under the patronage of John de Verdun; the rector Robert paying to the church of Role [Rothley] 10*s*. ab antiquo.

In 1344, the procurations were, 7*s*. 6¾*d*.; the rectory was taxed at twenty marks, and paid 12*s*. 6*d*. for Peterpence. The heir of Theobald de Verdun was patron.

In 1534, the procurations and ſynodals were 10*s*. 7*d*.; and the value of the rectory £12.

In 1622, maſter Heron, a citizen of London, was patron; and in 1641, ſir John Skeffington, bart.

In 1650, the rectory was returned worth £100; and the incumbent as "ſufficient, but a pluralitan, and non-reſident."

"Nov. 24, 1715. Leic. Whereas George Brome, clerk, plaintiff, did, in Eaſter term, in the 11th year of the reign of her late majeſty queen Anne, exhibit his Engliſh bill in this Court againſt Richard Bearne and others, defendants; thereby ſetting forth, that the plaintiff was, and for 9 or 10 years then laſt paſt had been, rector and parſon of the rectory and pariſh-church of Skeffington, in the county of Leiceſter, and thereby entitled to all tithes of corn, grain, and hay, and all other tithes and dues belonging to the ſaid rectory, from time to time coming, growing, and renewing, within the ſaid pariſh and the titheable places thereof; and to all compoſitions, moduſes, and ſums of money payable in lieu of tithes; and to all oblations, obventions, and Eaſter-dues; and to all ſmall tithes, of what kind or nature ſoever, growing, ariſing, or happening, within the ſaid pariſh; that the defendant, for divers years laſt paſt, had held and occupied a cloſe called The Grange Wood, or The Wood Cloſe[3], containing about 30 acres, lying within the ſaid pariſh of Skeffington; and had ſometimes mowed the ſame, and carried away the hay, without ſetting forth any tithes; and, other years, had plowed and ſown the ſame, or ſome part thereof, with corn, and had alſo cut and carried away the corn, without ſetting forth the tithe thereof; and, other years, had depaſtured the ſaid cloſe with barren and unprofitable cattle which afforded no tithe in kind, for which he ought to have paid the plaintiff tithe-herbage at 2*s*. in the pound; which tithes the defendant had withheld, at firſt promiſing to account with the plaintiff for the ſame, not pretending the ſaid ground to be tithe-free, but now pretends that the ſame is exempted from payment of tithes by reaſon of ſome modus or compoſition paid in lieu thereof, whereas he well knows the contrary, and that tithes in kind have conſtantly been paid for the ſame, till of late that he the ſaid defendant hath had the poſſeſſion thereof, and refuſed to pay any tithes for the ſame, and intends to deprive the plaintiff thereof: wherefore, that the defendant might anſwer to the premiſſes, and particularly ſet forth how long he hath held and occupied the ſame cloſe, and when he entered on the ſame, and in what manner he hath ſince yearly occupied it, and, when mowed, how many loads of hay he had therefrom, and what each load of hay was worth, and, when depaſtured, might ſet forth with what cattle, and whether they afforded any tithe in kind, and what the yearly value of the ſaid cloſe is, and the herbage thereof, and, when plowed and ſowed, might ſet forth with what corn, and what increaſe the ſame produced, and, if the ſame was not all ploughed, how the profits of the reſt were taken, and may for the whole time ſet forth in what particular manner the profits of the ſaid cloſe were yearly taken, and what tithes the ſame did yearly produce, and the value thereof, (the plaintiff waving all penalties, and contenting himſelf with the ſingle values of the ſaid tithes); and that the defendant may ſet forth how, and by whom, the ſaid cloſe was occupied before he came in poſſeſſion thereof; and whether tithes in kind were not paid for the ſame by the former occupiers thereof, and by whom; and that the defendant might be compelled to account for, and pay the plaintiff, the tithes of the ſaid cloſe during the time he hath held the ſame; and, that the plaintiff might be relieved in the premiſſes, he prayed proceſs againſt the ſaid defendant: Wherewith the defendant being duly ſerved, appeared and anſwered; and thereby ſaid, that he believed the plaintiff was and had been rector of the pariſh and pariſh-church of Skeffington about 10 years then laſt paſt (as in the bill was ſet forth), and thereby entitled to all tithes and dues belonging to the ſaid rectory, from time to time coming, growing, and renewing, within the ſaid pariſh and the tithable places thereof, and to all compoſitions, moduſes, and ſums of money, payable in lieu of any tithes, and to all oblations, obventions, and Eaſter-dues, and to all ſmall tithes, of what nature or kind ſoever, growing, ariſing, or happening in the ſaid pariſh, as in the bill ſet forth; ſaid that he had, ever ſince the 29th of September, 1704, rented a cloſe called Grange Wood Cloſe, containing, by eſtimation, 24 acres, together with other cloſes now in his poſſeſſion, lying in the pariſh of Skeffington, and belonging to John Thornhagh, eſq.; and that all the ſame time he had conſtantly eaten and depaſtured the ſaid cloſe with cattle, viz. horſes, mares, cows, calves, and ſheep; but denied he ever carried away any graſs or hay mowed in the ſaid cloſe, or that the ſame was ever plowed or ſowed with corn, ſince he was occupier thereof; confeſſed he never ſet forth tithes in kind for the ſaid cloſe, but ſaid he had conſtantly paid to the plaintiff yearly a modus, compoſition, or rate of £10. in lieu of tithes of the ſaid cloſe and other incloſures of the ſaid John Thornhagh in Skeffington aforeſaid; ſaid, he had heard and believed that part of the lordſhip of Skeffington was incloſed about 150 years ſince; upon which the then rector and the proprietors of the ſaid incloſure made

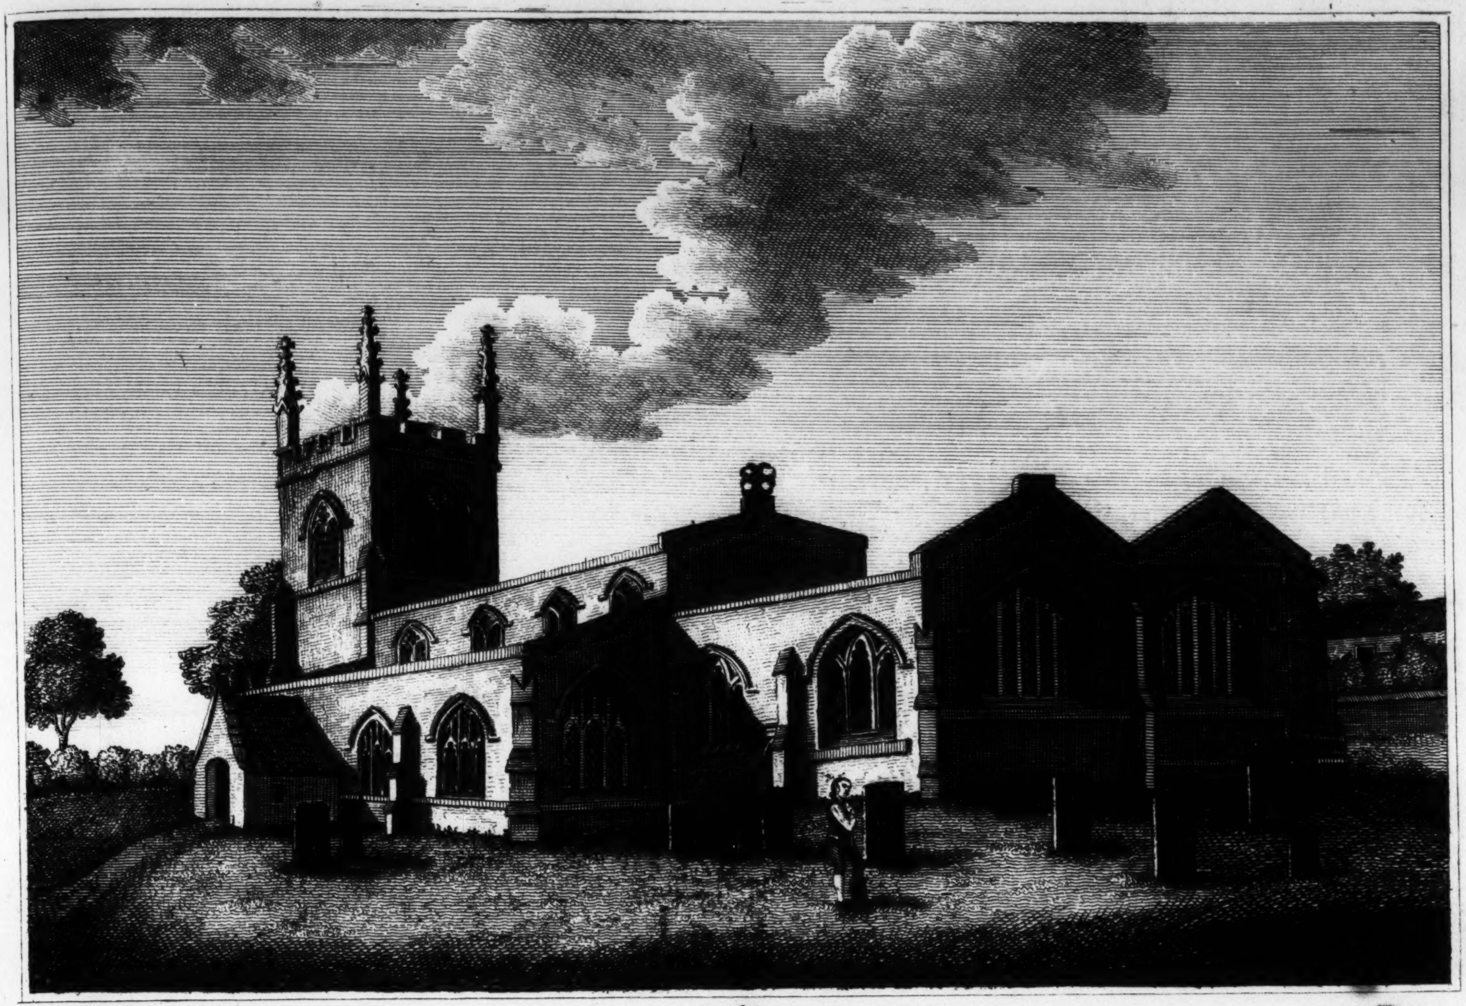
---

[1] The wake, or feaſt, is kept in this pariſh at Chriſtmas.

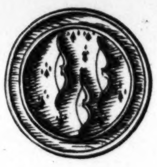
[2] See the Introductory Volume, p. lx.

[3] See p 439.

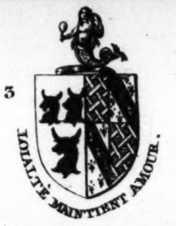
SKEFFINGTON, S.E.



1

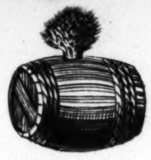


3

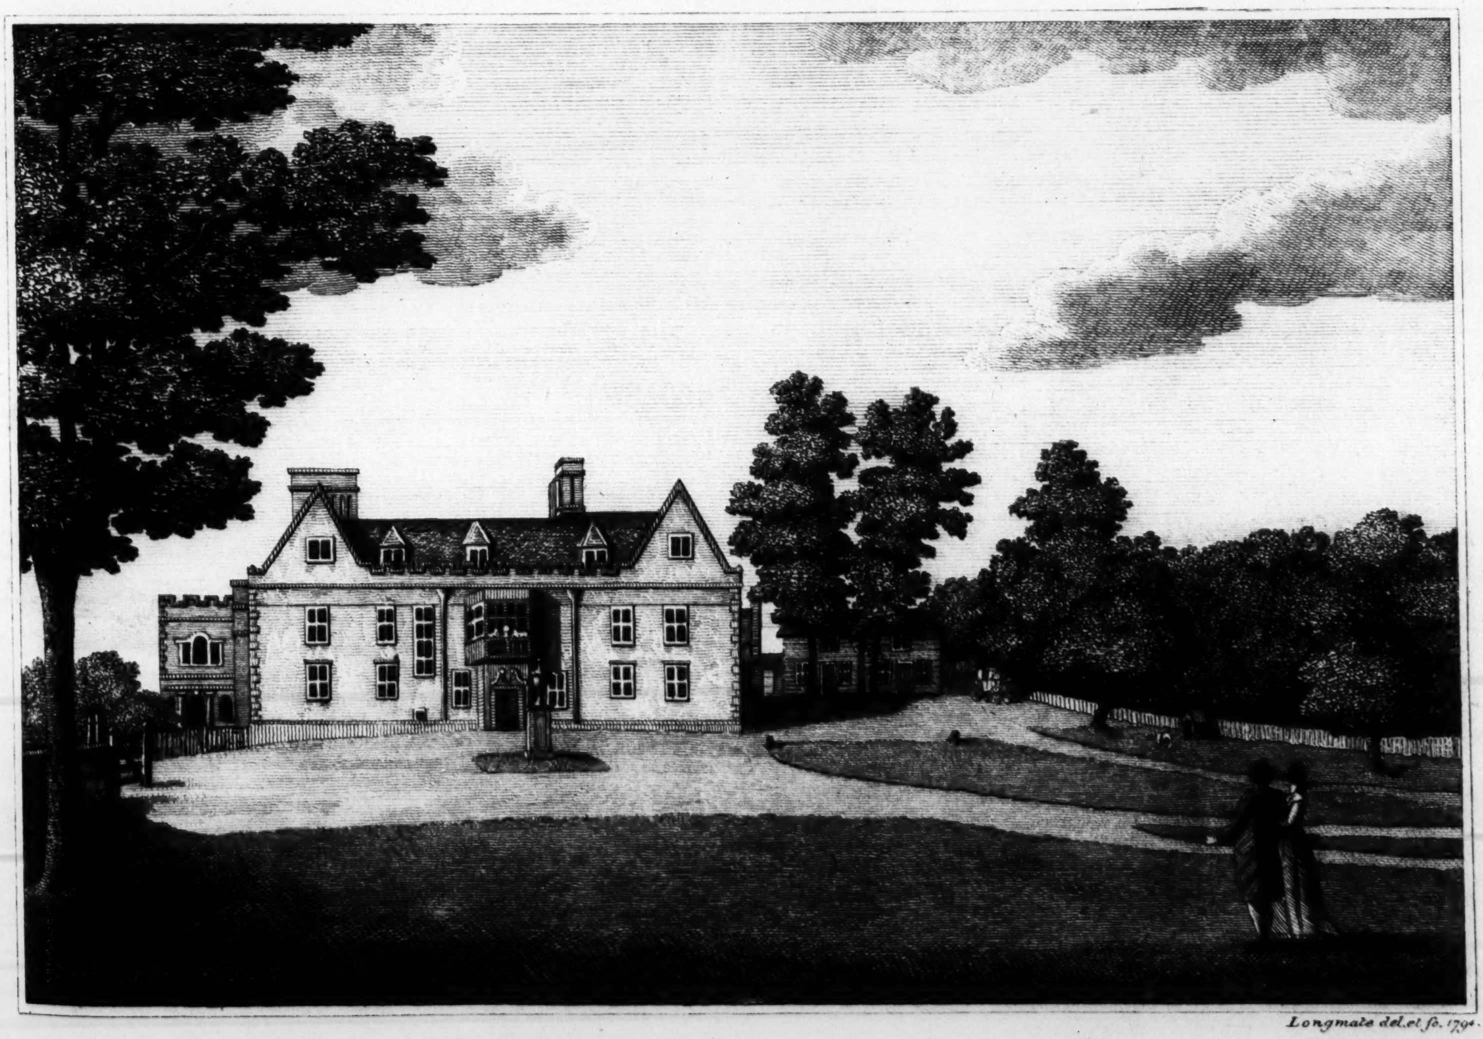


LOIALTÉ MAINTIENT AMOUR.

2



SKEFFINGTON HALL.



Longmate del. et ſc. 1791.

ſome agreement, that a compoſition or modus of £40. per annum ſhould for ever after be paid by the proprietors of the ſaid incloſure in lieu and full diſcharge of all tithes that might ariſe or grow due from the ſame; that the defendant had conſtantly paid the plaintiff the yearly ſum of £10. being the fourth part of the modus or compoſition of £40. ever ſince he came into poſſeſſion of the ſaid cloſes, being the fourth part of the ſaid incloſure of the ſaid lordſhip, in lieu and full ſatisfaction of the tithes of the ſaid Grange Wood Cloſe and the reſt of the cloſes in Skeffington in defendant's poſſeſſion; and that the plaintiff accepted the ſame as ſuch, and gave the defendant receipts for the ſame, which he ſet forth verbatim in his anſwer; denied that he ever heard of any tithes in kind paid to any rector of Skeffington for the ſaid Grange Wood Cloſe by any former occupier thereof, except once by George Smith to Mr. Nathanael Butteris, heretofore rector there; and had heard and believed that Mr. Butteris, being ſatisfied that no tithes were due for the ſame, returned the money to the ſaid Smith; and that no tithes in kind, or any other ſatisfaction for the ſame, had at any time been paid or made to the rector of Skeffington for the ſaid cloſe, than by payment of the ſaid £10. per annum; ſaid that, the tithes of the ſaid Grange Wood Cloſe being included in the ſaid compoſition of £10. per annum, as he always believed, and doubted not but to prove, he never kept any particular account, nor could he ſet forth with what cattle the ſaid cloſe was depaſtured in every or any years ſince he had the poſſeſſion thereof, nor whether ſuch cattle afforded any tithe in kind, not what the tithe-herbage thereof amounted unto, nor in what particular manner the ſaid cloſe was every year occupied, nor what tithes the ſame would have produced had there been no modus paid for the ſame; ſaid, that the ſame Grange Wood Cloſe was occupied by William Ireland immediately before the defendant, and that the ſame was of the yearly value of £.10, or thereabouts; and that he had known the pariſh of Skeffington about 12 years, and during that time the ſaid cloſe had been reputed part of the old incloſure, and exempted from tithes, as the old incloſure was; and denied combination, and concluded with the general traverſe: To which anſwer the plaintiff replied, and the defendant rejoined; and, iſſue being joined, divers witneſſes were examined on both ſides; and, their depoſitions being duly publiſhed, and the cauſe ſet down in the paper of cauſes, the ſame came on this day to be heard in the Exchequer-chamber at Weſtminſter, before the right honourable ſir Thomas Bury, knt. Mr. Baron Price, and ſir James Mountagu, knt. three of the barons of this Court; where, upon opening of the plaintiff's bill by Mr. Fitzherbert, of counſel with him, and of the defendant's anſwer by Mr. Gilby, of counſel with the defendant; and hearing of Mr. Etrick and the ſaid Mr. Fitzherbert, of counſel with the plaintiff, and Mr. Serjeant Stevens, Mr. Carter, and Mr. Gilby, of counſel with the defendant; and reading ſeveral receipts under the rector's hand to the ſaid defendant for the ſaid compoſition of the ſaid Grange Wood Cloſe, dated as follows; viz. one dated the 26th of April, 1706; another dated the 31ſt of March, 1707; and another dated the 17th of December, 1707; and on reading the depoſitions of ſeveral witneſſes on both ſides, and on debate of the matter: It is thereupon, this day, ordered by the Court, that it be referred to a trial at law upon the following iſſue; viz. 'Whether Grange Wood Cloſe is part of the antient incloſure in Skeffington, for which the £40. per annum compoſition has been paid in lieu of tithes of ſuch incloſure; or not?' to be tried in a feigned action to be brought by the plaintiff againſt the ſaid defendant in the office of pleas of this Court; to which the defendant is forthwith to cauſe an appearance to be entered, and name an attorney, and plead to iſſue, ſo that the ſame may be tried at the next Lent aſſizes to be holden for the county of Leiceſter; and the depoſitions of ſuch witneſſes examined in this cauſe as ſhall be dead or unable to travel are to be made uſe of at the ſaid trial; and the equity is referred to the Court, until after ſuch trial ſhall be had; and in the mean time this cauſe is to be continued in the paper of cauſes to be farther heard upon the equity reſerved, after the ſaid trial ſhall be had as aforeſaid."

The preſent value in the king's books is 12*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.*

The epiſcopal procurations are, 5*s.*; the archidiaconal, 10*s.* 7*d.*

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
Robert .... 1220.	John de Verdun.
Lawrence Lumbord, 1223.	Sir Nicholas de Verdun, knt.
John de Luchterworth, 1243.	Lady Roeſia de Verdun.
Robert de Brokardeſton, 1278.
.... 1301. 1310. 1312.	Sir Theobald de Verdun, conſtable of Ireland.
John Hampnall, 1534.
Robert Ruſhet, 1591.
John Waybred, 1637—1666.	Sir John Skeffington, bart.
William Danvers, Aug. 30, 1667.	} William Skeffington, eſq. of Tunbridge.
Nathanael Buttris, May 27, 1674.
George Brome, Dec. 26, 1699; died 1726-7.	Thomas Skeffington, alias Brome, eſq.
Paul Southworth, April 10, 1727.	Thomas Skeffington, eſq.
James Daſhwood[1], M. A. June 20, 1768.	Sir Thomas Peyton, bart.
James Daſhwood, Sept. 10, 1771.	William Farrel, eſq.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

On the floor of the chapel at the North ſide of the chancel, near the Eaſt wall, on the South ſide of an alabaſter ſtone, are inſculptured the effigies of a man and woman (now almoſt worn out); round the ledge in 1740 Mr. Smyth found this inſcription:

"Orate ꝓ aĩab's Thome Skevinton, armigeri, et Mariæ uxoris ejus;
qui quidem Thomas obiit vigeſimo ....
.... aĩab' ꝓpicietur deus. Amen."

At top of this ſtone are theſe coats: 1. Argent, three bulls heads eraſed Sable, Skeffington; 2. Argent, three Corniſh choughs Sable, Jenney; 3. Azure, a bend cottiſed between ſix mullets Or, Ouldbeif; Plate LXV. fig. 7—9.

Cloſe by the laſt, on another alabaſter ſtone, is inſculptured a man in armour and his wife, both in prayer; at his feet five ſons, at hers ſix daughters; fig. 10. Round the ledge is this inſcription:

✠ "Hic jacent Thomas Skeffington, armiger, et Margareta uxor ejus; qui quidem Thomas obiit xxix° die Julii, anno Domini
M°D°XLIII°; et Margareta obiit xii° Januarii, año dñi M°D°XXXIX°: quorũ animæ in fidelium cœtu æterna pace quieſcant. Sit laus Deo ꝓ vivis et defunctis."

Over head, on her ſide: Quarterly; 1. Skeffington; 2. Ouldbeif; 3. Ermine; on a chief indented Gules, three eſcalops Or, Child; 4. Jenney; impaling Azure, a fleur de lis Argent, Digby.

On his the ſame four; impaling, 1. Quarterly Or and Gules, within a border Sable, bezanté, Rochford; 2. Gules, an eagle diſplayed Or, Liſley; 3. Sable, three garbs Argent, Cambridge; 4. Azure, on a bend Or, an annulet Gules, Deane.

---

[1] Chaplain to Lord Rous.

Mr. Wyrley notices this laſt; and alſo three others, not now to be found, which he thus deſcribes:

1. William Skeffington; impaling, 1. and 4. Azure, fretty Argent, Cave; 2. and 3. Ermine, on a bend Sable, three whales' heads eraſed Or, Whalley; motto, LOIALTE MAINTIENT AMOUR[1]; Plate LXIV. fig. 3.

2. William Skeffington, abſque differentiâ.

3. Leonard Skeffington, ſine differentiâ.

Within an arch[2] of the North wall of this chapel, is a ſmall monument of alabaſter (Plate LXV. fig. 11), within a circle or arch of ſtone, bearing this inſcription:

MONUMENTUM . WILHELMI . SKEFFINGTON . ARMIGERI . ET . MARIÆ . UXORIS . EJUS . QUI . QUIDEM . WILHELMUS . OBIIT . VICESIMO . SECUNDO . DIE . SEPTEMBRIS . AN O . D. 1571 . ET . MARIA . OBIIT . SEPTIMO . DIE . SEPTEMBRIS . AN. D. 1558.

Arms above, in an eſcutcheon of ſixteen coats, fig. 12:

1. Skeffington.
2. Ouldbeif.
3. Quarterly, Ermine and Gules, Stanhope, of Stoke Rochford, co. Lincoln.
4. Vert, three hounds courant in pale Or, Maulovell, of Rampton, Notts.
5. Deane.
6. Skeffington.
7. Maulovell.
8. Stanhope.
9. Rochford.
10. Liſley.
11. Jenney.
12. Argent, a feſs dancetté between three creſcents Gules, Doyle.
13. Sable, three garbs Argent, Cambridge.
14. Deane.
15. Child.
16. Or, a pale Azure, and a chief Vert, Colſhell.

Creſt, A mermaid proper, finned, crined; in her right hand a mirror, in her left a comb; all Or.

On the ſides:

Cave, fig. 13.

Quarterly, 1. and 4, Cave; 2. and 3, Whalley, fig. 14.

Againſt the South wall, near the Eaſt end, a curious and elegant free-ſtone tomb, inlaid with black marble; thereon, at each corner, a round pilaſter of black marble; at top, pediment, &c.; two perſons kneeling on cuſhions (the man in armour) fronting each other; their heads elated and raiſed up in devotion; between them an altar-tomb, with their books open laid thereon; behind him the figures of two ſons, of her four daughters, all kneeling; at the Weſt end three other children, lying ſideways, in ſwaddling-cloaths; fig. 15.

On a large ſquare of black marble, between the pilaſters, is the following inſcription:

"MEMORIÆ SACRUM.
HIC JACENT IN CONJUGALI TUMULO (QUI QUONDĀ THALAMO)
THOMAS SKEFFINGTŌ, DE SKEFFINGTŌ, ARMIGER, ET ISABELLA UXOR EJUS; QUI QUIDĒ THOMAS, ORTUS EX VETUSTÂ STIRPE
EQUITUM (UT TESTANTUR INDICES HONORARII), PRUDENS, ANIMOSUS, FACUNDUS, EGREGIE HOSPITALIS, CLARUIT USQ;
AD ILLĀ CALIGINĒ, QUÂ MORIENS, AN° 1600, COMMUTAVIT
VIRTUTĒ PRO GLORIÂ NON MUTANDÂ. ISABELLA SUPERSTES
UXOR, ET FILIA JOHANNIS BIRON EQUITIS, CLARISS^Æ^ FAMILIÆ DE NEWSTEDD, IN COMITATU NOTTINGHĀ (POST VIDUITATĒ SUPRA VIGINTI ANNOS SANCTÈ ET LAUDABILITER ACTĀ) MORIBUNDA
HOC MONUMENTŪ ERIGENDŪ RELIQUIT JOHANNI SKEFFINGTŌ
EQUITI ET GENERO SUO, ET ROGERO COLLY FAMULO
(EXECUTORIBUS SUIS). PROLĒ HABUERUNT DICTI THOMAS
ET ISABELLA NUMEROSĀ, SED NON ADEÒ FŒLICEM; WILL'MUM
EQUITĒ, ET JOHANNĒ LONDINI IMMANITER CÆSŪ: QUORUM (SINE PROLE) MORTE DEVOLUTA ET LAPSA HÆREDITAS SORORIB.
VIZ. JOANNI SAINCT. ANDREW NATO EX MARIÂ PRIMOGENITÂ; ELIZABETHÆ, NUPTÆ WILL'MO JETTER ARMIGERO; CATHARINÆ,
NUPTÆ WILL'MO BROME ARMIGERO; ET URSULÆ, NUPTÆ
JOHANNI SKEFFINGTŌ EQUITI, ET HÆREDI SUI PATRIS, WILL'MI SKEFFINGTŌ DE FISHERWIC, BARONETTI; REDIVIVO
NOMINI PARTIM RESTITUTA EST IN HOC ULTIMO CONNUBIO.
HABUERUNT ET ALIOS SEX, HANC LUCĒ PER INFANTIĀ RELINQUENTES; VIZ. BRIGITTĀ, ISABELLĀ, ANNĀ, ALICIĀ, HELEONORĀ, ET THOMĀ, HIC QUIETE EXPECTANTES RESURRECTIONEM."

An atchievement at top of thirteen coats[3], fig. 16.

1. Skeffington; 2. Ouldbeif; 3. Stanhope; 4. Maulovell; 5. Ermine, a bend Azure, Ingliſh; 6. Rochford; 7. Liſley; 8. Jenney; 9. Doyle; 10. Cambridge; 11. Deane; 12. Child; 13. Colſhell. Creſt as before.

Below, the ſame thirteen quarterings; impaling, Quarterly, 1. and 4, Argent, three bendlets enhanced Gules, Byron; 2. and 3, Argent, on a bend Sable, three annulets Or; in chief a croſs croſslet fitché Azure; fig. 17.

Above the arch in the North wall is a monument (fig. 18.) of ſtone painted, with pediment and architrave; on the ſides two angels holding up curtains for ſhewing the inſcriptions, in two ſquare frames in the middle of grey marble, thus:

1. "Sub hoc monumento, memoriæ ſacro, conduntur JOHANNIS SKEFFINGTON, de FISHERWICKE, equitis aurati & baronetti, URSULÆ uxoris, & GUILIELMI filii eorundem unici, reliquiæ; qui quidem JOHANNES (filius WILLIELMI SKEFFINGTON de FISHERWICKE natu
maximus, ſex linguarum, viz.
ANGLICÆ, LATINÆ, GRÆCÆ, GALLICÆ,
ITALICÆ, HISPANICÆ, peritus; necnon in omnimodâ ſcientiâ laudabili egregiè doctus), anno ætatis ſuæ ſexageſimo-ſeptimo, annoque
Dñi MDCLI, menſe Novembris, corruptibile corporis depoſuit monumentum. Predictus autē GUILIELMUS, non minùs virtutibus, quàm origine clarus, viceſimum-ſextum ætatis annum agens, menſe Aprilis, anno MDCLII, obiit cœlebs."

2. "URSULA demùm, THOMÆ SKEFFINGTON de SKEFFINGTON, armigeri, &
ISABELLÆ uxoris ejus, filiæ JOHANNIS
BYRON de NEWSTED, in com. NOTTINGAMIÆ, equitis aurati, natu minima, (fratre ſeniore ſine prole, juniore cœlibe, defunctis), paternæ hæreditatis cohæres;
ſuperſtes uxor JOHANNIS, & mater
WILLIELMI, poſt viduitatem & orbitatem ſuprà ſex annos patientèr actam, ceſſit fato, año ætatis ſuæ LXV, menſe Julii, annoque Dñi MDCLVIII.
Et, dum adhuc in vivis
eſſet, hoc memoriale THOMÆ
BROME armigero, nepoti
& executori ſuo, reliquit erigendum."

---

[1] This was the lord deputy's monument.

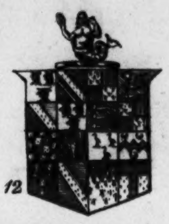
[2] A ſimilar arch is in the ſame wall, near this; but no tomb or monument within it.

[3] Theſe quarterings are marſhaled differently from the Viſitation of 1619; but they are ſo on the tomb.

Againſt

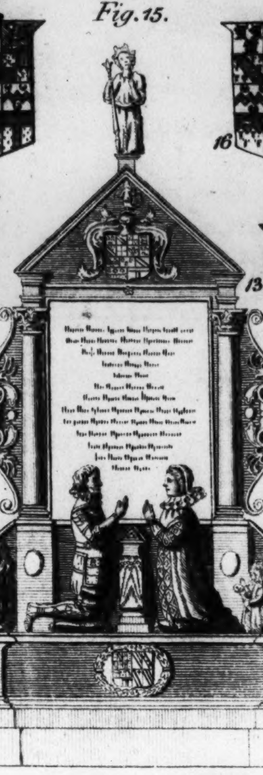
SKEFFINGTON MONUMENTS, &c.

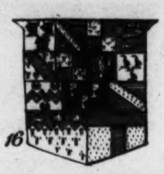
Vol. III Pl. LXV. p. 444.



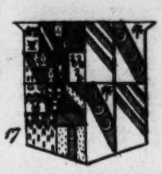
12

Fig. 15.



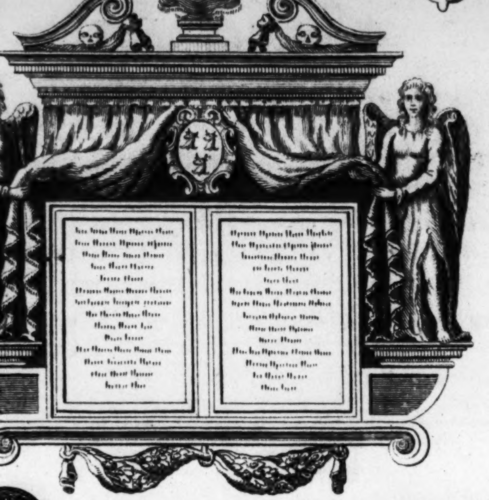


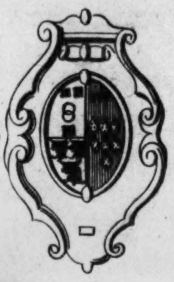
16



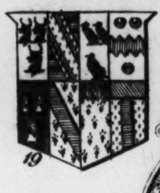
17

Fig. 18.

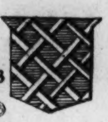




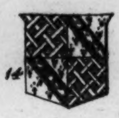
20



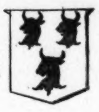
19



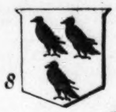
13



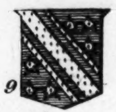
14



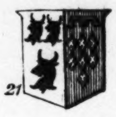
7



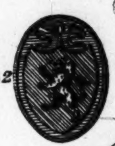
8



9

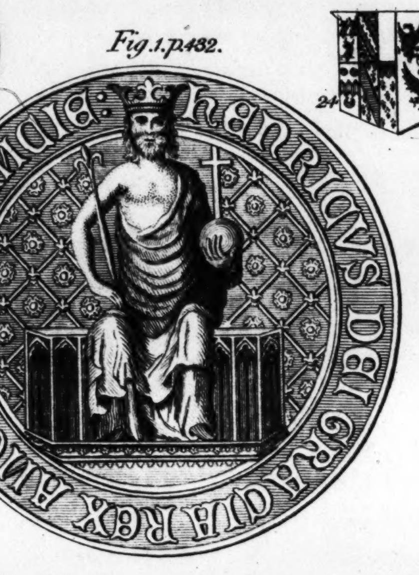


21

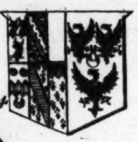


22

Fig. 1. p. 482.

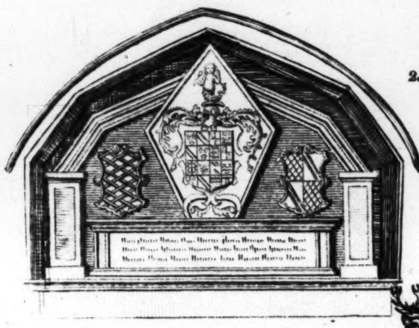


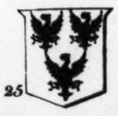
HENRICUS DEI GRACIA REX ANGLIE ET FRANCIE



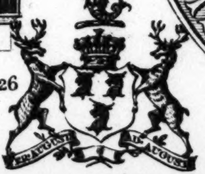
24

Fig. 11.



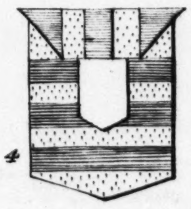


25



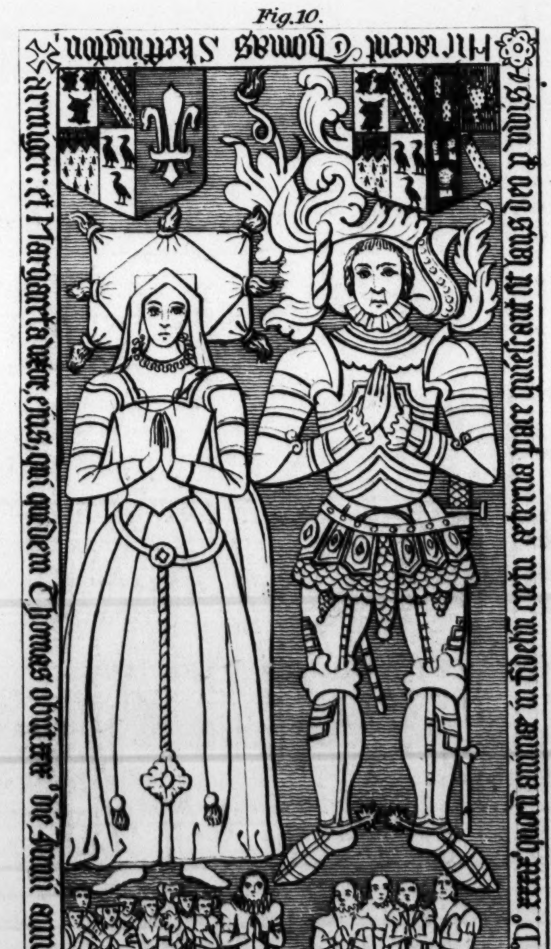
26

Fig. 1 is a Seal to an old Deed in the possession of Sir Wm. Skeffington Bart.



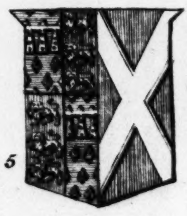
4

Fig. 10.

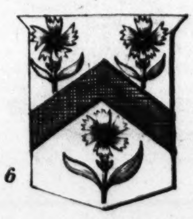


Hic iacent Thomas Skeffington
M.D. xxv et Margareta obiit xii Januarii

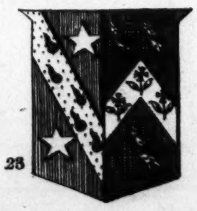
Longmate del. et sculp. 1794.



5



6



23

Fig. 2.

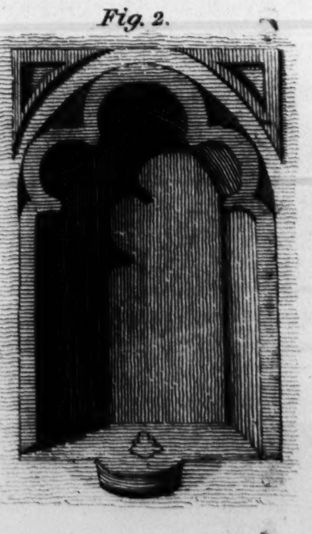


Fig. 3.

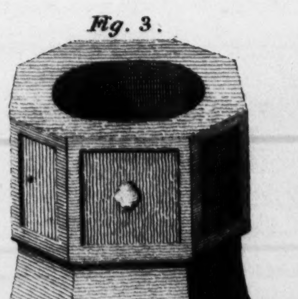

Againſt the South wall, an handſome monument of black and white marble, with pediment, between two pilaſters voluted, has this inſcription :

"Gulielmus Skeffington,
iſtius familiæ legitimus hæres maſculus ; ſed, orbatus de maximâ parte hæreditatis per alienationem cujuſdam
Gulielmi Skeffington, militis, tantummodò fruebatur, ut hæres maſculus, manerio de Datchurch in comitatu Kanciæ; quod manerium
Rex Henricus Octavus dedit domino
Gulielmo Skeffington militi, proavo iſtius Gulielmi, & tunc Deputaio Regis in Regno ſuo Hiberniæ, &
hæredibus maſculis de corpore illius
Gulielmi ; &, reverſione indè Domino
Regi ſpectante, eâ ratione ſtatus iſte talliatus per finem non reciſus, deſcendebat iſti Gulielmo; & poſ-tea domina Ursula Skeffington, una ſororum & cohæredum illius
Gulielmi qui primus alienavit, in viduitate ſuâ reſtituit dimi-diam partem hujus manerii iſti
Gulielmo, qui erexit hoc monumentum anno ſeptuageſimo-nono ætatis ſuæ, annoque Dom. 1687."

Arms above; an atchievement of eight coats, 1. Skevington ; 2. Ouldbeif ; 3. Jenney ; 4. Doyle ; 5. Cambridge ; 6. Engliſh ; 7. Child ; 8. Colſell ; fig. 19.

[John Skeffington, eſq. (who was killed Nov. 4, 1613) was buried here Dec. 21 ; but has no monument [1].]

On the floor of the chapel, towards the South, a black ſtone, round which a border of free-ſtone, thus:

"Here lieth the body of Elizabeth,
2d daughter and coheire to John St. Andrew, of Gothã, in com. Nott, eſq.;
firſt the wife of Francis Thornhavgh, of Fenton, eſq.; and after to
William Skeffington, of this town, eſq.
She died IAN. XI. 1676."

In the middle, two annulets Gules, linked in feſs between three croſs patées Sable, Thornhagh ; under it Skeffington ; impaling, Gules, ſeven maſcles conjoined, 3, 3, 1, Or ; in chief a label of three points Azure, St. Andrew ; fig. 20. At the bottom, Skeffington, impaling St. Andrew ; fig. 21.

Even with the laſt, on a curious grey ſtone :

"Here lyeth the body of Thomas Skeffington, aliàs Brome, eſq. ;
who departed this life the 25th day of December,
in the forty-ſixth year of his age,
in the year of our Lord 1709."

At the bottom of the laſt, on another grey ſtone :

"In memory of Thomas Skeffington, of Skeffington, eſq.;
who died May the 18th, 1729, aged 32 years."

On a neat marble monument againſt the Eaſt wall ; arms, Vert, a lion rampant Or, fig. 22 :

"Sacred to the memory of William Farrell, eſq.
who departed this life, at Cheſter, on Sunday the 6th of April, 1777,
in the 62d year of his age;
and lies interred under the ſtone near this monument."

In the chancel, within the communion-rails, againſt the North wall, a large free-ſtone [2] affixed, framed in wood ; whereon is this inſcription :

"Eccleſiæ Anglicanæ filius, parochiæ parens, Johannes Waybred, hìc jacet.
Prævaleus ſchiſma probavit filium,
Graſſata peſtis agnoſcit parentem.
Cura illi animarum & corporum fuit;
Fideliſſimus utrinque paſtor, & mente & manu ;
Notiſſimus pietate, obſcurus nomine.
Velavit faciem Moses Evangelicus,
Conſcientiæ litavit, famam poſthabuit.
Reverita eſt ſacrum pectus Triumphans Rebellio,
Non animo movit victa, non loco conſcia,
Scilicet armata eſt pietas, inermis nequitia.
Summis, qui togam ornant, honoribus undique par,
Virtus meruit, animus tempſit.
Sapite, poſteri ! & ſile, injurioſum marmor !
Virtus, quæ titulis claret,
Emendicatis fulget honoribus :
Ipſe ſibi eſt Titulus, & Mausolæum.

Obiit undecimo die menſis Martii,
A° D^ni 1666.

In piam memoriam
dilectiſſimi mariti poſuit chariſſima
conjux, Anna Waybred."

On a flat ſtone within the rails of the altar :

"H. S. E.
Rev. Georgius Brome, A. M. hujus eccleſiæ rector.
Ob. 5° die Feb. ann. Dom. 1726-7, ætat. 52."

[Chriſtopher Carter, limner [3], was buried here Feb. 25, 1645 ; but has no epitaph.]

In the nave.

"Here lieth the body of John Reeve, gent.
who departed this life April 23, 1719, aged 52."

"Here alſo lieth the body of Mary Reeve, the wife of John Reeve.
She departed this life Dec. 27, 1722, aged 54."

"Here lieth interred the body of Richard Bearn, alderman of Nottingham, and twice mayor [4].
He died June 2, 1732, aged 73 years.
Alſo on his right ſide lieth Elizabeth his wife.
She died March 23, 1744-5.
Alſo Suſanna Bearn, July 20, 1764, aged 73."

"Beneath this ſtone are depoſited
the remains of Richard Bearn.
He departed this life the 12th day of December,
1780, aged 83 years."

"In memory of Catharine, wife of Richard Barrett.
She died the 13th day of July, 1779,
in the 74th year of her age."

"Alſo in memory of the ſaid Richard Barrett.
He died the 25th day of June, 1784,
aged 78 years."

"Beneath lie the remains of William Sikes, ſon of Robert and Jane Sikes.
He departed this life July 26, 1786,
aged 33 years."

---

[1] Nov. 9, 1613, Francis Phippes, of Coventry, writes to William Skeffington, eſq. Fiſherwick (inter alia) "I met your man at Arley—I have loſt a worthy friend—but if houſe and name may be continued by her means, &c." evidently meaning Urſula's means. On the 18th of December and 1ſt of January following, her mother Iſabel, and her ſiſter Katharine Brome, write to diſſuade her marrying a gentleman un-named ; and Urſula returns an anſwer, acquieſcing, and ſaying, that as "Mr. Palmer" had repreſented himſelf what he was not, ſhe would return his ring. And on the 8th of January, 1613, ſhe and John Skeffington, eſq. of Fiſherwick, were married at St. Michael's in Lichfield.—Sir John, in an account of his eſtates, and the large debts and incumbrances thereon, given to a friend, Mr. Skelton, ſubſequent to the 23d of April, 1651 (that being the date of a bond therein enumerated), deſcribes his wife's eſtate "A moytie of the manor of Skeffington, with four yard-land in Rolſton, and the lands in Bileſdon and Lawton, and the fourth part of Arley in Warwickſhire, worth £700. per annum. Out of all which the old lady Skeffington hath for the preſent during life £140. per annum." He makes his whole then revenue £1280. per annum ; to be increaſed, after the expiration of a 10 years leaſe and the ſaid old lady's death, to £1600.

[2] This freeſtone is covered with a thick coat of paint, or varniſh, of a greeniſh caſt ; and is peeled off in various places. On this coat the words are painted black ; and, where the varniſh is gone, ſeveral words, having penetrated through the coating, appear faintly on the freeſtone, though not chiſſelled.

[3] Pariſh Regiſter.

[4] In 1719 and 1725.

The earlieſt Regiſter[1] of Skeffington begins in 1591, when Robert Ruſhet ſigns rector till 1636[2].

John Waybred ſigns rector from 1637 to 1666.

The deſcent of the noble family of Skeffington earl of Maſſareene may be ſeen in the pedigree given in p. 449; and more minutely in Mr. Shaw's Hiſtory of Staffordſhire[3]. The following notices relate more generally to the family at large:

"At this place was born the moſt reverend father Thomas Skevington, biſhop of Bangor, conſecrated 17 June, 1509; who was not deſcended of the family of Skevington, his right name being Pace, as it appeareth by a window in this church, which he cauſed to be made, with his picture, arms, and a ſubſcription therein, here ſet down; yet after he was called Skevington, for that (as it ſhould ſeem) he had, before his epiſcopal dignity, entered into ſome religious order, and ſo forſook his paternal name, and aſſumed the name of the place of his birth, as the manner and uſe was in thoſe times, of which I have ſpoken more beneath in Willoughby; and ſo by the name of Skevington is he called by the right reverend Biſhop Godwin in his Catalogue of Biſhops; and in a very fair glaſs window in Merevale church, co. Warwick (which I have ſeen); not the abbey-church, but that which is now the paroclie church, and antiently was ſome oratory, a very old antique piece of work; the which ſaid window was made by the ſaid Thomas Skevington, and in the nether part thereof is written, and his arms impaled with the arms of the ſee of Bangor in this manner; Gules, a bend Argent, guttée Sable, between two mullets Argent, impaled with, Sable, on a chevron between three birds Argent, three gilliflowers Proper, in chief three annulets Or[4]; which differ in the charge from thoſe in this church. He was exceeding well learned, wiſe, and religious; and was as great a benefactor to his church as any of his predeceſſors who had gone before him. He built all the cathedral church of Bangor[5] from the quire downwards to the Weſt end, and the fine tower-ſteeple, which was not fully perfected when he died, but after finiſhed by his executors, though not to that height he had intended[6]." Wood tells us, that Bp. Skevington became, when young, profeſſed in the monaſtery of Ciſtertians at Merevale; inſtructed in theological and other learning in St. Bernard's college, originally built for Ciſtertians in the North ſuburb of Oxford (being now St. John's college), to which place he bequeathed £20. towards its reparation. He was afterwards made abbot of Waverley, a houſe of that order in Surrey; and, June 17, 1509, conſecrated biſhop of Bangor; where, after he had ſate ſeveral years, much commended for the auſtere courſe of his life and great charity, he ſubmitted to the ſtroke of death, in the month of June or thereabouts, in 1533; whereupon his heart was buried in the cathedral church of Bangor before the picture of St. Daniel (whereon a ſtone was ſoon after laid, with an inſcription ſhewing that it was the heart of Thomas late biſhop of that dioceſe), and his body in the choir of the monaſtery of Beaulieu in Hampſhire, under a tomb which he had erected near the place where the Goſpel uſed to be read[7].

"Orate pro anima Thome Skeffington, epiſcopi Bangor;"

Sir John Skevington, knight, merchant-taylor, and ſheriff of London 1520, was buried in the church belonging to the priory of the Crouched Fryers near Aldgate[8]; but no monument for him remains.

Elizabeth his wife was buried in Tonge church, Salop; with the following inſcription on a braſs plate in the Eaſt wall of the chancel:

Arms: 1. Skeffington; 2. Ouldbeif; 3. . . . . ; 4. Doyle; 5. Ingliſh; 6. Child: Impaling, Sable, three eaglets diſplayed Argent, a creſcent for difference, Peche; fig. 24.

"Here under lyeth interred the body of dame Elizabeth Danſey, deſcended of the houſe and family of the Peches, firſt married to ſir John Skeffington, knighte, ſome time ſheriffe of London; and after married to ſir John Danſey, knt. Obiit anno Domini 1549.
Though vertues rare did in this wight abounde,
And welthe at will this worthie ladie did poſſeſſe,
Yet nothinge in the ende her praiſe did more reſounde
Then faith in Jeſus Chriſt, with ſober godlineſſe:
An eye to blind, and lim to lame, ſhe was,
To poore a friend of kynne in eche degree,
Both honoured and beloved too, ſo thus doth vertue pas,
To place appointed by the Lorde, where bleſſed it ſhall be."

Near the above, and with the ſame arms:

"Hereunder lyeth the bodye of William Skeffington, late of the White Ladyes, eſquire, ſonne and heyre of ſir John Skeffington, ſome time ſheriffe of London, knighte. Obiit anno Dñi 1550.
An eſquire he was rite hardye to the fealde,
And faithfull to his prynce in quiett time of peace;
But when his courſe on earthe he had fullylde,
The Lorde of worldly woes did him releaſe,
And to his kingdome then his ſoul did call;
His bodye to duſt returned, from whence it came,
Whiche rayſe againe God will to joy celeſtial,
Whoſe bodye and ſoule ſhall ever praiſe his name."

Margaret, daughter of ſir William Skeffington the lord deputy, married George Kingston; who died in 1545; and was buried at Rothley in Leiceſterſhire[9].

George Skeffington[10], merchant of the Staple, buried at St. Stephen's, Coleman-ſtreet, with this epitaph:

"Georgius, heu! quondam jacet hic Skeffingtonus humatus,
Mercator Stapulæ clarus in urbe fuit,
Quæ ſpes divitiis bona quam fallacia mundi,
Quam ſubito pereunt, que valuere, vide!"

---

[1] It appears by the Regiſter, that the tradition noticed in p. 436. of the plague being once at this town, is true; as there are no leſs than 41 entries of burials from July 27 to November 16 incluſive in 1665. At the end of the firſt four or five of theſe entries, it is added, "ſuppoſed to have died of the plague;" and after each of the other remaining 36 or 37, it is added, "died of the plague."—An older Regiſter, beginning in 1568, has long been kept in the church coffer; which, on examination, turns out to be the Regiſter of Thokeby, or Tugby, the adjoining pariſh; though it has time out of mind been ſuppoſed to belong to Skeffington. See hereafter, p. 482.

[2] William Briſbie, who ſigns vicar, in 1636, on a looſe parchment in Skeffington Regiſter, to a Certificate relating to entries at Tugby, was probably at that time the officiating miniſter alſo at Skeffington.

[3] Vol. I. p. 365.

[4] Plate LXV. fig. 23.

[5] He re-built the biſhop's palace at Bangor, as appears by an inſcription in the church-porch; and alſo the body of the whole church from the choir to the Weſt end, except the ſide-ailes, which were partly ſtanding; and then began to build the tower: but, dying ſoon after it was begun, in or about the year 1533, he left it to his ſucceſſors to finiſh; who neglected building it ſo high as he deſigned. On the tower is this inſcription: "Thomas Skevington epiſcopus Bangoriæ hoc campanile & hanc eccleſiam fieri fecit, anno partûs Virginei MDXXXII;" and on the porch over the Biſhop's palace this inſcription: "Tho. Skefington epiſcopus Bangor' fecit."

[6] Burton, MS.

[7] Athen. Oxon. vol. II. p. 669.

[8] Strype's Stow, Book II. p. 74.—By an inquiſition taken at Stafford, 5 Oct. 21 Hen. VIII, it appears that his will (ſee p. 435.) bears date 31 Dec. 1524; and that he died ſeiſed of the manor of Fiſherwick, held under the Bp. of Cheſter, worth £20. a year; 10 meſſuages, 100 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 100 of paſture, and 40 of furze and heath, in Walſall, Gorſecote, Bloxwych, Ruſhall, and Penne, held of the king as parcel of the manor of Walſall. By another inquiſition, taken 30 Oct. at York Caſtle, it farther appeared that he poſſeſſed the manor of Ryngburgh, aliàs Lyngborough, in Holderneſs, and lands in Long Newton and Grymſton; held under the lord Ros. Cole's Eſcheats, vol. I. (Harl. MSS. 756.) pp. 29. 93.

[9] See under that pariſh.

[10] Probably the George mentioned in the Pedigree, p. 449, as having married Goditha Roſs. Amongſt the papers of Mr. Selleck Brome (p. 450.) are ſeveral half-yearly receipts from Michaelmas 1605 to Lady-day 1612, given by Devereux Aſton, of Onlip, gent. to William Skeffington, of Fiſherwick, eſq. for an annuity granted by him to the ſaid Devereux, during the life of Goditha his wife; on one of which receipts ſir William the firſt baronet (who was no great clerk) has indorſed "my ante Aſſon's aquittans" A receipt occurs, amongſt the ſame papers, 28 Jan. 1597, by John Jackſon, parſon of St. Olave's in Great Wood-ſtreet, to Mr. John and Mr. James Shangton, executors of Mr. Richard Shangton of the ſame pariſh, late deceaſed, for a legacy of a gown, and 40*s*.

Aſt qui terram olim vano fragilem pede preſſit,
Æterna hic petit firmior aſtra fide.
Obiit an. Dom. 1581, die 1 Julii, anno vero ætatis ſuæ 43."

In Hornſey [1] church, Middleſex, on a ſmall braſs;

"Jeſu Chryſt, Marye's Sonn,
Have mercy on the ſoul of John Skevington,
An ancient familie reſyding at Brumfield neare adjoyning [2]."

In St. Michael's church, Lichfield:
Upon a ſmall monument in the South wall:

"Here lyeth the body of John Skeffyngton, of Fiſherwick, eſq. and
Alice his wife, daughter of ſir Thomas Cave, of Stanford, knight; which John dyed the 7th day of November, 1604, and had yſſue William and Elizabeth.
Mrs. Alice Skeffington dyed the 17th of Auguſt, 1617."

On another ſmall monument in the oppoſite wall:

"Here lyeth the body of James Skeffington, of Hornſie, in the county of Midilſexe, eſq.
ſecond brother of John Skeffington, of Fiſherwick, who died Auguſt 20, 1608, having not iſſue."

Under a monument fixed againſt the South wall of Mercer's chapel in St. Michael's church, Coventry:

"An elegiacall epitaph, made upon the death of that mirror of women, Anne Newdigate lady Skeffington, wife to that true moaning turtle ſir Richard Skeffington, knt. and conſecrated to her eternal memorie by the unfeigned lover of her virtues, William Bulſtrode, knight.

Virtue humble, beauty chaſte, pious wit,
Huſband's honour, women's glory, ſweetlye knit,
And all comprifed faireIye in this one,
Sad Fate hath here inſhrined with this ſtone.
Virtue, triumph, for thou haſt won the prize;
Beautie, teach women to be chaſte and wiſe;
Make her your patterne of a virtuous life,
Who liv'd and died a fair unſpotted wife.
She was the mirror of her age and days,
And now the ſubject of tranſcendent praiſe.
O, what a harmonie man's life would be,
Were women all but near ſo good as ſhe!
Her life were ſuch as fear'd no ſting of death,
But dar'd him by ſo ſtrong undoubting faith,
As that he did but mildly ſteal unto her,
And gentlye whiſper'd, as he meant to woe her;
And ſhe as gentlye yielded ſtrait to goe,
Before 'twas knowne if ſhe were dead or no.
Nor is ſhe dead: her ſoule to heaven ſtept;
The reſt ſtayes here 'till it awhile hath ſlept.
And her fame here ſtill lives, and ſtill ſhall wake,
Till all good memorie ſhall earth forſake.
Thrice bleſſed ſoule, weel'e not our grief belye,
We wayle not thee, but our own deſtinye.
Yet in our loſs of thee this our glorye,
That 'tis thy happineſs that makes us ſorye. W. B.
Obiit Maii 21, ætatis ſuæ 29, anno Dñi 1637."

On monuments at Broxbourn, in Hertfordſhire:

1. "To the memory of ſir Richard Skevington, baronet [3], deſcended of the ancient family of the Skevingtons, of Skevington, in the county of Leiceſter, and of Fiſherwick, in Staffordſhire, is this monument erected; who having, to the joy of his parents, ſpent his youth in the ſtudy of liberal arts, and at a fit age taken to wife Anne, the youngeſt daughter of ſir John Newdigate, of Arbury in the county of Warwick, knt.; and being remarkable for that piety, which is alſo peaceable, was, in a time that needed, choſe to ſerve for the county of Stafford, for one of their knights in parliament; but, alas! here his quiet ſpirit met with ſo many, ſo juſt occaſions of ſorrow for the diviſions in church and ſtate, and for the ſad effects thereof, as turned his employment into ſuch a burthen, as cauſed him to retire to this place for eaſe, where his God, the God of peace, appointed him to reſt from his labours. He died the ſecond day of June, 1647, leaving five children and a world of friends to mourn their loſs."

2. "Near to this place lie buried the bodies of John Bayly, of Hoddeſdon, eſq. and Lettice his wife, daughter of ſir William Skevington, of Fiſherwick, in the county of Stafford, knt. and bart. by whom he had iſſue two ſons and three daughters; John his eldeſt ſon died before him; Elizabeth his eldeſt daughter was married to William Lenthal, of Lincoln's Inn, eſq.; and Lettice his ſecond to William Drake, of Collington, in the county of Devon, eſq.; Suſanna, his youngeſt daughter, was married to Nicholas Baker, gent. Richard, his ſurviving ſon and heir, dedicates this monument to the memory of his good father, who was a man of primitive piety, and ſevere only to himſelf.
He changed this life for a better April 26, 1659, aged 63.
And Lettice his dear wife died Aug. 29, 1658.

Reader, think of him, and of thy Saviour's death;
This world's deceit; hell's horrors; heaven's glory;
That time is not re-callable; thy breath
May ſtop this moment; meditate the ſtory
Of thy paſt actions, faſt, repent, and pray,
Prepare thyſelf thus for the judgment day."

In St. Chad's church, Lichfield, againſt the South wall of the chancel:

"Neere unto this place lyeth the body of Elizabeth Biddulph, wife of Michael Biddulph, of Elmhurſt, in this pariſh, eſq.
who had iſſue ten ſons and four daughters.
She was the eldeſt daughter of ſir William Skeffington, of Fiſherwick, in the county of Stafford, bart.
She departed this life Aug. 30, 1657, ætatis ſuæ 69.
Here alſo lyeth buried the body of the ſaid Michael Biddulph, eſq.
He departed this life Jan. 28, 1657, ætatis ſuæ 80."

On the South ſide of the chancel at Tunbridge, in Kent, on a grave-ſtone of black marble:

"To the memory of John Skeffington, eſq.
ſonn and heir apparent of John Skeffington, eſq. deceaſed.
He died the 27th of Aprill, 1661;
and was here interred the ſecond day of May following,
in the 24th year of his age.
His father died in December 1645, and lies buried near this place."

"Here lyeth the body of Matthias Hickeringill, eſq.
He married Mrs. Elizabeth Leming, niece and heireſs of the ſaid John Skeffington, eſq.
He departed this life the 10th day of November, 1743,
aged 68 years."

On another grave-ſtone of black marble:

"H. I. Franciſcus Skeffington, armiger, ex illuſtri & perantiquâ familiâ oriundus; nec ipſe degener, ſub ſereniſſimi Caroli I. vexillis diù merens, regi in adverſiſſimâ fortunâ ſemper fidelis;
&, poſt ultimos conatus pro redimendo captivo rege expugnatu Colceſtriæ, captus ipſe, libertatem adeptus, & diutinâ pace degens omnibus (dum vixit) beneficus, egenis præcipuè; quibus hebdomadariam eleemoſynam
plenâ manu in perpetuum, moriens, legavit.
Tandem, propè octogenarius, placidè obdormivit,
menſe Aprilis, die 30°, anno Domini 1684.
In cujus memoriam hoc marmor poſuit conjux chariſſima, ſub eodem (cùm Deo placuerit) ſuas ipſius reliquias repoſitura."

---

[1] In the Eaſt croſs aile at Hornſey, on a little ſtone, is a neat braſs plate for a child in ſwaddling cloaths of the Skevington family. Gough's Sepulchral Monuments, vol. II. pp. cxxiii. cccvi.

[2] Weever, p. 534.

[3] This is clearly a miſtake of the monument-maker, as Mr. Shaw has very rightly obſerved, in his Hiſtory of Staffordſhire, vol. I. p. 366. Sir Richard Skeffington (who died a knight in 1647) was a younger ſon of ſir William the firſt baronet, who died in 1647; brother to ſir John the ſecond baronet, who died in 1651; uncle to ſir William the third baronet, who died in 1652; and father to ſir John the fourth baronet and firſt viſcount Maſſareene.

I. The

I. The GENEALOGY of the Family of SKEVINGTON, or SKEFFINGTON[1];

taken by ſir THOMAS CAVE, from the Viſitation Book for the county of Leiceſter, as entered by Sampſon Lennard Bluemantle, and Auguſtin Vincent Rougecroix, 1619.

Sir Geffrey de Skeffington, of Skeffington, co. Leic. knt. 5 Hen. III.=

Sir Simon Skeffington, knt.=

Sir John Skeffington, knt. 31 Edw. I.=Petronella.

Sir Robert Skeffington, knt.=

Sir Geffrey Skeffington, knt. 21 Edw. III.=Mabell, dau. of ſir John Folvile, of Aſhby Folvile, co. Leiceſter, knt.

William de Skeffington, died 29 Edw. III.=

Sir Robert Skeffington, knt.=

Richard Skeffington, of Skeffington, co. Leiceſter.=Iſabella.

John Skeffington, 8 Hen. V. father of Thomas Skeffington, diſtinguiſhed by an aſteriſk * in the ſecond pedigree.=Margaret, dau. and heir of William Ouldbeiſ.

II. As the pedigree of the family of Skeffington given by Mr. Lodge in the Iriſh Peerage differs in many places from the Viſitation Book of Leiceſterſhire of 1619; I have tranſcribed his copy of the Genealogy. T. CAVE.

Simon Skeffington, of Skeffington, living temp. Edw. I.=Gundreda, widow 25 Edw. I.

Geffrey Skeffington, of Skeffington, ſucceeded his father; and in 1303 obtained a licence of free-warren here; and 20 Edw. II. was ſeiſed of lands in Billeſdon.= | John Skeffington, of Tatton, co. Cheſter.

Thomas Skeffington[2].= . . . . .

John Skeffington, ſon and heir.= . . . . . .

William Skeffington, in 1429 was found to have held the manor of Coſshale[3], co. Nott. of king Hen. V. as of the honour of Peverel[4].=Joan, dau. of Hugh Willoughby, eſq. | Margaret, married to William Stockden, lord of Burrow, co. Leic.; both lying buried in that church[5]. William died 1470.

1. Humphry Skeffington[6], died May 23, 1433, ſ. p. æt. 25. | 2. Hugh Skeffington, brother and heir to Humphry, 11 Hen. VI. and then under age[7]; [he was 21 in 13 Hen. VI.]= . . . .

Robert Skeffington, tenant in recovery of manor of Coſſale, 15 Hen. VII.= . . . . . .

* Thomas Skeffington, who, in 1460, was witneſs to a deed, whereby ſir John Popham, knt. gave the manor of Rolleſton, co. Leiceſter, to John Seaman, prior of the Carthuſians of London.=Mary.

Margaret, dau. of Everard Digby, eſq. of Tilton, 1ſt wife.=1. Sir William Skeffington, knighted by king Hen. VII. He was ſheriff of Warwickſhire and Leiceſterſhire 24th Hen. VII. and 7th and 13th of Hen. VIII. and afterwards was by that king made commiſſioner in Ireland, to ſettle the army, parliament, &c. He died lord-deputy of Ireland, Dec. 21, 1534.=Anne, dau. of ſir John Digby, of Kettleby, kt. 2d wife. | 2. Sir John Skeffington, knt. (See Pedigree III.) | 3. Thomas, executor to ſir William.

1. John, of London, knt. died ſ. p. 2. Thomas junior, (ſee his deſcendants in p. 437.) | 1. Catharine, married Anthony Colley. 2. Iſabel. 3. Anne.

1. Tho. Skeffington, died July 29, 1543; buried at Skeffington in 1539.=Margaret, dau. and heir of Edmond Stanhope, of Weſt Markham, co. Nott. by Alice, dau. of ſir Edward Darrell, died Jan. 1, 1539; buried at Skeffington. | 2. Anthony, a prieſt, one of his father's executors. 3. Leonard[8], died ſ. p. 4. Matthew. | 1. Joan, a nun at Sempringham. 2. Joice, marr. to —— Ingwardby, of Kibworth; died ſ. p. 3. Margaret, marr. firſt, to —— Overay, afterwards to G. Kingſton.

William Skeffington, ſon and heir, aged 21 in 1539. He was ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire in 1560; died Sept. 22, 1571; buried at Skeffington.=Mary, dau. of ſir Thomas Cave, of Stanford, knt. by his wife Elizabeth, dau. and coheir of ſir John D'Anvers, of Waterſtoke, co. Oxon, knt.; died Sept. 7, 1558; buried at Skeffington. | Anthony. Edward[9]. George. Francis[9]. | Eight daughters[10].

1. Thomas Skeffington, of Skeffington, completed his full age in 1571, and became poſſeſſed of Areley, co. Warwick. He was ſheriff of Leiceſterſhire in 18, 30, and 41 Elizabeth; died May 11, buried May 24, 1600[11].=Iſabella, dau. of ſir John Byron, of Newſted, co. Nott. knight, died 1624. | 2. Henry.

1. Sir William Skeffington, died Dec. 19, 1605, ſ. p.; 1ſt huſb.=Catharine, Chetwode.=Michael Bray, ſecond huſband; killed Nov. 4, 1613. | 2. John Skeffington, eſq. killed by Michael Bray, Nov. 4, 1613; died unmarr. | Mary. Elizabeth. Catharine. Urſula. } coheirs to their two brothers. (See Pedigree IV.) | Two ſons and five daughters; died young.

1. Richard Bray. 2. Giles. 3. Elizabeth. 4. Anne.

---

[1] It ſeems to be almoſt impoſſible to aſcertain the early part of this pedigree. The beginning of it for many deſcents varies very much from Mr. Lodge's pedigree of the Skeffingtons in the Iriſh Peerage, 1754, vol. III. p. 55, under the title of lord viſcount Maſſareene, to Thomas Skeffington, diſtinguiſhed by an aſteriſk; from whence it agrees in general.

[2] Between this Thomas and his ſon John, temp. Edw. III. and Ric. II. the Iriſh Peerage interpolates three generations.

[3] Or Coſſal, or Coteſhall, a town of two fees, of which one formerly belonged to a family of the ſame name; the other paſſed by marriage to the Willoughbys from Mortein; and thence ſeemingly to the Skevingtons by the match with Joan Willoughby above. Thoroton, p. 228. [4] Eſch. 7 Hen. VI. n. 12. Notts. [5] See vol. II. p. 519. [6] Eſch. 13 Hen. VI. n. 14.

[7] Fin. 11 Hen. VI. m. 9. [8] The Iriſh Peerage erroneouſly makes this Leonard the anceſtor of the Maſſareene family.

[9] Theſe poſſibly are the Edward and Francis who are put in Mr. Shaw's Pedigree (by a dotted line however) as of the Fiſherwick branch; ſuppoſing them ſo from finding their children in a Lichfield Regiſter; as alſo (ſince Mr. Shaw publiſhed) "Edward Skevington and Elizabeth Pears married (at St. Mary's) 8 Nov. 1601." Francis Skeffington witneſſes William Bowyer's marriage articles with Heſter Skeffington, of Fiſherwick, 4 Nov. 1609. Alſo, with Francis Danvers and Francis Bowyer, a bond from Heſter's father to her huſband, 13 ſame November.

[10] 1. Alice, married to —— Bell, a prieſt; 2. Joice, married to Thomas Beudyſhe, of Barrington, co. Cambridge; 3. Mary, married to —— Exilby; 4. Elizabeth, married to —— Monke; 5. Dorothy, married to Thomas Hunt, of Aſton ſupra Trent; 6. Katharine, married to George Pochin; 7. Anne, married to Thomas Ludford; 8. Iſabella, married to Robert Belgrave, of Kibworth.—It muſt have been this Thomas Skeffington, of Skeffington, whoſe daughter Elizabeth was married, according to Dugdale's Warwickſhire, in art. Baddeſly-Clinton, to Reginald Brome of Woodlow. A MS pedigree, quoted by Mr. Shaw by the term "Caldwell MS." has an appearance as if Reginald Brome's wife (but it is full of miſtaken names) was daughter to the ſucceeding couple, William and Mary Skeffington.

[11] Pariſh Regiſter; where the burials of four of his children are entered, John, Oct. 25, 1590; Thomas, June 30, 1591; Ellinor, Aug. 12, 1592; Iſabel, July 20, 1593. Three other daughters died young, Bridget, Anne, and Alice.

III. Pedigree

III. Pedigree of SKEFFINGTON Earl of MASSAREENE.

1. Sir John Skeffington, knt. (brother to ſir William Skeffington the lord-deputy of Ireland) was an alderman of London; ſheriff 1520-21; died July 10, 1525, leaving William his ſon and heir, æt. 9[1]. = Elizabeth Peche[2], re-married to ſir John Danſey, knt. died 1549; buried at Tonge.

William Skeffington, eſq. of White Ladies and of Fiſherwick, died 1551, æt. 35; buried at Tonge. = Joan, dau. of James Leveſon, eſq.; marr. ſecondly to Will. Fowke, gent.; thirdly, to Edw. Gifford, eſq. She died in 1572.

Elizabeth, bur. at Tatenhill, 19 Nov. 1584. = Sir George Griffith, of Wichenore and Tatenhill, co. Staff. knt. died 1559.

1. John Skeffington, eſq. of Fiſherwick; died Nov. 7, 1604. = Alicia, dau. of ſir Tho. Cave, of Stanford, co. Northampton; d. 1617.

2. James Skeffington, eſq. of Hornſey, marr. firſt Elizabeth . . . .; and afterwards . . . . dau. of . . Bradley, of London, and relict of William Cockeran, of Hampſtead, Middleſex; died ſ. p.

3. Geo. Skeffington, marr. Goditha, dau. of Tho. Roſs, of Lutterworth.

4. Rich. Skeffington[3], eſq. of London, in the commiſſion of the peace for Eſſex; marr. Goditha; d. Dec. 10, 1597; leaving his brother John his heir.

5. T. Skeffington, LL.D.

Elizabeth, = . . . Fowke, of Aſton, co. Staff.

Urſula.

Mary, = Will. Cumberford[4].

Other children.

Walter Griffith, eſq. bo. 1535; bur. at Tatenhill, 2 Feb. 1573. = Katharine, dau. of Edward Blount.

Elizabeth. Dorothy. Anne.

Sir Henry Griffith, knt. ætat. 12, 1569. = Elizabeth, dau. of Thomas Throgmorton.

William Skeffington, eſq. of Fiſherwick, co. Stafford, created a baronet May 8, 1627; died Sept. 16, 1635. = Elizabeth, dau. of Richard Dering, of Pluckley, Kent.

Elizabeth, wife of Fran. Danvers, of Swithland, co. Leiceſter.

1. Ralph, bur. at Tatenhill, 12 July, 1592.

2. Walter, died ſ. p.

3. Francis.

1. Sir Hen. Griffith, b. at Agnes Burton 1603; created a baronet June 7, 1627; ſuffered ſeverely by ſequeſtration in the civil wars; d. 165..., ſ. p. = Margaret, dau. of ſir Francis Wortley, bart. and heir to Francis her brother, 3d wife[5]; marr. articles 10 May, 1633.

Worthy, b. 20 Jan. 1630; baptized at Tamworth 28 Jan.; died an infant.

A daughter unbaptized, buried at Tatenhill, 27 Oct. 1640.

Another daughter, died an infant, bur. at Tatenhill 1641.

Frances, heir to her brother. = Sir Matth. Boynton, bart. died 1646.

Catharine, } died unmarried.
Margaret, }

1. Sir John Skeffington, ſecond bart. born 1584; knighted 1624; died in Nov. 1651, æt 67; bur. at Skeffington. = Urſula, ſiſter and coheir of John Skeffington, eſq. of Skeffington.

2. Sir Richard Skeffington, knt. (a man of great worth and eſteem) M. P. for the county of Stafford; died June 2, 1647. = Anne, dau. of ſir John Newdigate, of Arbury, co. Warw. bart. died May 21, 1637, æt. 29; and was buried in the church of St. Michael at Coventry.

Elizabeth, = Mich. Biddulph[6], eſq.

Cecilia, = Edward Mytton[7], eſq.

Mary, = Richard Pyott, eſq.

Alice, = Alexander Walthall.

Heſter, = Sir Will. Bowyer, knt.

Lettice[8], = John Bayley, eſq.

Sir William Skeffington[9], third baronet, died in London, April 1, 1652, æt. 26, ſ. p.

Sir John Skeffington, fourth baronet; firſt viſcount Maſſareene, by his marriage with the heireſs; died 22 June, 1695. = Mary, dau. and heir of ſir John Clotworthy, knt. of Antrim, lord viſcount Maſſareene; this honour and the barony of Lough Neagh being, in default of iſſue male of her father, entailed on ſir John Skeffington, bart. and her iſſue male by him, by patent dated 21 Nov. 1660, 12 Charles II.

2. Richard Skeffington.

3. William Skeffington.

Elizabeth, married to William Ferrar, eſq.

Mary, married to William Bunbury.

Anne, died unmarried.

1. John Skeffington, baptized Nov. 13, 1663; died an infant.

2. John Skeffington, baptized Dec. 9, 1666; alſo died an infant.

3. Clotworthy Skeffington, ſecond viſc. Maſſareene, died at Antrim in 1713. = Rachel, dau. of ſir Edw Hungerford, K. B. of Farley Hungerford caſtle, co. Somerſet, 1684.

1. Mary, wife of ſir Charles Houghton, of Houghton Tower, co. Lanc. bart.

2. Margaret, wife of ſir George St. George.

3. Anne, died young.

4. Frances.

1. Edward, buried at St. Michael's in Lichfield 11 Jan. 1694.

3. Hale Skeffington, died a bachelor.

2. Clotworthy, third viſcount Maſſareene, married 1713; died Feb. 11, 1738, and was buried at Antrim. = Lady Catharine Chicheſter, dau. of Arthur earl of Donegal, died July 11, 1749, and is buried at Antrim.

4. John Skeffington, of Darvock, co. Antrim, for which county he was high-ſheriff in 1728; and afterwards repreſented it in parliament for ſeveral years. He died unmarried in 1741.

1. Jane, wife of ſir Hans Hamilton, of Hamilton's Bawn, co. Armagh, bart.

2. Rachel, married Randal earl of Antrim; and after his death married again, in 1728, to Robert Hawkins Magill, of Gill-Hall, co. Downe, eſq. and died in 1739.

3. Frances-Diana.

4. Mary, wife of Edward Smith, D. D. and biſhop of Downe and Connor 1716.

Anne, eldeſt dau. of Dr. Rich. Daniel dean of Downe, who died March 24, 1740, ſ. p. = 1. Clotworthy, fourth viſcount Maſſareene, made a privy counſellor in 1746, and created LL. D. at Dublin in 1751; raiſed to the dignity of an earl June 28, 1756; died Sept. 1757[10]. = Elizabeth, ſole dau. of Hen. Eyre, of the county of Derby, eſq. 1741.

2. Arthur Skeffington, captain in the royal carbineers, knight of the ſhire of Antrim in 1741, on the death of his uncle John of Darvock. He died Apr. 8, 1747, ſ. p. and is buried under a flat ſtone in the church of St. Mary, Dublin.

3. John Skeffington, A. M. rector of Clonmarney, in the dioceſe of Derry 1745, and vicar of the united vicarages of Ballywillin and Ballyraſheen in the dioceſe of Downe; died 1753.

4. Hungerford Skeffington, choſen member for the town of Antrim in 1751; died 1768.

5. Hugh Skeffington, knight for Antrim county in 1747, and a cornet of dragoons in 1748.

1. Catharine, married Jan. 3, 1739, to Arth. Mohun, viſc. Doneraile, died April 3, 1751, buried in St. Mary's church, Dublin.

2. Rachel.

1. Clotworthy, ſecond earl of Maſſareene[11], born in Dublin Jan. 28, 1742.

2. Henry Skeffington, lieutenant colonel of the ſecond regiment of horſe, and M. P. for the borough of Belfaſt.

3. William-John Skeffington, captain of the firſt regiment of horſe, M. P. for the borough of Antrim, and married July 14, 1784, to Miſs Carter.

4. Chicheſter Skeffington, alſo M. P. for the borough of Antrim.

5. Alexander Skeffington, baptized January 13, 1751; died young.

1. Elizabeth, married May 31, 1765, to Robert Clements, eſq. created baron Leitrim[12] in 1785.

2. Catharine, baptized July 15, 1752, who in June 1784 became the ſecond wife of Francis Matthew, baron Landaff[13]; d. Feb. 9, 1796, ſ. p.

---

[1] Inq. at Stafford, Oct. 5, and at York Oct. 21, 21 Hen. VIII; Cole's Eſcheats, vol. I. (Harl. MSS. 756.) pp. 29. 93.

[2] Arms: Or, three eaglets diſplayed Sable; Plate LXV. fig. 25.

[3] He died ſeiſed of a capital meſſuage at Weſt Ham. Inq. at Stratford Laughton, 4 July, 40 Eliz. Cole's Eſcheats, IV. 209.

[4] Son and heir of Thomas Cumberford, eſq. of Wiggenton, Cumberford, and Wedneſbury, co. Stafford, was 40 years old, when his father died, 20 Dec. 1597. Inq. at Shenſton, 7 April, 40 Eliz. Cole's Eſcheats, vol. IV. (Harl. MSS. 759.) p. 205.

[5] Sir Henry's firſt wife was Elizabeth, daughter and heir of ſir Henry Willoughby, of Riſley, co. Derby, bart. (marriage articles, 2 April, 1620); the ſecond, Dorothy, daughter of ſir Henry Billingham.

[6] See p. 447.

[7] He died Feb. 19, 1637, ſeiſed of the manor of Bolington, co. Stafford. Cole, vol. V. p. 227.

[8] See p. 447.

[9] He died at Dr. Champion's houſe in Shoe-lane, on Thurſday, April 1, at ſix in the evening; and was brought to Skeffington, and buried April 7. Reg.

[10] Suddenly, as he was fowling, near the town of Antrim; and was buried in the family-vault there.

[11] He beareth the family coat, viz. Pearl, three bulls' heads eraſed, Diamond, armed Topaz. Supporters, two ſtags Diamond, attired and unguled Topaz, each gorged with a chaplet of white roſes barbed and ſeeded proper. Creſt, on a wreath a mairmaid with comb and mirrour, all proper. Motto, PER ANGUSTA AD AUGUSTA; fig. 26.

[12] Advanced to the dignity of viſcount Leitrim, Dec. 20, 1793, and earl Leitrim Oct. 6, 1795.

[13] Advanced to the dignity of viſcount Landaff, Dec. 20, 1793, and earl Landaff in November 1797.

IV. Pedigree of the preſent Family of SKEFFINGTON, of SKEFFINGTON, 1800.

Thomas Skeffington, ſon of Wm. Skeffington, of Skeffington, eſq. and great grandſon of ſir William the lord-deputy, d. May 11, 1600. = Iſabella, youngeſt dau. of ſir John Byron, of Newſted, co. Nott. knt. bur. at Skeffington May 31, 1624.

Sir Will. Dugdale, knt. Garter King of Arms, b. Sept. 12, 1605; d. Feb. 10, 168[illegible], and buried at Shuſtock, c. Warw. = Margery, dau. of John Huntbache of Seawall, co. Staff. gent. died Dec. 18, 1681.

1. Mary, married to William St. Andrew, of Gotham, co. Nott. eſq. (See their iſſue, p. 437.)

2. Elizabeth, marr. William Jetter, eſq. ſhe died before 13 Oct. 1637; he before 27 January 1636.

4. Urſula, dau. and coheir, baptized at Skeffington May 6, 1593; marr. Jan. 8, 1613-14; died July 1658, æt. 65, bur. at Skeffington. = Sir John Skeffington, of Fiſherwick, co. Staff. bart. died Nov. 1651, æt. 67, at Fiſherwick, buried at Skeffington the 20th of that month.

William Brome, of Woodlow, co. Warw. eſq. living 1620. = 3. Catharine, dau. and coheir; remarried ſoon after 16 Aug. 1622, to Rob. Barford, eſq.

1. Sir William Skeffington, of Skeffington, knt. æt. 21, 1600, died Dec. 19, 1605, ſ. p. firſt huſband. = Catharine, dau. of ſir Rich. Chetwode, of Woodhull, co. Bedford. = Michael Bray, killed in Gray's Inn, by John Skeffington, in 1613, ſecond huſband.

2. John Skeffington, eſq. killed by Bray, 1613; unmarried.

Six other children, all died infants.

Mary Baker, died [illegible] 9, 16[illegible] buried at Windſor, firſt wife. = Sir John Dugdale, knt. Norroy King of Arms, æt. 52, 1682; died at Coventry Aug. 1700; buried at Shuſtock; will dated March 7, 1698; proved Nov. 12, 1700, by dame Elizabeth his relict. = Elizabeth, dau. and at length ſole heir of Tho. Pigeon, alderman of the city of Coventry; living 1700.

(See his brother's deſcendants; from whom the preſent earl of Maſſareene, in Pedigree III.)

1. Robert Brome, æt. 11, 1619.
2. George, ſ. p.

3. Tho. Brome[1], (afterwards of Croxall, co. Derby, eſq.) æt. 6, 1619. = Bridget, dau. of Tho. Greſley, and ſiſter of ſir Tho. Greſley, of Drakelow, co. Derby, bart died 1713.

4. John, æt. 1, 1619.

Anna[2], æt. 8, 1619.

5. Skeffington Brome, died in 1694, æt. 73. = Elizabeth Capp.

Three ſons and three daughters.

Mary, married Anth. Townſhend, of Hern, co. Denbigh, eſq. living the 7th of March, 1698.

Will. Dugdale, of Blythe hall, co. Warwick, eſq. only ſon and heir, died Feb. 19, 1714-15, bur. at Shuſtock. = Judith, youngeſt dau. of John Gough, eſq. of Oldfallings, and ſiſter of ſir Hen. Gough, of Perry Hall, co. Staff. knt.

Jane, born July 11, and died Aug. 10, 1677.

William Hyde, of Langtoft, co. Linc. eſq. ſecond huſband. = Elizabeth, only ſurviving dau. of ſir John by his ſecond wife, æt. 10. = 1. Thomas Skeffington, alias Brome, of Skeffington, co. Leic. eſq. married Dec. 1, 1693; d. Dec. 25, 1709, æt. 46, firſt huſb.

2. Richard, b. 1664.
3. William, 1687—1709.
5. John.
6. George, rector of of Skeffington.

1. Bridget Brome,
2. Catharine, bapt. 10 July, 1961.
3. Frances.
4. Mary, third wife of ſir Robert Burdet, bart. of Bramcote, co. Warw. died ſ. p.; buried at Formarke July 14, 1742.

4. Charles Brome, executor to his brother Thomas in 1709. = . . . Pole.

Tho. Brome. = Eliz. dau. and coh. of J. Selleck, of Stapenhill, co. Derb. eſq.

Thomas Selleck Brome, of the Mount, in Colwich, co. Stafford; living 1800. = Katharine, only child of Edmund Wace Patteſon.

Henry-Selleck. Katharine. Louiſa.

William, died ſingle.

Elizabeth. Iſabel.

Judith. = . . . Bickley.

A dau. or grand-dau. married Aſtley of Hallaton, in Kingſbury pariſh, co. Warw. a deſcendant of whom, Francis-Dugdale Aſtley, is now poſſeſſed of an eſtate at Everley, Wilts, from the late ſir J. Aſtley, bart.

John Dugdale, ſon and heir, Mowbray Herald Extraordinary, married; but died ſ. p 1749.

Jane. = Richard Geaſt, eſq.

1. Dugdale Geaſt, d. young.
2. Richard Geaſt, eſq. (now Dugdale), of Blythe Hall, married Penelope-Bate Stratford[3].
3. Henry.

Anne Chriſtiana, dau. of John Dodd, of Bracton, co. Cheſter, eſq. 2nd wife. = William Farrell, of Cheſter, eſq. collector of the cuſtoms, born in College Green, Dublin, Jan. 17, O. S. 1689. = Elizabeth, dau. and coheir, b. at Skeffington the 8th, and bapt. the 20th of Aug. 1695; died at Cheſter.

Tho. Skeffington, of Skeffington, eſq. born at Skeffington the 10th, and bapt. the 20th of Sept. 1696; d. ſ. p. May 18, 1729, æt. 32.

Sir Thomas Peyton, of Emneth, co. Norf. bart. married at —— 1732; died at Emneth aforeſaid, July 17th, 1771, and was buried at Doddington, co. Cambridge. = Bridget, dau. and coheir, b. at Skeffington, Aug. 18, and bapt. Sept. 8, 1697, d. 1762. She left her eſtate to her nephew W. Farrell, eſq. for life; remainder to his ſon and heir W. C. Farrell, and his heirs for ever.

1. Anne-Chriſtiana-Mary Farrell.

2. Suſanna. = Thomas Cotgrave, ſon of Jonathan Cotgrave, of the city of Cheſter, gent.

3. Thomaſine, died an infant.

4. Frances. = John Worthington, eldeſt ſon of Burdet Worthington, of Aſhton Hayes, eſq. co. Cheſter.

1. William, 3. Thomas, and Elizabeth, died infants.

Mary, ſole child and heir of Richard Arnold, eſq. late deputy-ſecretary at war in England, and ſecretary at war in Scotland, firſt wife; married at St. Paul's, Deptford; died in 1745, and was buried at Sunning Hill, Berks. = William Farrell, of Skeffington, and Sunning Hill, Berks, eſq. lieutenant of grenadiers in the Second or Coldſtream regiment of foot-guards, born in the city of Cheſter, and died there the 6th of April, 1777, aged 62, and was buried at Skeffington. = Elizabeth, only child of Walter Gibbons, of Lincoln's Inn, a conveyancer, and relict of William Dent, of the ſame profeſſion and Inn, ſecond wife; died in Auguſt 1769, and was buried at Sunning Hill, Berks.

1. William.
2. Jonathan.
3. John, d. an infant.
4. Thomas.
5. Charles.

1. Anne-Chriſtiana-Mary Cotgrave.
2. Frances, d. an inf.
3. Suſanna.

1. William-Henry Worthington.
2. John-Cotton Worthington.

Thomas, died æt. about 3 years; Robert, died æt. about 3 months; both buried at Sunning Hill, Berks.

William-Charles Farrell, only ſurviving ſon, born in Jermyn-ſtreet, St. James's, June 24, 1742, late captain in the firſt regiment of foot-guards, and lieutenant-colonel in the army; and one of the eſquires to His Royal Highneſs Prince Frederick, Duke of York, &c. at the Inſtallation of the Knights of the Moſt Honourable Order of the Bath in 1772; took the ſurname of Skeffington and the arms, by the King's warrant, dated June 12, 1772; and his Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed to re-inſtate him with the honours of the family, and accordingly created him a baronet of Great Britain June 10, 1786. = Catharine-Joſepha, eldeſt dau. of Michael Hubbart, of the Iſland of Teneriff, born at Laguna in the aforeſaid Iſland; married at St. Peter-le-Poor, London, Dec. 9, 1765.

Walter-Edward Farrell, only child, in holy orders, born June 5, 1750, in the pariſh of St. Andrew, Holborn. = Jane, dau. and coheir of —— Reeve, of Skeffington, gent. married at St. Andrew's, Holborn, Nov. 24, 1770.

1. Charles-Thomas-Farrell Skeffington, born in Duke-ſtreet, St. James's, died æt. 4; buried at St. Anne's, Soho, London.

2. Lumley-St. George Skeffington, born in the pariſh of St. Pancras, Middleſex, March 23, 1771.

Anne Farrell, born Sept. 16, 1771, at Highgate, Middleſex.

---

[1] Executor to Dame Urſula Skeffington his aunt; living ſome time after her deceaſe at Fiſherwick, afterwards at Croxall; buried in Croxall chancel Dec. 1, 1687; as was alſo his wife, March 3, 1713. Shaw's Staffordſhire, vol. I. p. 373.

[2] Perhaps the niece Glover, to whom, or children, lady Urſula bequeathed 40*l*.

[3] Of whom ſee before, under Preſtwould, p. 362.

SYSTON,

antiently called Siteſtone, Sidelton, Sireſtone, Siſon, and Sayſton, is ſituated on the turnpike-road to Melton, five miles from Leiceſter; bounded by Wanlip, Coſſington, Kereſby, Queneborow, Barkby, and Thurmaſton; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote.

In the reign of king Edward the Confeſſor, this lordſhip, conſiſting of nine ploughlands, was valued at thirty ſhillings; and, at the general ſurvey, was worth forty ſhillings, being then held by Suain under Hugo de Grenteſmainell. The land was equal to ſix ploughs. One was in the demeſne; and ſeventeen villans, with a prieſt, and one bordar, and eleven ſocmen, had ſix ploughs. There were thirty acres of meadow, and a mill of eight ſhillings value [1].

This lordſhip came afterwards to Robert de Tibovill, a Norman; by whom it was forfeited to the crown [2].

In 1204, king John directed his precept to the ſheriff of Leiceſter, to give Thomas Baſſet poſſeſſion of the manor of Sidelton (ſometime belonging to Robert de Tibovill): "Rex vicecomiti Leiceſtrie. Precipimus tibi, quòd ſtatim, viſis literis noſtris iſtis, habere facias Thomam Baſſet manerium de Sidelton, quondam Roberti de Tibovill, quoniam illud ei conceſſimus; ita quòd indè reſpondeat nobis, ſi voluerimus. Et nobis ſcire facias quantum valeat extenſum. Teſte J. Norwic' epiſcopo, apud Nott', xxIIII die Auguſti, per eundem [3]."

March 15, 1217-18, king Henry III. by his precept commanded the ſheriff of Leiceſter to give Saer earl of Winton full ſeiſin of Robert de Tybbovill's lands in Sireſton, Clipſton, and Staunton, notwithſtanding the ſame were then in the hands of the king's eſcheator: "Rex vicecomiti Leiceſtrie ſalutem. Precipimus tibi, quòd ſine dilatione habere facias dilecto & fideli noſtro S. comiti Wintonienſi plenam ſeiſinam de terrâ que fuit Roberti de Tybbovill in Sireſton, Clipſton, & Stanton [infra Bardon], que eſt de feodo ſuo, non obſtante eo quòd terra illa capta eſt in manum noſtram per eſcaetores noſtros. Teſte comite [viz. Willielmo Mareſcallo comite Pemb', regis gubernatore], apud Wigorn', xv die Martii [4]."

In the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about the year 1240, we are told, "Sydeſton eſt terra Normannorum, in manu comitis Winton'; pretium 30 libr'." [5]

In 1270, Roger de Quinci earl of Winton died ſeiſed of the advowſon of the church of Syſton, value 40 marks a year [6]; and the village was ſoon after divided amongſt ſeveral proprietors.

In the Itinerary of 1280, Syſton, Gaddeſby, and Rereſby, anſwered collectively as one vill.

In 1313, John Fitz-Peter of Glenfield held half a quarter of a knight's fee in Sitheſtone of Alan la Zouch, deceaſed [7].

In 1316, it was found that it would be no loſs, if the king granted William de Ferrars leave to enfeoff Mordac Meneteth in the manor of Groby, with the appurtenances, and in the advowſon of the church of Sitheſton; and that the ſaid manor and advowſon were held of the king in capite, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee [8].

In 1328, ſir Robert Holland, at his death, held, as of the right and inheritance of Maud his wife, half a quarter of a knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Syſton, (value 100*s*.) which John ſon of Peter de Glenfield held [9].

In 1343, Henry de Ferrers died ſeiſed of the twentieth part of a knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Sitheſton, which Nicholas de Glenfield held; alſo the twentieth part of a knight's fee in Sitheſton, which Ralph de Nevill held [10].

In 1346, Ralph de Nevil (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon,) was aſſeſſed 3*s*. 4*d*. for a twelfth part of a knight's fee, held of the heirs of Ros, then within age, and a ward of the king; John de Saunderſted [11], 20*d*. for a twentieth part of a knight's fee; John Walſhe and Nicholas Glenfield 4*s*. 8*d*. for a tenth part and a fortieth part of a knight's fee; the prior of Ulveſcroft 16*d*. for a thirtieth part of a knight's fee; and Robert de Sitheſton the capellan [or chantry-prieſt], 12*d*. for a fortieth part of a knight's fee; all ſituated in Sitheſton, and parcel of the honour of Winton [12].

In 1352, John (ſon of Nicholas) de Glenfield held, at his death, certain tenements in Sitheſton, of Robert de Holand, by knight's ſervice [13].

In 1358, Maud de Holand (under whom lands were held by Nicholas father of John de Glenfield, which Nicholas was then deceaſed) held 10 meſſuages and 10 virgates of land in Sitheſton, by knight's ſervice [14].

On St. Lawrence's day 1362, Henry Pipe, of Pipe, co. Warwick, died ſeiſed of Syſton and Staunton. Iſſue; John, a poſthume, and afterward canon regular of Ouſton; and Margery, who died ſ. p.; both wards to John duke of Lancaſter in reſpect of Morton Daubeny, held of the honour of Leiceſter, and by him granted to John Stafford his clerk; who, to prevent John Pipe ſucceeding to his paternal inheritance (his mother Maud de Caſtelio being with child of him, before her marriage with Pipe, by one Boote, her huſband's father's ſervant; which killed Henry with grief before the child was born) made him a canon regular as above; and procured a grant, from Margery daughter by a firſt wife Ingrith, to Peter Banaſter a prieſt, and others, of all her inheritance, to the uſe of the ſaid John Stafford and his heirs; then paſſed it away to William Paylington, vicar of Radway, and others, to the uſe of the abbot of Stoneleigh; which feoffees, 52 Edw. III, under licence of the king and ſir John de Botetourt chief lord of the fee, granted it to Thomas Pipe, then abbot of Stoneleigh, and his ſucceſſors for ever; whoſe ſucceſſors, for 200 marks, ſold it to Thomas Beauchamp earl of Warwick; and ſo it came, inter alia, to the crown, with the earl's eſtate, 3 Hen. VII. [15]

In 1370, Baldwin Fitz-Piers of Glenfield granted all his right in all his lands at Sitheſton to Robert de Swillington his uncle, and his heirs [16].

In 1371, William de Ferrers of Groby died ſeiſed of two virgates of land in Sitheſton, which John Stafford held; alſo ten virgates of land there, which the tenants of William Maunſell held [17].

In 1387, Henry de Ferrars of Groby, knight, died ſeiſed of two virgates of land in Sitheſton, (ſometime the lands of John de Stafford, clerk, but then the prior of Ulveſcroft's), by the twentieth part of a knight's fee; alſo ten virgates of land in Sitheſton, by the twentieth part of a knight's fee, which William Maunſell held; alſo lands in Sitheſton, value £10 [18].

---

[1] "Suain tenet de H[ugone] in Siteſtone 9 carucatas terræ. Terra eſt 6 carucarum. In dominico eſt una; & 17 villani, cum preſbytero & 11 ſochmannis, habent 6 carucas. Ibi molinum de 8 ſolidis, & 30 acræ prati. Valuit 30 ſolidos; modò 40 ſolidos." Domeſday, fol. 232. b. 1.

[2] On the lands of the Normans ſee before, under Sileby, p. 420.

[3] Clauſ. 6 Johan. m. 18.

[4] Clauſ. 2 Hen. III. m. 9.

[5] Vol. I. p. lix.

[6] Eſch. 55 Hen. III. N° 36. Leic.

[7] Eſch. 7 Edw. II. N° 36. Leic.

[8] Inq. ad quod dampnum, 10 Edw. II. N° 94. Leic.

[9] Eſch. 2 Edw. III. N° 54. Leic.

[10] Eſch. 17 Edw. III. N° 57. Leic.

[11] Who married Margaret, daughter of ſir Henry de Harecourt, and widow of John de Pipe. Her grandſon, Henry de Pipe, died ſeiſed of Sitheſton, 36 Edw. III. Dugdale, Warw. in Pipe.

[12] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[13] Eſch. 26 Edw. III. N° 41. Leic.

[14] Eſch. 32 Edw. III. N° 1. Leic.

[15] Sir T. Cave, MS. from Wadland's MS notes. See alſo more fully in Dugdale's Warwickſhire, vol. II. p. 892.

[16] Clauſ. 44 Edw. III. m. 16.

[17] Eſch. 45 Edw. III N° 22. Leic.

[18] Eſch. 11 Ric. II. N° 26. Leic.

Welſh's lands deſcended to his ſon ſir Thomas Welſh of Wanlip; who, Nov. 29, 1392, obtained from king Richard II. liberty of free-warren in all his demeſne lands at Sitheſton [1].

In 1393, Joan, late wife of Henry de Ferrers of Groby, knight, deceaſed, poſſeſſed, for term of life, in dower, a twentieth part of a knight's fee in Sitheſton, of William de Ferrers, as of his manor of Groby [2].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Syſton was rated at 2*l.* 16*s.* 0*d.*; and, in the ſubſidy of 1445, at the ſame ſum: but an abatement was then made of 3*s.*

In 1422, Maud wife of John Lovel, knight, deceaſed, was ſeiſed of half a quarter of a knight's fee in Sitheſton, which John ſon of Peter de Glenfield lately held [3].

In 1444, William de Ferrers of Groby, knight, died ſeiſed of two virgates of land in Sitheſton, which the prior of Ulveſcroft held, by the ſervice of a twentieth part of a knight's fee, late the lands of John de Stafford, clerk; alſo of ten virgates of land in Sitheſton, which the tenants, late William Maunſell's, held, by the ſervice of a twentieth part of a knight's fee; alſo of land worth £10. in Sitheſton, which the heirs of Roger de la Zouch held, by the ſervice of a knight's fee [4].

In 1454, William Lovel, knight, died ſeiſed of half a quarter of a knight's fee in Sitheſton, which John ſon of Peter de Glenfield held [5].

In 1457, Edward de Grey, knight, lord Ferrers of Groby, died ſeiſed of two virgates of land in Sitheſton, late the lands of John Stafford, clerk, which the prior of Ulveſcroft held of the ſame Edward, by the ſervice of a twentieth part of a knight's fee; alſo of ten virgates of land in Sitherſton, which the tenants of William Maunſell's lands and tenements held of the ſame Edward, by the ſervice of a twentieth part of a knight's fee; alſo of £10. rent in Sitheſton, which the heirs of Roger de la Zouch held of the ſame Edward, by the ſervice of one knight's fee [6].

In 1463, Thomas Walſhe, of Onlep, eſq. died ſeiſed of 8 meſſuages, 100 acres of land, and 60 acres of meadow, in Sireſton [7].

In 1512, ... Malory died ſeiſed of lands and tenements in Syſton, held of the king, but by what ſervice was not known [8].

Glenfield's intereſt here, which was the moſt conſiderable, paſſed with an heir female to the Fulleſhurſts of Fulleſhurſt, co. Cheſter, about the time of king Richard II; and remained in that family till the time of king Henry VIII, when ſir Richard Fulleſhurſt paſſed away his lands here, by the name of the manor of Siſon, to Richard Sneyd, of Bradwall, co. Stafford, his kinſman; whoſe ſon, ſir William Sneyd, knight, died ſeiſed of it in 1592.

"28° die Novembris, anno 13° reginæ Elizabethæ. Leic'. Whereas two meſſuages and one yard and an half of arable land, with the appurtenances, in Syſton, in the county of Leiceſter, late in the tenure of John Worral, and before granted to one Richard Worral father of the ſame John, and to the ſame John his ſon, and Anne Worral then wife to the ſaid Richard, for their lives, by copy of court-roll, of long time have been, and yet are, in the hands and poſſeſſion of our ſovereign lady the queen's majeſty that now is, as by many records of this Court more plainly may appear: It is ordered this day, by this Court, that an injunction be directed out, under the ſeal of this Court, unto Henry Martin, John Woodcock, Thomas Copland, and Thomas Jewyn, who (as this Court is informed) do at this preſent occupy the premiſſes; commanding them and every of them, and all theirs, immediately upon the receipt thereof, to avoid from the poſſeſſion of the ſaid two meſſuages, and other the premiſſes; and that neither they nor any of them, nor any other for them, or in any of their names, nor in the name of any other man, do from henceforth intermeddle with or occupy the ſame, or any part thereof; but that they and every of them do permit and ſuffer the aforeſaid John Worrall, the queen's highneſs's farmer of the premiſſes, and his aſſigns, quietly and peaceably to have, hold, occupy, and enjoy, the ſaid two meſſuages, and one yard and half of arable land, and every part and parcel thereof, without moleſtation, trouble, or vexation of the ſaid Henry Martyn, John Woodcock, Thomas Copland, and Thomas Jewyn, or any of them, or any other, for or in any of their names, or by any of their procurement; and that upon pain of every of them one hundred pounds."

In 1559, George Belgrave died ſeiſed of the manor of Syſton, held of the Queen, as of the honour of Leiceſter, by the ſervice of an hundredth part of a knight's fee [9]; and in 1572, Ambroſe Belgrave in like manner died ſeiſed of it [10].

In 1564, there were 55 families in Syſton.

William Tilley of Syſton died ſuddenly, in a new-incloſed field near Hoton chapel, Jan. 30, 1575; and was buried at Hoton [11].

In 1589, ſir Walter Aſton, knt. died ſeiſed of certain lands and tenements in Syſton and Burſtall [12].

In 1593, certain lands and tenements at Syſton were demiſed by the crown to Thomas Stretton [13].

In 1594, certain lands and tenements at Syſton were demiſed by the crown to Thomas Stretton.

Mr. Wyrley, in 1595, ſays, "Syſon is ſeated in the meadows joining to the Sore; which in time paſt belonged to the lords Ferrers of Groby."

Francis Woodcock died in June 1604, ſeiſed of one virgate and a half of land in Syſton, aliàs Sytheſton, held of the king in capite, as of the honour of Leiceſter; alſo of a cottage and half a virgate of land in Siſton, held of the king in capite, as of his honour of Hampton-court; and Francis Woodcock, his ſon and heir, was aged 2 years and 10 months [14].

In 1609, Francis Brown held the manor of Syſton of the king, as of the honour of Hampton-court. Other landholders here under the ſame tenure were, Robert Adcock, Elizabeth Choue widow, William Fletcher, Richard Fowkes, Francis Martin, Robert and William Patchet, ——— Pollard, William Rodeley, Richard Skinner, Richard Wilſon, and Francis Woodcock.

The freeholders here in 1630 were, Nicholas Fletcher, John Pollard, Robert Adcock junior, Richard Fowkes, John Lacer, William Lewin, Thomas North.

Robert Watts, clerk, died 17 June, 1633, ſeiſed of a meſſuage and half a virgate of land at Syſton, with lands at Thurmaſton, &c. parcel of the monaſtery of Garradon [15]. By his wife Sarah he had two ſons, Robert and Joſeph.

In 1641, Henry Grey earl of Stanford was lord of this manor [16].

Jan. 10, 1651, Thomas Roadley ſenior ſettled a meſſuage, 2 yard-lands and a quarter, on his ſon Thomas's marriage with Mary Whiteing; and about the ſame time Robert Adcock ſettled a houſe and half a yardland there on the marriage of his ſon Robert to Anne Cookeſon [17].

In 1655, there was collected in Syſton, for the relief of the poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, the ſum of 1*l.* 2*s.* 0*d.*

In 1722, 73 freeholders polled from this pariſh; and in 1775, we find 102 names.

In 1776, there were 14 perſons in the workhouſe.

The act of parliament, which paſſed in 1777, for dividing ſeveral open fields in the pariſhes of Syſton and Barkby, having been already epitomized in the preſent volume [18]; it will be ſufficient to repeat that George Henry earl of Stamford is therein deſcribed as lord of the manor of Winton, and alſo of the manor of Syſton; John-Whattoffe Cleever and his brother Richard Cleever as leſſees of the great and ſmall tithes under the Univerſity of Oxford; and John-Dawes Roſs as vicar of Syſton. Lands of the yearly value of £10. were allotted to truſtees, for augmenting the ſtipend to the vicar or reſident curate, and for payment of a ſchoolmaſter; and particular proviſion made, that, if any land in the pariſh of Barkby ſhould be allotted in lieu of tithes or right of common in Syſton, ſuch land ſhould for ever thereafter be deemed to be in the pariſh of Syſton, and contributory to that pariſh in every reſpect, in the ſame manner as the land in lieu whereof it might be allotted.

---

[1] Cart. 15 Ric. II. n. 35.

[2] Eſch. 17 Ric. II. N° 24. Leic.

[3] Eſch. 1 Hen. VI. N° 51. Leic.

[4] Eſch. 23 Hen. VI.

[5] Eſch. 33 Hen. VI. N° 28. Leic.

[6] Eſch. 36 Hen. VI.

[7] Eſch. 3 Edw. IV. N° 13, Leic.

[8] Eſch. 4 Hen. VIII.

[9] Eſch. 1 Eliz.

[10] Eſch. 14 Eliz.

[11] See before, p. 357.

[12] Eſch. Aug. 18, 31 Eliz.

[13] Eſch. at Leiceſter, 17 Dec. 5 Jac. I.

[14] Leaſes in the Augmentation Office.

[15] Cole's Eſcheats, vol. II. (Harl. MSS. 757.) p. 312.

[16] Burton, MS.

[17] Palmer's MS Caſes, pp. 199. 362. 384.

[18] See before, under Barkby, p. 46.

On completing the navigation of the Wreke from Melton Mowbray to its junction with the Soar, Lewin bridge[1], which till that time had long ſtood decrepid on its worn-out ſtumps, was repaired and enlarged by the Melton Company, and rendered capable of admitting boats loaded with coal and other mercantile goods to paſs and repaſs with ſafety under the bridge.

In 1797, the commiſſioners of the turnpike-road leading from Leiceſter to Melton Mowbray gave orders to their ſurveyor, Mr. Bown of Leiceſter, to erect a bridge (which conſiſts of three arches) over the brook at the entrance of Syſton; which, by his direction, was begun at the commencement of the wheat-harveſt in the ſame year, and finiſhed in nine days by three bricklayers and ſix labourers. The quantity of materials uſed in the bridge was 25,000 bricks, and about 150 tons weight of ſtone. Since its erection it has been called "The Nins Days Wonder."

The village of Syſton is one of the moſt populous in the county, containing about 300 houſes.

The lordſhip contains about 1800 acres; and the principal inhabitants are reputable graziers. The earl of Stamford is lord of the manor. Mr. Alderman Oldham of Leiceſter, Mr. Cleaver, Mr. Adcock, and Mr. Moore, have alſo conſiderable property here.

In this town is a well called St. John's; and in the lordſhip is a place called Mowdebuſh-hill, on which ſtands a ſtone with "Mowdebuſs-hill" inſerted thereon. The late ſir John Danvers held a court, generally at Mountſorel, called Mowde-buſh court. The ſame day he held the court, his lawyer and his ſteward went to this hill, and, after ſome little ceremony, dug up a piece of turf from it, and took it to the houſe where ſir John held his court; which, like other old cuſtoms of this nature, ended in a convivial dinner.

Extracts from the Regiſter, which commences 1594;
Hugh Roberts, M. A. of the Univerſity of Oxford, then vicar; who alſo appears vicar in 1604.

"Memorandum, that, Friday the 4th of April, 1595, William Scampton, then parſon of Stoney Staunton, once vicar of Syſton, and Hugh Roberts, who next ſucceeded the ſaid Scampton in the ſaid vicarage; in conſideration that the ſaid vicarage-houſe was in ruin and decay, the above-named Scampton and Roberts, for the avoiding of trouble and law, were contented to compromiſe the cauſe, and the determining thereof, to the vicar of Barkby, Goodman Pickards, and Goodman North, who arbitrated that Scampton ſhould give unto the incumbent Roberts 20*s.* and the hovel, and the pales about the garden, and the gates, to be converted to his own uſe, as he thought beſt: to which arbitrament, foraſmuch as both had bound themſelves to the order that ſhould be made by the ſaid arbitrators, they condeſcended and agreed.

1596. April 25, Douſe, daughter of Hugh Roberts and Lettice, baptized.

1596. Church-porch ſlated and repaired.

1597. Seats in the church repaired; alſo the clock.

1597. Paid to the armour-dreſſer 3*s.* 4*d.*

Paid for a ſcabbard for the town-ſword 7*s.*

1598. Paid for a teaſter that is over the miniſter's pew, 11*s.*

1598. Steeple plaiſtered.

1599. Paid to Peter Pollard, for helping to drive away the town-bull that was ſold, 1*d.*

Paid for a bull, 30*s.*

Paid for another bull, 40*s.* 6*d.*

1600. Nicholas Lewin the elder, of the Flat-end, gave to the uſe of the church 6*s.* 8*d.*; and William the ſon of Richard Bowier gave 3*s.* to the aforeſaid uſe; which ſums were laid out on the cover that is above the pulpit; which cover coſt 5*s.* 10*d.*; the iron about it 2*s.* 2*d.* and the painting 2*s.*; ſo that it ſtood in 4*d.* more than the legators gave; which 4*d.* the vicar paid.

1600. Paid to Thomas Pollard, for moving the bull-hooke, 12*d.*

1601. Old Julian Rivett, widow, bequeathed, by will, 12*d.* upon the church; which was beſtowed upon painting the church-porch and oiling of the ſame.

All the hay was inned out of Syſton great meadow on the Wedneſday before St. James.

1601. Spent at Leiceſter, when we were ſummoned to appear at the court, for that ſome of the prieſts had wrought on St. Bartholomew's day, 8*d.*

1602. Paid to the lord Morden's players, becauſe they ſhould not play in the church, 12*d.*

1602. Harveſt late; barley not got in before St. Matthew's day; and on that day no peaſe nor beans were got in in Syſon.

1603. A pound of good hops ſold for 2*s.* 8*d.*; a ſtrike of malt 17*d.*; a ſtrike of wheat 2*s.* 4*d.*

1604. Iſabel Browne, of Loughborough, widow, gave, towards repairing the church of Syſton, 10*s.*

1605. Nicholas Lewin, of the Flattern, gave, by will, towards the repairing of Lewin-bridge[1], 6*s.* 8*d.*

1605. Paid for the entertaining of a counſellor in the cauſe[3] againſt ſir George Bellgrave, 10*s.*

1606. Grinding was ſo ſcant, either by water or wind, that, at the feaſt of St. Luke, the people came from Hinckley to Syſton, to grind their corn.

1607. Froſt ſo hard and continued, that men could not ſet forth their ploughs till after Valentine's day.

Richard Bouier the elder beſtowed upon the church 12*d.*

1609. Upon Wedneſday after later Lady there was a very great land-flood, that entered into many barns, and did much harm among corn and hay.

The ſickneſs of the plague began at Thomas Penford's houſe, where died only four; and, by God's great mercy, went no farther, though the ſeaſon was very hot. The firſt that died was buried the 14th of May. At Loughborough 500 people died of the plague.

1610. December 12, through the overſight of a plumber that was mending the leads, and for that purpoſe had made his fire in the lower loft of the ſteeple, the loft in the night was ſet on fire; but the fire was put out without doing much harm.

1611. Paid to the relief of the town of Loughborough when it was viſited, 26*s.* 8*d.*

1612. The painter, for drawing the king's arms, 15*s.*

1614. Steven Cooke gave to the church 3*s.*

1617. The water-mills of Syſton were repaired.

April 13, was broken the fourth[2] bell, which coſt £7. caſting.

Nov. 12, was burſt the foure[2] bell, which coſt the town for caſting 13*l.* 10*s.*

1617. Given to Mr. Green the preacher, 2*s.*

1624. Edward Burbage, of Radcliffe, bequeathed 5*s.* to the church, and 5*s.* to the poor of Syſton.

1626. Given to Mr. Hodges, that preached the 22d of January, 5*s.*

1627. Paid to Mr. Hardinge, that preached, 3*s.*

1650. King's arms in the church defaced.

First five years, baptized	44	increaſed
buried	46		baptiſms	74
Laſt five years, baptized	118		burials	71
buried	117

The names of all the books that belong to the pariſh-church, taken the 6th day of Februarie, 1602; viz.

"Juell againſt Hardinge," in folio.
"Eraſmus's Paraphraſe on the Evangeliſts," } folio.
——— Epiſtles." }
"Bullinge's Decades," a large quarto.
"Hemengius upon the Goſpels," quarto.

---

[1] Lewin-bridge is near a mile from Syſton, in the road to Radcliffe; and its name is a ſtrong proof of its antiquity. Lewin was a conſiderable land-holder in this neighbourhood in the reign of William the Conqueror.

[2] Qu. fourth, or fore? It is written the for-bell in the original. Perhaps, ſynonymous with great or principal.

[3] What this cauſe was, does not appear.

Collections gathered in our church of Syſton.

1601-2, March 21. For Waltham on the Woldes, 4*s.*

——— July 25. For Earl's Shilton, 2*s.* 6*d.*

1603. For Melton, for certain houſes burnt there, 3*d.*

1605, May 5. For Nether Seale, that had ſuſtained loſs by fire, 2*s.* 2*d.*

—— July 14. For William Archer, of Melton, who had loſs by fire, 5*s.*

—— Oct. 20. For Bridget Palmer, widow, of Carleton, co. Northampton, who had ſuſtained loſs by fire, 2*s.* 1*d.*

1606. For Chriſtian Sugar of Earl's Shilton, that had ſuſtained loſs by fire, 11*d.*

—— For a poor man of the Old Hoſpital, 2*s.* 4*d.*

—— March 15. For Wilſon of Cuſſinton, who had ſuſtained loſs by fire, 5*s.* 8*d.*

1607, May 17. For Goodwife Oſwine, of Mountſorell, for her impotent huſband that lay ſick, 1*s.* 4*d.*

—— June 7. For Thomas Norman of Gadſbie, who had loſt a cow, 16*s.* 2*d.*

1607-8. A collection for inhabitants of Melton, for loſs received by fire, ...

1608, June 19. For Mr. Halton, a preacher under the ſeal of the biſhop of London, 3*s.* 6*d.*

—— June 26. For old Watts of Barkby, 4*s.* 2*d.*

—— July 3. For old Kington of Mountſorell, 1*s.* 9*d.*

1609. For one Hericke of Coſſington, April 23, 4*s.* 4½*d.*

1612-13. For Shilton, that had ſuffered loſs by fire, 4*s.* 4*d.*

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor, within the year ending at Eaſter 1776, —	126	19	3
Expended in county rates, &c.	3	14	8
——— on the poor, —	123	4	7
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	9	3	6
Expended in litigations, —	23	4	7
Money raiſed for 1783, —	276	0	7
——— 1784, —	228	11	1
——— 1785, —	208	6	0
Medium of theſe three years,	237	12	6
——— of county-expences,	20	0	4
——— of expences not relating to the poor, repairs of churches, roads, &c.	0	0	0
——— of nett annual expences,	217	12	2
——— of attending on magiſtrates,	2	5	11
——— of entertainments at meetings,	0	14	2
——— of law expences, —	13	7	5
——— of ſetting the poor to work,	1	1	3

In 1798, ſir John Palmer, bart. of Carlton in Northamptonſhire, cauſed to be paid into the hands of the vicar and overſeers of the pariſh of Syſton the ſum of £30. being a legacy of his late ſiſter, Mrs. Catharine Palmer, of Carlton in Northamptonſhire, to the town of Syſton; the intereſt of which ſum (together with other ſimilar donations) is diſtributed amongſt the poor houſe-keepers of Syſton annually on St. Thomas's day.

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 54.

The CHURCH, (ſee Plate LXVI.)

dedicated to St. Peter, conſiſts of a ſtout tower (in which are ſix bells); chancel, nave, and two ailes. The nave and chancel are ſeparated by a ſkreen. The pillars which ſupport the roof of the middle aile are very handſome; but the windows in the church are too ſmall, which gives it a very gloomy appearance; and the pews are bad.

A paſſage to the rood-loft ſtill remains.

The font is antient and decagon; lined with variegated lead, and ſupported by four pillars.

Mr Wyrley noticed in this church theſe arms, not now to be found, fig. 1—6.

In the Eaſt window of the church:

Gules, ſeven maſcles voided Or, a label of three points Azure, charged with nine horſe-ſhoes Argent, Ferrers of Groby.

Vaire, Or and Gules, Ferrers earl of Derby.

"A fair glaſs monument, that is wrought in mail; and on his mantle, Gules, ſeven maſcles voided Or."

In a South window:

Or, three chevrons Gules, Clare earl of Glouceſter.

In the South-weſt window:

Quarterly, 1. and 4. Azure, a bend Or, Scrope; 2. and 3. Gules, a ſaltire Argent, Nevile of Raby; impaling, Azure, ſemé de fleurs de lis, a lion rampant Or, Beaumont.

Ermine, a croſs patée Gules.

The arms of Keble, fig. 7, Barry nebulé of ſix, Argent and Sable, a canton Gules, are ſtill in one of the windows.

In the Matriculus of 1220[1], Syſton is deſcribed to be under the patronage of Robert de Theobaldvile; the then rector Gilbert Malore, who had been inſtituted by Hugh biſhop of Lincoln.

In 1344, the procurations were, 7*s.* 6¾*d.*; the rectory was taxed at 18 marks, and paid 2*s.* 6*d.* for Peter-pence.

The then patron was the prior of Ulveſcroft; and to this priory the rectory was then appropriated.

The priory of Ulveſcroft had the rectory, the latter being of the annual value of 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* and, at the time of the diſſolution, in the hands of John Porter, by virtue of a conventual leaſe[2].

A chantry was founded here by William Grendall, prieſt, for one prieſt, to ſing maſs and other divine ſervice, within a chapel of our Lady, in the ſaid pariſh-church. This chantry was yearly worth, in lands and tenements, 3*l.* 11*s.* 2*d.*[3]

In 1534-5, the procurations and ſynodals were, 13*s.* 4*d.*; the value of the vicarage, 7*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*; and John Benſkin, the chantry-prieſt, had 3*l.* 9*s.* a year.

"In 1553, the chancellor, fellows, and ſcholars of the Univerſity of Oxford had a grant of the impropriate rectories and advowſons of Syſton in the county of Leiceſter; and of South Petherwin, in the county of Cornwall; and Home Coletrayne, with the chapelry of Newton Alroche, in the county of Cumberland[4].

The Benſkins antiently were tenants to the Univerſity of Oxford for the rectory of Syſton.

1596, Ales Benſkin, widow, farmer of the rectory of Syſon, paid to the churchwardens one quarter of barley, due to the pariſh from the rectory, which was ſold for 33*s.* 4*d.*

1598. The ſame payment was made by Ales Benſkin, and ſold for 10*s.* 8*d.*

In 1627, Edward Smith was farmer of the rectory.

In 1650, Syſton was returned as an impropriation; the rectory worth £120; the vicar's ſtipend of money £20; and the incumbent "ſufficient."

On renewing the leaſe, on payment of £278. fine and taxes, the Univerſity, 17 March, 1655, demiſed the rectory to Amy Benſkin for 21 years, commencing after the expiration of a former leaſe, from Lady-day 1661, under the rent of 61*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; which rectory was worth £200. a year over and above the rent.

This intereſt was aſſigned by Amy Benſkin to her ſon Samuel; which, by his laſt will, he deviſed to his wife Mary and their two ſons Edward and Charles, the latter of whom died an infant[5].

In 1798, the vicarage-houſe of Syſton was wholly taken down and rebuilt at the expence of £300. (excluſive of the old materials.) The vice-chancellor, maſter, and ſcholars of the univerſity of Oxford, upon an application to them from the preſent vicar, preſented him with £100. towards defraying the expence.

In the king's books, Syſton is entered as a diſcharged living, worth, "in pecuniâ, cum exit', manſ', & aliis proficuis, 7*l.* 2*s.* 7*d.*; cum terrâ pro reparatione eccleſiæ;" clear yearly value, 47*l.* 9*s.* 8*d.*

The epiſcopal procurations are, for the rectory 2*s.* 7*d.*; the vicarage 18*s.* 8*d.*; the archidiaconal, 11*s.* 1*d.*

---

[1] See the Introductory Volume, p. lix.

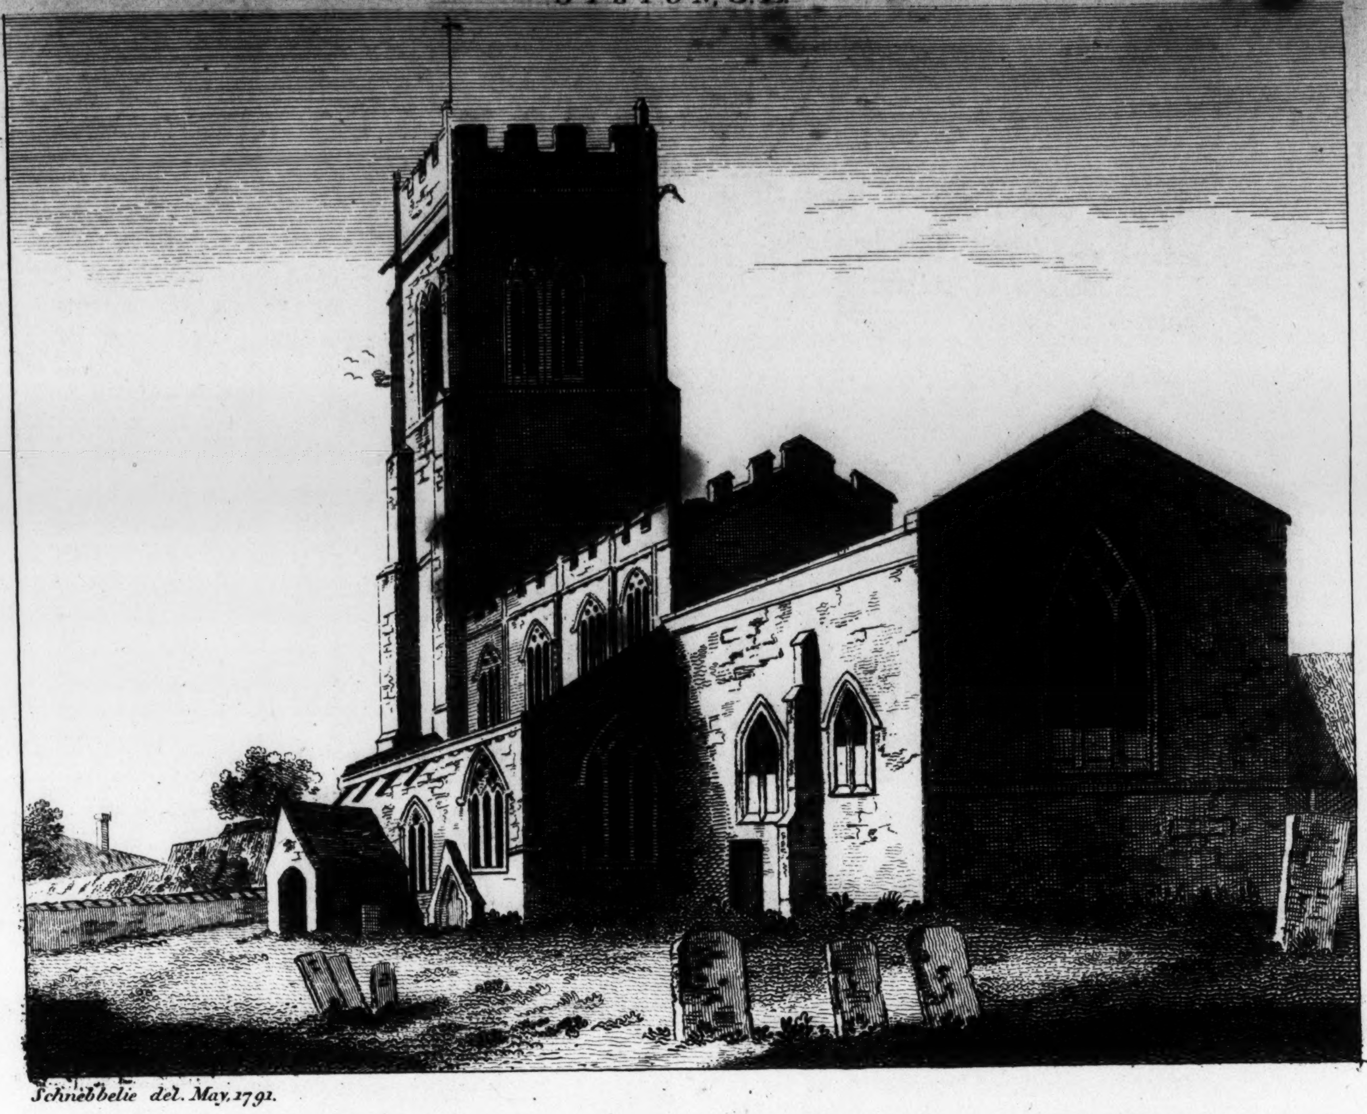
[2] Miniſters Accompts in the Augmentation Office, 31 Hen. VIII.

[3] Certif. Coll. & Cantar. Offic. Augment.

[4] Wood, Hiſt. & Antiq. Univ. Oxon. I. 274; & 4 Pars Original. 1 Mariæ, Rot. 16.

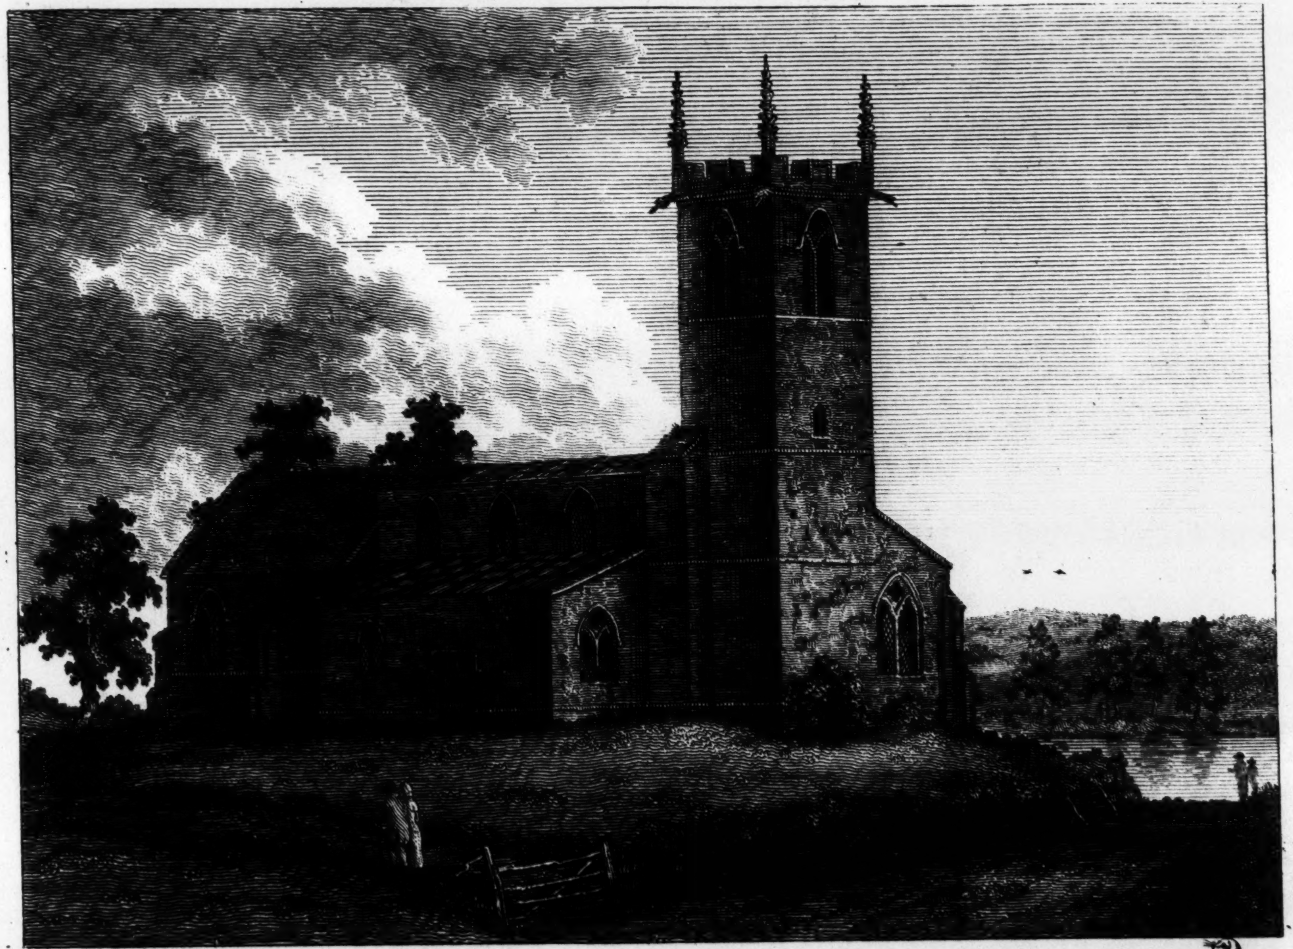
[5] Palmer's MS Caſes, pp. 218—222. 387.

SYSTON, S.E.

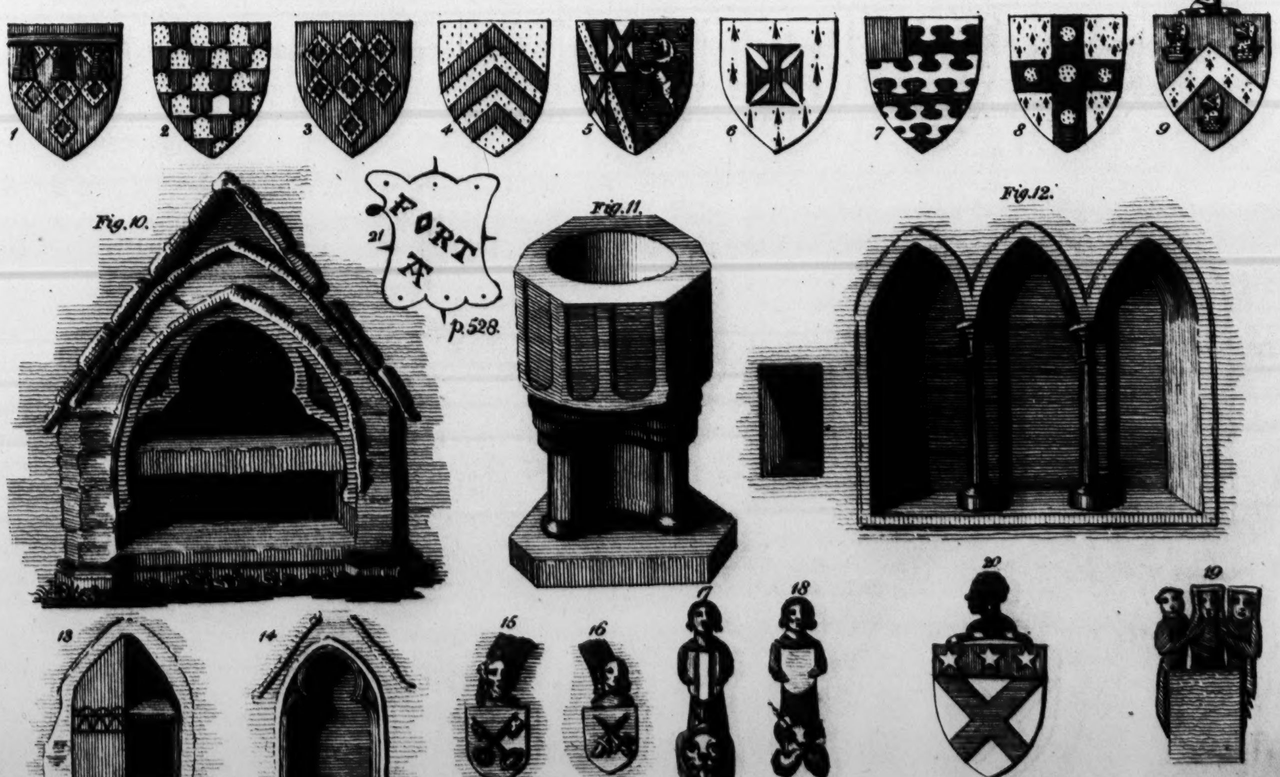


Schnebbelie del. May. 1791.

THRUSSINGTON, N.W.



Drawn 1792



1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
Fig. 10.
21
PORT A
p. 528
Fig. 11.
Fig. 12.
13
14
15
16
7
18 20
19

Longmate del & sc

RECTORS.	PATRONS.
Robert the clerk, nephew of Stephen de Belgrave, 1219.	The earl of Winton's proctor.
Gilbert Malore, 1220.	Robert de Theobaldvile.
William Malore, 1230.	Margaret counteſs of Winton.
R. de Mulent [1], reſigned 1258.
Brian de Whatton [2], ſubdean, 1258.
Rober Bertram [3], 1473.
John Parſons, 1534.

VICARS.
Gilbert Sturges [4], 1562.
William Scampton, about 1594 [5].
Hugh Roberts, 1595.
John Pritchard, Nov. 7, 1646.	Parliamentary Sequeſtrators.
Daniel Parry, March 16, 1660.	Cancellarius, magiſtri, & ſcholares Univerſitatis Oxon'.
Richard Langmead, Nov. 5, 1672.
Thomas Davis, Dec. 22, 1697.
William Heſketh, B. A. Aug. 25, 1709—1717.
John Abney, March 14, 1717; died in 1744, aged 53.
Gerrard Andrewes [6], M. A. Dec. 25, 1744; died 1764.
John-Dawes Roſs [7], M. A. April 13, 1764; the preſent vicar.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

In the chancel.

On flat monumental ſtones:

1. "Hoc ſaxum ſignat
Gulielmum Heſketh, A. B.
& hujus eccleſiæ paſtorem;
ubi, per novem annos, Magiſtro ſuo Dño Jeſu Chriſto cum æquabili & humillimâ pietate, rerum divinarum debitâ adminiſtratione, concionibus aſſiduis, & exemplo vitæ,
fidelitèr famulatus eſt.
Quod ſpectat ad omnia vitæ officia, vixit honeſtè, utilitèr, peramantèr,
nemini moleſtus, omnibus charus;
erat enim ingenio miti & ſuaviſſimo.
Viduam cum duobus filiis admodùm tenellis poſt ſe reliquit, externis rebus ſic ſatìs beatum, ſed intùs & animo miſerè mœrentem,
quippe erat deſideratiſſimus & maritus & pater.
Obiit 22º Januarii, A. D. 1717, ætatis ſuæ 35."

2. "John Abney, vicar, died in 1744, aged 53."

On an eſcutcheon, Ermine, a croſs Sable, two bezants, Abney, Plate LXVI. fig. 9.

3. "Here lieth Anne,
the wife of John-Whattoff Cleever, gent.
who departed this life the 15th day of April, 1787,
aged 65 years.

A woman that feareth the Lord, ſhe ſhall be praiſed.
Proverbs xxxi. 30."

In the nave.

1. "Here lieth Mary, the wife of Mr. Thomas Fletcher.
She departed this life May 20,
in the year of our Lord 1743,
and the 70th year of her age."

2. "Here lieth Mr. Thomas Fletcher.
He departed this life the 19th of September,
in the year of our Lord 1759,
and in the 76th year of his age.
I come, I wait, I hear, I pray:
Thy footſteps, Lord, I trace:
I joy to think this is the way
To ſee my Saviour's face."

3. "Here lieth Mr. Thomas-Fletcher Kendall, ſon of Mr. John Kendall, by Mary his wife.
He departed this life the 27th day of Auguſt,
in the year of our Lord 1772,
and the 38th year of his age.
With deepeſt thoughts, ſpectator, view thy fate:
Thus mortals paſs to an immortal ſtate.
Thro' Death's dark vale, we hope, he found the way
To the bright regions of eternal day."

In the church-yard:

"Here lieth interred the body of William Needham, who departed this life Jan. 26, anno Dom. 1728-9,
in the 79th year of his age.

Need, I confeſs, began my name; but that was but a ſham;
For, this world's pelf I wanted not, until I loſt my ham.
What I gave I have,
What I ſpent I had,
What I left I loſt by not giving it."

"Here lie the remains of Benjamin Scattergood and Ann his wife.
She died Oct. 9, 1787, aged 50 years.
He died July 7, 1791, aged 59 years.
Death's ſteps are ſure; and yet no noiſe he makes;
He ſtands unſeen, and yet he ſurely takes;
Know, Reader, know, as ſure as thou haſt breath,
Thou ſubject art unto the ſtrokes of Death:
But if thou die to Sin, that Grace may reign,
Tho' Sin brings Death; yet Death will be thy gain."

"Here lie the remains of William Warren, carpenter.
He died June the 4th, 1746, aged 73 years.
Tho' ſudden death [8] his tender frame deſtroy'd,
In ſome ſoft dream or extacy of joy
May he ſleep out the ſabbath of the tomb,
And wake in raptures in a life to come."

"My ſun is ſet.
Sacred to the memory of Mary, the wife of John Sheffield.
She departed this life the 21ſt of Auguſt, 1782,
aged 21 years.
Can Beauty? No! nor youth's more powerful art,
For one ſhort moment ſtop Death's fatal dart?
An inſtance here, juſt gave her infant [9] light,
Then calmly ſunk into the ſhades of night."

Fig. 10. is an arch on the outſide of the church.

Fig. 11. the old font.

Fig. 12. the ſtalls and piſcina on the North ſide of the chancel.

Fig. 13. a locker on the North ſide of the chancel.

Fig. 14. a piſcina in the South aile.

Fig. 15. and 16. carvings on the ſpring of an arch on the tower over the Weſt door.

Fig. 17. and 18. beams in the body of the church.

Fig. 19. a carving on the South-weſt buttreſs of the tower.

---

[1] Roger de Longſpee, biſhop of Coventry, 1257—1287.

[2] "Brianus de Whatton, ſubdecanus, præſentatus per dominum R. de Quincy, comitem Wyntonienſem, ad eccleſiam de Sitheſton, vacatam per promotionem d'ni R. de Mulent ad epiſcopatum Coventr', diſpenſatus pro tribus beneficiis à Papâ." Reg. Graveſend, Pont. 1.

[3] See under Belgrave, p. 174; where he occurs as witneſs to a deed.

[4] In the Certificate referred to under Allexton, p. 8, Mr. Sturges is thus deſcribed: "Preſbyter, non conjugatus; mediocritèr doctus; reſidet; hoſpitalis; deget ibidem; non licentiatus, nec prædicat: nullum aliud habet."

[5] Afterwards rector of Stony Staunton.

[6] See p. 456.

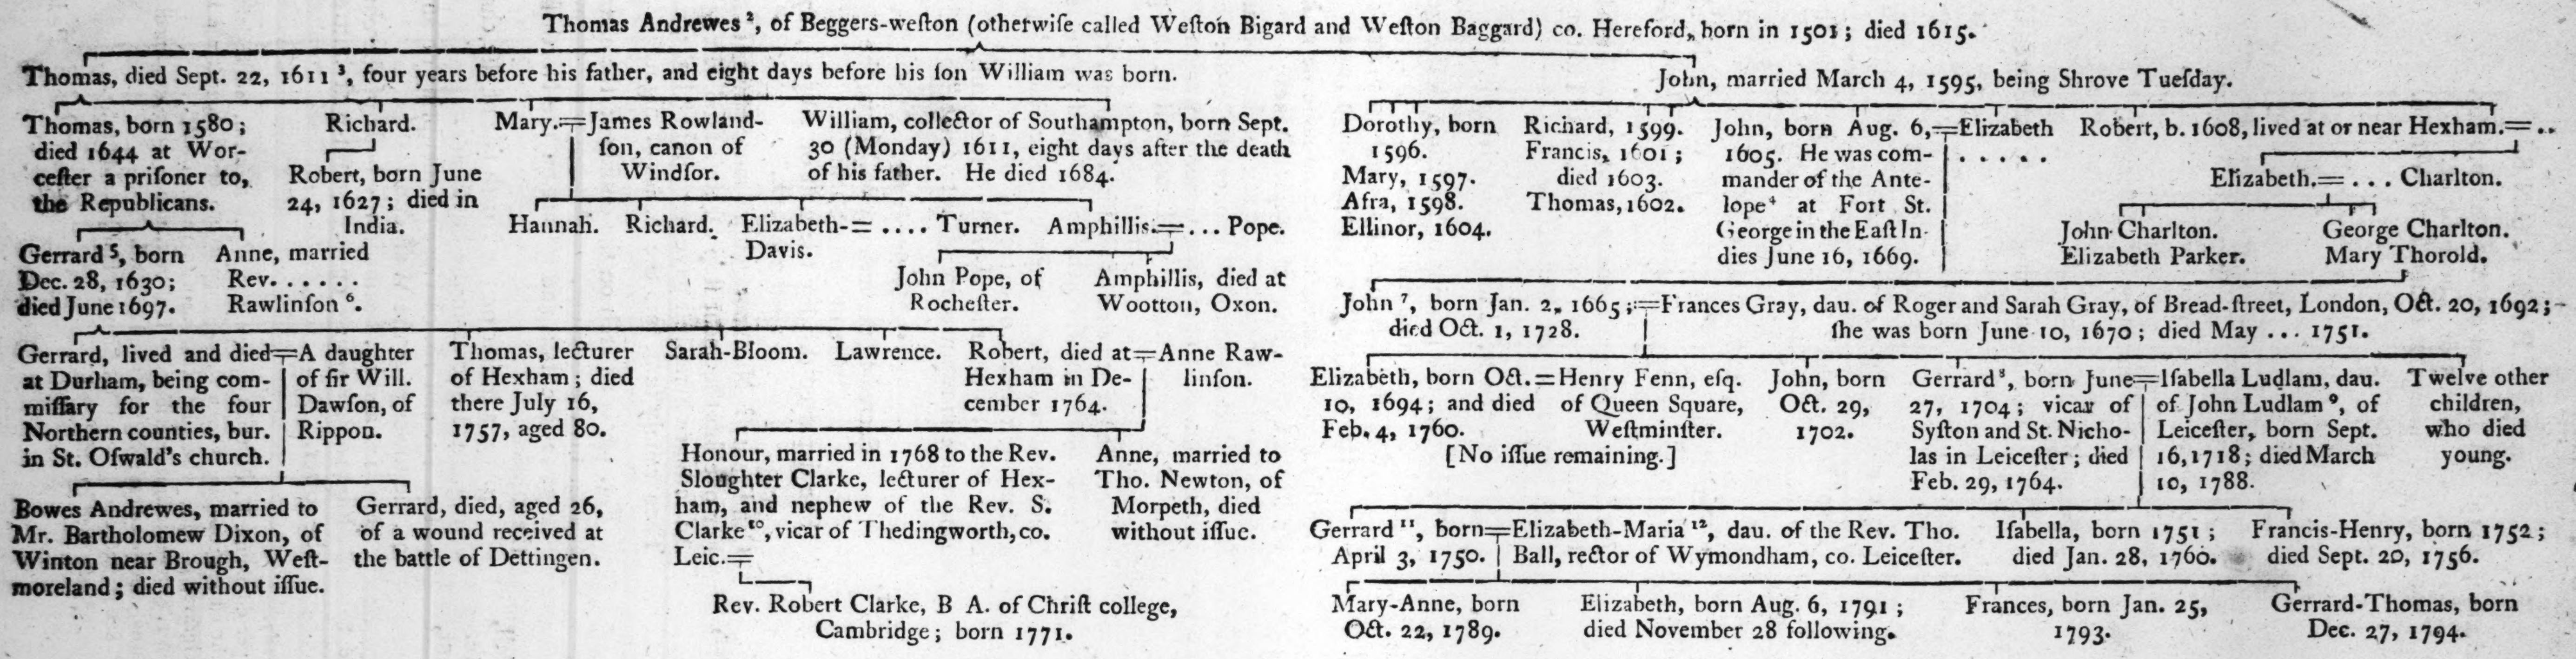
[7] Of Edmund Hall, A. M. 1767.

[8] He was killed by the fall of a load of wood.

[9] She died in child-bed.

Pedigree

Pedigree of ANDREWES[1].



Thomas Andrewes[2], of Beggers-weſton (otherwiſe called Weſton Bigard and Weſton Baggard) co. Hereford, born in 1501; died 1615.
Thomas, died Sept. 22, 1611[3], four years before his father, and eight days before his ſon William was born.
John, married March 4, 1595, being Shrove Tueſday.
Thomas, born 1580; died 1644 at Worceſter a priſoner to, the Republicans.
Richard.
Robert, born June 24, 1627; died in India.
Mary.=James Rowlandſon, canon of Windſor.
William, collector of Southampton, born Sept. 30 (Monday) 1611, eight days after the death of his father. He died 1684.
Hannah.
Richard.
Elizabeth-=.... Turner.
Davis.
Amphillis.=...Pope.
John Pope, of Rocheſter.
Amphillis, died at Wootton, Oxon.
Gerrard[5], born Dec. 28, 1630; died June 1697.
Anne, married Rev. ..... Rawlinſon[6].
Gerrard, lived and died at Durham, being commiſſary for the four Northern counties, bur. in St. Oſwald's church.=A daughter of ſir Will. Dawſon, of Rippon.
Thomas, lecturer of Hexham; died there July 16, 1757, aged 80.
Sarah-Bloom.
Lawrence.
Robert, died at Hexham in December 1764.=Anne Rawlinſon.
Bowes Andrewes, married to Mr. Bartholomew Dixon, of Winton near Brough, Weſtmoreland; died without iſſue.
Gerrard, died, aged 26, of a wound received at the battle of Dettingen.
Honour, married in 1768 to the Rev. Sloughter Clarke, lecturer of Hexham, and nephew of the Rev. S. Clarke[10], vicar of Thedingworth, co. Leic.=
Anne, married to Tho. Newton, of Morpeth, died without iſſue.
Rev. Robert Clarke, B A. of Chriſt college, Cambridge; born 1771.
Dorothy, born 1596.
Mary, 1597.
Afra, 1598.
Ellinor, 1604.
Richard, 1599.
Francis, 1601; died 1603.
Thomas, 1602.
John, born Aug. 6, 1605. He was commander of the Antelope[4] at Fort St. George in the Eaſt Indies June 16, 1669.=Elizabeth .....
Robert, b. 1608, lived at or near Hexham.=..
Elizabeth.=... Charlton.
John Charlton.
Elizabeth Parker.
George Charlton.
Mary Thorold.
John[7], born Jan. 2, 1665; died Oct. 1, 1728.=Frances Gray, dau. of Roger and Sarah Gray, of Bread-ſtreet, London, Oct. 20, 1692; ſhe was born June 10, 1670; died May ... 1751.
Elizabeth, born Oct. 10, 1694; and died Feb. 4, 1760.=Henry Fenn, eſq. of Queen Square, Weſtminſter.
[No iſſue remaining.]
John, born Oct. 29, 1702.
Gerrard[8], born June 27, 1704; vicar of Syſton and St. Nicholas in Leiceſter; died Feb. 29, 1764.=Iſabella Ludlam, dau. of John Ludlam[9], of Leiceſter, born Sept. 16, 1718; died March 10, 1788.
Twelve other children, who died young.
Gerrard[11], born April 3, 1750.=Elizabeth-Maria[12], dau. of the Rev. Tho. Ball, rector of Wymondham, co. Leiceſter.
Iſabella, born 1751; died Jan. 28, 1760.
Francis-Henry, born 1752; died Sept. 20, 1756.
Mary-Anne, born Oct. 22, 1789.
Elizabeth, born Aug. 6, 1791; died November 28 following.
Frances, born Jan. 25, 1793.
Gerrard-Thomas, born Dec. 27, 1794.

---

[1] In a window of Little St. Bartholomew's church in Weſt Smithfield, over the door, in the paſſage into the church, are the arms and creſt painted in glaſs, with the inſcription of "Mr. Henrie Andrewes, alderman of London, 1636;" Argent, a ſaltire Azure; on a chief Gules three mullets Or. Creſt, a Moor's head in profile; Plate LXVI. fig. 20. He died, in Walbrook, Aug. 13, 1638.

[2] This gentleman danced, in company with five other gentlemen, at a maſque before king James I, in the year 1609, at the age of 108, being the youngeſt of the company.

[3] His death appears from a leaf torn from an old Bible, now in the poſſeſſion of the Rev. Gerrard Andrewes, containing the deſcendants of John married in 1595; in which leaf it is written, "William my nephew was born the laſt day of September 1611, being Monday, betwixt 4 and 5 in the morning. Thomas his father died on the 32d of the ſame September, 1611, at night."

[4] Mr. Andrewes has now in his poſſeſſion two letters from John, commander of the Antelope, to his wife Elizabeth; one not dated, ſeemingly prior to his ſailing, directed to his houſe at Bromley, near Bow-bridge; the other from Fort St. George, dated June 16, 1669. He died when abroad, and was buried at Surat.

[5] He was educated by the duke of Beaufort with his ſiſter Anne, and well provided for in the Cuſtoms.

[6] Whoſe father, as well as Miſs Andrewes, loſt their eſtates in the great rebellion. The duke of Beaufort gave Miſs Andrewes £500. to her portion, with a ſilver cup, which in 1785 was in the poſſeſſion of Mrs. Dixon; who then communicated theſe particulars of Gerrard and his ſiſter Anne, having heard them from her father.

[7] This John was in the law, and it is believed was city ſolicitor. He once lived in Bartholomew-lane; and his name is now up, or was lately, as churchwarden in St. Bartholomew's church.

[8] Mr. Andrewes was admitted in 1719 a king's ſcholar at Weſtminſter ſchool, which he left in 1725; and, though elected from the foundation there to Trinity College, Cambridge, he entered of Baliol College, Oxford, where he became M. A. Dec. 5, 1738; was preſented in 1744 by the Univerſity of Oxford to the vicarage of Syſton; and by the Lord Chancellor to the vicarage of St. Nicholas in 174.. He died Feb. 29, 1764, in his 60th year; and was buried in the church of St. Nicholas *. As a Divine, he alike captivated in the deſk and pulpit. Poſſeſſing a very harmonious voice, he read with an energy juſt and influencing; taught with a conciſeneſs pertinently perſuaſive, and intelligible to a general auditory; and was long conſidered as one of the brighteſt ornaments of the clerical profeſſion. He alſo filled with diſtinguiſhed credit the office of maſter of the free-ſchool of the town of Leiceſter; which, under his ſuperintendance, was a ſeminary of great repute; not only the ſons of the firſt families in theſe parts were placed under his care, but numbers from much greater diſtances alſo received the rudiments of an education that reflect honour on his abilities. Amongſt theſe was the preſent earl of Stamford; and, not to mention many others, the late Dr. Halifax biſhop of St. Aſaph, and Dr. Farmer the late worthy maſter of Emanuel College, Cambridge, were contemporaries under his inſtruction. Cheerful in his deportment, and deſtitute of tyranny, his ſchool was a ſcene of lively obedience. Beloved by the boys for his free and gentle treatment, his precepts were readily received, and the taſk diſpatched with alacrity.

[9] Whoſe brother (ſir George Ludlam) was chamberlain of London 1718—1727.

[10] See his epitaph in vol. II. p. 829.

[11] Admitted a ſcholar at Weſtminſter in 1764; elected thence to Trinity College, Cambridge, 1769; B. A. 1773; M. A. 1776. From 1772 to 1784 he was one of the aſſiſtants at Weſtminſter-ſchool; was preſented, in 1788, by lord Boringdon, to the rectory of Zeal Monachorum in Devonſhire; and choſen in the years 1791 and 1799 by the Governors of the Magdalen and Foundling Hoſpitals alternate evening-preacher at thoſe excellent inſtitutions, It is remarkable that Mr. Andrewes's father was one of fifteen children, and his mother one of ſeventeen; yet he is the only male remaining from both grandfathers.

[12] Of whom ſee ſome memoirs, vol. II. p. 890.

* His epitaph will be printed with the account of that church.

THRUSSINGTON,

in old records written Turſtanetone, Thurſtanton, and Thirſtaton, is ſituated near the Foſs-road, 8 miles from Leiceſter, 7 from Melton Mowbray, and 7 from Loughborough; bounded by Radcliffe, Segrave, Hoby, Brookſby, and Rereſby, from which two laſt places it is ſeparated by the river Wreke. In the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, it is within the deanry of Goſcote.

In the reign of king Edward the Confeſſor, Turſtanetone, conſiſting of twelve ploughlands, was valued at twenty ſhillings. At the general ſurvey, it was worth four pounds; and was then held by Guido de Reinbudcurt immediately under the king. Two ploughs were in the demeſne; and thirty ſocmen, with four villans and three bordars, had eleven ploughs. There were ſixteen acres of meadow, and a mill of eight ſhillings value [1].

On the aid granted to king Henry III. in 1235, towards the marrying of his ſiſter with the emperor of the Romans, Thomas de Wappinburg paid one mark for half a fee in Thruſſington, and Gilbert de Houby two marks for one fee.

In 1247, "Diverſi homines ſummoniti fuerunt ad reſpondendum Roberto de Nottingham de placito, quòd faciant ei ſectam ad curiam ſuam de Thurſtanton, quam eis facere debent & ſolent; & quòd Thomas de Wappenbirg defunctus fuit capitalis dominus illius feodi, & de Thurcaſton [2]."

The ſame year, "Radulphus & Jordanus, filii & heredes Simonis Gumer, recuperaverunt ſeiſinam ſuam verſus Robertum filium Willielmi le Ram de unâ acrâ terre in Barneſby, per defaltationem, &c.; & ſi Thomas de Wappenburg frater Margerie uxoris Gerardi Duredent, Alicia uxor Roberti Revel, & Agnes uxor Radulphi de Quenby, fuerunt ſeiſiti, &c. de LXIVs̃. VIIId̄. redditu, cum pertinentiis, in Ratclive & Thurſtanton, die quo obiit; unde Ricardus Scharpe VIs̃. & VIs̃. &c. Et Ricardus & alii veniunt, & dicunt quòd non debent ad hoc breve reſpondere, quia dicunt quòd Robertus Revel & Alicia uxor ejus, participes ſui, non ſequuntur cum eis ideò ſummonitis, quòd ſint, à die Paſche, in xv dies, apud Warw', ad ſequendum cum participibus ſuis, ſi voluerint. Et breve remaneat penès vicecomitem [3]."

In the Itinerary of 1280, Thruſſington, Hoby, Rakedale, Wilghes, and Radclive, anſwered collectively as one vill.

In 1301, Henry de Nottingham held a knight's fee in Thurſtinton and Radclive of the heirs of Thomas de Wappenburg, and of Thomas de Waſſingle, Richard de Beyvill, and William de Ryvell; and the ſaid Thomas, Richard, and William, held the ſame of Roger de Mowbray, deceaſed [4].

In 1325, it was found that John de Segrave, deceaſed, and Chriſtian his wife, held divers rents in Thurſtington; and that John de Segrave (ſon and heir of Stephen de Segrave, couſin of the aforeſaid John de Segrave ſenior) was his next heir [5]. In the ſame year it appeared that Roger Beler, deceaſed, and Alice his wife, held 10 marks rent of Henry de Nottingham for certain tenements in Thurſtington of Walter de Wappenburg; but by what ſervices was not known [6].

It appears by the Segrave Chartulary, and by an inquiſition taken in 1326, that Thruſtanton, otherwiſe Thurſyngton, was then a member of Segrave; and that Richard the ſon of Thomas de Wapyngburg had conveyed to Gilbert de Segrave and his heirs a virgate of land in Thurſtanton, which Alice de Nubton had held, with a toft and croft, meadow and paſture, and too cultoriæ, one abutting on Threhowes, another called Lambertonhow, with a toft and croft lately Germund's at the head of the bridge, with the gaer near the toft of Nicholas the ſon of Godwin, to be held of the ſaid Richard and his heirs by homage and a pound of cumin, at Eaſter, in lieu of all ſervices.

Another conveyance occurs, from Walkelin de Aclee to Henry de Nottingham and his heirs, of all that land in Thurſtanton which Thomas ſon of Peter of Rereſby held of Gilbert de Segrave, and a meſſuage late William the Miller's, and of one croft, with two acres and a half, in Thurſtanton, late in the tenure of Thomas ſon of Geremand, and all that he poſſeſſed in Thurſtanton, to be held on payment to the ſaid Walkelin and his heirs of 1*d.* yearly at Eaſter; to the heirs of Gilbert de Segrave of 5*d.* a year at four payments; and to the heirs of Henry de Segrave of 12*d.* and a pair of white gloves for all ſervices [7].

In 1327, Henry de Nottingham, at his death, held a third part of the manor of Thurſtanton of John de Clervaus by the ſervice of half a knight's fee and five marks rent; and two parts of the manor were then held of the heir of Roger Beler, within age and in wardſhip of the king, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee, and 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* rent [8].

In 1346, Henry de Nottingham (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 10*s.* for a quarter of a knight's fee in Thruſſington, Radcliffe, and Hoby, parcel of the fees of Cheſter and Huntingdon; and the prior of Sempringham the like ſum for a ſimilar portion of a knight's fee in Thruſſington, held of the lord Segrave [9].

In 1349, Thomas Wake de Lydell held, at his death, one knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Thurſtinton [10]; and in 1352, John [Plantagenet] earl of Kent, at his death, held a knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Thurſtinton, late parcel of the poſſeſſions of Thomas Wake de Lydell; all which the relict of Henry de Nottingham held [11].

In 1361, John de Mowbray, of the Iſle of Axeholme, died ſeiſed of the moiety of a knight's fee in Thurſtington, which the prior of Sempringham held; of a quarter of a knight's fee in Queniborough and Thurſtington, which the maſter of [the hoſpital of] St. John of Leiceſter held; alſo a knight's fee in Thurſtington and Radclive, which Thomas de Wake held [12].

In 1377, John ſon and heir of Ralph Chamberleyne of Rereſby releaſed his right in all the lands and tenements, &c. which were Ralph Chamberleyn his father's, and Ralph Chamberleyn his grandfather's, in Thurſtington, to Robert Folevile, parſon of Saxulby, and others, and to their heirs [13].

In 1380, Roger Beler, at his death, held 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* rent, with the appurtenances, in Thurſington; which town was held of the aforeſaid Roger, by the ſervice of the rent aforeſaid; alſo the rent of Walter Wappenburgh [14].

In 1390, Ralph Baſſet of Drayton, knt. held, at his death, one meſſuage and 12 acres of land, with the appurtenances, in Thurſington, of Catharine de Nottingham, lady of Thurſington, by the ſervice of 2*s.* a year [15].

---

[1] "Wido de Reinbudcurt tenet de Rege 18 carucatas terræ in Turſtanetone. Terra eſt 12 carucarum. In dominico ſunt 2 carucæ; & 30 ſochmanni, cum 4 villanis & 3 bordariis, habent 11 carucas. Ibi molinum de 8 ſolidis, & 16 acræ prati. Valuit 20 ſolidos; modò 4 libras." Domeſday, fol. 235. a. 1.

[2] Plac. 31 Hen. III. in Recept. Scaccarii, Rot. 17.

[3] Ibid. Rot. 24.

[4] Eſch. 29 Edw. I. N° 47. Leic.

[5] Eſch. 19 Edw. II. N° 88. Leic.

[6] Eſch. 19 Edw. II. N° 88. Leic.

[7] See the Appendix to vol. II. p. 112.

[8] Eſch. 1 Edw. III. N° 32. Leic.

[9] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[10] Eſch. 23 Edw. III. pars 1, N° 75.

[11] Eſch. 26 Edw. III. N° 54. Leic.

[12] Eſch. 35 Edw. III. pars 2. N° 10.

[13] Cart. 51 Edw. III. m. 20.

[14] Eſch. 4 Ric. II. N° 14. Leic.

[15] Eſch. 14 Ric. II. N° 9. Leic.

In 1391, Mary wife of Roger Beler (firſt married to John Seintclere) died ſeiſed of 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* rent in Thurſington, held of Walter de Wappenburg's heir [1].

In 1399, it was found that Thomas Mowbray, late duke of Norfolk, died ſeiſed of one knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Thruſſington and Radcliffe [2].

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Thruſſington was rated at 1*l.* 1*s.*; and in the ſubſidy of 1445 at the ſame ſum, but an abatement was then made of 2*s.*

In 1420, Robert Swillington died ſeiſed of a yearly rent of ten marks, ariſing out of the tenements late of Henry Nottingham's in Thurſington, held of the heir of Walter Wappenburg [3].

In 1422, John Burdet, eſq. was lord of this manor [4].

In 1454, Thomas Walſhe junior releaſed to Robert Crombwell lord Crombwell, and his heirs, all his right in the manor of Thruſſington [5].

In 1455, Thomas Walſhe of Onelepe (couſin and heir of Thomas Walſhe, ſon and heir of ſir Thomas Walſhe, knt. ſon of Richard, brother of the aforeſaid Thomas, ſon of the aforeſaid ſir Thomas Walſhe, knt.) releaſed all his right in this manor to William biſhop of Winton, William Grey, and others [6].

In 1461, it was found that John Mowbray duke of Norfolk died ſeiſed of half a knight's fee in Thruſſington, which the prior of Sempringham held; of a quarter of a knight's fee in Queneborow and Thruſſington, which the maſter of the hoſpital of St. John in Leiceſter held; alſo of one knight's fee in Thruſſington and Radcliffe, held by Ralph Crumbwell's heir [7].

In 1500, the lordſhip of Thruſſington was the inheritance of Thomas Keble [8], ſerjeant at law; and, in 1534, Margaret lady Egerton [9] died ſeiſed of it, and of ſeveral lands in Radcliffe, Barkby, Stretton Magna, Barkby-thorpe, Overton-Saucy, Overton-Quatermarſh, Evington, Knighton, and Scraptoft; leaving William Egerton, her ſon and heir, then 22 years of age [10].

The priory of Gracedieu had lands here, under leaſe to ſeveral perſons, the time of the diſſolution [11].

In 1553 the manor of Oxdale and rectory of Thurſtanton were granted to Humphrey Coningſby, a deſcendant from lord Coningſby, of Coningſby in Shropſhire, who was killed in the barons' war, at the battle of Cheſterfield, in 1267 [12].

In 1564, there were 26 families in Thruſſington; and in that year John Hybbot and his wife were cited, to ſhew by what title they held the manor of Oxdale, with the rectory and advowſon of Thurſtanton [13].

In 1580, Thomas Connigſby was cited in like manner, to ſhew by what title he held that manor and advowſon [14]; and in 1591 he was knighted by queen Elizabeth.

Mr. Wyrley about this period, ſays, "Thruſſington is a village near the Wreke, where is a ſtone bridge to paſs the water; but no curioſity in the church."

Fitzwilliam Coningsby, eſq. ſon of ſir Thomas, was lord of the manor of Oxdale, and patron of the vicarage in 1641 [15].

"April 20, 1649. By virtue of an order of both Houſes of Parliament of the 2d of May, 1646, it is ordered, that the yearly ſum of £20. iſſuing out of the impropriate rectory of Thruſſington, in the county of Leiceſter, ſequeſtered from Mr. —— Hodges, delinquent, and the further yearly ſum of £16. iſſuing out of the parſonage of Gaddeſby. in the ſaid county, from the ſaid Mr. Hodges likewiſe ſequeſtered, both of which are yet undiſpoſed of, be allowed and paid to and for increaſe of the maintenance of Thomas Salter, miniſter of Shakerſton in the ſaid county, his preſent maintenance being but £50. a year; and the ſequeſtrators of the premiſſes are required to pay the ſame accordingly, at ſuch times of the year as the ſaid ſeveral ſums ſhall grow due and payable.

"Feb. 10, 1652. Whereas this Committee have, the 28th of November, 1649, granted the yearly ſum of £20. iſſuing out of the impropriate rectory of Thruſſington, in the county of Leiceſter, ſequeſtered from Mr. William Coningsby, and Mr. Thomas Smith, or one of them, and the further ſum of £16. iſſuing out of the parſonage of Gaddeſby, in the ſaid county, ſequeſtered from the ſaid Mr. Coningſby and Mr. Smith, or one of them, for increaſe of the maintenance of the miniſter of the pariſh church of Shakerſton, in the ſaid county; it is ordered, that the ſaid yearly ſum of £20. and £16. be from henceforth continued and paid unto Mr. Samuel Olderſhaw, this day ſettled miniſter of the ſaid church; which the commiſſioners for ſequeſtrations in the ſaid county are required to pay unto him the ſaid Mr. Olderſhaw from time to time, according to the act of parliament [16]."

In 1655, there was collected in Thruſſington, for the relief of poor Proteſtants in Piedmont, 10*s.* 10*d.*

Thruſſington Grange is ſituated near the Foſs-road at ſome diſtance from the village; and when Oliver Cromwell with his army took the Foſs to Newark in his road to Lincolnſhire, which goes ſtraight forward in a line not far from the Grange Houſe, where John Danvers, eſq. a younger brother of the Swithland family, lived at that time with his two daughters, Dorothy and Suſanna, who were afterwards his coheireſſes; this ſo alarmed the old gentleman, that he in a great hurry hid a jug of gold upon a bank of the canal. Whether his memory was treacherous, and he forgot to take it up, or he died in the interim, family tradition doth not mention; but it was found many years afterwards by a ſhepherd (one Baſſon) ſitting on the bank tending his ſheep, when the edges of the veſſel appeared that contained the caſh. This raiſed that family all at once to ſome little eminence; but it has dwindled again almoſt to its priſtine ſtate, for want of knowing what money meant, and its true worth. This information I had from the family, which may be depended upon.

The above-mentioned ladies (who were afterwards the wives of two brothers of the Hacket family; and one of them (Dorothy) remarried to Dean Addiſon) having been on a viſit at the village, and ſtaying a little too late, were loſt on the Woulds, and at length regained their path to the Grange on hearing the great bell of Hoby ring at eight o'clock; in commemoration of which, they jointly ſettled, from each of their fortunes, a piece of land containing about 4 or 5 acres, in a meadow on Thruſſington lordſhip, appointing the ſaid bell to be rung at the ſame hour to the end of time; and made the vicar of Thruſſington and rector of Hoby truſtees and guardians of the performance [17]. On the incloſure of Thruſſington field, a proportionate quantity of land was allotted to the rector of Hoby, as near as conveniently might be to the ring fence of his own pariſh. This laudable cuſtom is ſtill obſerved; and is not only an amuſement to the neighbourhood; but, in a moral and Chriſtian ſenſe, it may happen to the hearer to be of uſe as a memento mori, as well as a temporary one [18]."

Thomas Coningſby, eſq. after having diſtinguiſhed himſelf in the battles of the Boyne and Ahgrim, was created by king William baron Coningsby of Clanbraſil in Ireland, and by king George I. in 1719 baron Coningſby of Coningſby in Lincolnſhire, and in 1719 earl, with remainder to his eldeſt daughter Margaret and her heirs male. She ſucceeded to the title on her father's deceaſe in 1729; and reſided till her death at the family manſion of Hampton-court in Herefordſhire. She married ſir Michael Newton, K. B. by whom ſhe had one ſon, John; who dying an infant, the title became extinct. On the deceaſe of lady Margaret, the eſtate at Thruſſington devolved to her ſiſter lady Frances, relict of ſir Charles-Hanbury Williams, K. B. by whom ſhe had two daughters; the elder of whom was married to William-Anne-Holles Capel earl of Eſſex; to whoſe ſon George Capel Coningſby viſcount Malden (now earl of Eſſex) the eſtate devolved on her ladyſhip's death in 1779.

---

[1] Eſch. 13 Ric. II. pars 1, N° 5.
[2] Eſch. 1 Hen. IV. N° 71. Leic.
[3] Eſch. 8 Hen. V. N° 71. Leic.
[4] Eſch. 1 Hen. VI. N° 22. Leic.
[5] Clauſ. 33 Hen. VI. m. 4.
[6] Clauſ. 34 Hen. VI.
[7] Eſch. 1 Edw. IV. N° 46. Leic.
[8] Eſch. 16 Hen. VII. n. 41.
[9] Of this lady ſee before, under Humberſton, p. 272.
[10] Eſch. 26 Hen. VIII.
[11] Bailiffs Accounts, 31 Hen. VIII. in the Augmentation Office.
[12] 7 Pars Originalia 7 Edw. VI. Rot. 58.
[13] Mich. Rec. 6 Eliz. Rot. 180.
[14] Hil. Rec. 20 Eliz. Rot. 84.
[15] Burton, MS.
[16] From the Original minute-books of the Committee of Sequeſtrations, preſerved in the Bodleian Library.
[17] See before, under South Croxton, p. 238.
[18] From the information of the Rev. Philip ~~Herbert~~, vicar of South Croxton.

Hacket

an

The following extract from a deed relating to ſome lands in this pariſh may be uſeful to Poſterity :

To all perſons to whom theſe preſents, Thomas Ayre, of the borough of Leiceſter, in the county of Leiceſter, gent. Edward Hood, of the ſaid borough, gent. William Hammond, of the ſaid borough, gent. Humphrey ———, gent. William Fox, of the ſaid borough, clerk, John Kilby, of the ſaid borough, clerk, John Alleyne, of Loughborough, in the ſaid county of Leiceſter, clerk, Richard Hill, of Thurcaſton, in the ſaid county of Leiceſter, clerk, John Goodwin, of Market Boſworth, in the ſaid county of Leiceſter, clerk, William Babington, of Coſſington, in the ſaid county of Leiceſter, clerk, and John Clark, of Hinckley, in the ſaid county of Leiceſter, clerk, the ſurviving truſtees named in a certain indenture tripartite, bearing date the 23d day of May, in the 10th year of the reign of his preſent Majeſty King George, annoque Domini 1724; and made between the right honourable and truly noble lord Thomas earl Coningſby, of the firſt part; the ſaid ſeveral truſtees herein-before named, and alſo John Ludlam, in the ſaid recited indenture named, and ſince deceaſed, of the ſecond part; and Samuel Carte, of the ſaid borough of Leiceſter, clerk, vicar of the pariſh and pariſh church of St. Martin in the ſaid borough of Leiceſter, of the third part; ſeverally and jointly ſend greeting: Whereas in and by the ſaid recited tripartite indenture, the ſaid Thomas earl Coningſby, for the conſiderations therein mentioned, did grant, bargain, and ſell, unto the ſaid truſtees, their heirs and aſſigns, for ever, one annuity or rent-charge of 12*l.* 12*s.* of good and lawful money of Great Britain, to be yearly iſſuing out of the manor of Thruſſington, in the county of Leiceſter aforeſaid, and the lands of him the ſaid Thomas earl Coningſby belonging to the ſaid manor, ſituate, lying, and being in the pariſh of Thruſſington aforeſaid, and to be paid to them the ſaid truſtees, their heirs and aſſigns, yearly and every year, by two even and equal portions, at or in the vicarage-houſe belonging to the vicar of the pariſh or pariſh church of St. Martin aforeſaid; that is to ſay, on the 26th day of May and 26th day of November yearly, and every year, without deduction or abatement for any cauſe, matter, or occaſion whatſoever; to hold the ſame to the ſaid truſtees, their heirs and aſſigns, for ever, ſubject to the truſts and conditions, and for the intents and purpoſes in the ſaid recited indenture afterwards mentioned and declared concerning the ſame; and particularly, in truſt, to permit the ſaid Samuel Carte, during ſuch time as he ſhall continue vicar of the ſaid pariſh and pariſh church, to receive the ſame as it ſhall become due, upon a certain condition, and to a certain intent and purpoſe, that he, the ſaid Samuel Carte, ſhould preach certain ſermons upon a certain ſubject, at or on certain days or times in the year, in the ſaid recited indenture particularly mentioned and appointed for or concerning the ſame; with power in the ſaid truſtees, their heirs and aſſigns, to enter and diſtrain for the ſaid annuity and rent-charge, or for any arrears thereof," &c. [1]

In an act paſſed 1789, for incloſing, within the pariſh of Thruſſington, otherwiſe Thurſtanton, otherwiſe Truſſington, ſeveral open common fields, containing about 47 yard-lands, and five ſmall freehold eſtates containing together about 8 acres of land, George-Capel Coningſby, commonly called lord viſcount Malden, John Orton, clerk, and Joſeph Noble, eſq. or ſome or one of them, are deſcribed as lords or lord of the manors or manor of which the ſaid lands and grounds are part or parcel; the ſaid lord viſcount Malden, as owner and impropriator of the tithes of corn and hay, and all other great tithes ariſing upon the lands intended to be divided and incloſed, except the tithe-hay of ſome antient home-cloſes, and as patron of the vicarage and pariſh church of Thruſſington; the Rev. William Caſſon, clerk, as vicar, intitled to certain glebe-lands and common right, and to the ſmall tithes of wool, lamb, and pigs, to all other ſmall tithes ariſing within the ſaid pariſh, and to the tithe-hay in ſome of the antient home-cloſes; and the ſaid lord viſcount Malden, and Robert earl Ferrers, the ſaid John Orton, Joſeph Noble, and others, as the owners and proprietors, in different proportions, of the reſidue of the ſaid open common fields and commons, and of the old incloſures to be divided. In this act ſuch incloſures in Thruſſington as lye within the manor of Radcliffe on the Wreke are excepted, as having been incloſed in 1774 with the reſt of that manor; but all other old incloſures are directed, for the convenience of allotment, to be thrown into hotchpot, and allotted with the open land. A compenſation is directed to the lord of the manor for his right of ſoil; four acres for the repair of roads; and an equivalent to the vicar for his glebe. One ſeventh of the remainder to be allotted to the impropriator and vicar (out of which four ſevenths to the impropriator, and two ſevenths to the vicar), in lieu of all great and ſmall tithes and other payments, except mortuaries, Eaſter-offerings, and ſurplice-fees: but lands ſubject to a modus for tithes ſtill to continue ſo; and old incloſures, for which allotments in land cannot be made, to remain ſubject to tithes.

Robert earl Ferrers has a ſmall property in this lordſhip, which has been in his family near 400 years. He has alſo court-rolls for this manor.

The village conſiſts of 80 dwellings; one of which is the vicarage. Many of the houſes are of brick, and look well; and commendable in the higheſt degree is the ſpirit of the proprietors of this lordſhip for the improvement of the roads. The village is remarkably clean; the roads through it broad, round, and made, at a very conſiderable expence, of fine gravel, which ſets well.

There have been two terrible fires in the preſent clerk's time, who has been in the office 50 years, and is now aged 83. The firſt, which burnt down about 12 or 13 dwellings (with the vicarage-houſe), excluſive of outhouſes, &c. was occaſioned by a kid or two of gorze lying near the fire, where a woman was dreſſing a man's breakfaſt. The ſecond, which was on the 11th of April, 1785, was occaſioned by a careleſs fellow burning weeds, and roaſting eggs in them, during his maſter's abſence. The fire caught a bean-hovel; and, being a dry time, it ſoon burned down 13 houſes, beſides barns, &c. [2].

Fifteen children are educated in this town, in a ſchool founded and endowed in 1640 by Thomas Hayne, ſon of Robert Hayne, of this pariſh. This worthy benefactor, after having received his earlier education at Leiceſter, was in 1599 matriculated, at the age of 17, at Lincoln College, Oxford; where, being under the tuition of a noted and careful tutor, he obtained great knowledge in philoſophy, and the more as he was taken off from various recreations and rambles by a lameneſs in his legs from his cradle. In 1604 he became B. A. and an uſher of the pariſh ſchool of St. Laurence Pountney, London, erected by the Merchant-taylors; afterwards M. A. and uſher at Chriſt's Hoſpital. He was a noted critic, and excellent linguiſt, and a ſolid divine, beloved of learned men, and particularly reſpected by Selden. He died July 27, 1645, and was buried in Chriſt Church, London. A monument was erected over his grave, about the middle of the church, on the North ſide, with a large inſcription, in which he was ſtyled "Antiquitatis acerrimus inveſtigator, antiquitatem præmaturavit ſuam. Publicis privatiſque ſtudiis ſeſe totum communi bono cœlebem devovit. Pacis eccleſiæ Irenicus pacificus jure cenſendus," &c. This monument was demoliſhed, with the church itſelf, in the fire of London; but in the library at Leiceſter is the following inſcription to his memory:

"M. S. Thomas Hayne, qui inter eruditos & optimos nominari meruit, Thruſſingtona hujus agri Leiceſtrienſis oriundus, in coll. Linc. apud Oxon. A. M. patriam & hanc villam pecuniâ & redditibus quotannis in egenos erogandâ devinxit: & præter multa piæ liberalitatis teſtimonia paſſim collata, Bibliothecam hanc ſupellectile libraria munificè adornavit. Diem obiit Julii 27, Chr. 1645, ætat. 64."

To that library he gave all his books, except ſome few to the library at Weſtminſter. He gave alſo 400*l.* to be beſtowed in buying lands or houſes, in or near Leiceſter, of the yearly value of 24*l.* for ever, for the maintenance of a ſchool-maſter in Thruſſington, or ſome town near thereto, to teach ten poor children, &c. and for the maintenance of two poor ſcholars in Lincoln college, to come from the free-ſchool at Leiceſter; or, in defect of that, from the ſchool at Melton, &c. The ſchool-maſter to have 12*l.* yearly, and the two ſcholars 7*l.* yearly, &c. In the ſaid will are ſeveral other acts of charity. His works are, 1. "Grammatices Latinæ Compendium, an. 1637, &c. Lond. 1649," 8vo. To which are added two Appendices. 2. "Linguarum cognatio: ſeu de linguis in genere, & de variarum linguarum harmoniâ, diſſertatio. Lond. 1639," 8vo. 3. "Pax in terrâ; ſeu tractatus de pace eccleſiaſticâ, &c. Lond. 1639," 8vo. 4. "The equal ways of God, in rectifying the unequal ways of man. Lond. 1639," 8vo. 5. "General View of the Holy Scriptures: or, the Times, Places, and Perſons, of Holy Scripture, &c. Lond. 1640," folio. 6. "Life and Death of Dr. Martin Luther. Lond. 1641," 4to.

---

[1] From the MSS. of the Rev. Samuel Carte, vicar of St. Martin's.

[2] See Throſby's Excurſions, p. 252.

	£.	s.	d.
Money raiſed for the poor, within the year ending at Eaſter 1776,	77	19	0
Expended in county rates, &c.	10	9	1
———— on the poor, —	67	9	11
Rent of workhouſe and habitations,	4	16	6
Expended in litigations, —	0	0	3
Money raiſed for 1783,	136	17	0
———————— 1784, —	136	17	0
———————— 1785, —	168	3	0
Medium of theſe three years,	147	5	8
————- of county expences,	4	12	2
————- of expences not relating to the poor; repairs of churches, roads, &c.	0	0	0
————- of nett annual expences,	142	13	6
————- of attending on magiſtrates,	0	8	10
————- of entertainments at meetings,	0	12	4
————- of law expences, —	1	7	8
————- of ſetting the poor to work,	0	0	0

The return made to the houſe of commons in 1786, in anſwer to an enquiry reſpecting the charitable donations in this pariſh, may be ſeen in vol. I. p. 55.

The CHURCH (ſee Plate LXVI.)

dedicated to The Holy Trinity, conſiſts of a light tower (in which are three bells); a nave, chancel, and two ailes.

In the South wall within the rails is a piſcina.

In the Matriculus of 1220, Thurſtaneſtoune is deſcribed to be under the patronage of the prior of Sempringham, who held two bovates of land in the townſhip belonging to the church; and, under the ſanction of the judges delegate, the prior paid tithes for his land, notwithſtanding the uſual privilege of exemption for religious houſes[1].

The vicarage of Thruſſington was ordained Nov. 19, 1318[2]; when the prior-general of the order of Sempringham held the ſame to his own uſe.

In 1344, the procurations were, 7*s.* 6¾*d.*; the rectory was taxed at 20 marks, and paid 2*s.* for Peterpence. The prior of Sempringham then held it.

In 1534-5, the value of the vicarage was, 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

In 1650, Thruſſington was returned as an impropriation; the rectory worth £80. the vicarage £13; and the incumbent as "negligent."

In the king's books, Thruſſington is entered as a diſcharged living, worth "in decimis majoribus & minutis, cum manſo, & terr' gleb'," £6; clear yearly value 32*l.* 5*s.* 4*d.* Epiſcopal procurations, for the rectory 2*s.* 8*d.*; the vicarage 1*s.* 8*d.*; archidiaconal 3*s.* 6*d.*

The earl of Eſſex is now the patron.

RECTORS.

Richard de Saltfletby, clerk, 1223.
Ralph de Sempringham, ſubdean, 1231.
Hugo de Suth Gimſley, 1237.

VICARS.

John Taylor, 1534.
. . . . 1657.
Samuel Webſter, Sept. 2, 1668.
Edward Fiſher, July 2, 1670.
Simon Shipman, Aug. 18, 1692.
Samuel Wentworth, Dec. 1, 1704.
Michael Baynton, Sept. 26, 1715.
John Weſtmorland, April 28, 1720.
John Baker, Sept. 27, 1761.
William Caſſon[3], M. A. July 22, 1778; the preſent vicar, 1800.

PATRONS.

Magiſter ordinis, & prior & conventus, de Sempringham.

Lambeth Preſentations.

Richard Orton, eſq.

Thomas Coningſby, lord Clanbraſil.

Thomas earl Coningſby.
Margaret counteſs Coningſby.
Lady Frances Coningſby.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

Within the rails in the chancel:

"Under this ſtone lies interred the remains of Mrs. Martha North, who, for piety towards God,
a dutiful regard for her parents, charity towards her neighbours, for prudence, humanity, modeſty, and ſanctity of manners, was not eaſy to be equalled.
After a lingering and painful illneſs, which ſhe bore with wonderful patience and reſignation, ſhe obtained her wiſhed-for diſſolution
the 15th day of February, 1741,
in the 24th year of her age."

"Here lieth the body of George North,
who departed this life the 17th day of October,
in the year of our Lord 1723,
in the 38th year of his age."

"Here lies the body of Mr. William Lamb, who was born at Foulthorpe, in the pariſh of Grindon, near Stockton, in the biſhoprick of Durham.
He departed this life the 7th day of March, 1758,
aged 71 years.

"Here alſo lieth the body of Anne,
the wife of William Lamb.
She departed this life the 22d day of November, 1764,
in the 76th year of her age."

In the chancel, without the rails:

"Here lieth interred the body of William Parker Sibſon[4],
who departed this life May the 7th, 1769,
in the 66th year of his age."

"Here lie the remains of Anne, relict of William Parker Sibſon.
She departed this life the 29th of November, 1778,
aged 68 years."

"Here lieth the body of Ann,
the daughter of William and Ann Sibſon, who departed this life February 7, 1750,
in the 13th year of her age[5]."

---

[1] See the Introductory Volume, p. lx.

[2] Reg. Dalderby, Pont. 19.

[3] Preſented alſo to the living of Norton by Twycroſs in June 1796.

[4] Dying rather ſuddenly, and never being either cold or ſtiff, he was kept above ground as long as was decent; and, after he was put into the grave, it was not filled up for ſeveral days; and a watchman was kept in the church.

[5] A continuation of the epitaphs at Thruſſington will be given in a future page.

On flat ſtones in the North aile:
"Here lieth the body of William Wells, eſq.
who died December 3, 1741."

"In memory of William Wells, eſq. of Thruſſington, who died March 20, 1739, aged 67 years;
and of Mary his wife, daughter of Francis Needham, eſq. of Gaddeſby, in this county,
who died Sept. 15, 1730, aged 61.
Alſo of Frances Wells, their daughter,
who died April 8, 1746, aged 47 years."

"Here lieth the body of Mr. John Haynes, the ſon of Mr. Robert Haynes, citizen of London, who deceaſed June the 24th, in the 30th year of his age, A. D. 1710."

"In memory of Mr. Robert Haynes, who departed June 30, aged 74, anno Domini 1725."

"Here lieth the body of Thomas Storer[1], ſon of Benjamin Storer, and grandſon of Thomas Storer, gent.
He departed this liſe the 23d day of June, 1761,
aged 40 years."

In the North aile:
"Here lieth the body of William Storer, of London, ſon of Thomas Storer, gent.
who deceaſed the 12th day of June, A. D. 1705,
in the 42d year of his age."

"Here lieth the body of William Storer, ſon of Benjamin Storer, gent. by Mary his wife.
He died March 15, 1752, aged 26 years.
By his right ſide lieth his father, who died March the 9th, 1740, aged 58 years."

On a ſmall monument, North wall, near the Weſt end:
"In a vault below lies the body of John Wells, citizen and draper of London,
who died May the 6th, 1725, aged 82.
And alſo of Anne his wife, daughter to James Hales, of Kent, gent.
who died May the 20th, 1718, aged 57 years."

There are ſeveral inſcriptions in the church-yard, particularly for the family of Lewin.

Pedigree of NOBLE, of Thrussington and Reresby. (From the Viſitation of 1619.)

Arms: Quarterly; 1. Argent, on a chief Gules, a lion paſſant Or; Noble. 2. Barry nebulé, Argent and Sable, on a canton Gules a creſcent Or; Keble. 3. Argent, on a bend Sable five bezants; Palmer. 4. Gules, a chevron Ermine between three eagles diſplayed Or; Eaton of Warwickſhire. Creſt, an eagle diſplayed Or.

William Noble, of Thruſſington.=Elizabeth, ſiſter and coheir of John Keble, of Bereſby.

1. George Noble, of Rereſby.=Katharine, dau. of Henry Hood, of Boſton, co. Lincoln.
2. Thomas Noble, of Thruſſington.= . . . . dau. of William Webſter, of Thruſſington.

2. George, ſ. p.
1. Thomas Noble, of Rereſby, died July 10, 1625, æt. 51.=Frances, dau. of Robert Heyrick, thrice mayor of Leiceſter; and M. P. for that borough in 1588.
1. Anne, wife of Thomas Watts, of Grimſton.
2. Margaret, wife of Will. Watts, of Radcliffe.
3. Mary, wife of Rich. Watts, of Caſſon, co. Bedford.
4. Elizabeth, ſecond wife of the Rev. Thomas Sacheverell, confrater of Wigſton's Hoſpital at Leiceſter[2], died 1640, ſ. p.
1. William Noble, died ſ. p
2. George Noble, ſon and heir.=Elizabeth, dau. of . . . . Kenning, of Nottinghamſhire.
Iſſue.

1. George Noble, gent. born 1605; living 1652.=Elizabeth, dau. of Edward Barwell, rector of Kegworth.
2. Thomas, born 1608.
3. William, born 1611.
5. Robert, born 1613.
6. Joſeph, born 1616.
4. Francis Noble, gent. born 1612; twice mayor of Leiceſter; died 13 Dec. 1689.=Mary . . . ., died Aug. 25, 1675, æt. 62.
Catharine, b. 1607.
Margaret, b. 1618.

Thomas Noble, born 1631; died 16 . . .= . . .
1. Frances.
2. Suſanna.
3. Margaret.
4. Elizabeth.
5. Catharine.
6. Anne.
Thomas, only ſon, died Dec. 6, 1653, æt. 3.

Mary Harvey, of Lincolnſhire, firſt wife.=1. Thomas Noble, eſq. of the Borough of Leiceſter, and M.P. for that borough in 1714; died May 3, 1730, æt. 74.=Margaret, eldeſt dau. of ſir William Keyte, bart. of Everton, co. Glouceſter, ſecond wife, died in 1710, æt. 40.
2. George Noble, eſq. of Leiceſter.=Anne Brewſter.
3. Another ſon.
George , died ſ. p.=Katharine.
1. Margaret Noble, died Sept. 15, 1680, æt. 20.
2. Elizabeth[3], married to the Rev. Maunſel Courtman, rector of Draughton, co. Northamp. d. Aug. 25, 1698.
3. Barbara Noble, died July 3, 1708, æt. 50.

1. Thomas Noble, eſq. died Feb. 8, 1743, unmarried, of a fall from his horſe, in Rereſby town, æt. 48; deviſed his eſtates to Rogers Ruding, eſq. of Weſt Cotes.
2. Mary, born in 1694, marr. Thomas Jordaine, town-clerk of Leiceſter, and died ſ. p. about 1775; deviſed her property to Mr. Chriſt. Noble.
3. Martha, firſt wife of Tho. Heyrick[5], eſq. of Leiceſter, town-clerk, died ſ. p.
4. William, only child, died unmarried.
1. George, a wine merchant at Swanſea, d. ſ. p.
2. Chriſtopher, a wine merchant, died ſ. p. at Leiceſter about 1790.
3. Suſannah, married Will. Dillingham, eſq. a famous apothecary in Red Lion Square, London.
4. Anne, married to the Rev. . . . . White, of Suffolk, and died ſ. p.
Anne[6], married March 18, 1746, to Will. Ord[7], eſq. of Tenham, Northumberland; living 1800.

---

[1] Of this family was-Anthony Morris Storer, eſq. of Purley, co. Berks, who died July 5, 1799, at Briſtol Hot Wells, of a deep decline; a man whoſe ſingular felicity it was to excel in every thing he ſet his heart and hand to, and who deſerved, in a certain degree, if any one ever did ſince the days of Crichton, the epithet of Admirable. He was the beſt dancer, the beſt ſkaiter, of his time, and beat all his competitors in gymnaſtic honours. He excelled too as a muſician, and a diſputant, and very early as a Latin poet. In ſhort, whatſoever he undertook he did it con amore, and as perfectly as if it were his only accompliſhment. Quod volebat, valdè volebat. He was polite in his converſation, elegant in his manners, and amuſing in a high degree, or otherwiſe in tne extreme, as he felt himſelf, and his company. His father, Thomas, died in Jamaica, July 21, 1793, at the age of 76 years, of the ſame complaint as his ſon, having lived 23 years longer; and left him a large Jamaica eſtate; to which the ſon added £5000. a year in Berkſhire. He left the moſt valuable of his very curious books to Eton College; and his fortune, a good £8000. a year, to his nephew, who is in the navy; and, in default of iſſue, to his niece, who muſt take his name if ſhe takes his eſtate." See farther particulars in Gent. Mag. vol. LXIX. p. 626.

[2] Of him, and his children by a former wife, ſee before, p. 220.

[3] Mrs. Corbett, a millener in Taviſtock-ſtreet about 40 years ago, was daughter of a daughter; or ſhe might be of the laſt-named ſon. She left a daughter, who married —— Riley; of Rereſby.

[4] On the death of this George's widow Katharine, an eſtate of his at Rereſby became Mrs. Riley's.

[5] He reſigned this office in 1764; and died in 1766, æt. 63. See before, p. 148.

[6] To this lady (who at her marriage had a fortune of £20,000), Mr. Pickering deviſed the Langton eſtate; and one of her younger ſons, the Rev. James Ord, now reſides there. See vol. II. p. 662.

[7] Brother to Robert Ord, eſq. M. P. for Morpeth.

TILTON,

antiently called Tilton ſuper montem, and ſtill frequently Tilton upon the Hill, is ſeated on an eminence, riſing for a conſiderable way gradually on all ſides, about 10 miles from Leiceſter, and nearly the ſame diſtance from Melton Mowbray and Uppingham. It is bounded by Lodington, Skeffington, Billeſdon, Cold Newton, its own hamlet of Halſtead, and by Laund; and, in the eccleſiaſtical diviſion of the county, is within the deanry of Goſcote.

"Eye, ebullans juxta Tilton ſuper montem, antiquam Digbiorum familiæ ſedem, delatabat inter Norton & Lodington; & ſic, feſtinans ad Allexton, cucurrit Stokerſton, &c."[1]

Two ploughlands in Tiletone, with five acres of woodland, were of antient demeſne[2], as part of the royal manor of Rodolei[3].

One ploughland held in the reign of king Edward the Confeſſor by Getda was then worth ten ſhillings; and, at the general ſurvey, continued of the ſame value. This is called, in Domeſday-book, eleemoſinary land of St. Mary of Southwell; and was held, under the archbiſhop of York, by Hugh, whoſe undertenant was Friendai. There was one plough on this land; with four villans and two bordars[4].

In the Confeſſor's reign, Ælmar held three ploughlands in Tiletone, with ſoc and ſac, then valued at twenty ſhillings. The value continued the ſame at the general ſurvey, when Robert Diſpenſer poſſeſſed the lordſhip. Two ploughs were then in the demeſne; and thirteen villans, with a prieſt and one bordar, had three ploughs. There were eight acres of meadow[5].

The family of Digby, deſcended immediately from the above-mentioned Ælmar, aſſuming the name of the village, were not unfrequently ſtyled Diggeby de Tilton, and ſometimes Tilton only[6].

In the reign of king Henry II. ſir John de Tilton gave lands at Billeſdon and Kirkby Beler to the lepers of St. Lazarus of Jeruſalem; which the king confirmed to the brethren of Burton Lazars.

In 1234, it was found that lands at Billeſdon had been conveyed to Robert de Diggeby, whoſe heir then held them[7]; on the aid granted to king Henry III. in 1235, towards the marrying of his ſiſter with the emperor of the Romans, one mark was paid for a fee at Tilton, held by Robert de Diggeby under the fee of William de Beauchamp[8]; in the Teſta de Nevill, compiled about the year 1240, Tilton-Diggeby is deſcribed as conſiſting of three ploughlands; and Anne, relict of Robert de Diggeby, held half a fee in Tilton under William de Beauchamp[9].

It has been frequently ſtated that this family removed to Digby in Lincolnſhire in 1256, and thence aſſumed their name; but we find, by the above extracts, that they uſed the name much earlier.

"Dykeby, as far as can be conjectid, cummith by lineal deſcent owt of the towne of Dikeby, a village yn Lincolnſhire, wher as yet the heir of the eldeſt houſe of the Dikebyes hath a x li. land by the yere. As far as I can lerne, the eldeſt place that the Dikebyes of Lincolnſhir had in Leirceſterſhire was at Tilton, not far from Shevingtunne[10]."

Certain it is, that ſir John Digby, of Tilton, was of great account in the time of king Edward the Firſt and Second, ſerving both thoſe monarchs in their wars in Scotland and elſewhere, as by the Roll already printed in a former volume will appear. This John Digby, in the 11th, 12th, 14th, 15th, 32d, and 33d years of Edward I. was a commiſſioner for the gaol-delivery at Warwick; and lies buried in the church at Tilton[11].

In the Itinerary of 1280, Tilton, Halleſted, and Watebergh, anſwered collectively as one vill.

In 1314, the prior and convent of Laund had a manor and other property here[12].

The abbot and convent of Croxton had alſo ſome property in this lordſhip:

"Habemus in Tilton, de dono Walteri filii Johannis clerici, quondam vicarii de Croxton, cum corpore ſuo, totam terram quam tenuit de nobis in Tilton, per ſervicium viii đ. cum aſſartis, pratis, & paſturis, & aliis pertinentiis; & duas partes unius tofti quod pertinuit ad dictam terram, cum ii ſelionibus, in puram eleemoſinam; ad inveniendum unam lampadem coram altare beate Virginis in eccleſiâ noſtrâ conventuali, ad omnes miſſas, in feſtis duplicibus, & in cotidianâ miſſâ ejuſdem Virginis, accendendam. Hanc verò terram, cum tofto & crofto, & terris cultis & incultis, pratis & paſcuis, Willielmus de Kibworth, manens in Tilton, tenet de nobis; reddendo nobis vii s̄. ad duos terminos; ſcil. ad Mich' iii s̄. vi đ. & ad Pent' iii s̄. vi đ. pro omni ſervicio, conſuetudine, & demandâ, ſalvo forinſeco. Ita quod idem Willielmus & heredes ſui levantes & cubantes ſint in dicto tenemento; nec licebit eis dictam terram dare, vendere, invadiare, alienare, ſine licentiâ noſtrâ.

Habuimus in Tilton, de dono regis Henrici Tertii xxvi đ. annui redditûs; ſed jam crevit uſque ad ſummam viii s̄. & vi đ. ex perquiſitione tenementi quod habemus de dono Walteri filii Johannis; prout continetur in veteri regiſtro; ſolvendam ad Pentecoſten & ad feſtum Sancti Michaelis[13]."

In 1315, it was found that John de Digby held a moiety of one knight's fee, with the appurtenances, in Tilton, of Guy de Beauchamp earl of Warwick, deceaſed; and that John de Digby aforeſaid held a moiety of the manor of Tilton aforeſaid of Guy de Beauchamp aforeſaid, by the ſervice of a moiety of a knight's fee[14].

In 1346, John de Digby (on the aid then granted for knighting Edward of Woodſtock, the king's eldeſt ſon) was aſſeſſed 6*s.* 8*d.* for a ſixth part of one knight's fee in Tilton, parcel of the honour of Warwick[15].

Among the ſums borrowed by Richard II. in 1382, for the war with France, and ordered to be repaid, William Dalby of Tilton, and William vicar of the ſaid church, appear to have lent £10.[16]

Thomas Coleman, prior of the houſe and church de la Laund in this county, granted a rent charge in 1400, out of the manors of Tilton and Lodington, to Thomas Briggs, clerk, for life[17]. Perhaps he might be a feoffee of Digby's manor.

In a book of fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity in 1416, Tilton was rated at £3. 3*s.*; and in the ſubſidy of 1445 at the ſame ſum, but an abatement was then made of 13*s.*; Halſted £1. 17*s.* and 5*s.* abated; Whadborow 5*s.* 6*d.* and 2*s.* 6*d.* abated.

---

[1] Wyrley, MS.

[2] One privilege enjoyed by the homines de antiquo dominico was the not being liable to contribute to the expence of ſending knights to parliament. Stat. 5 Edw. II. cap. 31.

[3] "In Tiletone 2 carucatæ terræ, & 4 acræ prati, & 5 acræ ſilvæ." Domeſday. fol. 230. b. 1.

[4] "Hugo tenet de Archiepiſcopo in Tillinton 1 carucatam terræ, & Friendai de eo. Ibi eſt una caruca, cum 4 villanis & 2 bordariis. Valuit, & valet, 2 ſolidos. Hæc terra eſt de eleemoſinâ S. Mariæ de Sudwell. Getda tenuit tempore regis Edwardi." Ibid. fol. 230. b. 2.

[5] "Idem [Robertus Diſpenſator] tenet 3 carucatas terræ in Tiletone. In dominico ſunt ibi 2 carucæ; & 13 villani, cum preſbytero & 1 bordario, habent 3 carucas. Ibi 8 acræ prati. Valuit, & valet, 20 ſolidos. Has terras tenuit Ælmarus cum ſacâ & ſocâ." Ibid. fol. 235. a. 1.

[6] Liber Ruber, fol. 99. b.

[7] See before, vol. II. pp. 133; from Rot. 20 Hen. III.

[8] Vol. I. p. lii. from the Teſta de Nevill, p. iii.

[9] Ibid. p. liv.

[10] Leland, vol. IV. p. 29.

[11] See p. 464.

[12] Pat. 7 Edw. II. p. 1. m. 10. de terris in Tilton, Friſby, &c.

[13] Peck, MS. 4935; ex cod. MS. in 4to apud Belvoir, fol. 33. a.

[14] Eſch. 9 Edw. II. N° 71. Leic.

[15] Rot. Aux. 20 Edw. III.

[16] William Dalby de Tilton & Will's vicarius eccleſiæ de Tilton de decem libris. Rymer, Fœd. vol. VII. p. 342.

[17] Clauſ. 10 Hen. IV., m. 2.

Richard Digby, eſq. a collateral branch of this family, whoſe name does not appear in the pedigrees, died in 1379, and was buried in the church of Dry Stoke, under an alabaſter monument; as was alſo his wife Agnes, who ſurvived him but a few days [1].

The manor of Dryſtoke became, after this event, the property of Robert Digby[2], of Tilton; who dying before the year 1413, left it to his ſon Simon, who is ſtyled "of Tilton and Dryſtoke;" and died before the year 1418, leaving a ſon Everard, who acquired the additional name of Greenleaf.

This Everard (who was not a knight as ſome make him[3]) married Agnes, daughter of John Clarke, eſq. of Whiſſendine; and poſſeſſed the lordſhips of Tilton and Digby, and the manor of Dryſtoke. In 1434, the king's commiſſioners returned him one of the gentry of the county of Huntingdon; from 1447 till his death he was member of parliament for the county of Rutland, and ſheriff in 1459; but, March 29, 1461, he, with three of his brethren, loſt their lives in Towton field, in the county of York, fighting againſt king Edward IV, on the part of his unfortunate predeceſſor.

"At Palmeſunday feld Digeby, the beſt of that ſtok, namid Everard as I remember, was ſlayne civili bello betwixt Henry and Edward; and the landes of hym was attainted, but afterwards reſtored. This Dikeby had by heire-general, as by his wife as I remember, a manor and a place as it caullid Stoke by Ludington the biſhop of Lincoln's palace in Rutheland-ſhire, the which afore longged to one Clarke[4]."

In 1461, it was found that Everard Digby, eſq. at the time of his attainder was ſeiſed of the manor of Tilton; alſo of 14 meſſuages, four tofts, 24 virgates of land, 24 acres of meadow, two acres of paſture, 30 acres of wood, and 10*s*. rent of Tilton[5].

Feb. 1, 1461-2, king Edward IV. granted the manor of Tilton, with the advowſon of the church there, (then lately forfeited) to ſir Walter Devereux, knt. and his heirs: "Rex, &c. conceſſimus Waltero Devereux, militi, manerium de Tilton in com' Leic', cum advocatione eccleſie ejuſdem, & cum omnibus aliis membris & pertinentiis, dicto manerio pertinentibus, annui valoris 20 librarum; quod nuper fuit Everardi Digby, arm', & nunc in manibus noſtris, virtute actus foriſfacture in parliamento noſtro apud Weſtm', 4 die Novemb', devenire devenit; habendum & tenendum dictum manerium, &c. dicto Waltero, & heredibus ſuis maſculis de corpore ſuo legitime procreatis imperpetuum, per fidelitatem tantum. Teſte rege, apud Weſtm', 20° die Feb.[6] By a new grant, March 3, 1465-6, of the forfeited poſſeſſions of Everard Digby, eſq. were confirmed to ſir Walter Devereux, knight, viz. "manerium de Tilton, cum pertinentiis, in com' Leic', 14 meſſuagia, 4 toſta, 28 virgatas terre, 24 acras prati, 2 acras paſture, 30 acras boſci, & 10s. redditûs in Tilton predicta. Teſte rege, apud Weſtm', 3 die Martii[7]." And in an act of reſumption, 1468, proviſion is made that it ſhall not be prejudicial to ſir Walter Devereux, knight, lord Ferrers, in reſpect to the manor of Tilton, with the appurtenances; nor to 14 meſſuages, 4 tofts, 24 yards of land, 80 acres of meadow, 2 acres of paſture, 30 acres of wood, and 10 ſhillings of rent, with the appurtenance, in Tilton aforeſaid; and of 3 meſſuages, 8 tofts, 10 yards of land, 10 acres of meadow, and 20 ſhillings of rent, with the appurtenance, in Billeſdon; nor to a toft, 2 yards of land, with the appurtenances, in Halſtede[8].

Sir William Dugdale ſuggeſts a doubt, whether the grant to ſir Walter Devereux ever took place; or, if it did, in which way it came back to the Digbys; for, to them, he ſays, it afterwards belonged[9]. But we are to recollect that the ſeven ſons of the laſt-mentioned Everard fought valiantly in Boſworth field againſt Richard III; and ſeveral of them are accordingly noticed by Mr. Burton as having been "graced and rewarded by king Henry VII."

Sir Simon Digby, knight, the ſecond brother, was knighted in 1477 by Edward IV, who gave him the foreſterſhip of Thornewood foreſt; but, for his ſervices in Boſworth-field, was made by king Henry VII, in 1485, ſteward of the lordſhips of Uppingham, Preſton, Barrowden, Eſenden, and Greetham in Rutland. In 1486 he commanded at the battle of Stoke; and in 1487 the king gave him the manor of Raviſbury in Mitcham, Surrey, with all the lands in Mitcham, Morden, and Merton, belonging to it; in 1488 appointed him comptroller of the petty cuſtoms in the port of London, and confirmed to him the foreſterſhip of Thornewood; and in 1495 gave him the manors of Finbrorough and Cantlewes, co. Suffolk; and of Coleſhill, co. Warwick (which has ſince been the principal reſidence of this branch of the family, from which the preſent earl Digby derives his deſcent.) He was ſheriff of the counties of Leiceſter and Warwick, 1509 and 1517; and dying Feb. 27, 1519, was buried at Coleſhill.

Sir John Digby, the third brother, was alſo knighted for his ſervices in Boſworth-field; appointed knight-marſhal of king Henry VII's houſehold; ſheriff of Warwick and Leiceſter 1515; of Rutland 1491, 1517, and 1523; was in the Low Country wars 1511, and at the battles of Therouenne and Tournay; he was alſo captain of Calais; and dying 25 Henry VIII, was buried at Melton, where he has an epitaph[10].

Sir Thomas Digby, knight, the ſixth brother, was eſquire of the body to king Henry VII; bailiff of Oulney, co. Buckingham; and commander of Yardly Chace and Round Hey, 1492.

To ſir Everard[11] Digby, the eldeſt ſon, who was alſo called Greenleaf, the lordſhips of Tilton and Dryſtoke were reſtored; and he was made ſteward of Okeham and Uppingham, and high ranger of the foreſt of Lyefield, co. Rutland. This Everard was progenitor to the families of Dryſtoke in the county of Rutland, and Sandon in the county of Stafford. He was ſheriff of the former county in 1486 and 1499. He died Jan. 16, 1508-9; and was buried under a tomb in the church of Tilton[12].

He had iſſue, by Jaquetta, daughter and coheir to ſir John Ellys, of Devonſhire, ſeven ſons and four daughters; all living 1509. Jaquetta lies buried in the church of Dryſtoke, with an inſcription already noticed[13]. His will is here annexed, as "a curious proof of the ſimplicity of the manners of the times," from a copy tranſcribed by Mr. Pennant; who was "favoured by the friendſhip of his worthy neighbour Watkin Williams, eſq. with the uſe of the famous genealogy of the Digbys of Tilton[14].

"In

---

[1] See their epitaph, vol. II. p. 262.

[2] See vol. II. pp. 255. 887.

[3] Vol. II. p. 262.

[4] Leland, vol. IV. p. 29.

[5] Eſch. 1 Edw. IV. N° 7. Leic.

[6] Dugdale, Bar. Angl. vol. II. p. 177; from Pat. 1 Edw. IV. pars 1. m. 1.

[7] Pat. 5 Edw. IV. pars 2. m. 3.

[8] See under Billeſdon, vol. II. p. 434.

[9] Bar. Ang. vol. II. p. 177.

[10] Of whom, ſee more particularly vol. II. p. 262; and his epitaph at Melton Mowbray, ib. p. 255.

[11] This ſir Everard is omitted in ſome pedigrees; as he is by Mr. Wright, in his Hiſtory of Rutlandſhire, and other copiers from him: but their miſtake (occaſioned by the name incurring thrice in ſucceſſion) is evident, if it be conſidered that (ſuppoſing him to be omitted) there would be the ſpace of 80 years between the deaths of father and ſon; viz. Everard, killed at Towton 1461; and ſir Everard, who died in 1540.

[12] See his epitaph, p. 472.

[13] See vol. II. p. 262.

[14] Sir Joſeph Ayloffe, bart. exhibited at the Society of Antiquaries, 1766, a very curious pedigree of this family, from the time of Henry I. to 9 Charles I, 1634, in a large folio book on vellum, finely illuminated. The ſeries of deſcents were followed by the arms and creſts properly blazoned, and theſe by curious drawings of the ſeveral monuments of the family, and the portraits and arms in the windows of Tilton and other churches; laſt of all were the muniments, deeds, and charters, copied in the hand-writing of the originals, with draughts of the ſeals. This elegant MS. is intituled, "Digbiorum, ab antiquo loco qui dicebatur Digby in agro Lincolnienſi denominatorum, antiquiſſimæ equeſtris familiæ genealogia & proſapia; e quâ, regnante Henrico 1° Anglorum rege, floruit vir ſtrenuus Everardus de Tilton in comitatu Leiceſtriæ, & de Digby in comitatu predicto; e quo illuſtris Kenelmus Digby de Tilton predicto eques auratus, hujus familiæ claritate ſanguinis conſummatiſſimus, originem traxit. Omnia ex publicis regni archivis & privatis ejuſdem familiæ archetypis, eccleſiis, monumentis hiſtoricis, monaſteriorum & rotulis

annorum

"In the name of God, Amen. The XVI day of the moneth of January, the yere of our Lord God a thouſand fyve hundred and VIIIth, I Everode Dygby, of Stoke Dry, in the countie of Rutland, of the dioceſe of Lincoln, ſeke in body and hole in mynde, make my teſtament and laſt will in this fourme following. Fyrſt, I bequeth my ſoul to God Allmyghty, our bleſſed lady Seynt Mary, and all the ſeynts of heven. My body to be buryed in the pariſhe churche of Seynt Peter at Tilton, before the ymage of the bleſſed Trinitie, at o^{r} Lady autther. Item, I bequeth to reparacōn of the ſaid church, for my buriall ther, vi s. viii d. Item, I bequeth to the ſaid church a webe of land, whiche the churchmaſters of the ſaid churche have in their kepyng. Item, I bequeth to the high aut^{r} of the pariſh church of Stokedry, for tithes by me forgotten, ij s. Item, I bequeth to the reparacōns of the ſaid churche of Stokedry vi s. viij d. Item. I biqueth to the cathedrall churche of Linc' ij s. Item, I biqueth to John Dygby, my ſon, all my rents, lands, and tenementes, whiche I have purchaſed, by dede or by copyhold, in the townes and fields of Vpingħm, Preſton, Pyſbroke, and Eſynden, to have and to hold, to hym and his aſſigneys, duryng the terme of his lyff; and after his deceaſe, I will that the ſaid rentes, londes, and tenementes, ſhall remayne to Everod Dygby, my eldeſt ſonne, and to his heyres and aſſignes for ever. Item, I biqueth to Alice, my daughter, all my rentes, landes, and tenementes, wth all proufetts and com̄odities to them belongyng, whiche I have purchaſed, by dede or by copy, in the townes and felds of Hareborow, Bowden, and Foxton, to have and to holde to hyr, hyr heyres and aſſigneyes for ever. Item, I biqueth to the foreſaid John Dygby, my ſon, ij geldyngs, iij maires for his ploughe, with all barnes and other thynges to it belongyng, and alſo a pair of cart wheles unſhode. Item, I biqueth to my foreſaid doughter Alice, a fetherbed, a matras, a bolſter of fethures, with pillowes, blanketts, ſhetys, coverletts, and cov̄yng, with all the hangying of rede ſay pertenyng to the bed whiche I now ly in. Item, I biqueth to Elyn, my dowght^{r}, lxxx l. of gode and lawfull money, to be payed to hir by my ſone Everode, within the ſpace of iii yeres next following aft^{r} my deceaſe, if ſhe within that tyme be maryed; and if ſhe be not maried within iij yeres next after my deceaſe, then I will that my ſone Everad ſhall delyv' hir 10 l. in gode money; and the reſidue of the lxxx l. I will be put into ſtock, and be occupyed by my ſaid ſonne Everad to hir uſe and proufitt, untill the tyme that ſhe be maryed, and then to be delyvered to hir: and if ſhe deceaſe before that ſhe be maryed, then I will that the ſaid reſidew of lxxx l. beſids the x l. paid to her, be gyven and payed to the fynding of a preſte to ſyng for my ſoul, as long as the money will extend to, after the diſcrecion of my execut^{r}. Item, I biqueth to my ſaid dought^{r} Elyn, a fetherbed, a matras, a ſparver w^{t} hangynge, blankette, ſhetis, and coverlitts, and other things to it belongyng, as it lies in the chamber called the Norcery, with^{n} my place of Stoke biforſaid. Item, I bequeth to Everad my ſone, and Alice my daughter, iiij pair of my beſt and fineſt ſhetis, to be devided equallie betwixt them. Item, I biqueth to my ſaid daughter Elyn, the next beſt pair of ſhetis that I have, and other v pair of flexyn ſhetys, and ij pair of hardyn ſhetis. Item, I bequeth to my daughter Alice aforſaid, x other pair of flexyn ſhetis, and ii pair of harden ſhetis. Item, I bequeth to my daughter Kateryn, nunne at Sem̃pingħm, xx s. in money, and a pair of flexyn ſhete, and a white ſparvar. Item, I bequeth to Darnegold, my daughter, ij kyne and 12 ewes. Item, I bequeth to my ſonne Everad Dygby, my gretteſt bras pot, to be kept for a ſtandard of that hows, and the next bras pott and two little bras pottes, and half a garnyſh of pewter veſſell, with all other ledy fattys, tubbys, and bolles w^{t}in my hows, and my gretteſt bras pane, wth two other leſſer pannes: and all other my braſs pottes, panes, and pewt^{r} veſſel, I will be devided betwene John Dygby my ſonne, and Alice and Elyn my doughters. Item, I bequeth to my ſaid ſonne Everod, a plough, w^{t} all harnes perteyning to it, and ſix of my plough horſes, for his ſaid plough, and my waynes, and viij of my beſt oxen, w^{t} all thinges pertenyng to the ſame waynes, and ſix of my beſt keyn, and lx of my beſt ſhepe. Item, I will that the reſidew of all my ſhepe, keyn, calves, and oxen, not by me biqueſted, divided bitwen John Dygby my ſonne, and Alice and Elyn my forſaid doughters, equally. Item, I biqueth to Rowland of Lee, my ſuſters ſonne, ij keyn and a young black ſter, and vj ewes. Item, I biqueth to Everard Aſhby, my godſon, iiij of my beſt calves which be goyng in Tylton fields. Item, I biqueth to Margaret Kynton, my s̃ṽnte, a matras, a gode coverlitt, a bras pott, a pair of flexyn ſhete, a kow, and vj ewes, and xiij s. iiij d. in money, for hir wages. Item, I biqueth to Elyn Hall, my s̃ṽnte at Tylton, a kow and xl s. in money. Item, I biqueth to the pariſhe church of Skevyngton vj s. viij d. Item, To the pariſhe churche of Vpingħm x s. Item, To the pariſhe churche of Lidington iij s. iiij d. Item, To the abbot of Wolſton vj s. viij d. and every chalon of his hous viij d. if they be at my buriall. Item, I gyve to the cōvent there, to have Placebo and Dirige ſong in their church for my ſoul, x s. Item, I biqueth to ſir Robert Kyrkby, chalon ther, to p̃y for my ſoul, xx s. Item, I will that my executo^{r} doe fynde an able preſt, to ſyng for my ſoull, and the ſoulles of my father and mother, and all Chriſten ſoules, by the ſpace of iij yere next following after my deceaſe, in pariſhe church of Tylton. The reſidue of all my rentes, londes, and tenementes, dettes, and all other my godes moveable and unmoveable, I give and biqueth them to Everad Dygby, my eldeſt ſonne and myn heyre, whom I ordeyne and make my ſole executor, to pay therewith my dette, and to diſpoſe the reſidew thereof att his diſcretion, for the helth of my ſoulle and my friendes. Thyes beryng witneſs, Mr. Thomas Dalyſon ꝑſon of Stokedry, William Skevyngton, Everod Darby, and John Dalyſon, gentilmen, ſir Robart Kyrkby chalon of Wolſton, and ſir Thomas North'mpton chalon of Laund, of the diociſe of Lincoln above reherſed [1]."

His eldeſt ſon and heir, ſir Everard Digby of Tilton, is mentioned by Leland [2] under the head of "Gentlemen of Leyrceſterſhir that be there of moſt reputation." He ſerved the office of ſheriff for the county of Rutin 1513, 1518, 1528, and 1532, and for Leiceſter and Warwick, in 1521; continued to uſe the name of Greenleaf; and, in 1523 was captain of the right wing of the Engliſh army under the duke of Suffolk in France. He married Mary daughter to ſir John Heydon; and dying in 1540, was buried in a chapel on the South ſide of the chancel of Dryſtoke church, under a handſome tomb, ſupporting the figure of an armed knight [3].

In 1564, there were 28 families in Tilton; in Halſted 16 families; in South Markfield 6 families; and in Whadborow, one family.

---

